In her annual address before the national convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union Miss Francis Z. Willard, the president, among other things made the following recommendations: A system of township organization; an address to the Knights of Labor, asking them to include total abstinence in their basis of membership; to send out circulars urging work in behalf of the White Cross movement; urging congress to pass the Blair educational bill; for the abolition of prison chain gangs; for the placing of women under women's care in all penal and philanthropic institutions; a petition to congress for a prohibition amendment to the constitution; also one granting the ballot to women; urging the adding of a clause to the Women's Christian Temperance Union pledge pledging the signer against the use of opi m, and for the appointment of national lecturers.

Bill Nye, one of the brightest of our American humorists, has become an irregular contributor to The Century. Readers of that magazine will recall his letter on "Copyright," in the last February number, in which he humorously suggests that owing to the prevalence of foreign literature under existing, or rather under non-existing laws, we are in danger of becoming a nation of foreigners, and adds that one advantage of being a foreigner here would be increased political influence, and the only safe way to remain a native will be to refrain from learning to read. He will have a paper on "Documentary Proof of Self-defense" in the forthcoming November Century, to be followed in a later number by a witty essay, entitled "The Coupon Letter of Introduction."

Signal service officers state that some features of the great storm which so recently swept over the country will be of great interest to the scientific world. It was characterized by one of the lowest barometric pressures ever observed. At Chicago when the storm centre was there the barometer registered just 29.098—corrected for sea level. Curiously enough, the signal service of Detroit though warned twenty-four hours before of the storm's approach, could not announce it because the ethics of the department require first an official notification from Washington. It would seem that lives and property should not be imperilled by red tape considerations.

Mrs. Woodworth, a revivalist, is attracting large crowds in Muncie, Ind. Her sermons are simply exhortations; and she holds her hearers quite as much by her manner as by her words. She is dramatic in tone and action. Her speech is of a sing-song style, while her hands are kept busy in graceful gesture. At times her eyes are fixed heavenward for several minutes, while she stands like a statue, her hands thrown back over her shoulders, palms upward in a slow, waving motion. Her audience watch her intently, and are evidently deeply impressed.

Here's a hint for our farmer readers: Professor Arnold, who has been inspecting the English modes of agriculture states that the English dairymen are far in advance of the American. They use greater skill in feeding and husband the manure better, as well as using economy in every department. He states that if our dairymen would economize as well they would make their farms fertile and become wealthier.

The mantle of Helen Hunt Jackson, as regards her efforts for the Indians, seems to have fallen upon Mrs. Hiles of Milwaukee. At the Lake Mohonk conference Mrs. Hiles made a thrilling plea for the Indians of Southern California dispossessed of their lands as described in Ramona. She thought their case hopeless unless an incorruptible attorney could be found who would make an indomitable fight in their behalf.

The rivals of the Standard Oil company in the east have succeeded in establishing a market in California. Some time ago the railroads gave the Standard people such rates as to give them a practical monopoly of the coast trade, but the opposition oil men secured a favorable rate over the Canadian Pacific, and now land oil in San Francisco at less cost than the Standard.

THE NATION'S LIBRARY.

A Big Concern and the Man Who Manages It—Quintessential Spoofed.

Washington Letter. One of the busiest persons in Washington these hot summer days is Ainsworth R. Spofford, the librarian of Congress. While other people are disporting themselves by mountain or seaside he is busy with his plans for the new library building. And while other people are happy in their relief from work he is more happy in this opportunity to devote himself to this work. It has been the pet project of his existence for many years. There has been bill after bill in Congress for the erection of a library building, and Mr. Spofford has been waiting for these many years to see the accomplishment of his hopes. Now that the proposition has actually become a fact and the land for the site has been purchased, he cheerfully relinquishes his summer vacation for the work he has so long hoped to see accomplished.

Mr. Spofford is a wonderful man. Talk of walking encyclopedias, he is an encyclopedia of encyclopedias, and a walking one, too. No matter what you want to know, if it is to be found in books you have only to go to Mr. Spofford and he will put you in a way to find it. He is one of the busiest men in Washington, but never too busy to answer a question relating to information to be had from books. Approach him on any other subject than the one connected with his life study, and his replies are brief, often in monosyllables, showing that he takes no interest in the subject. Turn the conversation to books or a kindred topic, and he is all attention. He has studied the library buildings of the world, and the new building which is to be constructed under his supervision will be a model, so far as it may with the rather limited sum which Congress tardily and grudgingly gave for the preservation of the splendid library which Mr. Spofford has had in keeping and which has so largely accumulated in the past twenty-two years.

The library of Congress, to which Mr. Spofford was appointed librarian by President Lincoln in 1863, then consisted of perhaps 75,000 volumes. Now it contains 750,000 volumes of books and pamphlets. Then its quarters were considered commodious and capacious; now they are crowded with piles and boxes of books that cannot be used because there is not room for their distribution, and many dark rooms in the basement of the Capitol are filled with volumes which cannot be given accommodation in the library itself. Then the salary of the librarian and his assistants was $6,000 or $7,000 a year; now their total salaries amount to nearly $40,000 a year. Then the library was surpassed by many in different parts of the world; now there are but four in the entire world which outrank it. At the rate of increase which has been the rule for many years past, Mr. Spofford will have a round million of books and pamphlets to store away in his new library building when it is completed. The rate of increase in the number of works in the library in the past year has been very rapid. By law every person who copyrights a book must send two copies to the library. Besides this Congress gives from $50,000 to $75,000 a year for the purchase of books for it, and under the careful management of Mr. Spofford this gives a rapid increase in the number of its works. The library now is increasing at the rate of nearly fifty thousand volumes a year. The collection is a wonderful one. It comprises books in ten different languages, and on many important subjects it has a volume of every work published. Many of the works upon the shelves are especially valuable for their antiquity, while in all new publications, both in this country and elsewhere, it keeps fully up to the times.

The library, while it is called the library of Congress, is really the library of the people. Anybody who visits it may examine at his leisure any of the works upon its shelves, and by depositing the value of any book, may take it to his home and keep it a considerable time. It is the Mecca of the historian and careful writer from all parts of the country. They travel here to study the works of reference upon its shelves, and any day you may see within its walls men and women of letters studying the valuable records which it contains.

The library was founded in 1802 with some three thousand volumes carefully selected in London. John Randolph was one of its earliest friends and supporters. Jefferson was also its friend, and when he found it necessary to part with his fine collection of books they were promptly purchased by Congress and added to the library. It is said that Jefferson shed tears on parting with his library, which was for that time a very fine one. Like other features of the great Government it has had its reverses. It was destroyed by fire when the British invaded Washington in 1814. They took the books from the library, which was then in the Capitol, as it is now, and piling them on the floor of the Hall of Representatives set fire to them, and thus fired the great building. Thirty-seven years later a fire caused by a defective flue destroyed half the library, which then consisted of some sixty thousand volumes.

Hay Fever.

A very singular and practically unexplained malady prevails during the summer months known variously as hay fever, hay asthma, summer catarrh, rose cold and several other appellations. Happily it is of comparatively rare occurrence, as it is both painful and exhausting to its victims. It is a catarrhal affection of the respiratory mucous membrane, and as it occurs frequently during the hay season it has been thought to be due to the inhalation of the emanations from grass. The symptoms are those commonly experienced in the case of a severe cold or influenza, consisting of headache, violent sneezing and watery discharges from the eyes and nostrils, together with a hard, dry cough and occasional severe asthmatic paroxysms. The attack usually runs a course of from two to six weeks, though it is often found amenable to treatment, in which case it disappears sooner, to reappear, however, precisely one year afterward.

The malady is admirably portrayed by Dr. E. N. Holmes, as follows: "The salient trait which most attracts the attention of the student of hay fever is its annual recurrence. This is grafted on its life history, becomes its central point of diagnosis, the chief characteristic of the disease, and to the elucidation of this all existing theories tend. It is, however, not sufficiently recognized that we come here upon a problem which we are totally unable to solve elsewhere, and we can by no means be wiser in the interpretation of this than we are compelled to be in the discussion of diseases far longer known. The reason of the rhythmic measures of the most ordinary of every day events is not, and cannot be understood. Their unvarying recurrence at the appointed time is recognized, but the determination thereof, then, rather than at some other period, cannot be explained. As long as the cause was held to be an external one, there was little encouragement for treatment, and but little progress made. The more recent discussions, which recognize hay fever as in the individual, and not in the surrounding ether, and the causation not a vague, shifting irritant, but an actual abiding disease, have been productive of much benefit. Not that we yet understand the true, innate quality of the disease, but we now have at least a good working hypothesis, yielding some sound practical results. It is a great gain to have discovered that as the symptoms of the malady are so prominently referred to the nasal regions and may induce local disorders, so pre-existent, and secondary lesions may in turn result in increased centric irritability, and their reparation is imperative before the deep-seated elements can be eradicated—nay, even in some cases may be the uprooting of the disease itself."—American Analyst.

A Triumph of Skill.

From the Scientific American. At a recent meeting of the Engineers' club of Philadelphia, the secretary read a detailed description of the moving of the Hotel Pelham, at Tremont and Boylston streets, Boston, for the purpose of widening Tremont street.

This hotel is built of freestone and brick, ninety-six and sixty nine feet frontage. The Boylston street wall is supported on eight granite columns twelve feet high, three and four feet square. There is a basement and seven stories above the sidewalk. Height above tramway on which it was moved, ninety-six feet. Weight, five thousand tons, exclusive of furniture; which was not disturbed during the removal, as also were not the occupants of the stores on the first floor and some of the rooms, the various pipe connections being kept up with flexible tubes.

Careful experiments with models showed that if the lower part of the building was firmly braced there was no danger of shifting in the parts above. The general arrangements consisted of heavy and substantial stone and brick foundations for iron rails and rollers, and the building was forced to its new position by sixty-six screws, two inches in diameter, half inch in pitch, operated by hand against timbers arranged to uniformly distribute the pressure against the building. Much care and ingenuity were displayed in the details in the arrangement and work. Two months and twenty days were occupied in preparation. The moving itself was begun on August 21, and finished on August 25, but the actual time of moving was but thirteen hours and forty minutes. The greatest speed two inches in four minutes. The hotel moved about one-eighth of an inch at each quarter turn of screws. The whole distance moved was thirteen feet ten inches. Four thousand three hundred and fifty-one days' labor was required for the work. The whole cost was about $30,000.

This is the largest building that has ever been removed, although larger ones have been raised, which latter is a much simpler and much less risky operation. The complete success of this undertaking is shown by the fact that cracks, which existed in the walls prior to removal, were not changed by the operation. Paper was pasted over them before commencing, that any change might be seen.

WEST'S ANNUAL REPORT.

Interesting Statistics About the Mormons.

Caleb W. West, governor of Utah, in his annual report says the number of children of school age in the territory June 30, was 50,038. The expenditure for school purposes $228,544. In addition there are mission schools maintained by various christian denominations which the governor praises very highly. They number eighty-three with 230 teachers, and 6,355 pupils, maintained at a cost of $350,000. The report then summarizes the grazing, agricultural and mining products of the territory. On the subject of polygamy the governor says:

"The all-absorbing question in this territory, dominating all others, hurtfully affecting its prosperity, impeding its advancement and disturbing the quiet and happiness of its people, is the attitude of defiance assumed and maintained by the Mormon people, who number probably five-sixths of the whole population, to the law of congress for the suppression of polygamy known as the Edmunds law. In all questions affecting the Mormon church and people polygamous and monogamous Mormons make common cause, stand together and are united. They maintain publicly through their leadership and teachers at their houses of worship, through their press and privately in social and business circles that the law is an infamous interference with and a denial to them of that religious freedom guaranteed to all by the constitution; that they are prepared to, and will if required of them, sacrifice their personal comfort, their property, suffer indefinite imprisonment and surrender life itself, rather than yield and promise obedience to the law and forego the privileges they claim. The government can have and hold but one position towards these people, which is of respect; its authority must be respected; its laws must be obeyed."

During the year there were eighty-four convictions in the Federal courts for polygamy and unlawful cohabitation. In nearly all these cases the convicted have absolutely refused to accept their freedom by giving their promise to obey the laws in the future. In conclusion, the governor says he knows of no armed organization for the purpose of opposing lawful authorities or resisting enforcement of the laws, nor does he believe any such now exists, but says the need may arise at any time for the prompt use of a strong, well-disciplined and efficient military force to aid the civil power, and recommends that a force of United States troops be placed and kept in garrison in the territory. The governor urges the passing of the bill in reference to bigamy now before congress and says its effect will be to stay immigration and deprive of political privileges those who identify themselves with this people to aid and abet them in their violation of the law.

PERISHED BY THE STORM.

Vessels Wrecked and Many Lives Lost.

Reports have been received from all parts of Great Britain, telling of the disastrous effect of the hurricane which swept over the British Isles recently. The British ship Malleny was wrecked in the Bristol Channel and twenty persons were drowned. The shore was strewn with wreckage. The bodies washed ashore had been stripped of valuables by wreckers. The Norwegian bark Fredrikstad, from Musquash, N. B., for Swansea, was wrecked off Padstow, and nineteen persons were drowned. The bark Alliance was also wrecked off Padstow and four lives were lost. The other persons on board were saved by a lifeboat. Another barge was seen to be in terrible distress, the crew being huddled together on the deck. The vessel foundered the next morning, and it is believed that from a dozen to twenty persons were drowned. The gale prevented the people on shore from rendering assistance. The cries of the doomed men were heard distinctly by those who were watching the vessel from the shore. A Norwegian bark foundered on the coast of Wales and fifteen persons perished. The latest reports show the effects of the recent storm on the south and west coasts were terrible. A Norwegian bark foundered off Lintagel, Wales, and her entire crew, consisting of fifteen persons, perished. Ten bodies were washed ashore on the Glamorgan coast.

Where Our Immigrant Come From. The practice of English justices of suspending sentence on pauper criminals on condition that they quit the country and break themselves to the United States was supposed to have been pretty thoroughly squelched after the expose of the weeks ago a woman named Baker, the Carline for the murder of a policeman, who was pardoned from the Middlesex jail, lifting on condition that she should leave at Scotland yard and the detective department will settle in the United States.

A still worse case is reported from Colchester, in Essex. A man named George Watkins was charged with attempting to murder his wife and six children and with attempting to commit suicide. The evidence showed that he had been driven to the deed by desperation and destitution of the worst kind, and that but for the most heroic efforts on the part of his wife he would have accomplished his purpose of cutting all their throats with a razor.

The newspaper publications of the facts of the case resulted in several small sums of the family, and when the case came up on remand the mayor announced that the "where they could find work." Several similar cases where emigration to the United States has been substituted for punishment for criminal offenses are reported from different parts of the united kingdom.

Land for the People. The secretary of the interior has ordered that certain lands in the Walla Walla land district in Washington Territory, lying on the branch line of the Northern Pacific railroad, running between Wallula Junction and Walla Walla, now withdrawn for the benefit of the Northern Pacific railroad company, be restored to settlement and entry. It appears that this tract which comprises about 23,000 acres, was overlooked in the general restoration in 1881 of those lands which by a change in the general route of the road were thrown outside of its withdrawal limits.

JACKSON, Mich., May 26, 1886. Rheumatic Syrup Co. Gentlemen—About ten years ago my general health became impaired from my liver and kidneys becoming diseased. I have constantly failed in strength ever since, my whole system becoming prostrated. For years my nerves have been so weak and uncontrollable that my sufferings have been greater than I dare attempt to describe. The pain and twinges in my back and shoulders, and twinges and cramps of the muscles have been almost unbearable. I have taken everything I could learn or hear of, but never received the benefit which I have from Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. It is a remarkable remedy. The syrup has regulated my kidneys and liver, thereby removing the cause of my general ailment, aiding nature in restoring my impure blood to a healthy state, and the palsied condition of my whole nervous system is better than it has been for many years. The pains which I have constantly been suffering for years have entirely left me. It will be gratifying on my part to answer any inquiries regarding the merits of your remedy as experienced by me. I am very truly yours,

A GREAT ENTERPRISE. THE CENTURY MAGAZINE, with its enormous circulation (edition of November number is a quarter of a million) and great resources, has never undertaken a greater work than the one which will be its important feature during the coming year. This is a history of our own country in its most critical time, as set forth in

THE LIFE OF LINCOLN, BY HIS CONFIDENTIAL SECRETARIES, JOHN G. NICOLAY AND COL. JOHN HAY.

This great work, begun with the sanction of President Lincoln, and continued under the authority of his son, the Hon. Robt. T. Lincoln, is the only full and authoritative record of the life of Abraham Lincoln. Its authors were friends of Lincoln before his presidency; they were most intimately associated with him as private secretaries throughout his term of office, and to them were transferred upon Lincoln's death all his private papers. Here will be told the inside history of the civil war and of President Lincoln's administration,—important details of which have hitherto remained unrevealed, that they might first appear in this authentic history. By reason of the publication of this work,

THE WAR SERIES, which has been followed with unflagging interest by a great audience, will occupy less space during the coming year, but will by no means be entirely omitted. Stories of naval engagements, prison life, etc., will appear.

NOVELS AND STORIES include a novel by Frank R. Stockton, two novelettes by George W. Cable, stories by Mary Halleck Foote, "Uncle Remus," Edward Eggleston, and other American authors.

SPECIAL FEATURES (with illustrations) include a series of articles on affairs in Russia and Siberia, by George Kennan, author of "Tent Life in Siberia," who has just returned from a most eventful visit to Siberian prisons; papers on the Labor Problem; English Cathedrals; Dr. Eggleston's Religious Life in the American Colonies; Men and Women of Queen Anne's Reign, by Mrs. Oliphant, Clairvoyance, Spiritualism, Astrology, etc.; Astronomical papers; articles on Bible History, etc.

An encouraging movement seems to be on foot among religious denominations and well meaning people generally to check the raging, rushing tide of domestic ruin that is sweeping over our land like a deadly sirocco, by the aid of the loose divorce laws that exist on so many of our State statute books. A national divorce reform league has been organized, that is sending out lecturers and literature on the subject; several religious bodies that have held recent sessions have discussed the question at length, and passed strong resolutions on the subject. These efforts, however, must avail but little without reformatory legislation. So long as the statutes of the states legalize divorce for so many causes, refusal, on the part of the part of clergymen, to marry parties so divorced will only send such parties to Justices of the Peace for remarriage, which will make the matter no better. That something should be done to arrest the evil is very evident, and we wish success to every effort in that direction. We also think the people, everybody, can do much to prevent family dissensions and separations by encouraging forbearance and condemning the causes that lead to them. The opinions of a great many respectable people are very loose on this subject.

REV. F. A. BLADES'S speech, last Friday evening, was one of the best political speeches to which we ever listened. His statements were fairly and candidly made without a semblance of caricature; his arguments were terse, ponderous and free from logical fallacy; his voice was clear and musical and his diction scholarly and beautiful; his elocution was simple, impressive, majestic, unaffected. He is a speaker to whom one must listen, whether he agrees with him or not. We like to hear such speakers, and have no disposition to withhold from them the meed of praise to which they are justly entitled, whatever may be their party affiliations.

BEAUTIFUL EMBLEMS.

Nature is full of most instructive emblems. It is our opinion that every property and every law of the material universe, including animal and vegetable life, is the counterpart and emblematic representative of the nature and activities of the human soul and human life. Be that, however, as it may, it can hardly be questioned that the gorgeous hues of the autumnal forests, the great beauty with which nature clothes herself, at the very moment of yielding up summer vitality and surrendering to the dreary grave of winter, is a most impressive emblem of the glory that gathers around the closing years and months and days of a noble and well spent life. Another emblem of the same sort, more frequent and even more glorious is seen upon the western sky at the close of day. As the gorgeous colorings of autumnal ripeness are richer and more beautiful than spring or midsummer, and as the glorious coloring of the western sky is more wonderful than the morning or the noonday, so are the closing days and scenes of the ripe old age of a well spent life more beautiful and more to be admired than ever the innocence of childhood the loveliness of youth or the strength and majesty of manhood.

OBSERVATIONS AND EXPERIENCES ABROAD.

NO. 17.

As we pursue our journey up the Rhine, the next town of significance and interest is Neuwied, pleasantly situated in a fertile valley upon the right bank of the river. It is of modern origin as compared with the towns already named, having been founded in 1737 by a prince, who invited colonists of all religious persuasions to settle there and enjoy perfect toleration. The result has been a thriving manufacturing town of some 6000 inhabitants, made up of Jews, Catholics and various protestant sects, especially the Moravians. Here we once spent one of the most interesting Sabbaths we ever spent on foreign shores. We attended Moravian services four times that day and were exceedingly interested in their peculiarities. The room in which services were held was oblong, perhaps 30 by 50 feet, with the ministers' platform upon one side, and the seats were in long straight rows, rising as they receded from the platform. Directly in front of the speaker was a tight board partition, a little higher than the heads of the auditors, which separated the men from the women. Visitors were not compelled to separate but were seated in the rear of the members. The sisters all wore white caps, indicating by their style and the color of their ribbons the age and social condition of the wearer. Girls fastened their caps with red strings; young ladies used pink; wives, blue; widows, white. Betrothal was also indicated in some way, but I do not remember what it was—strings of another color I think. The morning service was a love feast. A short address was made by one of the ministerial brethren, of whom there were several on the platform, after which a good, ample biscuit with a cup of coffee was served to each member of the congregation. The other services were not so unlike other religious meetings as to merit special mention. Each of the different peoples who dwell in Neuwied occupies its own locality in the town, and we were told that very little friction occurs among them.

In the palace of the prince, which is situated near the bank of the Rhine, is found a very extensive collection of Roman antiquities, consisting of bronze and iron armor, helmets, weapons, a plowshare, locks and keys, tools of various trades, a sacrificial knife, also collections of coins, pottery in great abundance, tiles, hand mills, and a large quantity of oyster shells, proving that a Roman colony, in the third century, sent all the way to the sea for table luxuries. Most of these relics were exhumed from the ruins of an ancient Roman city, called Victoria, located about two miles distant. Owing to the value of land in this region the excavations which brought to light these relics have been refilled and crops of grain and grass wave over the place, obliterating nearly every vestige of the ruins.

Between Neuwied and Coblenz, the next city of importance, we pass a point where the French, in 1797, crossed the Rhine in spite of the opposition of the Austrians. On an eminence stands an obelisk, erected to the memory of the French general, Hoche, who achieved this memorable exploit. Villages nesting in the valleys, and castles crowning the crags give variety to the scenery until we reach Coblenz, a strongly fortified town of about 22,000 inhabitants, lying on the left bank of the river near the confluence of the Mosel with the Rhine, and directly under the frowning batteries of the impregnable fortress of Ehrenbreitstein, occupying an eminence on the opposite side of the stream. Coblenz is the chief city of the Rhenish provinces of Prussia, and the bulwark of Germany against French invasion. Besides the fortress named, three other strong forts and other important defences occupy other hilltops near by. These vast defences form a fortified camp capable of accommodating 100,000 men. The river is crossed by a bridge of boats that can be easily opened to let steamers through, and could easily be cut loose at either end and left to swing around by the current, thus permitting a retreating army to cross, and cutting off in an instant the possibility of immediate pursuit.

The traveler will want to stop here several hours to examine and admire these defences as well as the delightful scenery surrounding, and especially along the banks of the Mosel. Directly at the confluence of the two rivers stands a church having four towers. This church was erected in 836, 1050 years ago, and is distinguished by a number of important historical events. Here the grandsons of Charlemagne met in 843, only seven years after its erection, and divided his vast empire into Germany France and Italy. In 1338, King Edward III, of England met the Emperor Lewis, of Bavaria, in front of this church, and was installed vicar of the Empire. On the same square in front of the church, stands a monumental fountain, erected by the French in 1812, to commemorate the invasion of Russia by Napoleon. A few months later the Russian army, in pursuit of the retreating and scattered French, reached this place on its way to Paris. Their commander, St. Priest, instead of erasing the obnoxious inscription, made the following addition: "Seen and approved by us, Russian commander of the city of Coblenz, Jan. 1, 1814," which still remains.

Many other interesting objects are found in this eventful locality, but my readers must visit the Rhine and see them for themselves.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23, 1886.

Congress is still five weeks off; society is still quiescent; the President is taking and contemplating trips, and the cabinet and other Government officials are still engrossed with the preparation of their annual reports.

The indifference with which Congress always receives these reports seems to have but little effect upon their length or their being freighted with suggestions. Every year the officials plunge into their literary work, some with the view of establishing a reputation as finished writers, others with the intention of bringing about reforms or changes that will give them a name as public benefactors and statesmen.

The compiling of a report by an Executive Department is an interesting process, for nearly all the clerks contribute to it. When it is issued, however, it bears the name of the department, and the condensed information it contains goes to the world looking like the industrious research and literary labor of one man.

The President made his first trip into Virginia on Thursday to attend the State Fair at Richmond. Many of the Virginians said "He will not be there. The Chief Magistrate is always announced and thousands of people are attracted to the Fair in consequence, but he never comes." Mrs. Cleveland was to have gone also, and other ladies of the Cabinet, but they backed out at the last moment. It was said this change of mind was because of the rather exclusive reception that had been arranged for them at the gubernatorial mansion. Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland were going to Richmond to meet the people. On Wednesday next the President and his Cabinet will go to New York to attend the inaugural ceremonies of the Bartholdi statue.

And now it seems that the Hon. Sunset Cox, Minister to Turkey, is coming back to Washington to represent the Ninth New York District. Although he said Congress was not nearly as big as it used to be, and that he did not care much about it, it is stated he gave the President to understand that he would much rather return to Congress than to Turkey. He has been, during the week, dining, talking over affairs in the East with the President and making his report.

Senator Edmunds, of Vermont, who has just been re-elected, first took his seat in the United States Senate twenty years ago, and has served continuously ever since. Mr. Edmunds has long felt sure of re-election. Last winter he was apparently worried, but in May reports from Vermont were such that he began to wear the look of a man who knew in whom he trusted. Nor is it surprising that his state agreed that it would be a mistake to retire this veteran and fill his place with an inexperienced man.

Mr. Edmunds is not popular, indeed he has many enemies, for he is dogmatic, cold, and not addicted to the pursuit of friendships. The democrats in Congress have learned to accept him as a stubborn fact and to quietly submit to many things from him, which, coming from any other man, would anger them to frenzy. It has been facetiously alleged that the mugwumpian fondness for him is only "an acquired taste." Another peculiarity of the Senator from the Green Mountains is that he has always refused to help any of his constituents to get an office. This of course, makes him one of the most individual of public men. Notwithstanding his reputation for austerity and frugidity, he can bend very gracefully when occasion requires, and he is considered a charming dinner companion.

A Year's Yield.

The October crop report of the secretary of state, issued on the 15th inst., gives a summary of reports of threshings of wheat up to about September 23, showing an average yield of 16.33 bushels per acre in the southern four tiers of counties and of 13.37 bushels per acre in the northern counties. These figures indicate a total yield in the state of 26,594,513 bushels. This month's returns show the average yield of wheat per acre in the southern counties to be .59 or a bushel more, and in the northern counties 1.70 of a bushel more than reported in September. This is the final estimate of the wheat crop of 1888, and like the October estimates of former crops, is believed to be as accurate as can be obtained at this date. The 1888 crop was estimated 30,837,361 bushels. The supervisors' returns made in the spring of 1888 show the crop to have been 30,627,543 bushels. An average yield per acre of wheat raised on corn stubble is returned at 12.73 bushels, on wheat stubble at 13.15 bushels, on oat stubble at 14.33 bushels, and on summer fallow at 20.03 bushels. The yield per acre of oats in the southern four tiers of counties is 32.83 bushels and in the northern counties 23.12 bushels. The yield per acre of barley in the state is 24 bushels. The condition of clover sown this year is 67 per cent. the comparison being with vitality and growth of average years. Corn is estimated to yield 57 bushels of ears, or about 28 bushels of shelled corn per acre in the southern counties and 54 bushels of ears or about 27 bushels of shelled corn per acre in the northern counties. The corn crop matured from the 10th to the 20th of September. Frost injured the crop in several localities in the northern counties, but did no material damage in the southern counties. Potatoes will yield in the southern counties 69 per cent. and in the northern counties 65 per cent. of an average crop. Winter apples will yield in the southern counties about 92 per cent. and in the northern counties 87 per cent. of an average crop.

John Collins and his family, living in the second story of his store building, barely escaped with their lives, and Mr. Baxter carried his wife and child out of a burning building after they were overcome by the smoke and flames.

Pinned to Death.

The death of William H. Cobleigh, one of the oldest and best known residents of Saginaw county, occurred on his farm, nine miles south of East Saginaw the other evening. During a wind storm a heavy gate was blown down on him, pinning him to the ground. He was not found until several hours later, and then he was dead.

Mr. Cobleigh was 73 years old and very feeble, but he had made a desperate fight for life. The ground around his body had been torn up by the superhuman efforts of the unfortunate man to extricate himself, and his fingers were worn through to the bones. Mr. Cobleigh had almost succeeded in working himself from under the gate, when he evidently became exhausted and gave up the struggle. He leaves a widow and two sons.

MICHIGAN ITEMS.

Charles Andrew of Gratiot county, is a pioneer 81 years of age, and a man who is probably as familiar with Michigan history as any other person who can be named. In 1834 he was one of the delegates who met in Detroit to appoint the framers of a state constitution, and has ever since been active in political matters. His eyesight is still so good that he reads his newspaper without glasses.

Sibley and Bearinger of East Saginaw, now hold in their possession 600,000,000 feet of standing timber located in Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota. Last year they handled 50,000,000 feet and expect to operate quite as extensively this season. They are somewhat later in commencing operations this year but any delay that may have occurred will be made up. About 500 men and 75 teams will be kept busy during the season and the pay roll and expense account will run from $700 to $1,000 per day.

The death of the Hon. F. C. Annable of Alcona, Van Buren county, is announced aged 81. He settled there in 1836. In those early days, he taught school several terms, and was orator of the day at the first 4th of July celebration in the county, which was held on the banks of the Barren brook in Alcona, in 1838. He served in the legislature of 1840. Ten years ago he suffered amputation of a leg. He was the first to die of five men who were friends many years ago in New York, and who moved into Alcona fifty years ago, where they have since resided as immediate neighbors, their farms fronting on the same highway.

Annie F. Pett, daughter of Wm. Pett, an old resident of Muskegon, shot herself through the heart the other night. The coroner's jury was unable to assign any motive for suicide, and rendered a verdict of accidental shooting. She was a bright and handsome young lady, and very popular in society.

Joseph Kitchen, one of the oldest business men of Ypsilanti, dropped dead while walking in his yard. Cause, apoplexy.

An organization of St. Louis citizens is at work offering inducements for manufacturers to locate in the corporation, and a proposition from an agricultural implement factory firm is now under consideration, which, if it reaches a successful termination, will bring 500 skilled mechanics to the town. Some of the most progressive business men in the state are located right in St. Louis.

The examination of Sanford Hadden of Byron on the charge of murdering his father, resulted in his being held for trial at the next term of the circuit court.

Quartermaster-General Hart has concluded arrangements by which all of the Michigan state troops will be provided with Winchester rifles. Smith & Martin of Cheboygan, say that they have handled more lumber this year up to September 1 than they handled all of last season and that they cannot get vessels to ship the several million feet they still have to send off.

A reward of $10 has been offered by Supt. Long of the Ionia criminal insane asylum, for the capture of Joseph Malloy, an insane prisoner who escaped a few days ago. He is about 5 feet 10 inches tall, slender build, and smooth face except small mustache. He does not show insanity unless engaged in conversation for some time.

Grace Episcopal church in Holland was burned the other night.

N. A. Osgood of Battle Creek, has shipped three of his canvas boats to Van Dieman's Land, and two to South America.

Elliot Averill of Coopersville, accompanied by his uncle, started out on a hunting expedition the other day. Coming to a swamp they decided to set a trap for muskrats and laid their guns down by the side of a log while they were setting the traps. Young Averill discovered a rat, and picked up his gun by the stock to draw it toward him. The hammer by some means caught on the log, and the entire contents were discharged in the young man's breast. He lived but a few hours.

A movement is on foot in Monroe to secure the release of Julius Ponteny, who about 11 years ago was sent to the state prison, having been convicted of manslaughter, his wife being the victim. All the officials and business men of the place have signed the petition.

The attorneys for prosecution and defendant have agreed that Jud Crouch shall be tried at the November term of the circuit court. Gov. Blair says the trial will surely take place as the evidence recently obtained will insure a trial. The case will probably be for the murder of Jud's sister, Eunice White.

Jerome Provost, a Genesee county farmer, was thrown from a wagon and received injuries which resulted in his death two days after.

Two convicts employed in the dust room of shop No. 21 in Jackson prison, in which are two cyclone dust collectors, watching their opportunity, pried up a board in the bottom of one of the collector boxes, and crawled in, lying in hiding coiled around the cones of the collectors. The board was replaced and the men could rest assured that their dark hiding place would not be detected. In preparation of a long hiding they had a quantity of bread and meat stored away. Had they remained in their original hiding place, they would probably not have been detected. They desired to climb over the walls as soon as possible, however, and when prowling around about daylight were caught in the paint shop garret and put in their cells. Sad Condition of Irish Farmers.

The branches of the Irish national league in the counties of Cork and Waterford have been making inquiries regarding the condition of the farmers in those districts and have just made reports of the result of their investigations. They say that the harvest has been bad, that oats are selling at from three to five shillings per barrel, and that the heavy fall in stocks has rendered the farmers unable to pay their rents. A number of landlords offer a reduction of 25 per cent.

THE FORESTS ABLAZE.

A Million Dollar Fire in the Dakota Woods. Ten days ago, during the prevalence of a high wind from the southwest, the prairie fire, near Dunselth, Dakota, broke from all restraint and forced its way back into the mountains, where it has raged incessantly ever since, ruining many a fair home and destroying hundreds of thousands of acres of hay stored in the bottoms. Eye witnesses who were in the hills from time to time describe the scene as the flames swept through the heavy forest, as something almost beyond imagination. Roaring like a hurricane and preceded by a dense shower of smoke, gliders and sparks the fire swept on, the flames leaping higher than the tree-tops and reaching forward with marvelous rapidity, checked only by the numerous lakes, which lay in the way, and again by a lull in the wind, or a change in its directions.

A gentleman, who has been through the burnt districts in the woods, estimates that the loss will reach $1,000,000 by the destruction of the timber alone. He says the fire burned over an area of heavily timbered land, 10 miles wide by 30 long, containing 192,000 acres, and from these figures arrives at his conclusion.

Never before in the history of the Turtle mountains has such a destructive fire been known. Over 100 square miles of territory are burned over. Many of the mountain towns narrowly escaped destruction, and were only saved by the citizens turning out en masse and fighting the flames.

For nearly two weeks they were completely surrounded by a wall of fire, that seemed to reach to the sky. The scene was appalling in its grandeur. Provisions ran low and it became necessary to kill the farm animals for food. Should another gale set in, a more dreadful disaster may befall the towns on the other side of the mountains. The range at Buffalo Ledge Lake is completely destroyed. Cattle are being driven in toward the Mouse river.

Excursion to California.

The B. & M. will run a first class excursion, accompanied by a responsible agent of this company. It will leave Omaha and Pacific Junction on the morning train, Thursday, October 28th, for California. The rate from all stations on the Burlington and Missouri river railroad, for first-class round trip tickets will be as follows: To San Francisco and return, $90 00; to Los Angeles and return (direct route), $90 00; to Los Angeles and return (via San Francisco), $65 00. Tickets will only be sold for the morning train of the 28th from the Missouri river and all trains connecting with it.

Tickets will be good for return at any time within six months from date of sale; they are good thirty day west-bound, and provide for stamping at return point on the day you start home, after which they will be good for thirty days east-bound. Upon application to the general passenger agent of the Southern Pacific company a further extension of time will be granted of sixty days, upon payment of twenty-five dollars additional.

Tickets may be exchanged at San Francisco or Los Angeles for return by a different route upon payment of ten dollars. Stop-over will be allowed in accordance with the regulations of each line within the limit of the ticket.

The Burlington route, in connection with the Scenic Line of America (the Denver & Rio Grande railroad), offers unrivalled opportunity for sight seeing on the trip, taking you through Denver, the Queen City of the Rockies, the Royal Gorge or the Black Canon of the Arkansas, over the Marshall pass, 10,000 feet above sea level, and through the Black Canon of the Gunnison.

At Salt Lake City a day will be spent among the many points of interest of the Mormon metropolis. Individual members need only accompany the main party as far as may suit their own convenience. Remember that this is the only route carrying you through Denver and Salt Lake City without tedious side trips, and enabling you to view the grandest scenery on this continent on the main line of travel.

Parties should early advise the B. & M. railroad agent, from whom they intend purchasing tickets, of the number required and Pullman berths desired, in order that ample accommodations may be furnished.

Titus is Guilty.

Titus Smith, a pretty girl of 18, was a servant in the Centenary Collegiate Institute, at Hackettstown, N. J. On the night of April 8 last she attended an entertainment in the town, where she made the acquaintance of Charles L. Munich, a young traveling salesman of Port Jervis, who escorted her home. They arrived in front of the seminary building just in time to see the lights extinguished. "There," remarked the girl, "I am locked out, but the janitor has promised to let me in." The young man returned to his hotel and the girl went towards the rear of the seminary building. That was the last seen of her alive. The next morning her body was found in the corner of a field, just outside the seminary grounds. She had been assaulted and murdered. Munich was arrested for the crime, but proved his innocence and was liberated.

Then suspicion turned towards the janitor, James J. Titus. His strange indifference after the murder strengthened that suspicion, and he was arrested and subsequently indicted by the grand jury. The trial has just ended in the conviction of Titus for murder in the first degree. Titus looked at the jury unmoved, but when the verdict was delivered the man seemed to turn to stone, and had to be carried from the court room.

Murdered His Friend.

Henry Sander, a young man aged 24, was found lying dead on the floor of his room in Toledo the other morning, with a gaping wound in his breast. A post mortem was held, and a bullet found in his lungs. Henry Busdecker, room-mate of the murdered man, was at once arrested, and, on examining his trunk, a revolver with one newly emptied chamber was found. No cause can be assigned for the deed, as the men were the best of friends. Sander's parents live near Reading, Pa., and he has been in Toledo but a short time. The man arrested refuses to make any statement except that he innocent.

LIMA, October 23, 1886.

Dear Sir:—Please insert in the columns of your worthy paper this item. The scholars and teacher at the Porter school house, district No. 8, township of Lima, have completed a quilt which is to be sold at an entertainment next Saturday evening, October 30th. The proceeds are to purchase a new blackboard of which the school has for a long time felt the need. Eighty numbers have already been sold. All are cordially invited to attend the entertainment. Yours very respectfully,

Last Monday evening, soon after Mr. Crozier commenced his address, Barney Keelan, being intoxicated, in making his way out of the hall, from the gallery, stumbled against a second story window with such force as to break the glass and fall through to the pavement below, a distance of about twelve feet, sustaining some severe bruises but no broken bones nor serious damage.

Mrs. Elisabeth A. Branch, wife of H. M. Branch, and sister of J. L. and H. F. Gilbert, of this place, died at her home in Jackson, Friday evening, Oct. 23, 1886, at the age of 62 years. Mrs. Branch was well known in this community, having lived here about seven years previous to her marriage, in 1857. She was a member of the Congregational Church here previous to her removal to Jackson, and has been a member there since. For nearly two years she has been totally blind besides suffering from other maladies. Though the grim messenger came to her at an unexpected moment, she met him without fear and with the utmost resignation to the divine will. Besides her husband, a son and a daughter, Mrs. Branch leaves a mother, also blind, 77 years of age, seven brothers (six of whom were present at her funeral) and one sister to mourn her departure.

Since writing the above, we clip the following from the Jackson Daily Citizen:

"At the funeral of Mrs. Henry M. Branch her six brothers, namely, Henry, James, Erastus, George, Frank and Charles Gilbert, acted as pall bearers. It was a rare and pathetic sight to behold six brothers carrying a loved sister to the tomb."

The essays read at the High School rhetorical exercises last Friday were pro and con upon the question whether a single mistake may produce more harm than a single falsehood. A good degree of talent and not a little ingenuity was displayed in the discussion. The interest manifested by the disputants was very great. This is profitable work. We hope there may be more of its like.
