The tendency now is more and more to study advanced science from the int of view of its application to intustry. There is a great demand for ig men who are able to deal with ant diseases and plant sanitation. This demand is largely in connection ith big tropical and colonial industries, such as rubber, sugar, tobacco, sinchons and cotton growing. It hould be borne in mind, when considering the scope of the London institution, that the sole value of a very large area of the British colonial posons depends entirely on the value of their vegetable products and that illions are lost every year through preventable causes. There is ample ope for such work in every country. There is constant trouble with crops by reason of diseases, many of which are at present only imperfectly understood. The words "plant physiology," as concerned with the new training, simply mean that the plants are regarded as "going concerns."

The Chelsea Standard STATE FAIR HAS

THE PRESENCE OF PRESIDENT TAFT ATTRACTS GREAT THRONGS.

30,000 PEOPLE PASSED THROUGH THE TURNSTILES ON MONDAY.

The Program This Year is Declared To Be the Most Elaborate Ever Prepared for the State Fair.

In all the history of Michigan state fairs there was never such an opening day. Monday morning, almost before the corps of workers, wearied from their eleventh-hour exertions, were awake and on duty, the crowds commenced to stream through the turnstiles. It has generally taken a day or so for the state fair to gather momentum. Because of the president's visit, and the extraordinary efforts of the management to have everything in readiness at the outset, it was a finished exposition that met the eyes of the first rush of spec-

Sheriff Gaston made extensive arrangements for policing the fair grounds during Taft's visit.

From every part of the lower peninsula thousands of patrons came by steam and electric. The D. U. R. started its special interurban service, running cars directly to the fair grounds from nearby towns and cites. Many of the patrons were those who attend as a rule for a single day, living near enough Detroit so that they can come and go without spending a night in Detroit. These patrons usually select some day after the fair has got well under way, but they came early, drawn by the big opening attraction, William Howard Taft, and to judge from the business done by hotels and rooming houses, will stay to take in the fair proper more leisurely.

The program this year is declared to be the most elaborate ever prepared for the state fair. It includes the grand circuit races, automobile races, in which world-famous drivers will figure, and a nightly pyrotechnical spectacle called "Pioneer Days and the Attack on Fort Detroit." The night horse show will be one of the regular evening features.

Assistant Fire Marshal Wolf gave out his report to Marshal Palmer of work done during the month of August. Pure Food Expert Will Not Be Asked

The resignation of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry in the department of agriculture and probably the best known pure food expert in the government service, will not be asked for by President Taft, despite recommendations that it be requested, made by the personnel board of the department and indorsed by Atty. Gen. Wicker-

The "condign punishment" for Dr. Wiley, which Mr. Wickersham holds to be necessary will not be meted out by the chief executive. The presi dent's opinion, carrying no word of criticism for Dr. Wiley, but many words of praise, was made public. There is no indication in it that the president feels that he "turned down" Mr. Wickersham by not accepting his recommendations. He explains that the attorney general's findings in the case were made with less complete data than was before him when he took it up. The president admits that there is trouble in the department of agriculture.

A HIT What She Gained by Trying Again.

A failure at first makes us esteem final success. A family in Minnesota that now enjoys Postum would never have known how good it is if the mother had been discouraged by the failure of her first attempt to prepare it. Her son tells the story: "We had never used Postum till last spring when father brought home s package one evening just to try it. We had heard from our neighbors, and in they liked it. "Well, the next morning Mother brewed it about five minutes, just as she had been in the habit of doing with coffee without paying special attention to the directions printed on the package. It looked weak and didn't have a very promising color, but nevertheless father raised his cup with an air of exceptancy. It certainly did give him a great surprise, but I'm afraid it wasn't a very pleasant one, for he put down his cup with a look of disgust. Mother wasn't discouraged though, and next morning gave it another trial, letting it stand on the stove till bolling began and then letting it boil for fifteen or twenty minutes, and this time we were all so pleased with it that we have used it ever since. "Father was a confirmed dyspeption and a cup of coffee was to him like pol-son. So he never drinks it any more, son. So he never drinks it any more, but drinks Postum regularly. He isn't troubled with dyspepsia now and is actually growing fet, and I'm salre Postum is the cause of it. All the children are allowed to drink it and they are perfect pictures of health." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek,

The Lover's Errand

So the strong will prevailed, and Alden went on his errand, Out of the street of the village, and into the paths of the forest, Into the tranquil woods, where bluebirds and robins were building Towns in the populous trees, with hanging gardens of verdure, Peaceful, aerial cities of joy and affection and freedom. All around him was calm, but within him commotion and conflict, Love contending with friendship, and self with each generous impulse. To and fro in his breast his thoughts were heaving and dashing, As in a foundering ship, with every roll of the vessel, Washes the bitter sea, the merciless surge of the ocean! "Must I relinquish it all," he cried with a wild lamentation, "Must I relinquish it all, the joy, the hope, the illusion? Was it for this I have loved, and waited, and worshiped in silence? Was it for this I have followed the flying feet and the shadow Over the wintry sea, to the desolate shores of New England?

Truly the heart is deceitful, and out of its depths of corruption Rise, like an exhalation, the misty phantoms of passion; Angels of light they seem, but are only delusions of Satan. All is clear to me now; I feel it, I see it distinctly! This is the hand of the Lord; it is laid upon me in anger, For I have followed too much the heart's desires and devices, Worshiping Ashtoreth blindly, and impious idols of Baal. This is the cross I must bear; the sin and the swift retribution." So through the Plymouth woods John Alden went on his errand; Crossing the brook at the ford, where it brawled over pebble and shal-

Gathering still, as he went, the Mayflowers blooming around him, Fragrant, filling the air with a strange and wonderful sweetness,

Children lost in the woods and covered with leaves in their slumber. "Puritan flowers," he said, "and the type of Puritan maidens,

Modest and simple and sweet, the very type of Priscilla! So I will take them to her; to Priscilla the May-flower of Plymouth, Modest and simple and sweet, as a parting gift will I take them;

Breathing their silent farewells, as they fade and wither and perish, Soon to be thrown away, as is the heart of the giver." So through the Plymouth woods John

Alden went on his errand; Came to an open space, and saw the disk of the ocean,

Sailless, somber and cold with the comfortless breath of the east wind: Saw the new-built house, and people at work in a meadow; Heard, as he drew near the door, the musical voice of Priscilla Singing the hundredth Psalm, the grand old Puritan anthem, Music that Luther sang to the sacred words of the Psalmist, Full of the breath of the Lord, consoling and comforting many.

Then, as he opened the door, he be held the form of the maiden Seated beside her wheel, and the carded wool like a snow-drift Piled at her knee, her white hands feeding the ravenous spindle, While with her foot on the treadle

she guided the wheel in its motion Open wide on her lap lay the well-worn psalm-book of Ainsworth, Printed in Amsterdam, the words and music together, Rough-hewn, angular notes, like stones in the wall of a churchyard, Darkened and overhung by the running vine of the verses.

Such was the book from whose pages she sang the old Puritan anthem, hand, in signal of welcome. Saying, "I knew it was you, when heard your step in the passage; For I was thinking of you, as I sat there singing and spinning."

Awkward and dumb with delight, that a thought of him had been mingled Thus in the sacred psalm, that came from the heart of the maiden. Silent before her he stood, and gave her the flowers for an answer. Finding no words for his thought. He remembered that day in the

Grateful and pleased to know he had thought of her in the snow-storm Had he but spoken then, perhaps not in vain had he spoken; Now it was all too late: the golden moment had vanished! So he stood there abashed, and gave her the flowers for an answer.

Then they sat down and talked of the birds and the beautiful spring-Talked of their friends at home, and

To Test Right of Webster to Prison Board Seat.

APPOINTEE NOT AT MEETING

Supreme Court May Settle the Dispute at an Early Date-Attorney General May Also Take

Lansing.-John S. Haggerty, through his attorney, Alexander Groesbeck of Detroit, presented a bill of complaint before Judge Parkinson in circuit court asking for a temporary injunction restraining Clyde I. Webster from taking his seat on the board of control or interfering with Haggerty's work on the board until Webster can try his title to the office in the proper procedure.

While the injunction was not granted by Judge Parkinson, the court stated that he would consider the matter. The court believed it was without jurisdiction in the matter, as neither party resided in Jackson county. He stated that he believed that the suit should be started in Wayne county. Groesbeck argued that as the board meets in Jackson the court would have jurisdiction. The fact that the court did not grant the injunction does not mean that he will not grant it, as he will give the question consideration before acting.

It was not necessary to have an injunction, as Webster did not show up to take part in the last board procedings. Mr. Haggerty was there, as were also Messrs. Adams and Wernicke. This meeting of the board was called before the appointment of Mr. Webster.

Mr. Groesbeck stated that the in junction matter will be gotten before the supreme court in some way within the next month or be disposed of before the next board meeting.

Money From Estates Is Small.

Several states reap a large benefit from their state board of escheats Michigan, however, has never received any great amount from this source, for the reason that the estates of deceased persons as a rule are pretty well taken care of and there are generally enough heirs found to derived from the sale of property of urer by the state board of escheats (which is composed of the state board of auditors) and after remaining in the treasury a certain time is transferred to the primary school fund. There is a chance, however, that some of this money will be called for, for instance in case an heir of a deceased person lays claim to the estate which has been turned over to the state board of escheats, and can prove beyond a doubt that they are rightful heirs, they can collect from the state their portion of the estate of their deceased relatives. Consequently there is always a chance that the state will be required to pay back the money derived from this source.

Chinese to Attend U. of M.

Seventy-one Chinese students are to be sent to the United States this fall to be educated. Their education will be paid for out of the indemnity fund. Of these eighty-one eighteen are to be sent to the University of Michigan, the largest number who go to any one school.

There are also three Chinese girls, now in other educational institutions, who have asked to be transferred to Michigan, and arrangements are even now being completed by which this will be brought about. One of these Chinese girls is now being educated at Dennison college, Ohio, one in Northwestern and one is now out of school and staying at Franklin, Ind. Of the eighteen, ten are to enter the ingineering department. Last year the Chinese government sent 76 students to this country for an education, and of this number Somewhat hasty and hot, he could not fourteen came to Michigan. What is to become of Marrilius Jensen, Michigan's only known leper? That is the question puzzling the state board of health. Jensen, it will be remembered, is the man located near Calumet and being cared for by the Calumet & Hecla Mining company. The case of Jensen, who is only thirty-nine years of age, is a most interesting one, and while some parts of the story have been printed before, there are new phases constantly arising and more developments seem to come up at every visit of the state board of health. Dr. Robert L. Dixon, secretary of the board, in company with Dr. A. S. Warthin of Ann Arbor, has just returned from a visit to the upper peninsula. The trip was made for two reasons, one to ascertain the condition of Jensen, and the other to learn if possible if there are any more lepers or indications of leprosy in that section. There have been frequent reports that there were other cases, but the two physicians made a careful examination, especially in the mining districts where foreigners are located, they visited. The man Jensen has officially been declared a leper for the past two years. Eleven years ago he left Norway and came to this country. Five years ago the first blotches appeared on him and this a short time after his return from Alaska, where he spent a number of years in herding reindeer. that he undoubtedly contracted the

According to the story told by Jensen himself a few days ago to Dr. Dixon of the state board of health, Jensen's mother died of the disease a when he left Norway she had no apparent indications of the disease, but that it developed later and she died. Jensen has a wife and four girls. He is well educated himself. His children are bright and there is absolutely no trace of the disease among any of the family. The father occuples a small house by himself situated on a small plot of ground furnished by the mining company, and the family occupies a house a short distance from the father's habitation. A horse, cow and chickens are among the various useful necessities furnished by the mining company for the their mines.

The money that of the legislature. The druggists synonym for the hangman's noose comes to the state through this about the state are, of course, putting throughout Russia. Trials and persource is paid over to the state treas- in a "kick," and several of them have averred they will take no steps to comply with what they term a fool law.

One druggist who was in Lansing a few days ago stated that it would cost him $25 to put enough of the required devices in his store to fit all-sized corks handled by him. The dealers whose devices have been approved by the state board of health, he says, refuse to sell in less than thousand lots, and at the price asked and taking ten different sized corks to be fitted, which is the average stock carried by a retail druggist, it would mean an expenditure of at least $25. The same druggist also puts up the claim that there is absolutely no protection for the poor druggist.

"Take this for an illustration," says the druggist. "A person comes into your store, purchases a bottle of poison and I attach one of the serrated devices. The person leaves the store and removes the device. What protection has the druggist if the point is raised that no device was placed eral notice in the mass of other legon the stopper when the poison was islation.

Opinion Favors Saloons. The saloon men will hail with giee an opinion of Attorney General Kuhn that a saloon does not have to close on a succeeding Monday when a holiday falls on Sunday. Mr. Kuhn holds that section 17 of the present law now reads that saloons be closed Sundays and on certain holidays, and that when a holiday falls on Sunday that, unlike banks, saloons are not required to close.

C. at Caro has been authorized with a full interlocker at that point for protection.

Premier Peter Alexandrovitch Stolypin was twice shot by a wouldbe assasin during a gala performance at the opera house in Klev. Czar Nicholas was in the audience and at first it was feared that his life had been attempted. Stolypin's wounds were first re-

The czar was hurried out of the theater by a private way and into a carriage, which was driven rapidly to the palace. The audience was finally quieted and before dispersing sang the national anthem.

The premier was removed to the palace. The bullets wounded the pleura and grazed the liver. Real Ruler of Russia

He quarreled frequently with the duma and was victorious in his disputes with that body, owing to the confidence of the czar, which he enjoyed. When M. Stolypin accepted the premiership he was perfectly conscious of his danger. He said at the time:

"I have no doubt that attempts will be made upon my life, but I hope that order will be restored and stability established in Russia before they are successful."

The law is now in effect, but owing to the fact that its provisions are known to comparatively few, no family has applied to the board of education or the juvenile court for relief. The act was designed to enable poor families to send their children to school instead of putting them to work to help support the home. Compensation at the rate of $3 a week a child, but not to exceed $6 a week for any one family, is allowed, this to be paid out of the maintenance fund of the board of education on recommendation of the juvenile judge after an investigation by a truant or court officer.

OMAN is loveliest at The speaker herself seemed never lovelier than when admitting forty-one years past. For wenty years Paris has called her The Beautiful Otero; and she is still at the height of fortune as the most famous Spanish dancer and the sional beauty of the gay French capital. She explained herself: "I refer to fine women. In health and the enjoyment of rational luxuries, they med only two things to triumph in the charm of their full flowering-will to most bejeweled profesfreep in condition, and mastery of that inthetic disdain which tempts them to stand back in the shadow." She rose and paced the room with catlike grace. She snatched a man's hat from the table, cocked it over her eye, fung the end of a cloak over her shoulder, and struck an attitude. I have our value impressed on me ever in the Spanish dance," she said. The grand dance of the flamenca! What a dance, monsieur, what a drama! It is the whole of woman's life in three

THE WOMAN OF FORTY IS POSITIVELY LOVELIEST"

I know of nothing so eloquent of her superior loveliness."

"Let her arrive unknown in a community and confess thirty one years. The other women will give her thirty-six on principle. And all the men, suspicious of their women's frankness in such matters, will be sure that she is a delicious creature of possibly thirty-four, grand maximum, of unusual tact, poise, suppleness, quoi? all kinds of graces of unknown but obviously superior surroundings!"

"We see it every day," I said. "Fine women have the age they look.

"No, no, the woman of forty is positively loveliest," replied the lovely specialist. "We must distinguish. Physical loveliness is one thing, academical perfection of form another. Paris painters of voluptuous subjects-nymphs rolling green lawns. bacchantes sprawling in pagan festivals, courts of Neptune sunning on golden sands-have always been reproached by their uncompromising brethren for 'doing chic' because they wilfully age their models. To attain the acme of sensual beauty, they for reuniting a severed nation." enlarge rotundities, exaggerate curves, tend toward the corset waist-bete noire of purists and delight of gods and men-and arrive at an unearthly charm by giving the nymph of eighteen can expect to reach its largest suca whole set of outlines that she ought not have for fifteen years. What is this but glorifying by 'chic' the beauty of forty-whom these painters seldom obtain as model, because there is always some man to prevent it!"

"Also," I said, "they must pretend their nymphs are eighteen-for the man of forty."

"Betises!" laughed Otero. "In times past overweening plumpness may have been a danger to the lazy and self-indulgenteven at eighteen; but the modern fine woman changes little between thirty-five and forty-five. As for academical purity of line, none but uncompromising painters and sculptors want itto give purity of sentiment; and it is lost, not at forty, but at twenty-four. The episode of Eberlein is classical. Struck by the pure beauty of a twenty-five-year-old model, the famous sculptor noted down minutely, numerously, all her exact measurements in order to reproduce such a perfect anatomy in marble. Four weeks later, in verifying the measurements before an incredulous confrere, he was astonished to discover that not a single one concorded; the academically perfect anatomy had budged all along the line-toward the voluptuous beauty prized by common mortals!"

"And the maniere de s' en servir!" I mused. "I accuse not only the young girl's green acidity, her forming body, sleeping temperament, and crudity of mind," summed up Otero. "In northern lands, the sleeping parts may get the sand out of their eyes by twenty-five; but, even then, years pass in looking round and wondering what this world may mean. So, at thirty, the average young woman, loaded down with natural arrogance and ideas that have been imposed upon her, tranquilizes a growing disquiet by repeating to herself: 'I am a young thing! Up to thirty-five the satisfaction of ruling may have been her chief profit. Now she wakes completely to the pulsing life of things, knows herself and-dismayed by sense of loss-plunges avidly, or else-" "Or else, discouraged, sinks back, murmuring: 'I am an old thing!'", I finished the sentence for her.

"That's it," laughed Otero. "If she grows panic-stricken, she enters the 'terrible quarantaine' indeed. They may be the 'terrible forties' or the 'splendid forties,' as she makes them, as her world permits her, or as she dominates it, with happy insouciance brushing aside every obstacle and flinging herself into the harmonies of an instrument finally attuned. Then she is truly terrible—terrible to younger, undecided women whom she mocks and bamboozles, borrowing their admirers from them out of pure lightheartedness; terrible to men, on whom she avenges the neglect of in addition to the one evening that years to come!"

Treasure From the Sea.

Boys that live at Pine Brook, N. J., did not know that there was a buried treasure near at hand or they might have gone hunting for it. Two fishermen found it. A strong line, much larger than you have ever used unless you have gone fishing for whale or something of that ort, was caught in the bottom of the river. The men tugged on it and found that it gave a little, and just then an automobile came along the road. The men asked the automobile man to give them a little assistance, and they tied the line to the rear axle and let the car pull on it. The line strained and slowly moved out of the water, drawing with it a wrecked canoe full of mud and stones. In the cance was found a heavy chest, which was removed by the men ed into the car, and then the driver and fishermen went on to town. There they displayed the find, and the chest was recognised as the silverware box belonging to a hotel. The box had been stolen in 1904, and no trace of the rebbers had, been found.

The -National Grange

Conducted by Charles M. Gardner, Editor of the National Grange, Westfield, Mass. ORIGINAL PURPOSE OF ORDER

Massachusetts State Master Says This Should Still Be Basis of Grange Endeavor.

In a recent field day address, State Master Charles M. Gardner of Massachusetts brought out in a forcible way the original purpose of the founding of the Grange and uged a continuance of the same purposes as the fundamental basis for Grange endeavor. He "Nearly a half century ago, when the seven founders of the order conceived this splendid fraternity, they were actuated by two principal motives and from a consideration of those motives we get a new realization of what the Grange is for, They organized the Grange, first, as an ald to agriculture. The Civil war had just come to an end and all over the country agriculture was in a depleted state. The robust, able-bodied farmers had left the plow in the furrow and had responded to the call of the hour, in North and South alike, leaving the care of the fields to the women and children, to the aged and infirm. The Grange founders, therefore, conceived an organization to restore interest and to stimulate efficiency in the cultivation of the farms, in order that normal agricultural conditions might be restored, the land be made to yield again its accustomed fruitage and the people be abundantly fed. The first occasion that called the Grange into being was the call for an improved agriculture.

"They organized the Grange, second, to promote national unity. They saw the republic split in twain by the bloody conflict of four terrible years; Mason and Dixon's line was as clearly visible as though it had been built of stone and reared mountain high; while the great task of reconstruction drove fear to the most heroic souls, as presenting almost an impossible problem. The Grange founders believed that if they could organize an association in the North and the South, in the East and the West, for the restoration and promotion of agricultural prosperity, they might be likewise aiding effectively in the restoration of national unity. Thus the second occasion that called the Grange to being, but not less important than the first, was the call Mr. Gardner continued: "No Grange cess nor be permanently prosperous unless these two fundamental ideals are kept distinctly in view. No Grange can permanently prosper that does not devote at least a reasonable portion of its energies to the progress and upbuilding of agricultural efficiency and prosperity; while the promotion of a spirit of unity-in family, in community, in town and state and national affairs-must ever constitute a fundamental Grange endeavor, if its other projects are to win success and its varied undertakings to become permanent. Many lines of Grango purpose may be builded upon these fundamentals and may follow as a natural outgrowth and extension; but these two ideals are fundamental and therefore indispensable."

HELPING THE YOUNGER MEN

In One Village the Grange Hall Is Theirs Several Nights Each Week.

In one country villages where there was a goodly number of young men, there was no place for them to get together, except at the country store, or at places whose environment might be in question. The Grange discussed the problem of what could be done for those young men and finally decided to open up an unoccupied room in the Grange hall two evenings in the week, as a social room for these same young men. Various games were provided, two files of a good daily paper were subscribed for and several magazines regularly supplied. A rooms committee was in charge of the enterprise, all sensible, judicious persons and one of them took part on each evening, alternating from night to night. Later piano was bought for the room and only a short time ago a pool table was supplied. The atmosphere of the room is wholesome and uplifting and nothing of the opposite character is permitted.

Recently it has been decided to keep the room three nights a week, the Grange itself is in session in the hall upstairs. The experiment has been going three years, nearly all the young men in the place belong to the Grange, and a finer, cleaner set of young men can be found in very few country villages. The place is not large enough to attempt a Y. M. C. A., but this project fits in admirably and it is Grange leadership adapted to home needs and worked out for home

"When my little girl was about eint months old, she was taken with a very irritating breaking out, which came on her face, neck and back. When she first came down with it, it came in little watery-like festers under her eyes, and on her chin, then after a few days it would dry down in scaly, white scabs. In the daytime she was quite worrysome and would dig and scratch her face nearly all the time.

"I consulted our physician and found she was suffering from eczema, which he said came from her teething I used the ointment he gave me and without any relief at all. Then I wrote for a book on Cuticura, and purchased some Cuticura Soap and Oht ment at the drug store. I did as I found directions in the Cuticura Book let, and when she was one year old, she was entirely cured. Now she is three years and four months, and she has never been troubled with eczema since she was cured by the Cutcura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. Why, the intuitions of the very young man are unerring in this matter. The youth of seventeen, with senses painfully fresh and keen, begins with a grande passion for the woman of forty. Instinct tells him that she is the loveliest. The thing is traditional, from Harry Esmond down to Porter Charlton. And Joseph even; how did she get that coat? We laugh. Laughter is a sudden glory-over human mischance. The youth himself refuses to arrive at charming forty beside a woman of sixtythree; yet his first untroubled judgment was to award the apple where it belongs." "The man of forty evidently. . ." I began. "The worst enemy of the woman of forty is Those who remain in Spain use themselves up, the man of forty," persisted Otero. "She is the mirror in which he dreads to see the shadow of his own degeneracy-forgetting that his wear and tear of ten years past have not been hers. So the man of forty marries the girl of twenty-three. In spite of his wear and tear, she finds in the charm of the full man her profound satisfaction-without looking ahead. Why look ahead? In Paris we see daily men of forty making inexperienced young fellows appear foolish. For example, I will cite 'the best loved-man of Paris,' over whose elegant person five hat-pin duels have been fought in the past three years-the latest on the Biarritz boardwalk, between a young matron and a bud of society. He will be ferty-two years old next

The fair creature would be more than human not to resent it. Unspoken malice in her laughing eye causes the fatuous fellow to grit his teeth with ate. She said true; yet I had passed all as charming. All have beauty reputation, When a woman like this gives away her sisters it is edifying. Otero showed me how one splendid creature fought for years against a double chin and conquered; how another began bony; how another has learned to dissimulate a trumpet nose.

" Stop!" I exclaimed. "You will make me think that all young women are full of defects!"

"They are," said Otero. "What is time for but to correct them? Scatter the photographs and look again. You will find them beauties now in any case! They are radiant. They have learned their power!" It was even so. There were flashes of ecstasy, gleams of delight, eyes that spoke soul awakenings, lips parted in mystery. There were coy faces, faces that asked baffling questions, confidential faces, high, courageous faces, faces that breathed sweet, sad reverie. "All kinds of faces, except wooden twenty-year-old faces, hein?" laughed the subtle Spaniard. "A Paris photographer has given me a partial reason why their faces are lovelier at forty. It is because they have been photographed so much."

"The effort to resemble one's best picture?"

"All that, in general; but he claims a particular influence of self-suggestion. We come to resemble our best photographs by gentle degrees, unconsciously, when they follow each other in a long, changing series." "Living up to last week's photograph makes

GOOD MONEY IN PROSPECT

A Self-Evident Proposition.

Good growing stock of any kind that is selling below the cost of production is always a safe investment, if the purchaser is prepared to take good care of it.

He who buys and develops such stock is almost certain to make a good profit in doing so, because production will not long continue at a loss, while consumption of staples must go on steadily.

Not many others are buying such stock, or else it would not be selling so cheaply, and it follows logically and consistently that when it has been grown and finished for market, there will then be a comparative scarcity of such finished stock and such good prices will be realized for it that a handsome profit will result from

This reasoning is self-evident, and applies with especial emphasis to the present situation in feeder sheep and

Last year's conditions are now reversed. Then nearly everybody was crazy to feed sheep and lambs, and an immense number were sold and shipped to the country at about the highest prices on record. This together with an enormous corn crop of high feeding value, a world of perfectly cured roughage and a splendid winter feeding season were factors that combined to produce a heavy supply of fat sheep and lambs for market during the early part of this year, while retailers of meats held up prices to consumers, so that consumption was limited, with the natural and logical result of low prices and feeders' losses in most instances.

In consequence of last year's un-The very newest fads, so-called, are profitable experience and present scarcity of grass and hay, most farmamusements popular right now are ers and many professional feeders of charades which are enjoyed by both sheep and lambs are now avoiding the old and young. I found this dinner market, and very few are being shipmenu in charade form which appears ped to the country, while prices are the lowest since 1904. In fact, feeder sheep and lambs are selling on the market today for less than the cost of production.

These facts mean that early next year there will be a scarcity of fat sheep and lambs at market, and comparatively high prices will prevail. Those who have the nerve to go contrary to the crowd and invest in good, thin but thrifty feeder sheep and Merely the syllables may be acted, lambs at the present low price, will or the entire word may make one have no cause to regret their enterprisscene; this to be decided upon by the ing independence when they come to market them in finished condition.

The concensus of opinion of the best minds in the trade is that since both prices for feeding stock and prospects for fat stock are much better spondingly better. In fact, the whole situation is the reverse of last year. Now is the time to buy, because range conditions are such that most of the sheep and lambs will come to market from the range regions ready for slaughter, while fewer of the feeder classes will be marketed during the remainder of this year, and the supply will not equal the probable Fall demand, so that prices are likely to be

The Use of Peat as a Stable Litter By C. S. ROBINSON, Research Assistant in

Stable litter has four chief uses in the preservation of manure. First, it absorbs the liquid manure and prevents its draining away; second, it absorbs ammonia, one of the most Valuable constituents of manure; hird, it makes manure easier to handle, and fourth, it acts as a deoderizer and makes the presence of manure less objectionable. The first two of se functions are exceedingly important from a financial point of view. In the manure formed by horses, sheep and cows practically 65 per cent. of the nitrogen and 80 per cent. of the lost of this is directly available for land food, while a considerable part of that in the solid manure is not vailable for immediate use, For hese reasons more attention should be paid to the conservation of the louid portion of the manure than is mary in common farm practice. As is well known, ammonia is very valuable for fertilizing purposes and by no means the least expensive ilizing material on the market. able in the vicinity of any ordinary tiffer on account of its nitrogen con-manure pile is sufficient indication tent. Though the total amount of nitroat it is there in large quantides and is escaping into the air to be a complete loss to the farrier. The prime requisite for good litter, then, is that it shall have strong absorbent addition it must be cheap, easy to blain and convenient to handle. The most convenient to handle. The on litter is, of course, ammonia and has no value as a deodorizer or disinfectant. It has some little value in making the manure easier to handle, but when one remembers that the solid portion contains less than one-third of the plant food this one advantage assumes minor importance.

A material which answers more fully all of the above-mentioned specifications is raw muck or peat and. where it is available, is by far the best material for the purpose. In most parts of the state it can be readily obtained and many farms have more or less of it which is considered waste land by the owners. Ordinarily as it comes from the bog, it is mostly water, one hundred pounds of the wet material containing from fifty to ninety pounds of moisture, though in dry seasons this may be considerably diminished. By shoveling over, on dry ground, and exposing to the action of the wind and sun this amount may be reduced to ten or fifteen pounds. The dry material can then be hauled to the barn and stored under some sort of shed for use as required. In this air-dry condition it has extremely high absorbant powers and can take up many times its weight of liquid and large quantities of gaseous material thus drying the manure and making it pulverulent and easier to handle. In addition to these qualities peat itsel, all more or less value as a fergen present in peat is considerable. that part which is immediately availowever, fulfills very available. Peat is also valuable for the humus or organic matter which it ble fitter. It is a poor supplies to the soil and this gives supplies to the soil and this gives another advantage over straw.
