INSTITUTE TRAIN.

Was Visited by Nearly Five Hundred at This Place Monday.

The institute train reached Chelsea Monday morning right on time, and remained on the sidetrack near the freight house for an hour, departing for Dexter at 10:30. The crowd at Chelsea was the banner one along the line there being nearly 500 who visited the train and listened to the addresses and looked over the exhibits. The train consisted of two passenger coaches and two baggage cars, the latter containing the various exhibits and the former were used as lecture rooms. Talks were given on dairying by W. F. Raven, on corn by Prof. Howe, on poultry by Prof. Halpin, on spraying by T. A. Farrand, and on good roads by H. S. Earle. The outfit was under the charge of Prof. L. R. Taft of the Agricultural college.

There were horticultural exhibits giving examples of pruning, grafting, disease of fruit trees and their remedies; several different varieties of poultry were exhibited, as also were several articles that are supposed to be of use about a hen house. Road materials and photographs of good and bad roads were also present. There were also many samples of corn, oats, fertilizers, and also an exhibit of a sample of a homemade lightning rod which any man can make for himself, and which if adopted will make the sales of the average lightning rod agent look like thirty cents.

A SUGAR STATE.

The Finished Product in Michigan Last Year Was 173,000,000 Pounds.

It would require a train more than 35 miles long to haul all of the sugar produced in Michigan last year.

The weight of the finished product was 173,000,000 pounds. It was made in 16 factories and 26,000 farmers were paid $4,400,000 for the beets from which sugar was extracted.

The investment in factories in this state is close to $13,000,000.

These figures show in part the importance of sugar among the commodities produced in the state.

There was little difference in the amount of granulated sugar made in 1907 as against that 1906. Figured from pounds, it amounted to 5,190 car loads. To raise the beets, 90,000 acres were employed and the 26,000 farmers divided the four and a half millions of dollars in proportion to the acreage used.

The average yield of beets in the state was eight and a half tons to the acre and the average price was $5.75 per ton to the farmers. This brought to the farmers about $48.87 for every acre in which he grew beets.

The acreage planted was sufficient to justify larger crops but the cold May and June had their effect on the beets. In spite of conditions, the best culture brought the farmer more money in 1907 than any other crops.

Officers of the Michigan Sugar company say that they hold 75 per cent of their obligation from one year to the next, showing that the farmer is satisfied. This is the season at which acreage contracts are being made and the amount now is slightly in excess of that of a year ago at this time. There are 45 days more in which to make contracts before the time of sowing the seed.

School Officers and Teachers.

County School Commissioner. Evan Essery has received the following communication which interests school officers and school teachers:
Lansing, March 30, 1908.

To County Commissioners:
Our attention has been called to the offers of the W. M. Welch Manufacturing Company, of Chicago and the Superior Manufacturing Company, of Muskegon, in which they propose to give to purchasers of school supplies premiums amounting to 10 per cent of the purchase price, the premiums consisting of books, desks, bicycles, watches, etc. As these propositions have been made to some boards of education, I desire that you call the attention of the officers of your county to these matters and to the provisions of section 4773 of the school laws in which school officers, superintendents and teachers are prohibited from receiving any gift or reward for recommending any school supplies or purchasing any school supplies. Such an act on the part of said officers or teachers would constitute a misdemeanor.

Firms have a right to offer premiums if they see fit, but if these offers are made to boards of education or teachers they would constitute under the law an attempt to bribe, and if accepted by such persons would constitute a violation of the law as above stated. This law was enacted to prevent grafting of all sorts.

ALIEN FELONS ARE MENACE TO LAND

Commissioner of Immigration Urges Drastic Changes in the Present Law

Would Have Foreign Nations Certify to the Character of Their Citizens Who Seek New Homes in United States

NEW YORK.—Crimes of the Black Hand, the murders of the Mafia and the Camorra, the assassination at the altar of a priest by an anarchist are events of a which point to the need of drastic methods in keeping away from these shores the horde of alien felons who are now being admitted to the New York Herald.

Observations made at Ellis island show that the immigration laws, such as they are, with regard to criminals from other lands seems to be enforced with painstaking fidelity. The inspectors are laboriously conscientious, as a whole, in their duties and seem to do all they can within the narrow limitation of the statute to detect criminals. For practical purposes, however, the whole attitude of the present law is against them, to say nothing of the specific provisions consuls on the other side or the foreign consuls at this port send information which is of the greatest value. An alleged embezzler, Schouawé, was apprehended on the complaint of the Russian consul general, whose description and that which the man gave of himself tallied so exactly that he admitted his identity to the immigration authorities. Owing to the representations of Commissioner Watchorn a year ago not only immigrants who have been convicted of a crime and have served terms in prison may be deported, but those who admit having committed a felony or other crime or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude.

MARCEL WAGNER (CRIMINAL RECORD)

MAURIZIO BAGONE (EX-PRISONER)

This is especially effective where immigrants are fugitives from justice. Without friendly suggestions the inspector must depend upon his knowledge of human nature, his study of physiognomy and other qualities of a Sherlock Holmes, and even then he may go sadly astray.

By dint of prolonged cross-examination, if the intuition be keen, he may be able to establish a criminal record for the suspected alien out of his own admissions; but frequently the candidate has been so well coached that he is able to baffle the inspector at every turn. If he is tripped up he can return to the land whence he came and try again for admission through some port which is less closely guarded.

Practically no effort was made ten years ago to find out whether a man had a criminal record, and it has only been within the last two or three years that the authorities have seriously addressed themselves to the task of excluding the criminal classes—that come to this country.

Observations made at Ellis island show that the immigration laws, such as they are, with regard to criminals from other lands seems to be enforced with painstaking fidelity. The inspectors are laboriously conscientious, as a whole, in their duties and seem to do all they can within the narrow limitation of the statute to detect criminals. For practical purposes, however, the whole attitude of the present law is against them, to say nothing of the specific provisions

It is not unusual for the noted criminals to cross the ocean ferry two or three times before their identity is noted. The law provides that any alien felon may be returned to the place whence he came if complaint is made within three years of his landing in the United States. After three years he is beyond the power of the law, and no matter if his record outruns Herod he cannot be disturbed.

Francisco six months ago, and in the course of his trial a prison record in Italy had been discovered. He landed originally at this port. Many a man who by hook or by crook has entered the country and has taken up his abode in the Italian quarter, there to prey on the respectable members of his own race by threats of violence, is returned by Ellis island to his native land. The finding of so many criminals of this class indicates there are many who get through the meshes of the immigration service net.

Always Source of Danger. "Criminals such as these are like the foxes with the brands tied to their tails which caused the burning of the corn. No matter where they are at large they are the cause of damage and trouble, and I never found any foundation for the stories that other governments turned them loose upon the United States.

It is unfair that the 25,000,000 of immigrants who have come to this country should suffer on account of the ill-doing of a few hundred thousands. The crimes which have recently been laid at the doors of the Italians are committed by only a handful of that race, perhaps not more than 500 in all."

Mr. Watchorn declared in favor of the utmost vigilance in watching for alien felons, no matter whether they were supposed to be in the steerage or the first cabins of the liners. He declared gifted swindlers and embezzlers and persons of immoral character were as likely to be found in the saloon as in the steerage.

During the administration of Commissioner Watchorn the number of foreign felons returned in a year has increased from 34 a year to nearly ten times that number and extraordinary vigilance has been exercised, yet there are many who are able to run the blockade with success for all that.

That is enough to bar the candidate. "It is a great lie," the response may be, "I swear, crossing my heart, that it has been but twice."

WHO IS TO BLAME?

SOME PENNY-WISE AND POUND-FOOLISH METHODS.

WANTING TOO MUCH PROFIT

Reasons Why People Sometimes Turn Their Trade from Home to the Mail-Order Houses.

With price cutting, short weight packages, trading stamps, advertising fakirs, box-car merchants, mail-order houses, dead beats and numerous other burdens to carry and contend with, the life of the storekeeper is far from a happy one. He rises in the morning with the tune of the lark, works hard all the day long, and goes to bed at night not knowing whether the price of oil will be raised on him the next day or not. Then there is the home paper that the merchant sometimes reads, and that makes him tired to learn that he has been for years acting the chump by not advertising in its pages in the right way.

The successful man in every walk of life is the man who intuitively knows how to deal with those whom he comes in contact. It is the knowledge of human nature and the ability to read human character that makes the politician a success, that gives the public man in every walk of life the most useful power in his possession.

Old Foggy Ways.

"The way my father did and my grandfather did, is good enough for me; I don't take much stock in those new fangled ideas." Hoy many in the retail trade apparently take this view of things? What percentage of business men are making progress by following in the footsteps of by-gone generations? It is not a wise and good idea to use tallow dips and pine knots in an electric light age?

Utopian Idea.

Communism is an Utopian idea, based upon platonic principles which neither recognize natural laws as applied to business nor the rewards merited by superiority of intelligence or extraordinary achievements.

PURCHASED EXPERIENCE.

Dealing Away from Home Causes Unnecessary Expense and Annoyance.

One peculiar phase of human nature is shown by how some people will jump in and buy goods without seeing what they are getting. Not long ago a man out in a western state, who had made a few thousand by farming, decided to build a new house in his home town. He was a tight-fisted, pinch-the-penny kind of fellow, and decided that he would buy all he could in the way of fixings from the mail-order houses. He had the local plumber do the lead-piping and a lot of work that the mail-order people couldn't do, then ordered his bath-tub and toilet fixings from a mail order concern. He priced the tubs in the local house, then decided that he could save two or three dollars. He got his tub and his stand from abroad.

Some who order from the retail mail-order houses get a taste of the real thing. A young man in a Nebraska town sent 65 cents to one of the concerns for a buggy whip. It was represented as cheap at twice the price. In a week or so he got it by express, charges only 75 cents. It was done up in a package that the company didn't charge for, but when examined, the young man found that the same whip could be had of his home storekeeper for 50 cents. There was 5 cents money order and postage; 75 cents expressage and 65 cents for the whip, making a total of $1.45, not counting the trouble of ordering—all this for a whip that could be had for one-third the amount at home.

STUDY OF HUMAN NATURE.

Important to Man of Business to Be a Reader of Character.

How many business men appreciate how valuable a knowledge of human nature really is to them? There are few things, even the capital employed in business, more valuable than the faculty of understanding the people with whom one must deal day after day.

One of the first studies of the business man should be his customers. He should know a little of the character of each. He should be able to tell the well-meaning, honest one from the dead beat, and know how best to handle each one. There is a difference between the actions of the man who is always looking for some merchant who will trust him and who never pays his bills, and the honest man. There is also a difference between the dishonest ones, and the honest one who is a never-to-well, and always in the "hole."

Only a Square Deal.

How much of the money which is sent away to the catalogue houses ever returns to the community from which it is sent? How much of the money spent with the home merchants goes to build up other places? Who helps pay the taxes, build roads and bridges, erect churches and school houses, fosters and encourages public improvements, buys farm produce, carries aimes of the needy on the debit side of the books the year around, and is willing and eager at all times to assist them by credit or money, if they may need it? Is it the catalogue house or the local merchant? The local merchant? Then why not give him the opportunity to figure on that "cash order" perhaps you are about to buy. He can fill it, freight included, as cheaply, and in some instances much less, than the catalogue fellows will charge. Stand up for home trade. Dollars sent away for goods never return, but help build up the large cities and big catalogue houses, which are not only trying to squeeze the life out of the country towns, but are selling goods not one cent cheaper than local dealers from whom the people expect credit when ever they need

WARD PLACED ON TRIAL

REPRESENTATIVE CHAS. E. WARD IS ON TRIAL, CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER.

THE EDITH PRESLEY CASE

Appearance in Detroit Court With His Three Lawyers—Loyal Wife Sits Beside Defendant.

The long delayed trial of Rep. Chas. E. Ward, of Bancroft, was begun before Judge Connolly in the recorder's court of Detroit Tuesday morning. Mr. Ward is charged with manslaughter. On April 22, 1907, Edith Presley, a stenographer in the employ of the legislature at Lansing, was criminally operated upon in the Hope Sanitarium or some other place in Detroit. A week later, on April 29, she died in the sanitarium from the effects of the operation.

Two men were held responsible for her death: Dr. George A. Fritch and Rep. Charles E. Ward. The former is accused of having performed, the latter of having procured the criminal operation. Technically both are charged with manslaughter.

The relations of Ward and Miss Presley exceeded the bounds of platonic friendship and Ward's letters to the young woman found among her belongings breathe the most ardent affection man is capable of entertaining toward a woman. To what extent he is legally responsible for Miss Presley's death now remains for a jury to determine.

A year has passed since the tragic event, and the hand of fate has since dealt harshly with the defendant. His wife's father has since died, his own father died, and he himself, by the unsettled state of his own future, has moved about from one place to another. He is now employed in Chicago, where his father and father-in-law had extensive interests.

He came into court looking as well and cheerful as he ever did, however. All traces of nervousness and anxiety, which a year ago reduced him to a physical wreck and brought on him a severe spell of sickness, have disappeared. Mrs. Ward, a good-looking and charming young woman, accompanied him to the court room, and took a seat at his side at the table. She follows the proceedings with great interest and with a woman's keen eye scrutinizes the jurors as they are being examined.

Ward is represented as formerly by State Senator Arthur Tuttle, Rep. William C. Manchester and James A. Murtha. Assistant Prosecutor Frank D. Eaman is safeguarding the interests of the people.

Castro Needs Trimming.

The president sent to the senate Tuesday the Venezuelan correspondence called for by the Lodge resolution. It covers the history of the five American claims which this government has sought in vain to have President Castro agree to arbitrate. The famous Calhoun report is made public. This does not absolve the asphalt trust from blame in inciting the Matos rebellion. Strong language is used by Mr. Calhoun in urging a vigorous prosecution of all these claims and he holds that:

"The time has come for language stronger than that employed in a request. . . . and if the demand be met with procrastination or refusal, the dignity of this government would seem to require prompt and vigorous action." He quotes Secretary Fish as saying: "It is useless to attempt to exhaust justice in a country where there is no justice to exhaust."

Senator Jeff Davis Thrashed. Senator Jeff Davis, the central figure in the political maelstrom of Arkansas, whose waning power is being heralded in all sections, got a severe pummeling Tuesday noon in a fight with Thomas Helm, assistant prosecuting attorney of Little Rock. The senator, covered with blood, appeared in Dr. Runyon's office. He needed medical attention. The fight, in which Davis got the worst of it, was witnessed by many. All during the campaign in Arkansas the senator has been "hitting the high spots"; it is said, and really is in no condition for a fistie engagement. It was necessary to send to the senator's home for clean linen. There is talk of gun play. The outbreak may develop into one of the most disastrous of Arkansas feuds. Davis carried a gun and flourished it. He was arrested with Helm. The charge is carrying concealed weapons. The affair threw Little Rock into feverish excitement.

ANNA PEREZ ALIAS ANNA PEREZ (CRIMINAL RECORD)

they should when attention was called to them. Mr. Watchorn makes an equally emphatic denial that the charge of crime, so far as the administration of justice at Ellis island is concerned. It is a fact, aside from the controversy that the deportations of desperate criminals from abroad, the majority of whom are Italians, has become a menace to the state. Even admitting that the present immigration laws are enforced at every port with the most efficiency the whole system of dealing with the foreign criminal seems weak and ineffective. It is a habit of first-class passengers to inveigh against the "offensive" of the questions propounded to them by the immigration inspectors, such as "Have you ever been in prison?" "Have you ever been in an almshouse?" and the like. The objection on their part is based on personal grounds because they consider the questions unnecessary. Such questions propounded to the average passenger bent on evading the law border on the futile. The only punishment that can be meted out to the person who per-jures himself is exclusion from the country. He rarely attempts to gain the coveted dollar. He knows that the inspector is charged with finding out the very thing which he wishes to conceal and he is the ingenuity within him to checkmate the attempt to evade the law.

which are greatly in favor of the immigrant. All Supposed Innocent. "All immigrants in coming to this country," said Mr. Watchorn, "are supposed to be innocent, and it is something opposed to the genius of American institutions to suppose that every man is guilty and that he must prove that he is innocent. So the opportunity of citizenship is offered to him. He is supposed to be a man of good character until something develops which proves the contrary." Altruistic as is this attitude toward the immigrant, as interpreted by the commissioner, the inspectors within the little latitude which is given to them seek to find out as much as they can. On each sheet of the manifest of the steamship are 30 names, and their owners have answered every inquiry propounded to them. Age, sex, calling and the like are duly set forth and the immigrant is required to state whether or not he is a polygamist, an anarchist, a contract laborer and whether or not he has ever been in prison or been an inmate of an almshouse. May Make Few Mistakes. If within three years to come immigrants who have been admitted are found to have been criminals before they came to this country there is a long black mark made against the record of the inspector concerned, and he is dismissed from the service. Under the present law the inspectors who chance their positions on their judgment proceed to a large extent by fixed reckoning. Sometimes American

Terms:—$1.00 per year; six months, fifty cents; three months, twenty-five cents. Advertising rates reasonable and made known on application.

Entered as second-class matter, March 5, 1908, at the postoffice at Chelsea, Michigan, under 136 Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

AS WAS ANTICIPATED, the entire republican ticket was elected in this township with exception of clerk.

When a young man on a sunny, spring day, because local conditions make it possible to unfairly go against a competent deserving official for nomination for second term butts in at the last minute, there should be some statutory provision to warn him so he might be able to run away before the firing commences.

However we must all learn from experience, for we have no other teacher, and when one tries to advise it is looked upon as a threat rather than an admonition.

One aspiring to office should have either real worth or party service to recommend his candidacy rather than factional feeling.

However, it is not good politics nor right, after a young man on a bright, sunny spring day gets nominated on a ticket, for one-half of the party to shoot him to pieces without some kind of notice.

Detroit Attorneys Were Not Permitted to Interview F. P. Glazier.

Under instructions of Judge Swan, W. E. Oxtoby, representing the Security Trust Co., trustee, and Bernard Selling, representing the Detroit banks, were in Chelsea Wednesday, to take testimony of F. P. Glazier, or bring back satisfactory evidence of his real condition. Dr. G. W. Palmer was taken out to Cavanaugh Lake, but they were refused admission to the house and came away without the information sought.

The bankruptcy proceedings will be held next Tuesday. Judge Swan, being a stockholder in one of the Detroit banks interested in the case, will not sit, and Judge Knappen of Grand Rapids will preside.

County Returns.

Returns from every district in the county, except Webster, show that the proposition which was voted on at the election last Monday to place the county officials on salary instead of the fee system was adopted by a vote of 3,898 yes, 2,399 no, majority 1,499. The proposed addition to the county jail for the insane was carried by 3,323 yes to 2,933 no, majority 390. The direct nomination of state senator carried in the county by about 1,200 and in the district by nearly 2,500.

"Red Feather."

"Red Feather," the romantic comic opera in two acts by Reginald DeKoven, with libretto by Charles Klein, of "Music Master" and "Lion and the Mouse" fame and lyrics by Charles Emerson Cook, will be presented in Ann Arbor, at the New Whitney Theatre, Monday, April 13.

The scenery, costumes and special effects costs Florenz Ziegfeld about $72,000 therefore its splendor is unquestioned. Jos. M. Gaites has furnished a strong company, with the well known prima donna, Cheridah Simpson, at the head of it, and a big and attractive chorus behind her. The tremendous vogue that the opera has attained however is said to be due, in a large measure, to the musical score, which is in Mr. DeKoven's familiar and most pleasing vein. The soprano music is full of brilliant bits of melody and evidently of an ambitious character. Throughout the score there are effective choruses, of distinctly musical value, original tuneful, well orchestrated and ingenious. Mr. Klein has told his story well. The comic element is very inspiring and mirth provoking. Mr. Cook's lyrics are clever and graceful and said to blend nicely with their musical settings. The story of the opera has to do with mismanaged affairs in the kingdom of Romania, where an unpopular crown prince is deposed by the Countess Von Draga, as Red Feather, chief of a band of conspirators, and Captain Travors is elected to his place. The piece is divided into two acts, the events of the first taking place in the streets of the town of Romania and those of the second act, within the castle of the Countess. Prices, 25, 50, 75, $1.00, $1.50.

The last entertainment of the lecture course will be given Tuesday evening, April 21st at the M. E. church by V. P. Randall, U. S. N., lecturer. The magnificent descriptive photo-rama, "The American Navy" its men ships and guns will be presented, showing the American naval life at home and abroad. Mr. Randall stands at the head in this line of work, and a treat is in store for all who attend this lecture. Single admission 25 cents, children 15 cents.

To Our Patrons

We wish to make this our banner year in business. At the close of 1908 we shall have been in business 35 years, this is a long time, and we feel grateful to the people of Chelsea and vicinity for their liberal patronage to make these many years successful ones. We appreciate it we assure you, and now ask you to kindly give us a call when in need of anything in our line, for we have decided to make this our 35th year in trade the greatest one, by selling more goods and doing a larger volume of business so we may really call this our BANNER YEAR.

We shall do our part. All we ask of the public is to give us the opportunity, and we will convince you that W. J. Knapp's Store is the place to do your trading for 1908.

Our aim the balance of this year will be to give better values, more goods for your money than before. We will not be undersold in any line we carry. Our space will not permit us to enumerate all the lines we carry and all the special low prices we shall make. But our Furniture, Hardware, Implements, Paints, Sash, Doors, Buggies and Wagons, and Harness Departments will be well stocked and many lines will be sold this year regardless of cost. We again thank you for past favors, and hope to have the pleasure to meet every one at our store, and share in our money saving scheme to you. It is not profit we are after, but volume.

Very respectfully,
W. J. KNAPP.

All who saw Kate Osterman, who plays a return engagement in "The Girl Who Looks Like Me," at the New Whitney Theatre, Ann Arbor, Saturday, April 11, in matinee and evening performance, at her former appearance in that city, pronounce her the foremost comedienne on the stage and the play the best and most laughable of any seen in Ann Arbor this season.

Supt. E. E. Gallup, Max Kelly and Reynolds Bacon, as representatives of the Chelsea High School Athletic Association, were in Wayne Saturday, attending a meeting of the Tri-County Athletic Association. It was decided to hold the next meet at Wayne, and Northville was admitted to membership in the association. The date of the meet has not yet been determined.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kellogg entertained a number of friends at dinner April 5, the occasion being the 70th birthday anniversary of Mrs. Kellogg. Many beautiful gifts were presented to this estimable lady by her friends, who wished her many happy returns of the day, which at present indications will be true, as no one looking at her would think she had reached the 70th milestone in the journey of life.

The Ann Arbor Lodge of Elks, of which many Chelsea residents are members, at their regular meeting last week, voted to purchase the Alnsworth hotel property on south Main street, Ann Arbor, for a home, the consideration to be $5,800. This property was purchased some time ago by the Ann Arbor club with an idea of rebuilding and improving a club house, but the expense was to be greater than the club cared to invest, hence the desire to sell. The Elks will begin as soon as possible to remodel the property. The cost of remodeling will be between $3,000 and $3,500.

SERIAL STORY

Mr. Barnes, American

By Archibald Clavering Guiter
A Sequel to Mr. Barnes of New York

Author of "Mr. Barnes of New York," "Mr. Potter of Texas," "The Frenchman," etc.

Copyright, 1917, Duff, Dodd Mead & Co., N. Y.

SYNOPSIS.

Burton H. Barnes, a wealthy American touring Corsica, rescues the young English lieutenant, Edward Gerard Anstruther, and his Corsican bride, Marina, daughter of the Pacific, from the murderous vendetta, understanding that his reward is to be the hand of the girl he loves. End Anstruther, sister of the English lieutenant, the four fly from Ajaccio to Marseilles on board the French steamer Constantine. The vendetta pursues and as the quartet are about to board the train for London at Marseilles, Marina is handed a fatal note, which causes her to collapse and necessitates a postponement of the journey. Barnes and End are married. Soon after their wedding Barnes' bride disappears. Barnes discovers she has been kidnapped and taken to Corsica. The groom secures a fishing vessel and is about to start in pursuit of his bride's captors when he hears a scream from the villa and rushes back to the coast. Anstruther's wife, Marina, is also missing. Barnes is compelled to depart for Corsica without delay, and so he leaves the search for Marina to her husband while he goes to hunt for End. Just before Barnes' boat lands on Corsica, where Marina is discovered hiding in a corner of the vessel. She explains her action by saying she has come to help Barnes rescue his wife from the Corsicans. When Barnes and Marina arrive in Corsica he is given a note written by End informing him that the kidnappers for the purpose of entrapping Barnes and Marina have arranged to meet in their search for End. They come in sight of her and her captors in the Corsican mountain wilds, and as they approach, the couple enter a hermitage and there to their amazement they discover Tomasso, the foster father of Marina, who was supposed to have been killed by the Bellini's soldiers, and for whose death Barnes had been vendetted. Tomasso learns that Marina's husband did not kill her brother. Many wrongs are righted. Barnes is surprised in the hermitage by Rochini and Romano, the two detected bandits, who had been searching for him to murder him for his money. The bandits attempt to take away Marina. Barnes darts out the door. The bandits start to pursue him, but as they round the door both are laid low by Barnes' revolver. Members of the Bellinacci enter and Barnes is injured for his great service to the community in killing the latter. Rochini and Romano. The release of End is promised. Barnes is conveyed in triumph to Boggianno. Marina acquiesces in the Bellinacci with Salicetti's plot against her husband and the people are instructed to vote against him at the coming election. Barnes is taken to the mansion of the Pacific to meet End. Marina reaches a telegram. She starts for Bastia to meet her husband. Entering the room to greet his wife Barnes is bewildered to find the adventuress, La Belle Blackwood, but not End. She had been substituted for the American's bride by a sister of the latter. Anstruther arrives to find Marina and learns that she has been turned away by the telegram which had been sent by another without his knowledge. The two start in search of Marina. Barnes and Edwin take different roads in their search.

As he gallops from the little hamlet, some cyclamen branches greet him, he urges on his steed.

And what a ride it is, under the great trees of La Castagnaccia, where chestnuts big as eggs drop upon him, the giant chestnuts that feed Paoli's patriot army, the bread of Corsica, each dozen trees being a peasant maid's marriage dowry.

But though the woods are all chestnuts, Edwin still sees in his road cyclamen branches, slightly withered now, their fragrance fading, and hope grows higher in his heart.

So he rides along the parklike vales of La Castagnaccia, and before him is the green of the great Bastella forest fading away down the hillsides toward the distant and still unseen Tuscan sea.

Here Edwin checks his horse, springs off and picks up a cyclamen branch, and as he rides along, looking at the flowers, suddenly ejaculates: "Jove, how fresh their perfume and plucked two days since."

But the lately cut flowers give no warning to the sailor; he is too eager now. Pausing at the little village of Pietra, Edwin steps into the inn to ask some questions and hears news that makes him frenzied.

The landlord, delighted at his liberal hand, tells him to avoid the communal where the voting is going on. "The Lucchese" have got full of wine and are having a riot in that direction. They are perfect devils, these fellows from Luca over across the sea that Danelli imported to work upon his estates here."

"Count Cipriano Danella has estates here?" asks Edwin excitedly.

"Yes, now it is Cipriano. Down toward Cervione, where the cliffs run into the sea, the only place where it is not sickly and they have no lacons. You can know it by the Genoese watch tower that was in ruins, but the count some years ago had repaired and made habitable."

"It's curious I never heard anyone mention Cipriano's properties here," mutters the sailor.

"Oh, possibly not. Till a fortnight since, they belonged to Muzio Danella, the dead one, but Count Cipriano has now taken possession of them."

"He is there?"

"Why, I think so. A boy who came up the pass yesterday said the new count had come there in a vessel."

"He is there at present?"

"Quite sure!" laughs the man. "Cipriano himself rode through here yesterday escorting a lady with some of his followers."

"Aha, in a carriage driven by an old Corsican?"

"She was in a carriage, but was not driven by an old Corsican; a boy whipped the horses."

"She was young and beautiful?"

"My eyes are old, I could not see well, Signore. The carriage came rapidly past me, three or four riding about it. The lady looked as if she would sa some words; she rose almost as if to spring out, but something in the carriage seemed to check her, and they whipped up the horses. Oh, Signore, how terrible you look!"

"The quickest way to Cipriano's estates?" asked Anstruther hoarsely.

"Down the road there, through the forest, over two ranges of hills and his land begins. But be careful how you go that way; the Lucchese are just beyond the village. Hear them? They are rioting now," as Neapolitan outcries and Tuscan execrations and oaths and the rattle of stones are heard further to the east. "Best take a by-path."

Edwin takes the road pointed out to him; he wishes no delay with these Italian workmen, whom, imported in great numbers into the island, the Corsicans would probably butcher to a man did not their natural laziness make them prefer to let the "Lucchese" live and work for them.

But the by-path doesn't rid him entirely of the "Lucchese." Just after he has left the village he finds himself confronted by some hundred Italian workmen, who threateningly demand drink money, and unfortunately noting the cyclamen flower in the sailor's hand, the red being the color of the candidate they do not favor, they rush at him with unpraised pitchforks and scythes.

But the lieutenant, remembering Napoleon's recipe for mobs, pulls out his pistol. Dodging one volley of stones, some of which come dangerously near to him, he dashes on, and there are two wounded "Lucchese" as he rides away—and three empty cylinders in his revolver.

Here a broken cyclamen branch makes him forget all else, and riding hurriedly, after some hours of mountain vistas, he reaches a little hill and gazes at a view which causes him for one moment to pause. The dark emerald of the woods descending quite rapidly, reaches the paler emerald of the sunlit Tuscan sea.

Few sails are on the quiet waters of the tropic sea, though a sailing fisher craft of some burden is anchored off the shore.

But what holds most strongly the hungry eye of Edwin Anstruther is the foreground of this wondrous picture.

Running into the gentle waves about half a mile from him is a cliff, topped by a fairy green of foliage; upon it stands a ruined turret. Its time-stained stones indicate it had been a watch tower of the Genoese in olden days and that from its top centuries ago had flamed beacons warning the fleeing people that the galleys of Barbary pirates were ravaging these shores. The mass of ruined masonry rising above the foliage has been now apparently repaired. The Englishman sees the shoen of glass in some of the little loop-holed windows. Beside it on the same cliff some 50 yards away is a comfortable Corsican farmhouse, increased by a long modern addition whose windows are large and whose portico is spacious. Of a sudden he thinks he sees a white hand waving some piece of woman's lingerie from the tower, and gallops down the road, careless of all except that it may be his wife. Though it is nearly dusk, the cyclamen flowers still greet him with their perfume. He rides across a little bridge that spans a chasm awful in its depth through which the sea rushes. It is light enough to see very indistinctly, and he finds himself on a lawn planted with flex, citron, and orange trees. On one side is the farmhouse; on the other the lone Genoese tower.

Some broken branches of cyclamen flowers lead him toward the turret. A light is now streaming from its upper story. Riding his horse to the low-arched masonry that is the entrance to the lower story, he springs off to alight upon cyclamen blooms. The odor of the flowers issues from the building itself.

The heavy oaken doors of the entrance are open invitingly, but he scarcely notices them. There is only one thought in his heart: "Is my wife upstairs?"

With his revolver ready in his hand, he dashes rapidly up the circular stone stairway, upon which open little loop-holes. After nightfall, these give him no light. But the illumination of a lamp or candle comes down the stairway as he passes higher up. He calls: "Marina, are you there?" and enters the chamber at the top of the tower.

It is lighted by a lamp and fitted up for occupancy. There is a little bed in it, some old chairs and an oaken table. Upon the bed are a bunch of cyclamen flowers and articles of woman's apparel. He flies to examine them. They are not those of his wife.

Upon the table is an envelope addressed: "Lieut. Edwin Gerard Anstruther."

Its contents, written in the same hand as that of Marina's letter, makes the young man's eye roll in his head: "Mon Cher Anstruther: I have been watching your coming over the hills, following the cyclamen flowers the charming Marina so astutely dropped into the path to bring you here—and am prepared for your visit. I thought you would be attracted to the light in this chamber when all else was dark. As you read this you are already trapped."

Do you think I will spare anyone who brought about my brother's death? Ask Tomasso, who is already gone. Do you imagine, English lieutenant, who call yourself husband to the woman I have decreed shall be mine, that you shall be scathless—

The sharp clang of the doors below makes Edwin drop the letter and spring like a topman down the stairs.

Though he is quick, somebody is quicker. The strong doors are closed. As he reaches the lower step, he hears steel bars falling into their sockets outside. From without a jeering laugh makes him know this has been planned. This is confirmed by the creaky turning of a great key.

"Unlock this door!" he commands in quarterdeck tones.

"Diable, not after having had so much trouble to trap you," is returned in almost Parisian French.

Without a word Anstruther discharges his revolver into the lock of the door. He has exhausted his three remaining cartridges, when the impingement of the bullets shows that the lock is protected by steel and his attempts abortive.

He is interrupted by loud cries of terror from almost beneath his feet: "Hang it, quit that snuffing! Do you want to blow us up? I saw that scar-faced chap shove sticks of nitroglycerin all around in the crevices. This tower's mined, and that scoundrel has got a fuse or electric wire running to it."

His own language with a Yankee twang coming from below startles Edwin. He has some matches in his pocket; strikes one, looks round and sees a trap door in the flooring almost beneath his feet. He pulls it up and peers down. His eyes glare into those of another man gazing up from an underground vault. Holding the match so that he can see the face he gasps: "Great guns, Emory! I thought you dead!"

"I'm almost dead," growls the detective, Edwin, almost stunned by surprise, gazing at him petrified. "By the living Jingo, where's Barnes? I guessed some of you'd find me out," adds the Pinkerton man in relieved voice. "I reckoned you'd rescue a chap who's been risking his life and getting a good deal the worst of it in your employ."

"I came to find my wife," cries Edwin shortly. "Have you seen her?"

"Oh, there's a lady, I think, in the house."

"In the house? And they have cooped me up in this tower?" Anstruther frantically assaults the door again.

"Oh, I reckoned they'd be doing something underhand to you," calls Emory. "Come down and help me out first."

"Why don't you come up? There's a ladder."

"I can't. Dash it, they've got leg irons on me. They feed me on soup and bread and don't even leave a spoon with me to dig out. I was seized and smuggled from St. Tropez in that fishing craft that followed your yacht just the moment I had it fixed so I'd hear their plans. They're crafty as snakes."

"A Pinkerton man like you captured in this disgraceful way!" says Anstruther sternly. For he thinks had Emory kept his eyes open and done his duty, End would have escaped abduction and the rest never have come to pass.

Easy Entertaining. One woman who does her own work and yet likes to entertain a good deal has brought order out of chaos and made the work lighter for herself by limiting her dinner to three hot dishes. She serves first food cantaloupe, grape fruit or oysters, according to the season; then meat, potatoes and one vegetable. Salad and dessert are prepared beforehand, and so is the coffee. She serves all but the three hot dishes—which, of course must be brought from the kitchen—from a small serving table at her side, which has two shelves beneath it, and an outstanding bracket shelf for the clear and used dishes. The coffee, in a French coffee pot, stands on one of the brackets of the serving table and boils merrily until required.

Some Reason for Her Fear. The wife of the Pittsburgh millionaire reached her breakfast table in fear and trepidation. The waiting maid offered her the morning papers. "No, Marie; never give me those when John is out of town on business. I can't bear to think what they might contain." And she sipped her coffee with heavy eyes.—Judge.

The neck of this dainty night dress is square in the front and round in the back. The sleeves are shaped circular pieces, full at the top and trimmed in lace.

The New Shield Clamp. A handy little device that will prove a blessing to the busy woman who loves neatness has appeared in the shops. It is a very small metal clamp for attaching the dress shield to the waist or underarm without sewing or pinning. It grips the edge of the shield and waist, holding them firmly, and is so flat as to be entirely unnoticeable. The clamps are made of gold plate and nickel, and range from 15 cents to 25 cents per set, one set being four clamps, enough for one waist.

Enter Pinafore Style. The woman with a passion for renovation will find much comfort in the fact that some of the newest Paris models show the pinafore outline round the shoulders. For, by removing the sleeves of last year's gown, cutting away the bodice both back and front, and edging with silk passementerie, presto, there is conjured forth a little garment ready to be drawn over the dainty underbodice demanded by the pinafore style.

TWO HOME DRESSES

Home-dress.—Here is a very pretty home-dress in Saxe-blue fine serge. The skirt has a narrow front breadth and circular sides. A strap of galloon in darker shades of the same color trims each side front. The over-bodice is cut with kimono sleeves, and has a deep fold over the shoulders to waist each side. It is trimmed with galloon like the skirt; the rucked undersleeves and tucked front are attached to lining. The fastening is down the center back.

Materials required: 6 yards 46 inches wide, 6 1/2 yards galloon, 6 1/2 yards sateen for lining, 2 yards silk 22 inches wide.

Blouse Costume.—For morning wear a skirt of some plain material, such as the serge, cashmere, or wincey, with blouse to match, always looks trim and smart. The skirt we show here is in navy blue cashmere lined with sateen. It is a nine-gore pattern, just off the ground all round.

The blouse is quite simply made with two tucks over the shoulder to the waist back and front, then one over the shoulder nearer the front, and one up to the collar. The front is fastened by bone buttons. Linen collars and cuffs are worn.

Material required: 6 yards 46 inches wide.

LACE COATS FOR SPRING. Beautiful and Desirable Ornament is to Be Fashionable. Cluny lace shows signs of being the most popular of the laces for summer suits and voile dresses, although during the season just passed it has divided honors with the ever fashionable Irish. Even the lace coats for summer use are made of this pillow lace, and during the last three years it has relegated renaissance lace to its proper use for curtains and table covers.

Cluny is a very beautiful and desirable ornament for any costume and because it is made of a linen thread it is especially appropriate as a decoration for linen dresses. At the same time it is not so expensive nor as heavy as the Irish crochet.

Some of the lace coats are tinted to a deep shade of tan, while others of white are lined with silk in some light shade. The popularity of cluny will also prevent coats of embroidered flannel net from coming strongly into vogue, for the darned net, no matter how beautiful it may be, always has a darned look, while lace should really look like lace.

It is yet too early to tell definitely how smart the lace coats will be made for ordinary wear, but certain it is that, if they are worn on the street, they will not be strictly good form.

HOME-MADE AROMATIC VINEGAR. Toilet Necessity That is Comparatively Easy to Prepare. While that familiar old saying, "A peck of dust is worth a king's ransom," may have truth for its foundation, it brings in its wake bad colds, inflamed eyes, headaches and a host of minor discomforts, writes Emma Paddock Telford. Our grandmothers used to make great use of aromatic vinegar at such times, claiming that it afforded relief to headaches, relieved dizziness and faintness and even possessed great anti-epidemic qualities.

At all events its pungent scent and fragrant odor rendered it gratefully refreshing. And what more can we ask?

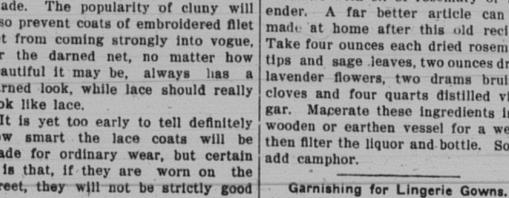

Most of the aromatic vinegar purchased in shops is nothing but sulphate of potash put up in small vials impregnated with acetic acid made aromatic with oil of rosemary or lavender. A far better article can be made at home after this old recipe: Take four ounces each dried rosemary tips and sage leaves, two ounces dried lavender flowers, two drams bruised cloves and four quarts distilled vinegar. Macerate these ingredients in a wooden or earthen vessel for a week, then filter the liquor and bottle. Some add camphor.

Garnishing for Lingerie Gowns. Embroidered linen and lace medallions and galloons make wonderfully effective garnishing for lingerie gowns, whether placed at intervals upon the skirt or arranged entre deux with tucks, smaller sizes of similar pattern being employed for the blouse. The lingerie costume, of course, is worn over a silk slip, preferably of chifon taffeta, which, having no dressing, does not crack, nor make the rustling sound that is now considered as an indication of vulgarity, for the refined young woman, however athletic, is expected to be a soundless, velvet-footed, soft-voiced person of retiring manner, although entirely self-possessed. Therefore, lingerie gowns which look simple whatever their cost, perfectly suit her pose.

The Corset. It is only natural that with the princess and empire gown should come the silk corset, that bodice that fits like a corset and can be made into one of the most elaborate bits of dress imaginable. Just now the new corset is quite short and it is rather plain across the front to give a princess effect, but the sides and under-arm pieces will be furnished with finest metallic laces and glistening trimmings of every description. The corset is pointed at the front and back of the yoke outline, straight across the lower edge of the back and slightly rounded at the waist line. It is sleeveless, though the gimp sleeves are bits of beauty as well as the pretty lace yoke.

Lace Luncheon Set. To make an attractive and inexpensive luncheon set procure at the curtain goods department felt curtain lace for about 65 cents a yard. Four of the squares make a plate dolly, one square a bread and butter plate dolly, and one square a tumbler dolly. Sixteen squares make the centerpiece. To make a set of 12 each only takes about a yard and a quarter of material. A cheap and inexpensive torchon or some other heavy lace and sew around the edges of the dollies, making the seams at the corner, where they will not show.

Dainty Night Dress. The neck of this dainty night dress is square in the front and round in the back. The sleeves are shaped circular pieces, full at the top and trimmed in lace.

RAISED FROM A SICK BED.

After Being an Invalid with Kidney Disorders for Many Years.

John Armstrong, Cloverport, Ky., says: "I was an invalid with kidney complaints for many years, and cannot tell what agony I endured from backache. My limbs were swollen twice natural size and my sight was weakening. The kidney secretions were discolored and had a sediment. When I wished to eat my wife had to raise me up in bed. Physicians were unable to help me and I was going down fast when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. After a short time I felt a great improvement and am now as strong and healthy as a man could be. I give Doan's Kidney Pills all the credit for it."

THE PART HE PREFERRED.

Subtle Meaning in Poet's Criticism of Decollete Costume.

Joaquin Miller, the poet of the Sierras, is something of a recluse and rarely comes into San Francisco, but when he does he is made a good deal of a lion. On his last visit he was one of the guests at a rather formal dinner at a friend's house where he stayed overnight. His hostess had known the poet since her childhood, so she felt privileged, next morning, to discourse to him of the beauties of the Parisian gown she had worn the night before—beauties which seemed to have escaped his observation.

Mr. Miller listened to all that she had to say and remained silent.

"But didn't you really like the dress?" pleaded the lady.

"Well," replied the poet, "I did like part of it well enough."

The lady brightened.

"Indeed?" she said. "What part?"

"The part you had on," answered the poet; and that ended the discussion.—Lippincott's.

SKIN TROUBLES CURED.

First Had Itching Rash—Threatened Later With Blood-Poison in Leg—Relied on Cuticura Remedies.

"About twelve or fifteen years ago I had a breaking-out, and it itched, and stung so badly that I could not have any peace because of it. Three doctors did not help me. Then I used some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent and began to get better right away. They cured me and I have not been bothered with the itching since, to amount to anything. About two years ago I had a gripe and pneumonia which left me with a pain in my side. Treatment ran it into my leg, which then swelled and began to break out. The doctor was afraid it would turn to blood-poison. I used his medicine but it did no good, then I used the Cuticura Remedies three times and cured the breaking-out on my leg. J. F. Hennen, Milan, Mo., May 13, 1907."

THE GENERAL DEMAND.

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

SEAFORD'S IDEAL

By H. S. CANFIELD, JR.

(Copyright by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Arthur Seaford, wealthy bachelor and professed idler, ground his teeth in silent despair as he checked off, backward and forward, his available list of choice epithets in futile effort to find one that would particularly apply to himself. "Idiot" and "ass" would not do at all, for they were in no way strong enough to meet the needs of the occasion.

Seaford was alike the despair and bone of contention of every discerning mamma of the set in which he moved, and as their scheming tactics were to him an open book, he had come to take certain enjoyment from noting the assiduity with which they cast dutiful daughters in his path. If there was anything he prided himself upon it was his Harveyized heart and absolute lack of all emotion. When he found his heart beating madly and his nerves tingling with an excitation of feeling which was entirely novel, he lost himself in contemptuous self-analysis.

It had been but a glance from her eye as she swept on with the hurrying throng, but it had sent the blood surging to Seaford's head in torrents, and he was painfully conscious that no small share of the flood had dyed his cheeks with a perceptible flush. The eyes, they were very blue he recalled and then berated himself roundly for heeding their color, had looked into his just a trifle longer than is sanctioned by the laws of propriety. While there was neither invitation nor coquetry in their gaze, he felt intuitively that they were friendly. He was not at all vain, but he felt too that they approved of his appearance.

After she had passed he did a thing that he had never thought himself capable of. He had seen the face clearly and knew that it was very beautiful, an oval frame for a wealth of expression, but to take in the entire picture he turned and stared after her. He saw, almost with regret, that her gown was perfect and her carriage light and graceful. Outwardly at least, she was without a flaw. Despite his 30 years of celibacy, Seaford was a very proper young man with a strict code by which he governed himself and he realized suddenly with another flush that he had transgressed seriously.

When once more safely ensconced in his favorite chair at the club, Seaford could strike upon but one explanation for the state of his feelings. His youth had been passed without the usually attendant desperate affairs of puppy love, and he reasoned at great length that he was off his feed and his nerves consequently unstrung. But his unimpaird appreciation of his dinner and a steady hard at billiards belied any theories of failing health and nervous disorders.

No matter how animated the conversation around him became that evening, his mind constantly reverted to the various opinions on matrimony that he had read and heard, and these thoughts were all companions to a vision in his mind's eye, a vision of a trim figure all bedecked in blue and surmounted by a pair of very wonderful blue eyes. Even when Waters, his only and particular cronny, dropped into the club to deliver his weekly lecture on the follies of bachelorhood, Seaford listened with great patience. This created such an impression, that his friend inquired anxiously after the state of his health.

Seaford had always held the idea that at some time in the dim future he would follow the duty of every man and marry. But freedom was very dear to him, and then he had never met the woman who had made the slightest impression upon him. He was obstinate with all the obstinacy bred by years of singleness, and he would not give in to the conviction that at last he had seen a woman who somewhere near approached his ideal. For an ideal he had long ago formed, although she crept but seldom into his thoughts.

For a week he fought to throw off his new mood, and finally found, with a strange feeling of joy, that he had escaped from none of his first thoughts and visions. It was a fight between the old life and the new, and although he knew it not, the battle was lost almost before the fighting. It was unconditional surrender, and he admitted joyfully to himself that at last he was in love, madly and unreservedly in love, with the blue eyes that had held his but an instant in the impatient surging of the crowds.

He would find the girl, he knew not how, but he would find her, and he entered into the task with a zeal that brought stares of unsatisfied curiosity from his friends. Waters he took unreservedly into his confidence. The latter young gentleman had been married not quite a year, and he listened with great patience and understanding to Seaford's rambling and fervid outbreaks of attempted description.

Their friends now saw them much in the whirl of the downtown streets, seemingly taking great enjoyment from the passing crowds. Shopping tours were now of daily occurrence and they brought home bundles of useless odds and ends that brought despair to Seaford's man and suspicion to young Mrs. Waters. Plotting mothers who had given up in despair seasons ago, now renewed hope at the zeal which Seaford showed in his efforts to take in as many teas and

GIRL WAS OTHERWISE ENGAGED

Father Right in Thinking He Knew Cause of Her Preoccupation.

For some time the father of the family had suspected that his girl and the young man of whom he disapproved on account of his poetic tendencies had been riding downtown together and uptown together every day in the elevated train, says the New York Press. He hit upon a diabolic plan for verifying his suspicions.

"Wonderful progress they are making on the Pennsylvania station," he said. The girl looked up dreamily. "Are they?" she murmured. "Why, yes," said the father. "Haven't you noticed it?" The girl said she hadn't. "And there is that big building at the corner of Thirty-something-or-other street," he went on, "that is going up just like magic. It seems hardly no time since it was only a hole in the ground; now it is 15 stories high, and they're ready to put the windows in. But maybe you haven't noticed that, either?"

"No," said the girl, softly. "I haven't." To test her still further the father enumerated a dozen other improvements along the line that were bound to strike an observant eye. The girl had been blind to them all. The father went upstairs to the girl's mother.

"It's a hopeless case," he groaned. "She's dead in love." He told the mother how he knew. "If she wasn't steeped in love," he added, "and if she didn't keep her eyes fastened on somebody that talks nonsense to her every minute, she'd never have traveled over that road twice a day for the last three months without noticing some of the things I pointed out."

"Maybe she was reading," ventured the mother. "Reading!" snorted the father. "Yes, from the most popular book on earth. Call it reading if you like. I wouldn't be surprised to hear of their engagement to-morrow."

It was well that he was fortified against all such surprises, for that was what he really did hear the very next day. He had meant to storm and stew, still, as there was nothing against the young man except the poetry, and as the girl's heart was set on him—well, what could a father do?

Reward for Kindness.
As a reward for befriending a poor, homeless wanderer, George B. Kofroth, a former hotel clerk of Honeybrook, Pa., is to-day $70,000 richer than he was a short time since, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. Out of a spirit of gratitude for his great kindness, Otto F. Kuenzler, a Swiss peasant, who died in this country about a year ago, left a will bequeathing his entire estate to Kofroth.

At the time it was not known that the foreigner had any estate of consequence, but subsequent developments proved that he was almost the sole legatee of a wealthy uncle, a silk manufacturer of St. Gallen, Switzerland. After prolonged litigation, in which a half hundred other false claims had to be contested, the money has been received, and is now in deposit in a Lancaster bank.

Kuenzler came to America 24 years ago. He was without means and secured work as a hostler at hotels in New Holland, Honeybrook and Elverson. It was while engaged in this capacity that he met Kofroth and when other homes were barred to him the clerk gave him shelter and clothing. Kuenzler died at Rothsville. Kofroth had neither hope nor prospects of reward, and was dumbfounded upon receipt of the news.

First Lessons in Sculpture.
Modeling presents an ideal form of amusement and instruction combined for the little ones, nor is any occupation more dear to the childish heart. Some doctors and nurses declare that the clay used by sculptors is hygienic, nor is it very easy to obtain in small quantities. A substitute may be found in paper pulp. Tear a quantity of newspapers in small pieces and pour boiling water over them, allowing them to remain soaking several hours. Pick this pulp well to pieces and mix thoroughly with a little thin flour and water paste; a trial or two will enable one to determine the proper consistency. This may be molded like clay, into birds, animals, figures, dishes, etc., which, when they are quite dry, may be colored with water color paints.

Not That Kind.
A young woman in Philadelphia but recently married, was enjoying the delightful novelty of marketing one morning shortly after the termination of the honeymoon. "I wish to get some butter, please," said she to the dealer. "Roll butter, mum?" asked the man. "No," promptly replied his customer; "we wish to eat it on toast. My husband doesn't care for rolls."—Harper's Weekly.

HIS WHEAT WENT 22 BUSHELS TO THE ACRE.

HE REALIZED $18 PER ACRE FROM IT, WHILE OATS GAVE HIM $17 AN ACRE.

Moose Jaw, Sask., Nov. 18th, 1907. Writing from Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, Mr. S. K. Rathwell says:

"I have much pleasure in saying that on my farm this year I had 500 acres in wheat, and 120 acres in oats. My wheat averaged about 22 bushels per acre, and I had 200 acres cut before the frost, which I sold at 85 cents per bushel, thus realizing on that wheat $18.00 per acre, not counting cost of twine, seed and labor. With regard to the other 300 acres of wheat, it got touched with frost but is worth 60 cents per bushel. It will net me $12.00 per acre, but I do not intend to sell it at that price, as I can make more money by feeding it to hogs.

"My oats turned out about 50 bushels to the acre, and at 35 cents per bushel will give me $17.00 to the acre, not counting seed, twine and labor. "On account of the late spring, a percentage of the grain was touched with frost, but on account of good prices, farmers will realize a fair profit on their farms even this year. We are as usual up against a shortage of cars to get our grain removed."

Gentle Persuasion.
A young chap from the south, who recently took up his residence in Boston with the purpose of pursuing certain technical studies at the Hub, engaged board and lodgings at "a select establishment" in Columbus avenue. It was not long after his installment therein that the southerner found himself obliged to complain to the landlady with reference to the noisy doings of some of his fellow-lodgers.

"The people in the room next to mine," said he, "quarrel in a loud tone regularly every evening much to my distress. What's the trouble, anyway?" "Oh, you mustn't mind them," said the landlady. "That occurs very often, at least once a week. It's only Prof. Whiteside, the hypnotist, trying to persuade his wife to go to the band concert."—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Leads Them All.
An instructor in the Military Academy at West Point was once assigned to conduct about the place the visiting parents of a certain cadet. After a tour of the post, the proud and happy parents joined the crowd assembled to witness evening parade, a most imposing spectacle. The march past aroused the father of the cadet to a high pitch of enthusiasm.

"There!" he exclaimed, turning to his spouse. "Isn't that fine? But," he added, respectively, "I shall not be happy till my boy attains the proud position that leads 'em all." And he pointed in rapt admiration to the drum-major. — Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

THEY GROW.
Good Humor and Cheerfulness from Right Food.

Cheerfulness is like sunlight. It dispels the clouds from the mind as sun light chases away the shadows of night. The good humored man can pick up and carry off a load that the man with a frown wouldn't attempt to lift.

Anything that interferes with good health is apt to keep cheerfulness and good humor in the background. A Washington lady found that letting coffee alone made things bright for her. She writes:

"Four years ago I was practically given up by my doctor and was not expected to live long. My nervous system was in a bad condition. "But I was young and did not want to die so I began to look about for the cause of my chronic trouble. I used to have nervous spells which would exhaust me and after each spell it would take me days before I could sit up in a chair.

"I became convinced my trouble was caused by coffee. I decided to stop it and bought some Postum. "The first cup, which I made according to directions, had a soothing effect on my nerves and I liked the taste. For a time I nearly lived on Postum and ate little food besides. I am today a healthy woman.

"My family and relatives wonder if I am the same person I was four years ago, when I could do no work on account of nervousness. Now I am doing my own housework, take care of two babies—one twenty, the other two months old. I am so busy that I hardly get time to write a letter, yet I do it all with the cheerfulness and good humor that comes from enjoying good health.

"I tell my friends it is to Postum I owe my life today."
Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Well-being" in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

A PROFITABLE EXPERIENCE.

A Striking Illustration of True Neighborliness Was Shown in the Case of Mrs. Walker of Georgetown.

Mrs. Walker had raised quite a brood of chickens, expecting to secure sufficient eggs, when they were scarce, to help pay the interest on her mortgage. But a cold spell came along, and just at the time when eggs began to get high Mrs. Walker's hens stopped laying. Not one could she get even for her own table.

She was almost in despair when Mrs. Richards called, and when she sadly told her troubles, Mrs. Richards didn't look sad—on the contrary, she looked very cheery, and exclaimed, "Why that's exactly the trouble I had a year ago, but I managed to overcome it."

"What did you do?" anxiously inquired Mrs. Walker. "Well, I told my troubles to Mr. Johnson, our dealer, and he said, 'Why I have the very thing you need. Many of my customers have had the same difficulty in the past, but they don't have the trouble after using this preparation. As a matter of fact, I will pay back every cent of the money if it does not do the work.'

"Well, I just concluded that I couldn't be running any risk, and so I ordered Pratts Poultry Regulator and began to feed it. Within two days I could tell the difference in the appearance of the chickens, and in one week my hens were laying regularly, and I was getting a large number of eggs when they were selling at 40c a dozen. My advice is, order the same Pratts Poultry Regulator (be sure it's Pratts, because there are so many that are worthless), and my confidence is so great that I'll also agree to see that you are not obliged to pay for it if it doesn't do what is claimed."

Mrs. Walker followed her neighbor's advice, got some Pratts Poultry Regulator, and in a short time had earned enough from the sale of eggs to meet her mortgage interest.

And now Mrs. Walker is telling all her neighbors about her "good fortune" and how it was due to the use of Pratts Poultry Regulator. And Mrs. Walker has also been greatly benefited by the valuable information she found in Pratts New Poultry Book, which is sent free to any one writing to the Pratt Food Company, Dept. R, Philadelphia, Pa.

He Saw a Difference.
Barney Malloy and Mike Cairey were shingling a roof. "Barney," Mike asked, removing a bunch of shingle nails from his mouth, and settling back comfortably, "what is the difference between satisfied and content?" "The difference? Sure there's none," answered Barney. "If you're satisfied you're content, and if you're content you're satisfied." "That was my opinion, too, Barney, me boy, up to now, but it struck me sudden like as I put that last nail in that I am satisfied all right that Molly Cairey is my wife, but I am durned sure I am not content."

Restaurant Prize Seat.
A novel method of advertising a table d'hote has been invented by a New York restaurateur. Every Saturday night he selects a certain chair in his restaurant and places its number in a sealed envelope in charge of the cashier. All the guests select their own seats. The person who is lucky enough to occupy the selected chair receives, as a present, a handsome gold watch.

HOW TO APPLY PAINT.

Greatest care should be taken when painting buildings or implements which are exposed to the weather, to have the paint applied properly. No excellence of material can make up for carelessness of application, any more than care in applying it can make poor paint wear well.

The surface to be painted should be dry and scraped and sandedpaper hard and smooth. Pure white lead should be mixed with pure linseed oil, fresh for the job, and should be well brushed out, not flowed on thick. When painting is done in this manner with National Lead Company's pure white lead (trade marked with "The Dutch Boy Painter"), there is every chance that the job will be satisfactory. White lead is capable of absolute test for purity. National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York, will send a testing outfit free to any one interested.
