CEMENT PLANT AT FOUR MILE LAKE TO BE RUNNING BY FIRST OF JULY

PLENTY OF WATER.

Connection are Now Being Made With the New Wells.

It is expected that Chelsea will not suffer from the water famine that has been its portion every summer for several years. The two flowing wells that were put down last year are being harnessed, and it will be but a matter of a short time now when the water from them will be forced through the mains.

Workmen are now engaged in erecting a cement building 14x22 feet in size which will contain a reservoir 10x14 feet into which the water from the wells will flow. The balance of the building will be used for a pump house, and an electric pump with a capacity of 400 gallons per minute will be installed. This pump will force the water to the large reservoir which was recently completed, and from which it will be taken by the large pumps at the station.

This addition to the water system will add about 576,000 gallons to the supply daily, and will prove welcome, as it will insure that the creek water will not need to be turned on during fires, and thus contaminate the water that is used for domestic consumption.

OVER 300 PERSONS

Lost Their Lives by Drowning in Michigan Last Year.

The state board of health shows that more than 300 persons lost their lives by drowning in Michigan during the past year. It is believed that many could have been resuscitated had those who first reached them known what methods to use.

That more citizens may know what to do in cases of drowning, the state board of health is mailing, to be posted in conspicuous places on docks, wharves, at the doors of boat houses and club houses at all lakeside and riverside resorts, placards, showing pictorially what to do for the drowned and how to do it. Accompanying the placards are pamphlets, to be carried in the pocket, giving treatments of the drowned, suffocated, or electrically shocked.

COMMITTED SUICIDE.

David Hildebrandt Took Dose of Carbolic Acid Saturday Night.

David Hildebrandt, who attempted to commit suicide several weeks ago, succeeded in completing the act Saturday night, by taking a quantity of carbolic acid. Mr. Hildebrandt has been dependent for some time, and the act of Saturday night is the culmination of the desire on his part to end the struggle. Mr. Hildebrandt was 53 years of age, and has resided in Chelsea for the past two years. He leaves a widow and three children. The remains were taken to his former home at Howell Tuesday for interment.

Mrs. Ophelia Davidson.

Ophelia Davidson died June 4, 1908, at her home in Sylvan, aged 67 years. She was born October 3, 1840, in Sylvan, not far from the home where she has lived for the past 42 years. Her home has always been in Sharon or Sylvan. While still young she joined the little country church near her home, and while able took an active part in all of its work. March 5, 1889, she was joined in marriage to William H. Davidson, who died twenty-one years ago. A brother, John Schunk of Traverse City, a sister, Mrs. Margaret Clark of Ypsilanti, and three children, William and Frank Davidson, and Mrs. Joseph Wellhoff, survive her. The funeral was held from her late home at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, Rev. M. L. Grant, conducting the services. Interment was at Vermont cemetery.

Was Bumped Again.

The "Yes" vote on the school house proposition seems to be increasing. At the election of two weeks ago there were nine "yes." At the election of Friday this number had increased to fifteen, and the mathematicians are hard at work now figuring out from this data about the length of time that this rate of increase will bring a majority. At the last election there were 188 votes cast, 173 of this number being "No."

Notice.

MILLEN PORTLAND CEMENT COMPANY

TOOK POSSESSION OF THE PLANT LAST MONDAY.

CAPITALIZED FOR $500,000

Force of Men at Work Overhauling Machinery and Getting the Plant in Shape to Run—Will Employ a Force of Nearly One Hundred Men.

After much hard work and many discouragements, Homer C. Miller is once more at the head of the cement works at Four Mile lake. Word was received here Monday to turn the works over to him, and possession was taken that night.

The settlement with W. J. White wipes out the White Portland Cement Co., and a new one to be known as Millen Portland Cement Co., is being organized this week, with a capital stock of $500,000. The officers of the new corporation will be:

President and general manager—Homer C. Miller.
Vice president and assistant manager—Blair Kincaid, jr.
Secretary—B. B. Selling.
Treasurer—Z. C. Eldred.

William Coe has been engaged to act as superintendent, and J. E. McKune will act as bookkeeper.

A small force of men was put at work Tuesday at the plant, and the number is being increased as rapidly as possible in order to get it in running shape after the idleness of the past three years. It is hoped to have the machinery in shape to be started up and make a trial run by the last of next week, and by the first of July it is thought that a full force of about ninety men will be employed steadily. This will mean a payroll of about $1,200 each week, and will mean much for Chelsea, in a material way.

The present capacity of the plant is 500 barrels a day of 24 hours, and the prospects are that the size of the plant will be doubled within a year. The plant will be run day and night, with the exception of during the daytime Sundays.

J. E. Bartlett & Co. of Jackson have been engaged to act as selling agents for a period of five years, and they now have orders enough booked to run the plant for a long time.

The old company manufactured about 25,000 barrels of cement during the short time that the mill was run, and a number of tests of the product was made, both by the United States government and the Michigan Central Railroad, and it was reported as being one of the best cements manufactured in the United States, and the best made in Michigan.

The company owns more than 700 acres of land, and have about 550 acres of the finest deposit of marl in the world, which averages better than twenty feet in depth. The marl is remarkably free from foreign matter, and tests 90 per cent of carbonate of lime.

On the property are located the clay beds, 150 acres with an average depth of ninety feet, as has been shown by test borings. This plant is the only one in the country where the marl and clay used in manufacturing the product are found on the same property and it means much to the company in a more economical handling of the various materials.

JEROME MINNIS DEAD.

Member of Famous Minnis Band Dies at His Home in Ann Arbor.

Jerome Minnis, one of the members of the Minnis Bros. martial band, an organization perfected shortly before the outbreak of the civil war, died at his home in Ann Arbor, early Saturday morning. He had been ill for several weeks and his death was expected.

Mr. Minnis was 70 years old and two brothers, Charles and Frank, survive him.

The deceased was one of the four Minnis brothers, Jerome, Frank, Homer and Charles, who are known all over the state. They were born in Ann Arbor, and before the war organized their martial band. Upon the breaking out of hostilities they went through the state recruiting soldiers and secured 1,000 men. They then enlisted in the Twentieth Michigan Infantry and served until mustered out at the close of the war.

Maccabee Memorial.

Both societies will meet at Maccabee hall at 1:30 o'clock where the beautiful service of the L. O. T. M. M. will be carried out by the ladies. At the close of the services, a line will be formed, headed by the Chelsea band, and both organizations will march to Oak Grove cemetery, where the memorial services will be carried out, and the graves of the deceased members will be decorated.

The committee in charge of the arrangements requests every member of the two orders to be present and assist in the services. They would be pleased to have every member bring a contribution of flowers. The hall will be open at 9 o'clock Sunday morning, and those having flowers are requested to bring them there.

Closed Successful Season.

Manager Abbott, of the New Whitney Theater, Ann Arbor, who closed his season last week with Dixie Minstrels, is to be congratulated on his successful and satisfactory management. Although the season was well advanced before the house was ready to open he has secured for Ann Arbor some of the best attractions on the road, and the best that have been in Michigan this year. Being on the Whitney circuit, Ann Arbor has had the advantage of a uniformly good run of entertainments and a weeding out of the inferior from which she used to suffer. Inasmuch as the best attractions have been well patronized there is no doubt that next year Manager Abbott will be able to secure all the best attractions making trans-continental tours.

SEFFY

A ROMANCE OF A PENNSYLVANIA FARM

By JOHN LUTHER LONG

Illustrations by Don Wilson

(Copyright, 1905, by John Luther Long)

SYNOPSIS.

The crowning desire in the life of old Baumgartner, a Pennsylvania German, is to obtain possession of the beautiful meadow which lies just between Baumgartner's property and the railroad station. The property in question was inherited by Sarah Pressel, very pretty and athletic young girl, and belonged solely to her. At length Baumgartner came to realize that his only hope of obtaining the property would be through the marriage of his son Seppeljah to Sarah Pressel. In a mock auction "Seppeljah" as Seppeljah P. Baumgartner, Jr., is popularly known, is raffled off by his father to Sarah for $1. He appears utterly incapacitated to win in any contest of love or life. Sarah Pressel is quite the opposite of Seff. She is all life and animation. Her one fault is a very high temper. Baumgartner gives Seff some lessons in courtship. Baumgartner has caused himself to be appointed guardian of Seff. Seff is unable to resist the fascinating wiles of Sally and he kisses her. She promises him, however, that she will never kiss any man but him. Sam Fritz, a drunken grocery clerk, calls on Sally and interrupts the kissing. They go into the parlor and begin a "sitting up" contest. In accordance with the customs of the place and the time, the one who is defeated in such a contest is unworthy the hand of the girl. Seff goes to sleep and begins snoring. Sally leaves the room in a huff, saying: "Good night, gentleman." Seff is his father's humiliation; of how Sam Fritz had pinned to his bosom while he slept a postcard bearing the inscription: "Seppeljah P. Baumgartner, Jr., went to his first June 1st, 1905, in the twentieth year of his age. Gone but not forgot. Read backwards."

CHAPTER VI.—Continued.

There was no restraint to his father's laughter now. After it had subsided he asked:

"What did you do with the tombstone?"

"Left it there."

"That's bad, Seff. He'll put it up at the store and you ken never go there no more."

Seff's look of horror was a reminder to his father that it would have been better not to say that. But Old Baumgartner had tremendous aplomb.

"Nefar mind—nefer mind. Mebby he won't sink of that"—though he knew the store clerk would be certain to think of it.

Upon a sudden thought the old man leaped up.

"And where was Sam? Say! When you woke up?"

"I don't know."

"But—there wasn't there—at Sally's?"

"No," said Seff hopelessly.

His father clutched his shoulder and set him on his feet.

"Well—you dam! little idiot—aha—aha—don't you see that you did set him out—say. Why, you—a winner, Seff! I'm proud of you!"

Seff started and looked a little less inert. His father laughed hugely.

"I know you'd do it! Aha—ha—ha! Nobody ken beat a Baumgartner courting a gal! What's sleeping—if you stayed! Huh! You stayed till daylight! Seff—I'm laughing! Why, I used to sleep when I set up wiss you mammy fone time another feller was there. I done it a-purpose! And she'd wake me up when the other feller was gone and it came time for me to go. Why—say—I stayed and slept all night—till broad daylight and go home wiss the cows in the morning—many a time! Yassir! Chust like you, Seff! Seff, you're all right. Goshens, but you had a narrow escape, though! Chust suppose you'd a woke up and forgot what you was up to—you do that, sometimes, Seff, when you're dreamy—and gone home before you remembered that you was out-setting him! He'd a had you dead, Seff, dead and buried in the family lot. But you got him, Seff, ol'-boy—and Sally, too, be-goshens! Shall we get at the fence to-day?" Seff did not respond. And his father knew better than most of us where suggestion should stop.

"All right. We bese busy to-day. Mebby we better let it be till to-morrow."

Of course Old Baumgartner was well aware that his logic would not bear the least scrutiny. And he regarded Seff anxiously as he raced through it. But dull happy Seff saw no flaws in it. He agreed with his father that he had out-set Sam. And if it had not been too plainly accidental, he would have adopted the fancy that he had had a heroic purpose in it—so convincing was his father's logic to his little mind.

The old man rattled on. Seff must not think much.

"And snoring! Mah! Nossing—nossing at all! I could give you lessons in snoring. And you mammy use to say that she liked it. It wasn't so lonely and she knowed I was on deck and alive. Snoring! Aha—ha—ha! What a that—if you are sure of the gal!"

Seff ahenmed several times and looked less like a condemned malefactor—though still far from suborned.

"That dam! molasses-tapper—he's got to be licked—and if I got to do it myself—though I ain't much of a lick-er. The whole county'll know about that—to—to—" he turned away to smile—"tombstone. I bet he's got it hanging up in the store now! We got to let 'em know that you set him out, Seff! Yassir—told daylight! Woke up and stayed! Sleeping was chust to ketch him! You was awake all the time! Lie a little, hah?"

His father was proud of this last. As they drew apart he called back:

"If she don't like snoring, Seff, wear a clothes-pin when you set up wiss her—one of them wiss a spring—not?"

Aha—ha—ha! And then: "You all right, Seff—yassir! you all right—you the conquering hero comes! Go right back—mebby to-night—you entitled to do it."

"Bogoshens, I will!" said Seff in his father's own slogan.

Seff would have pressed his suit even without this, I think—because of those moments in the dark parlor. One does not soon forget that sort of thing.

"Now," advised his father, "you know well enough what kind of a temper goes wiss her hair—I use to haf hair enough onct—and it was red! All right when it's on your side. But hell when it's ag'in you. Them red-heads always regrets—I do and she does! Say—Seff—Seff, don't you let her regret in vain—ketch her while she's at it."

So, Seff went up the hill again—not that night—which was a mistake—he could not quite bring himself to that—but the next. And he had washed the grease out of his hair and left the hat at home as well as the butterfly tie and the boots and, if I do say it, he was a very handsome fellow, worth at least a dozen of his rival.

But Sally, watching for this very thing, saw him coming and hardened her heart, as Pharaoh did in the face of proffered felicity, and, by a good deal of forcible instruction, she succeeded in getting the little maid to say that she was not at home. The maid's untutored face showed Seff that she was not telling the truth, however, and she was not sorry for it. She would never have treated Seff so!

Seff shifted his hat from one hand to the other and then said:

"Tell her—tell her—when she comes home—that I'm sorry—" He did not exactly know what he was sorry for, and so said good night and went.

"He knowed you was at home!" reproached the little maid. "He was sorry for you."

"What did he say?" demanded Sally savagely.

"To tell you that he was sorry—when you got home."

"When I got home? Then I better stay away I expect. That's what he meant, di he? Well, I'll show him!" But the maid understood Seff's rustic chivalry, and she did not laugh with her mistress.

Yet, Sally went back to her window and again watched, hoping Seff would look back. She was not quite sure what she would do. Perhaps she would get angry—perhaps—But if he would only look! He did not, and Sally understood that he had accepted his conge as she had given it. And quite as the old man had said, she did regret, now, and she had regretted that other night. But there was more penance than he had said or thought. Yet—there was the Pressel temper! And it did not await the subsidence of the sorrow, but rose at once. What business had he tamely to accept the situation?

I am satisfied that there is some connection between red hair and temper. And I am, further, satisfied that there is even more between the associated ideas of red hair, temper and regret. But my difficulty is to determine just where each stands. Logically, the regret ought to come last. But, to Sally,

Seff was the first.

At the end was a sob.

Ah! Seff could not harbor ill against a dog that had bit him. And Sally sobbed. The hands he had kissed before, he kissed again—in that fashion, you will remember, which must have survived from some cavalier ancestor.

FIFTY RUPEES EASILY MADE.

Tricky Indian Merchant Feared Inquisitive Stranger.

An Indian merchant wished to dispose of an old elephant and took it to a fair. As soon as he had arrived he noticed a man who, without saying a word, began to walk round the animal, examining it attentively on all sides. The merchant became very anxious, for he feared the man had found out that his elephant was not worth much. He took him aside and whispered in his ear: "I see a customer coming. Do not say a word until I have sold the beast and I will give you 50 rupees." The man looked at the merchant and wonderingly complied with his request. It happened that the customer had more money than sense, so that he was easily taken in. When the bargain was completed and the elephant led away by its new owner, the merchant handed the 50 rupees to the silent man, saying: "Now, I want you to tell me how you discovered the defect in his left leg. I thought I had concealed it so skillfully." "I have discovered nothing," replied the stranger. "It is the first elephant I have ever seen, and I wanted to know which was the head and which was the tail."

Exchange.

Defense That Failed.

"I was not," said a lady at a Manchester police court, "using bad language. I was too well dressed and respectable." The bench, which seems not to understand the implied argument of the moral effect of good clothing upon the wearer, imposed a fine.

VII.

The Poison-Spring in the Cotton Woods.

They met on the damp country road one evening—Sally and the old man—two weeks later. She was walking with drooping head, and, when she suddenly raised it, as he ahenmed, he was quite sure that she had been crying.

"I don't know what's the matter wiss him!" said Seff's father, as if they had been discussing Seff.

"Who?" asked the girl tremulously—though she knew—"he ain't sick?"

"Seff—Seff—my Seff. No—not exactly—not to say sick. I like him so—he's all I got—and it's somesing wrong wiss him. He can't live long this way. Efery night he's down by the Poison spring—wiss the witches—often all night. He's there now. I chust ken away—trying to cheer him up a little. Well, so good night."

He passed on, for he was a merciful old man, and Sally hurried away to the Poison spring. And Old Baumgartner laughed through his gnarled hands behind the cover of the next turn in the road, though even to him laughter was no more gay, as of yore.

Seff was there, on his back, with his hands under his head, staring up at the moon. He looked pitifully alone. A great lump surged in Sally's throat, and if she had obeyed only her heart she would have flung her arms around him. But another of those qualities which go with red hair, pride, prevented this. She coughed a little and Seff flew around.

"I was just taking a walk," she said.

"Yes," said Seff humbly.

"The Poison spring is on my property—"

"I got away!" said Seff, rising. He looked gaunt as he stood on his feet in the moonlight.

"Seff—I didn't mean—" began the really unhappy girl, her head quite giving way to her heart now.

"I got nowhere else to go now," excused Seff. "I can't go to the store—Sam's got the tombstone there—or anywhere where there's people—account everybody knows. Sam's got a notice of it hung up in the store. It's all they talk about. He got it printed in the paper, too! I'd go away, out west, but pappy don't want me to go. I come here, account no one else ever comes—it's unhealthy. I didn't know that you owned—" He was shaming off. The last words came from a distance. "Good night."

He did not know that Sally was following him. When she spoke it was close behind him. He veered so suddenly as to catch the pain in her face. But he was dull, Seff.

"Seff," she said, close upon him, "Seff, I was at home."

Seff said nothing.

"Seff—I am unhappy—and a fool!" Still Seff did not move nor speak.

"Don't you care that I am unhappy?"

Still silence.

"And don't you never forgive no one?"

At the end was a sob.

Ah! Seff could not harbor ill against a dog that had bit him. And Sally sobbed. The hands he had kissed before, he kissed again—in that fashion, you will remember, which must have survived from some cavalier ancestor.

Tricky Indian Merchant Feared Inquisitive Stranger.

An Indian merchant wished to dispose of an old elephant and took it to a fair. As soon as he had arrived he noticed a man who, without saying a word, began to walk round the animal, examining it attentively on all sides. The merchant became very anxious, for he feared the man had found out that his elephant was not worth much. He took him aside and whispered in his ear: "I see a customer coming. Do not say a word until I have sold the beast and I will give you 50 rupees." The man looked at the merchant and wonderingly complied with his request. It happened that the customer had more money than sense, so that he was easily taken in. When the bargain was completed and the elephant led away by its new owner, the merchant handed the 50 rupees to the silent man, saying: "Now, I want you to tell me how you discovered the defect in his left leg. I thought I had concealed it so skillfully." "I have discovered nothing," replied the stranger. "It is the first elephant I have ever seen, and I wanted to know which was the head and which was the tail."

Exchange.

Defense That Failed.

"I was not," said a lady at a Manchester police court, "using bad language. I was too well dressed and respectable." The bench, which seems not to understand the implied argument of the moral effect of good clothing upon the wearer, imposed a fine.

The Poison-Spring in the Cotton Woods.

They met on the damp country road one evening—Sally and the old man—two weeks later. She was walking with drooping head, and, when she suddenly raised it, as he ahenmed, he was quite sure that she had been crying.

"I don't know what's the matter wiss him!" said Seff's father, as if they had been discussing Seff.

"Who?" asked the girl tremulously—though she knew—"he ain't sick?"

"Seff—Seff—my Seff. No—not exactly—not to say sick. I like him so—he's all I got—and it's somesing wrong wiss him. He can't live long this way. Efery night he's down by the Poison spring—wiss the witches—often all night. He's there now. I chust ken away—trying to cheer him up a little. Well, so good night."

He passed on, for he was a merciful old man, and Sally hurried away to the Poison spring. And Old Baumgartner laughed through his gnarled hands behind the cover of the next turn in the road, though even to him laughter was no more gay, as of yore.

Seff was there, on his back, with his hands under his head, staring up at the moon. He looked pitifully alone. A great lump surged in Sally's throat, and if she had obeyed only her heart she would have flung her arms around him. But another of those qualities which go with red hair, pride, prevented this. She coughed a little and Seff flew around.

"I was just taking a walk," she said.

"Yes," said Seff humbly.

"The Poison spring is on my property—"

"I got away!" said Seff, rising. He looked gaunt as he stood on his feet in the moonlight.

"Seff—I didn't mean—" began the really unhappy girl, her head quite giving way to her heart now.

"I got nowhere else to go now," excused Seff. "I can't go to the store—Sam's got the tombstone there—or anywhere where there's people—account everybody knows. Sam's got a notice of it hung up in the store. It's all they talk about. He got it printed in the paper, too! I'd go away, out west, but pappy don't want me to go. I come here, account no one else ever comes—it's unhealthy. I didn't know that you owned—" He was shaming off. The last words came from a distance. "Good night."

He did not know that Sally was following him. When she spoke it was close behind him. He veered so suddenly as to catch the pain in her face. But he was dull, Seff.

"Seff," she said, close upon him, "Seff, I was at home."

Seff said nothing.

"Seff—I am unhappy—and a fool!" Still Seff did not move nor speak.

"Don't you care that I am unhappy?"

Still silence.

"And don't you never forgive no one?"

At the end was a sob.

Ah! Seff could not harbor ill against a dog that had bit him. And Sally sobbed. The hands he had kissed before, he kissed again—in that fashion, you will remember, which must have survived from some cavalier ancestor.

HOUSE GOWN

For house or reception wear, both now and during the coming summer, this beautiful gown will be most appropriate. The body portion of the waist is of orchid yellow marquisette, over a lining of taffetas. The yoke band is of tucked marquisette, and the square hertha yoke-facing and cuff bands are of cream-colored lace. The skirt is made with a one-piece foundation, having a circular flounce, and a four piece over-skirt. The foundation and circular flounce are of the marquisette, and the four-piece over-skirt is of the all-over lace. If desired, the overskirt and circular flounce may be made of one material, the former embroidered by hand, or trimmed with buttons and braid loops.

For 36 inch waist requires 5 yards of material 20 inches wide, 2 3/4 yards 36 inches wide, or 2 1/2 yards 42 inches wide; 3/4 yard of all-over lace 18 inches wide for collar, yoke-facing and arm-bands.

SHORT SLEEVES LOBING VOGUE.

Parisian Modistes Declare for Change in Fashion.

As usual, sleeves are of prime importance in the warm weather wardrobe, says Mrs. Osborn in the Delineator. More than any other detail of the toilet they betray the exact date of its creation. "A gown is as old as its sleeve" is an axiom of the dressmaking profession.

In Paris the short sleeve is already passe. The American woman, however, will not drop it abruptly for the long sleeve. She will be inclined to temperize on account of the heat of our long summer, but by autumn it is a certainty that the short sleeve will have been laid to rest.

One of the best examples of the typical small sleeve is used in the tulle. It is full length, of course, close fitting and with no perceptible fullness at the armhole. An excellent phase of it is illustrated in the costume of shantung in the shade called "ashes of violets." The little coat has a square seamed postillon back and a deep V-shaped closing in the front that is caught to one side with a darker tone choux of silk, plaited and ruched into a clever semblance of a double violet.

The sleeve is most interesting and unusual, for it has but one seam, and that on the outside of the arm. The sleeve buttons from the elbow to the wrist with a bias line of great buttonholes bound in cloth, and small round cloth-covered buttons. The armhole of the coat is turned under and piped so that the seam is as flat as possible.

For Mourning Wear.

Some years ago a movement against crape took place in England, of which the influence was felt in America. The swing of the pendulum has now once more brought crape in favor for mourning use, and it is an English manufacture—even in Paris English crape is used—British manufacturers are rejoicing. The recent death of the duke of Devonshire has thrown a great number of families into mourning, and the abundance of crape used is very noticeable.

For the Stout Woman.

The stout woman will look well to the construction of her corset cover. It should have a many pieces to it as possible, as it will be stronger and fit better and there should be no ruffle about the bottom, but simply a band to make as little fullness as possible.

Of Dark Blue Linen.

A suit of dark blue linen is trimmed at the collar and cuffs with blue tulle, while the skirt and coat are finished with large blue bone buttons. The skirt of this suit is circular with a flat back.

Of Voile and Taffeta.

Some suits are composed of the voile skirt with a wide band of taffeta at the foot, and a coat of taffeta. The girle is made of taffeta and is about six inches wide.

With clusters of "blow-aways." The newest shape neck ruffle in brown tulle, tied at the side with brown satin ribbon.

ROAD AND FARM IMPROVEMENT

MENDING SPLIT POSTS.

Draw Tightly Together with Chain and Insert Bolt.

Those who have post-and-rail fences know that posts are likely to split from a variety of causes, letting the rails drop and making a very poor fence. The damage is usually repaired by nailing an old horseshoe or two across the split in the post below each post hole. Although this answers fairly well, it does not draw the post together. Horseshoes are not always on hand and even if they were they will have to be nailed very securely in order to keep the posts from spreading even more. A good method of closing up the cleft is shown in the accompanying cut, says The Farmer. Place a short, stout chain around the top of the post just tight enough to admit a strong lever. The post can then be drawn together by a strong downward pressure and the lever held there by tying it to the lowest post hole. A half-inch pole can then be bored through the post, a bolt drawn through and the sides drawn tightly together. This post will then last as long as any other in the fence and will not be a cause of losing any sleep for fear your own or some one else's cattle will be getting into trouble.

Mending a Split Post.

YOU CAN HAVE GOOD ROADS.

Black Loam Soil Not a Bar to Hard Roads, says H. H. Gross.

It is often urged that hard roads in the corn belt of the Mississippi valley are impracticable, first, for the reason that stone or gravel roads cannot be built on the heavy black loam soil of that section, and, second, because there is no road material at hand for this purpose.

The fact is there are no difficulties there that cannot be overcome. Only one precaution is necessary, and that is thorough drainage. See that the road is thoroughly drained, which may be done either by side-ditching or by tiling-sub-surface drains, and the task will be an easy one. The layer of road material serves as a roof over the road to keep it dry.

As to road material, though there are no deposits of stone or gravel in the corn belt, the land in that section is exceedingly fertile and produces large revenues, and its owners are better able to pay road taxes than the farmers in other parts where the road material is at hand and the soil less fertile. Furthermore, the railroads are interested in the betterment of the highways and will carry road material southward into the corn belt at the cost of the service or less. The southern part of the state furnishes the northern part with coal—the coal cars go back empty—why not fill them with stone or gravel?

The farmers of the corn belt have still another advantage when it comes to building hard roads. The land is comparatively level, so no heavy grading is necessary. It is true that hard roads can be built in the corn belt with material shipped in for half the cost of roads in Massachusetts, where stone abounds, the difference being that in Massachusetts the hills must be cut down, the hollows filled, and the streams bridged.—H. H. Gross, Secretary Farmers' Good Roads League.

HINTS TO HELP.

Stop the danger of runaway by getting new harnesses or having the old ones nicely fixed up.

There are some people so honest that they never deviate from the truth, except when the tax assessor calls.

If weeds begin to show themselves in the corn field before the hills show, a weeder will help to subdue them and bring the corn up faster, too.

Begin the season right by cutting off the top of every weed that shows itself. At the same time, root out every weed that comes to your lips.

It costs 25 cents to raise a bushel of potatoes, and they seldom sell for less than 50 cents. Doubling one's money is considered pretty profitable business.

When the mows are emptied, sweep them thoroughly and let in all the air and sunlight possible. We have seen barns with ten-year-old dust-filled cobwebs hanging from ridgepole and cross-beam.

When things go wrong on the farm, just think that it might be worse. Hurry around and make the wrong thing right, and lie down to rest at night feeling that every day is a good day, no matter what happens in it.

BREVITIES

The Manchester Enterprise feels hurt because more of the citizens of Manchester are not injured by the fast running trains on the Lake Shore.

Caesarian operation was successfully performed at the University hospital Saturday upon Mrs. Wilson of Coleman. Both mother and child lived.

The catalpa trees in Farmington have all been damaged and some of them entirely killed either by the cold weather of the past winter or by some pest not yet discovered.—
Farmington Enterprise.

Philip Doren of Jackson was killed by the cars Saturday. A son was killed on the same spot six years ago. The aged widow is prostrated with grief and grave fears are entertained for her recovery.

Supervisor Landwehr informs the Enterprise that there have been many changes in real estate during the past year. He says that it is surprising. There is a good demand for farms and village real estate is selling at good prices.—Manchester Enterprise.

Otto Lidtke of Ypsilanti, who was convicted last month of attempting to bribe Justice Gunn of Ypsilanti, was Monday morning fined $100 and sentenced to 24 hours in jail. He paid the fine. Lidtke was a principal in a suit involving about $35.
He offered Gunn $5 if he would decide the suit in his favor.

Two damage suits against the Detroit, Jackson & Chicago electric railway, growing out of the interurban wreck near Denton last April, were filed in the circuit court Monday. Bernard DeGrass, a traveling man, wants $5,000 while George Sanderson Stewart, of Ann Arbor, has brought suit for $10,000.

Plans are being made to establish the "Craftsmen" a club organized the college year among the Masonic students of Michigan, as a national organization, rather than only a local institution. Arrangements are being made to form a similar club at the M. A. C. During the summer the local members will try to promote the clubs in other colleges.
The Michigan club now has 125
members. Next year headquarters will be opened for aiding the freshmen, who are Masons. Later clubrooms will be secured.

Suit for damage, based on circumstances believed to be without precedent in Michigan, was begun Saturday by the filing of a declaration
in the circuit court of Livingston county by Peter North against the Interstate Long Distance Telephone company. Three months ago the wife of the plaintiff and Carrie Allen who had been living with the Norths were killed by lightning which en-towed the North home in Hartland township. North had formerly had a telephone in his house. It had been removed some time before his wife met her tragic fate but the wires were left dangling on the house. It is asserted by the plaintiff that the lightning entered the house on these wires and that the telephone company is responsible for the death of his wife by reason of its negligence in not removing the unused wires. Plaintiff sues for $10-000 damages.

"To wear or not to wear collars"
—that is the burning question at Northville, and the end is not yet.
It all happens in the high school.
The preceptress had an idea the seniors and juniors of the male persuasion didn't look real dignified coming collarless to school even on hot days, and she issued a collar bulletin, affecting some of the boys who had too much bare necks. Then they (the boys) issued a collar classified that no pupil should appear without a collar, to go into effect last Wednesday. That morning every boy certainly wore a collar, but the styles varied from a horse-collar to a pink ribbon. The preceptress then issued orders that it was then and there regulation collars
and an apology or else a vacation.
That was going some as it is too near graduation and promotion time to monkey with the buzzsaw. Next the school board was appealed to and that body is now wrestling with the weighty question during the temporary cessation of hostilities.

The proposition to pave Main street at Plymouth with brick was carried at a special election last week by a vote of 331 "yes" and 41
"no." Work will be commenced about July 1.

The Michigan Central railroad expects soon to build two new roundhouses at Jackson Junction.
The work is planned, and the company has bought sufficient land.
One of the new roundhouses will replace the present structure.

Some of the co-eds of the U. of M. are indignant over the clause in the new university catalogues which practically orders them not to room in houses where there are men roomers. They say that most of them room in houses where only women are taken anyhow, but that they object to the implied restriction.

The Raisin Valley seminary, after an existence of 50 years in "Quaker Valley," three miles from Adrian, will close this month. Since the death of "Aunt" Laura Haviland,
the moving spirit in the school, it has gradually declined. Quakers moved away and the pupils dwindled.
Recently the board decided to give up the fight and the old school will probably be sold. A movement has now been started to build a monument to "Aunt Laura"
to commemorate her work for the school and her "underground railway" services in Civil war time.

There is a very fair imitation of the tower of Babel at the home of T.
H. VanManen in Ann Arbor. Mr.
VanManen is a Hollander and was married in Switzerland two years ago. He and his wife came to Ann Arbor that he might take the engineering course in the university in which he is now a junior. Recently Mrs. Van Manen's mother, Mrs. Van
Houck came to visit her daughter.
Mrs. Van Houck is the wife of a Russian general, and speaks nothing but Russian and German. This led to a polyglot language being spoken in Van Manen's home. Mother and daughter speak to each other in Russian, while the husband listens uncomprehendingly. Husband and wife converse in French, which mother-in-law does not understand.
When mother and son-in-law converse, it is in German, which might be Greek for all the wife knows.
And when mother-in-law and wife are in the midst of their conversation husband finds consolation in talking Dutch to his little son.

New Engineering Site.

It was announced at the meeting of the board of regents Friday that by the purchase from Col. and Mrs. Charles Bogardus and by a generous gift of 1nd
from the University of Michigan has acquired 1,441 acres in Cheboygan county, on Lake Douglas, which is to be named Bogardus Engineering Camp of the University of Michigan, and at which place the permanent engineering camp will be located after this year.

The gift is a magnificent one and includes about three miles of frontage on the edge of Lake Douglas, with a varying land surface. It includes also 100 acres of hardwood valued at $5,000 and a splendid spring which flows 3,000,000 gallons of pure water per day, feeding a stream a mile and a half long.

The lake is about four miles long and averages about two miles wide, and is connected with Burt Lake, about 40 or 50 feet lower, giving a desirable water power through Maple river, the outlet of Douglas Lake to Burt Lake. The property will provide a place for the study of water and land survey, calibrat-ing stream and railroad surveys for 50 years to come. It will also provide summer field work in forestry and botany.

The property is located about 16 miles south of Mackinaw City and about six miles east of Pellston. It is estimated to be worth $30,000, but was acquired by the University for $2,500.

GOOD NEWS.

Many Chelsea Readers Have Heard It
And Profited Thereby.

"Good news travels fast," and the thousands of bad back sufferers in Chelsea are glad to learn that prompt relief is within their reach. Many a lame, weak and aching back is bad no more,
thanks to Doan's Kidney Pills. Many reliable people are telling the good news of their experience with the Old Quaker Remedy. Here is an example worth reading:
E. L. Winchell, of 308 West Cass street,
Aubion, Mich., says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills and do not hesitate to give them my hearty endorsement. I suffered for some time from sharp pains across my back and joints which were always more severe if I attempted to stoop or lift. If I took the slightest cold it would always settle in my kidneys and aggravate the trouble. I used many remedies but did not succeed in finding a cure until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills. They helped me from the first and in a short time entirely cured me. (From a statement given on November 23rd, 1901).

On November 23rd, 1906, Mr. Winchell confirmed the above in the following words: "I am glad of the opportunity to again endorse Doan's Kidney Pills.
They cured me in 1901, and during the last five years I have not had the slightest symptom of kidney complaint.
