Young Men--Consider

Copyright 1908 by Hart Schaffner & Marx

YOU can spend $15, $18, or $20 tomorrow for a suit and look just as if you were wearing your last year's outfit. It depends on where you buy and what they sell you.

THERE is considerable of last winter's goods in some retail stores. That's one fact. There is, also, much clothing on the market which has been made recently but possesses nothing distinctly new or different either in style, pattern or looks. That is another fact.

EVERY time you buy a new garment, you should get new features; every year brings about great changes and these ought to be evident to you before you invest. If they're not, press up your old suit and make it do, or, still better, come and let us show you the correct styles.

THIS store makes it a point to have all the newest and latest ideas of clever designers. The goods are a change from any previous season and different from the average. We sell out our stock each season; if we carry over any, we don't represent them as new, but tell you what they are.

WE'VE new things to show now; catchy ideas for sleeves and vests; clever conceptions for lapels. We figure on dressing every young man so as to make people ask where he buys his clothes. We're waiting to see you.

Are Passing Away.

Ann Arbor News: The National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic which was in session in Toledo the past week, illustrated all too clearly with what rapidity the ranks of the civil war veterans are being decimated these later years.

The report of the Adjutant General which was given at the encampment showed that the death loss the past year exceeded 10,000 of the old soldiers, and for about the first time in the history of this patriotic organization, the deaths exceeded the growth. Over two million men were recruited for the Union armies during the fatal years of 1861-5, and of that number at the close nearly one-quarter had disappeared from death occasioned in battle, the result of wounds, or of disease. Gradually at first the number of survivors grew less, but every year since has marked an increasing decline in the numbers until now every year they are disappearing like the snow before the morning sun. At Toledo there was a large attendance considering the forty-five years which have passed since the war and nearly twelve thousand were reported in the grand parade, indicating with what determination the men who fought the battles of the Republic are cleaving to the loyalty which inspired their patriotic service. The years are few for the most favored of them, but the custom of meeting at these annual gatherings will be an inspiration so long as life remains to any number of them.

W. C. T. U. Convention.

Taft, Ann Arbor; recording secretary, Mrs. Allie Austin, Ypsilanti; treasurer, Mrs. Mary Russell, Willis; vice presidents, Mrs. Helen Thompson, Salem; Mrs. Ida Callis, Milan; Mrs. M. J. Tafe, Ann Arbor; Mrs. Martha Warner, Ypsilanti; Mrs. Rhoda Derbyshire, Willis; Mrs. Helen Burr, Dexter; Mrs. Flora Hadley, Derbyshire Union; Mrs. F. E. Howard, Manchester.

Shattered Nerves.

Many people complain of shattered nerves. Very frequently this malady is caused by the overwork of body and brain. Bad sleep or no sleep at all is one of the prominent symptoms of shattered nerves. A weary and yet restless feeling during waking hours, both day and night, is a similar symptom. Excessive irritability, instead of good temper, is another symptom. A strong tendency to think the worst of everything, rather than the best, is another symptom. A wish for death, rather than life, with such a state of body and mind, is not uncommon. A strong idea that we are somehow wrong and cannot get right, is another symptom. Fear and foreboding of evil is another. What we have indicated as the symptoms will indicate that the mind has a great deal to do with all such cases. Frequently, says the New York Weekly, it is the mere idea, strongly fixed, which works all the harm. If the mind could banish its depression, the same nerves that have been set down as hopelessly shattered may turn out to be quite sound and good by the act of changed thought. But to do good work one must have adequate rest. More and better work is done by a good sleeper, who daily takes at least eight hours of sound sleep, than by one who forces himself to do less. But even if this were not true, it would still be certain that it is ruinous to life's grandest ends to deny the nerve-system that on which its healthy state depends.

Romance got something of a setback the other day when, from the steps of the Royal Exchange of London, the common crier made proclamation that after August 1 the doubloon would cease to be legal tender in the West Indies, including British Guiana. Now the boy who finds a pirate's buried treasure will have to dispose of his Spanish gold at its bullion value. It may console him to know that for some years the doubloon has not been the precious thing it was. In 1730, and for a century after, it was worth eight dollars, "more or less," but the current doubloon was worth only about five dollars. It has ceased to be coined in its native country, Spain, and now it will soon become unpopular in the West Indies, where it has figured in a mixed circulation embracing British, United States and Spanish coins. In the interest of romance, however, the name at least must survive. It signifies nothing more than that the coin was double the value of a pistole; but "doubloon" was never such a mouth-filling mockery as "pieces of eight," which suggests great riches, but means only Spanish silver dollars, pieces equivalent to eight reals.

So far as experience goes with the Chicago directory it is a painstaking and truth-telling book. The publishers go to large expense to make it so. If John Smith is living at the corner of Southwest street and Northwest boulevard and rumor hath it that he is still there and intends to remain in that spot for the rest of his life, do they take it for granted that such is the case? Not at all, declares the Chicago Daily News. They send a man out to see. That man reports on a specially prepared blank and his work is verified. That being the case, why should we not look on it as a truthful book when it estimates the population of Chicago at 2,425,000? True, the national census will be along in a couple of years and it may call us down, but meanwhile we can have the pleasure of feeling as large as possible. Will the school census please go away back and sit down?

Some years ago Canada decided to observe Thanksgiving in October instead of November, as a more cheerful month for the family gathering and a more suitable time for a harvest festival. The day of the week, however, was Thursday, as in this country. But now still another shift is to be made, by which Thanksgiving will hereafter come on Monday. This is in order that commercial travelers, students away from home and business men who live remote from their place of birth may have a longer time for the family reunion. The inclusion of Sunday in the holiday may also safeguard the sacred character of the festival. The Monday plan offers so many advantages that the Canadians are to be congratulated upon the change, and Americans ought not to be too conservative to adopt it.

DIRECTORS ARE SEVERELY SCORED

YOUNG CASHIER OF ATHENS IS NOW CHARGED WITH FORGERY.

DIRECTORS WERE LAX

Young Man Seems to Have Made Same Bad Loans and Did Business Very Carelessly.

While Harry G. Lewis, the 23-year-old cashier of the closed Athens State Savings bank, sat sobbing in the circuit courtroom Friday, Deputy Attorney General Henry M. Chase arraigned the directors for permitting so much responsibility to rest on a youth and then announced that it would be necessary to place Lewis under arrest.

A specific charge of issuing $1,400 forged notes, signed J. A. Stanton, was made and Lewis was arraigned before Justice Batorff. W. M. Albertson, the aged director who was forced to make out the complaint, wept as he did so. Bond was furnished by R. H. Lewis, father of the cashier and a stockholder in the bank.

"You directors may be honest," said Chase, turning to them in the court, "but you have hopelessly neglected your duty in shoving responsibility on a 23-year-old boy."

Chase declared the bank was entirely insolvent and that traces of perjury, forgery and false entries had been discovered. The bank case was adjourned and the directors believe they can furnish proof of the bank's solvency.

President I. E. Wells, of the bank, declared Saturday that the bank's failure was due to loans upon insufficient security and a failure to carry out the orders of the directors. He said that in his opinion every depositor will get dollar for dollar, and that none of the business men of the village have shown any alarm over the matter.

The township, village and school district's funds in the bank and many depositors, both large and small, had all of their world's goods in savings accounts.

Cashier Lewis has made a complete statement to the prosecuting attorney of the conditions that exist. It is simply a case of too much responsibility being placed on young shoulders. Lewis lacked the ability to say "no" when asked for accommodation by customers of the bank and before he knew it he had made loans that would be classed as illegal on account of their amount.

When Lewis discovered that he had gone too far and placed the bank in a position where it would fail to pass muster at the hands of the state banking commissioner, he concealed those notes and others of a similar nature and issued forged notes, also making a statement that the bank had $12,000 in reserve funds, when the amount was in reality only $3,000.

The remarkable feature of the financing of young Lewis is the fact that loans aggregating $35,000 were made, mostly by the cashier without knowledge of the bank officials. One loan of about $15,000 Attorney Wm. E. Ware, representing the bank, claims is secured by individual indorsement and another for $10,000 will be paid before Thursday, by which time he expects to prove the bank's solvency.

The apparent shortage of the bank is $17,000, but the cashier claims no real shortage as the assets he has concealed because of excessive loans will balance that. The note upon which he is claimed to have committed the forgery is for $1,400, made supposedly by John A. Stanton, of Athens.

Her Pitiful Story
Tenderly fondling the soft little garments her baby had worn the last time she saw it alive, her love turned to revulsion for the man she accused of being its father, and moving with her pitiful but bravely told story, Myrtle Lennon, uncovered before the law her wretched past in all its nakedness and in graphic detail related the incidents of the night of August 5, when her month-old infant struggled out its tiny life in the waters of Saginaw river.

Over the objections of the attorneys, she branded the mark of Cain upon another, declaring near the close of her recital, which told of committing the child to the care of Duffy, "I believe that he went to the river and drowned my baby."

Not once did she falter, not once was she tripped, not once did she contradict herself. In the trying ordeal on the stand, she clung to her story that on the night of the tragedy she committed her infant to Duffy on his assurance that he had secured a home for it.

"And we agreed when we parted that night," she testified, in a voice shaking with emotion, "that we would go to the house together the next Sunday and see our baby."

The witness cried softly as she told of her love for the boy and her hope he would grow to manhood.

Wants Stronger Insurance Laws.
Through the insurance department Michigan collected during 1907 more than $484,000 and the total expenses of the department were $19,402.86. Insurance Commissioner Barry gives these figures in his annual report. Commissioner Barry emphasizes the need for better laws governing the incorporation and operation of co-operative sick and accident insurance companies. While in theory these are mutual or co-operative societies, says the commissioner, they are in practice proprietary concerns, pure and simple. It is suggested that the laws be amended so as to require a greater membership and increased assets before they may commence business, and a materially increased deposit with the state treasurer for the protection of their policy holders. The commissioner says he observes with great satisfaction the growing tendency on the part of the fraternal beneficiary societies to place themselves on a more substantial basis, and that the campaign for adequate rates, or more properly adequate reserves, promises to result in an early demand by the better class of these societies for legislation that will insure their perpetuity.

Lapeer Probate Judge Accused.
Charges of collecting illegal fees made against Probate Judge Brown of Lapeer were said to be substantiated by the report of Julius Dresser, the Detroit expert accountant, who completed his investigation of the judge's books. According to Prosecuting Attorney Reed the report shows that Judge Brown collected nearly $700 illegal fees during his incumbency. It is alleged the judge collected fees on hearing of claims where he had rendered no service whatever and that his third year he collected $5 to $10 for the same service for which he charged $1.05 to $2 during his first year. Prosecutor Reed says that Judge Brown must have known he was not entitled to the fees as during the investigation of the other county office books, the judge did not collect these fees.

Barred Out of Primary.
Under a decision of the attorney general's department the "independent" voter was barred from voting at the primaries unless there was an independent party represented on the ticket with candidates for office regularly chosen. It was further announced that voting machines could not be used and that precinct boards of election would not hand out passers containing the names of candidates for delegates to the county convention. Attention was also called to the fact that the primary law refers to "qualified electors" and unless a voter was properly registered he could not enroll for the primary except he had been naturalized or become an elector since the last registration.

Car Famine is Predicted.
According to statements made at railroad headquarters there will not be an idle freight car in Michigan within 60 days. In fact, it was predicted that there will be a car famine by the middle of October. Over 500 of one road's 2,500 idle cars in the Saginaw district have been absorbed in the handling of early crops, and the prospect of bumper harvests of all kinds, but particularly of fruit, it is said, will swamp the Michigan railroads with business. A railway company turned out repaired cars at the rate of 50 a day in order to meet the prospective rush, and all other roads in the state collected every car they could lay their hands on.

Where Governors Grow.
Eaton Rapids claims to have furnished more gubernatorial timber than any place of its size in the country. Gov. Cummins of Iowa, formerly lived and married there. John Stevenson was born and raised there and is now a candidate for the governor's chair in the state of Washington. L. T. Hemans, the Democratic candidate for governor of Michigan, lived there and graduated from the public schools, and the Republican candidate, James R. Bradley lives there now.

Presents Election Puzzle.
What are the primary boards of election going to do with the elector who enrolled as an independent voter? This is the question that was put up to City Attorney Homer J. McBride and was passed on by that official to the attorney general, with a request that he send back an early solution of the primary puzzle. The primary election law requires electors to be enrolled under the head of the party with which they are affiliated, and in case they have no such affiliation it permits them to be registered as independents.

Earle Talks Off 14 Pounds.
"I have lost 14 pounds in the last 21 days, but I'm still in fighting trim and am just getting warmed up to my campaign," declared Horatio E. Earle, good roads man by calling and candidate. "While I have lost 14 pounds I have delivered 385 speeches, or in other words, for every pound of flesh that I have scattered over this state, I have given 27 1/2 speeches. My lungs are still in good condition."

Sixty Survive of 2,200.
Sixty survivors of Michigan's famous "Fighting Fifth" regiment, which in war days numbered 2,200 and fought in every battle of the Army of the Potomac, and were present at Appomattox when Lee surrendered, are all who gathered for the thirty-ninth reunion at Saginaw. Veterans from Detroit and other Michigan cities, including Maj. Elderkin of Detroit, veteran of three wars, and Ann E. Hooks, "daughter of the regiment," who accompanied it through the war as a nurse, were in attendance.

WIRELETS.

The geographical commission appointed by the Mexican government seven years ago to map all the towns of the country has reported that they have discovered 7,679 towns not officially known to exist before. Many are of considerable size, population ranging from 5,000 to 15,000.

Samuel Brackett, of Trenton, N. J., said to be the oldest office boy in the world, is 89 years old. He is employed in the office of the Anvil works of Mrs. Clark Fisher, and is known as an "heirloom" of the family, having been in its employ for the last 69 years. He occupies the same position he did when he first went to work. He has not been office boy all the time, however, merely returning to that position when age unfitted him for work in the shop.

A case of tetanus in advanced stages, has just been cured in St. John's hospital, Brooklyn, through the use of sodium chloride. The patient was Allen Kollock, 15, of Woodhaven, L. I., and he became infected three weeks ago. He was first treated for rheumatism but one day his jaw set tightly. The injured toe was amputated and a 25 per cent solution of sodium chloride was injected directly into his spinal cord and in a few days he began to get better.

The condition of the natives of an Aleutian Indian village in Akutan harbor, Bering sea, is most deplorable, according to the report of Dr. Robert Olsen, assistant surgeon on the revenue cutter McCulloch. The people have little to eat and to wear, and no idea of cleanliness. The dwelling places are half under the ground, covered with straw and soil, with little or no ventilation. They smell worse than dog kennels. The place is lined with decaying remains of birds and fish.

Fighting Cannon.
In all Methodist churches in Nebraska tomorrow a letter will be read from the pulpit denouncing Speaker Cannon for his attitude toward temperance legislation, and for snubbing a committee from the general conference that called on him at Washington in the interest of such legislation.

The letter recites that all of the Republican congressmen from Nebraska favor the legislation desired, and urges that all Methodists insist upon pledges from them that they will not vote to re-elect Cannon.

THE CHOICE OF THE PEOPLE

VOTE FOR STANDARD BEARER SHIFTING AS RETURNS COME IN.

WARNER OR BRADLEY?

Returns of the Vote at Tuesday's Primaries Seem to Look Like Warner for Governor; But—

Returns Thursday afternoon on the state primary put Gov. Warner in the lead over Dr. Bradley. While the final count goes there will probably be a recount on the state vote. Sanilac county going to Warner by 1,000 and Emmet by more than 500 put the governor in the lead. At 2 o'clock Warner had 86,927; Bradley, 85,853. Warner's plurality, 1,074. There is no question but that when the official count is in the difference between Warner and Bradley will be less than 500.

Returns which came to Lansing on Thursday indicated that Dr. Bradley in no event will have a majority of more than 100 or 200 over Gov. Warner and there was a possibility that the precincts unheard from would give Gov. Warner the lead.

The heavy vote for Dr. Bradley in Kent and Saginaw and Detroit and the big pluralities given Gov. Warner in Sanilac and Huron counties are unprecedented and there is much discussion about the capital in regard to the returns, especially when there have been charges of the use of money by both sides in Detroit and Grand Rapids as well as Muskegon.

While the returns seemed favorable to the governor Thursday afternoon they did not prove conclusively that he was nominated. Mistakes discovered Thursday in the first returns printed by counties show that between 400 and 500 more votes were credited to Bradley for several counties than he actually received. Warner was credited with about 100 more than he actually received.

Mistakes of the other way deprived each of about 100 more than they actually received. These mistakes, however, were presumably clerical errors.

The G. A. R.

In his annual report to the annual meeting in Toledo Charles G. Burton, commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., said in part:

"On December 31, 1906, the members in good standing numbered 225,932. On December 31, 1907, the number was 225,157, a net loss in membership during the year 1907 of 475. During 1907 our loss by death was 10,342, partly offset by 5,467 members added to our roll by muster-in and reinstatement. The 'suspended list' is very large and I suggest that we do ever it is apparent a comrade cannot pay his dues, his post must rest."

Quartermaster-General Charles Burton reported that $16,000 in U. S. bonds owned by the G. A. R. had been taken over by the committee of three trustees having charge of a permanent fund. In addition a $1,000 gift from Mrs. Helen R. Blackburn, widow of a deceased commander-in-chief, was added to this fund.

Great Destroyers.

Bids for the construction of 19 torpedo boat destroyers, at least four equipped with apparatus for burning oil as well as coal, and which are to be the largest ever built for the American navy, were Tuesday opened. These vessels are to cost $300,000 each and for every knot lost on any of their trial trips under the contract speed the builders will have to forfeit $5,000 of the contract price of the plans.

Plans and specifications are being kept by the navy department, and were submitted in confidence to the bidders.

It is known, however, that vessels must have a trial displacement of at least 742 tons, and must attain a maximum speed of 29 knots an hour, a speed that will make them among the fastest war craft ever constructed in this or any other country.

To Raise Ducks.

Three hundred square miles of favorite hunting grounds for water fowl will be converted by the military into a protected area for the numerous breeds gradually undergoing extermination for commercial purposes. Two tracts presented by the government for this purpose are in Oregon and California, about the Klamath, Malheur and Jarvis lakes. Whole areas of the wild fowl, persecuted by seekers after plumes and food for the markets, will be restored on the premises.

The sheath stockings has aroused the admiration of New York men now. It starts out like an ordinary stocking—so far as the ankle—when there begins to grow a widening breach, concealed by a filmy lace. At the knee there is a three-inch gap, surrounded by a bow of ribbon. Combined with the sheath skirt it is expected to add to the general effect.

AS INDICATED by the item in our local columns last week, it has developed from later returns that Fred M. Warner has carried the state for the nomination of governor by about 1,700. Inasmuch as the Standard was the only paper in the county supporting Governor Warner, the result is very gratifying to us. In wishing to be fair, all of the Governor's friends leaned back a little too far, and we with the rest ran Auditor J. B. Bradley's name as the nominee. Auditor Bradley is exhibiting the same spirit manifested by Governor Warner, but some of the organs of would-be United States senators and a few railroad attorneys are trying to create dissension in the party and elect, if possible, a democratic governor. Warner has been after them so hard for the past ten years in the legislature and as governor, that they would rather wreck the party than stand it for two more years.

Wheat-Smut Treatment.
Formalin is a 40 per cent solution of formaldehyde. It often falls below this standard on the market, and therefore the purchaser should insist on a guarantee to the strength named.
Preparation of material. Mix formalin with water in the proportion of one pound or pint of the former to fifty gallons of the latter, stirring well. This solution may be made in a tub, barrel, trough or tank, depending on the amount to be used and the manner of using. The grain may be treated as follows:
1—Put the grain to be treated in bags about 1 or 1½ bushels to each. Gunny sacks are much preferred, allowing the solution to pass into the grain and also draining more quickly than cotton bags.
2—In this case the solution is prepared in a tub, barrel, trough or tank, according to convenience or necessity. Immerse each bag of grain completely for 10 minutes, working thoroughly with the hands or otherwise, till all the grain is wet.
3—After ten minutes remove the bag and suspend it over the dipping vat, or place in on draining boards which will return the excess solution for further use.
4—After dripping ceases; empty the grain on a clean floor, previously treated. Spread and stir frequently till dry.
5—If the grain is to be sown at once it need be dried only sufficiently to allow it to work well through the drill. If seeding is delayed for several days after treatment, by rain or other causes the grain should be dried well, as remaining in the sacks or pile may injure it.
CAUTION—Thoroughly saturate the floor on which the treating is to be done, with the solution, also all tools used, the bags receiving the treated grain, unless new, and the grain drill as well. Also remember that in this treatment the kernels will swell and therefore due allowance must be made in setting the drill to insure application of sufficient seed.
Heat And Crime.
There is some basis of philosophy and in fact for the popular belief that crimes of violence are more prevalent in hot weather. Experience goes to confirm the notion. The most fantastic and abnormal outbreak of criminal violence ever known in Boston came with the recent prolonged and excessive period of heat. It can be readily understood that conditions of temperature which disturb even well-balanced nervous systems will tend utterly to overturn uncontrolled natures. The strain of physical discomfort which makes one man simply cross in his family may impel a man of another sort to go out and kill or rob or shoot up the town. Boston Post.

SERIAL STORY

The Real Agatha

By Edith Huntington Mason

Pictures by Neil Walters Frey Campbell Aladdin Wilson

Copyright, 1917, by A. C. McElroy & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

Lord Wilfred Vincent and Archibald Terhune are introduced at the opening of the story. The pair on an outing miss their train and seeking recreation meet the Honorable Agatha Wyckhoff, whose hand is much sought after, because of her wealth. Five other Agatha Wyckhoffs are introduced. The deceased stepfather, in an eccentric moment, made his will so that the real Agatha, heiress to his fortune and the castle at Wyke, England, might wed her affinity. Thus Mrs. Armstrong, chaperon, was in duty bound to keep the real Agatha's identity unknown. An attempt by Terhune to gather a clue from the chaperon fails. Terhune finds old books containing picture of a former Baroness Wyckhoff, which is exactly like Agatha Sixth, whom he is courting. Agatha Fifth confesses her love for Vincent and also that she is the real heiress. He spurns her proposal. Many clues to identity of the real Agatha prove fruitless.

Left to myself, I was thinking out my plan of campaign as regarded Agatha Third when a slight noise in the back of the room attracted my attention. I looked up, startled, for it was late, and the large, dimly lighted drawing room was rather an eerie place, and saw over the back of my chair the slight form of the secretary approaching. Her hair was as neat as usual and her dress was the same simple gray gown she wore when I had seen her first.

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Terhune," she said, "I am sorry to disturb you, but would you have the goodness to give me a little of your time?"

"Certainly," I replied, rising, "though the hour is late. Won't you be seated?" and I found her a chair. The secretary leaned back against it and folded her hands.

"I shall be quick," she said; "but I want to ask you something. She spoke in a low voice, but with perfect composure, though she never lifted her eyes. I caught myself wondering whether she cast them down habitually, so that people might observe the length of her black eyelashes.

"Yes," I said, to encourage her.

"Of course, you know Lord Vincent very well, don't you?" As she asked me this direct question she looked me full in the face, and as my eyes met hers I mentally thanked her for her mercy in not often permitting man to gaze into them.

"Yes," I said, recovering myself, "I know him very well."

"And he tells you things, doesn't he?"

"Most things," I replied, wondering at what she was driving.

"Then could you tell me, please, if—if he accepted Miss Agatha—the one with the hazel eyes that you call Agatha Fifth—when she told him she loved him?"

I was never more astounded in my life. How did she know that Agatha Fifth had told Vincent she loved him, and how did it concern her? Perhaps, however, she was acting under Mrs. Armstrong's orders, but if so she ought to have said so.

"That's a question of a very personal nature," I said, and eyed her searchingly, "but I don't think Lord Vincent would mind, as long as you know so much about it, if I tell you that he refused the young lady who was indiscreet enough to ask him to marry her."

The secretary gave a sudden start, and then, by what seemed to be considerable effort, regained control of herself.

"He refused her," I continued—for the girl and her questions and her genuine feeling interested me—"although she told him she was the real Honorable Agatha." I was so proud of Vincent for that that I was glad to be able to tell someone about it.

"She said that—and he refused her?" repeated the girl in an awed tone. "How could he do it, how could he?"

"Then it was true?" She is really the daughter of Fletcher Boyd?" I cried eagerly. At last I had stumbled upon the truth, for I knew the secretary was in the secret.

But she only smiled at me. "You are a good man," she said, "a good man."

The room was growing chilly and the fire was getting low, and as she spoke she slipped down from the high chair and seated herself on a little stool at my feet, stretching out her slim hands toward the blaze. "I thank you," she said, smiling, and gazed into the fire a moment, while I gazed at her slender young figure, her pink and white skin, straight, little nose, and wide, red mouth with its Du Maurier chin—and all in a moment I felt myself pitying the poor little girl. Vincent was such an attractive young scamp, he might be playing fast and loose with her affections without intending it or realizing that he was doing so. Involuntarily I leaned toward her.

"My dear young lady," I said, and as I spoke I caught myself thinking her really good looking. "If she only did her hair decently," I thought, "I'd call her a beauty, I really believe I should." "My dear young lady," I said, "tell me in confidence and perhaps I can help you. Do you—er—are you—er—interested in Lord Wilfred? If so, allow me, I conjure you, nay, I beg of you, to put all thought of him out of your head. He doesn't mean it, but he is a graceless young flirt. He doesn't mean a word he says. Let me warn you—be advised—"

I stopped short. In the midst of my well-meant flow of words, I stopped short, for, could I believe my eyes, the secretary was laughing at me.

"My dear old man," she said—she did, actually—"my dear old man, your warnings are superfluous, for I am a married woman," and still laughing, she left the room.

CHAPTER V.

Alone, I sat for a moment speechless with astonishment, as the secretary left the room, and, as I took my way slowly and thoughtfully upstairs, I resolved that this was another thing that I would not tell Vincent; he would be far more likely to ridicule me than to thank me for my effort in his behalf.

Some time after this, on a perfect day, Agatha Third and I—I had spent almost every hour since the dinner in her company, I may remark—had planned a little excursion which would keep us outdoors all day. We were going on a picnic up the little river. Have you ever tried a picnic for two? Given the right companion and a day like that, I'd warrant it to cure any attack of the blues. Agatha Third had assured me that the prettiest spot for our luncheon was a little island in the center of the stream where the current ran broad and deep, about three miles below the castle.

The day was fair, the girl was fairer, and the moments were full of joy to me. We had crossed a little bridge about a mile from the castle and were proceeding up the left bank of the river when a sudden turn of the stream brought two others of our house party into view. On the opposite bank was Vincent in high boots, knickerbockers, white shirt with sleeves rolled up, and a farmer's broad-brimmed hat of straw. He was busy over a broken fishing rod which he was trying to mend. In the center of the stream, where the current ran swift and dangerously deep, a girl stood on a large boulder, fishing. Other boulders at intervals between the one she was standing on and the shore where Vincent was indicated the means by which she had attained her precarious position. I recognized the girl as Agatha Second, and smiled pityingly as I thought of poor Vincent, invariably wasting his time with the wrong Agatha.

"Tell Me in Confidence and Perhaps I Can Help You."

"Hullo!" they cried, cheerfully, and we waved our hands and asked them what luck they'd had. This isn't always a safe question to ask a fisherman, but I notice that people who are not fishing themselves invariably find great satisfaction in asking it. Vincent said he hadn't caught any fish, and asked if I'd landed mine yet. Just like his impudence! He'd say anything if he thought it was funny, no matter how it might annoy other people.

Just as I was thinking of some retort polite enough to utter aloud, Agatha Second's rod began to bend and jerk, and immediately there was so much action going on that in my excitement I forgot what I was about to say. I am a fisherman of some skill myself. Well, the pole began to bend and the Agatha on the rock began to scream, and Vincent shouted directions from the bank—"Easy there, easy," he entreated her; "give him more line, Aggie, more line."

"I can't!" she screamed at the top of her voice; "something's caught, and he pulls so."

"The reel!" I shouted, jumping up and down. "The reel! Press the knob and let her go!"

I knew in a moment the sort she had. It was just like mine, a patent one with a spring reel—mine often stuck that way. All this time, the fish was leaping about, sometimes jumping out of the water so that we could see him, and he was a big fellow.

"Let me alone; I can do it myself," cried the girl, as Vincent started to help her, but even as she spoke her trim little foot slipped on the wet stones, and, losing her balance completely, she fell backward into the deep water, while the rod disappeared upstream.

In a moment Vincent was running at top speed along the bank till he came to a little point of land near which the drowning girl must pass. As she approached he leaped into the water, and, striking diagonally upstream, seized her by her clothing, and, fighting his way back, safely gained the point of land. Meantime I had run up the river toward a boat that I had observed near the bank. Jumping in I soon reached the spot where lay the unconscious form of Agatha Second. All this time I was dimly aware of the fact that Agatha Third had never stopped screaming and was now running up and down on the opposite bank sobbing and wringing her hands. When I reached Wilfred he was anxiously bending over the girl, but apparently without the slightest idea what to do.

I immediately fell to chafing her hands and resorting to the other well-known expedients for reviving the drowned, and to enable her to breathe more freely I removed the tight-fitting dickey of her sailor suit. It was not long before she began to regain consciousness, and it was at this moment that I made a most amazing discovery, for around the neck of the girl I saw a little silver chain, and on it was strung a heavy gold ring set with a large cross of old-fashioned emeralds.

I called to Vincent, and as I pointed at the magnificent and telltale piece of jewelry we both gazed at it, speechless with surprise at discovering in such a manner the secret of the Honorable Agatha's identity. Before she had quite regained her consciousness I readjusted her dickey, and when she was able to stand we wrapped her in our coats and carried her to the boat. There wasn't room in it for more than two, so I made Vincent get in with her and row back to the castle. So they left us, and Agatha Third and I, too thoroughly upset by the accident to wish to carry through our picnic, followed them back, walking one on each side of the stream until we reached the bridge, where we joined forces.

As we returned I did a great deal of thinking. So it was Agatha Second, after all, who was the real Honorable Agatha. For certainly her possession of the Wyckhoff ring, mentioned in the will, was proof positive. Now that I thought of it, the suspicious circumstance of Agatha Third's seemingly involuntary rising when Vincent toasted the Honorable Agatha, admitted of many explanations. At any rate, whatever her reason for her action, the presence of the Wyckhoff ring on the neck of Agatha Second had proved to me the falsity of that other clever and the identity of our fair but mysterious hostess.

Irregular Action That Presages Attack of Scarlet Fever.

The scarlet fever heart is a peculiarity lately noticed for the first time, by a German medical man. With the stethoscope it is recognized by a reduplication of the first heart sound, followed by a rough rasping or scraping, and this appears at the onset of many cases of scarlet fever, often when no other symptoms are to be detected. In some epidemics these sounds may be heard in the majority of cases, while at other times they may be quite regularly absent. Their presence is of great value in diagnosis and may be the only warning signal to guard against the spread of infection. A boy who was pale, languid and anemic had no other symptoms except the irregular heart sounds. From these his case was decided to be scarlet fever and subsequent peeling of the skin proved the correctness of the diagnosis. Certain children in the chickenpox ward of a hospital were restless and obviously ill. The heart sounds indicated scarlet fever, and in these cases, too, desquamation followed, although there had been no eruption or other sign. Directly afterward this ward had an outbreak of scarlet fever in its usual form.

HISTORIAN AN IRRITABLE MAN.

Freeman's Temper Flared Up Over Intellectual Differences.

Freeman, the historian, it was said, was apt to grow irritable over matters of intellectual difference. One day he was at the Macmillans, when the conversation turned upon the subject of Ireland. Mr. Macmillan said that, for his part, he was in favor of granting autonomy.

Whereupon Freeman began to growl at the use of a Greek word.

"Why can't you speak English?" demanded he, "and say home rule, instead of speaking Greek, which you don't know?"

One of the guests flushed with anger and ventured to reprove Freeman, calling his attention to the respect due their host, and at the same time paying tribute to Mr. Macmillan's remarkable abilities. But although Freeman did not apologize in so many words, he smoothed the matter over by a humorous repetition of his criticism. Later, some one mentioned going. "There you go again!" exclaimed Freeman. "Why can't we call it toe-woe?"

Comfort Before Art.

Architecture is a lost art. To-day we need only hygienic, comfortable buildings. Our modern cities are ugly, but we do not notice it. They suit the modern state of mind and the modern conditions of life.—Munich Kunst.

TWO SMART COATS

A coat that can be easily slipped on to cover the dress is most necessary. The two we show here are just the things to fill this need. They are both suitable to be reproduced in alpaca, fine serge cloth, or Shantung.

The first is close fitting; it is double-breasted, being fastened with large buttons and drawn in at the waist by a band that is passed under the strap each side front and fastened at waist. The sleeves are full, so that they will not crush the bodice beneath; these and the bodice part as far as bust are lined. The back is short-waisted.

The second is a perfectly loose slip-on coat; the sides, although appearing to be laced together, are really sewn on under the lacing. Wide silk braid with tasseled ends is used for the lacing, a still wider braid trims the neck, the ends are passed through openings cut in the cloth, and are finished with tassels.

For the first costume is designed a hat of fine straw, trimmed with feathers, and for the second a crinoline that is trimmed with flowers.

Materials required for each coat: Six yards 42 inches wide, four yards silk lining for the first, eight large buttons, two dozen small ones. For the second, four buttons, six yards narrow braid, one yard wide braid, 16 tassels.

TIES FOR WIDE COLLARS.

Not Necessary That They Should Be in Expensive Silk.

Every one knows that with the new broad collar, indiscriminately called Byron, Eton or Peter Pan, the most artistic flowing ties are worn, but it is a new idea to make them of material other than silk. Fine sheer handkerchief linen is the most useful and the prettiest of materials for summer accessories, and when made up into ties it is attractive.

The new ties by Byron collars are simply bows made of a straight piece of linen about five inches wide and 28 inches long. It sounds gigantic, it is true, but the flowing tie of the Quarter Latin must have long loops and long ends.

When making such a tie it is best to cut the linen an inch longer and an inch broader than the finished tie will be, or it must be buttonholed with mercerized cotton all round—at both sides and each end. Sometimes the embroidery is done in a color to match the suit or dress with which it is to be worn, but white is always best for these little things that need frequent washing.

When it is finished it may be tied into a bow and pinned to the front of the collar, but no gold or jeweled pins must be in evidence.

The best way to manage is to slip the linen through the collar band in front and then tie the bow. This hides the collar button and the tie cannot slip. As the band on these wide affairs is narrow, the tie which extends round the neck is likely to get out of place.

Some of these summer ties are cut with ends on the bias.

All lace insertion and edging should be tabooed for wear with this new wrinkle of fashion. Byron, though he may have been odd, certainly never wore lace neckties.

COSTUME IN PASTEL BLUE.

Highly ornamental combs for the hair have been introduced threaded through with ribbon at the top, in some cases tucked into rosettes, in others left hanging, with a view to being woven through the hair in the manner approved by individual wearers. As well as ribbons, little clusters of curls are fixed to the comb, and it is a pretty idea to attach knots of flowers with trailing foliage and tiny buds that can be lightly fastened to the coiffure by the comb.

French Chalk Uses.

If a girl is away from a cleaner's and she finds one of her best frocks spotted with grease, she can try the simple remedy of French chalk and hot iron. The chalk is spread thickly over the spot until all the grease is absorbed. Then a piece of blotting paper is put over it and a warm, not hot, iron is held over it to draw the grease into the paper. Rub off the chalk with a soft silk or muslin rag and the spot will probably have disappeared.

He Struck Him on the Head.

I had been shanghaied. I was ordered to work, but refused to do so, and was not allowed to have anything to eat until I changed my mind.

"After a voyage of 227 days we reached port at East London, South Africa. The voyage should have been completed in 90 days, but our vessel was a sailing craft, and the rough seas and adverse winds prolonged it greatly. The captain wanted me to return with the vessel to St. John, N. B., where I was to receive the small pay which, in my semi-conscious state, I had agreed to accept for my services, but I deserted.

"After working at my trade a short time I enlisted in the English army for a term of one year, and was assigned to the intelligence department. At the end of the period I re-enlisted for a term of three years in the Forty-fifth regiment of the Royal Field Artillery and served two years in South Africa during the Boer war and one year in India, patrolling the border.

"After my term of enlistment had expired I went back to Africa, where I joined a railway surveying party and went the full length of the proposed railway from Cape Town to Cairo, Egypt. Then on returning I shipped to Australia and later traveled over a considerable part of China and Japan.

"Shortly after returning to Australia I signed as freeman on the White Star steamship Persic, and went to England, and the next 18 months I spent traveling over Europe. On April 18, 1907, I left Hamburg, Germany, for Old Mexico, and worked my way across the ocean on a sailing vessel and in due time landed at Santa Rosalia, on the Gulf of California.

"I went to the western coast and engaged in mining, working for the Columbia Mining company. Finally, on May 6 of the present year I landed in the United States after an absence of nine years lacking 13 days.

MAN FORCED ON TOUR OF GLOBE

VICTIM OF THE "SHANGHAI" RETURNS TO AMERICA AFTER NINE YEARS.

INVITED TO EAT BY STRANGER

Latter Dopes Coffee and Charles Walker Wakes Up on Lumber—Tells of Remarkable Experiences Abroad.

Cheney, Wash.—After an absence of nine years, during which he has traveled all over the world, Charles Walker has returned to Cheney and will resume his former trade, that of a painter. His adventures on land and sea suggest those one reads of in story books. He left here for Spokane May 21, 1899, and was not heard of for a long time.

In the Falls City Walker was robbed and loaded on a freight car. Reaching Tacoma, he was shanghaied aboard a deep sea sailing ship which started him on his globe-trotting career. He outlines his experience in the following words:

"I met a man in a dark street near the depot at Spokane, who talked to me for a while, then it seems he struck me on the side of the head with something he drew from his coat pocket. I must have lost consciousness for some time, for when I awoke I was in a box car in the railroad yards at Tacoma. On leaving the car, I was accosted by a stranger, who, like myself, seemed to be looking for work.

"He finally invited me to eat with him, and being hungry and without money, I accepted the invitation. We went into a restaurant, and while eating I noticed that the coffee had a peculiar taste and remarked about it to my companion, who assured me that it was all right. I do not remember anything from that time until I awoke on board the Nova Scotia bark Stillwater, loaded with lumber and three days out at sea.

"I was informed that I had signed for the voyage to South Africa, and on entering an emphatic denial I was shown my own signature to the ship's articles. It then occurred to me that

"My brother had eczema three different summers. Each summer it came out between his shoulders and down his back, and he said his suffering was terrible. When it came on the third summer, he bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and gave it a faithful trial. Soon he began to feel better and he cured himself entirely of eczema with Cuticura. A lady in Indiana heard of how my daughter, Mrs. Miller, had cured her little son of terrible eczema by the Cuticura Remedies. This lady's little one had the eczema so badly that they thought they would lose it. She used Cuticura Remedies and they cured her child entirely, and the disease never came back. Mrs. Sarah E. Lusk, Coldwater, Mich., Aug. 15 and Sept. 2, 1907."

Rev. G. M. Gray, Baptist Clergyman of Whitesboro, Tex., says: "Four years ago I suffered terribly with lumbago. Every movement was one of pain. Although I do not like to have my name used publicly, I make an exception in this case, so that other sufferers from kidney trouble may profit by my experience." Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. AND SHE LEFT HIM GUESSING.

Woman's Directions of Little Help to Traveling Lawyer.

A New York lawyer was called recently to a hamlet in Berks county, Pennsylvania, in the interest of a large coal corporation, and now he is telling this story on himself:

He was driving along a country road and feared he might have lost his bearings. The village he wanted to reach seemed elusive, so he halted in front of a farmhouse to make inquiries.

"Madam," he called out to a broad German woman, who stood looking at him from beneath a "poke" bonnet, "can you tell me how far it is to the next village?"

"Oh, just a leedle ways," came the response.

"But, my good woman, how far is it? Is it two, four, six or eight miles? That's what I want to know."

"Yah, I thinks so."

And the Wall street lawyer drove on a wiser man.

Boy Grades the Clergy.
Bishop Potter, at an ecclesiastical dinner in New York, read a Cooperstown schoolboy's essay on "Clergymen." The essay, which created much amusement, was as follows:
"There are two kinds of clergymen. Bishops rectors and curats. the bishop tells the rectors to work and the curats have to do it. A curat is a thin married man but when he is a rector he gets fuller and can preach longer sermons and becums a good man."
