With a deathly pale face Sir Charles Russell had offered in court to call witnesses who would prove that the she took a seat in the dock and swayed statement made by the accused was per-fectly true, and that Justice Stephen had backwards and forwards in her chair as if about to fall. She was evidently ill and refused to hear this important testimony. The general impression left by the interview is that the jurors allowed themselves to be swayed and biased by the Judge Stephen, in his charge to the jury, said there was strong and distress-ful evidence to show that the prisoner had grossly one-sided summing-up of the judge, and that they gave a hasty verdict without a motive for ridding herself of her husband. This could be found in giving the case and the evidence any perher infidelity, which had rendered it sonal consideration.

CHAIRMAN FOSTER. year figured on 11,-000,000, but that was owing to a mis-apprehension of last year's commistoner. By the terms of the treaty of '68 we were to obtain the consent of three fourths of all male Indians over 18 years. There are 23,000 Indians on the reservation, and 5,000 of these are men. So, you see, that merely the clerical work of obtaining signatures, had all been willing, was not little. "The Indians are inclined to run about a reat deal, and this gave us a vast amount of rouble. At no time did we have the requisite three-fourths at any meeting, I believe, but we would do the best we could with those presen and leave the rolls with the agents. At other imes the agency rolls would be found imper-

feet, and new and unbeard-of In-dians would turn up after we thought we had the three-fourths consent. The opposition we met nearly every-where was generally easily overcome, except at Standing Rock and Pine Ridge agencies. The first of these is Sitting Bull's tribe's headquarters. It is wonderful what reputations some of these lazy, dirty and, insignificant Indians have in the East. Sitting Bull is known everywhere. On the reservation he is one of

The Riggs Industrial School at this agency is a model. Catholic schools are found at all the agencies; the girls are learning to sew and to cook and the boys are rapidly earning trades. There is also a day school in each camp. The sale of the land will put the Government in a position to greatly help the Indians, but it must be with the aid of the best agents. I am convinced that the Indians are capable of being greatly advanced, and with proper work I think tribal relations would be extinct in one generation. The Dead Bodies of Five Persons Found in Montana-All Had Been Shot in the Back-No Clew to the Horrible Crime, and the Details Are Very Meager.

HELENA, M. T., Aug. 8.-The finding of the dead bodies of Oilie Jones, his wife and two other persons is reported from Corallis, a small town in Butter Root valley n Western Montana A young girl who had been shot in the hip was also found on Big Hole mountain. All of the dead had been shot in the back. A party was formed to bring in the bodies. No further details of the affair could be obtained, as Corvallis is without telegraphic facilities. Jones was married at Missoula three weeks ago and was on the road to his ranch.

The accident was a peculiar one. Booth & Flynn were testing a thirty-inch naturalgas main, which they had laid for the Monongahela Natural-Gas Company, with compressed air before turning on the natural gas. They ran the pressure up to seventy five pounds to the square inch, when the dead pipe on the end of the pipe blew out, scattering debris in every direction. Several hundred workmen em-ployed in the iron mills near by were ust returning home, and a number of them had stopped along the trench to watch the experiment. They were struck by the debris and flying missiles. The pipe was braced with heavy timbers and these were hurled into the crowd with terrific force. The workmen and spectators were thrown down by the force of the explosion and one of them was hurled against a brick house and his neck was broken. A general stampede followed the explosion and a sene of the wildest excitement ensued. The cries of the injured could be heard for several squares. The dead were conveyed their homes and those of the injured who were unable to walk were taken to a hospital. The killed are: John Miller, single, aged 23, and John O'Conner, single, aged 25. Those seriously injured are : John Greiner, married, terribly cut, bruised and hurt internally, will die; Henry Reich, a boy, skull fractured and injured internally, will die; John Braney, a millwright, mternally injured and head cut; William Green, badly cut and bruised, thought to LAFAYETTE, Ind., Aug. 10. - Mrs. Laura Wolford (colored), exhibited as a freak in museums; died at the hospital here Friday of dropsy of the heart. She had been ill for three weeks and was removed to the hospital Thursday on a dray. It is thought that her removal hastened her death. Mrs. Wolford was born in Maryland and was 31 years old last Christmas, and weighed on her last birthday 9041 pounds. She was undoubtedly the largest woman in the world. She was married at the age of 13 and seven children were born to her, only one of whom, a little boy, survives. She was first placed on exhibition at Baltimore last September, and her im-mense size at once made her famous. Preparations are now being made for the burial. Mrs. Wolford was a devout Catholic and will be buried in the German Catholic Cemetery. She died almost penniless.

if the Metropolitans, are the champion double scullers for the ensuing year. The championship went by default Saturday afternoon, the bow oarsman of the Bayside crew, which rowed a dead heat with the Metropolitan + Friday, being unable to leave his bed. This flasco closed the programme of the National regatta, and the remainder of the day's events were under the auspices of the Mississippi Valley Association.

The visitors were more thoroughly satisfied than on either of the other two days, as, with one exception, the races were three-quarters of a mile and return, leaving the oarsmen in fair view for nearly the whole course; and, in addition, the weather was delightful for aquatic sport . In the junior singles race Shea, of the Crescent club, won in 11:4214, with Lovell (Nautilus) second. Lovell was the favorite in the betting owing to his magnificent performance in the trial heat on Friday. Charges were made that he sold the race, and the association will make a thorough investigation of

The race for junior doubles was won by the St. Paul club, with the Minnesota team second, time, 10:36%. The Atalantas defeated the Torontos in the senior fouroared shell contest; time, 9:58%. In the senior singles event Dennis Donahue came in first, with W. S. McDowell a close second; 10:48%. The race for senior pair oars was taken by the Garfield Beach entry, Detroit having been disqualified; time, 11:40. The Garfields were outrowed by the Detroits, who came in in 10:55, but failed to round the stake, and the Garfields entered a protest which was entertained. The senior doubles was a walk over for the Metropolitans. They had as opponents the Catlins and the Sylvans, but they made but a poor showing. The Mets crossed the line in 10:04. The closing contest was that of six-oar barges between the Iroquois Pulimans and Westerns, of St. Louis. The last named won in 4:34%. Iroquois second. The Mississippi Valley Association of Oars-men on Saturday elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, W. P. Moore, Moline; Vice-President, Governor Arthur L. Thomas, Salt Lake City; Secretary and Treasurer, E. C. Brown, Chicaro. The executive committee of the Nations Association of Oarsmen also met and elected the following officers: H. W. moved in short order. I had been losing s good many chickens one fall, and supposing that they were being carried off by foxes I set a trap for Reynard. The morning after setting the trap I went out to look for it, and it was nowhere to be seen. It had been chained to a small stake in the ground, and the stake was also missing.

Belleving that the fox, although its cunning had not saved it from the trap, had been smart enough to pull up the stake in some way, and then make off with trap. chain, stake and all, I made a pretty thorough search in the woods around about there, but could not find any trace of fox or missing property.

"As I was returning home I heard a great commotion among a big flock of crows the woods a quarter of a mile up the mountain. The crows were cawing in such curious chorus that their cries could have been heard for a mile. The birds were circling around the tree tops in one parucular spot, and frequently a number of them would dart viciously down through the trees toward the ground. I was curious to know what could be causing this unusual proceeding among the crows, for they are birds that do not fool their time away for othing. I walked up the mountain, and as I approached the spot where the crow circus was going on, the tumult among the crows increased. When I arrived within easy gunshot of the spot the flock withdrew to a more distant part of the woods and chattered in a way that left no doubt of their having been intensely disturbed by some unpleasant experience.

"I walked on, and had taken but a few steps when I heard a sound as of a chain being dragged along on the ground, and instantly concluded that it was the chain of my missing trap. I momentarily expected to see the fox, hampered by the trap on his leg, come into sight, believing that he had been attacked by the crows, who had discovered him in his crippled condition. Im. agine my surprise, then, when, instead of the fox making his appearance, an enor-mous bald eagle strutted out from behind a big tree, dragging the trap, chain and stake. The jaws of the trap were fastened on one leg of the great bird.

"I had with me an ordinary shot-gun with which I had expected to kill the for if I found it in my trap. When the eagle saw me it rose with great difficulty from the ground, owing to the log, and flew to ward the top of a tall, dead tree. I fired at it. The charge hit the eagle in one of its wings and brought the bird to the ground. The eagle was such a splendid specimer that I resolved to capture it alive. I approached it with no thought of having any difficulty in accomplishing my purpose ir the handicapped and crippled condition of the bird, but I found that I didn't know as nuch about bald eagles as I thought I did spite of the crippled wing and the burden of the trap and chain, the eagle rushed upon me and attacked me with such fury that I turned and fled from the "At the edge of the woods I stopped, and

In the great event of the day the eight-oar race between the two giants, the Atalantas, of New York, and the Bradfords, of Cambridgeport, the New Yorkers captured the banner and medals after an exciting contest, crossing the line barely half a length in advance of their sturdy opponents. One event still hangs in the balance-the senior doubles. This was one of the grandest races on record, two of the com-peting crews, the Metropolitans, of New York, and the Bay Sides, of Toronto, rowing a dead heat. The bow oar of the Bay Sides rowed bimals Bay Sides rowed himself completely out during the contest and when the time came to row over again according to the orders of Referee Lyman B. CUVIER never recognized what he had once written. He comprised with great rapidity, correctness and precision.

MILTON was of the opinion that the verses composed by him between the autumnal and spring equinoxes were always the best. Porsi never could compose well without first declaiming for some time at the top of his voice and thus rousing his hervous sys-tem to its fullest activity.

DEMOSTHENES passed three months in a cavern by the seaside in laboring to over-come the defects of his voice. There he read, studied and declaimed.

RICHELIEU amused himself in the intervals of his labors with a squadron of cats, of which he was very fond. He used to re-tire at eleven, and after sleeping three hours rise and write or work.

BENTLEY composed after playing a prelude on the organ, or while taking his "ante-jentacular" or "post-prandial" welks he found in the solitude of dense forests some-thing more profound and suggestive than any thing he could find in books. CAMOENS composed his verses with the roar of battle in his ears, for the Portuguese poet was a soldier, and a brave one, though a poet. He composed others of his most beautiful verses at a time when his Indian slave was begging a subsistence for him in the streets.

Rousseau had the greatest difficulty in composing his works, being extremely de-fective in the gift of memory. He never could learn six verses by heart and often after having mentally formulated sentences, would forget them before they could be written down.

CALVIN studied in his bed. Every morning at five or six o'clock he had books, manuscripts and papers carried to him there and he worked on them for hours together. If he had occasion to go out, on his return he undressed and went to bed again to continue his studies.

VOLTAIRE was a most impatient writer and usually had the first half of a work set up in type before the second half was writ-ten. He always had several works in the course of composition at the same time. He usually had the sketch of a tragedy set up in type and then rewrote it from the proofs.

LUTHER, when studying, always had hi dog at his feet. An ivory crucifix stood on the table before him, and the walls of his study were stuck around with caricatures of the Pope. He worked at his desk for days together without going out; but when fatigued he would take his flute or guitar with him into the porch and there execute some musical fantasy.

POWDERS

Several years ago Dr. George F. Hunter, of Holly, was | ermanently injured by coming in contact with a windlass in the street after dark. He sued the village for damages, the case was fought up to the United States District Court, and he now gets a judgment of $10,000 and the costs of three trials. Holly's population is about twelve hundred and the assessment will reach nearly ten dollars for each man, woman and child in the corporation to pay the doctor's claim. A Mystery Solved.

at first thought I would go back and shoot the eagle, but my desire to have it alive was so strong that I determined to make every effort to capture it. I hurried home and got a stout rope and an empty feed-bag. On my way back to the woods I noticed that the crows which had first attracted my attention to the spot were hovering over the place where I had fled from the maddened eagle. and from their peculiar cries and frantic actions I inferred that something of moment to them had occurred. I found that such was indeed the case. The crows knowing, by the wonderful instinct they possess, that the eagle was wounded and crippled and, hating as they do all large birds, had swooped down on the cagle and attacked it in its disabled condition. The attack had been disastrous to the crows, for when I reached the spot five of the sable assailants lay dead near their enraged foe, and several others were dragging themselves away to es-

"The eagle no sooner saw me again than be rushed toward me with all the force at his command, hampered and crippled as he was, and forced the tighting at once. I had made a noose in one end of my rope. As the eagle came tearing toward me, his sound wing raised several inches from his side, the wounded one dragging helpless and bleeding on the ground, his powerful booked beak thrown open, the feathers on his neck bristling like the hair of an angry oull, and the chain clanking as he dragged the heavy trap on his leg, he was a starting picture of intense hate and unbounded fury. I had never faced so fierce a pres-snce, nor could I have imagined one. I knew that by the plan I had formed for capturing the eagle I could quickly over-power him if I could manage it successfully; o I stood my ground, and when the immense bird was almost near enough to strike me with his beak I quickly tossed the ncose over his head. It slipped down over his wing, and I drew it close by a sudden and strong jerk. I then ran to one side and the the other end of the rope to a sapling. The eagle was now shorn of the great help of its once powerful wing, as it had been of the use of one of its enormous talons by the trap. Yet he pulled the rope taut and shook the sapling from root to top in his

Dr. Moser (Elder's Jahrbuch fur Photographie) draws attention to the following curious phenomena: The leaves of an elec-troscope are caused to diverge by charging with, say, 150 cells. On allowing a ray of direct sunlight to fall on the instrument the divergence is increased, and it returns to its original amount when the light is cut off. A common match (sulphur with phosphorus tip) will glow in the dark when brought close to a charged body such as the cover of an electrophorus. The mercury in a capillary electrometer falls when a ray of sunshine falls on it, just as it does when connected to the zinc of a battery. The efforts to get at me.
