Another batch of Mormon converts reached this country a few days ago This last invoice, numbering 350, was landed at Philadelphia, owing to the fact that the immigration commissioners at New York some time ago refused to allow a number of Mormon converts to land, but forced them to return by the ship in which they came. The Mormons returned to Liverpool and took passag, for Philadelphia, where they landed and at once started for Utah. Every paper in he territory is in high glee at the clever manner in which the United States officers were putwitted by the Mormons, and state that hereaf er all Mormons will boycott New York and land at the City of Brotherly Lo e. This matter calls for congressional action. Simply because the poor dupes have been sent here by Mormon missionaries and cannot be classed as pau ers and excluded for that reason, ought our ports to be open to them to con e in and help swell the number of those who set at defiance not only the laws of decency and morality, but the laws of the government under whose flag they come to claim a home.

Students at Yale college are complainibg because their spiritual food is not up to the standard demanded by this progressive age, and pertinently ask it it is to be expected that a practical and robust christianity, such as will help men in their daily life, will be de eloped as everybody knows, to erect a colossal statue in New York harbor, as a mark of the respect and friend-hip of the French nation for the American republic. The city of Paris subscribed $2,000, and in less than the respect and friend-hip of the French nation for the American republic. The justice in their complaint. When it is considered that the four years of their college life will determine their religious convictions, the subject should be presented as fresh, and interesting as possible, and not i such a manner as to drive them to skepticism through sheer indifference. Men must be interested in

Is it any wonder that so many young lives are wrecked when such brutes are so carefully protected from publicity.

In the Episcopal convention held in Chicago the ommittee on cannons submitted a report on marriage and d vorce, declaring that marriages not authorized by the word of God are un-Lwful; that ministers should admonish their people against cla destine marriages; that the public solemnization of marriage ought to be dispensed with exce t for good reasons; that persons under 18 years of age should not be mar ied without the consent of parents or guardians; that marriage may not be dissolved except for adultry; that the guilty party in a divorce suit be prohibted f om marrying again during the lifetime of either party.

What the young woman said has not been made publicand why the minister doesn't give the $500 to the charitable institution out right is also an unanswered question.

BARTHOLDIS DAY.

Dedication of Liberty in Bronze-History of the Project and Program of

THE STATUE.

Ten years ago a number of distinguished Frenchmen, enthusiastic lovers of liberty, met in the city of Paris, and at a grand banquet inaugurated the project which found its completion Oct. 28th in the dedication of the statue of Liberty in New York harbor. They formed a society, the Franco-American Union of France, and at once accepted the design of M. Bartholdi, whose proposition was the cause of the birth of the society. His plan was, than five years the $250,000 necessary for the completion of the statue had been given by the people of France. Another banquet was held to commemorate this event, and at it the formal tender of the statue to the American nation was made.

In the meantime congress had taken action in the matter by providing for a site for the statue on Bed'oe's island, in New York harbor, and for its maintenance when erected. In January, 1877, a meeting of the citizens of New York was held any ause which they espouse and for the purpose of raising funds for the dogmas and isms and discussions of metropolis was all enthusiasm, but in a Andover theology are not the means by few short weeks the excitement died out which men's eyes are to be turned to the status and the sale of minatures of the cross on calvary. sorted to to raise the necessary funds,

> At this stage of the proceedings Joseph Pulitzer, who had just entered the field of New York journalism by the purchase of the then decaying World, took the matter in hand and proposed that he raise the necessary amount through the columns of his paper. With many misgivings his offer was accepted. He announced at once that the World was ready to receive subscriptions of ten cents or more, and to publish the names of the donors to the fund. He struck the chord of human vanity and accomplished what appeals to local pride and national honor had failed to do. Thousands sent their dimes and dollars for the sake of seeing their names in print. Business men made daily contributions while the fund lasted to gain the advertising which could be obtained in no other way, and thus the fund was completed.

'n August, 1884, the corner stone of the pedestal was placed in position. More than a year ago the Isere brought over the statue and for some months past workman have been engaged in putting the parts together.

AUGUSTE BARTHOLDL

The designer of the statue, Frederick Augustus Bartholdi, is an Alsatian who was educated for the bar, but who early took to sculpture. After some years of travel in the east he returned to his studio only to leave it a few years later when the news of Saarbruccken reached Paris, and join the forces of Regnault and De Neuville, seeing service while attached to the Garibaldians. He then came to America. where, on entering New York harbor, he first got the idea of the colossal statue. "How the idea first dawned on me," he wrote in a personal letter, "I know not, but I remember that during the voyage about half the market price. In a little time the farmer's wife strikes the bed of ord nary salt on which a few pounds of ord nary salt on which a few pounds scored 'C'ess l'ange Liberte, c'est le geant Lumiere, or This is the angel Liberte that the thirty-nine ladian youths between the arty; this is the giant light.'

Several of his works merited him the medal for sculp ture at the centennial exhibition in Phila delphia, and his latest work is at Beiford. France, being a lion cut out of solid rock the figure being 80 feet long and 30 feet high. With M. Bartholdi comes to New York his friend M. de Lesseps, who although in his 82d year braved an ocean voyage rather than miss being present at the dedication of the statue in which he has taken as much interest almost aspits projector. De Lesseps is no stranger to New York city. He has been there half a dozen times already, either, on business connected with the Panama canal, or en route to the scene of that stupendous work. M. de Lesseps brings with him his daughter, Tolotte, a bright young woman who is something of an engineer herself. They expect to be back in Paris before Nov. 10.

Representing the French army comes

Nov. 10.

Representing the French army comes Gen. Philip F. X. Pelissier, who has won his present exalted rank in the army by sterling service under the tri-color from Senegal to Morocco. He won his spurs and a fearful sabre cut in the Crimean campaign, in which his father was second in command of the French forces under Canrobert. Pelissier's father led the assault on the Malakoff, at Sebatopol, under Marshal McMahon. As a reward for his achievement he was made duke of Malakoff and presented with a handsome rentroll by the grateful Napoleon. The present general was elected senator at the election of January, 1876, by a large election of January, 1876, by a large majority. He now holds the position of inspector of the French troops in the Admiral Constant Louis Jean Benjamin Jaures, who represents the French navy, holds the unique position in France of general of a division in the army and an admiral in the navy. He is 63 years old the son of a naval officer, and a graduate of the naval school at Brest. An eusign in 1845, a lieutenant of marine in 1850, a captain of frigate in 1861, commander of ship and member of the commission des marches in 1869, he took part in, while making his way through these different grades, the campaigns of the Crimea, of Italy, of China, of Cochin-China and of Mexico. At the outbreak of the war with Germany he embarked on the North sea squadron. In November, 1870, he was ap-Admiral Constant Louis Jean Benjamin squadron. In November, 1870, he was appointed to defend the fortifications of Carentan. At the conclusion of peace he was appointed admiral by the minister of

Among the other prominent Frenchmen who came over on the Bretagne to take part in the event are M. Herlard, the delegate of the Paris chamber of commerce; M. Bigot, representing the French press syndicate; M. Leo Meunier, a leading Paisian journalist; and James Eugene Spuller of the chamber of deputies; all prominent in French enterprises.

Bedloe's island, on which the statue is situated, is one the most accessible as well as one of the most accessible as well as one of the most pleasant breathing spots around New York. The solid granite walls of the old fort, which are in good condition, balance well the hight of the statue and contrast nicely with the beautiful grass and shade trees with which the island is covered. island is covered.

The statue itself derives its interest and its importance from its colossal size. The Colos-us of Rhodes was one of the wonders of the world, but the Colossus of Bedlo's island is larger than the work of the Rhodian engineers of the pre-christian era.

From the foundation of the pedestal to the top of the torch is 305% feet, while the figure it elf is 151 feet in hight. The proportions of the parts are equally great.
The index finger is 8 feet long, the mouth an orifice 3 feet across, the hand 16 feet long, and the right arm 42 feet from the shoulder to the nail of the index finger. Forty persons can stand comfortably in the head, while the balcony which surrounds the torch will afford room for a dozen more. The statue contains 225,000 pounds of bronze, and its entire weight is 450,00) pounds. There are 403 steps in the staircase from the base of the foundation to the top of the torch.

The exercises attending the dedication occurred Oct. 28, and the day was observed as a holiday. Fully 30,000 persons participated in the procession, which was over seven miles in length. At the unveiling of the statue the following program was carried out: Music and seating of assembly, signal gun, prayer, the Rey R. assembly, signal gun, prayer, the Rev. R. S. Storrs; address, F. DeLesseps on behalf S. Storrs; address, F. DeLesseps on behalf of Franco-American union; presentation address by the Hon. W. M. Evarts, unveiling, salute from all the guns in the harbor, acceptance of the statue by the president, response by Minister LeFaivre, commemorative address by C. M. Depew, doxology, national salute by all the guns in harbor, illumination of statue and fireworks on Bedloe's and Governor's island.

President Cleveland was present at the dedication and remained to the banquet in the evening. The president had no speech prepared but spoke extemporaneously at some length. He was acompanied by Secretary of State Bayard, Secretary of the Navy Whitney, Secretary of the Interior Lamar, Postmaster General Vilas, and Private Secretary Lamont. and Private Secretary Lamont.

The New York independent published the following poem by John G. Whittier on the statue of liberty.

The land, that from the rule of kings In freeing us, itself made free, Our old world sister to us brings

Her sculptured dream of beauty. Unlike the shapes on Egypt's sands
Uplifted by the toil worn slave,
On freedom's soil with freemen's hands

We rear the symbol free hands gave. O France, the beautiful, to thee Once more a debt of love we swe; In peace beneath thy Fleur de lis, We hail a latter Rochambeau.

Rise, stately symbol; holding forth Thy light and hope to all who sit In chains and darkness! belt the earth

With watch-fires from thy torch uplit. Reveal the primal mandate still Which chaos heard and ceased to be; Trace on mid-air th' eternal will In signs of fire, "Let man be free."

Shine far, shine free, a guiding light
To reason's ways and virtue's aim;
A lightning flash the wretch to smite
Who shields his ticense with thy name.

PERISHED BY THE STORM

Vessels Wrecked and Many Lives Lost.

Reports have been received from all parts of Great Britain, telling of the disastrous effect of the hurricane which swept over the British Isles recently. The British ship Malleny was wrecked in the Bristol Channel and twenty persons were drowned. The shore was strewn with wreckage. The bodies washed ashore had been stripped of valuables by wreckers. The Norwegian bark Fredrikstad, from Musquash, N. B., for Swansea, was wrecked off Padstow, and nineteen persons were drowned. The bark Alliance was also wrecked off Padstow and four lives were lost. The other persons on board were saved by a lifeboat. Another barge was seen to be in terrible distress, the crew being huddled together on the deck. The ve-sel foundered the next morning, and it is believed that from a dozen to twenty persons were drowned. The gale prevented the people on shore from rendering assistance. The cries of the doomed men were heard distinctly by those who were watching the vessel from the shore. A Norwegian bark foundered on the coast of Wales and fifteen persons perished. The latest reports show the effects of the recent storm on the south and west coasts were terrible. A Norwegian bark foundered off Tintagel, Wales, and her entire crew, consisting of fifteen persons, perished. Ten bodies were washed ashore on the Glamorgan coast.

A Novel Case.

A Novel Case.

There is to be argued in our supreme There is to be argued in our supreme court this term a case involving a novel application of our homestead law. In 1873 Thomas J. Hitchcock deserted his wife and children in New York and came to Michigan, where he worked a year for Sanford Yeomans, passing as a single man. He purchased 40 acres of land from Mr. Yeomans in Sebewa, married a woman who thought him single, and moved on the land, where he lived until his death in 1884. While living with him his Michigan wife bore him three children, and previous to his death he deeded her the forty acres. After his death the widow in New York After his death the widow in New York made claim to the land and insisted that the dood to the Michigan wife was void on the ground that the land was ber homestead and that he could not deed it with-out her consent. Judge Smith decided the case against the Michigan wife and she has appealed to the supreme court. The plaintiff relies entirely on the provision in our constitution making void a deed of the homestead not signed by the wife. Defendant insists that the constitutional provision does not apply for these reasons: lst. As Mr. Hitchcock deserted his wife in New York, she remaining there till his death, never had any domicile in Michigan, and therefore no homestead right in the land to release. 2d. That the relation which Mr. Hitchcock bore to his wife here was such that he could claim no home-stead exemption in the land which was not his "home" in our constitutional sense. That our law only exempts and protects legitimate or legal homes.—

Eli Crocket of Belknap, Presque Isle county, committed suicide by hanging. He was a farmer, a soldier of the late re-bellion, and having been discharged therefrom for disability during actual service, and being destitute, the cause of his suicide is attributed to his inability to obtain ension to which he claimed he was en titled and for which he had made several unsuccessful applications. For the last few weeks he continually complained to his wife of his troubles. He was the only colored man in the county and was al-ways held in high esteem by the entire community.

As in stranger was a quiet, unassuming he stranger was a quiet, unassuming nau, Fotheringham was not at all suss of him.

Fotheringham says Cummings coolly approached him and said if he remained quiet all would be well, but if he made any outery he would not answer for the consequences. Fotheringham said he had nothing to do but submit and allowed Cummings to bind and gag him. He was then tied to the safe and Cummings proceeded with the robbery.

The safe had been left open, and it took but a few minutes for the robber to secure the bank notes and valuables in the shape of jewelry, etc. He cut open the bags containing the silver coin, but he evidently concluded that these were too heavy for him to carry, and he did not disturb their him to carry, and he did not disturb their contents. Of the gold, however, he took a goodly amount and then proceeded to make good his escape. The road at this point runs directly alongside of a high bluff, which, in places, overhangs the tracks, making the danger of wrecks from collisions with boulders, which occasionally fall from above upon the tracks, very great. Trains therefore, slack up at this point and run dowly until the dangerous place is passed. This the engineer of train No. 3 did, as usual, and thus offered the robber an easy means of escape. He first locked all but one door, stepped out on the platform, locked the door from the outside, and jumped off. The messenger, Fotheringrelieve himself, not being able to call for help. Near Mincke a boulder had fallen on the tracks and the train was delayed an hour before it could be removed. The conductor tried the door of the express car but found it locked, and supposing the messenger to be busy did not ask for admittance. At St. Clair he again tried the door of the express car but found it locked. He listened for a minute and heard the mes-enger struggling to free himself and making all the noise possible by kicking with his feet against the side of the car. The conductor suspected something wrong and burst the door open, finding Fotheringham as above described. He was quickly released and told his experience. The robber had got a start of fully two hours and it was useless to run back and try to find him. When the train arrived in St. Louis

Fotheringham sought Superintendent Damsel and made his official report. He admits that the total loss to the company would be over $50,000. It is a singular fact that he gave the name of Jim Cummings, the only member of the Jesse James gang who has not been accounted for. He is described as about 24 years of age, six feet tall, weight about 200 pounds and wore dark clothes with a dark overcost. Fotheringham thinks he had account to the state of the six o coat. Fotheringham thinks he had accomplices as he seemed to talking to some Fotheringham is 24 years old and has been employed by the company for four years. He has an excellent record. When asked where Fotheringham was Mr. Damsel said he had gone up town with another man and it is supposed that this man was an officer of the law though this surmise would neither be affirmed or Superintendent Damsel says Fother-ingham made a statement to him that as he was about to go out on his run a strange man gave him a letter purporting to be signed by the superintendent and Mr. Barret, instructing him to take Jim Cummings to Pearce City for instructions. Fotheringham set him checking up, while he was working at his own accounts with his coat off and his pistol sticking out of his pocket. He was gripped from the rear and his pistol taken from him. He was then thrown to the floor, struggling desperately. He was, however, overcome and bound hand and foot. A gag was jut in his mouth and he was then tied to the safe. The stranger then rifled the safe. At Mericke the train was flagged because of an obstruction and some one tried to enter the express car. The stranger with a pointed revolver threatened to kill Fotheringham if he made an outcry. At Pacific station the robber took his plunder, went out on the platform and this was the last Fotheringham saw of him.

When the train reached St. Clair he had

When the train reached St. Clair he had worked the gag out of his mouth and cried out for assistance. The train men heard him and tried to enter the rear door, but found it locked and they then went to the front door, which had been left open entered the car and released him.

Fotheringham was gagged with a hand-Fotheringham was gagged with a hand-kerchief tied in knots, and his hands were tied with silk handkerchiefs and his feet with straps taken from valises in the car. He was tied to the handle of the safe.

He was tied to the handle of the safe.

Damsel says it is customary to send new men out with old ones for instructions and such orders as were presented would be issued either by himself or Mr. Barrett. Fotheringham cannot name the amount stolen, but it is thought will exceed $50,-600. Every effort is being made to obtain a clue to the robber. The company and detectives are proceeding on the theory of Fotheringham's innocence. In all he has worked for the company for four years.

Two detectives tried to force Fothering. bam into making a confession.

THE CO'A'H & HABIT.

The Worst Slaver / known How Movelations of Power.

Cincinnati Times-Star

When cocaine was discovered the medical world exclaimed "thank heaven!" But useful as it is, it is also dangerous, especially when its use is perverted from the deadening of pain for surgical opera-tions, to the stimulation and destruction of the human body. Its first effects are soothing and captivating, but the thrall-dom is the most horrible slavery known to

J. L. Stephens, M. D., of Lebanon, O., was interviewed by our reporter yesterday at the Grand Hotel, and during the conversation the doctor said: "The cocaine habit is a thousand times worse than the morphine and opium habits, and you would be astonished," he said, "if you knew how frightfully the habit is increas-

"What are its effects!"

"It is the worst constitution wrecker ever known. It ruins the liver and kidneys in half a year, and when this work is done, the strongest constitution soon suc-

"Do you know of Dr. Underhill's case here in Cincinnati?"

"That leading physician who became a victim of the cocaine habit! Yes. His case was a very sad one, but the habit can be cured. I have rescued many a man from a worse condition." "What, worse than Dr. Underhill's?"

"Indeeb, sir, far so. Justin M. Hall, A. I., M. D., president of the state board of health of Iowa, and a famed practitioner, and Alexander Neil, M. D., professor of surgery in the Columbus Medical College, and president of the Academy of Medicine, a man widely known, Rev. W. P. Clancey of Indianapolis, Ind., from personal experience in opium eating, etc., can tell you of the kind of success our form of treatment wins, and so can H. C. Wilson, formerly of Cincinnati, who is now associated with me." "Would you mind letting our readers into the secret of your methods?" "Well, young man, you surely have s good bit of assurance to ask a man to give his business away to the public; but I won't wholly disappoint you. I have treated over 20,000 patients. In common. with many eminent physicians, I, for years made a close study of the effects of the habits on the system and the organs which they most severely attack. Dr. Hall, Dr. Neil and Mr. Wilson, whom I have mentioned, and hundreds of others, equally as expert, made many similar experiments on their own behalf. We each found that these drugs worked most destructively in the kidneys and liver; in fact, finally destroyed them. It was then apparent that no cure could be effected until these organs could restored to health.

recently exhausted the entire range of medical science, experimenting with all known remedies for these organs, and as the result of these close investigations we all substantially agreed, though following different lines of inquiry, that the most reliable scientific prepartion, was Warner's safe cure. This was the second point in the discovery. The third was our own private form of treatment, which, of course, we do not divulge to the public. Every case that we have treated first with Warner's safe cure, then with our own private treatment, and followed up again with Warner's safe cure for a few weeks, has been successful. These habits can't be cured without using it, because the habit is nourished and sustained in the liver and kidneys. The habit can be kept up in moderation, however, if free use be also made, at the same time, of that great

"Yes, it is a world famed and justly celebrated specific! Like many other physicians, I used to deride the claims made for it, but I know now for a fact that it is the world's greatest blessing, having sovereign power over hitherto incurable diseases of the kidneys and liver, and when I have said that, young man. I have said nearly everything, for most diseases originate in, or are aggravated by, a depraved condition of the kidneys."
"People do not realize this, because, singular as it may seem, the kidneys may lie in a very advanced stage of decompo-sition, and yet owing to the fact that there are but few nerves of sensation in them the subject will not experience much pain therein. On this account thousands of people die every year of kidney disease unknowingly. They have so called dis-orders of the head, of the heart and lungs and stomach, and treat them in vain, for the real cause of their misery is deranged kidneys and if they were restored to health the other disorders would soon dis-

Dr. Stephens's experience, that can be confirmed by many thousands whom he has treated, adds only more emphasis to the experience of many hundreds of thousands all over the world, that the remedy he refers to is without any doubt the most beneficent discovery ever given to humanity.

has been a laborious and costly work, but the end justifies the effort. Obstruction in any important channel means disaster. Obstructions in the organs of the human body bring inevitable disease. They must be cleared away, or physical wreck will follow. Keep the liver in order, and the pure blood courses through the body, conveying health, strength and life; let it become disordered and the channels are clogged with impurities, which result in disease and death. A Remarkable Cure which is Awakening Great Interest in and About Jackson. Jackson, May 28, 1886. Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gentlemen—For ten years I have been a great sufférer from Dyspepsia and Neural-gia. About twelve years ago my kidneys became diseased, my whole system de-ranged, my stomach weak, and I was atranged, my stomach weak, and I was attacked with the worst form of Dyspepsia, which lasted until quits recently. About the same time Dyspepsia took so firm a hold on me Neuralgia set in, sometimes attacking me in the head about the temples, then in the back of my neck and shoulders, then in my stomach. The suffering and extreme pain which I have endured the past twelve years is more than dured the past twelve years is more than I can describe. I have taken nearly every medicine I could learn or hear of; have employed the most skillfull physicians. Dr. Slenou, one of the best and ablest doctors of our city, office 125 Main street, doctored me for a long time, and can testify as to the severity of my disease. I never succeeded in getting any permanent relief until I had used Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. I have gained ten pounds of flesh in seven weeks. The sallowness which so disfigured my complexion and caused me years of sorrow has been entirely removed, and my general health is better than it has been in thirteen years. The severity of the Neuralgic pains caused a contrac-tion of the muscles, or nerves, on the right side of face to such an extent as to partially close my right eye, which your syrup has entirely cured. My face and eye are restored to their natural state. I most cheerfully recommend it to any afflicted in like manner, or for general debility.

THE advantages of being silent on political questions are neither few nor small. During the campaign just closed we have had personal al tercation with no man, have not been robbed of a single moment of time by candidates who wanted favors, and have had lots of job printing to do for both parties.

We like the position well as publisher of a paper in a town where the patronage of the whole community is necessary to support the enterprise. We rather think that, while each of our readers is a little sorry we do not take the field in behalf of his favorite party, each is glad that we do not advocate the cause of either of the other parties. Thus the joy occasioned by our course far exceeds the sorrow, and Chelsea is happier than she would be were we to take a different course. When election day came we voted as we chose and no one interfered with us in the least. We are well satisfied.

About half a mile above the city, on the left-bank of the Rhine, stands a very imposing structure, known as castle of Stolzenfels-Proudrock. It was built by the Archbishop of Treves, whose headquarters were for a long period of time at Coblentz, and was the favorite residence of several of those princely prelates. In 1688 it was destroyed by the French, after which it was abandoned to decay, until it was offered for sale for the paltry sum of £11-$55-and found no purchaser, when some fifty years ago, it was presented by the city of Coblentz to the crown prince of Prussia, now Emperor of Germany, who restored it and beautified it in a manner worthy of an admirer of nature and of fine art. ### STATE NEWS. AN OPEN SWITCH.

Collision on the D. G. & M. Railroad.

A collision on the Eight Mile Siding on the Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee railroad Sunday night, Oct. 23, resulted in the worst wrecks in the history of that road. The following persons were injured: Nicholas Lamp, freight engineer, terribly scalded.

Nelson Smedley, freight fireman, probably fatally scalded.

John Hennessy, express baggageman, burned by coals from the stove.

Thomas B. Alexander, clock burned and Thomas B. Alexander, clerk, burned and probably internally injured.

Thomas Barrett, express fireman, hand and wrist badly injured; general bruises. Henry Dabney, sleeping car porter, and John McCullough, brakeman, general

The collision was the result of criminal carelessness on the part of Brakeman Mann, who confesses that he misplaced a switch. The night express left Detroit on time Saturday nightl and started to make the usual time to Pon-tiac. The train consisted of one baggage two coaches and sleeper. Augustus O'Dell is one of the best engineers in the employ of the company. The eight mile siding, so called for its distance from Detroit, is a common meeting and passing point. Here special freight train No. 70, which left Pontiac early in the evening, was waiting the arrival of the night express. The train was in charge of Conductor Wells and Engineer Nicholas Lamp; fireman, Nelson Smedley. The train had been waiting about 40 minutes when the express hove in sight. The night was dark. On making the siding Conductor Wills sent Head Brakeman Mann clear of the siding, the switch having no lights upon it. It is supposed that Mann did not obey this order, for the switch was open As soon as the express turned to the siding Engineer O'Dell applied the air brakes, shut off steam and attempted to reverse the locomotive, and he and Fireman Barrett then jumped for their lives. O'Dell struck on his shoulder, which was dislocated, and rolled down the embankment, several feet high, receiving other serious injuries. Barrett broke his thumb and was badly shaken up by his fall. He also received several painful cuts on his head. Engineer Lamp and Fireman Smedley of the freight engine were ap-ahead to see that the switch was turned parently paralyzed with surprise or fright, for although they had ample time to jump, they remained on their engine. The two engines come together with frightful force. The crash was deafening. The shock broke the pins holding the freight train and sent the rear cars spinning down the siding. The first freight car and the baggage car were telescoped and the two engines were completely wrecked. They reared upward nose to nose and fell down into the ditch. The passenger engine lay on its side with the front jammed into the earth. The tender was hurled over the engine and lay at right angles across the ditch.

Lamp and Smedley were caught in the wreck. Lamp was thrown under the engine and pinned down to the ground. water which flooded from the tender fortunately washed the earth away, and he was able to extricate himself and escaped being scalded to death. Smedley also fell munister to secure additional dock and scalded before he was library to the many the many trightfully warehouse room. They paid 200 000 scalded before he was liberated by the passengers. The tender of the freight engine was jammed up partly on top of a car of barrel staves.

John Hennessy of Detroit, baggageman, and T. B. Alexander, employed in the freight depot of the road, were in the baggage car. Alexander was en route to his home in Birmingham. These two men were knocked into one end of the car and fell down with dozens of trunks on top of them. The stove was knocked over and the coals of fire feel around their feet. The passenger, who had been pitche i out of their seats by the collision, came forward in time to put out the fire and rescue Hennessy and Alexander from being burned

The passengers and brakemen of the passenger train who had just left the bagkage car before the collision long enough to get into the smoking car and shut the door, gathered pieces of the wreck and the scattered barrel staves and built a large bon-fire on the opposite side of the track. Up to this time the wreck was in total darkness. The injured were then belped into the sleeping car and made as comfortable as possible.

Fireman Barrett, of the express engine, started to waik to Milwankee junction, and thence the news was wired to Detroit. At 1 o'clock a. m. Supt. Waugh sent for the company's surgeons, Drs. Brodie and Lyster, had a special train made up, and with the doctors proceeded to the scene of the wreck. The surgeons at once attended to the wounded. Engineer O'Dell was in such pain that ether was administered before the shoulder was set. Lamp's legs below the knees were badly scalded and the doctors found them plastered over with flour, which had been obtained at a tarm house and applied to ease the pain. Smedley, the worst injured, was terribly scalded. The special train brought the wounded to Detroit and the injurad were taken to St. Mary's hospital.

A wrecking train and a large force of men worked all day and the road was cleared in the next afternoon. The engines are worth little more than so much scrap iron, and the loss to the company may not be less than $60,000.

All the injured are better except Fire Smedley of the freight, who, it is feared, cannot recover. The flesh on his legs from feet to hips is literally cooked and he is kept almost continually under the influence of an opiate to escape the terrible pains. Lamp and Smedley say that they had been on continuous duty for 27 hours, and were almost asleep. Lamp says that the express engine was not more than 20 feet from him when he first saw it. The first Smedley knew of the collision he felt himself going up in the air.

INTER-STATE COMMERCE.

Supreme Court Decisions on Freight Discrimination. The United States supreme court has rendered its decision in the case of the Louis & Pacific railroad company, plaintiffs, in error against the people of the state of cinois. The specific allegation was that the railroad company charged Elder & McKinney fifteen cents per hundred pounds for transporting goods from Peoria to New York City, and on the same day charged Isaac Bailey and F. O. Swanell twenty-five cents per hundred pounds for the same class of goods from Gillman, Ill., to New York-Gillman being eighty-six miles nearer than Peoria to New York. .The discrimination it was alleged, was in violation of the law of Illinois, which prohibits any charge for the transportation of passengers or freight within the state of Illinois proportionately greater than would be charged for the transportation of passengers or like classes of freight "over a greater distance of the same road." The gist of the decision is contained in the conclusion, as follows:

"When it is attempted to apply to transportation through an entire series of states a principle of this kind, and each one of the states or of half a dozen states shall attempt to establish its own rates of transportation, its own methods to prevent discrimination in rates, or to permit it, the deleterious influence upon the freedom of commerce among the states and upon the transportation of goods through those states cannot be over estimated. That this species of regulation is one which must be, if established at all, of a general and national character, and cannot be safely and wisely remitted to local rules and local regulations, we think is clear from what has already been said. And if it be regulation of commerce. as we think we have demonstrated it is, and as the Illinois court concedes it to be, it must be of that national character and the regulation can only appropriately be by general rules and principles which demand that it should be done by the congress of the United States under the commerce clause of the constitution."

The judgment of the supreme court of Illinois, which was adverse to the railroad, is reversed, and the case is remanded to that court for further proceedings in conformity with the above opinion. Opinion by Justice Miller.

Justice Bradley delivered a dissenting opinion, in which the chief justice and Justice Gray concurred. In this opinion it is conceded, that congress might, if it saw fit, regulate the matter under consideration, but not having done so, it is held that the state does not lose its own territory simply because the goods or persons transported have been brought from, or destined to a point beyond the state borders.

It was recommended that the officers named be committed to the county jail and held to the grand jury without bail. The verdict concludes as follows: "We the jury believe that the Pinkerton detective agrees has been decelied in bearing.

ROASTED IN A WRECK

Thirteen Lives Lost in a "St Paul" Disaster.

An Accident Followed by the Burning of the

About midnight Oct. 28 the west-bound limited express was ditched at the East Rio siding, a small station about 13 miles east of Milwaukee, on the main line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad. There were two side tracks, and at the time the train was due they were both occupied by freight trains, one by a wild train and the other by train Mo. 14, which had just pulled in from the west to allow the limited to pass. Train No. 14 was very long, and the conductor was at the head of the train relying upon the rear brake man to attend to the switch.

One report says that the rear brakeman whose business it was to close the switch after the train, for some reason neglected altogether to do so. The other and more probable story is that he started back to close the swith, but before he could reach the started back to close the swith, but before he could reach it, the limited, which does not stop at any except large places, came flying down the grade at the rate of 50 miles an hour and track at the open switch. This left the track at the open switch. The siding is in a cut where the road curve, so that the switch light cannot be see from the east until within a few rods, o the engineer of the limited could not see the switch light turned wrong until too late to stop.

The engine left the track, ran a short distance, brought up against the side of the cut, and toppled over. The baggage car and two regular coaches followed while the four sleepers kept the rails. The engine and cars that went off were badly smashed and soon took fire from the stoves. Thirteen persons were killed and burned in the wreck.

Engineer Little and Foreman Egan, both of Milwaukee, crawled out from upder the locomotive, badly bruised and scalded. The baggageman had his leg broken.

All the passengers in the sleepers got out uninjured, except being bruised, but in the one day coach 13 were pinned in and literally burned to death. Many other were injured by severe shaking up. The whole train, excepting one sleeper, which they were able to encouple and draw away, was burned up.
Supt. W G. Collins was on the eastbound passenger train No. 2, which was waiting for the limited at a station a few miles this side of Rio and was soon at the scene. A wrecking train with surgeons went from Milwaukee and did all possible to alleviate the suffering and save life.

Conductor Hanker of the ireight, was so badly demoralized by the accident, the responsibility of which rests on his crew and also on himself, that he took to the woods in despair, leaving his train. He bas always been a most careful and efficient man, and was much trusted by the company.

A YOUNG GIRL'S DEATH. Was Jud Crouch the Cause of Jennie Farley's Death by Her Own Hand?

A young girl, 25 years of age, named Jennie Farley, was found dead in her room at the Stowell house having committed suicide. She went to Jackson about two years ago from Detroit and engaged at the Hurd house as table waiter, where she remained until Sept. 18, when she went to the Hibbard house and was awarded a similar position. Her companions say she was never a forward girl. Perhaps ill health had something to do with her quietness of manners, as before leaving Detroit she had suffered with hemorrhage of the stomach, and soon after going to Jackson Dr. White treated her for a return of the old malady. She left the Hibbard house the other afternoon, saying she was going to Detroit, and her trunk was sent to the station. She, it is since learned, took supper with a lady friend, and in the evening went to the Stowell house and asked for a room which was given her. Here she was found the next morning in an unconscious condition produced, as was subsequently as certained, from heavy does of morphine. Prompt medical aid prove effectual in gradually restoring her to consciousness.

To all inquiries of the physicians as to the cause of her action she stubbornly refused an answer. She finally admitted that she had taken two grain capsules of morphine; that she took one to produce sleep, and as the effect was not immediate, took the second. She would not tell where she got the drug, but she did not get it of a druggist it is certain, as no druggist puts the poison up in so large doses, one-quarter grain being a dose for an adult. She continued in a comfortable condition until soon after midnight when she suddenly became worse, and continued to fail steadily until she died. The source whence she procured the poison, it is be lieved, may throw much light upon the

Her trunk was examined after her death, but no trace of letters excepting an envelope addressed to David Farley Baltimore, Md., was found. Some of the girls at the Hibbard house saw her burn a large package of letters before she left there. She was popularly supposed, by the girls of the hotel, to be supplied with considerable sums of money by some one, but only $6 was found in her purse.

It quickly became apparent after her death that the poor girl was enciente. It was known that for months past she had had visits more or less frequent from Jud Crouch, and had also received letters from him. She was not known to have any other company whatever. A short time ago she informed the housekeeper that she would soon give birth to a child, and showed her a letter in which the writer threatened to kill her if she made known the father of her unborn babe, but would not show the name. Friends of the unfortunate girl raised money enough to pay her burial expenses, Jud Crouch was visited by Miss Beebe, the housekeeper of the Hibbard house, and gave her $10 to aid in paying the funeral expenses.

It is learned that she has been in the city about three years. She was twice employed at the Hurd house and at other times was at service in Marshall, Ypsi'annamed be committed to the county jail and held to the grand jury without bail. The verdict concludes as follows: "We the jury believe that the Pinkerton detective agency has been derelict in keeping and withholding the names of the 123 men on the train wherefrom said shooting took place.

CHAPTER L.

No matter where the Christmas sta a shope the Christmas snows fell, there was not in shole world so desolate a girl as I. I had siched them, those fair stars, sh'ning in a loop blue sky in a different clime from thisclime where roses grow well-nigh all the ar round, and the silver seas are rarely offed by storms. I had watched them from between high gray walls, which I know now to have enclosed the court of a convent; and since then I have watched them from the grand old grdens of Heron's Nest. All through my onely, desolate childhood, uncheered by the sarmth and the brightness of the sun of love, the stars were as friends to me.

I remember, as in a dream, a journey over somy seas; I hear far-off echoes of a voice; and I have a faint recollection of a face bending over mine. But the first vivid impression of my life is of standing at the window of the buskeeper's room at Heron's Nest, watching the shadows grow darker and the snow fall one Chrisimas eve. There was no rejoicing in the grand old mansion. It was all dark and dis-mal. The snow beat flercely upon it: the wind sobbed round it; but loud and sweet above the mean of the wind came the chiming of the thurch bells. To me they spoke plainly enough, They said, "Christmas is come-Christmas is come!" I wondered if they said the same to reryone else. I spoke to the only friend I had Mrs. Paterson, the housekeeper.

"What do the bells of Heronsdale church really say?" I asked her.

"Bells do not speak," she replied, smiling. "You cannot say they are dumb," I rejoined. "Listen!"-and slowly I sang with them, "Christmas is come-Christmas is come!" Mrs. Paterson shook her head.

"Gracia," she said, not unkindly, "you are too full of fancies."

"To tell you the truth," Tanswered, "I hardknow what are fancies and what are not. Is ta ancy of mine that because it is Christmas Eve the snow falls more softly and the stars hine more brightly! Is it my fancy that ; uts real music into the chime of the bells-that fils the air with a strange sense of mystery?" "Grac a," said the housekeeper solemnly, you had better go to bed."

'Oh, no!" I cried. "Do not send me away. It is cold and dark in my room. Let me stay here in the warmth and light with you. 1 want to watch the sky and see if the Christmas star shines to-night."

She murmured to herself a wish that Heaven would bless the child and her fancies, but she was not angry.

"How fondly mothers will kiss their children to-night!" I went on. "How warmly will old friends clasp hands! If one man has wronged mother, how freely he will be forgiven! I vish some one would kiss me."

"I will kiss you, Gracia," said the house-And she did; but it did not seem to satisfy

That is my first vivid recollection. How the fair clime where the roses grew, how the high gray walls had disappeared, I could not tell. Everyone called me "Gracia"—the housekeeper, the old butler, the headgardener, the Vicar, his wife and daughter; I had no other tame. When anyone said abruptly, "Gracia what!"-as people often did when they asked my name-I could not answer. "Gracia," the simple name-nothing but "Gracia"! The keenest of all pains to me was having no name; and when I read the story of the shadowless man I believed that I understood what he had inflered. I was part of the place, just as the pictures and statues and carvings were; and a

The Squire who owned Heron's Nest at the time of my first memories of the place was alled Wolfgang-a name of which, though bot by any means an attractive one, he was tery proud, because many of his ance tors had borne it; and of this Wolfgang Dacre a Mory was told. in the world at her leet, she laughed at him and held him up to derision. He left London never to return. He shut himself up in the -old manor house, a man whose life was emblttered forever by the light love of a woman.

There he lived for some years. Lady Millicent married and the tragical story of her death a little later created a great sensation. Soon after that he went abroad, leaving his beautiful home in the care of Mrs. Blencowe, his housekeeper. Twice every year Mr. Graham of Thavies Inn, the Squire's solicitor, went down to Heron's Nest and remained for a week, during which time he thoroughly examined the house, ordered all that was needful, attended to the accounts, and made all arrangements for the next six months: Occasionally-but it was a rare event-a letter came from the Squire to the hous keeper; no one else however ever knew the nature of the contents, Everything went on from year to year in the same monotonous, quiet, peaceful way. Gradually the memory of the Squire died from the minds of his people; and then I came upon the scene-whence no one at Heron's Nest or in the neighborhood could tell.

It seems that one fine April morning a letter came for the housekeeper, Mrs. Blencowe. After she read it, she called the servants together, and told them she was compelled to go away for a time, as a friend of hers was ill and required her services. The housekeeper made her arrangements, attended to all that would be required during her absence, and then de-

She returned when the June roses were blooming, bringing me. I was six years old when I came with Mrs. Blencowe to Heron's Nest. She never spoke to the other servants about me. She called me Gracia, and no one knew whether it was my own name or not-I was simply Gracia. So far as I can remember, she was very kind to me.

At Heronsdale there lived a gentle, simple old man, the organist of the parish church, Michael Holt. He taught me music and the rudiments of Latin, and made me acquainted with the beauties of English literature—taught me for several years simply for love of me: for two years after she had brought me to Heron's standing on the steps in the library, dusting some valuable books, when she fell down dead. The doctor who was summoned said the cause of her death was disease of the heart-disease here?" of long standing. So I lost the only person who knew anything about me.

After she was dead, people did what they Innumerable questions to me. What did I remember-what had I seen? Where had I lived abroad-in what town? Was Mrs. Blencowe my mother, or was she my aunt? But I Mrs. Blencowe might be my mother, yet a proud instinct told me she was not. I was penniless, friendless, living at Heron's Nest on sufferance: yet I was proud as the daughter of any peer, head for anvone.

No sooner was Mrs. Blencowe dead than them knew anything of me.

It was suggested that I should be sent to the finished my song he looked at me thoughtfully. workhouse or to an orphanage; but Mr. Graham would not hear of that.

"The Squire would be angry," he said. "After all, the child will not cost much; she had better remain here for the present. I do not know the Squire's address, or I would write and ask him what is to be done with her."

Then a new housekeeper came-Mrs. Pater- or later something must transpire with regard son; and she was as much mystified as the rest with regard to me. She was kind, and at times even indulgent to me. The general beief of the whole household was that I was Mrs. Blencowe's daughter, and the servants treated me as such. They were familiar and kind; but they regarded me as one of themselves, and only laughed at my love of books

I had a fine contralto voice, which, thanks to Michael Holt, had been well trained, and my dear old master was very proud of his pupil. He said I sang like a nightingale. The proudest hour of my young life was when I stood up in the choir of the old church to sing, and my solo was-

After the service, Mrs. Sale, who at intervals had been exchanging angry glances with her daughter, whose voice was a sweet but weak soprano, came up and spoke to me. She said a girl in my position could not be too quiet or my volume, and went back to my room with it; keep too much out of sight; therefore it would be better that I should not sing in the choir my hair. When Mrs. Patterson found how fond I wis of music, she told me that I had better give up what little housework I did, for it would spoil my hands.

"Some day," she said, "you will perhaps know who you are; there you will have to earn your own living, and you may do so by music dasp her hand until every nerve in his frame bound with delight at the touch, waltzed By-the-bye, Gracia," she added, "I want you to walk over to the Vicarage to-day to ask Mrs. Sale what butter she will want; and mind, if you meet Miss Sale, that you make a proper curtsey to her."

I! My eyes flashed with indignation. Yet, who was I that I should not bow to the Vicar's pretty daughter?-a question to which I was unable to give an answer.

CHAPTER II.

When I reached my seventeenth year my mirror told me that I was not wanting in beauty. I could not, and did not, associate with any of the servants; they had ceased to expect it. I spent most of my time in the library with the piano and books. There, three times a week, old Michael Holt came to give me my lessons; there all my dreams were dreamed; there I shed tears over my lonely loveless lot; there I hoped for a future that should be brighter than the past.

As I was sitting in the library one day dreaming a day-dream one of the maid servants hastily entered the room.

"Gracia," she said, "Mrs. Paterson says you must come out of this room at once and go to hers. Mr. Graham has arrived, and he will not like to find you here." Mrs. Paterson was right. What business had a girl without a name in that sumptuous library? I would have given worlds to check the hot flush that rose to my face. In silence I laid down by book and quitted the room.

In the hall, as I crossed it, I met a gentleman-Mr. Graham, I knew. When he saw me he stopped suddenly.

"Why, who are you?" he asked. Strange that every one should ask the same question! I could make only my usual answer-

"I am Gracia."

"Gracia?" he repeated slowly; and I saw, to my surprise and delight, a look of admiration in his keen eyes. "Are you the young girl supposed to be the late nousekeeper's daughter!" My proud head drooped. What would I not have given if I could have said "No"? Before I had time to answer he added quickly-

"1, for my own part, do not believe that you are Mrs. Blencowe's daughter; but who you are is a mystery I cannot solve."

The words delighted me. It was the first time that any one seemed to think it possible that I might not be Mrs. Blencowe's daughter.

"The Squire is coming home," Mr. Graham continued hurriedly. "I do not know on what Nest the housekeeper died suddenly. She was day he will arrive, but it will be some time next week."

"Do you think he will let me remain here?" asked eagerly. "Does he know that I am

"I cannot answer cither question," he replied. "The Squire has never mentioned you in his letters. I wrote to him when Mrs. Blennever dared to do in her lifetime-they put cowe died, and said that you would stop at Heron's Nest, unless I heard from him to the contrary; but he did not answer that letter." "What shall I do?" I asked despairingly.

"Do nothing," he replied. "Keep out of his remembered nothing clearly, except the roses sight for a time. I wish I could be here when and the high gray walls; therefore I could not he comes, but I go to Scotland to-morrow, and gratify their curiosity. It was possible that shall not be back for some weeks. I have no doubt that he will do something for you."

I felt more puzzled than ever that day as to who I could possibly be. I must be of good birth, I thought, for everything about me beand I do not believe that I ever lowered my tokened race. But to what family did I belong? Ah, that was a mystery!

There was great excitement in the housethere was quite a disturbance about me. Some hold when it was known that the master of the servants said that the Squire's solicitor was returning. and that he would always be my friend. Nothing was spoken of now but the coming of the Squire. Quite an army of servants suddenly appeared; trim housemaids, cooks, footmen, coachmen, grooms, all seemed to spring into existence at once. The state rooms in the great mansion were thrown open, the picturegallery was set in order. There I saw a por-I led that life for some years. Into the renovated rooms I dared not enter. My favorite place, the library, was closed against me. My own little sleeping-room at the top of the house, whence I caught a glimpse of the sea, was my only refuge, and during the next week I lived almost entirely there.

At last I heard that the Squire had come. I had pictured him always as he was in h s portrait-smiling and handsome; but I had failed to allow for the havoc that years of sorrow and

It seems that for some days no one mentioned me to the master of the house, nor did he make any inquiries about me.

One night, when I believed the whole household to be asleep, I went quietly down to the library to get a book, one of Richard Proctor's, called Other Worlds th in Ours-a book in which I revelled. There was no one there. I found but a bow of pink ribbon fell unperce ved from room early in the morning he saw it lying on the carpet and he picked it up. Just at that moment one of the housemaids, entered the

"To whom does this belong?" the Squire asked her.

"To Gracia, sir," answered the maid.

She told me of the meeting afterwards, and said that when the Squire heard the name he recoiled as though he had received a blow. "Whom?" he cried, in a loud voice.

And the maid repeated-

"Gracia." "Send the housekeeper to me," said the named Gracia here. Who is she?" "No one knows, sir," was the reply. "I found her here when I came, and she is here

"How did she come here?" was the next question.

"I cannot tell, sir. I have heard the servants say that the late housekeeper was called away suddenly, that she was absent some time and returned with the child. I do not think anyone in the house knows who she is."

A look of relief passed over the Squire's

"But that is improbable-impossible, I may say! Some one must know!" he exclaimed. "To begin with, sir, I do not," returned the housekeeper, with a dignified air. "As Gracia had been in charge of the former housekeeper, I took her under my protection. Mr. Graham said he was sure that you would not like her to be taken to an orphanage or a workhouse. No one owned her though we all believed her to be Mrs. Blencowe's daughter."

She paused for a moment, while the Squire paced up and down the room angrily. At length he came to a standstill, and said ab-

"Send to me all the old servants in the house."

So the butler, the head-gardener, all the old servants who were in Heron's Nest before I came, were called before the Squire; but not one amongst them knew anything more than this-that Mrs. Blencowe, after being absent for some time, had returned with me; but whence she had brought me no one could tell.

Was it anger or relief on the Squire's face when they were dismissed and he stood thinking so deeply? At last he rang the bell again, and, when one of the footmen answered it, he in the universities this desired measure

"Tell Mrs. Paterson to send the-the young person Gracia to me."

Mrs. Paterson brought me the message her-

"Go, Gracia," she said, "and do not be afraid. Let the Squire hear you sing, and he will put you in the way of making a fortune, I am sure."

But I went in fear and trembling to the library, where the Squire awaited me. I found myself in the presence of a tall stately gentleman, whose hair was white as snow, and whose face, though marked by lines of terrible pain, was still handsome, with the fire of his blue eyes undimmed. But they were no longer laughing eyes. They were stern, and cold, not sufficient, and perhaps as good an at all like the eyes of the portrait. What was it that flashed into them when they fell upon me? I could not tell. Was it surprise, fear, love, or what? I knew not: but it was a look such as I have never seen on any human face

He came a step nearer to me, then drew back; flually he bade me approach him. He looked into my eyes as though he would read my soul, and then said slowly-

"So you are Gracia?"-"Yes," I replied.

"Nothing more?" I had to pause, my heart was beating so fast. I wondered what was stealing over me. My eyes filled with tears; the sound of his voice seemed to stir the depths of my soul. "I thought," he said slowly, "that Gracia was a child."

"I was a child not long since," I answered; "now I am growing up-yet helpless as when I was a child."

"And who are you?" he asked.

Always that same cruel question! I raised my eyes, blinded as they were by tears, to his to my parentage, that I was to take courage,

"I do not know," I answered. "No one knows who I am. The happy birds have a home, but I have none." "Heron's Nest has been a home-has it not?"

he asked gently.

"No one can have a home who has neither friend nor name," I returned bitterly. "And you-

"Have neither," I interrupted. He looked at me for some momenta in silence, then asked-

"How old are you, Gracia?" "Seventeen," I replied.

"Tell me," he said hesitatingly, "what you remember of your past before you came here."

"It is so little that it is hardly worth telling," I answered. "I remember first being near the sea, in a land where roses grew even to the water's edge; and I can recall'a face that used to bend over mine."

I saw the color leave his lips. "Nothing more?" he asked sharply.

"Then I recollect high gray walls-convent walls I know they were, because I remember the sisters' faces-a stormy passage across the sea, and my arrival here. It was only when I reached Heron's Nest that I really seemed to come to life.

"Did Mrs. Blencowe know your history!" he asked suspiciously.

"No," I replied, "I might have dropped from the clouds for all that anyone seems to know about me." He murmured something I could not hear distinctly, but it sounded like "Poor child!" "Does it not strike you as a very strange thing that I should return home and find in my house a young lady"-how that delighted me!-"who has been living here for years, and of whom no one knows anything?" "I do think it strange; and, what is more, I think it cruel," I answered. "I must have had parents, like other people. It is to Heaven they must answer for their neglect of me."

He was still looking at me intently. "Do you know," he said, "that you are a very beautiful girl?"

My heart beat with pleasure. No one had ever told me so before, and I knew so little of

It is lear that with the wise men of old quant ty rather than quality was the ruling law: not what a man ate, but how much he ate was the capital thing for him to consider. A tolerably simple diet is advised, though the wise e sius holds that the quality of the food matters little, so that the man be healthy; but whatever it be, let there be moderation; measure is the one thing needful. The difficulty of finding this measure is confessed: 'Lust knows ot," says St. Augustine, "where necessity ends.' by the time he had had reached his thirty sixth year Cornaro had accusto ed himself to a daily measure of twelve ounces of food and fourteen of drink-which does not, I own, convey a very exact not on to me. though I take it we Gargantuans should find the measure small. ### 1836. Golden Wedding. 1886.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey C. Boyd, of Sylvan Center, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage on Tuesday, October, 26. But few whom God has joined together in holy matrimony ever live to celebrate 59 their fiftieth wedding day.

Fifty long years have come and gone since they promised to care for each other until death should part them. With those 290 years have come toil and care, youth has gone, middle age is past, old age has come and many are the reminiscences in life to which memory clings when the woodland homes resounded with joy.

The gathering comprised some sixty relatives going down to the fifth generation. The four sons of Father and Mother Boyd were present with their families. 250 One niece of Mother Boyd, Mrs. Sarah Dean, of Steuben county, N. Y., and a sister and two brothers of Father Boyd were among the many happy guests. The en-251 joyment of the occasion was complete, and their parting saddened only by the thought that they might never meet again ou earth.

The aged couple were the recipients of two handsome presents, a gold-headed cane to Father Boyd and a beautiful gold 290 ring to Mother Boyd, presented to them by 250 their four sons as a token of love.

The golden ring was again placed upon 250 the finger of the aged bride by her once youthful, but now aged, husband. The wedding ceremony was conducted by their former pastor, T. B. Magee, who became the recipient of a valuable gold piece upon the occasion. 290

Father and mother—words so sweet For loving children to repeat, Around the altar, known so long, We meet to-day with cheer and song or fifty years of love confiding Have brought us here, no ill dividing. Father, thy hand was strong we know, That grasped another long ago,

Our mother's loving hand to hold, And held till now, the year of gold. Thy hand failed not to labor for us, And mother's smile was always o'er us. We bring you blessing, that is all;

Gold was a gift by far to small. The love of fifty years has brought A joy that riches never bought. o'round the hearthstone here we gather With kiss of mother and smile of falher.

Young and Middle Aged Men and Women to fill Important and Lucrative places in life. Superior system of Actual Business. No vacations. Large attendance.

While the legal voters were easting their ballots, last Tuesday, the pupils of the High School took a notion to imitate their fathers and brothers by balloting for the gubernatorial candidates, all voting without regard to sex. Thirty-seven ballots were cast with the following results: Luce 26, Yaple 9, Dickey 2.
