Ray, Thomas Holmes, Pub.

CHelsea. MICH.

A very unusual scene occurred in the mayor's court in Indianapolis on a recent Monday, when that official purposely passed over a dozen cases of "Sunday drunks." The next day the whole squad entered pleas of guilty. In the course of a long address the mayor said that it was cruel to the unfortunates before him and their families to punish them, when no effort was made to arrest the men who threw open their doors and sold liquor on Sunday, and, until the police authorities showed a disposition to punish the graver criminals, he proposed to release the unfortunate victims. The superintendent and the police board knew well, he said, that the law was violated every Sabbath, but no effort was made to prevent it, and the saloon men had become so bold that their doors were thrown wide open under the shadow of the churches of the city. All of the cases were released.

Says the Rev. James Owen: I believe in preaching. A great deal has been written and spoken lately about adapting religious services to the people, and brightening the services, and improving the music, and introducing liturgies, and bringing in the millenium by means of brass bands and oratorios. And, indirectly, perhaps directly, God's ordinance of preaching has been depreciated, and a cry has been heard for "ten minutes' sermons," with a leaning to mercy even then. Let us not yield to the tendency to substitute something else for the ministry of the Gospel. No, concerts, no flower-shows, no ritualistic performances, can take the place of this. It was enough in the days of our fathers, and it is now the power of God unto salvation.

The slow-moving Russian government, finding the railroad facilities inadequate for carrying the output of petroleum from the shores of the Caspian sea to the Black sea has now made propositions for the building of an oleoduct, or "pipe line," from Baku to Batoum capable of transmitting 160,000,000 gallons of oil a year. The pipe is to be laid in three years and for twenty years the company laying it is to be allowed to charge $3.25 per ton, or about one cent a gallon, for transportation. The line will be 60 miles long, and presents no greater engineering difficulty than a lift of 3,200 feet in crossing the elevated lands between the two seas. The pipe line company will not be allowed to engage in refining oil nor become the owner of oil wells.

The general indications are that the winter is going to be a much busier one than last winter, that strikes will be of rare occurrence, and that building operations will be conducted in a very lively way. The building trade prospects and the manufacturing prospects for the coming spring are believed by the best informed architects and builders, manufacturers and investors to be better than they have ever been in our history. This confidence is based upon inquiry for material to be delivered next spring. Prices of nearly all kinds of material have either advanced or are pointing upward, and mills of all kinds, especially iron and steel mills, are largely overcrowded.

In the light of subsequent developments the advocates of the oleomargarine bill have defeated their own purpose and will soon be clamoring as loudly for the repeal of the bill as they were eager for its passage. The revenue from this tax already exceeds the estimate made at the time of the passage of the bill. This indicates an increase, not a diminution in consumption. The tax is something in the nature of a license which is not heavy enough to result in prohibition of its use, and at the same time gives to bogus butter a government sanction which it did not have before.

A London publisher wrote to 1,000 school girls asking them to name their favorite authors. In the replies Dickens received 330 votes; Scott, 226; Kingsley and C. M. Young, 91 each; Shakespeare, 73; George Eliot, 41, and other authors a less number.

During the 49 years of her reign, Queen Victoria has spent only 12 days in Ireland. The suggestion is made that she celebrate her coming jubilee by giving in memory of those 12 days 12 pence to each inhabitant of the neglected island.

The demands of the Milwaukee & St. Paul switchmen at Milwaukee for an advance and the slowness of the company in considering it is causing some discontent.

James A. Whitney a New York lawyer, will assist in the trial of the Chicago anarchist before the United States court. Mr. Whitney says he looks at the matter from a purely legal standpoint, but expressed no personal opinion of the case. He thought every trial under popular excitement was unduly influenced.

Steps have been taken to contest the will of the late Samuel J. Tilden. The contest will be in strictly legal grounds.

The Hualpai Indians in Northwestern Arizona are starving, and an appeal has been made to the government for aid.

The coroner's jury holds the brakemen responsible for the awful railroad accident at Rio, Wis., on the 26th ult.

The United Presbyterian in session at Pittsburg adopted resolutions strongly condemning the use of the organ in church.

Suit has been brought against Mayor William R. Grace of New York city by Julien T. Davies, receiver of Grant & Ward, to recover $150,000 which the receiver says the books show Mayor Grace obtained through the fictitious "contract" transactions he had with Ferdinand Ward. The defendant is given until the 24th inst. to answer the complaint.

The government revenues so far this month aggregate $12,363,573. The expenditures during the same period, including $350,000 pension payments, were $7,056,033, being $5,307,540 less than the receipts.

Prince Napoleon having completed his tour of the country, sailed for England on the 8th inst.

Prof. Baird means to ask congress for $250,000 for a new building for the Smithsonian institution.

The first confederate monument on the Gettysburg field was put in position the other day. It marks the position of the Second Maryland Infantry, at the foot of Culp's hill.

The Columbia river paper mills, owned in Portland, Ore., and situated at Lacamas, W. T., burned the other night. Loss $80,000; insured for $45,000. Seventy men are thrown out of employment. It was the largest establishment of that kind on the northwest coast.

Frances Coleman, a colored girl, went to the postoffice at Shellman, Ga., for her mail. She took offense at something in the office, called on her brothers, and before daylight the two sons of the postmaster were hurt, probably fatally. One Negro was killed, one took to the woods, and two have been arrested.

Cost of the Indians.

The second auditor's report shows that during the year the sum of $17,674,465 was drawn out of the treasury on requisitions issued by the secretary of war and $5,255,323 on those issued by the secretary of the interior on account of Indian maintenance. The clerical force of the office has been reduced by ten, but the accounts audited were increased by about $9,000 over 1905. The most important new class of claims is that of officers and ex-officers of the army for readjustment of their pay accounts, in which they may have served as cadets or as enlisted men. They amount to about $1,500,000 and 2,500 officers are interested. A test case as to their validity is pending in the supreme court.

The Indian Schools.

Mr. Riley, superintendent of Indian schools, has been making an inspection of the reservations in the west and southwest. In his report he points out the inability of the Indian agricultural schools at Hampton, Va., and Carlisle, Pa. He says there is no use teaching Indians agriculture in Virginia when the practice will be followed out in Dakota and Arizona, under different conditions of soil and climate. It is useless to give the Indians anything more than a most rudimentary education, which should include agriculture for boys and housework for the girls. An appeal is made for a more extended survey of Indian lands. The Indian bureau asks for a large and immediate appropriation.

The Prince Who is Called.

Prince Waldemar, who has been called to the throne of Bulgaria, is the third child of the reigning king of Denmark, Christian IX. He is 25 years of age and a year ago was married to the Princess Marie of Orleans, the oldest daughter of the duke of Chartres. Waldemar's brothers and sisters are fairly well portioned out on Europe. King Christian having always had his eye open to the main chance in the shape of a profitable royal marriage, Waldemar's oldest sister is the princess of Wales, his brother William is king of Greece as George I, and another sister is empress of Russia. The king of Denmark positively refused to allow him to rule Bulgaria.

A Philadelphia Story.

A. E. Story of No. 230 North Tenth street, Philadelphia, has in his possession 200 or 300 pages of manuscript written by his father which he intends to publish in order to establish the claim of Henry Clark Rogers that he was a natural son of Gen. George Washington. Mr. Story states that the manuscript will never be given to the public. Rogers lived in that city and died in 1805. His photograph shows that he bore a marked resemblance to Gen. Washington. He had an abundance of money and maintained that he was born and educated in England and had an income from the Washington estate.

"Ayer's Pills cured me of stomach and liver troubles."—D. W. Baine, New Berne, N. C.

Silk and cut feather pompons are mounted upon silver wire or pins.

SUFFERERS FROM COUGHS, SORE THROAT, etc., should try "Brown's Bronchial Remedy," a simple but sure remedy.

Dainty breakfast caps are made of full frills of lace, with loops of narrow ribbon arranged on the top.

A Father's Protection.

Father, it is as essential for you to provide a safeguard against that night fiend, your children, croup, as to their hunger. Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein will cure croup, coughs and colds.

There are lots of young men who have long purses who also have long ears.

Business Men.

The business man, practical in all things, does not care to lose sleep at night that would unfit him for business the following day, so keeps Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein, which will prevent croup and cure coughs, colds and consumption.

When a young man is paying attention to a young lady he is a sort of court plaster.

A Neighbor's Experience.

Be charitable to your neighbor, and tell him of your experience in curing your children of cough and croup by the use of that simple remedy, Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein.

Flax and Irish culprure collars of medium and very large size are worn by children.

A Thief in the Night.

A thief in the night is alarming. How much more so is that night fiend, croup, strangling the little ones! Provide a safeguard and keep Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein, which will not only prevent but cure croup.

There is talk of establishing in London a club for ladies on the model of the university clubs.

A Fearful Leap.

Into the abyss of poverty, over the precipice of short-sightedness, is taken by thousands, who might become wealthy, if they availed themselves of their opportunity. Those who write to Hallett & Co., Portland, Maine, to be informed, free, how they can make from $5 to $25 a day and upwards. Some have made over $50 a day. You can do the work and live at home wherever you are located. Both sexes; all ages. All is new. You are started free. Capital not needed. Now is the time. Better not delay. Every worker can secure a snug little fortune.

You cannot expect a girl of the period to stand fire because she is accustomed to face powder.

W. H. Worthington, editor of the "Patrons of Husbandry," published at Columbus, Mass., writes under date of Feb. 25, 1882: "Your great remedy, Allen's Lung Balm, I have used in my family for fifteen years for coughs and colds, and know it to be the best." 25c., 50c., and $1.00 a bottle.

An American lady's idea of a ballet girl is "an open muslin umbrella with two pink handles."

A Miraculous Escape from the Grave.

I have been in poor health with a diseased stomach and liver, causing a cankered mouth continually for ten years. I kept about my house until a year ago last June. For three years prior to that time I had a severe pain in the region of my heart, at times seeming past endurance. It affected my shoulder, took all strength from my arm; could get no relief only by poulticing. My stomach being so diseased, my food caused me great distress. My age also seemed to be in the way of my recovery, and not the least of my sickness. I employed the very best medical assistance I could get while in Caro, this state, but little encouragement could I get. Was moved to Vassar Oct. 1, 1885, on a bed, giving me every ten minutes a teaspoonful of brandy and ice with only a teaspoonful of nourishment at a time. I commenced bloating soon after arriving here, every appearance of dropsy. We called our Caro physician to come here, and he said my condition was worse than when in Caro. On the 27th day of May last we called a council of doctors from Vassar, "three in number." All of them pronounced my case incurable. I had with the rest inflammation of the bowels, and lay almost lifeless, and one of the leading physicians said if I could be restored to a sane mind again it would be all my husband might expect, and anything that would soothe me was all that could be done. My husband got me some medicine at Johnson & Williamson's, druggists at Vassar, and commenced giving it to me, and in three weeks' time they began to put me in an easy chair, "for a short time each day," at which time I had no use of my lower limbs and my back was numb; it was a little more than two months before I could walk without crutches. I am now a well woman, have walked one and a half miles within a month, can eat all kinds of food and enjoy it, have gained from 82 pounds, since last May, to 116 now, could say more of sickness, but delicacy prevents. I want to say to my friends that Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup and Plasters are the medicines that cured me. I used four plasters with the first five bottles; have used ten bottles in all and am well. If any one who reads this has any doubt as to the authenticity of my statement, it will afford me pleasure to refer them to my neighbors all about here, as they are all astonished at my recovery. It is a great family remedy.

Very truly,
Mrs. CHESTER GAGE.

VASSAR, Mich., Oct. 11, 1886.

This is to certify that I have known Mrs. Gage since she came to Vassar, and know the facts set forth in her statement above to be true.

Very truly,
Geo. E. Williamson,
Of the firm of Johnson & Williamson,
druggists, Vassar, Mich.

J. E. Delbridge, Conductor on the Chicago & West Michigan Railroad, Becomes Heir to a Large Fortune.

I have suffered more than language can express with sciatic rheumatism for twelve years, and have expended hundreds of dollars for medicines. I have never found anything that has done me as much good as Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup and plasters. They are truly a rheumatic specific, and I take great pleasure in recommending them to my friends.

Yours truly,
J. K. DELBRIDGE,

Grand Rapids, Mich.

If you once try Carter's Little Liver Pills for sick headache, biliousness or constipation you will never be without them. They are purely vegetable; small and easy to take, all druggists sell them.

A Very Thin Man.

Instances of remarkably thin men are not uncommon, but Claude Ambrose Seurat, who was in England in 1825, was such an extraordinary personage that during the time he was exhibited at the "Chinese saloon," in Pall Mall, no fewer than seventy thousand persons visited him in a few weeks. Seurat was born in 1797, and was, therefore, twenty-eight years of age when he made his appearance.

Sir Astley Cooper, the famous physician, was among the throng that poured into the building in which Seurat received those who were anxious to see him, and wrote: "Seurat is, without doubt, the most mysterious being I have encountered. His face is that of an ordinary man, somewhat emaciated, perhaps, but not remarkably so. His eyes are bright, and his voice pleasing. Seen in the ordinary costume of the day he in no way differs from the average foreigner. But stripped of his padded clothing he presents an astounding spectacle. His arms are mere bones covered with parchment-like skin, and muscles or flesh he appears to have none. He is, therefore, scarcely able to move his arms and legs, and walks, though without apparent effort, with extreme difficulty. On measuring him and weighing him, I found that his chest measurement was thirty and three-quarter inches, which is fair; that his height was five feet six inches, but that his weight was not more than forty-five pounds, the bones being much smaller than those of an ordinary man of his stature who might weigh 150 pounds. In appearance, indeed, he so much resembles a skeleton that a short-sighted person might easily mistake him for one." Seurat's food consisted of two or three ounces of bread and meat daily, and sometimes he took a little wine. He was remarkably intelligent and well-read, and picked up English rapidly. On arriving at places where he was not known he was accustomed to walk out in his padded clothes, and did not attract attention. He said that until the age of ten years he resembled any ordinary boy, but that he suddenly wasted away. He died in 1840, aged fifty-two years.

Stature of Great Men.

New York Sun.

This is a subject with respect to which a young man of New York asks us to give him information:

"In a discussion the other night I claimed that the majority of the world's great men were of large stature. Am I right?"

The men who are commonly accounted great, may be of either small or large stature. Samuel J. Tilden, the foremost American statesman of our period, and a man of extraordinary intellectual breadth and capacity, was short, slight, and throughout his life delicate in health, though with a strong vitality and much nervous force. Mr. Gladstone is a tall man, and so also is Bismarck, but Disraeli was of middle height only, and Napoleon Bonaparte was short, while Wellington was not tall. Jefferson was tall, thin and angular, but Alexander Hamilton was slight and considerably under middle stature. Franklin was short and fat, and Peter Cooper was only about 5 feet 6. Commodore Vanderbilt was tall and commanding, but Jay Gould is short and unimpressive in his physical appearance. Grant was short, and so also was McClellan. Farragut was a rather tall man, but Robert E. Lee was of a commanding stature, as was also Charlemagne, but Hannibal was very small, and Julius Caesar was not above medium height.

These, we suppose, are men whom you would call great, but, you see, some of them were short, and only a few of them were remarkable for their stature. It might, perhaps, be said generally that such men are more apt to be under than above the average height; for what you call greatness largely depends on capacity for continuous application, and, on the whole, the most enduring men and the best proportioned are apt to be those of medium stature, if not those somewhat under the medium.

The English Matron Abroad.

From the St. James's Gazette.

The Englishman on his travels is the standing butt of the witty Parisian, but the English woman at least seems to be quite a match for the average Frenchman. A lady of interesting appearance called the other morning on a jeweler in Paris, and after purchasing a bracelet presented a £10 note in payment, from which she received change amounting to nearly £5, and went away. The French, though they may despise things English, have a liking for English bank notes, especially when they have not had to pay for them at the current rate of exchange. So the jeweler gaily stepped around to his banker to get his two hundred and fifty and odd francs. And when he arrived, the banker pointed out that the note was not a forgery, not even a draft on the Bank of England, but an order dated nearly fifty years back and signed by one F. Duck, on an institution styled the Bank of Engraving, which entitled the holder to some pictures. It is difficult not to admire the daring coolness of the woman who could try such a successful experiment in a big city, though one may share in the horror of the French papers, and reiterate their warning to shopkeepers to be on their guard against this fair daughter of Albion.

George Gould and wife live at the Windsor hotel, having five rooms on the second floor, for which he pays $20 per week. In this way the shrewd young man saves probably a thousand dollars in a week in expenses of keeping house and entertaining.

The editor of the Corsicana, Tex., Observer, Mr. G. P. Miller had a severe attack of rheumatism in his left knee, which became so swollen and painful that he could not walk up the stairs. He writes that after a few applications of St. Jacobs Oil, the pain entirely disappeared, and the knee assumed its normal proportions.

A dark red velvet bonnet has a soft crown. It is trimmed with black velvet and with a cluster of red plumes and pompons mounted on silver pins.

Crepes de chine scarfs, with tiny embroidered figures, in all the light colors, are still worn, and may be arranged according to individual fancy.

A hat for a little girl is of Burgundy felt, with a rolling brim. It is trimmed with folds of velvet about the base of the crown and drooping with ostrich plumes.

Summer coughs and colds generally come to stay, but the use of the Red Star Cough Cure invariably drives them away. Safe, prompt, sure.

A 75 pound box of dynamite exploded within eight feet of seventeen workingmen the other day in Birmingham, Ala., and not one of the men was injured.

The Duty of State Legislatures.

Legislation should be effected in every State regulating the sale and use of the many poisons resorted to by women in their desperation to obtain beautiful complexions, while there exists in Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic every requisite necessary to accomplish the object without injuring the health or endangering life.

Two freshmen, whose course of study was scarcely commenced at the University, have been suspended for a year for violating the rules of the institution against rushing. This may seem hard on the young men but they themselves made it necessary. If young men go to college with the idea that rules are simply false pretensions to order and application, the sooner they are undeceived in the matter the better both for themselves and for the college. Soon after Dr. Angel commenced his long and successful career as President of one of the best, if not the very best university in America, at a time when it seemed doubtful whether students or faculty were destined to control and direct the affairs of the institution when public sentiment was almost evenly divided on the question, and the press of the state was half inclined to favor the former rather than the latter, when the eminent Dr. himself did not know whether his authority would be sustained or not, at a meeting of the regents to consider the situation and decide which party should hold the field and which retire from it, he stood up bravely before them and the gazing public and made this profound declaration: "It is better that the University should have no students than no order." Standing upon that brave, sound and solid foundation, he has carried forward the great work and won for the University of Michigan a name and a fame that is not limited even by the boundaries of the civilized world. Barbarous nations have learned thereof with joy. When foolish, thoughtless students, who have not yet learned what law and order mean in a college, play the fool just to have a little rough, unmanly and dangerous fun, measures that will teach them the solemn realities of student life become indispensable.

OBSERVATIONS AND EXPERIENCES ABROAD.

NO. 20.

What was once the strongest fortress and is now the most extensive ruin on the Rhine, will next claim our attention. It is called Rhinefels and was originally simply a castle, built by Count Diether, in 1218, to enable him to exact tribute from the merchandise that passed up and down the river. Diether soon rendered himself obnoxious to the neighboring robber chiefs and his fortress was besieged by them, but in vain, in 1235. This failure to reduce this fortress led to a wider confederation of cities and was one of the producing causes of the first Rhinebund, which finally resulted in the destruction of the entire system of robber castles upon the Rhine. Afterwards the castle came into the possession of the Landgrave of Hesse and was converted into a modern fortress with bastions and casemates. In 1692 this fortress was besieged by 24,000 French under the command of Marshall Tallard, who had promised it as a new year's gift to his King, Louis XIV. but was so bravely defended by the brave Hessian Col. Goetz, that after immense losses, with no advantage gained, Tallard set fire to his own camp and withdrew. The guide who conducted me through this extensive and interesting ruin pointed out a trap, which consisted of an area of about half an acre, lying in a hollow outside but adjoining the walls of the fort, so situated as to be unobservable from any point of observation the attacking party could command, surrounded by high walls from which was no escape but by the narrow entrance that led into it, and so constructed that every inch of it could be raked by cannon and small arms from the inside. Into this trap the assaulting party were sure to plunge in an attempt to carry the fortress by storm, when they must inevitably fall an easy prey to the defenders. On this half acre in a single half hour, the French, on this occasion, left 3,000 men. Bombshells and heavy artillery, by which such a defense would be knocked to pieces at the present day, were unknown at that time, and a perpendicular wall of masonry constituted an impregnable defense. Just one hundred years later, in 1794, through bribery or treachery in some form, the besieging French were admitted to the fort upon the first demand for its surrender, and blew it up with gun-powder, since which it has been an attractive and imposing ruin. From this ruin the landscape view is one of the finest.

We are now to enter the wildest scenery to be found on this entire trip and pass the most dangerous point, or, perhaps, I should rather say the only dangerous point to be encountered. The channel of the river is again narrowed and rendered rapid by the precipitous, almost overhanging banks. The channel winds through the gorge with sharp angles, and the water is agitated and thrown into such commotion by undulating rocks that the place is called the whirlpool. Directly at the dangerous point, where it is most necessary for the navigator to keep both eye and mind upon his business, a towering crag, bare, black and frowning, rears a sharp peak high into the heavens, and tradition has it that a siren, in olden time, was wont to break forth in charming strains of song to attract the boatman's attention as he was passing and lure him to his ruin. This crag is called Lurley, which means pure slate. Directly across the stream, by the side of the road that is cut from the rock just wide enough for a team to pass along between the river and precipitous face of the mountain is a grotto excavated also in the rock, which forms a shelter for a man whose business it is to awaken, by the sound of a bugle and the discharge of a firearm, an echo among these precipitous ledges, perhaps the most wonderful known for the number of its repetitions, which are said to be fifteen. The bugle is sounded at a particular moment when the steamboat has reached the right point in the stream, and the surprise of the unsuspecting traveller, or the one that hears it for the first time, is extraordinary and sometimes amusing. A few notes on the bugle is followed by the sudden report of a musket, when the rattle of musketry that follows resembles the prolonged fire of an entire regiment. Hemmed in by black, precipitous ledges, 700 feet high, unrelieved by tree, bush or vegetation of any kind, in this narrowest point on the middle Rhine, the waters boiling and foaming beneath, and the channel so winding that you can see but a few rods in either direction, it is no wonder that the superstitious navigator of early days thought the place enchanted. That many have been wrecked here from the large rafts of logs that pass down the stream, and lost their lives, is a fact well established, but no accidents have ever occurred to the steamers of modern times, though several pass, up and down, I think every day in the year. The passage, however, is short, and the steamer soon emerges from the dismal chasm into a more open prospect, with sloping vine-clad hillsides and loveliness on every hand.

Another village appears. It is Oberwesel. This was the Roman Vesalia, about the commencement of the Christian era. Christianity was introduced here before the middle of the third century, and several very ancient and very interesting churches are found here, worthy a visit and close inspection. Echoes from the opposite bank of the Rhine abound in this region, and one, from a hillside just back of the town, is the source of much amusement. The "boys," who wish to vent their spite against the Mayor of the city, resort to this spot and call out, Who is the Burgomeister (Mayor) of Oberwesel? An answer comes back presently, Esel, which in German is donkey. It is presumed that the Burgomeister himself does not enjoy the joke so well as the "boys." Another very ancient and picturesque ruin is found here, called Schonberg—Beautiful Hill. This was the cradle of a royal family, that had its origin as far back as the time of Charlemagne, and reaches down through centuries of both German and English history. From this stem sprung the hero Frederick Herman Shomberg, who, after performing most valorous deeds in France, Portugal, Flanders, Germany and England, gaining the title of "the greatest living master of the art of war," was finally killed in 1690 while leading a charge at the famous battle of the Boyne.

As tradition has it, the name Shomberg was given to this hill and castle, on account of seven beautiful sisters who once lived here, and, by their beauty, turned the heads and hearts of all the young knights of the whole region; but, strange to tell, were so prudish and shy that it was impossible to win them, on which account they were thrown into the Rhine, where they were turned into seven rocks, that, at low water, may be seen still rearing their dangerous heads to the surface. Judging from the absence of such shyness, at the present day, we presume the terrible fate of these beautiful ladies effectually cured the sex of all that kind of nonsense.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

Washington, Nov. 13, 1886.

Some members of the Forty Ninth Congress are already in Washington, others are on their way, in a few days all will have arrived, and the legislative department of the Government will resume work for a session that will last just three months. There are indications that the session will open industriously. The Chairman of the House Committee on appropriations, Mr. Randall, proposes to come soon and get things in readiness for the meeting of his committee, which is to take place, if a quorum can be brought together, on the 22nd. This is in order to have a bill ready to be reported at the opening of the session.

Hon. Mr. Hewitt says he is anxious to remain in Congress as long as possible. He would have preferred to carry out his work here, but the Mayoralty was forced upon him. He wants to push the Administrative tariff bill to passage before he resigns and had hoped to remain in his seat after he had taken the oath of office as Mayor, but by the Legislature of New York, cannot hold a Federal and municipal office at the same time.

The so called police scandal of Washington has attracted considerable attention and the President has taken hold of the matter. It is all about an alleged scheme of the city police to collect damaging facts about the private lives of Congressmen, with a view to forcing them to vote for appropriations for the District of Columbia. If the story is not exaggerated, it affords an insight into demoralization of public affairs which has long existed in Washington.

The President's Boston trip seems to have done him good. He has been smiling and jovial ever since, and unusually gracious to his East Room callers. His country home has a new name—"Oak View." It has been variously named by other people, but this time it is said to have been christened by the owner himself. Oak trees surround the house, and it commands a picturesque view in all directions.

The valuable relics formerly belonging to Gen. Grant, and bequeathed by the Vanderbilt estate to the Government, are now being classified at the National Museum, where they will soon be exhibited to the public. The collection was packed in fifteen large boxes, and will take a good deal of space when placed in glass cases. And space is the desideratum now at the museum. The director of the institution is loudly bewailing its wealth of resources and poverty of space, and says a new structure is an immediate and pressing necessity. In his annual estimates for the museum, he asks Congress to appropriate $250,000 for this purpose, proposing to flank the Smithsonian building on the west as the present museum flanks it on the east. The 100,000 feet of exhibition space in this building is found totally inadequate, and how to find room for the Government mementos and for the articles contributed by the Japanese Government, now on their way here, illustrating all the useful and ornamental arts of that curious people, are among the problems which the museum authorities say they are unable to solve.

Thousands upon thousands of interesting objects, which are as truly a means of popular education as any of those already exhibited, are prepared for display now, but they have to remain stored away in cellars, crypts and garrets. A number of wooden structures near by the museum are also packed from floor to ceiling with rich materials which have not been touched by the scientists. A hundred tons also of exhibits shipped from the centennial exposition ten years ago, have never been opened.

The officers say it is not intended or possible to put on exhibition more than a fraction of the mass of materials which will be in their possession. Many of the exhibits will be but the indices of those held in reserve, which will remain packed with a view to economy of space and accessibility for study. The museum has three principal sources of supply. 1. By law all the collections made by the scientific bureaus of the Government, the geological, ethnological, coast survey and fish commission, become the property of the museum, after they have served the original purposes of their collectors.

2. Foreign museums in all parts of the world send of their surplus in exchange for surplus material shipped abroad.

3. Private collectors donate the contents of their cabinets to an institution which is expected to have perfect facilities for study, comparison and display.

The current accessions are sufficient to fill a little museum every year.

A TIRED WOMAN'S LAST WORDS.

Here lies an old woman who always was tired, For she lived in a house where help was hired. Her last words on earth were, "Dear friends, I'm going Where was-hung ain't done, nor cleaned nor sewed, And everything there will be just to my wishes, For where they don't eat there's no washing dishes; I'll be where loud anthems will always be ringing. But having no voice I'll get rid of singing. Don't mourn for me now, don't mourn me never, For I'm going to do nothing for ever."

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

NORTH LAKE.

Sheep are being picked up very close this fall, all classes selling at fair prices.

For Sale, a half blood Clyde colt two years old, black, weight 1050. Time given if desired.

Two threshing engines and attachments, a wheat separator and a clover huller, met at W. E. Stevenson's Thursday. Enough to thresh the whole family and a flock of mutton sheep besides.

The Election of officers of the Lyceum resulted in an entire change. Mr. C. E. Johnson, Pres.; C. Cooper, V. P.; Mrs. P. W. Watts, Sec.; Mrs. Ed Daniels, Treas. The above will hold office for four evenings. May success attend these changes.

The Hall quilt is disposed of. Senator Gorman being the lucky man. So what he lacks in being covered with political glory he can cover with the quilt. The ladies have done well. Another such boost and the Hall debt will be wiped out.

Farmers are busy with the turnip, beet and cabbage harvest. Pity the dead beet could not be disposed of as easily.

Miss Mattie Glenn is back among us again from her visit at Leslie.

Mrs. Goodwin and son, of Lyndon, called at your scribe's on Friday evening and attended the oyster supper.

Mr. H. M. Twamley is in Columbus, O., attending the twentieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Sullivan, formerly of Unadilla.

The lyceum is now in full blast under the new engineer, with Cushing's Manual for conductor. Question for next Saturday evening is Resolved, That Alcohol has caused more misery than all other evils. Geo. Greening chief on the aff.; R. S. Whalain, chief on the neg. Paying up the annual dues is in order. A large membership is desired.

Miss Lou Glenn began the winter term of school in the Collins' district on Monday last. This is her third term in said district.

Burn Shorman will be janitor for the lyceum this winter.

Distemper is raging among horses in this place and in many other towns in the state, some horses have died. P. M. Watts had one very sick but Dr. Vaughn, of Pinckney, brought it out all right.

The church social at Mr. Charles Cooper's was well attended and a pleasant time was had.

The minister would like a little money just now to lay in the winter supply of coal and provisions. These things can be had cheaper now than later in small lots.

Mrs. Frank May, of Lyndon, is quite sick; has been ailing for some time. Her many friends hope for a speedy recovery to health.

If you care to know who is feeding out the corn and eating the pork, look the corn crib and cellar door.

A brand new girl at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Daniels. Ed. will be apt to debate the question. Is Catnip more useful than Tobacco? this winter.

UNADILLA.

News not plenty. Open lodge last Saturday Evening. Oyster supper at Noble's Hall Thursday night.

Members of Stockbridge lodge called on Unadilla lodge Saturday night.

Three were initiated to our lodge Saturday night, making 35 members and six more to join soon.

REMEDY FOR SLEEPLESSNESS.

Now that some of the wise doctors have decided that one great cause of the nervousness and sleeplessness so prevalent in this country is the habit of man and wife sleeping together, manufacturers are making beds with a board partition down the center. The boards are handsomely painted or grained, and look real pretty. If the boards are real high and a piece of barbed wire is fastened along the top, the new idea will work well.

HE SCORNE THE DOUBLE D.

One of Lincoln's most esteemed friends was old ex-Governor Tod, of Ohio. He was a quaint old character, and Lincoln loved him for his honesty, ability and native shrewdness. One evening when Tod was in town Lincoln invited him over to the white house. They had a long chat together, when Lincoln said:

"Look here, Tod, how is it that you spell your name with only one d? I married a Todd, but she spelled her name with two d's. All of her relatives do the same. I am the first Tod I ever met who spelled his name with so few letters." Old Tod looked at Lincoln for a moment in his peculiarly quizzing manner, and then replied: "Mr. President, God spells his name with only one d, and what is good enough for God is good enough for me." Lincoln used to repeat this story to his most intimate friends, and every time he did so he would laugh until the tears ran down over that throwed but grand face.

A boy of five years was playing railroad with his sister of two and half years. Drawing her upon a footstool he imagined himself both the engine and the conductor. After imitating the puffing noise of the steam, he stopped and called out: New York, and in a moment Patterson, and then Philadelphia. His knowledge of towns was now exhausted, and the next place he cried Heaven. His little sister said, eagerly: "Top, I dess I'll dit out here."

CLIPS.

The completion of the Northern Insane Asylum is announced. It cost $520,000.

The M. E. church at Dexter has been improved by papering, painting and a general renovation.

Prof. H. Sewall has been making some very successful experiments before his classes in the transfusion of blood by means of the apparatus invented by E. E. Allen, of Milan, two sheep being used. He will investigate further as his time permits. Register.

Deacon Lorin Mills, one of An Arbor's oldest pioneer residents, on the eve of leaving that city to spend the remnant of his days with his daughter, Mrs. Kittie Parker, in Kansas, was presented with a gold headed cane by the Congregational Society. Their Pastor, Rev. Mr. Ryder, made the presentation speech. It will seem strange not to see the deacon in his accustomed place in the congregation, the Sabbath School and the prayer meeting. The best wishes of the whole city will follow him to his new home.

WANT OF STABILITY.

One of the Greatest Drawbacks to Prosperity in the Business of Farming.

Some men can not even make up their minds as to how they should go about any necessary business, and consequently perform it in a most inefficient manner. They change their minds with every fancied reverse of fortune, and break up plans that have become settled by lapse of time, so that the breaking up is productive of loss and perhaps disaster. "Unstable as water thou shalt not excel" might be said of many farmers who blame their chosen pursuit for their partial failures, instead of blaming their own mistakes. There is the man who begins business as a dairyman, let us say; he goes into it with a rush; perhaps he succeeds moderately well, but he finds it hard work, needing the closest application. While it is novel he is interested, but as the novelty wears off and he finds he is only making a bare living and is not laying up money, or able to indulge in luxuries, he becomes dispirited and wants a change. He declares that the dairy is an unprofitable business; that bogus butter ruins it, and that something else pays a great deal better. There comes a boom in hops; the price goes up to a dollar a pound and he gets rid of his cows at any sacrifice and buys hop roots and poles, and reads up hop-growing. By the time he has any hops to sell, spared through painful effort from the ice and the mildew and the various other troubles incident to their culture, the price is down to eight or ten cents, and again he is discouraged and on the ragged edge which separates hope from despair. His hop yard is plowed up and he tries something else which is better, but always with the same result. He tires of it, or perhaps utterly fails, which is probably because of the unfortunate want of persistence, and losing at every change and turn, he is soon in distress and goes over to the dark side.

Perhaps there is no other cause of failure that is so prolific and common as this. If we examine into any special business in the grand industry of farming, we find the men entering it mostly of this class, and who have given up pursuits in which thousands of farmers live happily in sunny homes. We find the Florida orange groves in futuro (chiefly hoped for but not seen—as yet) occupied by many such men. Fancy cattle men make money out of them. They are the chief purchasers of novelties in seeds, plants, implements, and all are restless, looking and hoping for some readier way of making money than persistent, effective work. The crowds of frauds, like parasites which live upon diseased matter, prey upon such misguided men and make victims of them, and every disappointment adds to their misery. Those persons who are in a position to know, the editors who receive so many urgent letters of inquiry about this new place, or that new pursuit, and which is best to be done under such circumstances as no stranger could possibly form an opinion of, know how many such unhappy, unstable, undetermined men there are existing, but not living upon farms. A time comes to many of them at last when, like old Eneas, "tossed and driven by adverse fates," they are cast upon some shore, wrecked amid storms and clouds. Then a ray of light breaks through upon them; for they are where they can not get away and must stick at least and, like men, go to work at whatever they are driven to, and persisting by force of adversity they finally find that they have been wasting a life in seeking. But it is thrust upon them in spite of themselves.

Many a man who has thus suffered, or who is now suffering, may look back to his childhood and see how his early training led to this instability and consequent failure. In his boyish pursuits many things were begun but none finished, and as he grew in years the habits grew, and became confirmed. This is a matter for parents to consider. They have the forming of the character of their children, and if any child has fallen into this habit they should correct it at once. To finish what has been begun, to adhere to a choice which has been made after mature and careful consideration, to persist and persevere and never lose sight of the end in view or turn aside from its straight pursuit, are indispensable to success. Think of the men who have made a mark in the history of the time; of the leading farmers, stock breeders, horticulturists, dairymen, all of whom are sought as advisers, leaders, teachers, examples, and what is their history? An unbroken course in pursuit of aims which they have reached, and of ends which have brought prosperity and success and honor to them.

The business of farming has two sides: one lies full in the glow of the warm, bright sunlight; the other is on the shady side, buried in gloom and darkness. Every man can choose which side he will live upon. The path to each diverges from a plain road plainly, so that it can not be mistaken. The business of farming is one in which no man can fail who uses common prudence, who is industrious, persevering, careful, foresighted, economical. It has the world's wants to supply. The farmer feeds and clothes the world, and every product of the soil has its waiting consumers.—Henry Stewart, in Rural New Yorker.

"I wish Columbus had never been born" was what a London merchant said when he heard that the explorer had left for New York with all the assets.

If people troubled with colds, will take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral before going to church they will avoid coughing. The Pectoral soothes and heals the irritated tissues, and controls all disposition to cough.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla acts directly and promptly, purifying and enriching the blood, improving the appetite, strengthening the nerves, and invigorating the system. It is, in the truest sense, an alternative medicine. Every invalid should give it a trial.

After Forty years' experience in the preparation of more than One Hundred Thousand applications for patents in the United States and Foreign countries, the publishers of the Scientific American continue to act as solicitors for patents, caveats, trade-marks, copyrights, etc., for the United States, and to obtain patents in Canada, England, France, Germany, and all other countries. Their experience is unequalled and their facilities are unsurpassed. Drawings and specifications prepared and filed in the Patent Office on short notice. Terms very reasonable. No charge for examination of models or drawings. Advice by mail free. Patents obtained through Munns & Co. are noticed in the Scientific American, which has the largest circulation and is the most influential newspaper of its kind published in the world. The advantages of such a notice every patentee understands. This large and splendidly illustrated newspaper is published WEEKLY at $3.00 a year, and is admitted to be the best paper devoted to science, mechanics, inventions, engineering works, and other departments of industrial progress, published in any country. It contains the names of all patents and titles of every invention patented each week. Try it four months for one dollar. Sold by all newsdealers. If you have an invention to patent write to Munns & Co., publishers of Scientific American, 361 Broadway, New York. Handbook about patents mailed free.

Don't Experiment.

You cannot afford to waste time in experimenting when your lungs are in danger. Consumption always seems at first only a cold. Do not permit any dealer to impose upon you with some cheap imitation of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, but be sure you get the genuine. Because he can make more profit he may tell you he has something just as good, or just the same. Don't be deceived, but insist on getting Dr. King's New Discovery, which is guaranteed to give relief in all Throat, Lung and Chest affections. Trial bottles free at R. S. Armstrong's Drug Store.

The Great German Doctor.

The remarkable phase in the practice of Dr. Peter W. Schmidt (frequently called Dr. Pete) is, he never asked one to describe their disease; his intuitive perceptions being so strong he can tell any one their trouble without asking a question. His success is phenomenal. His practice enormous. He is sought after by hundreds wherever he goes, because he cures when every physician and remedy has failed. The giving of his great medicine, Golden Seal Bitters, which has made his great success, to the world marks a new era in medicine. Blood, Liver, Kidney and Stomach disorders yield to this Master of Disease and its wonderful cures are regarded as phenomenal, but the germ of truth ever says, "What has been may be again." We say to the sick and discouraged give Golden Seal Bitters a trial! It is all we ask! They will speak for themselves. Sold by R. S. Armstrong.

Only 35 Cents.

So confident are we that Dr. Pete's 35 cent Cough Cure will not disappoint the most sanguine expectations of a single broken down consumptive invalid, that we warrant it. Had we not the most confidence in its virtues we would not think of offering it as we do. Sold by R. S. Armstrong.

Excitement in Michigan.

If you would enjoy your dinner and are prevented by Dyspepsia, use Ayer's Dyspepsia Tablets. They are a positive cure for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Flatulency and Constipation. We guarantee them. 25 and 50 cents. R. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

For I Don't Care.

Dull, tired feeling, impoverished blood, dull pains in back and head, tantalizing, skin eruptions, Kemp's Sarsaparilla never fails to give relief. We always guarantee it. Price $1.00 per bottle. 23 April 1 year. R. S. ARMSTRONG.

Saved His Life.

Mr. D. I. Wilcoxson, of Horse Cave, Ky., says he was, for many years, badly afflicted with Phthisis, also Diabetes; the pains were almost unendurable and would sometimes almost throw him into convulsions. He tried Electric Bitters and got relief from first bottle and after taking six bottles was entirely cured, and had gained in flesh eighteen pounds. Says he positively believes he would have died, had it not been for the relief afforded by Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by R. S. Armstrong.

Take Kemp's Liver.

Pills for biliousness, headache, sallow complexion. Price 25 cents. 23 April 1 year. R. S. ARMSTRONG.

One Be the Cured Ex.

A. H. Thompson, Rockford, Ill., writes: "I have been troubled with catarrh for years, nothing helped me until I tried Painless Catarrh cure. I followed directions and with less than one bottle, I am cured." Painless (extract of flax) Catarrh cure will positively and permanently cure Bronchial Catarrh, Acute or Chronic Catarrh, also those cold and Hay fever. Large bottles $1.00.

STATE NEWS.

The Side Walk Act Unconstitutional.

Circuit court judges seldom decide upon the constitutionality of the legislature's acts, but in the case of Deborah Jennison against the City of Detroit, Judge Jennison deemed it plainly in his line to do so. The plaintiff sued the city to recover damages suffered by reason of a defective sidewalk. The case was heard upon defendant's demurrer to the declaration, based on the ground that the act of 1853, relative to the collection of damages sustained by reason of defective public "highways, streets, bridges, crosswalks and culverts," amended so as to cover damages sustained by reason of defective "sidewalks," is unconstitutional for the reason that the two new sections are not covered by the title, and which phase of the question is supported by section 24, article 4 of the constitution, which provides "that no law shall embrace more than one subject, which shall be expressed in its title." Under the original act of 1853, No. 244, damages could not be recovered for injuries sustained by reason of defective sidewalks, but the legislature of 1883, with its proverbial legal shortsightedness, attached a tail to his kite by including in the body of the act the word "sidewalks," without mentioning "sidewalks" in its title, a violation of the above constitutional provision. The title of the act of 1883 is an act "to amend certain sections of the act of 1853, but does not refer to or cover the two new sections, 6 and 7, of the law of 1853. Section 6 provides that towns, cities, etc., shall not be liable except under the provisions of the act and abrogates the rule governing common law liability. Section 7 limits the amount recoverable according to the population. Under it $300 can be recovered from a population of 500; $600 from a population of 1,000 to 1,500; $1,000 from a population of 1,500 to 2,000, and $1,800 from a population of 2,000 or over. It also provides that the owners of lots abutting on the sidewalks shall not be liable to the municipalities on account of any judgment recovered for such injury.

In deciding upon the demurrer Judge Jennison held as follows: "The general words at the conclusion of the title do not extend the scope of the act, for the reason that its purpose is expressly limited to the amendment of the four sections of the old act and no other. The last two sections certainly create limitations and establish conditions and exemptions which cannot be inferred from the title. By these sections the legislature gave a new right of action to persons injured which they did not have before, and it imposed a new liability upon cities. It must therefore, be presumed that they intended only to confer this new right subject to the conditions and limitations which the whole act contains. Unless they can be treated as invalid, without reference to the other provisions, the entire act must fail. I do not see how this can be done without doing manifest violence to the express intention of the legislature. Its express purpose was to limit and restrict the amount of liability upon a specific basis of population. It is to be presumed that the legislature would not have passed the new act had it not contained the restrictive sections. In my judgment the new sections are invalid and are so mutually connected with and dependent upon the remaining sections sought to be amended that the entire act must fail. The case comes within the established rule that where the provisions of an act are so dependent upon each other, that if all cannot be carried into effect, the legislature would not have enacted the residue independently. Twenty-ninth Michigan, page 108; Cooley, Constitutional Limitations 179; 13th Wisconsin, page 398; 2 Gray, page 99."

There are a number of cases brought against the City of Detroit depending upon the decision of this one in the supreme court, and its decision is also of equal interest in every city or village in Michigan which affords sidewalks.

Our Plain Lands.

R. C. Kedzie, professor of chemistry at the state agricultural college, has been prospecting this week through Iosco county in an endeavor to ascertain whether the plain lands of Huron shore can be made to produce crops profitably. Mr. Kedzie will carry back to Lansing with him specimens of soil from the plains for the purpose of analysis. It is proposed by the state board of agriculture to call a meeting of the farmers of Iosco county in February at Tawas to discuss the question of the cultivation of plain lands and decide upon some feasible plan of inducing the coming legislature to make an appropriation for determining just what our plain lands can best be used for. Further information and discussion on the subject will be made by The Monitor later. During this time our columns are open to the discussion of the ideas of any who may feel inclined to use them. We welcome the discussion of this subject which in a few years will be one of great importance to the residents of Iosco county.—Lakeside Monitor.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, MICHIGAN.
LANSING, NOV. 9, 1886.
Thursday, the 25th inst., is hereby designated as the day for our accustomed annual thanksgiving, and I earnestly recommend that the day be observed by acts of charity; by assembling at the usual places for divine worship; by gathering our families and kindred together in our homes, and as far as practicable abstaining from the transaction of business.

Let us humbly thank our Heavenly Father for the peace, prosperity and health we enjoy, and ask him to continue these mercies unto us.

RUSSELL A. ALGER.
By the Governor.
H. A. CONANT, Secretary of State.

Guilt of Murder.

In the trial of Oliver Rosecrans, charged with the killing of Hugh O'Hara at St. Charles last summer, Judge Gage of Saginaw, gave the case to the jury on the 5th inst., who retired at 10 o'clock, and after being out for four hours returned a verdict of guilty of murder.

The murdered man and his brother, both farmers, left St. Charles for home in the evening, the victim being intoxicated and boisterous. About a mile from town they met Rosecrans and two others, and Hugh O'Hara shouted at them, when they got out of the wagon and had some words with him, and young Rosecrans knocked him down and kicked him in the stomach from the effects of which death followed soon after.

Ex-Banker Wadsworth, of Ishpeming.

The state supreme court reversed the finding in the case of the people against D. F. Wadsworth who was the leading banker of Ishpeming and failed on January 3, 1884, for $105,000. Of this sum $49,000 had been deposited the same week as taxes by some of the large mining corporations. He was deputy city treasurer and owed the city $63,000. After four trials, three of which were quashed on legal technicalities, he was found guilty and fined $50. He carried the case to the supreme court and the verdict was reversed as stated. Wadsworth has recently become interested in mining property which promises to make him a wealthy man again.

Crops in Michigan.

The crop report for November is made up from returns received from 636 correspondents, representing 533 townships. Of these returns 449 are from 343 townships in the southern four tiers of counties. The area seeded to wheat this fall in the southern four tiers of counties is three per cent less, and in the northern counties two per cent more than was seeded in 1885, indicating a wheat acreage in the state not quite equal to that of 1885. The condition of wheat Nov. 1 was 82, comparison being with the vitality and growth of average years. In southern counties the condition is a full average and in northern counties about five per cent above an average in 1885. The condition Nov. 1 in the state was 96; in 1884 106; in 1883 88 and in 1882 92 per cent of an average. Damage by the Hessian fly is reported from 25 to 28 counties in the southern four tiers. The total number of bushels of wheat reported marketed in the three months of August, September and October is 4,470,151.

Corn will yield in the state about 20 bu. per acre. This is, perhaps, below the average in seasons of less drought, but the quality is excellent, and the proportion of soft corn less than usual.

The area of clover seed harvested is 89 per cent of area harvested in 1885, but the yield per acre is nearly equal to the yield in that year.

The yield per acre of potatoes is in southern counties, 75 per cent, and in the northern counties, 70 per cent, of a full average crop. The acreage in the state is 7 per cent below the acreage of 1885.

Horses, cattle, sheep and swine are generally reported in good, healthy and thrifty condition.

Arrested for Alleged Forgery.

Mrs. Mary J. Frink of Ceresco, delegate to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Jackson, was arrested while the convention was in session by Sheriff J. C. Barber of Calhoun county for the alleged forgery of $1,500. Mrs. Frink is engaged in the millinery business at Ceresco. Some time ago she borrowed $1,500 from Leroy L. Lewis of that place, giving a mortgage on village lots. It was discovered a day or two ago that the mortgage was recorded as discharged with L. L. Lewis's signature, which Mr. Lewis claims he did not sign, and has not received the money. Mrs. Frink is a fine appearing lady of 55 or 60 years of age and strongly maintains her innocence. The sheriff states that the forgery may have been the work of some lawyer. The arrest was made without the knowledge of the convention. The sheriff took his prisoner to Marshall.

Interesting to Lumbermen.

Michigan and Canadian lumbermen will be interested in the fact that plans are being made for the deepening of the channel of Niagara river from Buffalo to Tonawanda to eighteen feet. There is barely fourteen feet at present and the channel is so circuitous that the passage of vessels heavily laden is attended with much difficulty and danger.

Though it has often been desirable to load boats bound for Tonawanda more deeply than is the present custom the narrowness and shallowness of the course has deterred owners and shippers. United States Engineer Mann has been over the course and will report favorably on the proposition for improvement.

Officially Counted.

Official returns have now been received from every county in the state excepting Alger, Chippewa, Menominee and Oscoda. The total footings are: Luce, 179,665; Yapele, 170,296; Dickie, 24,778. Luce over Yapele 9,369. The counties to hear from are about equally divided politically.

MICHIGAN ITEMS.

Eugene Hunt while intoxicated attempted to shoot a blind man at Hunt's tavern, five miles east of Kalamazoo. Joseph Terry, an old man, interfered and Hunt shot at him, the ball passing close to his head. He pulled the revolver on him again and Terry knocked it out of his hand with a stick of wood. Hunt then assaulted Terry pounding his head to jelly. Hunt was arrested charged with attempted murder.

D. F. Wadsworth, the Ishpeming banker who failed three years ago for $165,000 owing the city $63,000 as deputy city treasurer, has recently become interested in mining property that may make him wealthy again. This is not his only luck, however, it took four trials before he was convicted of crookedness and fined $50, and even this verdict was last week reversed by the supreme court.

The new asylum at Traverse City has been completed and accepted by the trustees of Michigan asylums.

The Smith lumber company is building a railroad from Kalkaska to Whitewater township, Grand Traverse county. The company will cut 120,000,000 feet of pine into car and bridge timber at their mills in Kalkaska and give steady employment to not less than 100 men. They have the largest and most valuable tract of choice timber in northern Michigan. It will take six years to cut it, with increased facilities for manufacturing.

Eugene Hunt, while intoxicated, attempted to shoot a blind man at Hunt's tavern, five miles from Kalamazoo. An old man named Terry came to the rescue and got his head badly pounded by Hunt, who was arrested charged with attempt to murder.

Five years ago, William Storks of Saginaw town, then a boy of 14 or 15, met with a painful accident by falling while he had a bottle and an ax in his hands. The bottle was broken and his left hand badly cut across the palm. Several pieces of glass were gotten out, but he has frequently since had trouble with the hand. Yesterday morning he noticed a singular looking place on his wrist from which the blood flowed quite freely. He came to this city and consulted a physician, who removed a triangular piece of glass from the wrist, the sides of which were half an inch long. It was slightly curved and apparently a part of the shoulder of the bottle. The piece came out about three inches from where it went in.—Saginaw Courier.

Permanent Exposition.

The secretary of the board of permanent exposition of the three Americas in Washington in 1892 has received letters of acceptance from the below named members ex-officio of the board: The secretary of Alabama state grange; the secretary of the Iowa state agricultural society; the mayor of Dubuque, Ia.; the president and secretary of the Lawrence, Kas., chamber of commerce; the presidents and secretaries of the Boston board of trade and the Zanesville, O., board of trade; the master of the Tennessee state grange; the president and secretary of the tobacco association of Lynchburg, Va.; and the president and secretary of the New England shoe and leather association.

The secretary of the exposition board is in receipt of a letter from Major Powell director of the geological survey in which he says that a feature of great interest might be made by collecting say twenty groups of the most distinctive Indian races in the country, with their habitations, implements, etc., and adds: "Among the tribes selected should be Eskimos, with their summer igloo dwellings; Haidas, with their puncheon houses and totem posts; Wintuns or Mandas, with their earth lodges; Zunis, in a stone pueblo, etc., and the Indians should have with them ponies, dogs, caged eagles, caged turkeys, etc. To the greater number of people of the United States the Indian is but an historical tradition. The few scattered Indians seen in civilization no longer illustrate traces, habits and customs—the Indian in his primeval home. It is yet possible to make such an exhibition, though difficult; but in a few years more it will be impossible."

Taxing National Banks.

In the United States circuit court in Cleveland, Judges Jackson and Walker decided a series of suits, entered by 13 national banks of Cleveland, Youngstown and Elyria against the treasurers of Cuyahoga, Mahoning and Lorain counties, to prevent the collection of alleged excessive taxes. The banks claimed that the rate of taxation placed upon their capital stock is much higher than that upon other investments. They also asked that the individual liability of stockholders may be offset on the tax list against the value of the bank stock as placed on the tax duplicate. The court sustained both claims made by the banks. The state and counties will lose many thousands of dollars. The treasurers will appeal to the United States supreme court.

Gold and Silver.

The director of the mint, Dr. James Kimball, has issued his annual report. The gold coinage for the year ending 6, 1886, amounted to $34,077,380, being $100,000 more than the previous year. The coinage was $30,022,347, of which $25,905 was of dollar coins. The tendency of the value of the silver dollar has been steadily downward since 1873, and during the past year the decline has been more marked. The value of gold and silver wasted at the mint in the process of manufacture was $19,206. Gold bullion imported amounted to $4,073,438; amount exported, $27,365,040. Silver imported $4,151,438; exported, $10,780,650. Of $354,845 consisted of trade dollars. The estimated amount of gold coin in the United States is $348,250,000. Silver reaches $398,784,223. The estimated stock of coin and bullion in the United States is $903,027,304. The production of silver increased. The United States produced two-fifths of the precious metals of the world.

The Smithsonian Institute.

Prof. Baird, director of the Smithsonian institute, in his annual estimates for the museum, asks congress to appropriate $250,000 with which to begin the construction of a new building to flank the Smithsonian building on the west. As the present museum flanks it on the east. This will carry to completion the front and wing of the new building, and another nearly equal sum will probably be required to finish the structure. If the project is carried out, the project is a committee of congress meet with approval money devoted to the construction of a new building, it is said, will be a contribution of so much toward the necessary delay for that proposition; but in any event the new structure is held to be an immediate and pressing necessity.

CHAPTER V

CHAPTER VI

The light of the stars seemed to have passed into the blue eyes that still held mine.

"Yours is a curious story," he said thoughtfully. "I must have a long talk with you about it."

I felt even then that I should like him to talk with me forever. The very sound of his voice delighted me. It was so rich and musical. He looked round with a smile.

"May I be permitted to ask," he said, "what Gracia is doing out in the cold on Christmas Eve?"

"I came out to look at the snow and the stars," I answered; "it is such a beautiful Christmas Eve!"

"I love Christmas Eve," he said slowly, "and this is an ideal one. I have not seen so much snow for years. Do you like the snow, Gracia?"

"I could not tell you how much," was my reply, and it seemed to please him.

The way in which he pronounced my name made it sound unutterably sweet in my ears. Suddenly it occurred to me that, although he had spoken of Lady Caryl, I could not be sure of his identity unless I asked him who he was. It must be Sir Adrian; still I had better ask the question.

"Are you Sir Adrian Caryl?" I said.

"Yes," he replied; "and a very fortunate man I am to succeed to this grand old heritage. Do you not think so?"

"I do indeed. I am glad it has come to you," I answered.

"We reached Heron's Nest earlier than we expected," he went on. "Like you, Gracia, I like to be out in the starlight, and so came here."

"We call this the postern-gate," I remarked.

"This is part of the old house that was built in Edward the Third's reign."

"You know Heron's Nest well?" he said smiling.

"I know and love every nook and corner of it!" I cried. "I have lived here the greater part of my life."

"It is a grand old place," he said gently.

"But," he added quickly, "I must not keep you standing in the cold, Gracia; let us move on. Your story is indeed a strange one," he continued, as we walked on slowly, "and, I must say, it puzzles me. There must be some means of clearing up the mystery; and, if it is to be done, I will do it." He held out his hand and took mine. "You must have been most lonely and forlorn, poor child!" he said.

"Now remember you have a friend. I am interested in you and will take care of you, if you will trust me."

"Trust him? My heart had already gone out to him. I could only murmur words of thanks and gratitude.

"I must talk over the matter with Lady Caryl," he said; "she will know what is best to be done. I am sure she will be kind to you."

I looked at him, unable to speak, simply because I wanted to say so much. I wanted to tell him how I blessed him for his kind words, and how fervently I hoped that I might remain at Heron's Nest, so that I might see him now and again.

Oh, fair and beautiful star, that had brought me to him whom I loved from the first moment I saw him, and whom I shall love until I die!

It was a new world into which I entered. I passed in at the postern gate, leaving him there looking at me, and I left my old life far behind. The stars seemed to shine more brightly, and something I had never known before was beating in my happy heart and making my cheeks burn. I did not know why it was, and I did not stop to ask myself. Then before I reached the house, I heard the chiming of the bells over the snow, the same sweet old chime—"Christmas is come—Christmas is come!" Christmas had indeed come to me and brought me a friend.

The radiance of the stars was in my eyes when I went back to the housekeeper's room. She looked at me in wonder. She had never seen my face brightened with happiness before.

"Gracia," she said severely, "where have you been! You must not run wild about the place now. You had better keep in your own room as much as possible until we know what my lady wishes."

The words did not hurt me, because I had the echo of those others lingering in my ears. My heart could not ache, because I had found a friend.

"I should like to see Lady Caryl," was all I said.

"They will pass through the hall as they go to the dining-room," she answered—"both Sir Adrian and my lady."

Sir Adrian! If the worthy housekeeper could have guessed how my heart beat at the sound of that name she would have been astonished.

I stood in the deep shadows of the gallery and saw them pass. He seemed even handsomer than he had seemed before. She was a haughty and imperious-looking woman. For the first time in my life I saw a fashionable lady in evening-dress, and Lady Caryl's velvet and diamonds entranced me.

Then I went to my room, and spent the remainder of Christmas Eve in watching the snow and the stars through the window; but I was happy, because my heart was warm with love. I smile now, with tears in my eyes, when I think of the fervor and the passion of that love—how I recalled Sir Adrian's face, his voice; how I kissed the hand he had touched; how unutterably glad and happy I was; how I knelt down at last when the Christmas bells had ceased chiming and thanked Heaven for having guided me to happiness by the light of a star.

I remembered the next morning the housekeeper's warning that I had better keep in my room; but I had some feathered friends, robin-breasts, who always expected me to feed them. They congregated on the lawn every morning, looking out for bread-crumbs. The breakfast-room opened onto the lawn, and I thought I should have time to feed the birds before her ladyship came down.

The sun shone brightly on the snow, the morning was a lovely one. My face, when I looked at it in the mirror, was so radiantly happy that I was half afraid lest anyone should note the change in it. The pretty rebreasts were gathered round me, eating the crumbs greedily, when suddenly I heard one of the long French windows open. Looking up, I saw Lady Caryl. With one white jeweled hand she beckoned me to her, and I went.

"Who are you?" she asked, laying stress on the word "you."

The inevitable question, and the inevitable answer—

"I am Gracia."

Her face darkened.

"Gracia" she repeated, in a displeased tone. "I understood that she was a chanced one."

Come into the room. I wish to speak to you. Close the window; it is cold."

"I obeyed her, and stood before her."

"So you are Gracia!" she said. "My son was telling me about you last evening. It is a strange story, one that I do not at all understand. Do you really mean to say that you know nothing about yourself, that you have no clue to your own history, your parentage?"

"None whatever," I replied.

"It is generally believed that you are a daughter of the late Mrs. Blewcome, a person, I understand, who was very reserved and reticent. What do you think yourself?"

"I do not think it is true," I answered, "because I can remember faintly some part of my life before I ever saw Mrs. Blewcome. I have a story;" I continued eagerly; "I am homeless, nameless, and friendless, but I have a story." My heart smote me as I used the word "friendless," and I grew warm with the memory of the promise made to me.

The cold proud eyes looked searchingly into mine.

"Why are you so sure of that?" she asked.

"The Squire told me so on the very afternoon of the day he died, and he promised me that, when he came home in the evening, he would tell me his history. He said," I added incautiously, "that he was going to 'right a wrong.'"

"To do what?" asked Lady Caryl incredulously.

"To right a wrong," I replied.

"What wrong might that be?" she asked coldly.

"I do not know. If the Squire had lived a few hours longer, I should have known my history; as it is, I am utterly ignorant of it."

The pride and coldness deepened in her face.

"You do not suppose that the Squire had wronged you in any way, do you?" she asked.

"No; I have never thought of such a thing," was my answer.

"It will not do for you to encourage absurd ideas, such as thinking that the Squire has done you a wrong, or that you have any right to remain here."

"I have had no such thought, madam," I replied. "I have never had one thought of the Squire which has not been kind and grateful," I said warmly.

"Probably. There is nothing so hurtful to a young mind as indulging in false ideas. Try to steer clear of doing that. Romance is a fatal thing; no girl ever succeeds who is romantic."

I thought of the postern-gate and blushed furiously. What would her ladyship say if she knew of the meeting there!

Lady Caryl took the blush as a sign of guilt.

"You are romantic, I see, and I am sorry for it; but I make some allowance for circumstances. Of course you have been dreaming that you are some great lady—that you have been stolen from your parents, who are anxiously waiting in their ancestral home to welcome you."

If she had been any one but Sir Adrian's mother, I should have hated her, she was so proud and scornful, so cold and haughty. She evidently mistrusted me.

"The Squire was good enough to exercise charity towards you for some years, but his fancy it was done unconsciously. I do not think he knew you were here."

I made no reply.

"I should like you to tell me yourself who you think you are," she continued; "tell me frankly."

"I have never been able to form an idea. The most daring thought I have entertained is that I may be the daughter of a friend of the Squire; but I shall never know now. My story lies buried with the only person who knew it."

"You seem to have been pretty well educated," she said.

And then I told her of my hope of being able to live by teaching music.

"You play and sing well then," she said. "I am delighted to hear it. I care more for music than for anything else. Now tell me all that passed between the Squire and yourself during the few days you spent together."

I told her all—except that he had kissed me.

"So he died in your arms," she said more gently. "That certainly gives you a claim on us. I must think over what had better be done for you. In the meantime, if I want you to play and sing to me, you will oblige me, I am sure."

"I will do anything to oblige you," I replied, thinking to myself that it was because she was Sir Adrian's mother, and not by any means because she was Lady Caryl.

She unbent a little before I left her; but my eyes filled with tears as I went back to the lawn. She did not ask me to pass through the room.

It was a rule at Heron's nest that every member of the household who could be spared should attend church on Christmas Day. I did not go with the servants, nor, as a matter of course, with the family. I had a seat in the church at some distance from the great manor-house pew, but I could see every one in it. I saw the proud handsome lady who was like, yet so unlike, her son. I saw him, and the glory of the Christmas morning to me was complete.

Ah, the sweet calm happiness of that Christmas morning! It was Christmas to me because I had found a friend. And my friend was one to be proud of; in the church there was no one like him. His head towered above all the others.

The Vicar's wife and daughter were of course at church. Their seat was near the manor-house pew. I watched—may Heaven forgive me!—with jealous eyes. I saw that Miss Sale was coquetishly conscious of Sir Adrian's presence. She really looked beautiful in her costume of velvet and fur and prettily-trimmed bonnet. Evidently she admired him. I saw her look at him several times; but he seemed unaware that she was gazing at him. And then, suddenly, while the choir was singing of "peace on earth," I found that he was watching me, that his blue eyes were fixed intently on me. Ah, happy yet miserable me! I tried first to appear unconscious of it, then a crimson blush dyed my cheeks, and I buried my face in my hands.

At length the service ended, and the people left the church. Her ladyship entered the manor-house carriage that was in waiting for her, and drove off home; but Sir Adrian joined Mr. Sale, and I saw the Vicar introduce him to his wife and daughter. I saw too how the proud face brightened for him. Was I jealous? I caught myself wishing that I had fair hair and a dainty bonnet trimmed with holly-berries, that I had a dress of velvet and fur. I found myself weeping bitter tears that I was not as other girls; and yet—it was the happiest day I had ever known!

Pain in the Side

Is a symptom of disease. It may be caused by Rheumatism, or by Neuralgia, but it usually indicates a disordered condition of the Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys. Ayer's Sarsaparilla corrects the action of the vital organs, and removes every trace of disease from the system.

Last fall and winter I suffered from a dull, heavy, pain in my side. I did not notice it much, at first, but it gradually grew worse until it became almost unbearable. During the latter part of this time, disorders of the Stomach and Liver increased my troubles. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after faithfully continuing the use of this medicine for some months, the pain disappeared and I was completely cured.—Mrs. Augusta A. Forbush, Haverhill, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,
Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

Don't trifle with any Throat or Lung Disease. If you have a Cough or Cold, or the children are threatened with Croup or Whooping Cough, use Ayer's English Remedy and prevent further trouble. It is a positive cure, and we guarantee it. Price 10 and 50c.

Old Folk's Insurance.

We regret to learn that the Old People's Insurance Company, of Elkhart, Ind., has withdrawn its support from Old People's Co. at Benton Harbor, Mich., as it will necessitate the closing up of the affairs of the latter in the near future. We understand that the fault lies entirely with the latter, and the loss should therefore be borne by them.

The "Old Elkhart" is so well and favorably known among our people that any commendation from us is entirely unnecessary, and the members who stick to it will never have cause for regret.

It has been thoroughly tested and proven itself worthy.

There are many new fangled concerns starting up but our advice is give them a wide berth, and stick to that which you know to be sound.

If those who made applications to the Elkhart society and received Benton Harbor policies know when they are well off they will change for Elkhart policies and stick to the old Reliable, and not be gulled by the officers of a weak concern, who are in hopes of continuing for a time and thus make a few dishonest dollars out of you.

Get something you are sure of and stick to it.

We have a fine line of Christmas Slippers for Ladies and Gentlemen.

"Prescott had the genius to invest the dry facts of history with the charms of fiction; and yet he never sacrifices truth to the graces of style."—WESTLARK.

"It is one of the most pleasing as well as most valuable contributions that have been made to modern history; it is the only one that gives us a faithful and sufficient picture of a period so momentous as the latter half of the fifteenth century."—London Athenaeum.

"One of the finest histories of modern times, written by an author of rare felicity of diction, fervor of imagination, accuracy of statement, and exquisite beauty of style. Every one who reads at all should read Prescott."—Probyrican, Philadelphia, Pa.
