THE DOCTORS NAMED.

U. S. Court Appoints Commission for F. P. Glazier.

Physicians to examine into the mental and physical condition of former State Treasurer Glazier as regards his ability to appear in court in connection with the bankruptcy proceedings now under way, have been appointed by the court. The order, signed by Judge Knappan, names Drs. J. E. Emerson, David Inglis and C. W. Hitchcock. They proceeded on Tuesday to Mr. Glazier's summer home at Cavanaugh Lake and spent three hours making their examination. None of the physicians would discuss Mr. Glazier's condition after their return. They will make a report to the court on April 30, and until their report is formally rendered to the court, declare that it is impossible for them to discuss in any manner their visit to Mr. Glazier.

TRIED IN INGHAM.

Judge Wiest Refuses to Grant Change of Venue in Glazier Case.

In the Ingham circuit court Tuesday morning Judge Wiest denied the petition of attorneys for F. P. Glazier for a change of venue from Ingham to Jackson county in the trial of the charges arising out of the recent grand jury indictments.

"The contention is that an unprejudiced jury cannot be drawn in Ingham county," said Judge Wiest. "The petitioner, by his claim, shows a lack of understanding regarding the condition of public sentiment in this county. The contention that Gov. Warner has 'poisoned' the public mind against Glazier need not be passed upon. The claim would not lie only in this county if it were true. The contention that newspaper publications relative to the case have created an inimical sentiment does not hold, in view of the fact that Detroit papers, which are meant, circulate in Jackson county as largely as they do in Ingham."

The case is called for trial during the May term.

PAY FULL POSTAGE.

Clerks Inspecting Third and Fourth Class Packages.

Postoffice Inspectors say that when a regulation now being strictly enforced reaps the financial returns reasonably to be expected from it, an enormous sum will accrue to the government. In fact the postoffice deficit will be materially reduced.

For the past year a new force of clerks was put on in the postoffice of all the large cities charged with the duty of opening every unsealed package for examination for violation of the law. The postal regulations require the payment of 2 cents for each ounce, or fraction of an ounce, for the transportation of first class mail matter; 1 cent for each two ounces, or fraction thereof, third class; and 1 cent for each ounce or fraction thereof, fourth class (merchandise). Second class matter is that embracing newspapers, magazines, etc.

These inspecting clerks were surprised to find that a very large per cent of the third and fourth class postal matter, while enjoying the cheaper rates, was in reality first class matter, as the packages contained writing, which is strictly contrary to the regulations. The number of violations accumulated so rapidly in every state in the union that it was easy to see that the government was losing hundreds of thousands of dollars annually.

Several cases of this kind against patrons of the Chelsea office are pending.

SIDESTEPED A CONFLAGRATION

FIRE DEPARTMENT CALLED OUT TWICE THIS WEEK.

MRS. E. E. SHAVER BURNED

By Explosion of Gasoline While at Work With a Vapor Lamp—Hirth's Shop also Visited by Fire Monday.

The fire alarm Monday afternoon was caused by a small fire in the roof of Hirth's blacksmith shop on Middle street. It was the work of a short time to subdue it, and the damage has been fixed up with a few shingles. It was a bad day for a fire on account of the high wind.

The second fire alarm in two days occurred Tuesday afternoon, when E. E. Shaver's residence on Summit street had a narrow escape. Frank Shaver had been repairing a gasoline lamp and endeavored to fill it while it was lighted, with the result that things were mighty warm about there for a time. Mrs. E. E. Shaver was quite severely burned on the hands and arms, but fortunately escaped what might have easily resulted more seriously. The fire was under control in a short time and a few dollars will repair the damage.

NEW TIME TABLE.

Running Time on Electric Road is Cut Fifteen Minutes.

Marked changes that will affect the arrival at Chelsea of every passenger car both from the east and west are noted in the new time table of the Detroit, Jackson & Chicago railway that will go into effect next Tuesday, April 28th.

When the present schedule was put into effect last summer it was then stated that as soon as many important changes were made in the tracks and power houses the running time would be reduced and it is in fulfillment of this promise that the new time table has been issued. The new schedule calls for a reduction of fifteen minutes in the running time, so that whereas the limited cars now take two hours and three-quarters to make the distance between Detroit and Jackson they will under the new plan do it in two hours and a half while the running time of the locals will be just one hour longer than this.

The limiteds will leave Jackson at 7 a. m., 1 p. m. and 4 p. m. for the east, arriving in Chelsea at 7:34 a. m., 1:34 p. m. and 4:34 p. m. respectively, making the run in eight minutes less than now.

West bound the limiteds will leave Detroit as now arriving in Chelsea at 9:39 a. m., 2:39 p. m. and 5:39 p. m., each nine minutes earlier than now.

The local through cars west bound will leave Chelsea at 9:35 a. m. and every two hours thereafter, a saving of fifteen minutes over the present schedule and east bound the through locals will leave Chelsea at 6:40 a. m., 8:25 a. m. and every two hours thereafter up to 10:25 p. m. and a later car leaving Jackson at 11 p. m. after the theaters and running only as far as Ypsilanti.

On the same day the above changes are put into effect the company will also establish through service from Detroit on the branches to Saline and to Plymouth and Northville. These branches have in the past been operated as "plug" lines.

Al. G. Field Minstrels.
The flower spectacle in the first part of the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels this season is one of the twentieth century wonders of stage craft. To be accurate, Mr. Field, who is somewhat of a botanist, made a study of those flowers which change their colors, and in his conservatory scene the illumining of the blossoms and the changing of the colors is exactly what the flowers do in the wild. The minstrel magnet calls it his fairy flower scene. One of the beds of flowers is the mutabie phlox. At sunrise it is blue, and the afternoon it is pink. The bed to the right of the stage is hibiscus—hibiscus mutabilis. It goes through three changes in a day, from white in the morning to rose at noon, and to red at sunset. The bed along the back near the electric fountain, is the lantana, the lantana is yellow one day, orange the next and red the third. Its changes are slow. The other flowers that change in Mr. Field's stage hot-house include the cheiranthus chamelo, that shifts from white to yellow and from yellow to red; the gladiolus versicolor that's brown in the morning and the colica scandens, that moves slowly from greenish white to a deep yellow. All of these plants and flowers are electrically articulated and it is the first time in the history of a big production that any one has insisted upon such accuracy in scenic accessories as Mr. Field has in this particular instance. The Al. G. Field Minstrels will appear Wednesday, April 29th, at the New Whitney Theatre, Ann Arbor, under the auspices of the local lodge of Elks. Prices, 25, 50, 75, $1.00.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.
Their Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong and Healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. When healthy they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily, when unhealthy some part of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot, dry skin, rheumatism, gout, gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular heart, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep the filters right you will have no trouble with your kidneys. Mrs. Fred Mosher, of 202 Oak Hill avenue, Jackson, Mich., says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills and think very highly of them. I was troubled by a lame and aching back for a long time, and there was a constant, dull pain and weakness through that region. Nothing I did seemed to do any good. And when I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I did so. They soon cured me and I have not been troubled by backache since. It gives me great pleasure to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as they are worthy of all the praise I can give them." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York. Sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's and take no other.

A Correction.

TO THE EDITOR:
Kindly allow me to correct a mistake in your issue of the 16th inst. It was stated that Chelsea took its name from Chelsea, Mass. Chelsea was named for the native town of Hon. Elisha Congdon, the same being a suburb, or part of Norwich, Conn. Mr. Congdon came to Michigan in 1834 and the part of Chelsea east of Main street is situated on his farm, he giving his adopted home the name of his native town.

Respectfully,
Chelsea, April 20, 1908. S. E. A.

Going Down.
A public school teacher in Philadelphia had occasion once to correct the pronunciation of a pupil of Scotch origin. The lad persisted in saying "doon" instead of "down." Finally, the instructor's patience becoming exhausted he shouted at the boy, "Down! Down! Down!"

The pupil in question remained undisturbed by this outburst, but another lad in the rear of the room quickly sprang to his feet, stuck out his hand in a mechanical way; then, suddenly exhibiting great embarrassment, sat down.

"Well, my boy," said the teacher, "go 'n' nature," "you must be a football enthusiast."

"Not exactly, sir," replied the boy, "I run the elevator down to Perkins's."

Odd Beliefs About Butchers.
"Butchers never serve on juries in murder trials," said a court crier. "They are always challenged if they try to, because they are thought to be cruel. They are thought to hold death too lightly. It is feared that they might vote carelessly to hang a man where strict justice demanded the man's release. Of course, I suppose, it isn't true, this belief about butchers, especially nowadays, when, thanks to the meat trust, butchers don't slaughter. But in the past, when every day they killed cows and sheep and calves, butchers must have inclined a little toward cruelty, at least toward recklessness regarding death—don't you think so?"

Side Lights on History.
The Washington estate had just been named Mount Vernon in honor of Admiral Vernon of the British navy.

"You'll have to stand for it, George," said Maj. Lawrence Washington to his younger brother. "The patriotic American of the future, when he comes here to do honor to this spot as the sacred shrine of his country's liberty, will think it was named 'Vernon' on account of its abundant greenery."

George said nothing, but his face instantly assumed that stern, commanding expression so familiar to all of us in the patriot on the two cent postage stamp.

A Tragedy in Arabia.
Once an old Arab out of stone carved a scarab, as a sort of good luck charm to wear. It was so artistic, such a bug realistic, that the sight of it gave him a scare—he thought he had got a case of "mania au potu" from the effects of a night before's tear. While feeling thus oreide he drank some bichloride, thinking the bug would dissolve then and there. But does not hurt scarabs, while it is bad for Arabs, and though they buried the Arab, the scarab felt fair.

To Kill Predatory Worms.
A half teaspoonful of saltpetre dissolved in a quart of water and applied when the earth in pots is dry will kill white worms.

Burglar Stole Baby.
"I am taking away your baby which you will have to buy back, as I found neither jewels nor money in your house," ran a note left by a burglar who visited a house at Fribourg, Switzerland. The child had been left in charge of a maid, who had gone out while the infant slept. The burglar was met in the street by the maid, who, recognizing the baby, gave the alarm. Many joined in the chase, the burglar was caught and thrashed, and the baby restored to the maid.

A curious investigation that is being made in England just now is to discover how far apples are of use in overcoming a taste for liquor.

The question is asked of medical men in all parts of the country. The large majority declared that they never had known a case of a person accustomed to the free use of apples who was a drunkard; and, inversely, those who were fond of alcohol rarely liked apples.

Billville at the Play.
When Chauncey Olcott was here an old Billville farmer had a front seat at the play, and when he heard the line "He looked death in the face and got a wife, the old man muttered audibly:

"Mebbe, ef he'd 'a' took a second look he'd 'a' changed his mind 'n' lived single!"

Advice for Wives.
Upbraid your husband and he will roar joyfully. Be silent and he will whine that you no longer love him. Then he may improve.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Place Duty First.
To hesitate is to yield, to deliberate is to lose; we must act always on principles; in doing our duty we must never pause to calculate consequences.—Agrippinus.

Motherly Vexation.
"O, Johnny!" exclaimed Mrs. Lapsling. "You've worn out those shoes already and I got them for you new just after we had our last equinoxioust storm!"

The Wise Wife.
All people have their faults, and depend upon it, all men also have their virtues. It is the part of a wise wife to find those virtues and sedulously to cultivate them.—Exchange.

Great Painter's Frugal Fare.
Leonardo da Vinci was passionately fond of oranges, and with this fruit and bread he would at any time make a meal.

Enemies of Rubber Tires.
Rubber tires have three natural enemies that are destructive to rubber, light, heat and oil, and each has its own peculiar effect, which should be guarded against.

Not Disappointed.
Adam Zaxfox—What's got you so much interested in that there paper?

Stole the Rattlesnake.
There is a sneak thief out in California who must have had an unpleasant surprise recently after a successful "pinch of a grip which he picked up in the railroad station at Los Angeles. The case had been set down by two miners whom the crook had followed, and he evidently thought he had made a haul of gold dust at the least. When the miners discovered the grip was gone they raised a commotion and told the police that they didn't care so much about the loss as the fear that some one would get hurt through the theft. They went on to explain that the grip contained nothing except an enormous live rattlesnake, and though no trace of the thief has come and nothing has been heard of the snake, the police and miners are still wondering how the crook looked when he opened the case to inspect his plunder.

Probate Order.
STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Washtenaw, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for said County of Washtenaw, held at the County Office, in the City of Ann Arbor, 15th day of April in the year one thousand nine hundred and eight.

Present, Emory E. Leland, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Caroline Henschel, deceased.

On reading and filing the duly verified petition of Frederick W. Notten, executor, praying that a certain paper in writing and now on file in this court, purporting to be the last will and testament of Caroline Henschel, be admitted to probate, and that said will, or some other suitable person be appointed executor thereof, and that appraisers and commissioners be appointed.

It is ordered, that the 18th day of May, next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said Probate Office, be appointed for hearing said petition.

And it is further ordered, that a copy of this order be published three successive weeks previous to said time of hearing, in the Chelsea Standard, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Washtenaw.

PLATFORM TOO RADICAL

Matters of Note From Various Parts of the State Worth Noting Are Briefly Told.

New Orleans from the River. You would never get a good impression of New Orleans from the river, either after dark or before (says a traveling correspondent of the New York Sun). In the daytime little is visible beyond the long protective works but a dull desert of roofs from which a few steeples and skyscrapers emerge without adorning it. The city owes everything to the Father of Rivers, but he is a harsh, intrusive creditor, with whom she does not wish her intercourse to be too close. So far as her front is concerned, she imitates none of her inhabitants, whose street windows are always closely shuttered, while they enjoy themselves in open interiors, pleasant with trees and flowers. And on the other hand, when you have gone a dozen yards ashore the river disappears as if for good. It never forms the background of a prospect from the streets; there are no pleasure promenades on its banks. You might forget that it was anywhere near unless your curiosity should happen to be roused some fine day by a mysterious moisture darkening the ground. Then you would learn from a native with what freedom the river percolates all through the alluvial deposit on which this terraqueous city—the Venice of America—stands, or perhaps it is better to say, floats.

Twelve thousand pounds left to charities by a peddler's will, found in an old silk hat, was the subject of a resumed case in the probate division of a London court a few days ago. An old silk hat (so the story runs) was lent by the testator, a Polish peddler, to William Thomas Wall, a hairdresser of Cambridge, that he might attend a funeral, and he returned the hat directly afterwards. Subsequently the peddler brought the hat to Mr. Wall, saying, "You may as well take charge of it." After the peddler's death his will was found in the hat's silk lining. The president of the court, in giving his decision, said the story of the finding might seem a very remarkable one, but in the probate registry at Somerset House there were just as singular curiosities in wills. He came to the conclusion that the will was established, and granted probate of it, the costs to come out of the estate.

No piece of American political furniture would more surprise the founders of the republic than the undesirable three-legged stool which the vice-presidential chair has become. The founders put it in the best room, second only to the president's seat. Now it is out in the back yard of political favor. Yet it is an important office; the presidency of the senate is a place of power. Four vice-presidents have risen to the highest office through the death of the president. Three others—Adams, Jefferson, Van Buren—were vice-president before they were president. In the case of the early vice-presidents, election to the second place meant that they had been candidates for the first place. And what that really means ought to prevail now; that is, no man should be elected vice-president who is not regarded as good enough to be president.

One of the saddest features of life on the North Atlantic is the long array of tragedies, especially during the tempestuous winter season. The record has just been made up, and it appears that during the fall and winter not less than 350 lives were lost off the coast of New England and British North America. Of this total the largest number represents persons who perished in the wrecks of vessels belonging to the fishing fleets. The record shows there were many thrilling experiences and, like most such calamities, the darkness of the picture was lightened by many exhibits of heroism.

Mrs. Ida Lewis, keeper of the Lime Rock lighthouse in Newport harbor, R. I., is preparing to take a brief vacation, her first in 50 years. In all that time she has never missed a night in the lighthouse. She was suffering from nervousness and loss of sleep. At 65 she is the only woman lighthouse keeper on Uncle Sam's pay roll. Last fall she received from the American Cross of Honor society at Washington its cross of honor and a life membership. Since then she has been awarded a pension from the Carnegie hero fund for saving 18 lives.

The Washington Post suggests that as every fly carries thousands of germs on its feet, some way should be devised to have the fly wipe its feet before coming into the house. Wouldn't it be just as well to have it wear galoshes?

A man who was knocked down by a hansom cab in Essex road, Islington, London, had the stump of his wooden leg broken, and a large number of silver and copper coins dropped out of it.

From the State Capital

Information and Gossip Furnished by Special Correspondent at Lansing.

Lansing.—Charging that Gov. Warner's attitude in the recent retirement from office of former State Treasurer Frank P. Glazier, as well as the published accounts in the newspapers, prejudiced the minds of the people in Ingham county. Mr. Glazier's attorneys filed an application for a change of venue to Jackson county in the case in which Mr. Glazier is charged in a grand jury indictment with fraud in office and with converting state money to his own use. Frank P. Glazier, former state treasurer, is of unsound mind, according to two affidavits, which will be presented to the United States court at Detroit. Dr. Vaughan, dean of the medical department of the U. of M., makes one affidavit, and says that Glazier is not in good mental condition and is also suffering from diabetes. He says it is impossible for Glazier to keep his mind on any subject for two minutes. Harold Glazier, son of the former treasurer, makes the other, and states that he repulsed Bernard Selling and Dr. Palmer at Cavanaugh lake because they were insulting and Dr. Palmer was not on friendly terms with his father. He also denies that Glazier has been hunting and says he rarely leaves the cottage.

Michigan Divided as to Bryan.

The Democratic state central committee at a meeting here was almost evenly divided upon the question of formally endorsing the candidacy of William J. Bryan for the nomination for president. The vote in the committee stood 11 in favor of an endorsement of the Bryan candidacy and 12 against endorsement, the matter being referred to the state convention. It was decided to hold the state convention in Lansing May 20. The committeemen who opposed the endorsement said they were not opposing Mr. Bryan's candidacy, but they held that it was not in accordance with the principles of the party for the state committee to endorse any candidate. William J. Bryan was greeted with enthusiasm at Grand Rapids by crowds along the street that watched the progress of his carriage from the Union depot to the Morton house, by a long line of representative citizens that shook his hand during a reception at the hotel and by large audiences that gathered at Campau square and crowded Powers opera house, where Mr. Bryan made addresses. Mr. Bryan took an early train for Lansing in the evening, and spoke here also.

Prohibition Men Choose Tracy.

The Michigan Prohibition state convention endorsed Joseph Tracy of Detroit for the presidential nomination and instructed the 71 Michigan delegates to vote for him. With 300 delegates in attendance the state Prohibition convention, which selected 71 delegates to the national convention, was called to order. State Chairman W. A. Taylor of Battle Creek in his opening address referred to the progress which the prohibition cause has been making and declared that the men to be nominated in the convention at Columbus, O., July 12 may be compared to John C. Fremont, as the pathfinders who will victoriously land a Prohibitionist in the White House in 1912. Rev. Frank E. Day of Albion was made temporary chairman and Rev. J. C. Cook of Mason temporary secretary.

Might Change Boundary.

Attorney General Bird and Prof. Davis of Ann Arbor leave for Washington to examine the records in the war department to obtain information concerning the survey of the Wisconsin and Michigan boundary line. The last legislature directed the attorney general to have a new survey of the boundary made, and if circumstances justified to bring action in the federal courts to have the boundary as described in the act of congress re-established. It is contended that an error was made in the survey by which Michigan was deprived of a portion of its territory. Undoubtedly a mistake was made in the survey, but a question exists whether the federal courts will disturb a state boundary line so long established.

Bradley Opposes Warner.

Dr. J. B. Bradley of Eaton Rapids, state auditor general, the other day made a formal announcement of his candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor. Gov. Fred M. Warner has already announced himself a candidate for a third Republican nomination. Dr. Bradley's announcement is brief and contains no platform except a sweeping endorsement of the direct primary for all parties and for all offices from governor to coronator.

Surety Company Is Ready.

Liquor dealers of Michigan intending to furnish surety company bonds for the year beginning May 1 were somewhat relieved to learn that the organization of the Michigan Bonding and Surety company was completed when Secretary A. F. Bunting made the deposit required by the statute with the state treasurer, and received a license from Insurance Commissioner Barry to transact business in the state. The law requires a deposit of $200,000 in bonds with the state treasurer.

To Oppose Constitution.

School officials all over the state are planning to fight the adoption of the constitution, drafted by the constitutional convention which recently finished its work. Plans for the battle against the constitution will be discussed at a meeting of superintendents and trustees of the state in Lansing May 7 and 8. The school officials think they see a "joker" in the clause pertaining to the state primary and school tax, although just what it is they do not explain as yet. However, they feel that they have not been fairly treated and want to defeat the constitution. When the primary school fund matter was up before the convention several delegations of school officials attended hearings, to work against any reduction from the present tax division and were successful, but they did not secure all which they desired. The clause, which was adopted, provides that the schools shall receive the same per cent. of taxes which they do now, but does not make any provision for a share of any new tax for the schools.

To Drop Out of State Job.

Representative Gerritt J. Diekema, chairman of the Michigan state central committee, gave out the following statement at Washington: "In view of the many letters which I am receiving from Michigan Republicans asking me to be a candidate for reelection as chairman of the Republican state central committee, I feel that I should make a public statement in regard to that matter. I am under the impression that my position may be understood before the meeting of the state convention May 12. I deeply appreciate the honor the Republicans of Michigan have bestowed on me, but after eight years of service I have no personal desire to continue as chairman, and would be happy to have some one else chosen. Under no circumstances will I contest for the place. If, however, the party drafts me for further service I will regard it as my party duty to accept the position and discharge its responsibilities to the best of my ability."

Says Glazier's Health Is Good.

In a sworn statement made before Attorney T. D. Brown of Detroit, Walter Rheinschneider avers that he saw former State Treasurer Frank P. Glazier's summer home at Kavanaugh lake, and that the fallen financier then appeared to be in as good health as usual. Rheinschneider says that he has known Glazier five years, having formerly been employed by him. He declares that he talked with him five minutes. Glazier was attired in a hunting coat and cap and carried a gun. He was accompanied by his son, Henry Glazier. An affidavit has also been obtained from George Seitz, who swears that he saw Glazier about a half mile from his summer house. He says Glazier appeared in good health. Glazier met Seitz near the Kalmbach farm, when the two walked to a sheep pen and discussed the merits of the flock.

Mine Agreement in Michigan.

The Michigan coal miners and the operators closed their joint conference at Bay City, having agreed on a scale for the ensuing year. Wages are unchanged from last year, but the miners obtained some changes in working conditions. The session adopted a resolution that any member striking in violation of the scale contract shall be fined two dollars a day for each day on strike, or when the members refuse to return to work, when ordered to do so, by the district president or his representative. The money thus collected is to be paid into the district treasury, and used to relieve permanently disabled miners or widows and orphans of deceased members.

Great Bryan Reception.

A special train was run to Lansing from Battle Creek when William J. Bryan visited the capital the other evening. Information received by the local committee on arrangements was to the effect that the Nebraskan was greeted by an immense audience. The Business Men's association arranged a reception to follow the address at the opera house.

McDonald Is Now Judge.

John S. McDonald of Grand Rapids has been appointed by Gov. Warner circuit judge for Kent county, to succeed the late Judge Wolcott. McDonald is the present prosecuting attorney, and was endorsed by the Bar association of the county. E. J. Adams was another leading candidate for the appointment.

Cannot Refuse Bonds.

An opinion has become prevalent that under the terms of the surety company bonding act township boards and village trustees may refuse to approve the bonds of the liquor dealers under a protest being signed by one-half the voters of the township or village. The attorney general's department holds that this provision of the law does not apply in cases where personal bonds are offered by liquor dealers, and is only applicable where surety company bonds are offered.

FIRE SWEEP

The City of Chelsea, Mass., in Dine Straits Says Mayor.

Mayor Beck, of the fire-swept city of Chelsea, Monday noon gave this appeal for assistance to the newspapers of the United States:

We have been visited by a most terrible catastrophe. One half the area of our city has been swept by fire. Fifteen thousand people are homeless, $12,000,000 worth of property has been destroyed. Our business section is almost wholly wiped out. We are in sore need. We have not lost our courage, but are applying ourselves with all our ability to the task before us. That task is stupendous and we ask assistance of all who are benevolently inclined. He who gives quickly gives double. Subscriptions may be sent to City Treasurer Thomas B. Frost.

The insurance adjusters say that Mayor Beck has exaggerated the loss. They estimate it at $5,000,000, with $3,000,000 insurance.

Besides the 15,000 people rendered homeless at least three were burned to death and half a hundred injured. A blackened flame-charred and smoking mass of ruins, marking the sites of some of the finest public buildings of the city, historic churches, valuable factories and business structures, as well as hundreds of homes, covers a belt three-quarters of a mile wide, stretching across the city for a mile and a half.

The city was not formally placed under martial law, but as a result of reports of looting the entire burned section and environs were patrolled by marines from the Charlestown navy yard and 17 companies of state militia, infantrymen and artillerymen. The soldiers were supplied with ten rounds of ball cartridges. Adj. Gen. Wm. H. Bingham, of the staff of Gov. Guild, is in personal charge.

The Big Fleet.

An arrangement has been made at the navy department whereby the city of Monterey and Santa Cruz, is each to enjoy a visit from the entire Atlantic fleet one whole day. The original plan contemplated a division of the fleet between Monterey and Santa Cruz during the entire stay in the waters of the Monterey bay.

THE MARKETS.

A Fiery Evangelist.

Dan Shannon, the Baptist evangelist, thus summoned the men to attend his last sermon in Hammond, Ind.: "Come garbed in your asbestos clothes, as my words will contain brimstone and fire." Friday night he prayed: "Good Lord, if there are any beary-eyed, white-livered, weak-kneed, pigeon-toed beer guzzlers in this here camp, let night turn the light of religion into the bushes and chase out all the snakes, including the rattlers, that we can skin them alive. Good Lord, show us the tree with the coon in and give us a gun loaded to the muzzle, for we would sooner hear the devil roar than snore."

Historical Memorial.

Saturday in the senate was set apart to honor the memory of the late Senators John T. Morgan and Edmund Winston Pettus, both of Alabama. The occasion was memorable, not only because of the eminent character and distinguished services of the departed statesmen, but because it is the first time in the history of the republic that the United States senate has been called to mourn on the same day two of its members from the same state. A similar instance will occur May 2, which has been set apart for eulogies on the late Senators Mallory and Bryan, both from Florida.

The Jap Exposition.

If the house concurs in a report just made by the committee on industrial arts and exhibitions, there will be appropriated at this session of congress—the senate having already acted—$500,000 toward participation in the international exposition to be held in Tokyo in 1912. The committee recommended that subsequently a second appropriation not to exceed $500,000 be made for participation in exhibitions in the United States.

A Fight for Life.

Five hundred Cossacks, with a squad of Russian sharpshooters and a machine gun battery, are fighting for their lives against thousands of Kurds in the Kashaga Dash mountain region, just across the Persian border. A reinforcing party is trying to get across the flooded Aras river to aid them, but unless relief arrives quickly the entire beleaguered Russian force is doomed.

Texas Floods.

The floods in Texas, particularly in the northern and central sections of the state, are collecting a toll of death. At least six persons have been drowned because of the rapid rise of the rivers. One white man and one negro lost their lives in Fort Worth.

La Follette III.

Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, is ill at his home in Washington, suffering from gall stones. He has been attended by a physician almost constantly and Thursday an inflammation of the stomach developed. His family and friends are alarmed over his condition.

Kings Go Armed.

During the recent visit of King Edward a Paris reporter discovered to a certainty that the monarch carried a revolver, a very pretty gold and ivory affair, but a six-shooter just the same.

LATEST NEWS
BRIEFLY TOLD

To Call Castro's Bluff.

From a number of conferences which Chairman Cullom, of the senate committee on foreign relations, has had recently with President Roosevelt and Secretary Root, it is now probable that before the adjournment of the present session of congress blanket authority will be voted to the president to proceed against Venezuela in such manner as subjectuent events may require to uphold the dignity of the United States, to protect the interests of American citizens. President Roosevelt believes that Castro is trying to "bluff" this government. Secretary Root believes that the dignity of the diplomatic branch of the government has been trampled upon, and Senator Cullom and other members of the foreign relations committee of the senate believe, to use the chairman's words, "President Castro needs a spanking." Undoubtedly any plan of procedure agreed upon by the senate would be followed by the house.

Peonage in the South.

The supplementary report on peonage practices in the south, particularly in Florida, just submitted to the attorney general by Assistant Attorney General Russell, contradicts Rep. Clark, of that state, who recently, in a speech in the house, denounced the department of justice for its "libelous charges of peonage practices." Russell says that not only does peonage exist in Florida, but those practicing it have adopted the most brutal methods in keeping men confined. He says the Jackson Lumber Co. used bloodhounds for trailing men and that in one case a rope was thrown around the neck of a worker, with the threat of lynching. He charges that when the runaways were recaptured some were unmercifully beaten and others taken back to camp tied to a buggy.

The Great Fleet.

Los Angeles sent more than 100,000 of its residents to the ocean side Saturday to welcome the American battleship fleet, which steamed into San Pedro harbor, 22 miles away, in the full radiance of a midsummer sun and dropped anchor at 3:30 p. m. The 16 fighting vessels and their auxiliaries, leaving San Diego shortly after 6 o'clock a. m., had steamed up the 100 miles of the surf-beaten coast in single column formation, 400 yards apart, and in full view of thousands of persons who gathered at every vantage point. With the Connecticut leading and with Rear Admiral Charles M. Thomas on the bridge, the long line of ships pointed within the breakwater at San Pedro bay, just half an hour behind their scheduled time of arrival.

A Fiery Evangelist.

Dan Shannon, the Baptist evangelist, thus summoned the men to attend his last sermon in Hammond, Ind.: "Come garbed in your asbestos clothes, as my words will contain brimstone and fire." Friday night he prayed: "Good Lord, if there are any beary-eyed, white-livered, weak-kneed, pigeon-toed beer guzzlers in this here camp, let night turn the light of religion into the bushes and chase out all the snakes, including the rattlers, that we can skin them alive. Good Lord, show us the tree with the coon in and give us a gun loaded to the muzzle, for we would sooner hear the devil roar than snore."

Historical Memorial.

Saturday in the senate was set apart to honor the memory of the late Senators John T. Morgan and Edmund Winston Pettus, both of Alabama. The occasion was memorable, not only because of the eminent character and distinguished services of the departed statesmen, but because it is the first time in the history of the republic that the United States senate has been called to mourn on the same day two of its members from the same state. A similar instance will occur May 2, which has been set apart for eulogies on the late Senators Mallory and Bryan, both from Florida.

The Jap Exposition.

If the house concurs in a report just made by the committee on industrial arts and exhibitions, there will be appropriated at this session of congress—the senate having already acted—$500,000 toward participation in the international exposition to be held in Tokyo in 1912. The committee recommended that subsequently a second appropriation not to exceed $500,000 be made for participation in exhibitions in the United States.

A Fight for Life.

Five hundred Cossacks, with a squad of Russian sharpshooters and a machine gun battery, are fighting for their lives against thousands of Kurds in the Kashaga Dash mountain region, just across the Persian border. A reinforcing party is trying to get across the flooded Aras river to aid them, but unless relief arrives quickly the entire beleaguered Russian force is doomed.

Texas Floods.

The floods in Texas, particularly in the northern and central sections of the state, are collecting a toll of death. At least six persons have been drowned because of the rapid rise of the rivers. One white man and one negro lost their lives in Fort Worth.

La Follette III.

Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, is ill at his home in Washington, suffering from gall stones. He has been attended by a physician almost constantly and Thursday an inflammation of the stomach developed. His family and friends are alarmed over his condition.

Kings Go Armed.

During the recent visit of King Edward a Paris reporter discovered to a certainty that the monarch carried a revolver, a very pretty gold and ivory affair, but a six-shooter just the same.

The American Girl Who May be a Queen

THE DUKE OF THE ABRUZZI

Washington.—If the king of Italy should die, and his son, the prince of Piedmont, and his cousins, the duke of Aosta and the count of Turin, and the duke's two sons, the Prince Amadeo and the Prince Aimone, then the duke of the Abruzzi would be king.

It is a remote possibility, of course, but the chance has given great international significance to the impetuous suit of the popular duke of the Abruzzi for the hand of that athletic and charming American beauty, Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of the senator from West Virginia.

But should it all go right; should the king of Italy give his consent—to say nothing of Mr. Elkins—then the senator's daughter will come nearer being a queen than any American girl has ever been before.

There is nothing in the Italian law to prevent it. If the marriage is legal, consented to by the king, the duchess of the Abruzzi takes her place among Italian royalty. And should chance make her husband king, she would be queen. Think of it—an American girl queen of Italy!

Everybody in Washington knows Miss Katherine Elkins. She made her debut in 1903—she is 25 years old now. Her father is a multi-millionaire, owning railroads, mines and lumber enterprises enough to capitalize the kingdom of Italy. Her grandfather, Henry Cassaway Davis, once a senator, too, is also a vastly rich man—so rich that he ran for vice-president once. Much of this wealth will eventually go to Miss Elkins. Just now Miss Elkins has $2,000,000 which she can call her own.

Insisted on Her Own Way.

When Miss Elkins was ready to enter society she showed of what stuff she was made. She ruled against anything that savored of just a debutante tea.

"If I can't come out without this nonsense," she declared, "I won't come out at all."

So it went on, season after season, until the duke of the Abruzzi came here. He had met American girls before, but here was a different kind.

This particular pair met at the Italian embassy. The duke had come to America in command of the Italian warships sent to take part in the festivities at Jamestown.

It was very apparent that Miss Elkins made a deep impression upon the duke. He not only lost no opportunity to be near her, but he developed a ready wit in making other opportunities.

The Italian warships sailed back to sunny Italy. The duke was in command and perforce had to go along. Washington forgot he had ever been there.

Not the duke!

Nor Miss Elkins.

In the summer she went abroad with her mother, as usual. It chanced that the duke of the Abruzzi ran across the Elkins party in Paris. They met again in Vienna.

Drawn Back to America.

Though there was no Italian fleet to come here in the autumn, the duke of the Abruzzi found it necessary to come to America. He also chanced to be wherever the Elkins family were. When Miss Elkins came to New York, a few weeks ago, the duke was there. When it was announced that she and her mother were going to Florida for a brief outing, the duke of the Abruzzi decided to run down there, too.

They went to Palm Beach. Nobody there knew the fascinating Italian who was so devoted to Miss Elkins, and somehow it happened that no one got a chance to meet him. Had Palm Beach only known it—Miss Elkins' "new man" was none other than a pos-party reached 86 degrees 33 minutes north, beating Nansen and holding the world's record until Peary beat it.

There is a strain of old-time chivalry in Prince Louis that has figured largely as an incentive to his deeds of daring. He may be said to have inherited it from his father, the late duke of Aosta, who was such a vivid reminder of the knights of the middle ages that he seemed to be out of place in modern government.

Elected to the throne of Spain, which he accepted only with the utmost reluctance and from a sense of duty, he contemptuously abandoned it after three years, rather than submit to political compromises which were rendered necessary by the situation, but which constituted too great a strain upon his conscience.

King Amadeo Respected.

The Spaniards are perhaps the proudest nation in Europe, and the people are imbued with a sense of personal dignity which is carried oftentimes to absurd lengths. The disdainful manner in which King Amadeo flung aside his scepter and doffed his crown because he could not reconcile his notions of honor and chivalry with theirs created a profound impression among them. Although he was never loved, it is doubtful whether Spain ever had a ruler more deeply and universally respected.

The ex-king was the only prince of the blood of his day who could claim the title of a battle-scarred veteran, and who could boast of having been wounded in action. This was in the battle of Custoza, in the war of 1866, in which he commanded one of the divisions of the third corps of the Italian army. His son, the duke of the Abruzzi, too, bears honorable marks of injuries sustained on the battlefields, not of war, but of geographical science. One of his hands lacks three fingers, frozen off in his memorable Polar expedition. The account of that trip, by the way, is entitled "Farther North Than Nansen."

The duke was born in Madrid, while his father had the throne. It was only a few days prior to the abdication of Amadeo, and he was baptized not only as a prince of Savoy, but also as an infant of Spain.

His Name Free from Scandal.

Clean-lived and with his name untouched by any kind of scandal, he entertained the most romantic affection for his aunt, Queen Marguerite, who played the part of a mother to him after the death of Queen Victoria, while he was yet in infancy. He has shown his devotion in many touching ways. When he scaled and explored Ruwenzi, he gave her name to its loftiest peak. He is the third of three brothers, the two elder being the duke of Aosta and the count of Turin. He has also a half-brother, Count Salemi, the issue of his father's marriage to Princess Letitia Bonaparte.

The fortune of the duke of the Abruzzi is estimated at $2,000,000. He has less than his brothers, owing to the fact that he has met personally the expenses of his various expeditions, but there is still more property yet to be divided among the brothers. He has a private income from his mother's estate of about $10,000 a year. As an admiral of the royal navy, he receives an annual salary of about $6,000 and from the royal treasury he receives close to $100,000 a year.

As the duke spends nearly all his time exploring the wilds and the most dangerous corners of the world, it is reasonable to suppose that his wife will be his companion in his future expeditions. As Miss Elkins is a thorough sportswoman, she is doubtless as capable as any man of scaling mountain peaks. She has even intimated to some of her very intimate friends that she and the duke will spend their honeymoon in an expedition to some out of the way corner of the globe.

Met at Washington Ball.

The duke met Miss Elkins at a ball in Washington given by Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson. Col. Bromwell, aide to President Roosevelt, introduced the handsome young Italian prince to the senator's daughter.

Everybody in Washington exerted themselves to entertain the duke when he was here officially, but it was left to Miss Elkins to make the ten-strike.

"Let me do something for you," she said, chatting one day with the duke. "I'll give you a dinner, a dance or a theater party."

"I'll take them all," answered the duke promptly.

So, one day, many of the friends of Miss Elkins received cards to a dinner in honor of the duke of the Abruzzi.

After the dinner Miss Elkins announced that they would attend the theater, and off they were whirled in autos. After the theater the entire party was whizzed up to Rauscher's, the Sherry's of Washington, where Miss Elkins had invited a party for dancing.

To his amazement the duke had enjoyed a dinner, the theater and a dance all in one evening.

But that is nothing new for Miss Elkins. She has always had her own way. She is the only daughter of the senator by his second marriage. She is a girl of brilliant mind, much originality and pronounced will power.

If, by a rare chance, she should be called on to grace a throne, Washington knows she would do it well.

Emperor Dislikes "Flats."

Emperor William of Germany commends the English dwelling house system as against the flat system prevalent in Berlin and other German cities. "The houses even of the poorest workmen," said the emperor, "have a comfortable, homelike atmosphere, with an abundance of flowers inside and outside."

MISS KATHERINE ELKINS

Lim Jucklin on The Country Editor's Dinner

By Ople Read

Col. Shang W. Mowlett, the editor of the country paper, while out for a day among his subscribers, halted at the house of old Limuel Jucklin. He had time to stop only a few moments, he said; a delinquent tax list demanded his attention at home.

And after sitting a long time it seemed as if he were about to go. He took up his hat and had made a motion to put it on his head when his attention was seized upon by the rattle of dishes in the dining-room, just across the broad passageway in the north section of the old log house.

But as the hours were hungrily along he saw no signs of dinner. In no seeming fear of danger the chickens walked about the yard. And from the window, where a perfumed breeze murmured music amid the tendrils of a trumpet vine, the editor looked across a corner of the garden into a lot where in the sunshine sucking pigs, just big enough, if roasted, to hold crab apples in their mouths, were tumbling over one another.

Not with an extra effort of memory, was it that the newspaper man recalled the fact that his pre-dawn breakfast had consisted mainly of soda-cakes and extreme hurry. It was fresh in his mind as he heard the "pot rack" of a guinea hen. But with the air of vital concern he talked on the condition of the country and of foreign probabilities. He didn't load down his speculative mind with what had taken place. That would have been a matter of mere industry.

The sun lost its balance and slipped over into the afternoon, the waving vine at the window sifted a softer light, and still there was no call from pot or pan. So, at last, the editor arose and was about to put his hat on his head when there came from the dining-room the rattle of dishes. Then he hesitated, turned about as if he had just thought of a wise thing to say, and sat down.

"I reckon a cat must have run over the table," said old Lim, and Shang W. Mowlett's heart beat low in despair.

"Sorry, colonel, you didn't come a little earlier. Reckon you seen some of them pigs out there. Had one of their brothers roasted to a fall of the brown brown, and—"

The editor grabbed out his handkerchief and wiped his mouth. Old Lim continued: "And I had some early rose potatoes as pink-eyed as one of these—these Albumins—is that what you call 'em'?"

"Albumins," drawled the editor.

"Yes, that's it; seen one in the side show, when the cirks come to Purdy. And I had some of the best corn bread I reckon you ever saw—made out of this pearl corn. Hard! Why, you could have a grain of it set and wear it for a breastpin. Along with it all, too, was a yaller pitcher full of buttermilk brought from the spring-house, and—"

"I've got to go," the editor exclaimed, jumping up and clapping his hat on his head.

I've Been Thinking

By Charles Battell Loomis

HAVE you ever heard about that business man who in advertising his particular brand of breakfast fodder increased the circulation of the paper in which he advertised a hundred-fold?

Well, it was this way. His name was Wise, and he had unlimited money to spend. He had formerly owned a sawmill and he naturally had a large quantity of sawdust on hand. It struck him that if he could buy a low-priced molasses, and could make an amalgam of molasses and sawdust and advertise it as the only nutritious food, good alike for brain, brawn, cuticle, and hair, he could make a fortune in a month or two.

So he called in an advertising man, and put him on a princely salary at once, and said:

"Go ahead. Advertise Sord Ust in any way you like, as long as you get the people's attention."

Now, the advertising man was a genius and he said to himself: "If I advertise this thing a little in every paper people will only think a little of it, but if I bend all my energies on one paper, and that a very important one, and advertise it there uniquely for a month or so, the very oddity of the thing will attract attention."

So he went to the office of the Daily Howler and said:

"I want to buy every page in your paper for advertising purposes."

And the business manager told him it couldn't be done.

So the advertising man showed him what a large check he could write, and then the business manager said it was possible, and the next day Mr. Man had every page in the Daily Howler. There was not a murder, not a bit of editorial speculation, not a thing of any sort in the paper, except the name and the date and the subscription price.

And of course there was no advertisement. And that piqued curiosity. Well, this thing happened next day and the next, and then on the editorial page was printed in very small letters, TRY SORD UST.

Now you may well believe that subscribers began to rush in, for here was a paper that could be introduced into the most bigoted home in the land. There were no tiresome politics in it; no dreadful murders; nothing but Sord Ust.

Every one said it was the cleanest paper that had ever been issued, and more and more people subscribed to it. It got to be quite a fad. To be sure, the subscribers did not know what was going on in the world except by hearsay, but they had that much time for other things, and they were, consequently, far happier, and, reading about no murders or steamship trusts or presidential possibilities, they finally came to the conclusion that the millennium was at hand.

But, of course, the thing that made the most impression on them was this Sord Ust. They began to inquire for it in the stores and they found that no one kept it. No one had ever heard of it. It was impossible to buy a box of it anywhere because the clever advertising man had given or-next room. He was mighty fond of cards, and Bill Atcherson 'lowed that he was a lyin' there a waitin' for the last trump. Now, Bill, he's monst'us fond of good things to eat. Tuther day he brought me about as fine a mess of young squirrels as I ever set down to. Fried 'em in the lard out of a mast-fed hog. And that reminds me, is there anything sweeter than a chinkapin ham? Jest take and b'il it in elder about four days old and—I tell you, then you've got suthin' to smack your mouth over."

The editor got out of his chair. "Mr. Jucklin, I've stayed too long already, and must go."

"Don't you do it. My work's putty well up and I've got nothin' to do but to sit here and talk. And as for you—you don't need to look at a watch nor the sun when it's slantin' toward the west. They say that time was made for slaves, and if you ever was a slave you were set free long ago. Sit down—just a minit. I'll give you a piece of news you can print in your paper."

And forcing the editor to sit down, he continued: "I reckon you hearn of what happened over at old Groggin's. Well, Groggin's daughter, Tilly, as likely a girl as you'd meet in a day's travel, of a Sunday when folks are goin' to church, took up a notion that she was in love with a long, lank feller that come down the river on a raft and stopped at Moseley's place. Now whether or not the logs belonged to him don't enter into the story. At any rate, he sold 'em and the first thing he done was to give a dinner in the woods, and the most urgent invite was sent to Tilly Groggin. He had seen her somewhere, no matter where, and so, along with a number of others, she went. And it was a barbecue mind you. They roasted sheep whole and—wait a minit—and ducks, too; and he had about two barrel of shell oysters that were brought in right fresh, and they roasted them on the hot coals, and—"

"But what happened? I'm in a hurry."

"Happened? You jest wait a minit. By the time dinner was ready everybody was hangry, and the long, lank feller, he takes up a knife about as long as a scythe and begins to carve a muton, and the brown juice began to run out and—"

"Turn me loose," exclaimed the hungry man. "I've got to go, I tell you."

And just at that moment old Mrs. Jucklin appeared at the door.

"Why, howdy do, Col. Mowlett. When Limuel seen you a comin' he told me not to have dinner till he said so, and I don't know what he meant by it unless it was one of his own sort of jokes, but as you must be hangry by this time you'll please walk out."

The colonel looked at Lim and the old man shouted, and the old lady said: "Limuel, you ought to be ashamed of yourself."

(Copyright, by Ople Read.)

ders to his employer to refuse to sell it for at least six months.

People did not even know whether it was a new kind of soap, or a break fast food, or the latest thing in stove polish.

What was the result? Why, people were mad to get it. They would have it. The very idea that in a free country they were not allowed to buy anything they wanted! Was this Maine with a prohibitive law on something the people really wanted?

And all this time the editor of the Daily Howler kept on increasing his edition, and all the time Mr. Wise went on buying sawdust and cheap molasses until he had a whole county in northern New York heaped high with it and five large mills hard at work compressing it into cakes.

And at last, seemingly on account of the pressure of public opinion, but really because the advertising man said it was high time, Mr. Wise put an advertisement on the first page of the Daily Howler to the effect that Sord Ust was a breakfast food, and that all you need do to it was to pour a little hot milk on it; and if your grocer wouldn't get it for you change your grocer at once!

Was it a success?

Well, I guess.

Why, they had one long freight train stretched from the mills to New York, moving all the time on a special track and as fast as a car was unloaded at the Manhattan end a car was filled at the other end.

Motive power? Electricity, of course. And the man became a millionaire ten times over before the year was up and before the Sord Ust had kicked up any racket in the insides of the populace.

And now the advertising man began to advertise in all the papers, and the Daily Howler came before its millions of subscribers with murders and editorials once more, and they, after their long fast, were only too glad to learn that the world was not as good as they had suspected, and the Daily Howler was a bigger success than ever.

But the editor had got the tip, and he didn't use Sord Ust on his home menu. And he's alive yet.

The Chelsea Standard.

An independent local newspaper published every Thursday afternoon from its office in the Standard building, Chelsea, Michigan.

BY O. T. HOOVER.

Terms:—$1.00 per year; six months, fifty cents; three months, twenty-five cents. Advertising rates reasonable and made known on application.

Entered as second-class matter, March 5, 1906, at the postoffice at Chelsea, Michigan, under 130 Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

THE second district republican convention recognized Frank S. Neal's ability as district chairman and his aggressive hustling qualities as a republican by recommending him to the state convention for presidential elector.

JOHN W. MINER, the expert hired by the village to investigate and audit the books of various departments, finds that the electric light and water works department expended in two years only eight thousand dollars in excess of amount received from private consumers. Inasmuch as we get our public lighting and fire protection system for this $4,000 per year, it looks as though the municipal ownership system was a good investment, as the expenses would have been much larger under the contracts existing at the time of purchase.

It is perfectly apparent that any reorganization of the Glazier Store Co. that can possibly be brought about, must be upon a basis independent of the village, as no business men would ever organize with the idea of having their power and other interests depend upon public authorities, and the election activity necessary in the creation of said authorities.

It will certainly not help matters in the way of reorganization to commence litigation regarding contracts which will certainly be amicably disposed of by agreement within a comparative short space if the store works are to be run as a going institution.

Therefore, the present grand stand play of the village council in trying to cancel contracts and condemn land is uncalled for, and they would nearer represent public opinion if they would let matters remain as they are, so that the receiver may not be hampered in doing such business as may come to it until the reorganization is effected.

For Prosecuting Attorney.

With a full knowledge of the responsibility which attaches to a faithful performance of the duties of prosecuting attorney of Washtenaw county and with the sole purpose of discharging the duties of the position as the law requires and to the satisfaction of the people of the county, I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the office, assuring the people that if nominated at the primary and elected at the polls I will serve them with fidelity and to the best of my ability.

SYSTEM OF SIGNALS.

Michigan Roads Instructed to Install Uniform System of Signals.

The representatives of the operating departments of the railroads of Michigan met with the railroad commission and discussed the proposal of the commission that a uniform system of switches be established on Michigan railroads.

The members of the commission have been impressed with the necessity for uniform switches and signals by accidents which have occurred in this state, particularly the recent smashup at Lenox on the Grand Trunk, and they believe that the safety of the traveling public demands a reform in this regard.

Urging the expense of installation the railroad men opposed the commission's suggestions, but they were informed that the improvement must eventually come and that they might as well prepare for it. It is not understood that the commission proposes any particular manufacture of switches, but it is insisted that all switches and signals throughout the state should be similar in construction and method of operation.

"Peter Pan."

Charles Frohman will present at the New Whitney Theater on Thursday, April 30, for one night the most successful play of the century, "Peter Pan" which is by J. M. Barrie, the author of "The Little Minister" and other worthy and delightful literary and dramatic creations. "Peter Pan" has been played wherever the English language is spoken and it is deeper rooted in the affections of the theatre-going public than any stage production of modern times. Not to have seen "Peter Pan" is considered a great misfortune. This whimsical fantastical romance of the wonderful Barrie with its pirates and Indians and Never-Never-Land boys and fairies weaves the stage with all the spirit, brightness, mysticism and glamour of youth, and takes its visitors back along golden and beautiful paths to the days and thrilling delights of their boyhood and girlhood.

It simply lifts the years from one's shoulder and fills one's eyes with the glitter and charm of the seasons when we lived in dreams and revelled in the wildest soarings of the imaginations. Do you believe in fairies? If you do you will simply rejoice in "Peter Pan." If you don't "Peter Pan" will convince you that fairies are the very sweetest and easiest things in the world to believe in.

Besides the good fairies there are bold, bad, pirates in the play, and a band of friendly Indians, and a Sherlock Holmesy crocodile who dogs the steps of the pirate chief and makes life desperate and miserable for that forbidding and blood-thirsty man. There are lions and other animals in it, and lots of marvelous and interesting things. But the chief attractive figure of all is Peter himself, the boy who comes back from his house in the tree-tops of the Never-Never-Land for a little adventure among the more normal people of the world. Peter is a boy who has never grown up. He is a fine heroic lad and the bravery he shows in battling with the Pirate Hook, whom he conquers, entitles him to a high place in the most stirring story books of the day. He leads his band of boys against the pirates to rescue a fair little maiden in distress and the adventure he has and the hair-breadth escape make your blood tingle. "Peter Pan" is genuinely a miracle in play-making.

It is a play for young and old alike. It is a mixture of laughter and pleasant memories. It is a play once seen can never be forgotten.

Charles Frohman will make a beautiful production of "Peter Pan" putting the Indians, the pirate ship, the underground home and Peter's house in the tree-tops on the stage in realistic and attractive style. Prices 25, 50, 75, $1.00, $1.50.

Tobacco Tags Bring Fine Presents.

According to reports from the local dealers in tobacco more people are saving tobacco tags than ever before in the history of the giving of presents in exchange for tobacco tags. This tremendous increase in tag saving is due to the action of the American Tobacco Company in offering a remarkable list of valuable presents in return for tags from various popular tobaccos.

Such brands as Spear Head, Standard Navy, Town Talk, Horse Shoe, Tenpenny, Big Four, Old Statesmen, and about a dozen others, bear tags which can be exchanged for presents. An idea of what can be accomplished by so far-reaching a co-operative system is gathered from such sample offers as the giving of an English steel razor for only 50 tags.

Reports in the tobacco trade indicate that dealers throughout the country are laying in stocks of presents in order to be able to meet the rising boom in tobacco tag saving. In places where the dealers are not supplied with presents, American Tobacco Company is redeeming by mail tag-savers selecting the presents they wish from a free catalog.

It has set the whole world a-thinking. Upon it all doctors, as one, agree; The tonic all your friends are taking is, Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. Freeman & Cummings Co.

BREVITIES

The Baptists of Dexter dedicated a new organ last Sunday.

Fowlerville has let the construction of building a system of water works to M. Walker & Co., of Fenton.

J. Henry Fish, one of the old settlers of Saline, and for seven years a Justice of the peace is dead of paralysis.

The United States patent office has allowed fourteen claims on a typesetting machine to inventor L. Roberts of Jackson.

Irving Kennedy, who was a resident of this place for a few months a couple of years ago has been appointed marshal of Dexter village.

Ann Arbor is endeavoring to raise a fund of $50,000 which they will hang up as a bait to capture new factories—when they raise it.

Judge Kinne on Monday signed a perpetual decree enjoining the city of Ypsilanti from paying the $11,000 bonds to the Hay Press company as a bonus to locate there.

Physicians who have been in attendance since Miss Lois Clever of Cass City was thrown from a horse at Ypsilanti on April 11, reported that the young lady is dying.

Hines & Robinson, of Grass Lake have perfected a new fangled hay and wagon rack, and have leased the old bean house in that village for a factory. Work will be commenced at once.

George M. Clarken, an Ann Arbor real estate dealer and contractor, is dead after an illness of several months. He had submitted to several operations. He was 65 years of age.

Penny machines are again making their appearance in saloons and cigar stores in Jackson. Not all saloon men have placed them in commission, neither have all cigar merchants.

A couple of students on Saturday discovered the body of T. S. Varnum, the Detroit newspaper man, who disappeared from Ann Arbor several weeks ago, in the Huron river at Geddes.

There have been just added to the creamery at Grass Lake a skim milk pasteurizer, Irish's moisture tester, and cream scale, all of which are important additions to this establishment's equipment.

The bell at the Clinton woolen mills is again ringing the hours of the night. It is now stationed over the water tank many feet above the ground and is connected by wire to the engine room. From here it is struck each hour after 8.

The ladies who attended Easter services at the First Baptist church in Ypsilanti were requested to remove their millinery creations, in the way of "merry widows" and other large hats, and the rule for removal of hats is to remain throughout the season.

Speeding at a high rate seven miles west of Marshall a M. U. R. car plunged through a herd of six cattle, killing all. Only the nerve of the motorman saved a wreck.

Not having time to stop the car, he threw on full power, and went through the herd at a high speed.

Three young men, giving the names of William Cylves and Horace Williams, Canton, O., and William Mayhow, Battle Creek, were arrested at Brighton Saturday on suspicion of having robbed gum machines in the P. M. depot at Howell. They were taken to Howell for examination.

A third ward resident found a watch lost by a newspaper carrier boy and when asked to return it told the boy he wanted a reward. He changed his mind after being taken before Justice Doty on a larceny by conversion charge, returned the watch and was let go on paying the cost of the watch. —Ann Arbor Times.

We learn that Adam Houck purchased 160 acres of wild land near Mercedes, Texas, which is in the southern part and near the Rio Grande river from which the land must be irrigated. He thinks of going there next fall to develop the land and will probably raise onions, as he is an extensive and successful onion raiser here. —Manchester Enterprise.

The state postmasters' convention, an assembly of Michigan postmasters of the first, second, third and fourth classes, will be held in this city August 25 and 26. Postmaster General Meyer and some of his assistants are expected, and a banquet may be extended the visitors by the citizens of Jackson. —Jackson Patriot.

Speeding over country roads, enjoying their first ride in an automobile which they had purchased only a few hours previously, Charles and William Woolcott, brothers, who resided at Milan, were struck by a Michigan Central passenger train, hurled 100 feet and instantly killed near Dearborn Tuesday.

Refusing to permit amputation of his leg, Claude Taylor, aged 25, son of Edwin Taylor, a prominent farmer of Plymouth, gave his life instead Tuesday. Taylor fell five years ago and injured his knee. Tuberculosis followed and doctors said if he did not have it amputated he would die. He steadfastly refused to let the leg go and the tuberculosis spread.

So certain milk dealers are placing formaldehyde in their product, hey? Now possibly our folks may understand why their milk always remains so sweet! When one family really wanted to "sour" the milk and could not they became suspicious and sent a sample down to Sanitary Inspector Owen. It didn't take him long to detect the poison in it, and now the authorities are looking the matter up. —Jackson Star.

Teach Poor Women to Cook. Some of the home economics clubs of the east have established "centers" with all cooking school conveniences, where poor women may be taught how to keep house and cook economically. There is no fancy cooking taught, but simply the things that are served by the poor people themselves each day, only they are taught to keep account of the expense and cook economically.

Had Been Busy. A man who served as a hackman in Hempstead, Long Island, for over 50 years died. Some days previous, as he sat dozing in front of the railroad depot, a commuter said to him: "You must have seen some queer things, Luke, in your half century of going to and fro?" "Dunno as I have," was the slow answer. "Just hacked."

Whistling Women. There is a superstition that it is very unlucky for a woman to whistle. It arises from an old tradition that while the nails of our Lord's cross were being forged a woman 'ood by and whistled, and, curiously enough, comparatively few women whistle. —Home Notes.

Americans Spoil Servants. A French servant who has been employed for any length of time in an American family is considered by the better class of French people as spoiled for their service. The cost of domestic service of all kinds has advanced at least 25 per cent. since the spring of the year 1900.

The Man That Smiles. I love the man that can smile in trouble, that can gather strength from distress, and grow grave by reflection. 'Tis the business of little minds to shrink; but he whose heart is firm, and whose conscience approves his conduct, will pursue his principles unto death. —Thomas Paine.

Grows in Deep Water. The greatest known depth at which any green plant grows in fresh water is reached by a moss called Thamnum lemanii, which has been lately discovered by Prof. F. A. Forel, 20 feet below the surface of the Lake of Geneva.

Only Good Breeds Good. Let me assure you once for all that as you grow older if you enable yourself to distinguish by the truth of your own lives, what is true in those of other men, you will gradually perceive that all good has its origin in good, never in evil. —Ruskin.

A Meaty Bit of Truth. When a man in New York or elsewhere loudly boasts that he is a "southern gentleman" he is a poor, cheap fraud. A gentleman from anywhere is a gentleman anywhere, and he does not need to proclaim the fact.

Scientific Loafing. "Chess, checkers and whist are marvelous inventions," says the Philosopher of Folly. "They enable a man to waste his time and still have the feeling that he is accomplishing something intellectual."

No Joke. When a man says that he "needs the money to buy the baby shoes," and laughs it is a sure sign that he's single. Married men who have experienced the shoe problem realize that it is no laughing matter. —Detroit Free Press.

One of Life's Sweetest Things. That kindly soul, N. P. Willis, wrote that "the sweetest thing in life is the unclouded welcome of a wife."

USURPS PLACE OF THE STORK.

Buzzard is Revered by Inhabitants of Pennsylvania Town.

Rather than bring about an epidemic of race suicide in East Nottingham by keeping imprisoned the famous belted buzzard which acts in the capacity of the legendary stork for that community, Samuel Winchester, who captured the bird a few days ago, has decided to set it free, says a correspondent of the Philadelphia Record.

Great numbers of persons have flocked to see the big bird, and its capture aroused great interest throughout the entire township. The buzzard is an unusually large one and is, somewhat differently colored from others of its species. It has for years been recognized by a sleigh bell wired to its leg.

For nearly a quarter of a century its hovering over a farmhouse has been regarded as an infallible sign that there was to be an addition to the family. Mothers instead of telling their children of the stork's visit informed them that the belted buzzard was the bearer of the little one. People have been trying to capture it for years, but no one ever succeeded until it fell into Mr. Winchester's hands.

LITTLE WORLD OF THEIR OWN.

Inhabitants of Ascension Island Live in State of Socialism.

Now and then one hears of out of the way places where the conventions of life, as they are understood, do not exist. One of these is where money is useless. This is Ascension Island, in the Atlantic.

This island is the property of the British admiralty, and is governed by a captain of the royal navy. There is no private property in land; so there are no rents, taxes, etc. The flocks and herds are public property, and the meat killed is issued in rations. So are the vegetables grown on the farms.

Here, it would seem, is real socialism. When a fisherman makes a catch he brings it to the guard room, where it is issued by the sergeant major. The only private property is fowls and pigeons. Even the wild donkeys are under government control. They are listed on the books of the paymaster, and are handed over at stock taking.

The population consists of a few bluejackets, a company of marines and some Kroos from Sierra Leone.

There a marine can do anything. The mulattoes are a marine; so are the gardeners, the shepherds, the stockmen, the grooms, the masons, the carpenters, and the plumbers. Even the island trapper, who gets rewards for the tails of rats, is a marine. —Sunday Magazine.

PRAISED THE DOMESTIC BEER.

Good Joke on Connoisseurs of Popular Malted Beverage.

In an inconspicuous place in Yorkville there is a resort over which a German of ample proportions presides with the dignity which comes with the possession of a Franco-Prussian war medal. The place is not a club, tavern, hotel, saloon or restaurant, but a little of each, and its patrons, even the one American who goes there regularly, call it "Die Kneipe." A discussion as to the relative merits of the various brands of beer took place there a few nights ago which grew so heated that skat and pinochle games had to be halted for a time. The American contended that the views of the debaters were based on their loyalty to their respective birthplace more than on their knowledge of the beer which came from them, and to demonstrate this he entered into a conspiracy with the veteran landlord. All were invited to celebrate Mr. Yankee's birthday, and in honor of the occasion a barrel of "imported beer" was put on tap. It was nearly all gone before the knowing ones were informed that they had been drinking and praising the domestic product.

Light of the Moon. The light of the moon has been determined by the appropriate means of a selenium cell. The selenium cell, which, as is well known, discloses a varying electric resistance according to the amount of light thrown on it, has been gradually used in light telephony (and in Korn's transmission of photographs to a distance). It is not entirely trustworthy, because of the differing color sensibility of various cells, but the values it gave of the moon's illuminating power have a distinct value and interest. As determined by this method, the light of the full moon is 21 of a standard candlepower, or rather more than one-fifth of a candlepower. The full moon gives us approximately nine times as much light as the half moon, and the gibbous disc is brighter before than after full moon. The selenium cell was sufficiently accurate and sensitive to determine the central phase of a lunar eclipse within one minute of the predicted time.

Enough Said. "Tea and coffee," said the doctor, "are both bad for you. Your life will be shortened many years if you continue to drink such stuff."

"Oh, but doctor," she replied, "I couldn't think of getting along without a cup of coffee in the morning and a cup of tea at luncheon."

"Very well. I've told you as plainly as I can what the effect will be. And, furthermore, both tea and coffee are bad for your complexion."

"I shall never drink another drop of either." —Chicago Record-Herald.

A Pleasure Foregone. "Have you studied political economy?"

"No, sir," answered Senator Sorghum. "I'd like to, but I'm afraid my constituents would think I was amusing myself reading books instead of hustling for pensions and appropriations." —Washington Star.

VERDI AND HIS THRIFTY WAYS.

Great Composer Worried Over Small Hole in His "Best Coat."

Baron Edmondo Mayor des Planches, ambassador from Italy, told a new Verdi story at a dinner given in Washington recently. The great Maestro had just produced his opera "Aida" in Paris for the first time and the entire city was wild with enthusiasm. The president of France made it known that at the second performance the rosette of the Legion of Honor would be conferred on the illustrious composer, a great fete was gotten up to honor the event. The president made the presentation, and Verdi seemed overcome with emotion. Indeed, he fumbled with the rosette so long that one of the attendants of the president arose and, taking his penknife, made a neat slit in the coat and placed the button firmly in place. After the opera a grand banquet was given and everyone was concerned to see that the Maestro looked unhappy. He would lapse into fits of musing even during the most enthusiastic speeches, and would sigh and look doleful indeed. Finally an old friend got near him and asked solicitously what was troubling him. Verdi mused a long time and then explained sadly: "I do not see that you can do anything to help me and, indeed, I cannot see how I can help myself. I am just wondering what my wife will say to me when she sees this great hole in my best coat."

KNOW MERITS OF HOT WATER.

Sagacious Denver Cat Sought Remedy for Internal Pains.

The story is told of a cat owned by Miss Willard of Denver, that has learned that the hot water bottle will ease pain. Tommy is 14 years old, which is pretty well along in years for a cat, and suffers from pains in his stomach, and the family have been in the habit of applying the hot water bottle to ease Tommy of his distress.

One night Miss Willard was awakened at a late hour by an incessant yowling that came from beside her bed. She hurriedly arose, turned on the light and then saw Tommy beating a path from her feet to the hallway and back again.

Tommy's mistress advanced toward her pet to take him up in her arms, but none of that for Tommy. The cat scampered right on down the hall, looking back at every jump to see that Miss Willard was following. When it reached the bathroom it led the way into the apartment, and when she turned on the light there was Tommy with the empty hot water bag between its forelegs.

A few minutes later the bag was filled with water heated to Tommy's liking, and he was fast asleep, purring his contentment.

If there is a smarter cat in Denver Miss Willard would like to know where it lives.

ARROGANCE OF THE WEALTHY.

Pitiful Snobbishness Exhibited by One Rich Woman.

A family removed from the country to the outskirts of the city, and brought their chickens along. The good woman of the household sold a few eggs among her neighbors, charging 20 cents a dozen. She was perfectly content with the 20 cents; the neighbors were perfectly content with the eggs. However, informed by her landlady, a woman of wealth and position proposed to have some of those eggs.

"But it is ridiculous to pay only 20 cents a dozen!" she declared. "The idea! I am willing to pay 30, if they are fresh. I shall tell her so."

She sailed away in her auto—and evidently she "told her" for the next time that the landlady applied for eggs they were 30 cents.

It was the unfairness of the rich—the arrogance of wealth. She had money to waste, and she was not satisfied unless she was forcing it somewhere. Ten cents, to her, indicated the difference between wealth and poverty. So it did to the landlady—but from an opposite angle. —Edwin L. Sabin, in Lippincott's.

Bostonian Appreciation.

Dr. David Starr Jordan told a story on his last Brooklyn visit of John Muir leading a cultured Bostonian up the mountains that overlook the Yosemite valley. Muir said that he had the Bostonian along devious ways, so that the great, splendid valley would burst all on a sudden upon his astonished eyes.

Finally, at a turn of the road the vast, multi-colored panorama was spread out before them. The Bostonian's ejaculation was as sudden as Muir could desire; but it was this: "Well, now, how can we get across that damn gap?"

Lord and Marquis.

The title lord is applied to five grades of English nobility, dukes, marquises, earls, viscounts and barons, so that we cannot say that a lord is higher or lower than a marquis. The grades of nobility in England run in the above order, with the addition of the baronet. The latter, however, does not receive the title of lord. The son of a duke is by courtesy a marquis, and the son of a marquis is similarly an earl.

A Pleasure Foregone.

"Have you studied political economy?"

"No, sir," answered Senator Sorghum. "I'd like to, but I'm afraid my constituents would think I was amusing myself reading books instead of hustling for pensions and appropriations." —Washington Star.

A Road to Happiness.

It is not at all difficult to believe that it is easier to give it if it is the English girl, inasmuch as the former always knows exactly what she wants. But a fact which must not be lost sight of is that the American girl is admittedly entitled to demand what she wants, while she gets it because the American husband takes the view that it is easier to give it if it is wiser to refuse. The English girl, as a rule, loses her capacity for knowing exactly what she wants for the simple reason that she is aware that greater happiness lies in dismissing vain desires from her mind. —Lady's Pictorial.

Keep This in Mind.

It must not be forgotten that the man who takes advantage of others will take advantage of you if he ever finds it conveniently profitable to do so, no matter how consistently he may pretend to be your friend.

Always.

When you get up at a dinner to tell some other man's story you may always be reasonably sure that at least half of your hearers have heard it from one to 40 times before.

SYNOPSIS.

Burton H. Barnes, a wealthy English touring Corsica, rescues the young English lieutenant, Edward Gerard Anstruther, and his Corsican bride, Marina, daughter of the Paolis, from the murderous vendetta, understanding that his reward is to be the hand of the girl he loves. Kind Anstruther, sister of the English lieutenant, the four fly from Ajaccio to Marseilles on board the French steamer Constantine. The vendetta pursues and as the quartet are about to board the train for London at Marseilles, Marina is lured by mysterious notes which causes her to collapse and necessitates a postponement of the journey. Barnes and kind are married. Soon after their wedding Barnes' bride disappears. Barnes discovers she has been kidnapped and taken to Corsica. The groom seizes a fishing vessel and is about to start in pursuit of his bride's captors when he hears a scream from the villa and rushes back to find that Anstruther's wife, Marina, is also missing. Barnes is compelled to depart for Corsica without delay, and so he leaves the search for Marina to her husband while he goes to hunt for kind and before Barnes' boat lands on Corsica's shore Marina is discovered lying in a corner of the vessel. She explains her action by saying she has come to help Barnes rescue his wife from the Corsicans. Barnes and Marina have unusual adventures in their search for kind. In seeking shelter from a storm, the couple enter a hermitage and there to their amazement they discover Tomasso, the foster father of Marina. Tomasso learns that Marina's husband did not kill her brother. Many wrongs are righted. Barnes is surprised in the hermitage by Rocchini and Romago, the two devils of bandits, who have been searching for him to murder him for his money. The bandits attempt to take away Marina. Barnes darts out the door. The bandits start to pursue him, but as they reach the door both are laid low by Barnes' revolver. Anstruther arrives to find Marina and learns that she has been lured away by the telegram which had been sent by another without his knowledge. The two start in search of Marina. Barnes and Edwin take different roads in their search. Edwin is trapped in a tower where he is made prisoner. In endeavoring to escape he opens a trap door where he finds Emory, the detective, who had been imprisoned there previously. In another secret chamber Tomasso is found imprisoned. Edwin is climbing down a wall seen upon the portico of a farm house Marina and Count Danella sitting and talking together. Barnes arrives and finds the bridge swung preventing his crossing over. He hears the voice of Marina crying for mercy. He examines his revolver.

Hastily he selects a spot with a good line of sight and stands waiting—waiting for the chance, for intervening vines trouble him, and the foliage of a great orange tree, standing alone in the garden and midway between the house and the turret, jumbles the light, which is only the faint sheen of the rising moon.

Slightly before this, Marina had been sitting on the long veranda of the Corsican farmhouse, the lighted lamps placing some tinges of ruby in her dark brown hair and giving color to the light costume that enhances her loveliness.

Quietly entering from the house, Cipriano Danella, costumed in the old time, fantastic Corsican garb, gazes upon the exquisite girl outlined by the light costume.

The eagerness of his glance draws Mrs. Anstruther's eyes to him. She looks up and says: "Ah, Count Cipriano. It was very noble of you, who I had feared would hate me, to rescue me from the 'Lucchesa.' At your advice, I have rested here, but to-morrow, notwithstanding the romantic serenade you have provided for me, I must go on to Bastia."

"Oh, yes, to Bastia," murmurs the count softly, and stepping nearer, says snavely, though there is a weird suggestion in his voice that somewhat disquiets the lady: "We are alone here in my old farmhouse, only old Martha, the cook, who, far away, will snore till dawn, and my nephew, Count Enrico."

"I haven't seen him," remarks the girl uneasily.
"Parbleu, you did once, the gentleman with the scar upon his face, the one who delivered the letter that caused your nerves to jump in the Marseilles railroad station. Even now his name seems to have an ill effect upon you," for Marina has started up, and the fluttering of her light skirts shows her limbs are trembling.

"Mia Madre, was he the man?" she shudders. "And was it you who penned it?" Then some divination entering her mind, she implores pathetically: "Holy Virgin, no harm has come to Edwin?" Have I not kept the cruel secret? Have I not desired my dear husband? It was the promise of that awful letter that no evil should come to Edwin if I left his arms."

"Ah, but you intended to return to them, bella mia," smiles the gentleman.
The young wife scarcely heeds the insinuation of the subtle Italian term, but stammers confused: "Why do you think that?"
"Ma foi, you were journeying to Bastia to meet your husband, lured there by a telegram I directed to be sent to you from that place," whispers the count significantly.

"The telegram was false? Edwin is not in Corsica? Edwin is safe? Madre di Dio, I thank thee!" Marina's voice rings with a hope that produces a supreme joy in Cipriano's occult mind.
This lady upon whom he has set his fervid heart, is courage personified as regards her own safety, but the great love she bears this Englishman makes her timid for him. 'Tis Danella's plan to use for its own destruction this generous and mighty love.
"That's what I wish to discuss with you," he observes quietly, gazing upon a face to which each wave of passion adds such loveliness that he cannot restrain the monstrous proposition on his tongue. It breaks forth, "My poor brother loved you, but you gave him death," he whispers passionately. "I love you, but per Baccho, you will not give me death—but love!"
"Love? Impossible?" Marina starts from him wildly; then scorn coming to her eyes and voice, remarks haughtily: "You are speaking to a wedded wife, Monsieur."

"Not legally wedded, I have hopes. My brother, poor Mussu, perchance by his lips in private gave his consent to your nuptials, but of that I have no proof. There is no written document. You are still a child—but 20—according to the French law, you cannot wed without the consent of your guardian for several years. Anstruther, in his careless English way, thought not of it; you were too eager for his wooing to note the omission. By my poor brother's death, his authority as your guardian passes to me."

Edwin, My Husband—My Flowers Brought You This!

"Pish! I was wedded in Mussu's very presence," answers the girl, proudly; then cries: "I am Edwin Gerard Anstruther's wife, by the church and by my love."

"Tis a pity, you compel me to make you his widow." At that awful word, Marina shudders and sinks overboard into a chair.
"Listen to me!" Cipriano's voice is deep with menace, yet soft with passion. "On the further cliff down the coast are quarries of dazzling-hued green. Orezza—marble that is taken from this island to deck palaces."

"Orezza marble, what has that to do with Edwin's life?" half scoffs the girl.
"But it may have something to do with his death," observes Danella. "For the blasting of the rock is used much dynamite. I have robbed the quarries and have mined the base of yonder turret with the explosive. In it are three men: one, old Tomasso, whose knife entered my brother's heart; the other, an American detective who has placed his Yankee nose into this vendetta, unfortunately for himself; Emory is in that turret. You will give something for these men's lives?"

"For Emory and dear old Tomasso? Certainly—anything in reason." The lovely eyes are filled with a strange alarm.
"Ah, but it must not be in reason—it must be in a passion as exalted as my own—for you. When I direct my nephew, who is bound to me not only by ties of blood, but of gratitude, and who is inflamed against you all by his oath of vendetta for the murdered Mussu, he will light the fuse leading to the mine, and puff!—that tower, with every man who's in it, goes into the air!"

"Murderer!" shudders Marina, who has listened astounded.
"Ah, you have sympathy for these poor fellows! That is well; I shall love you more for your tender heart," continues Cipriano softly.
"But the law!" half screams the lady.

"Pah—in Corsica—in a vendetta. Besides, the blown-up tower will be thought but another outrage of the rioting 'Lucchesa.' Oh, this is no worse than dagger thrusts or blows from bullets which always come in a blood feud. And in that mined turret," Cipriano's voice is low but terrible, "there is another man, who following the cyclamen flowers you dropped in the road and a few more we added to lead him into that fatal tower."

"Edwin!" Marina's limbs hardly uphold her.
"The man you foolishly call husband. The finger of the suave wooer points to the turret's upper floor. Then the game is on!
Her eyes following his gesture, a shuddering cry, low, broken, despairing yet full of tenderest love, issues from the girl's lips that have now become white as death itself: "Edwin, my husband—my flowers brought you to this—following for love of me—" "He is caught like a rat in my trap!" smiles the count.
"Not without warning, wretch!"

She would spring from the veranda and run over to the base of the tower and call up to the man whose face she sees outlined against the grille of the upper window, through whose iron bars he is struggling to force his way.

But Cipriano's strong hand clutches her white arm; he pulls her back into the seat and commands: "Not until you've heard my words, which may save his life!"

"His life? Tell me!"
"I have explained you are not legally this man's spouse," Cipriano's voice is trembling with desire. "Become mine! I had purposed in Nice to give you a very cruel death for what you had to do with my brother's killing, but when I saw your beauties and knew that the little child I had once seen had grown into a Venus, but no marble one, to myself I said: 'Corpo di Baccho, 'tis in the blood of the Danella to love this woman. I am enamored of her as wildly as poor dead Mussu. 'Tis a medieval idea; instead of slaying her, I'll have revenge in winning her—against herself, the wife—also against the husband."

"Not against Edwin! You have no cause of hate against him."
"Vendettas are caused by love as well as hate! He dares to call you wife. Each moment my eye rests upon you increases thy sweetness to me. You are Corsican—so am I—no foreigner should stand between us."

"Holy Virgin, you expect me to love you?" stammers the girl.
To this he answers with Machiavellian subtlety: "Of course not now, but that may come in time. At present you love Edwin! Because of this devoted love—to save this gentleman you adore—you give yourself to me."

At his hideous mathematics the girl utters a cry of horror.
"If you would save the life of this Englishman whom I should dispatch by my oath of the vendetta, at once your kisses."

"Would Edwin wish to live, his wife untrue? Monster!" Marina's face blazes with shame.
"Oh, no, not monster; simply a man who has gone crazy for thee. Understand, if you are mine, the man in that tower lives. To-night on the vessel that is anchored here, I'll bear you away to some far distant isle of Greece."

"My husband would follow us for ever!"

"Not if he knew you were faithless! 'Tis not their English way. A woman who is dishonored is no more to them than a tainted orange."
"Dishonored in his eyes? Never!" cries the girl. "I'd sooner you killed him—sooner you killed me, much! I'm in your power; I'm alone here, help less in your hands. Kill me. Let my darling go."

As Danella has clutched her, the old neck fastenings of the ancient gown have given way; she plucks its laces further apart over her dazzling bosom and begs: "Bury your stiletto here, but spare my husband."

Her pose only makes her the more alluring to his devouring eyes.

"What, kill the being I adore!" shudders Cipriano. "I have no stiletto and I have taken care no knife is near your desperate hands, my lady. Be sides, I'll never let you go. If you will not leave your husband as his wife leave him as his widow."
"Here, Enrico!" he calls.
The young cavalier with the scar above his eyebrow comes into the veranda and says: "My uncle, I honor thee, you have decided to give this woman death?"
(TO BE CONTINUED.)

BUILDING OF A WITICISM.

Point of Joke the Same Though Under Changed Conditions.

The Bohemian had an article entitled, "How a Joke is Made." In it Marshall P. Wilder, the well known humorist, cites this story as an illustration of one method. "Here is a story with a joke in it about Labouchere, the genial editor of London Truth. When he was standing for the borough of Northampton for the English parliament a little girl came up to her father and said: 'Papa, who made Mr. Labouchere?' 'Why, Providence, my dear,' answered the somewhat astonished parent. 'And what for, papa?' inquires the child. Now that isn't a bad joke. It was natural, anyway. But listen to one of mine, which really has the same point, though it is brought out in a different way. A child and her mother are on the cars. Opposite them sits a young man dressed in the height of fashion. Says the child: 'Mamma, what is that?' and as she asks the question, she points to the young man opposite. 'Hush, my dear,' answers the mother. 'But, mother, I want to know.' To quiet the child the mother whispers in her ear: 'He is what we call a dude, dear.' The child persists as usual in gaining some more information. 'And who made him, mamma?' 'Why, Providence, dear, of course,' replies the mother sotto voce, whereat the child exclaims: 'Oh, mother, doesn't Providence like to have fun sometimes?' You see, the stories are really alike. At all events, the point is the same."

Trade With Colonies.
The trade of France with her colonies for 1906 aggregated over $200,000,000, of which $129,947,800 consisted in exports of manufactured products from France.

Refined, Healthful Manner of Walking. Bad Position for Walking.

As a rule women do not enjoy walking, and in consequence they deny themselves exercise and fresh air.

It is not always a lack of strength of the leg muscles, nor is it a lack of time that makes women shrink from long walks. In most cases the trouble can be traced to a lack of knowledge of body carriage.

In some cases it is ill-fitting shoes. Get a shoe to fit your foot. Don't fit your foot to the shoe!

In selecting footwear for street, secure that which will enable you to walk with comfort—no sloping heels, nor thin soles. Neither must they be too large.

The following exercises and suggestions will aid in attaining a proper body poise for walking as well as strengthening the leg muscles.

In illustration No. 1 we have the proper poise of the body for rapid walking for health exercise. The head should be held well erect, but the chin should not project. The neck should remain free from tension.

To walk correctly the most important point to observe is the elevation of the chest. It is not necessary to pay especial attention to throwing the shoulders back—many carry this to extreme—simply lift your chest and leave your shoulders alone; they will take care of themselves. In lifting the chest to the utmost the lungs acquire their full capacity.

In regard to the capacity of the lungs, a few suggestions concerning the manner of breathing would be timely. The breath should never be taken with a gasp, but should be full and deep; in so doing the movements of the muscles can be felt just below the stomach, which demonstrates that when starting out for a walk the clothing should be loose, allowing free play of the abdominal and waist muscles.

Many people use the upper part of the lungs only, which is the cause of many ills.

In walking, the arms should swing easily from the shoulders, hanging lifeless at the sides, and not bending at the elbow (see illustration No. 1); and, above all, not held tightly, with elbows pressed against the sides or thrust back of the body.

Illustration No. 2 shows the position many slow walkers assume, especially if deeply engrossed in thought. This is a wrong position at any time, for when the head is held forward so constantly it is almost impossible to straighten it, and a stoop-shouldered appearance is the result, the breathing is interfered with, and may result in other complications.

One should remember that when walking for exercise, all concentration of thought and care should be thrown aside and the head held erect to enjoy the beauty of nature, for variety of thought is as necessary as variety of motion.

DESIGNS IN PLACE CARDS.

Decorative Effects for Luncheon and Dinner Parties.

Decorative place cards for luncheons and dinners have never been offered in greater variety. Standing cards outnumber cards designed to lie flat upon the tablecloth. A new French device in metal comes for holding the cards erect.

Among the most popular of the standing cards are those representing young women and men cut out in paper doll fashion and tinted in water color. A Gibson girl holding a long flower box in her arms is one of the new cards.

Watteau and colonial figures predominate. Dancing figures and young girls dressed as flowers make a favorite theme. For a dinner to be followed by bridge there come kings and queens sketched from playing cards.

Hand-painted Japanese place cards are a novelty. Sets of cards show Japanese landscapes. These scene cards are comparatively inexpensive. Each one is a finished picture.

Walking Dress in Brown and Checked Linen.

FINE TUCKED MALINE NET.

Material is Largely Taking Place of Lace and Chiffon.

For yokes, collars and cuffs fine tucked maline net is now ad to no small extent, and even threatens to temporarily take the place of silk lace and chiffon in yokes and separate gumpies. This net is, of course, unusually fine and cheap, so that it is delightfully cool to wear, besides from an economical standpoint being a great advantage in that it can be replaced whenever soiled at far less expense than when a costly lace yoke must be replenished.

A lining of chiffon and mousseline de soie is necessary in this thin net yoke and collar in order to keep the soft net from pulling out of shape and tearing.

There is really an astonishingly small amount of lace employed on many of the waists and gowns that are now made up for morning and afternoon wear, although, of course, lace trimming is required in almost any evening model for dinner, ball or theater.

A deep cape of lace, falling from the shoulder well down over the net sleeve, is often used on a gown that has no other lace trimming of any kind, and for this purpose a fairly heavy point de venise is most popular. Indeed, the lace that is altogether the most fashionable at the moment is this point de venise, even the long popular baby Irish being forced to waive its claims to first place.

A New Mascot.

A new mascot ring has just been introduced. It is a bar of gold in which is set the tooth of a wolf or that of a badger, which, when highly polished, looks like a piece of ivory or white coral. It is a very old superstition that connects the wearing of an animal's tooth with immunity from bad luck, and the newly revived talisman will take its place among the various other mascots already worn with a historical reputation in its favor.

Trimings.

Soutache braid as a trimming is coming back to the greatest popularity, while gold-braid, so much used last fall, is still being used on the newest dresses. Ordinary lace, such as valenciennoes, or meehlin, is now run with gold or silver threads or adorned with fancy stitches.

THE PAINTING SEASON.

Good results in painting at the least cost depend largely upon the material chosen. Paint is a simple compound and the ingredients can be easily tested. The solid part or pigment should be White Lead. The liquid part should be Linseed Oil. Those best informed on painting always buy these ingredients separately and have their painter mix them fresh for each job. Before the mixing the test is made.

Place a pea-sized bit of White Lead on a piece of charcoal or piece of wood. Blow the flame against it and see what it will do. If it is pure White Lead, little drops of bright, pure metallic lead will appear, and with patience the White Lead can be completely reduced to one globule of metallic lead. This is because pure White Lead is made from metallic lead.

You may test dozens of other so-called White Leads and not be able to reduce one of them to lead. If they will not change wholly to lead but leave a residue, it is clear that some adulterant is present.

If you should have your painting done with such materials, no matter how cheap they might seem, it would be costly in the end.

National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York City, are sending on request a blowpipe free to any one about to have painting done, so that the White Lead may be tested. With it will be sent a handsomely printed booklet having as its front-piece the "Dutch Boy Painter," reproduced from the original painting. This little painter has become noted as the guaranty of pure White Lead.

A FORGOTTEN ROMANCE.

"Do you remember, Jane, 20 years ago, a moonlight night, when I whispered, tenderly: 'Jennie, I love you,' and you answered, passionately: 'John, you nose looks so funny and swollen. Do you suppose something's bitten it?'"

Maintaining His Dignity.

Even the elevator boy had to draw the line somewhere, to prevent his being made too common. A writer in the New York Evening Post tells of a recent experience with one of the fraternity.

"If any one calls, Percy, while I am out, tell him to wait. I shall be right back," she said to the apartment-house elevator boy.

There was no answer.
"Did you hear me? Why don't you answer?" asked the woman, with some heat.

"I never answers, ma'am, unless I doesn't hear, and then I says 'What?'"

Sympathy.

"It's a serious thing, Verena," sighed Mrs. Upmore, "to be the wife of a man who holds a public office. It demands so much of his time and keeps him away from his home."

"I know just how you feel, ma'am," said the elderly domestic. "My first husband was the grand imperial outside guard of the Amalgamated and Solidified Order of Fuzzy Guzzlers, and sometimes he was that busy tryin' to remember the signs and grips that I couldn't get a word out of him all day long."

COFFEE EYES.

It Acts Slowly But Frequently Produces Blindness.

The curious effect of slow daily poisoning and the gradual building in of disease as a result, is shown in numbers of cases where the eyes are affected by coffee.

A case in-point will illustrate: A lady in Oswego, Mont., experienced a slow but sure disease settling upon her eyes in the form of increasing weakness and shooting pains with wavy, dancing lines of light, so vivid that nothing else could be seen for minutes at a time.

She says: "This gradual failure of sight alarmed me and I naturally began a very earnest quest for the cause. About this time I was told that coffee poisoning sometimes took that form, and while I didn't believe that coffee was the cause of my trouble, I concluded to quit it and see."

"I took up Postum Food Coffee in spite of the jokes of husband whose experience with one cup at a neighbor's was unsatisfactory. Well, I made Postum strictly according to directions, boiling it a little longer, because of our high altitude. The result was charming. I have now used Postum in place of coffee for about 3 months and my eyes are well, never paining me or showing any weakness. I know to a certainty that the cause of the trouble was coffee and the cure was in quitting it and building up the nervous system on Postum, for that was absolutely the only change I made in diet and I took no medicine."

"My nursing baby has been kept in a perfectly healthy state since I have used Postum."

"Mr. —, a friend, discarded coffee and took on Postum to see if he could be rid of his dyspepsia and frequent headaches. The change produced a most remarkable improvement quickly."

"There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE LIVING ROOM.

It Should at All Times Be a "Living Room."

What to do with the living room is a problem that confronts every keeper. The living room should be in fact as well as in name a livable room. It is the place in which the most of our time is spent, the hours we have for leisure, the time we have for the place where we entertain friends and it is absolutely essential that the walls and furnishings of living room should be harmonious in color, suitable in texture, and in material.

The rich, soft, solid colored are the ideal walls for the living room. They make a better ground for pictures, throw the light out in better relief, are less cordant with rugs and carpeting, indicate a higher degree of taste culture than do the colored strowittles which we paste on when apply wall paper.

Who ever saw roses climbing plastered wall growing out of a wood floor? Yet, that is what suggest to the imagination when paste paper covered with roses on our walls. They are neither nor roses. They are all very full, but they were never made, climb up interior walls and they not grow from hardwood floor. The set figures of wall paper are tiresome and equally disagreeable repellent.

The alabastined wall is the correct form of a tinted or solid colored wall. Fortunately it is the clean way, and more fortunately the only permanent way; the way that does not involve the less labor in the future.

In lighting the walls some must be given the color. Light reflect 85% of the light thrown on them. Dark colors reflect but Lighting bills can be saved by reflecting a color which will reflect largest degree of light. In rooms use warm colors or of which reflect light. In south west rooms sometimes the light be modified by the use of colors. Dark greens absorb the light yellows reflect it; browns lift it, and so on, through the of colors. The color scheme of room not only is dependent upon color of the carpetings but it is dependent upon the light of the

LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

This sign is permanently attached to the front of the main building the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

What Does This Sign Mean?
It means that public inspection of the Laboratory and methods of the business is honestly desired. It means that there is nothing about the business which is not "open and above board."

It means that a permanent invitation is extended to anyone to call and verify any and all statements made in the advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Is it a purely vegetable compound made from roots and herbs—without drugs?

Come and See.
Do the women of America continually use as much of it as we are? Come and See.

Was there ever such a person as Lydia E. Pinkham, and is there Mrs. Pinkham now to whom women are asked to write? Come and See.

Is the vast private correspondence with sick women conducted, strictly confidential? Come and See.

Have they really got letters from over one million, one hundred thousand women correspondents? Come and See.

Have they proof that Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured thousands of these women? Come and See.

This advertisement is only doubters. The great army of women who know from their own personal experience that no medicine in the world equals Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for female ailments will still go on using and being benefited by it; but the poor doubting suffering woman must, for her sake, be taught confidence, for she might just as well regain her health

Uncle Eben's Mistake

By Clara H. Holmes

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Ebenezer Crossman and his wife Lucinda, were at outs. "There's no doin' a thing to please ye! Ye'r as cross as two sticks," complained Aunt 'Cinda.

"Ye don't try! Jest look at this toast—burned to smut on one side, and 'tother hain't been next or near the fire," he grumbled.

"I've hed to cook for ye for nigh on to 50 year, an' ye ain't goin' to instruct me in cookin' at this late day," replied she.

He arose from the table, leaving his breakfast untasted, and throwing his chair viciously across the room left the house.

Aunt 'Cinda looked after him with troubled eyes. "I don't know what's got into Eben lately—ever since M'indy came back," she said with a sigh.

When Uncle Eben came in to dinner he had in no wise regained his good humor.

"Fat pork and cabbage! I'm jest sick of that kind of fodder! If things ain't better I'll go to M'inda's to live," Melinda was his niece.

"I wish't you would; mebbe thea one would hev' a minute's peace; now it's nothin' but jaw, jaw, jaw, from mornin' to night," angrily retorted his wife. "Shoo! Shoo!" waving her apron at a flock of chickens.

"Pears like we might hev' fried chicken once in awhile—M'inda had a great platter full for dinner; she ast me to stay, an' if I'd a-know we was to hev' this mess, I'd a-done it."

"Ye better trot right back, Eben Crossman; I raised them chickens to buy me a new dress; I ain't had nothin' better'n calico in ten year, an' I won't hev' 'em e't, so there!"

From the time of her marriage Aunt 'Cinda had been obliged to practice the most rigid economy, as the only capital had been health, hope and willing hands. Little by little they paid for their farm, and in the same way they had accumulated a competency, but the habit of persistent economy had merged into miserly parsimony, especially was this the case with Ebenezer.

Aunt 'Cinda's very soul hankered for a new carpet, and the old cord bedsteads with round posts nagged her desire persistently. Uncle Eben grew wrathful at the mere mention of her wishes.

"Them bedsteads hev' been good enough for 50 years, an' they're good enough now; ye're jest bein' e't up with new, fangled notions. If ye want a carpet, why don't ye make one?" There's rags enough in the garret fur half a dozen.

"I don't want no rag carpet! M'inda don't hev' that kind of floor kiverin', an' yer allus quotin' her to me!" retorted Aunt 'Cinda.

"I ain't got nothin' to do with her housekeepin'!" snappishly.

"Oh, I thought mebbe ye had, ye mention it so frequent," answered Aunt 'Cinda sarcastically.

"I'll be consarned if it isn't gettin' so I can't hev' a single thing as I want it! And 'Cinda's all the time naggin' fur finger-bread sumrit, an' sich useless truck, till I'm sick of it," grumbled Uncle Eben to M'inda, of late he went to her with all his grievances.

"I wouldn't stand it if I were you. Ye come right along and live with us, and it shan't cost you a cent. Ye know you'll be perfectly welcome," said she.

Two weeks later Uncle Eben moved his belongings to Melinda's. He had installed her in the house opposite the home place—which Aunt 'Cinda was to retain.

"I wish't the house was a mile off," muttered Aunt 'Cinda, her old voice thick with tears.

"'Cinda shan't hev' it to say that I took the best end of the bargain," remarked Uncle Eben in a tremulous tone.

For the first month there was no friction, but after he made a deed, giving Melinda the house and a acre lot for his "keep" somehow things were not so smoothly. For one thing Uncle Eben was not used to children, and Melinda's four boys were entirely beyond restraint, and delighted in teasing and annoying the old man. Then if he pulled off his boots and put his feet on an opposite chair, as he had been accustomed to at home, Melinda would sarcastically remark: "It's easy to see when people have never had a bit of good furniture!" And if

THE CALL OF THE SOIL.

DAYS OF FINANCIAL STRESS MAKE FARM LANDS LOOK RICH.

A staff contributor of a southern newspaper has taken up the question of the return to the farm of many who had forsaken it for the glitter of the city. He says: "It is a well known fact that the history of this Government shows that those men who have been most successful in life and who have left their impress upon its people and its institutions as statesmen, soldiers, financiers—have as a rule been those whose youth was spent on the farm, and it is to such as these that there comes with overmastering power THE CALL OF THE SOIL. More especially does it come with redoubled persuasiveness, greater power and sweeter pleading to the man of affairs when the clouds of financial unrest begin to darken the sky; when the cry of panic causes people to lose their wits and act like stampeded cattle; when with reason or without reason there arises before him the specter of ruin, grinning in his face and waving its gaunt arms in threatening gesticulation.

The pitiable state into which some men were brought by the recent financial flurry, which happily is now passed, suggests these reflections. Some were ruined and a very few became insane because of their losses. Two or three took their own lives.

It is when such times come that the statesman, the great financier, and the man of affairs becomes tired of the struggle. He lays down his pen, turns from his desk and listens to the CALL OF THE SOIL.

There are hundreds of cases throughout the United States of those who have money in the banks and are looking for investment in lands. No investment is better or safer. Take, for instance, the lands in Western Canada that can be bought at from $10 to $15 per acre which yield a revenue equal to and often greater than their original cost. Those lands make a certain investment. During the past two months large investments in these lands have been made, some intending to use the lands for farming purposes of their own. Others to resell to farmer friends. The agents of the Government of Canada located at different points throughout the United States have in their possession particular districts in which there are free homestead grants of 160 acres each accessible to railways, markets, schools, churches, &c. These are valuable lands. These agents will be pleased to give information to any desirous of securing, and will tell all about the railway rates, &c.

PERHAPS A NATURAL MISTAKE.

Physician Had Reason to Think He Had Lost His Patient.

Henry Grimm, who was formerly one of the prominent members of the German-American society, tells a story about a German friend of his who was taken ill.

For many days the German was close to death, but after a time he showed improvement in condition. The doctor told the German's wife that her husband might have anything to eat that he liked.

The German expressed a desire for Limburger cheese, and the wife, being a generous woman and pleased at the improvement, and in order that her husband might have a nibble at any time he had a taste for it, put some cheese in every room in the house. It is easy to imagine the aroma.

The next morning the doctor called at the house, and as soon as he opened the door he asked:

"When did he die?"—Hartford Post.

CURE AT CITY MISSION.

Awful Case of Scabies—Body a Mass of Sores from Scratching—Her Tortures Yield to Cuticura.

"A young woman came to our city mission in a most awful condition physically. Our doctor examined her and told us that she had scabies (the itch), incontinent paresis, rheumatism, etc., brought on from exposure. Her poor body was a mass of sores from scratching and she was not able to retain solid food. We worked hard over her for seven weeks but we could see little improvement. One day I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and we bathed our patient well and gave her a full dose of the Resolvent. She slept better that night and the next day I got a box of Cuticura Ointment. In five weeks this young woman was able to look for a position, and she's now strong and well. Laura Jane Bates, 85 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y., Mar. 11, 1907."

Machine-Made Proposal.

Annabel—How queer! Here's a story about a man who made a fortune out of an attachment for a sewing machine.

Arthur (softly)—That's nothing. I've formed an attachment for the sweetest little sewing machine in the world, and would consider my fortune made if she'd have me. (No cards.)

WHY HIS HORSE WON THE BLUE RIBBON.

An Amusing Incident at a County Fair That Taught One Horse Owner a Lesson.

At one of the County Fairs held in New York state last Summer the blue ribbon in a certain class of entrants was awarded to a big strapping 6-year-old horse that looked like he could pull a plough or a buggy or run a mile in 1:50 or thereabouts with equal ease. He was a fine looking fellow, stood about 15 1/2 hands high, and was as sleek as velvet and weighed close on to 1300 pounds. His owner stood by his side after the awarding of the ribbon and was being congratulated as fast as people could reach him. Just then a buggy drawn by a horse that looked like he was ready to lie down and die, drew up in the roadway and the driver hailed to the owner of the blue ribbon. The latter gentleman made his way to the buggy and shook hands with the stranger. "Hello, Frank," says he, "haven't seen you for a mighty long time, but we couldn't have met on a greater occasion. Remember the mare in foal that I bought from you? Well, her colt just won the blue ribbon!"

"Blue ribbon?" echoed the other man, surprised and apparently thinking of something else.

"Sure," replied the elated owner, "but, by the way, you had a year old full brother to my horse, what became of him?"

"This is him I'm driving," replied the other man.

"That!" gasped the first man. Every body laughed. "Well, what on earth have you done to him?" he asked. "Oh, I guess he's run down," was the answer.

"Then you ought to do what I did for my horse, give him Pratt's Animal Regulator and he'll soon brace up and look like his brother."

It may be mentioned for the benefit of our readers that Pratt's Animal Regulator is the favorite with all owners of horses, cows, sheep, hogs and other live stock because it improves the animal's digestion, regulates their bowels, tones up their systems, makes muscle and fat, and gives them new life and spirits. Thousands of users say it is the greatest preventive of animal diseases known.

In connection with this reference to Pratt's Animal Regulator it may be well to suggest to our readers that they send a postal card to the Pratt Food Co., Dept. R., Philadelphia, and ask for a copy of Pratt's New Horse Book or Pratt's New Cattle Book, New Hog Book or New Sheep Book. Any one of these books will be sent absolutely free of charge, although they formerly sold for 25c each, and the lucky recipient isn't apt to part with any of the books once he realizes its value.

HE COULD BE TRUSTED.

Youngster "Made Good" Before Temptation Was Put in His Way.

A train from the north pulled into the station at Charlottesville, Va. An elderly man thrust his head out of a window of a day coach and summoned a little colored boy. The following colloquy ensued:

"Little boy, have you a mother?"

"Yassuh."

"Are you faithful to your studies?"

"Yassuh."

"Do you go to Sunday school?"

"Yassuh."

"Do you say your prayers every night?"

"Yassuh."

"Can I trust you to do an errand for me?"

"Yassuh."

A Gardening Nation.

In Sweden a gift is made once a year to each school pupil of trees or shrubs to be planted about the home. By law each parish must grant a certain amount of land to be devoted to the purpose of school gardens. There are scores of horticultural societies which employ gardeners to give the public free instruction and advice on fruit and vegetable culture. The natural resources of the country are being increased in this way to a wonderful extent.
