BATHING IN JAPANESE INNS

Lack of Privacy Comes as Something of a Shock to the Western Guest.

The bath in Japanese inns was often something of a difficulty. Once we were invited to bathe in the kitchen, where the steaming bathtub stood amidst a little group of men, who had gathered in the room in the evening to gossip and smoke! Very often the bath shed had no door, and when it had it was not infrequently a glass one. Much as the countryfolk in Japan stare at foreigners, they do not, however, take advantage of these defenseless bathrooms, so that the anticipation was worse than the event. Very often, at the busier inns, two people have to bathe together. I have often been invited to share the bathroom with a Japanese lady guest. To avoid this awkward necessity, Z- and I usually went to the bathrom together, and it was on these occasions that our little dog proved himself so useful. It is impossible to take anything but a cotton ukata to a Japanese bathroom, as there is scarcely ever a dressing room attached to the bathrooms of wet everywhere, and contains neither peg nor shelf-in fact, all Japanese guests divest themselves of their garments outside the doors' So we generally tied our money-bag round the dog's neck. He was a most ferocious little watch dog, and never allowed anyone to enter our room in our absence without a noisy protest. Had we left him loose, he would not have permitted anyone to enter without getting bitten.-Vera Collum in Wide World Magazine.

ONE LAVA STREAM HAS STOPPED ALTOGETHER AND THE OTHER MOVES VERY SLOWLY.

HUNDREDS OF PEASANTS WHO LOST HOMES LIKELY TO EMI-GRATE TO AMERICA.

Thousands See Homes Buried by Streams From Etna, As Activity of Volcano Rapidly Decreases.

The stream of lava from Etna made another diversion Saturday morning and again threatened Borello, which was hastily abandoned by the inhabitants, who were in a state of extreme panic and believed the end of the world was at hand.

Their religious frenzy verged on madness. This condition, however, gradually underwent a change and they took fresh hope when it was found that the flow of lava was lessening in speed. The stream stopped entirely Saturday afternoon. The people greeted the spectacle with shouts of joy and indulged in loud thanksgivings. The stream in the direction of Nico-losi is still moving, but its force is now almost imperceptible. For this reason it is hoped that the eruption has reached the last phase.

The activity of Mt. Etna is rently decreasing. The mayor of Nicolosi has telegraphed to the prefect a request that the evacuation of the villages on the slope be suspended.

Unless a new eruption occurs, there is little further danger to be feared. Nevertheless detachments of soldiers and firemen are held in readiness. They have already constructed a strong wall around the threatened side of Nicolosi.

Hundreds of peasants have lost their homes and worldly belongings, and it is said that many of them will emigrate to America.

One Speech Averts Strike.

An impassioned address by President-elect Walker, of the Illinois miners, in which he referred to the natural suffering that always accompanies a strike, changed the plans of the United Mine Workers of America, and they cast a vote almost unanimous to leave the settlement of their affairs to the committee headed by President Thomas L. Lewis.

I know what a strike means," said Mr. Walker, "I've looked into the faces of starving women; I've seen their babes dying for the want of food; I've seen those brave miners stand out against the operators at the cost of their families and their firesides. That's why I want you to vote with your consciences clear, so that you can look at those women and those little children of yours at home and say to them: 'I'm sorry for you, God knows, but I did it all for the best.

This speech of Walker's made half the miners weep, and was the real turning point in their deliberations. They were about to declare the greatest industrial war of modern times, much against the pleadings of President Lewis. For 20 minutes Walker talked to them, telling them the truth straight from the shoulder, and they took it and made way for a peaceable agreement.

The pool of $102,500, alleged to have been made up at Pittsburg by six banks to obtain the deposits of city. money, through the votes of councilmen, that are now on the district attorney's gridiron, is the basis of a romance and tragedy, the end of which is not yet in sight.

DAVID J. BREWER. Associate Justice U. S. Supreme Court.

Justice Brewer had not been feeling well for more than a week but he had not been obliged to take his bed. He had enjoyed Easter with members of his family and Monday afternoon walked out to the office of his physician. He complained at the dinner table of feeling slightly worse, but his condition was not considered serious.

At a little after 10 o'clock he told Mrs. Brewer that he was going to retire, and entered the bathroom. little later Mrs. Brewer heard a noise as if something had fallen in the bathroom, but she took no particular notice of it until her attention was attracted a few minutes later by sounds of heavy breathing. Rushing to the bathroom then, she found her husband lying on the floor unconscious. The justice had undressed before entering the bathroom.

House Committee Refuses to Honor Pole Discoverer.

Representative Macon Openly Hints He Has Doubts Whether Naval Officer Found "Top of the World."

Washington.-Dr. Frederick A Cook no doubt has gotten much solace out of the fact that the subcommittee of the house naval committee has refused to bestow a reward upon Commander Robert E. Peary. The house committee wants proof.

Peary has refused to submit it for the reason that it would interfere with his lectures and magazine articles. Evidently Peary thinks more of the money he can make by writing and lecturing than he does of a reward bestowed by congress, so there the matter rests. Representative Macon of Arkansas was the chief objector to conferring congressional honor upon Peary until the commander produces the proof of his claim that he found the north pole." "I confess that I am exceedingly skeptical about Mr. Peary's ever having discovered the pole," declared Mr. Macon before the committee, "and I am going to protest against any honor being conferred upon him by congress until he has established beyond a reasonable doubt that he did discover it, and it must be established in the open and not in the dark." He expressed himself as being "indignant at the thought of being called upon as a representative of the American people to confer a high honor upon any one of its citizens in the dark." All legislation by congress, he said, ought to be open and above board.

Mr. Macon said he wanted to direct attention to one "discrepancy" in Mr. Peary's story. This was the speed which the explorer declared he made from the time Capt. Bartlett left him until he reached the pole. Mr. Peary said that for five days he made 26.4 miles per day; but, Mr. Macon said, this appeared very singular in view of the fact that the Peary party had made but 9.06 miles per day up to the time Bartlett left.

"The astonishing part of Mr. Peary's statement," said Mr. Macon, "is the number of miles he traveled every day after Bartlett left him and when no white man was with him as witness, his only companion being his negro valet and four Eskimos. His greatest marches, singularly, were all north of the Bartlett camp. From that time forward, going to the pole and returning to Cape Columbia, he claims to have made an average of 26.4 miles per day until he reached the pole, 44 miles per day on his way back from the pole to Bartlett's camp and 28.6 miles per day from Bartlett's camp to

Cape Columbia. Mr. Macon declared that Mr. Peary's own statements showed that he equaled this speed but twice during the entire journey to the pole. The first day he started from land he made 26 miles in 14 hours of forced march. which Mr. Peary has told us was about the limit of human endurance." Mr. Macon quoted Lieut. Shackleton, Gen. Greely and others to show that "ten or twelve miles per day, or slight ly more, perhaps, is considered the imit of human endurance, traveling over polar seas." The only member of the committee who did not vote to defer action on the bill was Representative Englebright of California, who said he was convinced that Mr. Peary had discovered the pole and that the committee had sufficient proofs before it.

Representative Bates of Pennsylvania, heretofore considered a supporter of Peary, offered the resolution, which was adopted, declaring that the committee must have further proof before proceeding.

This awakening is being followed by efforts in various parts for the improvement of these poor people. The latest is a movement in Ahmedabad. In that city, on August 29, a meeting was held at which the attendance of the depressed classes was encouraged and in which they were allowed to sit beside caste people. Resolutions were passed for the formation of a Central Hindu association, which should have for its objects the raising of the depressed classes and their readmission into Hinduism after being converts to for eign faiths. As to the means to be adopted for realizing these objects, the following suggestions were made: (a) Starting schools, clubs and associations; (b) establishing preaching missions; (c) publishing papers, periodicals, magazines and leaflets; (d) adopting such other means as may be conducive of the above objects.

NO HEALTHY SKIN LEFT

My little son, a boy of five, broke out with an itching rasi. Three doo tors prescribed for him, but he kept getting worse until we could not dress him any more. They finally advised me to try a certain medical college, but its treatment did no good. At the time I was induced to try Cuticura he was so bad that I had to cut his hair off and put the Cuticura Oint ment on him on bandages, as it was impossible to touch him with the bare hand. There was not one square inch of skin on his whole body that was not affected. He was one mass of sores. The bandages used to stick to his skin and in removing them it used to take the skin off with them, and the screams from the poor child were heartbreaking. I began to think that he would never get well, but after the second application of Cuticura Ointment I began to see signs of improvement, and with the third and fourth applications the sores commenced todry up. His skin peeled off twenty times, but it finally yielded to the treatment. Now I can say that he is entirely cured, and a stronger and healthier boy you never saw than he is to-day, twelve years or more since the cure was effected. CHAPTER III.—Continued.

"You understand, of course, that this discussion is painful to me, exbeen published about my sister's domestic affairs-"

Exactly, Mr. Ardmore. What we is to print your side of the

"Well, the fact is-but please nevermention it-the fact is that his grace owes me four dollars. I gave it to him in two bills-I remember the incident perfectly-two crisp new bills I had just got at the bank: His grace borrowed the money to pay a cabman -it was the very day before he married my sister."

The reporter stared a moment, then laughed. He abandoned the idea of getting material for a sensational article and scented the possibilities of a character sketch of the whimsical young millionaire.

"If you don't mind saying where you are going, Mr. Ardmore?"

"I'd tell you in a minute, only 1 haven't fully decided yet; but I shall probably take the Sambo Flyer at 9:13, if you don't make me lose it."

Ardmore looked the reporter over carefully as they shook hands. He was an attractive young fellow, alert and good humored, and Ardmore liked him as in his shy way he really liked her, he wished Ardmore, who stood him, as, in his shy way, he really liked almost every one who seemed to be a human being.

"I'll tell you what I'll do with you. If you'll forget this rot we've been talking and come up to Ardsley as soon as I get home, I'll see if I can't keep you amused for a couple of weeks. What did you say your name is? Collins, Frank Collins? I never forget anything, so don't disappoint

The young man laughed outright. "I'll remember; I really believe you mean for me to come."

"Of course I do. It's all settled; make it next week. Good-by!"

Ardmore ate his dinner oblivious of the fact that people at the neighboring table turned to look at him. He finally waved away his plate and called for coffee, and at that moment a middle-aged man appeared at the door, scanned the room for a moment and then threaded his way among the tables to Ardmore.

"I heard you were here and thought I'd look you up. How are you, Ardy?" "Very well, thank you, Mr. Billings. Have you dined? Sorry; which way are you heading?"

The new-comer had the bearing of a gentleman used to consideration. He was, indeed, the secretary of the Bronx Loan and Trust Company, whose business was chiefly the administration of the Ardmore estate, and Ardmore knew him very well.

"I'm looking for a man, and I'm not good at the business. I've lost him and I don't understand it, I don't understand it," and the secretary seemed to be half-musing to himself as he sat down and rested his arms on the

The secretary, who had no great opinion of Ardmore's mental capacity, stared at the young man vacantly. Then it occurred to him that possibly Ardmore might be of service. "Have you been at Ardsley recent-

"That's what troubles me-what of the governor?" Billings dropped his voice so that no one but Ardmore could hear. "He's missing-disap-

"That's the first interesting thing I ever heard of a governor doing," said Ardmore. "Tell me more."

"He's had a row with the governor portant matter of business this afternoon, but he's cleared out and nobody knows what's become of him. His daughter, even, who was in New Orleans with him, doesn't know where

"Ah! the daughter! She remains behind to guard his retreat."

"The daughter is still here. She's a peppery little piece," and Billings looked guardedly around the room. "That's she, alone over there in the corner-the girl with the white feather in her hat who's just signing her check. There-she's getting up!"

Ardmore gazed across the room intently, then suddenly a slight smile played about his lips. To gain the door the girl must pass by his table, and he scrutinized her closely as she drew near and passed. She was a little girl, and her light fluffy hair sweet out from under a small blue hat in a shell-like curve, and the short skirt tremely painful. And yet, so much has of her tailor-made gown robbed her, it seemed, of years to which the calendar might entitle her.

"She gave me the steadiest eye I ever looked into when I asked her where her father had gone," remarked Billings grimly as the girl passed. "She said she thought he'd gone fishing for whales."

"So she's Miss Dangerfield, is she?" asked Ardmore indifferently; and he rose, leaving on the plate, by a sudden impulse of good feeling toward ous tip he had intended giving. Billings was glad to be rid of Ardmore and they parted in the hotel lobby without waste of words.

Ardmore's effects had been brought down and were already piled on a of the train. carriage at the door. In his pocket was his passage to New Orleans and a stateroom ticket. At the cashier's desk Miss Dangerfield paid her bill, just ahead of him.

"If any telegrams come for my father please forward them to Raleigh," said the girl. The manager came out personally to show her to her cardiscreetly by, a safe journey. "Off for New Orleans, are you, Mr.

Ardmore?" asked the manager courteously,

"No," said Ardmore, "I'm going to Raleigh to look at the tall buildings," whereat the manager returned to his duties, gravely shaking his head.

At the station Ardmore caught sight of Miss Dangerfield, attended by two porters, hurrying toward the Tar Heel express. He bought a ticket to Raleigh, and secured the last available berth from the conductor on the platform at the moment of departure.

Ardmore did not like to be hurried, and thus sudden change of plans had been almost too much for him, but he was consoled by the reflection that after all these years of waiting for himself equal to an emergency that required quick thought and swift ac-were, turning over his hand. glimpse of Miss Dangerfield as she threw off her jacket and hat; then she summoned the porter, give him her tickets, bade him a smiling good night and the door closed upon her.

Ardmore went back to smoke and plan his future movements. For the first time in his life he faced to-morrow with eager anticipations, resolved that nothing should thwart his high resolves, though these, to be sure, were somewhat hazy. He did not know why Billings was so anxious to find Miss Dangerfield's father, but as between a man of Billings' purely commercial instincts and the governor of a great state like North Carolina Ardmore resolved to stand by the Dangerfields to the end of the chapter. He was proud to remember his estate at Ardsley, which was in Gov. Dangerfield's jurisdiction, and had been visited by the game warden, the state of the governor's official household, though Ardmore could not remember their names. He had never in his life visited Raleigh, but far down some blankly. "Why, Mr. Billings, don't you dim vista of memory he saw Sir Walter covering a mud-puddle with his

He once told an amusing story, at an annual South African dinner, about Sir Harry Smith, who, in days gone by was commandant and governor at the Cape. The supply from home, and necessaries of all kinds for the soldiers, was generally sadly deficient, and the men were often in a pitiable plight in the way of clothing. There was, consequently, much discontent. So Sir Harry had them on parade, said some pleasant things to them, complimented them on their soldierly appearance, told forester, and various other members them what splendid fellows they were, talked of the service they had seen together, and so forth. When he had finished, an old sergeant stepped forward, saluted, and remarked: "Thank you Sir 'Arry, beg pardon, Sir 'Arry, but we don't want no gammon, we want boots." Thus Begin Each Day.

It is now suggested that a well-known international woman spy, who is ever ready to sell her services to the highest bidder, be it the Russian, German or French government, was responsible for the disappearance of those plans. It is known that she was in branch they seem too thick and the sand must not be allowed to dry this country for some weeks prior to crowded. the incident and it is supposed that during that time she engineered the rotted cow manure is best, but bonehe was enabled to go or come without | plot which resulted in the vanishing

Whatever truth there may be in the story it is a very feasible one, for it is usually women who prove the most successful spies. "When it comes to trickery and cunning," said a wellknown detective to the writer on one occasion, "there is no match for a ciever woman. If she is pretty into The questioner saw that he was not, the bargain, I would back her to beat the cleverest men at Scotland yard nine times out of ten." And, judging from the success of women in secret service work, it would seem that the tribute is in no way exaggerated.

It is only a short time ago that a beautiful and fashionably dressed teacher of languages, Fraulein Peterson, about 25 years of age, was arrested at Kiel, in Germany, on suspicion of being a French spy. She was said to have entered into a love affair deliberately with a noncommissioned officer named Dietrich, of the explosives department, for the purpose of inducing him to divulge important German naval secrets.

Dietrich, flattered by the attention of such a beautiful woman, could deny her nothing, and at the time of the arrest was said to have been supplying her with the formula for the manufacture of the German smokeless powder (one of the most effective yet invented) and the situation of the port mines. To disguise her true occupation she posed as a teacher of languages. Suspicion was directed against her on account of the ample funds with which she was always provided and of her fear of giving the poquent changes of address.

A Comic Tragedy. The people on Broadway, New York, were startled one night recently by hearing the screams of a child coming apparently from a dress-suit case which a dark, smooth-shaven man was carrying uptown. So piercing were the cries that the man was watched lips tight shut, and continued to walk bloom until frost. up Broadway, clinging to his dresssuit case, from which the screams apparently continued to come. Eventually a constable put him under arrest, and hurriedly opened the bag. He expected to find a baby doubled up in it, but instead he found a grinning stone image called a manikin. The prisoner proved to be a ventriloquist engaged in a Broadway concert hall, who had adopted this unique method of cheap advertisement.

Prank Had Tragic Ending. An extraordinary affair is reported from La Amora. Eighty fierce Spanish bulls were penned in the station awaiting to be conveyed to various parts of the country for bull-fighting purposes. A party of carnival revelers bent on mischievous fun threw some explosives among the animals, causing them to stampede. The infurlated beasts broke down the frail wooden fence and bolted out of the station, making for the town, about a mile distant. The townsfolk heard the trampling of the approaching herd, and as many as could made for shelter. The beasts rushed through the town like a whirlwind. > Fogs Made to Order. Among the means of protecting fruit trees against frost practiced in California is the production of fog by a generator in the form of a wagon. The wagon carries a sheetiron tank, the upper part of which is filled with wet straw or similar material, kept moist by the automatic injection of water from a cask, while near the bottom is a grate upon which tar is burned, a blast, operated by a revolving fan, serving to maintain the combustion. All the heat is compelled to pass through the wet straw before reaching the air and in consequence the wagon is buried in a dense fog, and as it passes between the rows of low trees it envelopes them in a mist so thick that the driver is frequently comp-pelled to lead the horses.

TACK THIS UP

Prescription That Breaks Up the Worst Cold in a Day.

Every winter this prescription is published here and thousands have been benefited by it. "Get two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce of Concentrated Pine compound. Then get half a pint of good whiskey and put the other two ingredients into it. . Take a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful of this mixture after each meal and at bed time. Shake the bottle well each time." But be sure to get only the genuine Concentrated Pine. Each half ounce bottle comes in a tin screw-top case. Any druggist has it on hand or will quickly get it from the wholesale house. Many other pine extracts are impure and cause nausea.

Carelessness with Firearms. Georgia has a colored gen'man famous for the wild turkeys he can bag. He also can deliver luscious tame fowls, and Judge H--- of Thereabouts ordered Gustavus to bring him an exceptionally fine specimen of the latter variety for the New Year spread. At the feast he carved the great bird with much satisfaction, until his knife struck a bunch of shot.

The next day Gustavus was haled to the judge's office.

"Gus, you black rascal," said the irate judge, "I ordered you to fetch me a tame turkey; you brought me a wild one. Don't deny it; here are the shot from it. Now, what have you got

The colored gen-man shuffled and twisted his cap, then he grinned sheepishly, and explained:

the contract of the second and the second

HE early history of Texas was written in blood and fire. Her counties preserve the names of her martyrs. Parker, Coleman, Crockett, Fannin, Travis, Bowie and a hundred others have the map for their monument; their names are given daily utterance by those for whom their deeds have little meaning.

In the beginning, after the Indian tribesfriendly at first-became hostile, the warfare was almost solely with the savages. For a full half-century every settler who built his campfire on the frontier did so at the risk of his property and his scalp. Those who established homes and settlements must have been a daring race indeed, for raids upon horses and herds were always imminent and massacres were as regular as the seasons.

The mother of Chief Quanah Parker (still tiving) for whom the town of Quanah, Tex., was named, was Cynthia Ann Parker, a little white girl captured by the Tehaucano Indians, during a raid on what was known as the Austin colony, in 1836. A brief story of that raid will serve as an example of a thousand others of a similar sort. The Austin colony settled in what is now Grimes county and consisted of something more than a score of persons, including women and children. The Indians who dwelt in the neighborhood seemed friendly enough until a small party of unknown settlers came along and attempted to steal their horses. Immediate trouble was the result and the loss of Tehaucano friendship for the entiresettlement. When the reader considers what follows, I believe I shall be forgiven for hoping that those newcomers who stirred up the first trouble received the sort of a reward which only an Indian would know how to confer.

As the Austin colony consisted chiefly of the Parker family, a rude fortification which they erected was called Fort Parker, a name that to-day still suggests something of shuddering horror to those who have heard its his-

It was a fair May morning when that history was made. The early risers noticed that a body of restless Indians had collected within about 400 yards of the fort. A white flag was hoisted by the savages to signify their peaceable intentions and a warrior approached as if for conference. Benjamin' Parker, commander of the fort, went out to meet him. He came back presently with the word that he believed the Indians intended to fight. He returned, however, to the hostile camp, where he was at once set upon and literally chopped to pieces by the savages, who then with wild yells and blood-curdling warwhoops charged on the fort. Some of the inmates had already left the stockade. Others were trying to escape. John Parker and wife and a Mrs. Kellogg were overtaken a mile away. Parker was killed and scalped; his wife was spared and Mrs. Kellogg was made captive. Other members of the colony were butchered right and left and mutilated in the barbarous fashton which seems to give an Indian joy. Silas Parker was brutally killed and his two children, one of whom was the little girl, Cynthia Ann, were carried away. A Mrs. Plummerdaughter of Rev. James W. Parker-attempted to escape, carrying her little son in her arms. A huge painted savage, begrimed with dust and blood, overtook her, felled her with a hoe, and seizing her by the hair dragged her, still clinging to her child, back amid the butchery and torture of her friends. She and the others who were living were beaten with clubs and lashed with rawhide thongs. That night such of the captives as remained alive, and these included three children, were flung face down in the dust, their hands bound behind their backs, while the Indians, waving bloody scalps and shrieking, danced about them and beat them with their bows until the prisoners were strangling with their own blood. Later they took the infant child of Mrs. Plummer and slowly choked it before her eyes. When it was not quite dead they flung it again and again into the air and let it fall on the stones and earth. Then they tied a rope around its neck and threw its naked body into the hedges of prickly pear, from which they would jerk it fiercely with demoniacal yells. Finally they fastened the rope attached to its neck to the pommel of a saddle and rode round and round in a circle until the body of the child was literally in shreds: .The poor fragments were then thrown into the mother's lap. For some reason the little girl, Cynthia Ann Parker, received better treatment, and lived, She grew up an Indian, forgot her own race and tongue, married a chief and became the mother of another chief, Quanah, surnamed Parker, to-day

It was the massacre of Fort Parker and events of a similar nature that resulted in the organization of the Texas Rangers. The Rangers were at first a semi-official body. locally enlisted and commanded, with regulations and duties not very clearly defined. Their purpose, however, was not in doubt. It was to defend life and property, and their chief qualifications were to be able to ride and shoot and stand up against the warfare of bloodthirsty savages.

"Exterminate the Indians" became a watchword in those days and the warfare that ensued and continued for 40 years can be compared with nothing in history unless it be with the fierce feuds of the ancient Scottish

Early in 1836 Texas fought for and gained her independence, the only state in the Union to achieve such a triumph. In the following year the Texas congress recognized the Ranger movement and authorized several persons to raise Ranger companies to scour the cound annihilate marauding bands. Indians sorted and the work, desperate and bloody, traved along the ever widening and westering frontier up to within a period eas ily remembered to-day by men not beyond middle age. Many names of those early Rangers have been preserved in Texas annals and in local song and traditions, and it would take as many volumes to recount their

As the years went by and the Indian was conquered or driven away, the Ranger's work changed, but his personality remained the same. The Ranger of 70 years ago is the Ranger of to-day-only his duties have altered. Long before the conquest of the savages a new element of disorder had entered the field. The desperado who had stirred up the first Indian troubles had survived and increased, to plunder his own race. The new and sparsely settled land invited every element of lawlessness and every refugee of crime. Local authorities would not or could not contend with them. It was for the Rangers, now much reduced in numbers, to solve the problem of destroying the disturber in their midst as they had driven the savage enemy from their frontiers. They were made peace officers and became a mounted constabulary, their duties being to quell disorders, to prevent crime and to bring criminals to justice. It was new work -less romantic than the wild Indian warfare of the frontier; work full of new dangers and what was still worse, it was work which, instead of inviting the encouragement and enthusiasm of a community, was of a sort to incur its displeasure, for the desperadoes of a neighborhood were either the heroes or the terrors of it and in either case to molest them was likely to prove unpopular. So it was, during this new order of things, that the Ranger service had to contend not only with the fenders but sometimes with the very people whom they were hoping to protect. This made the work hard and discouraging, as work always is hard and discouraging when it is done amid enemies who wear the guise of friends.

For this kind of service Capt. Bill McDonald was eminently qualified. Already he had been appointed a special Ranger in Company B; commanded by Capt. S. A. McMurray, but his duties as U. S. deputy marshal in No-Man's Land and in the Cherokee strip had been his chief work. Nevertheless he had, on occasion, engaged in bandit hunting in his own state, during this period, either alone or in company with other officials, usually with good results.

Events of this sort kept Bill McDonald's name fresh in the Texans' minds and made him seem peculiarly eligible for regular service. The resignation of Capt. S. A. McMurray, who had long and bravely commanded Company B, became his opportunity and he hurried to Austin to try for that command.

His old friend, James Hogg, was now governor of the state. Since the settlement of their differences so long before there had been no discord of any kind and each had admired the other's career, proud to remember the friendship. Arriving at the capital now, Mc-Donald was shown in to the governor's room. Greeting him, he said:

"Well, I hardly know what to call you, since you got to be governor. I don't know whether to call you 'Jim' or 'Mister:' I'll have to call you 'Governor,' I guess, as I want to get a

They shook hands cordially. Gov. Hogg'

"What is it, Bill? What can I do for you?" "Why," said McDonald, "I came down to get to be Ranger captain-to take McMurray's place in Company B." Hogg looked at him reprovingly.

'Why didn't you let me know sooner?" he said. "There are two other applications for the place, both from good men, with long petitions and fine indorsements."

The applicant for position forgot his old friend's title.

"Why, Jam, I never thought of it until a day or two ago. I didn't have time to get indorsements, but I can get 'em, if you want them. I have been working mostly in No-Man's Land and the Territory lately. but have done work in Texas too, and I can get about any kind of indorsement you want."

Hogg laughed. He had a robust sense of

"That's all right, Bir," he said; "you have already got the best indorsement I ever saw." McDonald looked puzzled.

"I don't understand," he said, "I didn't know anybody knew I wanted the place." "All the same you have got the indorsements." insisted Hogg.

He turned to his desk and got out a bundle "Look over these," he said. "You probably know some of the writers." McDonald took the letters and read them one after another. They were from well-known criminals, their lawyers, their friends and their associates. They had been received by Hogg while he was attorney general and each was a and tyrannical official, whose chief recreation was hounding good citizens for the sake of revenge or glory, and adding that it was not unusual for him to put the said citizens in jail or in box cars, declaring further that he sometimes hitched them to posts with chains and that he was a menace to legitimate settlement and society in general.

McDonald looked over some of these documents and grinned

"That's so, Jim," he said, "I do put 'em in box cars when there ain't a jail; the way I used to do back in Mineola-you recollect, when the jail was full-and I lariat 'em out with a chain and a post when there ain't a box car handy; but I don't reckon they're innocent none." Hogg nodded.

'Those indorsements are good enough for me," he said. "They carry the flavor of conviction. I appoint you Ranger captain on the strength of them.

McDonald returned to Quanah with his appointment as captain of "Company B. Frontier battalion." The headquarters of the company were then at Amarillo, in the southern part of Potter county, near the Randall county line. This was almost the exact center of the Panhandle and in a locality sparsely, settled, untamed and lawless

Since the early days of "Ranging" there had not been much change in Ranger regulations and equipment. The character of the work, however, had changed and the force had been reduced in numbers. Company B now consisted of only eight members all told-These were supposed to range over all that vast section known as Panhandle and were subject to orders that might take them to any other portion of the state where their assistance was needed.

It was in January, 1891, that Bill McDonald received his appointment as Ranger captain and his first official service was not long delayed. He arrived at Amarillo about midnight and was received with congratulations, for the news had traveled ahead of him. He was tired, however, and the hour was late, so he presently slipped away to bed. He had hardly fallen asleep when he was rudely awakened and handed a telegram which stated that the Indians had made a raid across the border and were killing and robbing in Hall county, near Salisbury.

Capt. McDonald read the telegram and laughed. There had seen no Indian troubles in Texas for a number of years. White renegades there were in plenty, but Indian outbreaks had long since cease

"I guess the boys are trying to have some fun with me on my first night," he said, and turned in once more to sleep. But a few minutes later another telegram came; and another; this time from the superintendent of the railroad company-a Mr. Good, whom Mc-Donald knew as a man not given to practical

The Ranger captain dressed himself, hurried over to the telegraph office and got the operator there to talk over the wire to the operator where the scare had originated. He learned that it seemed to be genuine and that everybody was leaving the neighborhood.

Still Capt. Bill could not believe it a genuine Indian incursion. Hall county was in the second tier from the Territory line and the Indians would have had to cross Childress county to get to it. He did not believe that they would undertake to do this or that they could have undertaken it without previous alarms. Still it was his duty to investigate. He got a special train, loaded in men, horses and pack mules, and set out on a hunt for Indians. It was about a hundred miles to Salisbury and they reached there early in the day. Not a soul was in sight anywhere. The inhabitants were hidden, some in dugouts, some in haystacks, some in the tall grass. Here and there, as the train pulled in, McDonald saw a head stick out from a sod house far out on the prairie, then suddenly disappear, like a prairie dog dropping into his hole. He set out to interview some of these wary settlers and learned that the Indian alarm had been given by a man-a new settler just arrived in the country—who had ridden his horse to death and lost one of his children—having left him far behind somewhere-in his wild eagerness to escape the savages who, he declared, were burning and scalping not far away. Capt. Bill found this man and after a little talk with him was convinced that what he had seen was nothing more nor less than some cowboys on a round-up, disporting themselves around their campfire at night, as cowboys will-dancing and capering in the mad manner of young plainsmen whose ideas of amusement are elemental and whose opportunities for social diversions are few. The man and the neighborhood remained unconvinced, so it was decided to visit the scene of the disturbance.

Horses, men and pack mules unloaded theniselves from the freight car and went racing over the prairie, the pack mules, as usual, plunging and braying with tail in air, their tinware clattering in a manner calculated to put a whole tribe of Indians into a panic and send them capering across the eastern horizon into their own domain. But there were no Indians. It was as Capt. Bill had thought; a gang of cowboys, the night before, had rounded up some cattle, killed a beef, carried it to their camp nearby, where they had built a great fire and roasted it, doing a wild war dance of celebration and shooting off their six shooters in their prodigal expression of joy Viewed from a little distance, through a sort of mirage condition which had exaggerated the whole effect, the scene to the newcomers was a horrifying picture of savages about a burning home, with the inhabitants fleeing for their lives.

The man who had just moved in had stam peded for his own safety and started a gen eral alarm, which did not subside even when the cowboys themselves came in and testified to the truth. The panic spread throughout that section of the country and other reports of Indian outbreaks were circulated, becoming magnified until it was believed that the Indians had broken out and were making a general raid on the Panhandle. The inhabitants of one town, south of Amarillo, threw up breastworks, got behind them, and put out pickets in preparation for the arrival of the Indians. Every man seen loping across the prairie was reported as an Indian, and all this happened as late as 1891, when there had been no Indian outbreaks for years and when there was scarcely a possibility of anything of the sort. It was a big joke, of course, after ward, but it seemed no joke at the time and it was Bill McDonald's initiation as captain. OLD BIRD.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? We can furnish positive proof that it has made many remarkable cures after all other means had failed.

Women who are suffering with some form of female illness should consider this.

As such evidence read these two unsolicited testimonial letters. We guarantee they are genuine and honest state-

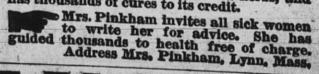

Cresson, Pa.-" Five years ago I had a bad fall, and hurt myself inwardly. I was under a doctor's care for nine weeks, and when I stopped I grew worse again. I sent for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, took it as directed, and now I am a stout, hearty woman." - Mrs. Ella E. Aikey,

Baird, Wash. - "A year ago I was sick with kidney and bladder troubles and female weakness. The doctors gave me up. All they could do was to just let me go as easily as possible. I was advised by friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier. I am completely cured of my fils, and I am nearly sixty years old."-Mrs. Sarah Leighton, Evidence like the above is abundant showing that the derangements of the female organism which breed all kinds of miserable feelings and which ordinary practice does not cure, are the very disorders that give way to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Women who are afflicted with similar troubles, after reading two such letters as the above, should be encouraged to try this wonderfully helpful remedy,

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

TARIFF QUESTION UPPERMOST

President Anxious That Republican Meetings Shall Indorse the Measure-Income Tax Chances-Root's Letter to Roosevelt -Third Term Issue.

Washington.-Within a short time good many states that are normally Republican, or in most of which at least the Republicans have more than a fighting chance of victory, will hold conventions for the adoption of platforms and the nomination of state officials. As President Taft showed in his letter to the Republican editors in Illinois, he is anxious that his administration as a whole, shall be indorsed by the conventions, and that specific mention shall be made in words of commendation of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill.

This desire of the president to have the Republicans of the different states officially indorse the measure to which he gave his own sanction when he signed it, and later in his speech at Winona, Minnesota, is likely to be provocative of trouble in perhaps a majority of the conventions. The Indiana state convention will be held soon, and there perhaps the question of whether or not to indorse the tariff erick Starr of Chicago has attractiveact, is the most crucial. ly described. South Carolina recently ratified the his voice or his writings. ed amendment to the constitution of the United States which will allow the imposition of tax on incomes. Virginia, another southern state, declined to ratify the provision. Representatives in congress are keeping close watch on the action of the various state legislatures. There are both friends and foes of the income income tax proposition in congress, but even among its friends there is sharp difference of opinion as to whether such a tax law ever properly could be enforced, because of the proneness of men to hide the facts concerning the amount of their in-

The proposed amendment to the constitution which will make legal beyond all question the laying of the tax on incomes has been ratified already by the following states: South Carolina, Kentucky, Oklahoma, Illinois and Alabama. It has been rejected by Virginia. The legislatures of the following states are either now in session or have just adjourned and as yet no action has been taken by them on the constitutional amendment: Rhode Island, Ohio, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York and Maryland.

Why It Was Submitted to States. It will be remembered that during the tariff debate early last spring the administration and the Republican leaders suggested that the income tax amendment to the constitution should be submitted to the state legislatures for action. This unquestionably was done in order to discourage income tax debate and the introduction of amendments to the tariff bill. Of course it is not intended to say that the administration was not sincere in its desires to have income tax legislation, if it ever should reach a legislative form, put on safe constitutional grounds. It is believed that President Taft is in favor of the income tax provided it can be shown that it is necessary in order to raise revenue, but his friends say his "judicial mind" is such that he does not want any legislation to go on the statute books unless it is absolutely certain that it has the constitution back of it.

As has been said, there are many friends and many fous of the income tax amendment proposition in congress. Most of the friends of the measure come from the west and south, while the foes as a rule come from the east and northeast. Threefourths of the state legislatures must ratify the proposed amendment before it can be put into form and be given a place in the constitution of the United States. Within the next year 21 states through their legislatures will have a chance to ratify the amendment. The states that have ratified it and those whose legislatures in some places, decided dissatisfaction are now in session but have taken no action, already have been named. The legislatures of the following states will meet and either sanction, reject or ignore the amendment within the next year: Indiana, Iowa, Missouri, before departing she takes every ves- ize and say publicly that the situation | Minnesota, Arkansas, Louisiana, Kan-Often one may see anachronisms of tige of money or property he ever pos- which will confront them in the state sas, Nebraska, Nevada, North Caroline, Michigan, Georgia, Colorado, Ore-There are several high-tariff Repub- gon, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wylicans who formerly were members of oming, Washington, Wisconsin, Texas

There cannot be the slightest doubt tariff bill was a Republican measure, that the New York senator, who was Mr. Roosevelt's secretary of state. wrote the letter in the hope that it would offset the statements of a number of people who had gone out to meet Mr. Roosevelt to tell him that from their point of view, that of "progression," the Taft administration has been a dire failure.

In several speeches made recently by Democrats of prominence and in one or two letters by men of that party what it does not claim for itself. One given support in resolutions, but as of almost equal prominence, it has been held that Mr. Roosevelt himself is likely to be a big figure in the next national election. In these Democratic epistles there has been lacking something of specific detail, and opinion is pretty evenly divided as to whether the present minority party hopes that the former president will again be a candidate or that the hope is he will sanction the Taft administration and continue to support it through its present term, including the time when the present president may be a candidate for re-election.

WHEN DUTY CALLED

MASSACHUSETTS HERO PROMPT IN HIS ANSWER.

Gallant Deed of Long Ago, Whereby Many Lives Were Saved, Is Recalled-Daniel Collins Graves Deserves Monument.

Thirty-five years ago on May 16 next a man whose sense of danger and love of his fellow man were well developed achieved immortal fame in western Massachusetts. His name was Daniel Collins Graves. For something like a year his name was on every tongue in the country. He was the subject of pulpit and platform orators. John Boyle O'Reilly of the Boston Pilot, immortalized him in stirring verse, which included these stanzas:

No song of a soldier riding down
To the raging fight from Winchester town;
No song of a time that shook the earth
With the nations' throe at a nation's birth;
But the song of a brave man, free from As Sheridan's self or Paul Revere; Who risked what they risked, free from strife.

And its promise of glorious pay—his life!

When heroes are called for, bring the crown
To this Yankee rider; send him down
On the stream of time with the Curtius His deed, as the Roman's, was brave and bold. And the tale can as noble a thrill awake, he offered his life for the people's For

And then the country seemed to forget, but Graves remained the hero of his section and his death at the age of 70 in his old home village of Williamsburg brings him cace more into the public eye. Mill river, the most eastern branch of the Westfield. had been dammed three miles above Williamsburg, thus securing an additional head of 24 feet for power purposes. Above a long, narrow valley, thickly dotted with villages, hung a body of 1,000,000,000 gallons of water.

Collins Graves had been on an early morning errand on the morning of May 16, 1874. As he drove into his yard a neighbor hurried past shouting: "The dam is giving way!" Instantly Graves knew what this would mean. He tore the harness from his horse, sprang to its bare back and dashed down the valley on the run shouting the alarm and telling the inhabitants to take to the high ground. Fifteen hundred lives were at stake and Graves' horse was not of the racing type and ill-fitted with wind and limbs to make time against a roaring cataract with a fall of 100 feet to the mile, but he served for all but 150. A large part of Williamsburg with a button factory, woolen mill, saw and grist mill were carried away. A silk mill at Skinnerville and 15 houses were swept along. At Haydenville the brass works and several dwellings, the entire village of Leeds was destroyed and considerable damage was done at Florence and Northampton. The financial loss was $1,500,000. The Mill river disaster was a notable event in history until the more appalling flood occurred at Johnstown. Pa. Daniel Collins Graves deserves a monument to perpetuate the memory of his famous ride.

Broke Down in Maiden Speeches. Of the many members of the British parliament who have broken down in their maiden speeches there is no more distressing instance than that of Gibson Craig in 1837, thus graphically described by Disraeli: "Gibson Craig. of whom the Whigs had hopes, rose, stared like a stuck pig, and said nothing. His friends cheered, he stammered, all cheered; then there was a dead and awful pause, and then he sat down, and that was his performance.' Another breakdown in a maiden speech was by a happy thought turned into a success. This was by Lord Ashley, who was a stanch supporter of a bill to grant the services of counsel to prisoners indicted for high treason, but when he rose to make his maiden speech he found himself devoid of language. The house cheered encouragement. At last he managed to blurt out: "If Mr. Speaker, sir, I, who now rise only to give my opinion on the bill, am so confounded that I am unable to express what I proposed to say, what must be the condition of that man who without any assistance is pleading for his life and is apprehensive of being deprived of it?" The elaborate speech he had prepared would have been less effective.

NOTICE.

The firm of VanRiper & Chandler has been dissolved, and the undersigned will continue the business at the present location. All book accounts are due me, and I will also settle all accounts contracted by the old firm. Thanking you for past favors, and hoping for a continuance of the same.

I remain, yours truly,

FLOYD VAN RIPER.

HY is it that Geo. H. Foster & Son have sold more wind-mills and more pumps than any two forms. County? First-Because they are an old established firm. Second-Because they get the first chance for the gencies on Mills and Pumps, and they take the best every time. Then if there is any one else in their territory who wants to sell mills and pumps they have to take what is left. They are known far and near for drilling wells, and if anyone needs repairs for their wells or mills they can telephone to our store and there will be someone ready to attend to it at once. They are not in business one year and out the next., so you can depend on them. As they do nearly all the plumbing that is done in the village and surrounding country, you can depend on the work being done in a first-class manner.
