SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 26.

Appropriate Services Will Be Held in the M. E. Church That Evening to Celebrate the Event.

The seventh anniversary of the dedication of the new M. E. Church will be held Tuesday evening, the 26th of this month. The ladies are making preparations to serve a fine supper from 5 until 7:30 o'clock p. m.

The program will commence at 7:30, and will be one of the most attractive anniversary programs given in the new church.

The Rev. J. I. Nickerson, of Mt. Clemens, Dr. Wm. Dawe, of Ann Arbor, Rev. Eugene Allen, pastor of the M. E. Church at Ypsilanti, and Prof. Gallup, of the Chelsea High School, will be the speakers. Miss Cora Nickerson, of Mt. Clemens, Miss Emily Steinbach, Miss Dorothy Glazier, Miss Rena Rodel, and the choir of the church will render vocal selections, while Miss Helen Steinbach will preside at the pipe organ. Tickets to supper and program, 25 cents.

FOUND FROZEN IN THE ICE.

Frederick Reimold, Formerly of Freedom, Disappeared at Ann Arbor four Weeks Ago.

What young boys thought to be the body of a muskrat frozen in the ice near the old slaughter houses in Huron river, just east of the M. C. depot at Ann Arbor, last Saturday forenoon, proved to be a human head lying against a large log.

After the ice was chopped away so the body could be extricated, a fire was built and the ice thawed, the gruesome find was identified as the body of Frederick Reimold.

Reimold was 41 years of age and disappeared four weeks previously. On his last day alive he went to work in lower town, leaving a friend's house at 9 o'clock in the evening.

It was a stormy night and Reimold either lost his footing and stumbled into the river, or jumped off the bridge in a fit of despondency.

The man's friends did not think there was any cause for alarm, as Reimold was unmarried, and they came to the conclusion that he had left the city.

Reimold was formerly a farm-hand in Freedom township. He moved to Ann Arbor a year ago, bringing with him a bank book calling for $2,000. Reimold leaves a brother in Bridgewater and a sister living in Cleveland, O.

When the discovery was made, Coroner Burchfield was notified and took charge of the attempt to remove the body from its coating of ice.

It has been practically determined that Reimold came to his death by mistaking his way and stumbling into the river on the terribly stormy night four weeks ago Saturday. His s.w. was found in the river near the Broadway bridge, while the body was found twenty rods below this point.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from Dieterle's mortuary chapel, Rev. S. A. John officiating. Coroner Burchfield will hold an inquest next Monday night.

A Large Mortgage.

The big mortgage filed in the register of deeds' office by the Detroit, Jackson & Chicago Railroad, is the longest document ever filed for record in the Washtenaw register of deeds' office. It contains about 60,000 words and will occupy about 100 pages of the big records of the county. There have been larger mortgages in amount filed by the steam railroads, but none which have contained so many words.

The mortgage is for $4,000,000, of which $2,600,000 is to retire the outstanding bonds of the D. Y., A. A. & J., and $805,000 is to defray the purchase price of the road, while the remaining $595,000 is set aside to be used only for improvement of the road, betterments, extensions and further equipments.

This mortgage reveals the price the Detroit United paid for the road, $805,000 besides paying the bonded indebtedness.

Mrs. Maryette Snow.

Maryette Smith was born in Westchester county, N. Y., October 15, 1825, and came to this state with her parents when about ten years of age. On the 19th of March, 1845 she was united in marriage to James Snow. Mr. Snow died in 1873, since which time her home has been with her daughter, Mrs. Edwin Monroe of this place, where she died on Wednesday, February 13, 1907 at 1:30 p. m.

Mrs. Snow's death is sadly mourned by two brothers, William Smith of Eaton Rapids, and Alvy Smith of Lake Odessa, also by four children, William Snow of Sylvan, near Cavanaugh Lake, Mrs. Emma Monroe, Mrs. Lizzie Sumner, and Mrs. Margaret Sumner and by one grand child and three great grand children, all of Chelsea.

Funeral services were held at her late home on Saturday, February 16, and her remains were deposited in the Vermont cemetery by the side of her late husband. Rev. Thos. Holmes, D. D. officiating.

Notice to Water Patrons.

Owing to the necessity of making some changes in the water main at the pumping station, it will be necessary to shut off the water supply at midnight of Thursday, February 21, until such time as the work is completed, which will probably be some time during the following forenoon.

You will therefore provide yourselves with a sufficient reserve supply for the time the water is shut off.

As the village will be without fire protection during this time, it is of the utmost importance to each and everyone to exercise every precaution against an outbreak of fire.

Respectfully,

J. D. WATSON,
Secretary Light and Water Committee.

Slot Machines Must Go.

Barton L. Hart, prosecuting attorney of this county, gives notice that all slot machines used as gambling devices must go, and that any violators of the law in this instance will not only have the machines seized and destroyed, but will themselves be prosecuted.

During the January session of the board of supervisors resolutions were adopted condemning these machines and asking that something be done to remedy the evil, consequently the act of the prosecuting attorney.—Adrian Press.

PLEASANT SOCIAL EVENT

LAST TUESDAY EVENING.

Banquet Served at the Chelsea House to About Ninety Persons—Reception Followed in K. of P. Hall.

The members of Chelsea Castle, No. 194, K. of P., served a three-course banquet to about ninety members of the order and their friends in the Chelsea House at 7 o'clock Tuesday evening. The service was excellent throughout. Burg's orchestra furnished music during the banquet hour. At the close of the feast the members of the lodge and their friends adjourned to the K. of P. Hall, where a reception was held, which was followed by a very enjoyable social evening of games and dancing. Those who attended the gathering were all highly pleased with the evening's entertainment.

WANT TO JOIN NAVY.

Congressman Townsend Will Hold a Preliminary Examination in Ann Arbor Next Saturday.

Congressman Charles E. Townsend sent the following notice to The Ann Arbor News for publication. Any young man desiring to join the navy should take this preliminary examination next Saturday. This is an unusual opportunity that several boys should avail themselves of.

The notice follows:

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12, 1907.

There will be a preliminary examination for the appointment of a cadet to the Naval Academy held at the office of Dr. C. G. Darling at Ann Arbor, on February 23, at 1 o'clock p. m. Any young man between the ages of 16 and 20 who desires to enter this examination can do so.

CHARLES E. TOWNSEND.

Beats Kerosene.

Ask the western or eastern farmer, and he will tell you that 200 bushels is not an unusual crop of potatoes to the acre on many of the nation's potato patches. This quantity will furnish fully fifty gallons of alcohol. The country's potato harvest reaches in an average year 250,000,000 bushels. A bushel of ordinary field corn such as is grown on the 1,000-acre and 10,000-acre fields of Kansas, Missouri and Iowa will yield five gallons of spirits by modern distillation. Allowing but four gallons to the bushel for the sake of argument, the national crop of this cereal would produce the enormous quantity of 10,000,000,000 gallons alone. While the raising of sugar beets is called one of the infant industries, we have the waste product of 200,000 tons for raw material for alcohol. The cane fields of Louisiana alone would contribute every drop of alcohol needed in the southland for light, power and other purposes. Of course, it is preposterous to suppose that all of the potatoes or corn or any other staple will be converted into alcohol, but in a "big crop" year, when corn, for example, goes begging at 30 or 35 cents a bushel, there is an opportunity to turn it into something which will make it worth, perhaps, double its value in the original form.

In recent years the gas mantle has become very popular because of the light it affords for reading. A versatile Frenchman, discovered that the mantle can be utilized with an alcohol burner.

A gallon of alcohol is sufficient to keep it burning 1,476 hours, supposing that each hour it furnishes a light equal to that of one candle. A modern lamp burning the highest grade of kerosene oil requires one gallon to burn 733 candle-power hours, as the expert terms it. Therefore a gallon of spirit will furnish nearly twice as much illumination as kerosene. In fact, if it sold at thirty-one cents a gallon, it would be more economical to use than kerosene at fifteen cents a gallon.—Appleton's Magazine.

Mix This at Home.

The following simple home-made mixture is said to readily relieve and overcome any form of rheumatism by forcing the kidneys to filter from the blood and system all the uric acid, and poisonous waste matter, relieving at once such symptoms as backache, weak kidneys and bladder and blood diseases. Try it, as it doesn't cost much to make, and is said to be absolutely harmless to the stomach.

Get the following harmless ingredients from any good pharmacy: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle, and take a teaspoonful after each meal and again at bedtime.

This simple mixture is said to give prompt relief, and there are very few cases of rheumatism and kidney troubles it will fail to cure permanently.

These are all harmless, every-day drugs, and your druggist should keep them in the prescription department; if not, have him order them from the wholesale drug houses for you, rather than fail to use this, if you are afflicted.

MT. VERNON AS IT IS TO-DAY

Mount Vernon as it Now Appears.

as when Washington met his friends half way down the drive, or saluted them from afar. This is as you find it when you are set down like a duck in a puddle, right on the edge of the most historic spot in America.

You pass along in the shadow of the squat brick wall, topped off with ornamental pickets, past the higher red brick wall mottled with patches of whitewash and topped off with its moss-grown coping, that winds along up the hill like a huge snake, over which the red roofs show in utter defiance of its great landlady's effort to hide their every-day existence and homely suggestions. While you ponder why Washington's back door was his front door, and prepare to salute the shades of his greatness, a man with a camera and a "taking" expression whirls into view, and before you know it you're one of the strange faces that look out from the gallery, all wondering, even though knowing, what he is going to do. But it's of no use to fret. Like trouble, he is ever with you—thicker than dandelions on a summer green. If he divides the honors with any one, it's with the woman who wants a souvenir of General Washington.

Here in the banquet room, on the spot where Lafayette, Rochambeau, Jefferson, Madison, and Monroe, and the Artists Houdon, Le Sueur, and Trumbull, besides many great revolutionary generals, dined, the women hold their executive sessions. The beautiful silver mounted, for that adorned Washington's banquet board is removed, and upon the table they write of the progress that saved the old house from ruin. To the Regents of the Mount Vernon association, who come once each springtime and actually live, eat, and drink, and sleep, under the famous old roof, does the place owe its air of homelike comfort, as well as its preservation.

It is in the banquet room that was prepared for the first time by the hands of Lafayette and a company of French noblemen, who chanced to be house guests. The story runs that a half was to be given, and the impromptu paper had arrived, but no paperhangers. Mrs. Washington mourned, but the chivalrous Lafayette, always ready to do or die, consoled her—he was equal to the emergency, and he and his friends hung the paper, assisted by the general and his household. In this historic room, the women are literally surrounded by the priceless treasures that they have collected from the fading past for the benefit of future generations. The Washington that Rembrandt Peale pictures, facing the difficulties of Yorktown, glorifies the side of the room, while from a mahogany cabinet comes a substantial suggestion of the

to the passing traveler, but cleverly concealed as a part of the walls and woodwork.

You must wade knee deep through cherry tokens to reach the old conservatory, with the quaint, rambling servants' quarters tucked away under the eaves on each side, while sloping roofs and whitewashed walls remind one somehow of Bobbie Burns.

It is curious how the American traveler prefers to plier his historic treasures rather than to pay a trifle for them. The old gardener thinks this is the case, and it is only by the greatest vigilance that he has for so many years preserved the historic outline of the garden as originally planted and laid off by Washington. Again, Mrs. Lett's generosity and fine judgment are shown, for she is chairman of the committee on grounds and shrubs, as well as interested in the garden and greenhouse. Many a rare plant finds its way to Mount Vernon through her efforts. The gardens are maintained at an expense of over $2,000, but between $500 and $700 of this amount is realized from the sale of plants. Mrs. Phoebe Hearst is a model farmer, and spends her money and talent freely. She has preserved and beautified the wharf at an expense of more than $10,000. She directs the superintendent as to the vegetable garden that supplies the table maintained for the attendants, advises about the deer park that hangs on the hill's edge over the Potomac, and otherwise acts as a beneficent power all about the premises. She took a practical view of the herd of Jersey cattle that browsed around, and when they failed to keep the old-fashioned milkhouse as well supplied as necessary she had them sold and a pretty herd of Guernseys driven in.

In the spacious old kitchen where things run riot, the traveler buys either a glass of milk or a picture to carry away as a souvenir. Somehow, one can't help but feel that even the room, while from a mahogany cabinet comes a substantial suggestion of the

MARY ANN, COOK

By OPIE READ

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Timberlake was in trouble. He had scolded his daughter for "keeping company" with a young fellow named Hamby, and had discharged his cook—two things well calculated to upset the mind of a methodical man.

The charge under which young Hamby rested or was restless was the fact that he was poor and not over-industrious. The girl begged her father to see Mr. Hamby, and have a talk with him, but Timberlake replied, "I don't want to see him any more than I have, at a distance, and that is the only way I want you to see him in the future."

His daughter was an obedient girl, and she said that she would respect his wishes.

An advertisement for a cook was put in a newspaper, and Timberlake stayed at home all day to listen to the jingle of the door-bell. He was a neat man, but he was not so particular about his clothes as he was about a cook. He said that a woman who could cook a beefsteak was worth her weight in gold, and he was willing to give her gold. He could pass over indifferent soup, excuse poor coffee, but his steak must be up to a certain standard.

At last, along toward evening he selected a red-looking woman who seemed indignant when he asked her if she could broil a beefsteak. He kept her one day, and then told her to go. The advertisement was again inserted, and this time he left the selection to his wife. That night his steak was perfect. Two days later he said to his wife, "Send that cook to me. I want to see her."

When the woman came into the dining-room Timberlake gave her a hard look. She was tall, rather awkward, not well rounded, and with hair that looked like a raveled rope.

"Where did you learn to cook a steak?" he asked.

"I used to cook for the officers on Governor's Island," she answered.

"Well, I want to make a contract with you to stay with me for a year. Are you willing to sign it?"

"Yes, sir. It doesn't make much difference where I stay, so long as I receive my wages regularly and am well treated."

He drew up a contract, and the cook signed "Mary Ann White."

Now everything went well. Young McWilliams, who called on Timberlake one day at the factory, found him in fine humor. McWilliams had been "keeping company" with Florence, the young fellow twisted about when he had sat down, and mumbled that "he didn't know exactly how to get at what he wanted to say."

Timberlake replied that "the only way to get at a thing was to march up to it."

"But it is of a very delicate nature," said McWilliams. "And the fact is, I may be wrong in speaking to you on the subject before I have spoken to your daughter."

"Oh, and it is concerning her. Well, out with it."

"Why, I am very much attached to her, and would like to marry her."

"Well," said Timberlake, "I don't see anything so all-fired delicate about that. It's a very natural procedure."

"Yes, sir; and I thought I'd come to you before I spoke to her, and get you to plead my cause in case you were willing."

"Very considerate, sir, the way such affairs should be conducted. I believe you own that white house out on the Mayfield road. Any mortgage on it?"

"No, sir; it is free."

"Very commendable. Well, I'll speak to Florence this evening. Call around to-morrow."

McWilliams called at the factory the next day. "What—what luck?" he inquired.

Timberlake cleared his throat. "I fear that it will take her some time to decide."

"She didn't say anything against me, did she?"

"Oh, no; upon the contrary, she is very much pleased with you. Go out to see her. A man should always plead his own cause."

The young man went to the house to plead his cause, and he pleaded well, love investing a dull mind with eloquence. He swore that Florence was necessary to his happiness, and she believed him. She said that she was sorry, and she proved it by a tear that gleamed upon her cheek, but that was all; she could never marry him. She held out her hand, and hoped to meet him in heaven. He took it, and declared that a far-off heaven was all right, but it was not what he was looking for just at present. He wanted her to make a heaven of this earth. She gave him another tear, and dismissed him.

A short time afterward there came another suitor, one who had been hanging about—old John Foster. His proposition was businesslike. He would make over half his property to her. Timberlake hastened to his daughter with this proposition. She declared that she wouldn't marry old John Foster to save her life. Foster was advised to plead his own cause. He might give him a tear. She sent for the cook to show her the man who had presumed to come as a lover, and the impudent cook laughed in his face. He fumed his way back to the factory and stormed into Timberlake's office.

"Sir, have you any respect for me?"

"I honor you. What's the trouble?"

"Would you heed a request from me?"

"Surely, Name it."

"Then discharge that infernal creature, your cook!"

Timberlake hemmed and hawed.

"Why," said he, "she is the finest beefsteak cook in the country."

"Oh, she is! And she can cook up the most insolent dish of any one in the country! Your daughter sent for her, and she laughed at me, the hussy! And now you must discharge her, or our relationship is at an end."

It is hard not to obey the request of money, so Timberlake gave him a half-hearted promise. That night his steak was better than ever, but he sent for the cook. "Mary Ann White," said he, "I admire you as a cook, but I cannot, nor will I, put up with your insolence. When my friend Foster was here you laughed at him."

Mary Ann acknowledged it. She could not keep her mirth, he was so funny.

"Well, but I didn't hire you to laugh."

"No," replied the cook, "it wasn't mentioned in the contract."

"Oh, yes, the contract. I had forgotten it."

"But are you going to break it, sir?"

"I shall be compelled to. In fact, you know it was made for me, and not for you. All contracts are one-sided. I can't afford to offend Mr. Foster. He is worth half a million. I am sorry, Mary Ann, but you may go."

"Oh, may I? And if I do, I'll tell it around that I left because you tried to flirt with me."

"Infamous!" shouted Timberlake, "it would ruin me in the church!" He appealed to his wife.

"There was a time," she said, "when I would have frowned upon such a slander, but since you have ceased to love me, I—"

"Who the deuce said I didn't love you? Show him to me. Why, I am—am completely wrapped up in you. Wait a moment, Mary Ann. You may stay, and I will tell old Foster that I have discharged you and the next time he calls you must not show yourself."

He told Foster that the cook had been discharged. The old man went home with him, ate dinner with him, and at the table began to praise the steak.

"You are more fortunate in getting cooks than I am," he said. "I wish you would send for yours. I want to talk to her. She may have a relative that can cook. It sometimes runs in families, you know."

Timberlake began to make excuses, but Florence called Mary Ann. When she came in, Foster's eyes flew wide open with astonishment. He got up from the table. "Mr. Timberlake," said he, "you need not expect my patronage in the future, and I don't know that I want your girl."

One day Florence said to her father, "Since you simply desire to sell me, would you agree to let Mr. Hamby take me in the event that he should come back from the Klondike rich?"

"Well, we'll see about that. But why don't you marry Scroggins? He's rich and good-looking. What's the matter with him?"

"I don't love him."

"There it is again. Will you please come and tell me when you find that you do love some one?"

"I told you that I loved Mr. Hamby."

That night, when Timberlake came home, the steak was indifferent.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"We have a new cook."

"The deuce we have! What's become of Mary Ann?"

"She and Florence have gone out."

"She and Florence! What the deuce does she mean by trotting about with a hired girl?"

"She isn't trotting about with a hired girl."

"Isn't Mary Ann a hired girl?"

Mrs. Timberlake leaned back and laughed.

"Now what's the matter?" Timberlake demanded. "Man comes home, finds his steak ruined, and when he complains, is told that his daughter is out with the hired girl, and after that, egad, is assured that the girl is not a hired girl! I'll go down to a hotel!"

"Wait a moment," said his wife, but she could scarcely talk for laughing. Finally she said, "Mary Ann was not a hired girl, but a hired man."

"What! And my daughter has gone out with him?"

"Yes; she has married him. His name is Hamby. Oh, you needn't worry. He has been left a fortune, and we have been having fun with you all the time."

Timberlake sat down. "Well, it might have been worse," said he, "but I wish he had cooked my steak so, and she proved it by a tear that gleamed upon her cheek, but that was all; she could never marry him. She held out her hand, and hoped to meet him in heaven. He took it, and declared that a far-off heaven was all right, but it was not what he was looking for just at present. He wanted her to make a heaven of this earth. "No," replied the cook, "it wasn't mentioned in the contract."

"Oh, yes, the contract. I had forgotten it."

"But are you going to break it, sir?"

"I shall be compelled to. In fact, you know it was made for me, and not for you. All contracts are one-sided. I can't afford to offend Mr. Foster. He is worth half a million. I am sorry, Mary Ann, but you may go."

"Oh, may I? And if I do, I'll tell it around that I left because you tried to flirt with me."

"Infamous!" shouted Timberlake, "it would ruin me in the church!" He appealed to his wife.

"There was a time," she said, "when I would have frowned upon such a slander, but since you have ceased to love me, I—"

"Who the deuce said I didn't love you? Show him to me. Why, I am—am completely wrapped up in you. Wait a moment, Mary Ann. You may stay, and I will tell old Foster that I have discharged you and the next time he calls you must not show yourself."

He told Foster that the cook had been discharged. The old man went home with him, ate dinner with him, and at the table began to praise the steak.

"You are more fortunate in getting cooks than I am," he said. "I wish you would send for yours. I want to talk to her. She may have a relative that can cook. It sometimes runs in families, you know."

sorry, and she proved it by a tear that gleamed upon her cheek, but that was all; she could never marry him. She held out her hand, and hoped to meet him in heaven. He took it, and declared that a far-off heaven was all right, but it was not what he was looking for just at present. He wanted her to make a heaven of this earth. She gave him another tear, and dismissed him.

A short time afterward there came another suitor, one who had been hanging about—old John Foster. His proposition was businesslike. He would make over half his property to her. Timberlake hastened to his daughter with this proposition. She declared that she wouldn't marry old John Foster to save her life. Foster was advised to plead his own cause. He might give him a tear. She sent for the cook to show her the man who had presumed to come as a lover, and the impudent cook laughed in his face. He fumed his way back to the factory and stormed into Timberlake's office.

"Sir, have you any respect for me?"

"I honor you. What's the trouble?"

"Would you heed a request from me?"

"Surely, Name it."

"Then discharge that infernal creature, your cook!"

Timberlake hemmed and hawed.

"Why," said he, "she is the finest beefsteak cook in the country."

"Oh, she is! And she can cook up the most insolent dish of any one in the country! Your daughter sent for her, and she laughed at me, the hussy! And now you must discharge her, or our relationship is at an end."

It is hard not to obey the request of money, so Timberlake gave him a half-hearted promise. That night his steak was better than ever, but he sent for the cook. "Mary Ann White," said he, "I admire you as a cook, but I cannot, nor will I, put up with your insolence. When my friend Foster was here you laughed at him."

Mary Ann acknowledged it. She could not keep her mirth, he was so funny.

"Well, but I didn't hire you to laugh."

"No," replied the cook, "it wasn't mentioned in the contract."

"Oh, yes, the contract. I had forgotten it."

"But are you going to break it, sir?"

"I shall be compelled to. In fact, you know it was made for me, and not for you. All contracts are one-sided. I can't afford to offend Mr. Foster. He is worth half a million. I am sorry, Mary Ann, but you may go."

Timberlake began to make excuses, but Florence called Mary Ann. When she came in, Foster's eyes flew wide open with astonishment. He got up from the table. "Mr. Timberlake," said he, "you need not expect my patronage in the future, and I don't know that I want your girl."

One day Florence said to her father, "Since you simply desire to sell me, would you agree to let Mr. Hamby take me in the event that he should come back from the Klondike rich?"

"Well, we'll see about that. But why don't you marry Scroggins? He's rich and good-looking. What's the matter with him?"

"I don't love him."

"There it is again. Will you please come and tell me when you find that you do love some one?"

"I told you that I loved Mr. Hamby."

That night, when Timberlake came home, the steak was indifferent.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"We have a new cook."

"The deuce we have! What's become of Mary Ann?"

"She and Florence have gone out."

"She and Florence! What the deuce does she mean by trotting about with a hired girl?"

"She isn't trotting about with a hired girl."

"Isn't Mary Ann a hired girl?"

Mrs. Timberlake leaned back and laughed.

"Now what's the matter?" Timberlake demanded. "Man comes home, finds his steak ruined, and when he complains, is told that his daughter is out with the hired girl, and after that, egad, is assured that the girl is not a hired girl! I'll go down to a hotel!"

"Wait a moment," said his wife, but she could scarcely talk for laughing. Finally she said, "Mary Ann was not a hired girl, but a hired man."

"What! And my daughter has gone out with him?"

"Yes; she has married him. His name is Hamby. Oh, you needn't worry. He has been left a fortune, and we have been having fun with you all the time."

Timberlake sat down. "Well, it might have been worse," said he, "but I wish he had cooked my steak

SERIAL STORY

THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

CHAPTER I.

The Will of John Marshall Glenarm, Pickering's letter bringing news of his grandfather's death found me at my desk early in October. John Marshall Glenarm had died in June, leaving a will which gave me his property conditionally. Pickering wrote me immediately to qualify as legatee. It was necessary for me to return to my hands at all, for it had been left to me in the care of the consul-general instead of my father there, and it was not Pickering's fault that the consul was a friend of mine who kept track of my wanderings. I was able to hurry the execution of the will to Italy, where I had to meet an English financier who had, I was advised, unlimited money to spend on African railways. I was an engineer, a graduate of an American institution familiarly known as "The Tech," and as my funds were running low I naturally turned to my profession for employment.

But this letter changed my plans, and the following day I cabled Pickering of my departure and was out of my department and was out of my department and was out of my department. Fourteen days later I sat in Pickering's office in the Alexis Building and listened intently while he read, with much ponderous emphasis, the provisions of my grandfather's will. When he concluded I laughed. Pickering was a serious man, and I was glad to see that my levity pained him. I had, for that matter, always been a source of annoyance to him, and his look of distrust and rebuke did not trouble me in the least.

I reached across the table for the paper, and he gave the sealed and initialed copy of John Marshall Glenarm's will into my hands. I read it through for myself, feeling conscious meanwhile that Pickering's cool gaze was bent inquiringly upon me. These are the paragraphs that interested me most:

"I give and devise unto my said grandson, John Glenarm, sometime a resident of the city and state of New York, and later a vagabond of parts unknown, a certain property known as Glenarm House, with the lands and hereditaments thereto pertaining and hereinafter more particularly described, and all personal effects, goods and other property that may be located in the premises and on the land herein described,—the said realty lying in the county of Wabana in the state of Indiana,—upon this condition, faithfully and honestly performed:

"That said John Glenarm shall remain an occupant of said Glenarm House and of my lands appurtenant thereto, demeaning himself meanwhile in an orderly and temperate manner. Should he fail at any time during said year to comply with this provision, said property shall at once revert to my general estate, shall become, without reservation and without necessity for any process of law the property, absolutely, of Marian Devereux, of the county and state of New York."

"Well," he demanded, striking his hands upon the arms of his chair, "what do you think of it?"

For the life of me I could not help laughing again. There was, in the first place, a delicious irony in the fact that I should learn through him of my grandfather's wishes with respect to myself. Pickering and I had grown up in the same town in Vermont; we had attended the same preparatory school, but there had been from boyhood a certain antagonism between us. He had always succeeded where I failed, which is to say, I must admit, that he had succeeded pretty frequently. When I refused to settle down to my profession, but chose to see something of the world first, Pickering gave himself seriously to the law, and there was, I knew from the beginning, no manner of chance that he would fail.

I am not more or less than human, and I remembered with joy that once I had thrashed him soundly at the prep school for bullying a smaller boy, but our score from school days was not without tallies on his side. He was easily the better scholar—I grant him that; and he was shrewd and plausible. You never quite knew the extent of his powers and resources, and he had, I always maintained, the most amazing good luck—as witness the fact that John Marshall Glenarm had taken a friendly interest in him. It was wholly like my grandfather, who was a man of many whims, to give his affairs into Pickering's keeping; and I could not complain, for I had missed my own chance with him. It was, I knew readily enough, part of my punishment for having succeeded so signally in incurring my grandfather's displeasure that he had made it necessary for me to treat with Arthur Pickering in this matter of the will; and Pickering was enjoying the situation to the full.

But there was something not wholly honest in my mirth, for my conduct during the three preceding years had been reprehensible. I had used my grandfather shabbily. My parents died when I was a child, and he had cared for me as far back as my memory ran. He had suffered me to spend the fortune left by my father without restraint; he had expected much of me, and I had grievously disappointed him. It was his hope that I should devote myself to architecture, a profession for which he had the greatest admiration, whereas I had insisted on engineering.

I am not writing an apology for my life, and I shall not attempt to extenuate my conduct in going abroad at the end of my course at Tech and, making Laurence Donovan's acquaintance, setting off with him on a career of adventure. I do not regret, though possibly it would be more to my credit if I did, the months spent in leisurely following the Danube east of the Iron Gate—Laurence Donovan always with me, while we urged the villagers and inn-keepers to all manner of sedition, acquitting ourselves so well that when we came out into the Black sea for further pleasure, Russia did us the honor to keep a spy at our heels. I should like, for my own satisfaction, at least, to set down an account of certain affairs in which we were concerned at Belgrad, but without Larry's consent I am not at liberty to do so. Nor shall I take time here to describe our travels in Africa, though our study of the Atlas mountain dwarfs won us honorable mention by the British Ethnological Society.

These were my yesterdays; but today I sat in Arthur Pickering's office in the towering Alexis Building, conscious of the muffled roar of Broadway, discussing the terms of my grandfather's will with a man whom I disliked as heartily as it is safe for one man to dislike another. Pickering had asked me a question, and I was suddenly aware that his eyes were fixed upon me and that he awaited my answer.

"What do you think of it?" I repeated. "I don't know that it makes any difference what I think, but I'll tell you, if you want to know, that a man should leave a ridiculous will of that sort behind him. All the old money-bags who pile up fortunes magnify the importance of their money. They imagine that every kindred, every ordinary courtly shown them, is merely a bid for a slice of the cake. I'm disappointed in my grandfather. He knows a splendid old man, though God knows he had his queer ways. I'll bet a thousand dollars, if I have so much money in the world, that this scheme is yours, Pickering, and not his. It smacks of your ancient vindictiveness, and John Marshall Glenarm had none of that in his blood. That stipulation about my residence out there is fantastic. I don't have to be a lawyer to know that; and no doubt I could break the will; I've a good notion to try it, anyhow."

"To be sure. You can tie up the estate for a half dozen years if you like," he replied coolly. He did not look upon me as likely to become a formidable litigant. My staying qualities had been proved weak long ago, as Pickering knew well enough.

"No doubt you would like that," I answered. "But I'm not going to give you the pleasure. I abide by the terms of the will. My grandfather was a fine old gentleman. I shan't drag his name through the courts, not even to please you, Arthur Pickering." I declared hotly.

"The sentiment is worthy of a good man, Glenarm," he rejoined. "But this woman who is to succeed to my rights—I don't seem to remember her."

"It is not surprising that you never heard of her."

"Then she's a long-lost cousin whom I ought to remember?"

"No; she was a late acquaintance of your grandfather. He met her through an old friend of his,—Miss Evans, known as Sister Theresa. Miss Devereux is Sister Theresa's niece."

I whistled. I had a dim recollection that during my grandfather's long widowhood there were occasional reports that he was about to marry. The name of Miss Evans had been mentioned in this connection. I had heard it spoken of in my family, and not, I remembered, with much kindness. Later I heard of her joining a Sisterhood, and opening a school somewhere in the West.

"And Miss Devereux,—is she an elderly nun, too?"

"I don't know how elderly she is, but she isn't a nun at present. Still, she's very much alone in the world, and she and Sister Theresa are very intimate."

"Pass the will again, Pickering, while I make sure I grasp these diverting ideas. Sister Theresa isn't the one I mustn't marry is she? It's the other ecclesiastical embroidery artist,—the one with the 'x' in her name, suggesting the algebra of my vanished youth."

I read aloud this paragraph:

"Provided, further, that in event said John Glenarm aforesaid shall marry the said Marian Devereux, or in the event of any promise or contract of marriage be given said persons within five years from the date of said John Glenarm's acceptance of the provisions of this will, the whole estate shall become the property absolutely of St. Agatha's School, at Annandale, Wabana county, Indiana, a corporation under the laws of said state."

"For a touch of comedy commend me to my grandfather! Pickering, you always were a well-meaning fellow,—I'll turn over to you all my right, interest and title in and to these angelic Sisters. Marry! I like the idea! I suppose some one will try to marry me for my money. Marriage, Pickering, is not embraced in my scheme of life!"

"Well, What Do You Think of It?"

"I should hardly call you a marrying man," he observed.

"Perfectly right, my friend! Sister Theresa was considered a possible match for my grandfather in my youth. I'm quite out of it with her. And the other lady with the fascinating algebraic climax to her name,—she, too, is impossible; it seems that I can't get the money by marrying her. I'd better let her take it. She's as poor as the devil, I dare say."

"I imagine not. The Evanses are a wealthy family, in spots, and she ought to have some money of her own, if her aunt doesn't coax it out of her for educational schemes."

"And where on the map are these lovely creatures to be found?"

"Sister Theresa's school adjoins your preserve. Miss Devereux has, I think, some of your own weakness for travel. Sister Theresa is her nearest relative, and she occasionally visits St. Agatha's—that's the school."

"I suppose they embroider altar-cloths together and otherwise labor valiantly to bring confusion upon Satan and his cohorts. Just the peoplet to pull the wool over the eyes of my grandfather!"

Pickering smiled at my resentment. "You'd better give them a wide berth; they Theresa is said to have quite a winning way. She certainly plucked your grandfather."

"Nuns in spectacles, the gentle educators of youth and that sort of thing, with a good-natured old man for their prey. None of them for me!"

"I rather thought so," remarked Pickering, and he pulled his watch from his pocket and turned the stem with his heavy fingers. He was short thickset and sleek, with a square jaw hair already thin and a close-clipped mustache. Age, I mentally reflected, was not improving him.

Toime and Toide.

Mrs. Hooligan was suffering from the common complaint of having more to do than there was time to do it in. She looked up at the clock and then slapped the iron she had lifted from the stove back on the lid with a clatter. "Talk about toime and toide waitin' fer no man," she muttered as she hurried into the pantry; "there's toimes they waits, an' toimes they don't. Yishterday at this blessed mornin' it 'twas but tin o'clock, an' to-day it's a quarter to twelve."—Everybody's.

BABY TORTURED BY ITCHING.

Rash Covered Face and Feet—Would Cry Until Tired Out—Speedy Cure by Cuticura.

"My baby was about nine months old when she had rash on her face and feet. Her feet seemed to irritate her most, especially nights. They would cause her to be broken in her rest, and sometimes she would cry until she was tired out. I had always used Cuticura Soap myself, and had heard of so many cures by the Cuticura Remedies that I thought I would give them a trial. The improvement was noticeable in a few hours, and before I had used one box of the Cuticura Ointment her feet were well and have never troubled her since. I also used it to remove what is known as 'cradle cap' from her head, and it worked like a charm, as it cleansed and healed the scalp at the same time. Now I keep Cuticura Ointment on hand in case of any little rash or insect bites, as it takes out the inflammation at once. Perhaps this may be the means of helping other suffering babies. Mrs. Hatfield Currier, Thomaston, Me., June 9, 1906."

ONE WAY OUT OF DIFFICULTY.

Match Twins with Twins, Was the Fond Mother's Idea.

A little woman entered a drug store and asked the proprietor if he had "another picture."

"What kind of a picture do you mean?" the druggist asked.

"One like this," said the woman, holding up an attractive advertising print.

"I may have one or two of them left," the proprietor said, "but I haven't many of them."

The woman said she only wanted one, and her tone indicated that she was anxious for that one. "She explained that the one she had with her had been given to one of her children. Another child, she stated, was sick, and was crying for a picture such as his brother had."

"That's a bad way to bring up your children," ventured a woman customer in the store. "Do you try to give a child everything he cries for just because his brother is more fortunate?"

"But," said the mother of the children, "you don't know. The children are twins and what one has the other wants."

"Suppose," objected the moralist, "when your children get older, they fall in love with the same girl, what will they do?"

But the mother was ready. She promptly replied:

"Find twins and fall in love with them."

DREADED TO EAT.

A Quaker Couple's Experience.

How many persons dread to eat their meals, although actually hungry nearly all the time!

Nature never intended this should be so, for we are given a thing called appetite that should guide us as to what the system needs at any time and can digest.

But we get in a hurry, swallow our food very much as we shovel coal into the furnace, and our sense of appetite becomes unnatural and perverted. Then we eat the wrong kind of food or eat too much, and there you are—indigestion and its accompanying miseries.

A Phila. lady said, the other day: "My husband and I have been sick and nervous for 15 or 20 years from drinking coffee—feverish, indigestion, totally unfit, a good part of the time, for work or pleasure. We actually dreaded to eat our meals."

"We tried doctors and patent medicines that counted up into hundreds of dollars, with little if any benefit."

"Accidentally, a small package of Postum came into my hands. I made some according to directions, with surprising results. We both liked it and have not used any coffee since."

"The dull feeling after meals has left us and we feel better every way. We are so well satisfied with Postum that we recommend it to our friends who have been made sick and nervous and miserable by coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

"What a pretty little gown that is you have on!" they exclaimed. "So soft and fine. Such delicate, lovely silk. All you'll have to do will be to take the yoke out of it to make it an evening gown."

"I like it," she said, complacently. "This is the way I happened to buy it. I went into a department store to buy a sturdy, thick, heavy woolen gown for mountain climbing—it was in the fall—and they showed me this, which was marked down for that day, so I bought it. What are you laughing at?"

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Is acknowledged to be the most successful remedy in the country for those painful ailments peculiar to women.

For more than 30 years it has been curing Female Complaints, such as Inflammation, Ulceration, Falling and Displacements, and consequent Spinal Weakness, Backache, and is peculiarly adapted to the Change of Life.

Records show that it has cured more cases of Female Ills than any other one remedy known.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound dissolves and expels Tumors at an early stage of development. Dragging sensations causing pain, weight, and headache are relieved and permanently cured by its use.

It corrects Irregularities or Painful Functions. Weakness of the Stomach, Indigestion, Bloating, Nervous Prostration, Headache, General Debility; also, Dizziness, Faintness, Extreme Lassitude. "Don't care and want to be left alone" feeling, Irritability, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Flatulency, Melancholia or the "Blues." These are sure indications of female weakness or some organic derangement.

For Kidney Complaints of either sex Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a most excellent remedy.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. for advice. She is the Mrs. Pinkham who has been advising sick women free of charge for more than twenty years, and before that she assisted her mother-in-law Lydia E. Pinkham in advising. Thus she is well qualified to guide sick women back to health. Her advice is free and always helpful.

One of the Important Duties of Physicians and the Well-Informed of the World is to learn as to the relative standing and reliability of the leading manufacturers of medicinal agents, as the most eminent physicians are the most careful as to the uniform quality and perfect purity of remedies prescribed by them, and it is well known to physicians and the Well-Informed generally that the California Fig Syrup Co., by reason of its correct methods and perfect equipment and the ethical character of its product has attained to the high standing in scientific and commercial circles which is accorded to successful and reliable houses only, and, therefore, that the name of the Company has become a guarantee of the excellence of its remedy.

TRUTH AND QUALITY

appeal to the Well-Informed in every walk of life and are essential to permanent success and creditable standing, therefore we wish to call the attention of all who would enjoy good health, with its blessings, to the fact that it involves the question of right living with all the term implies. With proper knowledge of what is best each hour of recreation, of enjoyment, of contemplation and of effort may be made to contribute to that end and the use of medicines dispensed with generally to great advantage, but as in many instances a simple, wholesome remedy may be invaluable if taken at the proper time, the California Fig Syrup Co. feels that it is alike important to present truthfully the subject and to supply the one perfect laxative remedy which has won the approval of physicians and the world-wide acceptance of the Well-Informed because of the excellence of the combination, know to all, and the original method of manufacture, which is known to the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of—Syrup of Figs—and has attained to world-wide acceptance as the most excellent of family laxatives, and as its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well-Informed of the world to be the best of natural laxatives, we have adopted the more elaborate name of—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtless it will always be called for by the shorter name of Syrup of Figs—and to get its beneficial effects always note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package, whether you simply call for—Syrup of Figs—or by the full name—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—is the one laxative remedy manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. and the same heretofore known by the name—Syrup of Figs—which has given satisfaction to millions. The genuine is for sale by all leading druggists throughout the United States in original packages of one size only, the regular price of which is fifty cents per bottle.

Every bottle is sold under the general guarantee of the Company, filed with the Secretary of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C., that the remedy is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the Food and Drugs Act, June 30th, 1906.

It is said that Albion saloonkeepers have entered into an agreement to observe the very letter of the law, relative to their business, and that they are themselves to prosecute any violations of the law. If they observe the law they have nothing to fear.—Albion Leader.

At the annual meeting of the Unadilla Presbyterian church held recently the following officers were elected: trustee, Otis Webb; treasurer, Willis Pickell; secretary, Arthur May; organist, Ruth Piper; chorister, Alex Pyper. All societies gave reports which show an increase over last year.

Representative Ward of Shiawassee county, favors a license of $5 for non-resident fishermen and $1 for resident fishermen who fish outside of their own counties. He says the state pays $40,000 a year for fish hatcheries which afford sport to the trout and bass fishers, and it is reasonable to require those who get the benefit to pay most of the expenses.

The proposition to limit the saloons of Rochester by a bill to be introduced by Representative McCracken should be supported by all good citizens of Rochester. Rochester now has four drinking places, and it's enough. To turn one of the best business blocks into a saloon would be a shame, and the new law should be passed as a matter of public benefit, if for none other.—Rochester Era.

Next summer the Baptist society will build a commodious and modern parsonage on the lot opposite the church. This valuable piece of ground has been given to the church with the understanding that a home for the minister shall be built there. The transfer will be made in the next few days, and it is expected that in about four months ground will be broke and the building commenced. It will probably be completed before winter.—Milan Leader.

RHEUMATISM CANNOT BE CURED UNLESS URIC-O IS USED

Sudden Death, Heart Failure and Paralysis Are Caused by Poisonous Uric and Rheumatic Acids.

The disease whose cause is shrouded in mystery, the affliction that is said to be incurable, is commonly known as paralysis. Show us a person suffering with this disease, and you will find that at some time previous to the attack, the patient suffered from some form of Rheumatism. This dangerous disease should not be neglected, especially where there is a cure within such easy reach. We refer to Smith's Specific Uric-O, a harmless compound, free from alcohol and poison, and made to cure Rheumatism only. Uric-O acts with marvellous swiftness on the blood, muscles and kidneys, and cannot fail to remove all traces of poisonous Uric and Rheumatic acid from the system. Uric-O is not a cathartic, does not affect or distress the stomach, and is the only known liquid preparation that will relieve and permanently cure Rheumatism in its most distressing forms. We want all Rheumatic sufferers to test the merits of Uric-O, therefore by address the SMITH DRUG COMPANY, SYRACUSE, N. Y., a liberal size sample and circular will be sent free. Uric-O is sold by Druggists at $1.00 per bottle, or will be sent direct upon receipt of price.

Uric-O is sold and recommended in Chelsea by L. T. FREEMAN.

Question and Answer.

When Nathan M. Morse was trying the Tuckerman will case before Judge McKim, at Boston, Dr. Jelly, the well-known expert on insanity, was one of the witnesses. One of the hypothetical questions asked of the witness by Mr. Morse contained no less than 20,000 words. The lawyer started this pithy question at the opening of court and closed only a few minutes prior to the noon adjournment. The point that Mr. Morse was endeavoring to bring out related to the mental condition of the testator when he made his will.

This is said to have been the longest single interrogation ever made in a court of law, and the answer comprised just three words, "I do not."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength for building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Grape the Foremost Fruit.

The grape is the foremost fruit of the world. The grapes used in France to make wine outweigh the apples grown in America. Spain's grapes dwarf the orange crop of California.

Parliament a Babel.

So many languages are spoken in the provinces of Austria-Hungary that interpreters are employed in the various parliaments to interpret the speeches of the delegates and make them intelligible to all the members.

Imitating Life.

News comes that Wizard Burbank has succeeded in producing an apple that is sweet on one side and sour on the other. That's just like life, the sweet with the gall.

All Forms of Life Levied On.

In the tropics the parrot and the cockatoo, and in cold regions myriads of sea fowl, provide food for the sparse inhabitants.

Warning to the Avaricious.

SOME DAINY PETTICOATS

AS TO THE PETTICOAT

A WOMAN always has need of extra petticoats, and she never has too many. It is the fashion nowadays to have a petticoat to match each gown. Or, if this is impossible, the better gowns have their drop skirt or petticoat to harmonize. If only one silk skirt can be afforded it is quite likely to be a lack one.

The silk skirt bargains are the most eagerly sought this month, but the special prices are by no means confined to them. There are pretty skirts of cottons, while the exquisite lingerie ones prove irresistible to the woman who has a taste for white flippies. And where is the woman who has not?

This is the time of the year, too, when home-made petticoats are made. There are all kinds of burlap in remnant silks that can be made into the most fascinating petticoats, and the wise woman is the

MANY WAYS TO USE SILK

Silk applied to net or lace is used in many ways. For example, a blouse of embroidered net will have silk Van Dyked up from the bottom. Pearl gray striped silk on cream net forms the bottom of one such blouse; the silk points being applied with a finish of a couple of rows of infinitesimal gray or cream braid. The lower part of the puffed short sleeves is of this same Van Dyke, and the upper part of the blouse is all net except for spars circular bands around neck and collar. A circle of the silk and with narrow bands of gray velvet ribbon at its edge, and one at the collar finish this waist.

Another lace and silk combination has strong contrast. Vivid scarlet taffeta is used with white lace sleeves and lace showing in only the most slender cutouts around the armholes. In this, as in plain silk, wherever put there is an echo of it in figures or chise trimmings. It is only a tiny bit of chine carrying out the color. For instance, here the Persian reds and yellows of the chine are in buttons and tiny scraps on the lace collar and cuffs, and a band set down on the inside of the neck cutouts. Lovely effects in waists in all lace or embroidered net are made with strips of plain net set in for collar and cuffs, and perhaps a rounding piece to outline a yoke. These net places are braided with the tiniest strands of braid set near together and sewed parallel, so as nearly to cover. Brown is exceedingly pretty on the cream; so is light blue.

MONOGRAMS FOR WOMEN.

Monograms adorn nearly every article of feminine apparel nowadays, although some women deem the fad of proclaiming one's identity to the public in this fashion as exceedingly poor taste. They are displayed on lingerie, draped veils, collars, fans, stockings, shirt waists and gloves. On purse, card case and bag, the initials and monograms are of gold, gun metal or enamel. They come with prongs at the back so that they may be attached to any article desired.

The greatest fad this year will be sets of initials in three sizes, two of each, to be applied to desk pad, engagement book, traveling case or any other article of feminine wear.

A NOVEL TAILORED WAIST.

A CLEVER adaptation of the Eton blouse coat is witnessed in this tailored blouse of white shetland cloth. Both the back and front show a deep Gibson tuck at the armhole, and the fullness of the fronts below the bustline are drawn easily into the figure by two tiny pointed straps of the cloth attached to the blouse with white pearl buttons. The double breasted fronts fastened with more of these buttons, and the broad velvet-like collar and high cuffs of the three-quarters sleeves are of white and black striped silk. A chemise of white embroidery fills in the V-shaped cut out neck.

CARING FOR BRUSHES.

They Wear Much Longer If Kept Well Aired and Dried.

Brushes for either household or toilet use wear longer and do better service while they last if they are well taken care of.

Put your nail and tooth brushes in such a position that all the water will drain from them. The tiny nickel hooks which are sold among bathroom appurtenances nowadays make very satisfactory resting places for tooth brushes.

A camel's hair flesh brush should be thoroughly rinsed from soap, dried and aired after each using. The hair should be combed out with a coarse comb every few days to prevent its matting.

Hair brushes are best cleaned in warm water and ammonia or warm water and borax, or even warm water and washing soda, but they must be rinsed thoroughly in clear water. If you can dry them in plenty of sunshine, so much the better.

Household brushes should be washed regularly. A good solution for this purpose is made by dissolving a pound of washing soda in a quart of hot water. This may be bottled and used at any time.

When you are ready to use the solution, put a tablespoonful into a quart of water and wash your brushes in this. A little soap in addition for the soft one is a good thing. Rinse in cold water and dry in the open air.

Long-handled brushes must be hung up by the heads and the short ones can be suspended by a piece of twine. Don't let them rest on their bristles and remember that a hearth brush will last twice as long if it is kept hung up.

INDIVIDUALITY IN STYLE.

Dress in these days is a science, and the majority of women, recognizing that fact, study its problems accordingly. Indeed, it is the time and thought spent on this tremendously important subject of dress that enables the American woman to be so universally well dressed, while wealth is confined to the minority.

Beautiful and correct dress is not attained by the length of one's purse alone. Invention, ingenuity and adaptation are the most potent factors in the attainment of the coveted result.

Indeed, the smartness of the American woman is due in large measure to her ability to express her individuality in her costumes. In it she shows her sense of the beautiful, and though closely observing the essentials of the mode, the clothes bespeak the woman herself, her taste, originality and invention.

Paris fashions epitomize the mode, but we Americans, accepting the idea of the masters, develop them to their full possibilities of variation and adaptation to individual taste.

NEUFCHATEL CHEESE AND WALNUTS—These cheeses and nutballs are favorites for serving with a plain lettuce salad. Take one package of cheese and mix it with enough pepper, salt and paprika to flavor and a little cream to soften it. Crack and separate into halves eight fresh English walnuts and roll them in the cheese until the nut is entirely covered and the cheese forms a ball. These balls are served with a pickle fork, and should be on the ice for an hour before using.

CHICKEN CROQUETS—Boil one chicken with an onion and a clove of garlic thrown in the water; add some bones and pieces of meat. Cut the chicken when cooked into small pieces, mince half a large onion, or one small one, and two sprigs of parsley together.

POTATO SALAD—Cut cold boiled potatoes in slices; chop up some small onions very finely; arrange the potatoes in a dish with a sprinkling of the onion, a little chopped parsley, and a very little salt. Mix in a cup equal quantities of oil and vinegar, add a little tarragon vinegar, beat together with a fork, and pour over the salad. Sprinkle a little chopped chives or parsley on the top.

CUSTARD SAUCE—One pint milk, two eggs, three ounces castor sugar, one tablespoonful brandy, a little nutmeg. Put the milk into a very clean saucepan, and let it boil; beat the eggs, and stir them with the milk and the sugar; put the mixture in a jug, place the jug in a saucepan of boiling water, keep stirring well till the sauce thickens, but do not allow it to boil, or it will curdle; stir in the brandy, and grate a little nutmeg over it. This sauce is nice for cold cornstarch or tapioca.

LEMON PUDDING—Boil four lemons in water until quite soft; keeping them closely covered the whole time; when done take out the pipe and pound the lemons to a pulp; then add half-pound powdered loaf sugar; the same weight of butter beaten to a cream; the yolks of six eggs well beaten; mix these ingredients well together, and bake it in a dish lined with puff paste; before serving turn it out, and cover the top with castor sugar.

APPLE AND CELERY SALAD— Pare six apples and cut into dice. Slice stalks of celery crosswise into quarter inch pieces. Make a French dressing with six tablespoons of oil, three tablespoons of lemon juice, a teaspoon of salt, and as much paprika as liked. Mix the apple and celery and pour the dressing over about fifteen minutes before serving.

SCALLOPED MUSHROOMS—Well butter a fireproof baking dish, sprinkle with fine bread crumbs and a little chopped chives or spring onions; remove the stalk from the mushrooms and peel them, place them in the dish with a piece of butter on each; sprinkle bread crumbs over, then a little minced parsley, put a few pieces of butter on the top, then set in a hot oven and bake for about one-half hour.

SIMPLE SIMON CAKE—Break two eggs in a cup and fill one cup with sweet cream. Turn into a mixing bowl, add one cupful of sugar and beat five minutes with an egg beater, then add one cup of flour sifted with two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Add a half teaspoonful of lemon flavoring and bake in a moderate oven.

PUDDING SAUCE—One tablespoon flour, butter size of an egg, one-half pint of sugar, grated peel and juice of one or two lemons, to suit taste; mix flour and butter together, then add sugar and lemon; then put into one-half pint of boiling water, boil until it thickens, cool a little, then add well-beaten egg.

HARICOT BEANS—One pint of haricot beans, three-quarters of a pound of Spanish onions. Soak the beans over night. Strain and put on to boil three quarts of cold water, half a teaspoonful of salt, onion cut small. Boil until it has gone down to a thick mass. Time, about two hours. Before dishing up add a small piece of butter and pepper to taste.

HOW TO DRESS TO PLEASE MEN

Although they often term women's dress a puzzle and profess an inability to describe it, most men have decided tastes in regard to feminine apparel; and the woman who desires to please the man she loves would do well to study his likes and dislikes in this direction, and to conform with them within, of course, the bounds of reason.

To please a man it is necessary to wear the popular thing, but it is not at all necessary to study and rack your brain to find out what is the very latest style and fashion. The newest Paris millinery design is not nearly so stylish in his eyes as last season's hat, to which his eyes have become accustomed.

A man usually hates bright colors on a woman, while anything loud he abhors. But, in spite of his distaste for the girl whom everybody looks at on the street, he does like a woman to be picturesque. Extremely conventional clothes never appeal to him. The widow, the trainer nurse, and the actress all fascinate him because their uniforms and costumes are picturesque.

He likes black for the same reason, and admires white muslin and blue ribbons because they are emblems of simplicity and girlhood. He hates stiffly arranged hair as much as he hates the over-dressed woman, while he never looks at the woman in garments patterned after her brother's.

Above all, a man wants to see a woman dressed suitably for her age. He is as disgusted at the sight of a woman of 50 in a Gainsborough hat and pink muslin as he is at the sight of a girl of 16 in a frock that makes her look ten years older than she is, and a hat which classes her with the elderly matrons.

To Prevent Stoves Rusting.
Kerosene (coal oil) applied to stoves with a rag will keep them from rusting. It is likewise an excellent material to apply to all iron tools kept in the house. It not only prevents rust, but removes it.

To Make Irons Smooth.
Laundry irons often become rough from use of starch baking on the edges. The very best way to keep them smooth and shiny is to wash them thoroughly in soap and water, and then rub them with a piece of fine sandpaper.

To Clean White Pompons.
Make a lather of soap water, not too hot, and dip the pompons up and down for a few seconds, rinse in cold water and hang up to dry, and you will have a new pompon.

To Clean White Towels.
Only the softest soap should be used for washing towels. A coarse fabric will leave a mark of some kind.

To Clean Mattings.
To clean matting it should be first swept thoroughly with a stiff broom, then swept cross the grain with a soft broom that has been dipped in warm water. Then wash thoroughly in warm water in which a handful of bright soap has been dissolved. Nothing brighter colored matting so much as this, and, moreover, it goes to prevent it fading. The light colored matting should be washed in water in which borax has been dissolved. If any grease spots are noticed before the matting is cleaned, rub them with a mixture of prepared chalk wet with turpentine, and then wash as usual.

Remedy for Frozen Potatoes.
In time of frost potatoes that have been affected thereby, should be kept in a perfectly dark place for some days after the thaw has commenced. If thawed in daylight they rot, but if in darkness, they do not rot and lose very little of their natural properties.

A Prolific Tree.
One apple stump of an Oregon farmer has been successfully grafted with twenty-three varieties of fruit, including peaches, plums, prunes and even some nuts.

There should be a bolt of inch-wide white tape. Nothing is better for mending of knits or heavy underwear or the negligee shirts so commonly worn by men. These shirts break first about the neckband, and a bit of tape laid underneath and stitched to the band both mends and strengthens. It is done easily, speedily and without either darning or having bulky seams.

main for two days should be removed with a stiff brush. In the event of the grease having sunken in about one-eighth of washing soda added to the mixture will be effective. Sweet milk is said to keep the matting in a good state of preservation, and it is only necessary to use the application about once a year.

BRACELETS IN FAVOR AGAIN.
The snake bracelet is one of the most popular of the new models, and, incidentally, it is one of the most becoming. So flexible that it adapts itself to every movement of the arm, it is a veritable marvel of the goldsmith's art. These bracelets are especially useful for keeping in place the thin, delicate gloves.

PINKIE PRIM

"Come along with me to-night,"
Said Pinkie's Uncle Tim
To his Wall street broker friend;
"Let's go and dine with Prim."

After dinner Uncle said,
"This is my little niece.
If you'll pay attention, Sir,
She'll now recite a piece."

Pinkie made a measured bow,
And then the quiet smote.
"The boy stood on the burning—"
The "deck" stuck in her throat.

"The boy stood on the burning
But still the "deck" kept stuck.
Pinkie twisted at her dress
Until she tore the tuck."

"The boy stood on the—boo-hoo!"
Continued Pinkie Prim
"Never mind the rest of it,"
Said kind old Uncle Tim.

"Just come and get two dollars!
Your Uncle Tim's a brute,
To ask in front of strangers,
That you should elocute."

The production of the comedy drama, Finnigan's Fortune, by local talent, for the benefit of the Chelsea fire department, in the opera house last evening, was well rendered and drew forth hearty applause from the large audience. Each part in the cast was well rendered. The drama will be repeated Saturday night of this week. Admission—adults, 15 cents; children, 10 cents.

Will Corwin and Archie Alexander had a rather unpleasant experience with a runaway horse on west Middle street last Sunday afternoon. The gentlemen were thrown from the buggy and both of them more or less bruised up, but not seriously injured. The wagonmaker and blacksmith each had a job of repair work on the damaged buggy. Mr. Corwin has sold the horse.

Harry W. White, of the White Portland Cement Co., of Four Mile Lake, left Monday for Montana, where he will join a party of friends on an extended hunting expedition. A quantity of goods consisting of a complete traveling outfit, which has been in storage here, has been shipped west for the use of Mr. White and his friends. In addition to this the party have at their disposal a log cabin in the mountains, where the ladies will make their headquarters.

Rising from the Grave.

A prominent manufacturer, William A. Fertwell, of Lucama, N. C., relates a most remarkable experience. He says: "After taking less than three bottles of Electric Bitters, I feel like one rising from the grave. My trouble is Bright's disease, in the Diabetes stage. I fully believe Electric Bitters will cure me permanently, for it has already stopped the liver and bladder complications which have troubled me for years." Guaranteed at the Bank Drug Store. Price only 50c.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

What name so dear to every patriotic American! We honor his memory this week on the anniversary of his birthday. A memory loved and revered by every loyal citizen. Long may the Stars and Stripes, emblem of the Liberty he won for us, wave over a free and happy people, and may the spirit of truth that animated him be ours also. Until the next anniversary, we will try to be first in courtesy, first in stability, and first in the hearts of our customers.
