Queen Victoria has lately made her seventh visit to the Scottish capital during her reign of fifty years. A correspondent who saw her says she is immensely large and her face could not, for a woman, be less prepossessing. "It is not red, but really purple; the flesh hangs heavy and flabby on her cheeks and round her expressionless eyes. In this the changes since I saw her some years ago, seemed very great. In the carriage she was accompanied by Princess Beatrice, now often mentioned as Princess Henry of Battenberg, and the Duchess of Connaught, it would seem a favorite daughter-in-law. To the cheers and waving of handkerchiefs, and all the display made to greet her, she returned most stately bows, but not a smile lighted up her face. It seemed darkened by a frown of displeasure at something, and she looked simply awfully bored."

Dr John S. Newberry, the distinguished professor of geology in Columbia college, will open the November number of The Popular Science Monthly with the story of the great ancient ice-sheet which once covered half our continent, and which, more than any other sin le cause, gave to it its present surface configuration. With the aid of illustrations the record left by this mighty agency of the past is very clearly interpreted for the general reader, who will obtain from the account an insight into the mode of working of Nature's forces that only years of special study could afford.

Bonanza Mackay hopes to create out of the Postal Telegraph company a system as extensive as the Western Union, and predicts that in doing so he will reduce rates to such an extent as to do away with business letter writing inside of three years. His most ambitious plan is to build a line through to San Francisco, and he promises New York business men to send twenty words for every dollar before the 1st of next January.

Lucie Parsons, the colored wife of Parsons, the convicted Chicago anarchist, is traveling around the country speaking wherever and whenever she can get an opportunity. Her addresses are a mixture of abuse of the judge and jury of Chicago and advocating anarchist's doctrines. It is plainly evident that the list of convicted anarchists should have included one woman.

A farmer in the interior of the state with more money than sense, signed a note for $40 on an iron post and wire fence man, the latter stipulating to return the note if his goods were not as represented. The note did return, with the request from a local bank to step in with the cash. The only hope of diminishing the number of suckers in the state is to hook them all.

Young James A. Garfield is studying law with Judge Boynton of Cleveland, and is said to be the most like his father of any of the Garfield family. Mrs. Garfield is going to Wichita, Kan., shortly to a tend the exercises incident to the opening of the Garfield university in that city.

There wasn't a squaw in Geronimo's band who couldn't handle a rifle as well as any of the bucks, and they were in better physical condition than the men were when the surrender took place. Whenever a white man was wounded the squaws were permitted to finish him.

Miss Mary Dewey, a Vermont lady who has started for the mission ary field in Eastern Turkey will be obliged to take a horseback ride of 300 miles through a barbarous country before she reaches the end of her journey.

Says an exchange: Full page advertisements of jewelry stores in the Charleston papers indicates not only that business is recovering its tone, but that vanity was not shaken out of the people by the earthquake.

Queen Victoria has had the small Bible carried by Gen. Gordon for so many years deposited in Windsor Castle in a casket of pure rock crystal.

A man may have his head as stuffed with knowledge that his hair can't grow, and yet have his feet knocked clear out from under him by a question or two from a little midget so small to know an idea from a gooseberry.

A bit of real life—A piece of boarding house cheese.

UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER.

Geronimo Taken and No Concessions Made.

Gen. Miles' annual report, as commander of the military department of Arizona and New Mexico, which has been received at the war department, is a voluminous document containing a full history of his operations against Geronimo and his band, together with a statement of his position in regard to the terms of his surrender.

Some days prior to the surrender a deserter from Geronimo's band came into Gen. Miles' camp with the information that the renegades were short of food, clothing and ammunition, were foot-sore and nearly exhausted from long marches and could not hold out much longer. Thereupon Gen. Miles ordered Lieut. Gatewood, who knew Geronimo and Natchez well and spoke the Apache language, to take a guard of two and obtain a parley if possible with Geronimo and see if he would surrender. This mission Lieut. Gatewood accomplished successfully. He informed Geronimo, in answer to the chief's question, that he had no authority to offer him terms. Geronimo then asked to be taken to Capt. Lawton, who was in the immediate neighborhood: this was done and on repeating the question asked Lieut. Gatewood Capt. Lawton told him that he could make no terms and that he must surrender. Geronimo then wanted to see Gen. Miles and both parties, Capt. Lawton and command and Lieut. Gatewood and Geronimo, Natchez and their band set out for the north, traveling for several days on parallel lines and within sight of each other. In the meantime a messenger had been sent ahead to notify Gen. Miles of their approach. On coming into Gen. Miles' camp, Geronimo, as before, asked what terms would be given him if he surrendered. The general replied that he had no terms to offer; that if he and his band surrendered at all, they must surrender as prisoners of war—that they must lay down their arms and trust the president of the United States. Upon this Geronimo laid down his arms and signified his willingness to surrender, but Natchez, who had in the meantime kept out of reach and refused to come in, sent word that he wanted to go to the White mountains for a month, whereupon Geronimo went out after Natchez and soon returned with him. Geronimo, in explanation and justification of his conduct, said he left the reservation for the reason that there was a conspiracy afoot there, headed by Chato, to murder him. Geronimo, Natchez, and two others were loaded into an ambulance, followed by the rest of the band in charge of Capt. Lawton, and taken to Fort Bowie station and shipped to Texas. Gen. Miles in his report argues at some length the question of punishment and calls attention to the fact that heretofore in such cases removal has been deemed sufficient. He cites several cases in which no greater punishment has been inflicted, speaks of the great good done Arizona by their removal, and suggests that they be treated as other Indians have been treated under similar circumstances.

A Baptist Church Burned to the Ground.

The new Baptist church, with the adjoining sheds and barn at Bennington Center, Wyoming county, N. Y., burned to the ground recently. The loss is $40,000, on which there is an insurance of $10,000. The building was fired and the incendiary is known. The supposed motive is revenge. The church people have determined to stop the sale of liquor on Sunday in the immediate vicinity of the church. To this end many different persons have been indicted and heavily fined.

Blind Tom's Property

Judge Donohoe of New York, has denied the application of Blind Tom's mother for a commission to enquire into his sanity, holding that the proceeding must be instituted in Virginia. All of Tom's family—eleven brothers and sisters—were born in slavery and his former master, J. G. Bethune, is his manager and his son a committee of his person, as Tom is an idiot. Tom has no heirs save his mother, unless the courts decide the children legitimate.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Advises received from El Paso, Texas, say that the Apaches who were not captured are still raiding the country. Bancroft, the historian, has just celebrated his 56th birthday.

Information has been received at Washington that Mexico prompted and countenanced the late Indian uprisings.

Reported that trouble exists in the Cheyenne Indians at Pine Ridge agency over the killing of a Cheyenne who resisted arrest.

A Panama dispatch gives the account of a horrible tragedy that occurred at Chiquiquira, in the state of Cundinamarca, where a child 13 years of age murdered three children by stabbing them with a rusty table knife and subsequently beating their brains out with a stone. The child murderer is a very small one for her age, and it is believed she committed this horrible deed while suffering from an attack of the brain, produced by having been bitten some weeks previously by a mad dog.

Some time ago a Montreale named Poiras was arrested at St. Anne de Bellevue for having refused to obey the order of a constable on duty in the parish church to kneel on both knees during a certain portion of the service and for irreverence in church. Poiras was fined $8, though he pleaded sickness and inability to go on both knees. He took action for damages against the constable and the trial by jury resulted in the dismissal of plaintiff's action.

Herr Hutschenreuter, the Bavarian Premier's father-in-law, after witnessing the trial and sentence of an editor for libeling the Premier, ran out of the court room and committed suicide by shooting himself. He had been much depressed recently by seeing numerous editors, the fathers of families, imprisoned for press offenses.

The American fishing schooner Grimes, Capt. Landrey, which is detained at Shelburne by Capt. Quigley for breach of the custom laws in not reporting to the custom house on entering the harbor recently was lying at anchor in that harbor with the American flag flying from her mast-head. Capt. Quigley, who was on board the Terror, which was anchored 100 yards below the schooner, ordered Capt. Landrey to haul down the flag. The latter did so, but shortly afterward the flag was again seen waving from the mast-head. Capt. Quigley again ordered the flag to be hauled down. This time the American refused to obey. An armed crew was dispatched from the Terror, who boarded the schooner, and Capt. Quigley himself hauled down the American flag.

The London Daily News says that although the government hope to carry their home rule measure by a majority of 100, they prefer to secure the right of cloture first. It is likely that the Parnellites will object to the government's program and insist that Irish affairs be the first business.

Mrs. Kate Chase Sprague.

Kate Chase, formerly Kate Chase Sprague, daughter of the late Chief Justice Chase, is in Washington for the purpose of supervising the removal of her honored father's remains to Ohio. Randolph Keim writes about her to the Philadelphia Times: "Mrs. Chase, in the middle age of life, possesses all that beauty of face and form, that fascination of manners and the varied accomplishments of music and languages for which she was so famous as a maiden in the little republican court of the gubernatorial office at Columbus, and later in the broader sphere of the cabinet circle at the nation's capital. Her manner in society may be somewhat mellowed, there may be a slight trace of the sadness of her womanhood resting upon her classic features; but whether remembered as Miss Katherine Chase or recognized to-day as Mrs. Katherine Chase, she is the queen of beauty and of manners." Mrs. Chase was asked: "Do you intend to reside permanently in France?" and replied:

"Oh, dear, no. I love my country, its people and its institutions. A European and American republic are wide apart. One is freedom and manhood. The other is restraint and espionage. But the surroundings, the influences, the conditions are different. My countrymen could be nothing else but sovereigns. In Europe hereditary government has made subjects. It will take time, many years perhaps, to make them sovereigns. Popular leanings are that way, but think of the price of blood. The church wars of Europe and the campaigns of the great Napoleon were the methods of European reformation. One was religious and the other political. Both were the breaking up of old forms and institutions. But see the centuries it has taken. But I have changed the subject. The French people are fond of discussing the government and its measures, so that we fall into the habit. It is a mistake. I do not live in Paris. I wish to be retired and secluded. In that world of Parisian life I take no interest. Gayety in fashionable life I do not enjoy. I have my children to care for and to enjoy. My wish is to bring them up to be accomplished, educated and good women, an honor to themselves and to American womanhood. That is a woman's sphere in life. The glitter and transient pleasures of social life are but vanishing joys. They soon pass and leave nothing. I reside in a quiet way at Fontainebleau, one of the beautiful suburbs of the French capital, so full of historical associations of the great Napoleon and suffering Josephine. The stately old palace stands there as Napoleon left it, a reminiscence of the domestic phase of his life and the last act of his imperial career—his abdication. I have much happiness there with my children, but I shall return to my native land before very long. I feel an exile in France."

Along Washington Roads.

From the Nashville Union.

There is no doubt of the fact that the President looks better when you see him out driving now than he has looked since he came to Washington. He is the picture of health and contentment. As for Mrs. Cleveland, she is a picture. Her usually rather pale face is flushed by the drive, her delicately-curved lips, rosy and bewitching are wreathed in smiles. Her head is surmounted by a dainty bonnet, or sometimes a jaunty hat. Her dress, which is generally of some quiet tint, fits faultlessly a faultless figure. Both she and the President seem to take a keen interest in whatever goes on about them. The look of stolidity and curious reserve has disappeared from the President's face, and he looks about him and he drives about the city with a new interest. This is probably in part because of the more agreeable and vivacious companion than he had in the days of his bachelor drives, and partly from the fact that he has become a land-owner in the district of Columbia. There is nothing like a personal and property interest to brighten up the attention toward passing objects. Everybody knows the President's rig from afar, not that they can discern the President as quickly or that they can even tell the seal-browns at a glance, but there is one feature of the turnout on which they never make a mistake; it is "Albert," a big, broad-shouldered, honest-faced fellow, with a face as black as it is honest, and a rare skill in the management of horses. You may know that he is a good driver, for President Grant trusted him. Grant brought Albert with him when he came to the White House, and if ever there was a man in the executive mansion who knew how a horse ought to be managed his name was Grant. Albert was with Grant during his entire eight years in the White House, and would probably have left there within had the general been intending to establish himself in a home at once. As it was, however, Albert stayed at the White House. He drove for Hayes, he drove for Garfield he drove for Arthur, and now he drives for Cleveland. So, when the citizens of Washington see Albert's honest face and broad shoulders on the box of any carriage they at once say: "The President's team," and all eyes are in that direction; for even Washington, which has had a president all its life, never gets tired staring at him, no matter what his name or how familiar his face.

Sam Houston.

A prominent figure at Washington during the Taylor administration was General Sam Houston, a large, imposing-looking man, who generally wore a waistcoat made from the skin of a panther, dressed with the hair on, and who generally occupied himself during the sessions of the senate in whitening small-sticks of soft pine wood, which the sergeant-at-arms provided for him. His life had been one of romantic adventure. After having served with distinction under Gen. Jackson in the Creek war, he had become a lawyer and then governor of the state of Tennessee. Soon after his inauguration he had married an accomplished young lady, to whom he one day intimated in jest that she apparently cared more for a former lover than for him. "You are correct," she said earnestly. "I love Mr. Nickerson's little finger better than your whole body." Words ensued, and the next day Houston resigned his governorship, went into the Cherokee country west of the Arkansas river, adopted Indian costume and became an Indian trader. He was the best customer supplied from his own whisky barrel, until one day, after a prolonged debauch, he heard from a Texas Indian that the Mexicans had taken up arms against their revolted province. A friend agreeing to accompany him, he cast off his Indian attire, again dressed like a white man, and never drank a drop of intoxicating beverage afterward.—Perley's Reminiscences.

Going to the Wall.

The news from Europe about the complications between Russia, Germany, England, Austria and Turkey is so confused, and much of it is probably so deliberately false, that it is quite useless to discuss the various alleged phases through which it makes the embroglio pass. But in all the confusion there is one fact quite clear, and that is that the time is drawing near when England will have to fight for its life. It is loth to embark upon the struggle. It has drawbacks at home and obstacles abroad that make the issue doubtful than it has ever looked; but it will have to make its fight sooner or later, and therefore will make it. Whatever may be said against Englishmen, they have never been called cowards. They are slow to anger; but they will fight when the question reaches the point of final submission. England will not surrender India, and with Russia so close to the shore of the Mediterranean and the Persian gulf, the surrender of Egypt would be almost equivalent to that of India. Italy would probably be one of England's allies in resisting Russia's debouchment upon the Mediterranean.—San Francisco Daily Report.

In the Mountains of Kentucky.

Representative Taulbee of Kentucky comes from the mountain district of that State, and he lives in the region described in Charles Egbert Craddock's novels. There are 16,000 square miles of territory in his district. It comprises twenty counties and it has one of the most curious populations in the world. I talked recently, says Carp, with Mr. Taulbee about it. Said he: "The district is very well described by Charles Egbert Craddock, and the dialect is very much like that she puts in her stories, though I have never seen the language in print before. The population is the product of the frontiersmen of several States. The first settlements in Kentucky were along the Ohio River and in the valleys of the Kentucky rivers. As the country became more settled civilization drove such of those of the very early settlers who liked hunting and frontier life upwards into the mountains. It was the same with Virginia and Tennessee. These hunters and frontiersmen married and intermarried, and they have now become a separate people like unto no other in the world. They have been away from the civilization of the railroad, the telegraph and the daily newspaper, and they have grown into a language and customs of their own. They are a very patriotic people, and during the late war, if you will look at the Records in the War Department, you will find that my Congressional district furnished five Union regiments. They are very simple in their tastes, and it does not take much in my country to make a man wealthy. If he has $2,500 he is considered well-to-do. If he has $10,000 he is rich."

"Tell me how the people live."

"There are very few towns, about two only to the county, and these will average about 300 inhabitants each."

"The ordinary house is a log one, consisting of two rooms, with boards shaved smooth with a draw knife or split, nailed over the cracks between the logs. One of the rooms is used for a sleeping room, and the other is the living room, dining room, kitchen and parlor all in one, in which the family stay during the daytime. There is but one sleeping room for a whole family, and when they have guests visiting them these turn in and sleep in the same room. There are a number of beds used, and a stranger always gets the best bed. They are very modest with it all. They turn their backs if they are up while the others of the family are undressing, or if they are in bed they will cover up their heads until you have completed your nightly toilet. It is the custom, you know, and I think our people are noted for their large proportion of virtuous women. Virtue is as much respected in the mountains as anywhere else in the world, and though these women and men will undress together and sleep in the same room they will be horrified at the exhibition of décolleté dresses seen at one of your receptions here, and would run away with shame from an exhibition of the modern ballet. These mountaineers are very hospitable. They entertain you and give you the best they have, and if you offer to pay they will refuse and say they do not make their money that way. The little money they make comes from farming. They do not often grow wealthy, and they seem to be very well satisfied with their life. You have heard of the feuds of these mountaineers. I have nearly a half score of murder cases to defend in one county on account of them. I know a place where two families have been fighting each other for a generation and where the different families of the two tribes never go out to work except in squads and always carry Winchester rifles with them."

"Is the country improving?"

"Well, yes, somewhat, but civilization comes slowly in the mountains. We have not the best facilities for education, and though the people want their children educated they use native teachers, and they do not push matters like you do in the North. The district is made up of both Republicans and Democrats, and the last Representative was Republican. The people are interested in politics and the campaigning has to be done almost altogether by public speakers."

Threatened Masonic Exposure.

North Adams (Mass.) Special: The local Masonic fraternity are excited over the antics of one E. Spaulding, who threatens to expose their secrets and also to confer the degrees in his house for $2 unless his appeals for help are heeded. Spaulding came to North Adams from Watertown some time ago and has one son who is a peddler. The local lodges, to neither of which he belongs, have helped him, Lafayette to the amount of $78 and Graylock $5. His further demands being refused, he has issued a handbill offering to expose the order, and offered an advertisement to the same effect to the local newspaper. These handbills he has sent to Masons in the locality, threatening to distribute them if he is not aided, and his demand is in the nature of blackmail. The lodges have investigated him, and find that he is not entitled to assistance, and some of his letters to individual members have in them a smack of threats similar to the Morgan exposure. The lodges will offer no opposition to his course, and it is understood that he is getting ready for conferring degrees surreptitiously at his house.

Outside a miner's tent in Idaho a red-shirted man was looking for his tin cup. Not finding it, he observed: "Some infernal thief has stolen my cup." "Then, thrusting his head into the tent, he asked, 'Any of you gentlemen got it?'"

A Wonderful Occurrence.

JACKSON, MICH., OCT., 1885.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.

Gentlemen—In November, 1884, I was cut in the wrist by a broken bottle, from which I suffered extreme pain. I called upon a doctor who pronounced it Sciatic Rheumatism. He gave me a morphine injection in my right shoulder, which resulted in paralyzing my right side. I was kept under the influence of morphine until last March. My right leg and arm had become badly withered and my joints were so stiff that there was but little action in them. About that time I discontinued the use of morphine. Some six weeks ago I first heard of your Rheumatic Syrup and was advised to try it. And here let me impress this fact upon your mind: that my right arm and leg were shrunken, paralyzed and withered so much that I could hardly walk or swing along, and that but little, and attended with great effort and pain. Since I have been taking your Syrup I have left off the use of crutches entirely, and only use a cane, and for the past few days I often forget it and walk without any aid. To say that I am happy, and that it has greatly benefited me but poorly expresses my idea of your Rheumatic Syrup.

Yours truly,

C. D. DENIO, Dealer in General Groceries

cor. Trail and Mechanic Sts.

Mr. C. D. Denio is a man well known in this community, and was probably the worst wreck physically of any man this country ever saw. He was paralyzed from Rheumatic poison, and no one ever expected he would get well. He is well, though, and it is simply marvelous. The above statement made by him is true, and may be fully relied upon.

I am truly yours,

OBSERVATIONS AND EXPERIENCES ABROAD.

NO. 16.

Though there are many interesting places upon the Rhine, there is no other that cunities the picturesque in nature with the strange in history more successfully than the one we have described in our last two articles. Leaving Drachenfels, Roland's Eoh and the little islands, Nonenwerth with its convent, we pass between precipitous banks from 500 to 700 feet in height, so steep as to make it almost impossible to climb them yet covered with vineyards. At one point the vines are planted in baskets which are crowded into crevices between the basaltic columns that form the otherwise bare, rocky face of the precipitous slope. It is verily a marvel how they were ever planted there, how they are cultivated and how they are gathered. Yet a rich harvest of the best of Rhine wine is realized every year from this unpromising garden spot. The object of planting the vines in this manner is, to prevent the water, when it rains, from washing away the soil that is necessary to the growth of the vines. Little villages nestle at the feet of these precipitous banks, and in excavating the narrow road that runs just above highwater mark, many evidences of Roman occupation were found, such as coffins, coins, and a Roman milestone, whose inscription proved that under Marcus Aurelius and Lucius

Venus, A. D. 161 to 180, a road had been constructed to there. The river winds among these precipitous, vine-clad banks in a chanel so tortuous that the boat seems, almost constantly, about to dash her bow against the bank, now on the right and anon on the left, while at each turn new vistas of beauty open before the wondering traveler, and the blackened walls of old castles or fortresses are outlined against the sky from many an apparently inaccessible crag.

Attention will not fail to be attracted by an ancient, fortified town called Linz, on the right bank, surrounded by walls of basalt. An Archbishop of Cologne built the tower still standing near the Rhine gate, to enforce the payment of tolls on the river and to defend the town from neighboring hostile burghers. A church on the height behind the town commands a fine view and contains some curious monuments of the noble families that once resided in the neighborhood. Opposite this town the small river Ahr empties its limpid waters into the turbid Rhine. We once made a tour up the valley of this little stream, amid scenery and vineyards more picturesque and incredible even than those upon the Rhine, which we have already described. One vineyard I remember distinctly, planted upon a precipitous rocky slope and covering a scant half acre, that had cost its owner more than $3,000, and was a profitable investment. A few miles above Lenz, and about a mile from the Rhine, up one of the deep cut ravines, that afford constant variety to changing scenery, and traversed by the highway, is a town called Sinzig. This was the ancient Senticum of the Romans and, by a strange transposition of events, is claimed by tradition as the place near which the Emperor Constantine saw the cross in the heavens on which was inscribed the legend, In Hoc Signo Vinces, assined him of victory on condition of his embracing christianity, which conditions he complied with and became the first Christian Roman Emperor. A rude painting in the church at this town represents that extraordinary event.

A little farther on up the Rhine you observe the castle of Rheinaech consisting of a watch tower and a castellated residence adjoining. It is no longer a ruin. It was rebuilt a number of years ago, at a great expense, by an eccentric professor of Bonn University. All the towns in this vicinity are very ancient and invested with stories of knight errantry, love, war, imprisonment and barbarities that keep the traveler, if he acquaint himself them all, in a state of constant wonder and excitement.

A few miles above Sinzig, at the mouth of a small stream and valley of the same name is the village Brohel. Here are quarries of a peculiar kind of a rock called tuff-stone. It is undoubtedly of volcanic origin, and, when ground, forms a water-lime cement, that will harden under water, large quantities of which are carried to Holland to be used in the construction of dykes. The Romans made use of this kind of stone for coffins, and, on account of its property of absorbing the fluids of the body and consuming almost entirely the flesh and even the bones, called such a coffin a sarcophagus, that is flesh-eater. These quarries contain evidence of having been worked by the Romans at a very early period. A highly effervescent mineral water is also found here resembling seltzer; and on the summit of a bold, black, precipitous rock stand the ruins of Hammerstein castle. Andernack, a little farther on is one of the oldest cities on the Rhine, having a population of about 3000. It is the Antoniacum of the Romans, and had its origin in a camp pitched here by the Roman general Drusus before the commencement of the Christian era. A curious old church built in the beginning of the XII century, so arranged that the men should occupy a second story gallery while the women were seated on the floor below, will not fail to attract the attention of the traveler. A picturesque watch-tower, the lower portion being round and the upper octagonal, dating from 1520 furnishes also a good study for the artist's pencil. In 1596 the Jews were expelled from this town and have never been permitted to reside there since. At this point the mountains that have for some distance receded, leaving a pleasant valley, sometimes on the right and sometimes on the left of the channel, close in again upon the Rhine, narrowing the current and repeating the scenery of the Drachenfels, with precipitous banks and castellated summits.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15, 1886.

For the first time in six months the entire Cabinet is in the city. Secretary Manning resumed his official duties at the Treasury department yesterday. It has been over six months since he was carried out of the department in an unconscious condition. He looks bright and cheerful and appeared to be glad to take the burden of official duty again. While it is evident that his physical condition has greatly improved within the last two or three months, it is apparent from his halting pace and deliberate movements that he has by no means wholly recovered. Many of his friends fear that he will not be able to continue long to discharge the laborious duties of his office. But he appears to feel confident that his strength will hold out, if he husbands it carefully, and avoids giving too much attention to matters of routine and vexatious details. He began to-day by taking things easy. He saw only a few callers and remained in his office only a short time. The plumbing of the room in which he sits has been thoroughly overhauled.

It is understood that Mr. Manning has bestowed much thought recently on his annual report to Congress and the main features of that document have been already formed in his mind. It is expected that the routine work of the department will remain in the hands of Assistant Secretaries Fairchild and Thompson; at least until after the assembling of Congress.

Apropos of the Treasury Department the Government receipts for this month amount to $14,543,000 and the expenditures during the same period amount to $8,300,000 showing an excess of receipts of $6,240,000.

Cabinet meetings, as far as can be learned, have been devoted mainly to the question "What shall we do with him?" Meaning Geronimo.

The President's decision has not yet been announced but the impression is gaining ground that Geronimo with the other Apaches will be soon forwarded to Fort Marion, Fla., where the Indians from the San Carlos reservation were sent some time ago. Immediately after the surrender of Geronimo, Gen. Miles started him and his companions on their way to Florida and then, so informed the military authorities at Washington, by whom the Indians were stopped at San Antonio, Tex., where they have been kept ever since, pending a decision in the matter. While such action on the part of the Government might not be taken as conclusive evidence that no other disposition can be made of them, still it would be a natural inference that the renegades will be destined to spend the rest of their days under military control at Fort Marion, and that Gen. Miles' assurances to the hostiles as to their treatment are regarded as inviolable, and that they cannot be made to atone for their crimes either through the civil courts or a military commission. When asked about the decision in the Geronimo case Secretary Endicott declined to give a definite answer, but laughingly said "Oh Geronimo is all right. We have him in safe custody and he will not get away again."

Secretary Bayard was closeted with the President when the hour for his usual Wednesday afternoon reception arrived, and for twenty minutes beyond the usual time two hundred and twenty visitors stood in a packed circle around the East room, with their gaze intent upon the corridor door waiting for it to open as announcement of the President's coming. When the President did put in an appearance, he went through the ordeal in his usually pleasant manner. The crowd was unusually well dressed and intelligent looking. One lady, after seeing that the little girl she led by the hand had received the pleasant word he always has for children, drew back a step and in a carefully enunciated sentence said, "Allow me, Mr. President, to wish you a happy end to your administration." The President allowed her by an inclination of his head and continued his task. One young lady said, "I have come a thousand miles to see you," and ended her remark in an uncontrollable giggle, which was joined in by her companions.

When Mrs. Cleveland and her mother went down to Mount Vernon on the steamer W. W. Corcoran last week, it was simply a private way, and Captain Blake had been enjoined to silence in regard to Mrs. Cleveland's presence. She, therefore mingled freely with the numerous passengers and her identity was not discovered until one old woman evolved it from her inner perceptions, as it were. The good dame said nothing and only gazed her fill, rarely taking her eyes off the fair young woman; but there was a pretty Cal. girl who was too much for the gallant Captain. She made her discovery, and wished to be introduced. The request was put before Mrs. Cleveland who graciously accepted, and to the Californian's delight, a long and interesting conversation ensued. Imagine this girl, old and a granddame, relating her experience, and dilating on the amiability of our gracious first lady while looking over a portfolio of 1886, a long time "go."

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

NORTH LAKE.

Ho! Ho! Ho! Young married people, old maids, and old bachelors, Attention! Don't quarrel over the quilts, nor sleep cold any longer, when you can get the beautiful auto-graph quilt for the small sum of 25 cents. Secure tickets and attend the drawing, Nov. 3, evening. Tickets will be sold early on evening of drawing. A good supper will be got up by the ladies of this place, at 25 cents a couple; old bachelors same price. Lots of fun will be enjoyed. Remember if you don't get the quilt, somebody just as deserving, and more lucky, will. Ann Arbor Courier please copy as tickets will be sold in Ann Arbor.

Lycenna will begin at Grange Hall next Saturday evening. A question will be chosen and debated on that evening. R. S. WHALAIN, Pres.
W. H. GLENN, Sec.

R. M. Glenn's little boy is quite sick.
Mr. P. W. Watts had his barn partially unroofed, by the last blizzard, while corn in the shock, and apples on trees were blown to the ground and miles of fences fared the same fate. It blew the water in the lake up in sheets, and turned out some of the fruit trees by the roots. As to whether it was a big blow.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Cook and two children are taking an extended trip through Wisconsin. They will do Chicago and visit the exposition.

The quarterly meeting was slimly attended, on account of failure to give the proper timely notice. Those who did come out heard two excellent sermons by Presiding Elder McElowney. It may be his last sermon here. This is his last year in this district.

Mr. R. S. Whalian has sold his lambs to Mr. Geo. Boyden. Price paid $2 50. Sheep are booming to old prices.

SHARON.

Whew! How it blew last Thursday. It played havoc among orchards, wind-mills, fences, and buildings in this section of the country.

Miss Minnie Breed, of Ann Arbor, was the guest of Miss Emma Everett several days last week.

Mrs. A. Service, who was called to the death bed of her sister in Ill., returned home this week.

A few days ago Mrs. J. Irwin and son returned home from Petoskey, where they have been enjoying good health during the hot summer months.

Mr. H. Orthing was in Ingham Co. several days last week on business. While there he purchased a valuable horse.

Last week Wednesday, Mr. Albert Cook and Miss Cora Falkner went to Manchester and were married by Rev. D. R. Shier; after which they spent several days among friends and relatives in Tecumseh, and returned home last Saturday to commence their new journey among their many friends, who wish them a long and happy life.

Mr. O. Whipple and sister Clara, of Lima, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Cook last Sunday.

LIMA.

Nettie Storms came home Friday and remained until Sunday.

J. D. Clark and family from Jackson, have been visiting at C. Palmer's.

Miss Fannie Storms has gone to Ann Arbor to spend some time.

Mrs. Cornwell being unable to teach last week, Carrie Purchase filled her place.

Godfrey Lewick has a new way of husking and shelling corn. On Monday he threshed a load for Irving Storms with his threshing machine. Those who saw it say it did good work.

The New England Supper was a success. There was over a hundred people present. Several of the young ladies dressed in the style of the olden days. The tables were loaded substantial eatables. After supper there was some music and a recitation by Nettie Storms that was well worth hearing.

Last Sunday, a young man from Chelsea, while calling on a young lady, for some unknown reason did not tie his horse. The horse became uneasy, tipped the buggy over, and, but for the timely arrival of the lady's father and brother, there might have been much damage done.

Miss Martha Pierce, who graduated a few years ago from the law department of the University is assistant editor of the Union Signal, the chief organ of the W. C. T. U. at Chicago.

A young married couple who have lived very happily together for four years have two children, whom they have named "Alpha" and "Omega." Judging from the name they have given the last one, we are led to believe they meditate a dissolution of co-partnership.

"Webberville has a live lecture association and is filling up a list of attractive lectures." So says an exchange. Why can not Chelsea have a lecture association, and spend some of our evenings and some of our money in a profitable and instructive? An exchange calls for theatrical engagements. We call for a lecture association. Which shall it be.

Frank Howard, of this city, who was operating in real estate at Detroit a year or more since, found an inventor of a stoveless flour barrel, who wanted a partner to invest in the enterprise. Mr. H. with a keen eye to business took in the situation and accepted the proposal. The result has been a large factory employing 100 men and having more orders than can be filled. One firm has just contracted for 10,000 barrels a day for three years. The body of the barrel is made in two pieces. The Central Mills are using them, and any one can see them put together by coopers in the old Well tannery, Washington Street west—Coopior

We call for a lecture association. Which shall it be.

Frank Howard, of this city, who was operating in real estate at Detroit a year or more since, found an inventor of a stoveless flour barrel, who wanted a partner to invest in the enterprise. Mr. H. with a keen eye to business took in the situation and accepted the proposal. The result has been a large factory employing 100 men and having more orders than can be filled. One firm has just contracted for 10,000 barrels a day for three years. The body of the barrel is made in two pieces. The Central Mills are using them, and any one can see them put together by coopers in the old Well tannery, Washington Street west—Coopior

CLIPS.

Oberlin sends eleven students to the University this year.

Miss Martha Pierce, who graduated a few years ago from the law department of the University is assistant editor of the Union Signal, the chief organ of the W. C. T. U. at Chicago.

A young married couple who have lived very happily together for four years have two children, whom they have named "Alpha" and "Omega." Judging from the name they have given the last one, we are led to believe they meditate a dissolution of co-partnership.

A BAD ACCIDENT.

Last Wednesday a couple of Williamston idiots, filled themselves up for a drought and came to the fair. A ways north of Thompson's corners, they engaged in running horses, and as a double carriage turned the corners, the carriage containing two boys three girls and a whiskey bottle was overturned and the occupants thrown to the ground, injuring them all except the bottle, very severely. Becoming disengaged from the carriage the team dashed down the road to the village at break-neck speed, Fred Waltz had just turned his horse and buggy up at DePuy's corners, when the team crashed upon him, breaking his buggy all to pieces, throwing himself and two children out, and causing his team to escape. Mr. Waltz was picked up very badly hurt. Dr. Parks was called and it was found that his skull had been fractured, two pieces of the skull were removed, and at the latest reports his recovery is quite probable. Once again the innocent suffer because of whiskey.—Sun.

Excitement in Texas.

Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris, Tex., by the remarkable recovery of Mr. J. E. Corley, who was so helpless that he could not turn in bed or raise his head; everybody said he was dying of consumption. A trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery was sent him. Finding relief, he bought a large bottle and a bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills; by the time he had taken two boxes of Pills and two bottles of the Discovery, he was well and had gained in flesh thirty-six pounds. Trial bottles of this great Discovery for Consumption free at R. S. Armstrong's.

STATE NEWS.

Bogus Butter in Michigan.

John B. Maloney, collector of the internal revenue district, which comprises the eastern half of the state and all of the Lake Superior region, has received the reports of his deputies on oleomargarine production and sale, as well as the intentions of parties to continue in the trade after Nov. 1 next, and has sent them to the treasury department at Washington. In this district one manufacturer of butterine, which, however, is classed as oleomargarine under the law, has been discovered. His factory is at Flint, and he makes 30,000 pounds a year. Of the wholesale and retail dealers a large majority decline to state whether they will continue to sell artificial butter and pay the license after the law goes into effect. They say they prefer to wait till they see how the law operates. Some twenty wholesale and 400 retail dealers state that they will sell the stuff and pay the license fee. Of the 400 retail dealers a majority live in Lake Superior, where the lumbermen prefer oleomargarine to natural butter, because it keeps better, and in uniform quality is superior to the latter.

Deputy Collector Wheeler says he would warn the honest old granger who mixes oleo with his dairy butter that he will be classed as a manufacturer under the provisions of the law, and that small manufacturers come under the same category. Any man who mixes lard or tallow with the genuine article and sells it has to pay a $600 license fee. In this respect the act does not differ from the United States liquor law, which classifies a man a distiller who puts a kettle on the stove and makes a small quantity of whisky.

Michigan Mineral Wealth Increased.

Negaunee bids fair to become the center of one of the most important mining districts in the world within a few years. The "new range," as the territory east of the city on which a number of new mines are located is called, is already shipping iron ore, and 500 men are employed in the mines there. South of the city a good vein of hard Bessemer ore was uncovered only a few days ago on the Iron Cliffs company's land. Work on the old Etna property is being pursued, and some fine Bessemer ore is being gotten out. On the Iron Mountain property an eighty-foot vein of hematite ore has been uncovered by the owners the present week. Dr. A. C. Mackenzie and Chas. L. Sporey have organized a stock company to develop a new and important find of iron ore, made only a short distance from the city. Near the Cambria mine Wm. J. Ray of Ishpeming, has a good vein of ore. Ten miles west the Dexter is being reopened, and an Ishpeming company of prospectors has found a fine deposit of beautiful specular ore adjoining the old Argyle mine.

The central range development and exploring company is a new company, comprised of Ishpeming and Gogebic capitalists and prospectors. They will look for ore between Republic and Bessemer. Many iron men believe that the Gogebic iron range is merely a continuation of the Marquette and Menominee ranges, and this company has been formed to test this belief.

Murdered his Father.

At Byron, Shiawassee county, Sam Hadden, a crippled soldier, quarreled with his father, and the son, who is hot-tempered fellow, went to the house, secured a revolver and returned to the scene of the quarrel. Aiming at his father he shot him five times, every shot striking in a vital spot. Hadden was immediately arrested and placed in jail. He asserts that he did the shooting in self-defense, and expressed so sorrow for the killing.

The murderer left his home several years ago and but recently returned. The causes that led to the first separation are not known, but it is suspected that a renewal of the old fight was the inducing cause of the killing.

Hadden, sr., was about 65 years old, and was living with his wife, who was present at the time of the murder. Sam is 40 years old. The prisoner maintains an emphatic silence. He will tell nothing of the circumstances of the affray.

Arrested for Murder.

Dan Hadley was arrested near Grand Rapids the other day for the murder of Douglass Taylor at Eu Clare, Berrien county, October 7. He was walking on the railroad track toward this city. His shoes were badly worn, apparently from much pedestrianism, and when apprehended he made no resistance nor even asked the cause of his detention. Sheriff Peck of Berrien county, identified the man as the murderer. Hadley won't talk, but says he came from Allegan. He is a cooper, and had a quarrel with Taylor about 10 o'clock on the fatal night and struck him in the temple with a carpenter's awl, causing instant death. A reward of $300 was offered for his capture.

Dissatisfied Creditors.

The creditors of the Gibson and Western bank of Jackson, which failed December 24, 1884, with liabilities $56,440, and assets $42,354.76, are dissatisfied, as the business has not been settled up, and they claim that Mrs. Gibson, widow of the senior member of the firm, is getting the only benefit derived, as she is living in the house of her late husband at a nominal rent, while that is a part of the assets. Only a 25 per cent. dividend has been declared since the failure, and the creditors now are signing a petition to have the property put under the hammer and have the estate settled.

A Romantic Life.

Horatio Randall, who was found dead in his bed at Grand Rapids recently, had a romance in his life. In early life Randall met and loved a beautiful girl in the east. They were to have been married, but a lovers quarrel resulted in an estrangement, and the engagement was declared off. The lady married Erastus Reed, and moved to Kent county. In 1861 Mr. Randall reached Grand Rapids, and shortly afterwards met his early love. She was a widow. The old trouble was quickly settled, and the pair were married, living happily together until three years ago, when Mrs. Randall died.

MICHIGAN ITEMS.

Mortimer H. Putnam of Flint, is sued for breach of promise by Miss Maggie Doan, who puts the value of her blasted affections at $10,000. The couple are away up in society, and the suit has startled the citizens of that quiet town.

The flow of oil at R. G. Peters's well, Manistee, is 60 barrels per hour.

Mary Naylor of Bay City, 13 years old, has been sent to the Adrian reformatory, with a view to breaking her of the habit of drunkenness.

Chas. Sandler, arrested for the murder of Mrs. Ann McDermott at North Muskegon, is a bachelor with a bad reputation. When arrested Sandler denied all knowledge of the affair, but a search of his shanty revealed portions of her clothing. It is suspected that the woman was smothered and her body carried to the creek.

Richard Kelley, a farmer of Pittsford, Hillsdale county, was run over by a water tank connected with a steam clover huller and so badly crushed internally that he lived but a few hours. He was an old settler and aged 67 years.

Adam Shaft, an old and highly esteemed resident of Pontiac, died the other morning of consumption, aged 33 years. He was a cooper and carried on an extensive business. He has been unable to work for the past two years.

About 175 survivors of the Twenty-fifth Michigan infantry attended the twenty-first reunion in Lansing on the 14th inst. At the business meeting the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year: President, Charles M. Jones, Charlotte; Secretary and treasurer, William Spicer, Eaton Rapids; executive committee, J. S. Montgomery and M. O. Merritt, Eaton Rapids; Peter Kaufman, Charlotte. The next reunion will be held at Eaton Rapids on a date to be fixed by the executive committee. A feature of the reunion was the presence of the original drum corps which went out with the regiment. The corps consists of four cousins.

During the gale prevailing on the 14th inst., the dome of the normal observatory in Ypsilanti was carried away and the telescope somewhat injured. The bell tower of the engine house was also blown down. Fruit and shade trees were damaged. The spire of the Presbyterian church was twisted and there was imminent danger of its falling. The wind was sixty miles an hour.

The Presbyterian synod at its recent session in Grand Rapids, "Resolved, That in view of all the facts brought before us, we will, with God's help, establish and endow a college within our bounds: that a board of trustees be appointed to determine the location and take any other steps properly belonging to such a board.

Nicholas Schumacher, an old man living five miles east of Hersey, disappeared several weeks ago, and search failed to find him until the 14th inst., when two little boys, while fishing, discovered his body in a small creek. A post mortem reveals the fact that he had evidently been murdered by being hit on the head several times with some blunt instrument. Why he was killed, or who did it, is a mystery.

In the salt well of R. G. Peters in Manistee, the pumping for brine was discontinued for a short time the other day to make repairs. Soon after oil forced its way through the pipe and the oil flowed at the rate of a barrel a minute until checked. Local capitalists have concluded to sink a test oil well.

The East Saginaw street railroad has been sold to New York capitalists. It was bought last spring by Fall River parties for $37,500. Extensions were made at an expense of about $30,000. It was then stocked for $150,000 and has now been sold. The consideration was not made public.

An extension has been granted the Hopkinton company of Grand Rapids, and they have given a trust mortgage on all their property to secure about $16,000 worth of creditors.

While trying to cross the new iron bridge east of Allegan, Joseph Faulk fell and broke his leg. He has since died from the effects of his injuries.

Thos. Pope, a well-to-do Pontiac carpenter, was found dead in his bed the other night. Cause apoplexy.

E. H. Fogg, an old and much respected citizen of Ludington, died suddenly in his chair while at the supper table a few nights ago.

Fourteen deaths occurred in the mines in Marquette county during the first week in October.

Mrs. Alice M. Hunn of Jackson, administratrix of the estate of George Hunn, deceased, has commenced suit against the Michigan Central railroad to recover damages to the amount of $20,000 for the death of her husband in the railroad disaster at Carrollton last spring. The disaster was said to have been caused by the carelessness of railroad employees at Carrollton.

Archie Chatfield, who was charged with train-wrecking near South Lyon, has been discharged on examination before a Pontiac magistrate.

Jonathan King of Spring Arbor, committed suicide recently by shooting himself in the head with a rifle, death resulting instantly. King suffered from a stroke of paralysis some time ago and became despondent.

The iron ore shipments from Marquette during the season have been 709,313 tons; St. Ignace, 58,372 tons; Escanaba, 1,207,410 tons.

William Hertells hung around Kalamazoo for a week and ingratiated himself with celery shippers. He managed to get them to ship three carloads of the stuff south and west. Then he went to Chicago, stopped the cars there, sold the celery and pocketed about $400—all clear profit.

At a public meeting at Muskegon the other night the president and directors of the Toledo, Saginaw & Muskegon road were present. They agreed to build the road from Ashtabula to Muskegon on or before Jan. 1, 1888, provided Muskegon pledges $50,000, the right of way from Greenville and terminal facilities. Muskegon capitalist agreed to the terms of the company and will raise the money by subscription in 30 days.

At Washington in the case of Nichols, Shepherd & Co., against Messrs. Marsh & La Faver of Battle Creek, Messrs. Dickinson and Parker for Marsh & La Faver, obtained an allowance of an appeal and issue of writs of error from the United States supreme court to the Michigan supreme court upon the decree entered last term, involving the right of Nichols, Shepherd & Co., to use a steam engine reverse gear invented by Marsh. The whole case arises from an error of the secretary of the interior omitting by mistake to append his formal signature to a patent. The case has been litigated in both the federal and state courts. The bill for the relief of Marsh and La Faver was reported favorably before the 48th and 49th congresses.

William J. Hilton of Livingston county, has been sentenced to five years at Jackson for having several more wives than society tolerates.

In the Michigan state board of health report, Dr. E. F. Smith claims to have shown that there is no direct relation between diphtheria and sewers; that diphtheria is as frequent in the country as in the city, in non-sewered as in sewer districts; that the general death rate falls after the sewerage of a city; that typhoid fever and cholera decrease in proportion as a city is well sewerage.—Dr. Foote's Health Monthly.

HOME NEWS.

Jake Blunt, a well-known character, formerly a member of the notorious James and Younger gangs, was shot and instantly killed by Lloyd Warren, a Frenchman. The shooting occurred in Warren's cabin at the foot of Carbonate Hill, Colorado, whither Blunt went with the avowed intention of killing the Frenchman.

Mrs. U. S. Grant has received from the publishers of the Grant memoirs, a check for $150,000, which represents the second payment to her by the firm of her profits in the work. The first payment amounted to $200,000. It is said that probably within a few months Mrs. Grant will receive $100,000 more. Mrs. Grant will probably realize at least $300,000 on the work. The sales are continuing steadily, a new edition of 15,000 sets having been recently issued. Mrs. Grant gets seventy per cent. of the profits.

Leavitt, the theatrical manager of Sioux City, Iowa, who on his wife's advice, has turned state's evidence in the Haddock murder trial, keeps to the statement that Arensdorf did the shooting. The latter pleaded not guilty and is held in bonds of $45,000. Henry Sherman, Paul Lander and Fred Munchrath, jr., charged with conspiracy, have given bonds $2,000 each; George Lang is in jail for want of bondsman.

On the morning of September 30 the body of an unknown suicide was found in an Ohio & Mississippi car at Lawrenceburg, Ind. The description of the body tallied with that of Capt. Edward Fitzgerald of Port Huron, and his brother visited Lawrenceburg, only to have his fears realized. The unfortunate was well known on the lakes. Several years ago he fell and received injuries which affected his brain and unfitted him for sailing. It is supposed that he became despondent and committed suicide to end his troubles.

A Former Anarchist Mobbed.

During the anarchist troubles Gottfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when the trial came on appeared as a witness for the state, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend he entered a saloon at 105 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said: "There is the traitor." Waller endeavored to leave the room, but the crowd followed him with cries of "hang the dog," "choke him," "kill him," etc.

Some one seized him by the throat, but Waller shook the man off, and drawing a revolver, shot several times into the crowd. For a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Again Waller freed himself and fired into the mass of people. By this time he was nearly to Chicago avenue, and he ran for the police station.

Capt. Schanck placed Waller in a cell for safety, and sent a squad of men to disperse the crowd and capture the leader if possible. It could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

HORROR AT THE GULF.

One Hundred Persons Drowned and Every House at Sabine Pass Demolished.

Relief Urgently Needed.

The first reports of the great disaster at Sabine Pass were not in the least exaggerated, in fact they under-estimated the number of deaths caused by the storm. The death-roll now reaches ninety, with a number missing. It is thought that fully 100 persons met their death on the night of the gale. The relief trains could not get within twelve miles of the town, but over a dozen tow-boats were sent out and set to work saving life and property. There is considerable back-water yet at Sabine, hemmed in and held there by the railroad embankment. The most intense excitement has prevailed along the coast since the first news of the fearful catastrophe. The people have neither eaten nor slept and crowds have surrounded the wharves and depot waiting for the return of the train or boat from the devastated town. The steamboat Lamar left Orange with a relief committee on board. When she would return no one knew, but a constant watch was kept at Orange. At exactly midnight the next night the whistle of the Lamar was heard. The people hurried hither and thither to hear the news and to receive the sick and destitute.

The relief committee aboard the Lamar consisted of twenty citizens from Beaumont and about forty from Orange. They traveled up the Neches river between 4 p. m. and midnight, which was an extraordinary trip, fraught with fearful danger. Twenty-five of the committee were left at Sabine Pass to recover some of the bodies, many of which are reported to have washed dozens of miles over into Louisiana. The members of the relief committee who returned were so tired and worn out and so overcome by the horrible devastation they had witnessed that it was next to impossible to get a coherent story from them, and as each of the rescued refugees was surrounded by about a hundred people it was equally impossible to get a detailed account from any one of them. The exact extent of the storm-swept district is yet unknown.

From reports brought by the committee it is certain that the flooded district embraces an expanse of country many times larger than at first supposed. The gulf seems to have moved over the land for miles in one high, unbroken wall of water. The committee report that 101 persons are missing, ninety of whom are known to have been drowned. Thirty-five of the victims were white and fifty-five colored. Joseph Smith, a famous local character, known as "Alligator" Smith, was supposed to be among the lost, as people on the relief train saw him driving before the gale on Lake Sabine at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour, clinging to his skiff and calling loudly for help. Great was the surprise therefore when "Alligator" overhauled the steamer on its return, bringing with him in his small boat three persons whom he had rescued in a swamp. Many other miraculous escapes are recorded.

Ninety-one half-clad, shivering, wretched victims of the storm were brought up on the Lamar. Blankets and bedding were immediately gathered from house to house for the comfort of the heart-broken sufferers, every one of whom has some dear friend or relative among the dead. Nearly all the refugees are sick and prostrated from exhaustion and hunger. They are being tenderly cared for by citizens of Beaumont.

Dr. B. F. Calhoun of the relief committee says there are many persons in the vicinity of Sabine Pass who are utterly destitute, being without clothing to cover their nakedness. Dr. Calhoun requests aid for the destitute. He says it makes no difference what is sent, whether food, clothing, medicine, or money, they need them all. Dr. Calhoun is mayor of Beaumont, and he will distribute through committees whatever is sent to him.

From all the accounts gathered, language could not exaggerate the state of affairs at Sabine Pass. Out of more than 150 houses in the village, less than six remain standing, and they are ruined. Wives and children were swept away and drowned in the presence of their husbands and fathers, who were powerless to save them. The waves broke against the light house in solid walls, fifty feet high, tearing out the windows at the very top of the structure. Corpses have been picked up at a distance of thirty miles from the scene of the disaster. Friends and relatives of the drowned are coming into Orange and Beaumont by every train. The steamboat Lamar took on board a cargo of food, blankets, and clothing, and also a fresh relief committee, and started down the Neches to succor the unfortunates.

The pecuniary damage at Sabine, including that to the government works, will aggregate nearly $500,000, as many of the neighboring plantations sustained serious injury.

The excitement and interest over the dreadful catastrophe at Sabine Pass is in no way abated. The citizens of adjacent villages are taking steps toward extending substantial relief to the surviving victims.

Youthful Candidates for States Prison.

Jesse Hatch and Sidney Wiltse, two Jackson boys aged 11 and 13 years, dressed in knee trousers, were arraigned before Justice Hunt for the larceny of $47 from Mrs. Holden. Mrs. Holden is Hatch's aunt and he it was who entered the house and committed the robbery a few days ago while Wiltse stood on guard and waited for him. The boys then built a hut and furnished it with pistols, hatchets and other things and proceeded to organize a Jesse James gang, which was accomplished with Hatch as leader. The police have been working on the robbery for several days. The boys denied the affair until brought into court, when they made a full confession. They were bound over to the circuit court with bonds fixed at $20 each, which were furnished by their parents.

Contesting Hendricks' Will.

Although the late Vice-President Hendricks left a will giving to his widow his estate and making her the administratrix it seems probable that it will have to go through litigation, as the judges of the circuit court has received a telegram from Anna Hendricks Pierce and others in New York stating that the heirs in that city of Mrs. Jane T. Hendricks, the mother of the late Vice-President, protest against any further proceedings in the settlement of the estate until they have filed papers which will show that they are entitled to a one-third interest.

A Water Famine Threatened.

Shenandoah, Pa., and the entire Mahoning Valley is threatened with a water famine which must result in serious loss to business. But one shower of rain has fallen there in nine weeks, and the streams in the valley are almost wholly dried up. The water supply at the collieries is exhausted, and unless rain should come within the next few days most of the collieries not supplied from the Girard dam will be compelled to suspend operations. The town supply is also running short and the prospect of an entire exhaustion of the supply is causing great alarm among the people.

For Another Term.

T. V. Powderly has been re-elected General Master Workman of the K. of L. The nomination of T. V. Powderly for general master workman was made by E. P. Gould of Indianapolis and seconded by Tom O'Reilly of New York, both of whom are telegraphers. When the nomination and election of general master workman was declared in order, Mr. Powderly vacated the chair, the general worthy foreman taking his place. More than 100 delegates shouted "Have the election made by acclamation." When Mr. Griffith put the question there was a storm of "ayes." When the "noes" were called for there was one solitary "no." It came from Henry Beckmeyer, who headed the delegation from district assembly 51 of New Jersey. This delegation wears a yellow badge with the motto "Solid for harmony." There was no candidate nominated in opposition to Mr. Powderly and he received the votes of the 647 delegates present. When Mr. Griffith was nominated for re-election as general worthy foreman the only candidate nominated in opposition was R. Bennett of Illinois. Mr. Bennett received only fifty votes and Mr. Griffith's election was made unanimous. There was no election for general insurance secretary, the office now held by Homer L. McGraw, as the office has been abolished by the adoption of an amendment to the constitution.

New York Politics. Congressman Abram S. Hewitt has been nominated for mayor of New York. The nomination is something of a surprise to politicians and is regarded by them as a clever stroke of policy on the part of the Tammany leaders, inasmuch as it will prevent Mayor Grace from gratifying his ambition for a third term, set aside all talk of ex-Mayor Cooper, as the Union candidate, and give Tammany the credit of having named the man who would make the most satisfactory coalition nominee. The long resolutions adopted by the convention set forth the propriety and feasibility of union in the mayoralty fight, and urge the other democratic organizations to come to the support of Mr. Hewitt. The nomination was endorsed by the Young Democracy. Mr. Hewitt was surprised when told of the action of the convention. He declined to say whether he would accept.

TALLOW—Shows its usual inactivity at 3½¢ per lb.

JAKE, THE FARMER'S BOY.

Chicago Times.

Jake went whistling along the road on his way home from work. He had been plowing in the corn field. It was a glorious evening in September—seed-ing time. Such an autumn evening as could only be found among the hills of Ohio. The sun had sunk be-low the horizon, but with his expiring rays had beautifully decorated the heavens with blended shades of pur-ple and gold. Jake sat astride his old gray mare contented and happy. "The field will be ready for the har-row day after to-morrow," he solilo-quized, "then the next day I will com-mence drilling, and finish it Saturday. Whoopla!" Again the whistling mingled merrily with the jingling of the chains attached to the plow harness.

Jake's blue shirt was soiled with perspiration and dust. A portion of the crown of his hat was gone, mak-ing an aperture through which peeped his—I wish I could say blonde hair—but it was sandy, very sandy. His hands and face were sunburned and rough, while his feet hanging at the sides of the old mare were bare and dirty, but all this did not interfere in the least with his peace of mind, until, upon turning a fork in the road, he found himself by the side of Farm-er Anderson's daughter, who was walking home from Squire Ford's, where she had been invited to tea. She rejoiced in the name of Rosa, this girl of seventeen, with pink cheeks and sky-blue eyes. Very pretty and inno-cent she looked in her white dress and floating ribbons.

"How-da-do, Jake," she said, with a careless toss of her head. Jake's greeting was inaudible because of a choking sensation in his throat. Some-how of late he had very peculiar feel-ings whenever he was with Miss Rosa—such a queer commingling of pain and joy. He could not have told for his life which predominated or which he preferred. His pain was so exqui-site, and the joy so excruciating.

He slipped down from the mare and started the team ahead. He had a vague impression that his feet would be less conspicuous on the ground than dangling in the air in close prox-imity to Rosa's nose. He wished, in a confused and dazed sort of way, for he had lost all control of his thinking powers, that they were not so large or so dirty. He would have bartered his hopes of eternal life just then for a pair of shoes. The odor from his sweat-soaked clothes had suddenly become offensive to him. She appear-ed so dainty and pure in contrast. Heavens! how the blood surged to his heart as he stumbled awkwardly along by her side, trying to think of some-thing to say.

"Of course you're going to the fair, Rosa?" he finally asked, timidly, at the same time breaking off the top of a tall weed that he might have it to carry—his hands seemed to have swol-len in size and so much in the way.

"Oh, yes," she answered, "every-body is going, I guess." She did not manifest any interest as to whether he would be there. He wished she would.

"Harry Ford will enter his brown colt—the one he rides, you know. I hope it will take the premium, don't you." Then, without waiting for an answer she launched into a lengthy description of what a perfectly lovely time she had been having at the Ford's that evening, and wound up by ask-ing, "Don't you think they are such a nice family?"

An entirely new feeling crept into Jake's heart. He and Harry Ford had always been good friends, but all at once he found himself believing that an opportunity to throttle Harry would afford him supreme delight. As they were now at the gate that led in-to his father's barnyard, Jake did not feel obliged to answer Rosa's question, but hastily bidding her good-bye, fol-lowed his horses to the watering-trough. Rosa kept on down the road toward her home. "How awful Jake Bailey looked this evening," she said to herself. "You don't catch Harry Ford in such a plight." Harry, knowing that they had company in-vited, came in early from work. Slipping up the back stairs to his room, he arrayed himself in his Sun-day clothes, and came down looking like a gentleman. "Jake thinks lots of me," she lingered tenderly over the thought for a moment. "But mercy! I could never marry a man who went barefooted and wore such a horrid dirty shirt." Now Harry—she then went off into a pleasant little reverie, in which Harry was the cen-tral figure. Thus a little incident will sometimes shape a whole after life. If Rosa had not happened to see Jake with bare feet and dressed in his work-clothes I would probably have a dif-ferent story to tell. But she could not help having somewhat fastidious tastes, and Jake as he appeared that evening was not an object calculated to excite admiration.

Jake, back at the barn, was unhar-nessing his team and growing more ir-ritable every minute. "It's too con-founded bad it had to happen so," he muttered, as he jerked the astonished horses around. "If I could only a-known she was on the road!" He dashed the oats into the feed-troughs, giving the old gray a blow on the nose for nipping him. Within the last half hour he had become very much dissatisfied with himself. He vowed for one thing he would quit going barefoot. He of Harry with that of Jake. He felt indignant at his parents for selecting their just as well have called him Harry, or Charley, or anything but Jake. He leaned up against the gate-post sulkily, loath to go in the house to meet the father and mother who had treated him so shabbily by bet-ting upon him such an appella-tion.

"Jake, come to supper," screamed his little sister. When he worked in the corner field they did not have sup-per until night. Jake ground his teeth in rage at the sound of his hated name, but went in. He looked straight at his plate during the evening meal, answering the questions addressed to him briefly and gruffly. When he got up from the table he went immediately to his room.

"Wonder what's the matter with Jake?" queried his father, as he pre-pared to light his pipe for his evening smoke.

"Oh, only tired, I reckon; he'll be all right in the morning," answered the mother, as she shook the crumbs from the tablecloth.

"You must remember, pa, its pretty hard on a boy not yet out of his teens to work as our Jake does. Though to be sure," she added thoughtfully, "he's uncommon stout."

"Pooh!" said the father, "its not that. Jake's never tired. I'd be will-ing to put him agin any other hand in the county."

"I saw him and Rosa Anderson comin' down the road together before supper," chimed in the little daughter. The father and mother exchanged sig-nificant glances, but were discreet enough to drop the conversation.

And Jake did come to breakfast ap-parently all right. His ill-humor had vanished with his dreams. The only thing unusual about him was that he had his shoes on. "What's the mat-ter?" asked his mother, looking in-quiringly at his feet. Jake blushed a little for a moment. He was tempted to make the excuse that his feet were sore, but he was an honest boy, and he blurted out the truth. "He did not like to go barefooted, and he was not going to any more."

The mother suspected that Rosa An-derson was the cause of this change in her son, and she felt that twinge of pain and jealousy that all mothers feel when they first become aware of the fact that a child's heart has gone out to a stranger. But she was in the main a sensible woman, so she said nothing more and Jake started for the corner field.

The sun, a red ball, was just peeping over the tops of the trees; the birds were twittering softly among the branches, for boisterous singing was impossible. This lovely, hazy au-tumn morning Jake's heart swelled with an undefinable sense of enjoy-ment as he drank in the delights of na-ture, and he broke into whistling as musical as the songs of the birds. His parents heard him from where they stood on the steps. "Oh, Jake's all right," said the father reassuringly, as his son disappeared from sight, but the mother turned into the house with a sigh. She could not help think-ing of Rosa Anderson, and wondering how it would all turn out.

A little later on, when the corn stood in shocks and the frost had shriveled the leaves somewhat, Jake attended a "singing" held at the dis-trict schoolhouse. All the young peo-ple of the neighborhood were there. Conspicuous among them was Rosa Anderson, captivating with her radi-ant beauty and coquettish ways—at least she appeared so to poor Jake.

There was a long recess, during which games were played out of doors by the moon. Once while these games were in process Jake held Rosa's hand in his, and he was afraid she would hear his heart thumping against his vest. He forgot himself and crushed the lit-tle hand in his great powerful palm. She complained that he was rough. Then he took it tenderly in both of his, but she jerked it away and ran off.

When the singing had closed and the young people were filing slowly out of the house, Jake, ever impulsive, and too madly in love to be discreet, push-ed forward, offering his arm to escort Rosa home, but she, with nose tilted in the air, gave him the "mitten."

The boys nudged each other and cast quizzing glances at him. A few openly jeered him. He got out of the house as well as he could and cut across the fields toward home. When he reached his father's farm he sat down on a log on the edge of a little patch of timber. I doubt if the moon ever looked down upon greater mis-ery.

He sat there for a long time, the ag-ony of his heart wringing bitter tears from his eyes. Do not laugh, reader; you have been in a similar situation, and know it was not a laughable matter. But he stayed there until he had strangled his love, and he dug a grave in which to bury it—a grave so deep that when once interred, it could never be resurrected. Ah, if she had only known what she had lost.

The struggle was over; he wiped his face and put away his handkerchief. Then he stood up and with clenched fists vowed he would have his revenge. She should see the day she would re-gret what she had done to-night.

When Jake reached his father's door there was a faint streak of light in the east, and the barnyard fowls were beginning to stir. His mother let him in; she had been watching for him. He looked her square in the face. She saw, though the candle she held in her hand gave but a dim light, that her boy had suddenly changed to a man, and her mother's heart understood. The two gazed into each other's eyes for a mo-ment. The son saw an expression of tender sympathy. The mother saw one of determination and defiance. She knew something was going to hap-pen, and she felt that she hated Rosa Anderson.

Jake helped his father through with the Fall work. Then he quietly told his parents he was going to visit his uncle in Kansas, and if he could find an opening there for himself he would remain. His mother was prepared for such an announcement, but it was a great shock to the father. It had never occurred to him that his son would do else than remain on the farm, and finally, when he was done with it, take possession. He did everything in his power to dissuade his son from his "fool notion," as the father called it, but to no purpose. The only conces-sion Jake would make was that per-haps he would come back in the Spring. But Spring came and grew into Sum-mer and the Summer into Autumn, yet the father still mourned the loss of his boy. Then came the news that Jake had entered as a student in a law office in the town of S—, Kan. As the years sped on reports much to his credit were circulated among his old friends and neighbors. Hard work and honest endeavor were bringing their legitimate fruit, success. Appar-ently he had forgotten all about Rosa and the revenge he had once craved.

After Jake had gone Rosa Ander-son, with an inconsistency not uncom-mon in females, felt a new tenderness springing up in her heart for him, and a regret that her little episode at the school-house had ever happened. As the time passed both the tenderness and the regret grew. She cherished a sort of ideal with Jake's face and form. She forgot or forgave every-thing she had condemned in him be-fore he went away, and invested him with many noble attributes which, worthy as he was, truth compels me to say he did not possess. She coddled the belief that he would come back to her until it was a certainty. She was sure she would again feel the pressure of his hand and see the look of adora-tion in his eyes. So she waited. Her friends wondered why she did not marry. There were many conjectures concerning her, but never the right one. So little we know of the real feelings of those with whom we may be even intimately associated.

Ten years had passed since Jake left the neighborhood. During this time there were many changes. Some of his early companions had married and were settled down staid farmers and mothers. A few of both old and young had been laid to rest in the lit-tle country graveyard, where in sum-mer the briars and weeds kept watch over their graves, and in winter the bleak winds sang dirges for them. But none that we know were among these silent ones.

It was September, and invitations were sent out for Harry Ford's wed-ding. Rosa Anderson was not to be the bride, but Jake's sister, now a woman of twenty. Rosa was among the invited. She was perfectly indif-ferent as to whom Harry married. She had long ceased to think of any-thing but a friendly interest in him. But she was greatly agitated when she heard that Jake was coming home to be present at his sister's marriage.

A few days before the one on which the wedding was to take place an item of news appeared in the Morning Star, the principal paper of B—, the coun-ty seat. It read something like this: "We are glad to be able to chronicle the fact that Mr. Jacob Baily, for-merly of this county, but for the last ten years a resident of S—, Kan., has formed a partnership with one of our prominent lawyers, Barnabas King, Esq. Mr. Baily's past record is an enviable one. Our little city is to be congratulated upon the acquisition of so handsome and distinguished a citizen. We extend a hearty wel-come."

Rosa read this item and clasped her hands in silent ecstasy. "O joy," she thought, "he has really come and my waiting is over. Will he call? Ah, perhaps he will be too timid because of that deplorable action of mine ten years ago. I must explain to him as soon as possible how I have regretted that. But it will come all right, I feel it in my bones, as grandma used to say when she had a presentiment," and Rosa, leaning her chin on her hand, sat long in meditation, the while smiling softly to herself.

Jake did not call. The hour of the wedding arrived, and with it the in-vited guests. Rosa, not less lovely at twenty-seven than at seventeen, held her hand timidly to the hand-some fellow Mrs. Baily proudly intro-duced as her son Jacob. Mrs. Baily's hatred for Rosa had died gradually as her son climbed up fortune's ladder, and when he came back to her a great man she felt a genuine pity for that poor miserable Anderson girl.

Could it be possible that this grace-ful, intellectual-looking man was Jake Baily? Rosa pressed her hand to her heart to still the tumult there. Jake stopped to pick up the handkerchief she had dropped in her confusion, and after some polite remarks passed on.

He treated his old friends affably and courteously. They all called him Mr. Baily with an added tone of respect quite different from the old-time salu-tations.

After the marriage ceremony was over and refreshments had been served, the company strolled about the yard, amusing themselves in the various ways.

Rosa found herself alone with Jake a few minutes. She deftly turned the conversation to old times. "O! Mr. Baily," she said, looking wistfully into his face, "I have regretted very much a little incident that happened at our school-house many years ago. You may have forgotten it." He was re-garding her so calmly and coldly that she became painfully embarrassed. "I often came near writing to you how silly I thought I had acted—that is, you know," she gasped "I wanted to be friends." Poor Rosa could get no further. She heartily wished she had not undertaken to say anything to him about the matter. He drew him-self up. "Miss Rosa," he answered, "that little incident proved the turn-ing point in my life. But for you I would probably be still working on my father's farm, ragged and bare-footed." There was a gleam of mis-chief in his eyes. "So I thank you from the bottom of my heart that you acted just as you did that night at the old school house. And," he added, with a frank, cheery laugh, "let us hope that when I 'a-wooing' go again I shall have better luck. At present my only love is ambition." Looking at his watch, he said he had an appointment at B—and was obliged to leave. He lifted his hat politely and was gone. He had his revenge after he had long since ceased to care for it. But she? Ah! well, her wait-ing for Jake was over.

This happened some fifteen years back. Now, as Hon. Jacob Bailey rides through the streets of B—with his wife and children—he married the daughter of a wealthy merchant—his fellow-townsmen point to him with pride as a "smart fellow." He has been in the State Legislature and hopes soon to be sent to Congress.

Rosa Anderson still lives with her mother on the old homestead, her father having died years ago. Her hair is silvering; and the blue eyes have faded to a light gray. There is in them a look of pain and disappointment, while the once rounded cheeks are sadly sunken. The neighbors astonish strangers by telling them that "Rosa was once the prettiest girl in the whole county, and there was a time when she could have married Hon. Jacob Baily, of B—, had she been so minded."

In a Trance.

Montreal Star.

"Yes, it is true, I did have a trance while in Brooklyn, and for several hours I was believed dead!"

The speaker was Rev. Father Smith, of the Order of Dominicans, whose unique experience is recorded in a previous edition. Father Smith is young and intelligent. He is a native of Ottawa, and from the Oblat Fa-thers in that city he received an honor-ary and classical education. Being religiously inclined he abandoned home and kindred and left for France, where he was admitted into the order he now belongs to. Scarcely had he been cloistered a few months, when by a parliamentary decree the Dominicans and Jesuits were banished from the country. Father Smith, with several of his associates, repaired to America, and he has resided in America ever since. It was in Brooklyn that he fell into a trance. Father Smith is stop-ping at the St. Lawrence Hotel, Mon-treal, on his way back from Ottawa, where he had been relating his ex-perience to his family.

"And how did the unfortunate af-fair occur?" was asked. "Well, you see," said the reverend gentleman, "I am suffering from a malady which weakens me greatly. But never did it cause me to enter into a trance be-fore, except once in Italy. For several hours I was believed dead, but it was only when the chappelle ardente was being prepared I awoke. In Brooklyn the trance began in the same manner. I had been ailing for several days. One evening when I was lying on my couch I suddenly felt a great weakness coming over me. I tried to call for help. My mouth re-fused to articulate any sound. A moment after I had entered into a trance like the one I had in Italy. When my friends came into my room they found me pale and motionless. They felt my heart, but its pulsations could not be felt, and they conjectured that I must have passed away during their absence from my bedside. I could hear them walking about my couch, but I was so overcome with weakness that I was unable to move a finger. It is customary in religious commu-nities to bury one of their deceased mem-bers shortly after his demise. In ac-cordance with the custom they wired the news of my death to my family in Ottawa and charged one of my con-ferrers to prepare my funeral oration. When the time came to place me in my coffin I fully realized my horrible position. I tried to move, but the ef-fort proved fruitless. When in the coffin I made a supreme effort and called upon heaven to hear me and save me from such a horrible fate. I succeeded in partly raising my head, and this is what saved me. The first to congratulate me was the priest who had been summoned to preach my funeral sermon.

Debility

Languor, and Loss of Appetite, are cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It removes that terrible sense of Constant Weariness, from which so many suffer, gives tone and vigor to the stomach, and restores health and strength more surely and speedily than any other medicine.

Three years ago I suffered from Debility and Loss of Appetite, the result of Liver Disease. After having tried various remedies, and consulted several physicians, without benefit, I was induced to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The first bottle produced a marked change, and the second and third accomplished so much that I felt like a new man. I have, since that time, taken about one bottle every year, and had no recurrence of the trouble.—William E. Way, East Lempster, N. H.

CONQUEST OF MEXICO

Prescott's HISTORY OF THE CONQUEST OF MEXICO. With a Preliminary View of the Ancient Mexican Civilization, and the Life of the Conqueror, Hernando Cortes. Illustrated Library Edition, in two volumes, small octavo. Price, $9.25. Popular Edition, two volumes in one, without illustrations, $1.95. Now ready.

Copyright. The expiration of copyright enables me now to present this great work to American readers at a popular price, yet in form worthy of the author, and worthy of the finest library. Its mechanical qualities are fairly equal to those of my best edition of "Guzot's History of France."

Whipple, the noted essayist and critic, says: "A history possessing the unity, variety, and interest of a magnificent poem. It deals with a series of facts and exhibits a gallery of characters, which to have invented would place its creator by the side of Homer; and which to realize and represent in the mode Mr. Prescott has done, required a rare degree of historical imagination."

Beyond ALL PRAISE. "This announcement is all that is needed. The work itself long ago passed beyond all praise. The thousands of people who were unable to secure it at former prices will be glad to avail themselves of the opportunity of doing so at a reduced rate."—Interior, Chicago, Ill.
"The work itself occupies too high a place among historical writings to need commendation."—The Mail, Toronto, Ontario.

Timely. "The enterprising Mr. Alden has chosen a most timely occasion for the reissue of this valuable work, and its excellent and convenient library form, its cheapness, and the widespread interest in Mexican matters that exists at present, will doubtless combine to give it an appreciative reception."—The Week, Toronto, Ontario.

"The volume before us is a very creditable piece of work mechanically, and puts Prescott's charming histories within the reach of the average pocket book."—Evangelist, St. Louis, Mo.

Fascinating. "This history has a fascinating interest, and is so well known as to need no praise."—Christian Secretary, Hartford, Conn.

"Especially interesting at this time. Is published in two handsome volumes, and like all Mr. Alden's publications is sold at an astonishingly low price."—Advertiser, Detroit, Mich.

A Noble Work; planned and admirably executed; rich with the spoils of learning easily and gracefully worn; imbued everywhere with a conscientious love of the truth, and controlled by that unerring good sense without which genius leads astray with its false lights, and learning encumbers with its heavy panoply. It will win the literary veneration to its pages by the attractiveness of its subject and the flowing ease of its style; and the historical student will do honor to the extent and variety of the research which it displays. It will take its place among those enduring productions of the human mind which age cannot stale and custom cannot wither.—G. S. HILLARD.

FERDINAND AND ISABELLA. HISTORY OF THE REIGN OF Ferdinand and Isabella, the Catholic. By WILLIAM H. PRESCOTT. Illustrated Library Edition, in two volumes, small octavo, including portraits and other illustrations. Fine heavy paper, fine cloth, gilt tops. Price, $9.25. Popular Edition, from the same plates, but without illustrations, the two volumes in one. Price, $1.95. Now ready.

"Prescott had the genius to invest the dry facts of history with the charms of fiction; and yet he never sacrifices truth to the graces of style."—WESTLAKE.

"It is one of the most pleasing as well as most valuable contributions that have been made to modern history; it is the only one that gives us a faithful and sufficient picture of a period so important."—WESTLAKE.

The Best Physicians Outdone.

J. A. Crawford says: "I have had the worst form of Eczema two years, and found no relief from some of our best Physicians who have made this disease a specialty. I was persuaded to try Papillon (extract of flax). The relief I received was like a charm and I am well. I think papillon one of the blessings of the age." Try Papillon Skin Cure when all others fail. Large bottles $1.00 at all drug stores.

Got the Best of the Doctor.

W. F. Beyer, Garrettsville, Ohio, says: "My wife has been troubled with Catarrh a long time, but have, with what remedies we had, and what the doctor could do, kept the upper hand of it until this fall, when everything failed. Her throat was raw as far as one could see, with an incessant cough; when I invested a dollar in a bottle of your Papillon Catarrh cure as a last resort. To-day she is free from cough, throat all healed and entirely cured." Papillon (extract of flax) Catarrh cure effects cures when all others fail. Large bottles $1.00, at all Drug Stores.
