No Bar Against Beans.

Governor Ferris received a letter Tuesday from D. L. Huston, secretary of agriculture at Washington, in which he says the federal department has not issued an order prohibiting interstate shipments of beans affected with anthracnose.

At a recent conference some of the bean jobbers of the state complained that beans so affected had been seized by federal inspectors.

Secretary Huston says that the department has recommended seizures of beans in cans and of cull beans containing considerable percentage of anthracnose beans, on the ground that the beans consisted wholly or in part of a filthy, decomposed or putrid vegetable substance, and were therefore adulterated.

"The bureau of chemistry contemplates issuing a statement announcing the department has not been recommending proceedings against anthracnose beans which are shipped in the same condition in which they are taken from the field," says Secretary Huston, "and that at the present time it does not contemplate beginning proceedings under the drug and food act against such beans, at the same time pointing out that anthracnose beans may be moldy, musty or otherwise decomposed, and if used in canning food products, such as baked beans or pork and beans, may make the products adulterated and liable to be proceeded against under the act."

Birthday Anniversary.

A very pleasant reunion took place at the home of Jay Everett last Saturday and Sunday, the occasion being in honor of the anniversary of the birth of Mr. Everett.

Mr. Everett was born in Superior township, this county, October 2, 1827, and with the exception of a few years spent in the gold fields of California has been a resident of Washtenaw county. He became a resident of Chelsea in 1877. During his residence in this place he has filled a number of public offices among which was supervisor, justice of the peace and various offices in the Baptist church of which he has been a life long member.

Members of the family were present from Seattle, Washington; Boston, Mass.; and many points in the state. The event was one of the most enjoyable ones that the members of the family have ever held.

Farmers' Club Meeting.

Select Seed Beans Carefully.

The Michigan bean crop has been damaged to the extent of $8,000,000 because of wet weather, according to estimates of Prof. V. M. Shoemaker, of the Michigan Agricultural College, and further losses may be expected next year because many farmers will be compelled to plant poor seed. The Professor recommends that farmers select seed from parts of the fields most free from disease, even going so far as to pick out good plants or even pods. Field selection is the best way known of controlling the bean diseases. In selecting from the field, farmers should pick out the earlier maturing plants, and the ones holding their pods up from the ground.

BUNGALOW BURNED

Cavanaugh Lake Scene of Destructive Fire Early Saturday Morning.

The beautiful bungalow of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Glazier, of Cavanaugh Lake, was burned to the ground between two and three o'clock last Saturday morning, and some of the members of the family had a very narrow escape. Nothing of any particular value was saved, as the flames had gained considerable headway when the household were aroused by the heat and smoke.

Mr. and Mrs. Glazier and son, Henry, were the only members of the family at home at the time, and they were sleeping on the porch. Mrs. Geo. P. Glazier, Miss Dorothy Glazier and the grandchild of Mr. and Mrs. Glazier were in Detroit.

When the flames were discovered the entire south end of the house was a mass of fire, and Henry made an attempt to subdue them, but was unable to do so. He had his hair quite badly singed and his only wearing apparel consisted of a pair of pants and undershirt. Mr. and Mrs. Glazier succeeded in saving a few articles of clothing, a desk, one chair and a small basket of chinaware.

When the family retired to the sleeping porch there was a small fire in the grate in the south end of the house and as there was a wire screen in front of the opening, it was thought to be in a safe condition. The fire is supposed to have started from a live coal that fell from the grate to the rug.

The burned home was one that attracted the attention of all who visited the lake and was a magnificent place. The furnishings were in keeping with the house and the gross insurance on the property will fall far short of paying for the furniture, rugs and other articles in the home. The loss is placed at about $30,000, with an insurance of $11,000, which is divided between several companies.

"Health First."

Monday marked the official beginning of Michigan's $100,000 war on tuberculosis. To rid the state of this disease that and nothing less than that is the object of the state board of health. They do not expect that this will be done in two years, or five years, but during the next two years they hope to build up an organization in each county in the state that will be able to carry on the work indefinitely.

The first county to be visited is Wexford. Next in order will be Barry and Ottawa. In each case Dr. DeKleene and his helpers will spend one, two or three weeks in a county trying to interest the people in their immediate health problem.

Every campaign will include an attempt to locate each case of tuberculosis within the county and having nurses visit these patients in their homes to instruct them on how to live and how to get well. It will include moreover a complete sanitary survey of the county, which will be invaluable as an index to what the real health conditions are. Moreover, the physicians of each county will be asked to co-operate with the agents of the state board of health. It is with the aid of the physicians that Dr. DeKleene and his helpers hope to locate the cases of tuberculosis in a given county not only, but it is they who can carry on the work after the state board workers have passed on to another place. During the campaign in a county a specialist in tuberculosis will hold daily conferences with the physicians in regard to the latest and best methods of treating and preventing the disease.

"Health First" has been chosen as the official slogan of this statewide movement. It will be printed on all the stationery of the Division of Tuberculosis, and it appears likely that it will become as well known as the industrial slogan "Safety First."

BAN ON SAGINAW CANINES

Outbreak of Rabies Is Followed By Quarantine Order.

ATROCITIES ARE DISAPPROVED

MORGENTHAU INSTRUCTED TO INFORM TURKEY OF SENTIMENT.

IS NOT OFFICIAL PROTEST

Affect of Note Is Merely to Let Sultan Know That Friendly Relations Are Threatened.

Washington—Ambassador Morgenthau at Constantinople was instructed by cable Monday to inform the Turkish minister of foreign affairs that public sentiment in the United States was so stirred by the reports of the Armenian atrocities that unless the massacres ceased friendly relations between the American people and the people of Turkey would be threatened.

Officials made it clear that this message, though its importance was by no means minimized, did not threaten a break in diplomatic relations. Turkey already has let it be known that she will not permit interference by any foreign power with her so-called "Armenian policy." As American life or property has not been affected the United States government, without submitting an official protest, merely informs Turkey of the effect continued Armenian atrocities would have upon the American people.

Secretary Lansing said Monday that no representations had been made to Germany regarding the treatment of the Armenians by the Turks. It was learned, however, that Ambassador Morgenthau had reported that the German embassy at Constantinople had filed a protest on this subject with the Turkish foreign office. An announcement some time ago stated that the state department had asked Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador here, to bring the matter to the attention of his foreign office.

City Loses in High Court.

St. Johns—The supreme court holds that the city of St. Johns was responsible for an accident to James E. Brown, of Lansing, a M. U. T. motorman. In June, 1913, a roll of sheet steel fell or was pushed on him. It was standing in front of a local store. The city contended that some boys were hunting rats and pushed the steel over. The court holds that the lower court erred and that the city is liable. Brown sustained a broken leg and other injuries which, it is said, will cripple him for life.

ITEMS OF STATE INTEREST

Boy Scouts reduced loss from forest fires from $4,000,000 in 1911 to $23,000 in 1913. J. H. McGillicuddy, of the state game and forestry commission, told Huron county sportsmen at a conservation meeting at Sebewing Tuesday evening. Value of birds as insect destroyers was also discussed.

The son, 1 year old, of Mr. and Mrs. George Monahan, rolled off a couch at his home in Rochester Wednesday. His neck was broken and death was instantaneous. Mr. Monahan is a D. U. R. motorman.

The large barns on the William Olney farm west of Sturgis, occupied by Elmer Miller, were destroyed by fire which started from a threshing outfit. All of this year's crops were also destroyed, but the implements and live stock were saved. The loss is about $20,000, with $15,000 insurance.

WARNS PUBLIC AGAINST STOCK MARKET GAMBLING

SAMUEL UNTERMEYER.

New York—"Never in the history of the stock exchange has the public been threatened by so dangerous a pitfall as that which is now wide open for its victims," declared Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the government in the money trust investigation, Monday, in a letter to Rev. C. F. Reisner, replying to a request for expert information.

Untermyer declared that it is "worse than hopeless" for the average man to try to win a fortune in the stock market and asserted that "in the end they all lose." He characterized the present market activity as "a feverish wave of wild and senseless speculation that has seized the general public, spreading like wild fire from ocean to ocean, and for which the public will, as usual, pay dearly in the end."

BEAN BAN IS FALSE ALARM

Secretary of Agriculture Writes Ferris Assuring Him That Anthracnose Beans Have Not Been Barred.

Lansing—According to Secretary of Agriculture David F. Houston, there has been no order of that department or of the pure food section of the department against anthracnose beans grown in Michigan. "Anthracnose" means having spots on them caused by weather.

Viewed in the light of a letter received Tuesday morning by Governor Ferris from Mr. Houston, the fuss which has been made regarding the Michigan 1915 bean crop being barred, is a mountain made out of a mole hill.

In answer to a request for an interview with Houston, Governor Ferris is told that either October 18 or 25 would be satisfactory, but Mr. Houston then proceeds to tell the governor that he and the bean growers of Michigan are apparently laboring under a misapprehension. He states emphatically that there is no objection to the use of anthracnose beans, canned just as they come from the field. Certain canned beans were seized by the department, Secretary Houston says, because the beans were decomposed, or contained some sort of a sauce made either from decomposed tomatoes or other putrid substance and were consequently deleterious as a food.

In other words, as long as the anthracnose beans in cans do not have a percentage of anthracnose, which causes decomposition and makes them bad food, the government has no objection to their sale.

In the opinion of the governor there is now no necessity of making the trip to Washington.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Fred Elliott, of Hickory Corners, a prominent road builder of Barry county, has started throughout the townships a movement which will result in requesting the supervisors at their coming session to submit to the voters at the spring election the proposition of placing the county under the county roads system.

Death claimed two aged Bay City women Tuesday in crossing accidents occurring in two distant sections of the city. Mrs. Mary O'Meara, 71 years old, was instantly killed at the Midland street crossing of the Michigan Central railroad and Mrs. Ignatz B. Zaleski met death at noon in a similar manner at the Twenty-first street crossing of the Pere Marquette.

Several non-resident wholesale liquor dealers are doing business in Michigan without having paid the $500 license fee and giving the necessary bond, in the opinion of Auditor-General Fuller.

Among the speakers will be Judge Clement Smith, of Hastings; Judge Benedict, of Vermontville; William Farrell, of Ada; Walter Brown, former county clerk, of Orangetown; Mrs. M. E. GERMANY WILL PAY FOR ARABIC LIVES

IMPERIAL GOVERNMENT CONCEDES EVERY DEMAND OF AMERICA.

DISAVOWS ACT OF U-BOAT

Great Diplomatic Victory for the United States—Settlement of All Controversies Seems Probable.

Washington—Germany has completely acceded to the American demands for settlement of the Arabic case.

The imperial government, in a letter presented Tuesday by its ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, to Secretary of State Lansing, disavows the sinking of the vessel, announces that it has so notified the submarine commander who made the attack, expresses regret for the loss of American lives and agrees to pay an indemnity to their families.

Official Washington was both gratified and relieved by the diplomatic victory. The communication delivered by the ambassador pursuant to general instructions from his government expressed absolute confidence that there would be no more submarine controversies between the United States and Germany, for the document reveals that stringent orders have been given to submarine commanders to prevent a recurrence of such incidents as the Arabic.

Since this case embraces the principles for which President Wilson contended in his notes following the torpedoing of the Lusitania and the Falaba, the concessions made by Germany to the American viewpoint were generally regarded Tuesday as paving the way for amicable settlement of all the cases which have threatened severance of diplomatic relations between the two countries.

Count von Bernstorff left here Tuesday night happy over the confident hope that relations between Germany and the United States would continue to improve.

GREEK PREMIER IS OUSTED

King Asks for Resignation Owing to Differences Over War Policy.

Paris—Premier Venizelos has resigned, according to a Havas News agency dispatch from Athens, the king having informed him that he could not support his policies.

The Greek situation is one of the most peculiar and the most menacing that has arisen out of the war. The resignation of Venizelos will necessarily mean the dissolution of the present Greek cabinet and the formation of a new one. But the ministry, which is appointive by the king, must be ratified by the chamber of deputies, and the Greek chamber is radically in favor of Venizelos.

King Constantine has absolutely rejected the diplomacy of his premier whose party was returned to power last spring on a platform which openly advocated support of the Entente powers. It would appear that the king, always a sympathizer of the German cause, has determined to stake everything on the support of that cause, even at the risk of losing his throne. A break between the king and Venizelos is likely to throw the country into revolution.

Lid Ordered For Chicago.

Chicago—Mayor Thompson, in a message Monday night to the city council, announced that the owners of all saloons in Chicago hereafter would be forced to obey the state law, which provides that they remain closed on Sunday.

The mayor ordered the city collector to notify in writing all persons holding licenses for saloons that they must comply with the requirements of the state law.

There are more than 4,000 saloons in Chicago.

ARMS AND THE GIRL

NEWS and GOSSIP of WASHINGTON

Unwelcome Contribution to the Conscience Fund

WASHINGTON.—It took some bookkeeping on the part of the division of public moneys of the treasury department to cover into the United States treasury two two-cent stamps received for the conscience fund the other morning by Secretary McAdoo.

Had it been a single two-cent stamp, probably the conscience fund would not have been enriched by that much. In fact, whenever the sender of a two-cent stamp is known the stamp is returned. For it costs more to change a two-cent stamp into a cash asset, make out certification of deposit and bookkeeping entries than the transaction nets to the government.

The sender of the two-cent stamps was trying to compensate twofold for a childhood crime. The note accompanying the stamps told that the writer had used a canceled stamp, and now sent double the amount of the piffer to square the account. There was no signature. The postmark was much obscured, and could be made out only as from the post office of Huntersville, the state not distinguishable.

Secretary McAdoo was given an object lesson recently in the newer proverb, "It pays to advertise."

He received for Uncle Sam a $300 contribution to the conscience fund from a woman in Maine who wrote:

"I have just learned I can send you money for the conscience fund. I have wanted, for 20 years, to pay the duties for smuggling some clothes for a friend who ordered them and wrote me from America saying she could not afford to have them if she paid the duty."

The woman further explained that she did not declare the clothes for fear that it would please her husband, who had always insisted that all dutiable goods be sent in by express. The duty was $47, and it was sent with compound interest for 20 years to make up any deficiency and to pay also for a cheap watch that had been brought in inadvertently.

Thought Bryan Was Governor of the District

JUSTICE SIDONS, when examining prospective citizens as to their fitness for naturalization, receives some peculiar replies to his questions. One applicant mistook the happy estate of the District of Columbia as traceable to the Pacific views of the former secretary of state.

"How is the District of Columbia governed?" was asked of this applicant.

"By a governor," he answered.

"Well, who is the governor?" queried Justice Sidons, with eagerness.

"Bryan," responded the applicant, unabashedly.

The court thought the would-be citizen should read up a little more on local "politics" and continued his case for six months. Another would-be citizen showed an intimate knowledge of the Newman ouster case, but looked on it as establishing a new precedent.

"How are the district commissioners appointed?" asked the court.

"By the president," responded the applicant.

"Is that all that is necessary before they may enter upon their duties?" was the next question.

"No, they must be confirmed by the United States Supreme court," was the ready response of the would-be citizen.

National Press Club Takes In Two Presidents

THE National Press club has added to its list of highly distinguished members two additional presidents of republics, President Wilson already being a member. The names of Dr. Manuel Estrada Cabrera, president of Guatemala, and of Dr. Alberto Membrillo, president of Honduras, were proposed for membership in the famous organization, and after the lapse of the usual two weeks, during which names of proposed members must be posted in the club, they were added to the rolls, already distinguished by the names of many personages in the United States as well as in foreign countries.

President Cabrera and President Membrillo are well known to many Washingtonians and to members of the club. President Cabrera is particularly well known by the naval officers who belong to the club, as well as to a number of newspaper men and others who are members, and President Membrillo has but recently left Washington after service here as minister to Honduras. While here he was frequently a guest at the club, and President Cabrera has always made it a point to entertain Americans visiting his capital, Guatemala City, many Washingtonians having enjoyed his hospitality.

Both Doctor Cabrera and Doctor Membrillo entered the club not as presidents of republics, but as authors, under which category Woodrow Wilson became a member. Doctor Membrillo is one of the distinguished literary men of Central America. He is the author of several works on law subjects, as well as of several on the Indian antiquities of Central America. Doctor Cabrera has long been an author of books on economic and political subjects, and he is noted as an authority on Central American history.

GATHERED SMILES

THE COUNTERSIGN.

A Scottish territorial was having his first experience of night duty and was feeling a little nervous. The password was "discount."

In the darkest of the small hours a black form suddenly stepped up to him.

"Wh-wh-who goes there?" he challenged.

"Friend," was the reply.

"Advance, f-f-friend and give the d-d-discount."

Exposed to Temptation.

"I hope you will be happy, Mary," said the mistress to her maid, who was leaving to get married.

"Thank you, ma'am. My young man is very steady, considering his environment."

"What does he do, Mary?"

"He's valet to a young millionaire, ma'am."

NO GOAT MILK FOR HER.

"I got his goat."

"I don't see what good that does, when we use cow's milk."

Angel Johnny.

Johnny, with a thirteenth floor, Nailed the baby to the floor; Mother said, with a weary shrug: "Johnny, dear, don't spoil the rug."

A Siding Scale.

"What's your fee for legal advice?" inquired the prospective client.

"That depends," replied the lawyer.

"If you merely want me to tell you what the law allows you to do, I'll charge you five dollars, but if you want to find out how you can do what the law forbids, and get away with it, my fee is from $100 up."

Torpedoed.

Bill—It must be awful to be torpedoed.

Jill—It is.

"Why, were you ever?"

"Sure."

"Where?"

"Up in the country."

"In the country?"

"Yes, by a bee."

Singularly Inappropriate.

Mrs. Jones—Dis hyah new minister am a fine preachah, but he am de leanest an' skinniest young man I ebah see!

Mrs. Black—Yes, an' he done told mah husband, what weighs 240, to be war' les' he should be weighed in de balance an' foun' wantin'—Puck.

Paw's Idea of It.

Little Lemuel—Say, paw, is the snare of a drum a kind of trap?

Paw—No, son. You are probably thinking of the snare of the wily drummer.

QUITE DIFFERENT NOW.

"When I was a boy I used to think there was a pot of gold at the end of a rainbow."

"And now?"

"I have turned my attention from rainbows to mining stocks."

In the Asylum.

"What's the matter with the queer patient over there who is going through such queer antics?"

"He's crazy on the subject of training pets, and he thinks he's trying to make a moon dog bark at a sunfish."

Force of Habit.

"How do you suppose her business admirer proposed to Katherine?"

"How?"

"He wrote to her asking if she would give him the refusal of her hand."

Paw Knew 'Em Both.

Little Lemuel—What is a pessimist, paw?

Paw—A pessimist, son, is a man who meets trouble half way.

Little Lemuel—And what is an optimist?

Paw—An optimist is a man who doesn't meet trouble at all if he sees it first.

Somewhat Different.

"I have just finished reading an account of how they burned heretics at the stake in ancient times," said the moralizer. "Such barbarism would not be tolerated in this enlightened age."

"No, indeed!" rejoined the demoralizer. "The modern heretic is let off with a roast in the religious journals."

The Real Test.

"I don't see how that little Mrs. Grumpy can seem so well satisfied with her husband. He never kisses her or shows her any mark like that of affection."

"Maybe not, but he gives her spending money without her ever having to ask for it."

What He Was Thinking Of.

Mrs. Bacon—I see to obtain absolute quiet a Dutch scientist has had three rooms constructed, one inside another, and has created vacuums between the walls.

Mr. Bacon—Oh, well, every married man couldn't afford to go to that expense, dear.

Dead Letters.

A legislative act, though fair, May oft be far from strong, We pass a law with patient care, And then pass it along.

A Shy Shopper.

"That fellow has been dodging around the hosiery department for hours. Is he a shoplifter?"

"Oh, no," said the floorwalker. "I know the symptoms. He has been ordered to buy some stockings for his wife, and he is trying to catch a moment when there are no women at the hosiery counter."

NOT UP TO DATE.

Father—Well, my boy, I don't know of any way to make a living honestly except by working for it.

Son—Oh! spruce up, dad, and shake those obsolete ideas of yours.

It Would Seem So.

Old Skinner—Yes, I advertised for a handy man to work about the premises. I want a man who doesn't chew, smoke, drink or gamble.

Applicant—And the wages?

Old Skinner—Six dollars a week.

Applicant—Huh! I guess you want a man that doesn't eat, either.

Seeking Solace.

"Bliggins is careful not to let golf interfere with business."

"He has to be," replied Miss Cayenne. "Nothing but good business could take his mind off his bad golf."

Repertise.

"I came to steel," said the funny rat.

"And I spring to embrace you," rejoined the matter-of-fact steel trap, as it gathered the newcomer in.

As She Saw It.

Him—I very seldom associate with anyone who knows more than I do.

Her—What a dreary, lonesome life you must lead!

Familiar Odor.

This is the age of gasoline. A truth we realize full well, As proved by the signs of all men seen And also by our sense of smell.

Facts in the Case.

Mrs. Daab—Are you still keeping boarders?

Mrs. Haah—No; my boarders are keeping me.

Daily Papers.

His Wife—Aren't you ever coming to breakfast, Babington?

He—Yes, yes, dear. I've nearly finished the morning papers now, and I only want to glance at the evening papers that have just come in.

Still At It.

"The British militant suffragettes say they want to work like men for the government instead of smashing windows."

"Yes. They are going, instead, to smash traditions."

FALL SPRAYING FOR THE SAN JOSE SCALE

San Jose Scale—Young Larva Developing Scale; (a) Ventral View of Larva Showing Long Sucking Beak; (b) Dorsal View of Same Somewhat Contracted, With First Waxy Filament Appearing; (c) Dorsal and Lateral View of Same Further Developed; (d) Latter Stage of Same Showing Matting of Waxy Secretions to Form Young Scale. (From Bureau of Entomology, United States Department of Agriculture.)

(By C. S. MILLER.)

Until lately it was supposed that there was but one season for spraying for the scale, and that was in the spring before the buds opened. Now, however, experiments have taught that in the fall, just after the leaves fall is even a better time to spray.

There are a number of different kinds of sprays on the market, and some of them in more convenient shape than ever known for those who dwell in towns and suburbs and have only a few yard trees. But for the farmer and fruit grower, nothing has ever been found that combines cheapness and effectiveness in the degree that the well-known lime, sulphur and salt mixture does.

True, it is a little troublesome to make, but not unduly so when we consider how cheap it is and how easy to procure the ingredients anywhere. Formulas vary some, but one that has been given a thorough test contains equal parts by weight of three materials, 15 pounds each of lime, sulphur and salt, being taken for 50 gallons of water.

Slake the lime with hot water and when boiling pour in the sulphur, which has been dissolved in a little water, and stir it well into the lime, then add the salt.

Boil together for an hour, when the mixture will have become a very dark red. Then add water to make up 50 gallons of spray, and if possible, apply it while warm.

If it stands more than 24 hours, it is best to bring it to boil again before using. This wash can be cooked survives the winter, and it is therefore soft and easily killed by contact with oils and acids.

A small proportion of fruit buds is sometimes killed by this wash, but the general benefit received by the tree far outweighs this loss. The lime and sulphur wash is not only deadly to the scale but to all forms of insect life and is valuable as a destroyer of fungous germs.

It is a fact that a tree thoroughly sprayed in the fall enters upon the winter free from insects and germs and in the best possible condition to begin its growth in the spring.

When trees are very badly infested, they should be sprayed again in the spring, for it is impossible to exterminate every individual scale at one application.

It has been estimated that a single pair of the San Jose scale will at their rate of increase multiply into a million from June, when they begin breeding, to November, which is about as late as they breed in the middle latitudes.

Effect of Great Kidney Remedy Is Soon Realized

I feel it my duty to let you know what Swamp-Root did for me. I was bothered with my back for over twenty years and at times I could hardly get out of bed. I read your advertisement and decided to try Swamp-Root. Used five bottles, and it has been five years since I used it, and I have never been bothered a day since I took the last bottle of it. I am thoroughly convinced that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root cured me and would recommend it to others suffering as I did.

My husband was troubled with kidney and bladder troubles and he took your Swamp-Root and it cured him. This was about five years ago.

You may publish this letter if you choose.

Very truly yours,
MRS. MATTIE CAMFIELD,
R. F. D. No. 2
Goberville, Mich.
Subscribed and sworn to before me this 13th of July, 1909.

Applicant for College Chair Had to Confess His Ignorance of One Modern Language.

"You aspire to become our professor of modern language?" asked the president of the board of trustees of the Milledgeville college.

"Yes, sir," was the respectful answer of the applicant.

"Können Sie Deutsch sprechen?" asked the trustee sharply.

"Jawohl!" came the answer of the applicant, not to be taken off his guard thus easily.

"Parlez-vous français?" demanded the interrogator, giving the applicant no time to recover.

"Oui," said the applicant. The president beamed with pleasure upon his fellow members of the board.

"It seems," he said, addressing no one in particular, "that the gentleman is eminently qualified for the post."

"But," turning again to the applicant, there is one more question that I must ask you. What is the simplest equivalent of fear as expressed in the monkey language as translated by Professor Garner?"

Realizing that he had failed in the supreme test, the applicant turned sadly away.

"About the war—"

"About the war—"

Those who in the past admired the broad, white expanse of milady's back, when she was attired in evening gown, are due to be disappointed this year. The gowns aren't to be cut any higher—they're to go lower—but backs are to be decorated with ornaments—gold and silver lace, reversed necklaces and the like. It is to be sincerely hoped that they will not carry this reversal to excess.

Dictionaries are not "text books" and consequently do not come within the law that compels book concerns that want to sell to public schools in this state to file prices with the superintendent of public instruction, the attorney general's department ruled Monday. The big book concerns are in a rate cutting war over the price of dictionaries and some of them appealed to the state officials for a ruling that dictionaries were not text books within the meaning of Michigan law.

Deputy Game Warden Otto Rohn caught four Jackson men with the carcass of a fox squirrel in their possession at Bruin Lake, Lyndon township, and took them before Justice Doty of Ann Arbor. As the killing of fox squirrels is prohibited by law, it cost the four a total of $60 for their sport.

Eleven persons lost their lives and fifteen were burned or injured by fire and explosions during September, according to the monthly report of State Fire Marshal Winship. Five deaths were caused by the careless handling of gasoline and kerosene, three by dynamite, and one, a child of four, was burned playing with matches.

Meryl, the 8-year-old son of Albert Moeckel, of Waterloo, who was in the accident with his mother on the west Guthrie crossing of the Michigan Central on Saturday, September 25, is recovering from the injuries which he received at that time. Unless some unforeseen complications set in he will probably be able to get around in about ten days. He is yet at the home of his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Faist, on Orchard street.

SYNOPSIS.

Confederate Sergeant Wyatt of the Staunton artillery is sent as a spy to his native county on the Green Briar by General Jackson. Wyatt meets a mountaineer named Jem Taylor.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

"Things has changed sum since then. Nobody lives ter hum any more. It's sure hell in Green Briar these days—somebody is gettin' kilt every day or two. The cusses travel in gangs, murderin' an' burnin' on one end o' the county to the other." He spoke in an even, drawing voice, with not the slightest show of emotion, as though telling an ordinary bit of news: "D—d if I know which outfit is the wus—the Yanks or the Rebs."

"Which are you with?"

"Who, me?" He paused in his bolting of food, and gave vent to an unpleasant laugh. "I rather reckon it would puzzle the Lord Almighty ter find that out. I don't give a whoop fer neither o' 'em. I'm fer ol' Jem Taylor, an' it keeps me toler'ble busy tendin' ter his affairs, without botherin' 'bout no government."

"Then your name is Taylor?"

"I reckon it has been for 'bout sixty years. That's a slew o' Taylors over along Buffalo creek, an' som' o' 'em are Yanks, an' a parcel o' 'em are Rebs, but they don't git ol' Jem ter take nary side. At that, I'm gittin' in the fight—I hanker arter. Naturally, I'm a peaceful critter, if th' cusses let me alone."

"Quieted down some over there lately, huh?"

"Huh! That's a regiment o' blue-coats at Lewisburg, an' a few cavalrymen ridin' ter pikes. Don't amount ter a hill o' beans as fer as the boys are concerned. All they got ter do is go further back in the hills, an' be a bit more keeful. I reckon, young man, ye'll find plenty o' deviltry going on in Green Briar. If ye ever git out that away, Wal, that's all that is fer us ter eat, an' I'm goin' ter take a snooze."

He closed the door, fastening it securely with a wooden bar, and stretched himself out on the floor. The room was dark, as the only window was tightly boarded up, and using my bundle for a pillow, I lay down also. In a short time his heavy breathing was evidence enough that Taylor slept. Slowly my heavy eyes closed, and I lost consciousness.

The sun was below the mountain ridge, when the heavy hand of the old mountaineer shook me into sudden wakefulness. With nothing left to eat we were not long in preparing for departure, I endeavoring vainly to get my silent companion to converse, being rewarded merely by grumbled and evasive answers. Finally I desisted in the attempt, content to follow his lead. Taylor, astride his sorrel, with gun resting grimly across his knees, rode straight through the brush, away from the pike, down the valley of a small stream. In crossing, the horses drank their fill.

"How about the valley road?" I asked as we climbed the opposite bank.

The leader glanced back at me.

"This yere way is nigher, an' a darn sight mor' quiet," he answered gruffly. "Soldiers been marchin' over the pike all day. Mout be all right fer yer, if ye've got a pass—but I ain't got none. We'll hev' good 'nough ridin' in 'bout a mile mor'."

"You are aiming for the cut-off?"

"I be—yer do kno' sumthin' of this yere kinty, I reckon, but ye've got more education than eny Cowan I ever hooked up with afore. Yer don't talk none like moutin' folks."

I drew a quick breath, sensing the return of suspicion.

"That's true," I admitted readily. "You see I went to school at Covington; they were going to make a preacher out of me."

Taylor stared into my face, his vague suspicion seemingly gone.

"Well, I'll be d—d—a preacher."

He rode on into the dusk, chuckling, and I followed, smiling to myself, glad that the man's good humor had been so easily restored.

We were fed at a hut back in the foothills, where an old couple, the man lame, were glad enough to exchange their poor food for the late news from the army, in which they had a son. Then we rode steadily to the south. When dawn came we were to the west of Waynesboro, in broken country, and all through those long night hours scarcely a word had been exchanged between us. We camped finally in the bend of a small stream, where high banks concealed us from observation. There was little to eat in our haversacks, but we munched what we had, and Taylor, his eyes on the horses, broke the silence.

"I reckon the critters don't need more'n a couple hours' rest," he said. "They ain't been ridin' nary hard, an' I'm fer gittin' through the gap durin' daylight—the road ain't overly good just now."

"Across the mountains? Is there a gap here?"

"Then road ter Hot Springs is 'bout two miles below yer. I can over it ten days ago an' I reckon I kin find my way back. It's 'bout forty miles from thar ter Lewisburg, mostly hills, but a good trail. I know folks at Hot Springs who will take good keer o' us, onct we git thar."

We rested, dozing, but neither sound asleep, for nearly three hours. What ever might be in Taylor's mind, the lonely night had brought to me a new thought relative to my companion. The fellow was evasive, and once he had frankly lied in seeking to explain his presence in the valley, and the reason for his secrecy of movement. By now we were decidedly at cross-purposes, each vigilantly watching the other—Taylor in doubt as to what the bundle contained, which I never permitted out of my grasp, and myself as deeply interested in gaining possession of a packet of papers, a glimpse of which I had caught in an inside pocket of the mountaineer's coat. His mission, whatever it might be, was secret and dangerous. Of this his ceaseless vigilance was proof.

The light of a dying day still clung to the western sky when our wearied horses bore us into the village of Hot Springs. It was like a deserted hamlet, few houses appearing inhabited, and the shop windows boarded up. Taylor, glancing neither to right or left, rode straight down the main street, and turned onto a pike road, leading to the left. A mile beyond, a frame house, painted white, barely visible through the deepening dusk, stood in a grove of oaks. The mountaineer turned up the broad driveway, and dismounted before the closed door. Almost at the same moment the portal opened slightly and a black face peered out.

CHAPTER III.

The Body on the Floor.

Taylor stood at the foot of the steps, pausing in uncertainty.

"Is that you, Sam? Is Mister Harwood yer?"

I instantly straightened in my saddle. Harwood? What Harwood, I wondered—surely not Major Harwood of Lewisburg, my father's old friend! What was it I had heard about him a few months ago? Wasn't it a rumor that he was on General Ramsay's staff? And the daughter—Noreen—whatever had become of her? There was an instant's vision before me of laughing eyes, and wind-blown hair, a galloping horse, and the wave of a challenging hand. She had thus swept by me on the road as I took my mother southward.

"I don't peer fer to recollect no such name, sah," replied the negro, scratching his wool thoughtfully. "I done reckon as how you got the wrong house."

"No, I reckon not," said the other drily. "Git 'long in, an' tell him Jem Taylor is yer."

The door opened wider.

"Suah, I know you now, sah. Just step right 'long in, the both of yer. I'll look arter them horses. You'll fin' Massa Harwood in the dinin' room, sah."

I followed the mountaineer up the steps, and into the hall, utterly infirferent as to whether my company was desired or not. It was not yet dark, but a lamp burned on a nearby table, and a cheerful fire glowed at the farther end. But a brighter glow of light streamed from a room beyond, and determined to miss nothing, I was so close behind Taylor that my quick eyes caught what I believed to be a swift signal of warning to the man within. This, however, was an impression born 'om my own suspicion, rather than any real movement, for Taylor too—but a single step across the threshold, and stopped, leaning on his gun. The single occupant sat upright, before him the remnants of a light repeat, his hand toying with a spoon, and his eyes shifting from Taylor's face to my own. He was heavily built and broad of shoulder. The face would have been hard, but for a gleam of good humor in the eyes, and the softening effect of gray hair, and a gray mustache. The man had aged greatly, yet I recognized him instantly, my heart throbbing with the possibility that I also might be remembered. Yet surely there was no gleam of recollection in the eyes that surveyed me—and why should there be? I had been an uninteresting lad of fifteen when we last met. This knowledge gave me courage to meet that searching glance, and to lift my hand in the salute due to an officer of rank.

"Ah!" said Harwood in deep voice, "a soldier from the valley?"

"Yes, sir," respectfully, "the Sixty-fifth Virginia."

"How does it happen you wear artillery uniform?"

Expecting the question I answered unhesitatingly.

"They'd lost so many gunners, some of us were detailed to help. Recruits are coming in now."

"What was your battery?"

"Staunton Horse artillery, sir."

"Stationed?"

"At Front Royal—that was our winter camp."

He nodded, tapping his spoon against the table, favorably impressed by my prompt replies. His keen eyes sought the face of the silent mountaineer.

"You know this man, Taylor?"

"Wal, I can't exactly say that I dew, major," he said drawlingly, shifting his feet uneasily. "He says he's a Cowan, from over on Buffalo creek."

"A Cowan!—you mean—"

"No, he don't claim fer be none o' ol' Ned's brood—his mar's a widder woman. They ain't no kin, I reckon."

Whatever thoughts might have been in Major Harwood's mind were concealed by an impassive face, as he sat there for a moment in silence, gazing at the two of us.

"No doubt you did what you believed to be best, Taylor," he said at last quietly. "We will talk it over later. You are both hungry enough to eat, I suppose? Draw up some chairs and Sam will find something. No objection to remaining here over night, Cowan?"

"I'd be glad to get on, sir, but my horse is about used up. The roads have been hard and we have traveled rapidly."

"Well, there is plenty of room, and you are welcome. This house," he explained, "belongs to a friend of mine, who had to leave the country—too Yankee for his neighbors. I find it rather convenient at times. Ah, Sam, that rasher of bacon looks prime—I'll try some myself."

The three of us talked upon many subjects, although Taylor said little, except when directly addressed, and I noted that few references were made to the war. That Harwood was in the Federal service I had no doubt, although he was not in uniform, and, if this was true, then it must be also a fact that Taylor was a Union spy. The meeting here had not been by chance, although a mystery involved the hidden reason why I, a known Confederate soldier, had been encouraged to accompany the mountaineer to this secret rendezvous. At last the meal ended and the major pushed back his chair and motioned Sam to clear the table.

"You two men are tired out," he said genially, "and you had better turn in and get a good night's sleep. We'll all of us ride on into Green Briar tomorrow. I'll talk with you a minute. Taylor, in the parlor, before you go; but Cowan does not need to wait. Help yourselves to the tobacco. Oh, Sam! show this soldier up to the back bedroom and see he has everything he needs."

It was clearly apparent that Harwood desired a private word with Taylor and so, after deliberately filling my pipe, I rose to my feet, stretching sleepily. The black returned with a small lamp in his hand and led the way up the broad stairs. A moment later I was left alone in a small room at the end of the upper hall with one window, so heavily curtained as probably to render the light invisible from without. The door was securely latched, but there was no lock. Then I was not being held a prisoner.

After some minutes I extinguished the light, and looked out of the window. It was quite a drop, though not necessarily a dangerous one, to the ground. Those dim outlines of buildings were probably the stables, where I would find my horse. With no guards the trick of getting away unobserved would be easy enough, and I knew the road sufficiently well to follow it safely. But I desired to learn first what these two men were actually up to. Such information might prove more important than my investigations in Green Briar. I stole across the door and opened it noiselessly. There was no one visible in the upper hall, and I leaned over the stair rail gazing down, and listening. A light still burned within the dining room, but there was no sound of voices, or of movement.

The silence continued, and I began to cautiously steal passage down the carpeted stairs, crouching well back against the side wall. Little by little I was able to peer in through the open door—the chairs were vacant; there was no one there. The gleam of the lamp revealed a deserted room, the table still littered with dishes. What had become then of Harwood and Taylor? Were they sitting beyond in the darkened parlor? I crept to the half-closed door. The room was black and silent, although I could perceive dimly the outlines of furniture.

Something—some vague sense of mystery, of danger, gripped me. I felt a strange choking in the throat, and reached for the revolver at my belt. It was not there; the leather holder was empty. My first sensation was fear, a belief I was the victim of treachery. Then it occurred to my mind that the weapon might have fallen from the open holster as I rested on the bed—a mere accident. At least I would learn the truth of that dark room. I stepped within, circled the overturned chair, and a groping foot encountered something lying on the floor. I bent down and touched it with my hand; it was the body of a man. The whole truth came to me in a flash—there had been a quarrel, a murder, unpremeditated probably, and the assassin had escaped. But which of the two was the victim? An instant I stood there, staring about in the dark, bewildered and uncertain. Then I grasped the lamp from the table in the other room, and returned holding the light in my hands. The form of Major Harwood lay extended on the floor, lifeless, his skull crushed by an ugly blow. Beside him lay a revolver, its butt blood-stained. Beyond doubt this was the weapon which had killed. I picked it up wonderingly—it was my own.

I Picked It Up Wonderingly. It Was My Own.

HEIRS TO DEAD GREATNESS

Victor and Louis Napoleon, "The French Pretenders," Celebrate Their Birthday Same Week.

Both the Napoleon brothers, Victor and Louis, famous for their mirth-provoking act entitled "The French Pretenders," celebrated birthdays recently on the same week. Louis, the younger, passed the half-century mark, while Prince Victor Napoleon, who would sit on the imperial throne of France if the republic hadn't destroyed that piece of furniture, was fifty-two. Louis was Victor's heir to the pretenship until about a year ago, when a son was born to Victor and his royal spouse, Princess Clementine of Belgium.

Victor is a grandnephew of Emperor Napoleon I. He lives in Brussels, and in 1910 married Clementine, the third daughter of King Leopold I of Belgium. The birth of another Bonaparte was hailed with great delight by the few followers of the pretender and the pretenderess, and the christening of the infant Prince Louis "King of Rome" was marked by imperial pomp and eclat. The ceremony took place in the palatial premises of the proud papa in the Avenue Louise. Most of the imperialists of France were there, and did not crowd the buildings.

Prince Louis, the younger brother of the pretender, is apparently a confirmed bachelor. He served in the Russian army for many years, with rank of Lieutenant general, but now resides at Geneva, where the Napoleons own a fine chateau.

Message on a Man's Scalp.

We hear much about secret writing, but have not yet heard of anything to beat the simple cunning of one Histiaeus, a Greek, at the Persian court in the fifth century, B. C., who wanted to send a private message to a friend at Miletus. He took a slave with bad eyes, and, under pretense of curing him shaved his head.

The message was then written on his scalp, unknown even to him, the hair allowed to grow again, and the slave sent off to Miletus with a letter, which all could read, saying how well he had been cured. And the friend, with whom the plan had been arranged, only needed shaving materials to uncover the secret message.—London Chronicle.

New Yorkers Are Milk Drinkers.

Milk is becoming the favorite drink of residents of New York city, according to recent statistics of the health department, and the number of it-censed saloons is decreasing. It is reported that the consumption of milk has increased in the city 50 per cent in ten years.

The Power of Thought

By H. M. EGBERT

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)

Dr. James Dyce looked down on the unconscious figure upon the bed. The man had ceased to mutter and toss in his delirium, and now lay in that stupor which was itself the crisis. In eight hours he would be dead or on the road to recovery.

Beside the doctor stood the white-capped nurse, almost as silent and still as the figure huddled among the sheets and pillows. The mental crisis through which the two watchers were painfully struggling was almost as acute as the physical crisis of the typhoid victim.

It was not a severe case, but the man's system, weakened by years of debauchery and months of poverty, seemed unable to fight against the attack.

Doctor Dyce beckoned the nurse outside the room. They stood face to face together. There was on the doctor's a look of grave inquiry.

"That is the man who was your husband?" he inquired.

"Who is," she answered.

"And you refused to marry me because of him?"

"You are unfair, Charles," she answered, in low, passionate protest. "It is because he is what he is that I know my duty is toward him. He recognized me. He will come back to me. I cannot desert him, in spite of all."

"You love him!" sneered Dyce, and then suddenly caught her in his arms.

"Molly!" he whispered, "you are never going to ruin our two lives for that man!"

She let him kiss her, but she withdrew from his arms and stood still facing him, still pale and expressionless.

"I cannot do wrong toward him, much as I love you," she replied. "But—oh, Charles, it would be a mercy for all of us, and none would be better off than he if he were to die."

The doctor, who seemed to be restraining himself by a mighty effort of will, now became the professional man again.

"We will try atropin," he said. "I believe it will give him his fighting chance. I shall mix the prescription myself. It is a dangerous drug to use, but it is a case where heroic measures are needed."

Lay in That Stupor—Which Was Itself the Crisis.

"Yes, doctor. At what time should it be administered?"

"In four hours, when the crisis is imminent. When do you go off duty?"

"When the crisis is over."

"You are wearing yourself out, Molly," began Doctor Dyce. Then: "Well, we must forget ourselves, with all our hopes and fears, and do our duty."

"She sighed. "Yes, doctor," she answered in a mechanical manner.

Doctor Dyce ate his supper in his office. He made his rounds of the patients, bandaging, adjusting, while his mind was working on a totally different matter. At last he stood alone before his medicine chest, where the deadliest drugs were kept, dispensed only under his personal supervision. There he faced his problem squarely.

Dyce had little belief in conventional morality. He loved Molly, and she him. The man on the bed in the little room was useless to himself, useless to the world. Was it right that two lives, or even three, should be blighted so that the man should live and cumber the earth?

He had mixed the medicine before his mind was made up. He remembered afterward that he was working in the same automatic manner, and his brain, cool and singularly clear, seemed animated by an infernal will, and dominated the situation completely. Slowly he took down a bottle labeled macinute and set it upon the table side by side with the atropin.

They were two drugs of equal power, but very different power. An infinitesimal dose of the atropin would exercise a certain stimulus on the red blood corpuscles which might pull the patient through the crisis of his disease. An equal dose of the macinute, too small for post-mortem detection, would dissolve the corpuscles and bring about death. In a healthy man an equal dose of either would produce no effect whatever.

Doctor Dyce might have told himself that it would not be he, but the fever that would kill the drunkard above. But he was too honest for that.

"I am going to kill him," he said, and dropped a drop into a tumbler of water. From this he took two drops and let them fall into the medicine. He shook the bottle. He went upstairs.

"Two teaspoonfuls in an hour, nurse," he said to Molly. "Call me if he shows signs of a change for the worse. He ought to pull through, however, with this atropin."

He looked down at the face of the unconscious man. There had been not the slightest change; he was breathing slowly and the almost imperceptible pulse had hardly varied a beat.

He went into his room and lay down on the sofa. He could not sleep, but, awaiting the summons, he reviewed his action and justified it, if not in the sight of God, at least in that of man.

It was nearly two hours later when the summons came. There was a light tap at the door. Dyce sprang to his feet and opened it. Before him stood the nurse.

"Come at once!" she whispered tensely. "I am afraid—something is happening to him, doctor."

He hurried up the stairs and into the room. A single glance showed him that the map was passed. There was hardly a flicker of life. At that instant Dyce was afraid for the first time in his life. He was afraid that the dying man would open his eyes and look at him. He felt his hands trembling. Molly, beside him, clung to the foot of the bed and stared at her husband.

But the dying man gave no sign of recognition. Slowly the remnants of life faded out. The breathing grew deeper and slower. Once it stopped, then it began again. It stopped. There followed a long-drawn sigh. The man was dead.

And Molly, suddenly overcome, fainted clean away.

Dyce raised her in his arms and carried her into the nurses' room. He told the night superintendent what had occurred. "She has been overworking," he said.

"She wouldn't leave the patient, doctor," answered the woman. "She had your permission, sir."

"Quite right," said Dyce. He worked over Molly until she began to revive. And now he had again that singular dread of meeting human eyes. He could not meet Molly's eyes when at last they opened and fixed themselves on his. Though the girl did not suspect, it almost seemed as if she had known, in that dim land to which her swoon had taken her.

And, though they were alone, Dyce did not dare to speak of anything but his professional duties.

"You must go to bed now, and we will talk in the morning," he said. "You have done all that you could do. You could not save him, nor I. The atropin came too late. I should have given it yesterday, but I was afraid."

She rose without speaking and left the room. Dyce went back into his own room. And, flinging himself down on the sofa, he felt the paroxysms of deadly fear take hold of him.

He was a murderer, though none knew of it but himself. He alone must bear that inner brand of Cain for the rest of his life. At that moment even the gain of Molly seemed singularly inadequate in the place of the soul which he had lost.

A murderer! For ever and for ever that word would be burned into his heart and brain. The years would pass with Molly, and she must never know, she must never discern the cause of his inner unrest. A murderer! And for her sake!

He saw how mad he had been. At the time he dropped the drug into the glass he had sincerely believed that he was acting according to the laws of human duty. Now he felt the burden of that higher law which says: "Thou shalt not kill!"

He could bear it no longer. He rose and began pacing the floor. But suddenly he remembered that he was not wholly safe from detection, not so long as that tell-tale bottle remained beside the atropin upon the table.

He snatched it up. Then his hand fell to his side, and he was staring in wild amazement at the bottle. It was uncorked. It had never been opened! The automatism of his hand had been guided, not by his cool and calculating brain, but by some higher power. Perhaps it was God! He had given the sick man atropin after all, and not the deadly alkaloid. He had never touched the waxed stopper of the macinute!

Suddenly he fell upon his knees and poured forth his heart in thanksgiving. He had not prayed for years; now he prayed for mercy, that the evil thought might be purged from his soul even as the deed had been.

When he arose he was transfigured. In an ecstasy of happiness he hardly heard the door open until Molly stood on the threshold.

"O thank God it is all right!" she cried. "I was afraid—I was afraid—you cannot guess what I feared!"

"And now you fear no longer?"

"Your face, Charles! Upstairs it was so clouded, and horrible thoughts came to me; but now I know it is all right. I dared to mistrust you. Can you forgive me, I thought—"

"I thought it too," said Dyce, "but the thought was only a thought, Molly. It is gone now, with all the past. Molly, dear, will you kneel down with me and pray that no such thought shall ever trouble us again?"

IN STERLING LIVES A GIRL

Who Suffered As Many Girls Do—Tells How She Found Relief.

Sterling, Conn.—"I am a girl of 22 years and I used to faint away every month and was very weak. I was also bothered a lot with female weakness. I read your little book 'Widom for Women,' and I saw how others had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and decided to try it, and it has made me feel like a new girl and I am now relieved of all these troubles. I hope all young girls will get relief as I have. I never felt better in my life."—Mrs. JOHN TREHAULT, Box 116, Sterling, Conn.

Massena, N. Y.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I highly recommend it. If anyone wants to write to me I will gladly tell her about my case. I was certainly in a bad condition as my blood was all turning to water. I had pimples on my face and a bad color, and for five years I had been troubled with suppression. The doctors called it 'Anemia and Exhaustion,' and said I was all run down, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me out all right."—Miss LAVINA MYERS, Box 74, Massena, N. Y.

Young Girls, Heed This Advice.

Girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, headache, backache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should immediately seek restoration to health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

His Turn Coming. "Why do you go out rowing with that man? He thinks it's funny to rock the boat." "I've heard so," replied the athletic girl. "I took a dislike to him the first time I saw him, and I'm just dying for an excuse to hit him over the head with an oar."—Washington Star.

Why That Lame Back?

Morning lameness, sharp twinges when stooping, or a dull, aching backache, each is a cause enough to suspect kidney trouble. Get after the cause. Help the kidneys. We Americans overdo, overeat and neglect our sleep and exercise, and so we are becoming a nation of kidney sufferers. 75% more deaths from kidney disease than in 1880. Is the story told by the 1910 census. If annoyed with a bad back and irregular kidney action, modify the bad habits and use Doan's Kidney Pills.

A Michigan Case. August C. Selig, 430 Pearl St., Lansing, Mich. "Excessive stooping and heavy sitting brought on pains in the small of my back. I got so bad that I couldn't stoop and doing such attacks. I almost collapsed. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me. I took them and continued use made a cure that has lasted for five years."

Brilliant Conception for Winter Wear

Whether they came from the brain of some brilliant American or blossomed out of the long-trained genius of a French creator, the coat and dress and hat which here make up an exquisite costume proclaim the highest art. From the crown of the head to the tips of her toes the model pictured is correctly appareled in the choicest offerings of the season.

The dress is made of a soft satin gathered into bands of a supple plush at the bottom, and an overskirt of the plush which falls in folds from the waist down. As in nearly all dresses of pile fabrics the bodice shows a combination of chiffon and satin with heavier fabric.

The coat is the shortest of the three fashionable lengths from which one may choose. It is designed with a jacket which falls to the lower edge of the belt. The belt is noticeably narrow and inconspicuous.

The sleeves are full and gathered to a soft cuff. A very clever and original touch appears in the cuffs. They are merely bands of the plush, edged with satin-covered cord and extended into a pointed end. This end is slipped through a narrow band of the plush which forms a slide like the end of a bow of ribbon.

The neck is finished with one of the many new high collars, but it is not close-fitting. It is finished with a tie of the satin-covered cord. Pearl buttons having a dark rim are used for fastening the coat from neck to waist line. The skirt portion is straight and gathered into the belt at the sides and back.

The last word in shopping bags and walking boots finish the details of a chic and entirely correct ensemble.

All neckwear apparently closes in front. The net chemisettes, however, frequently close in the back.

Two Little Demi-Season Coats

Designed for wear during the autumn months, in the colder climates, these two little coats will serve throughout the winter in the warmer parts of the country. They are made of faille silk, poplin, or similar silks woven with a heavy nap, but may be developed in any of the soft firmly woven satins or in plain supple woolen goods.

The coat of rose-colored faille at the left is made with a long bodice with a short plaited-skirt set on it. There is a wide belt of velvet, which hooks at one side. The plait in the skirt portion are omitted at the front, leaving a plain panel which also fastens at the side.

The sleeves are full and plain, finished with a turned-back cuff made of the same material as the coat. The round neck is finished without a collar of the material, but a pretty collar of cream-colored cluny lace adorns it. Flat buttons in a lighter shade of rose than the coat, provide the fastening down the front.

The odd and smart little garment at the left appears to be a combination of both dress and coat. A box-plaited skirt portion is set on to a long waist. A plain skirt is set on over the plaits at the sides and back and is cut in one with the short belt across the front. This portion is lined with a light thin silk and finished about the edges with a piping.

The coat fastens at the left side with hooks and eyes and is finished with soutache braid put on in a Van Dyke pattern. The sleeves are plain and moderately full, with close-fitting cuffs overlaid with a heavy lace collar to match finishes the neck.

Two new models in bonnets are shown with the coats. That at the left is of soft cream-colored silk gathered in about the face with several rows of shirred tucks. It is gathered in to the shape of the crown by circular rows of the shirred tucks at the back.

The little bonnet of velvet at the right is made with a plain brim and puffed crown of velvet, and prettily trimmed with ribbon. Both bonnets fasten with chin straps.

THINGS FOR FRUIT CLOSET.

Pickles, catchups, preserves and jellies must be made during the season of fruit and vegetables if we are well supplied for our winters needs.

Green Tomato Catchup.—Boil unpeeled green tomatoes until soft, then put them through a colander. To six quarts of tomatoes add a pound of sugar, one pint of vinegar, one tablespoonful of whole black pepper, a cupful of salt, one small onion chopped, and a teaspoonful of ground cloves. Simmer all together until the mixture is like marmalade, then bottle and seal while hot.

Cucumber Oil Pickles.—These are especially well liked by lovers of olive oil. Slice very thin a hundred medium size cucumbers without peeling, add two large onions also sliced; cover with a cupful of salt and let stand twelve hours. Drain and pour over a pint of olive oil, a fourth of a pound of white mustard seed, the same of black mustard, two tablespoonfuls of celery seed and vinegar enough to cover the cucumbers. Put in cans and seal.

Watermelon Marmalade.—Cut the seeded fruit into pieces and to every pound allow a pound of sugar and the grated rind and juice of half a lemon. Boil and then simmer slowly, stirring to keep from scorching. This marmalade should be put up in glasses. Dainty desserts may be made by serving a glass of the marmalade; surrounded with whipped cream.

Green Tomato Mince.—Chop together twelve green tomatoes and twelve sour apples, add three cupfuls of suet, one cupful of sirup, one cupful of vinegar and one pound of raisins, three tablespoonfuls of flour, one tablespoonful each of cinnamon, nutmeg, salt and a teaspoonful of cloves. Cook twenty minutes and seal.

Spiced Plums.—To seven pounds of blue plums allow a pint of vinegar, four pounds of brown sugar, two tablespoonfuls of cinnamon bark in pieces, a tablespoonful of cloves, and the same quantity of pieces of nutmeg, all tied in a bag. Cook the spice, sugar and vinegar together, then add plums and cook until tender.

Beware of too sublime a sense Of your own worth and consequence. The man who deems himself so great, And his importance of such weight, That all around in all that's done Must move and act for him alone, Will learn in school of tribulation, The folly of his expectation.

SYMPOSIUM OF SANDWICHES.

Sandwiches are ever popular, and one never tires of reviewing the different combinations of filling for them.

Celery, Nut, and Pepper Sandwiches.—Chop several stalks of celery, the tender inner ones, sweet green pepper in the same quantity and pecan meats; mix with salt and lemon juice, add a small amount of cream cheese and spread on thin slices of buttered bread.

Fruit Sandwiches.—Bake bananas in their skins, peel and sprinkle with lemon juice and sugar, mash and spread on thinly sliced buttered bread. Grate over a little pineapple and put the two slices together.

Rye Ham Sandwiches.—Chop fine some cold boiled ham and some crisp pickles, using one-fourth as much pickle as ham. Mix with a mayonnaise dressing and spread on buttered rye bread.

Raisin Sandwiches.—Chop equal amounts of seeded raisins, walnut meats and add tart jelly to mix. Spread on buttered white bread. These are especially good to serve with a cupful of tea or coffee.

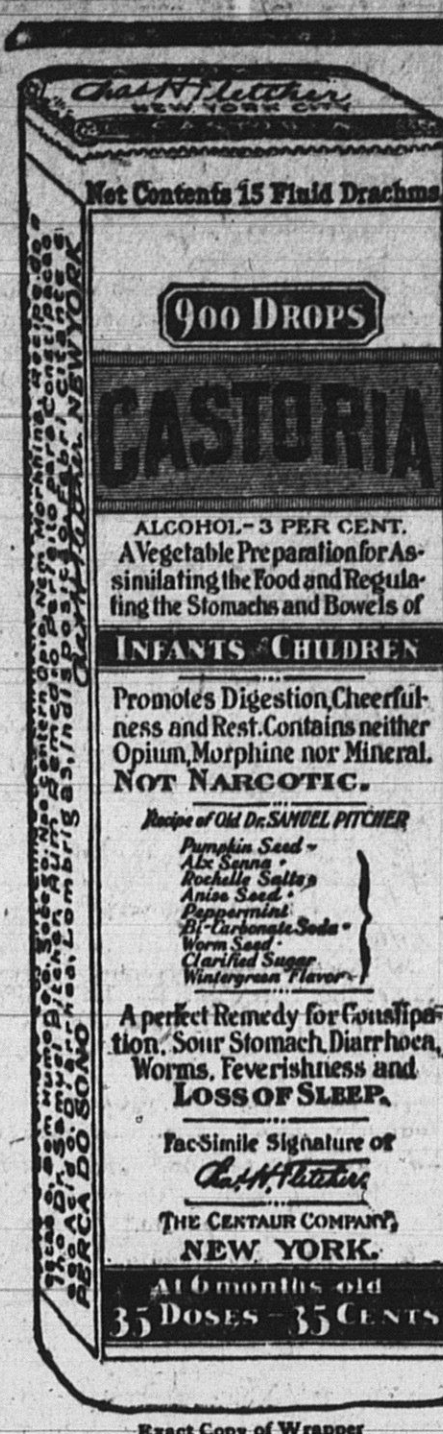

Cheese Sandwiches.—Cut thin slices of cheese, put between buttered bread and fry in a hot frying pan in a little butter until well browned on both sides. Serve as Sunday-night lunch.

Graham Sandwiches.—Spread graham crackers with boiled frosting sprinkled with nuts and raisins chopped. Put them together as one does bread sandwiches.

A pretty sandwich for children made from white and Boston brown bread is called the kindergarten sandwich. Use a doughnut cutter for cutting the bread and slip a brown circle into the white slice and a white circle into the brown. Spread with butter and serve plain or with cheese filling if so desired.

Lightning Made Fountain. Lightning struck a telegraph pole, the upper part of New York City a few weeks ago and turned it into a fountain. Investigation showed that the lightning had ruptured a water main beneath the pavement and that the path provided by the tubular pole was the only means of escape for the leaking water. Since, to shut off the main would have deprived a large district of its water supply, the prompt fountain was allowed to run during the night, and the main was repaired next day.

Strict Neutrality.

Little Betty was in the habit praying for her naughty playmate, Tommy. One evening she omitted to mention him. Asked by her mother why she did so, the child replied: "He was howling to me today. He flew mud in my face. So I won't ask God to bless him."

Her mother tucked her in bed, and then went into the next room, leaving the door open.

She heard Betty toss restlessly about for five or ten minutes. Then there was a snuffle; then a sound of getting up, and, finally, a furtive voice: "Please, God, you can't bless Tommy if you want to—but you needn't do it on my account."

BREVITIES

ANN ARBOR—This city has purchased $13,750 worth of motorized fire apparatus, which will consist of a combination hose and engine, and a motor service truck.

MANCHESTER—There are good prospects of a band being organized as over 20 names of young men who will join have been secured. They will practice at the club rooms.—Enterprise.

GRASS LAKE—Lynn Shaler and John Fuller have discontinued their business at Los Indios, Texas, owing to the Mexican disturbances there and will return with their families to Grass Lake.—News.

ANN ARBOR—Twenty-one men have come to Ann Arbor with a view of entering the university, must give up their hopes and aspirations unless work is found for them so they can pay for their board.

JACKSON—A Bronson man drove his automobile up to a garage here Thursday and carried a lighted cigar while having his gasoline tank filled. Right there he learned a lesson which he will remember for a long time. When he woke up he found his hands burned and the cushions on the machine in flames. A fire extinguisher from the garage saved the machine.

YPSILANTI—Business men of Ypsilanti and prominent farmers in Ypsilanti township will unite in a road bee October 12 to put in good shape the stretch of highway between the west limits of Ypsilanti and the Country club, which motorists declare is the worst piece of road between Detroit and Chicago. Dinner will be served to all workers at the Country club.

YPSILANTI—Postmaster Richard L. Owen has been notified that the contract for the construction of the new postoffice building at this place has been awarded to J. S. Wahlman, of Ishpeming, Michigan, the work to be completed within sixteen months from September 22, 1915. The contract price is $49,330. Light-colored limestone will be used for all exterior stone work except where granite is required. The new building will be about 70 feet square.—Record.

MANCHESTER—Next week a permanent dam will be built at the outlet of Wampers lake to regulate the flow of water; lowering the water in the lake in the fall and raising it late in the spring for the benefit of cottage owners and bathers. When the water is high in the early spring the ice breaks up and shoves back upon the roads doing considerable damage. The road on the east end of the lake has been greatly improved the past season and it would be too bad to have it injured. The cottage owners and Mr. Nisle will pay the expense of the dam. Last week the outlet was cleaned out and the water rushed through into Mud lake, raising the surface many inches.—Enterprise.

YPSILANTI—Two Detroit boys, Anthony Lieder, aged 17, and Alexander Liskev, aged 18, were drowned Sunday afternoon while rowing across the Huron river, two miles west of Ypsilanti. A party of eight boys came out from Detroit in the morning to gather nuts. They followed the river until they found an old boat, which tempted three of the party to cross the river. They were on their way back, when one of the boys rocked the boat and all were thrown into the water. None could swim, but George McCabe managed to keep afloat by clinging to the boat until he was rescued by his companions on the shore. The drowning was witnessed by the twin brother of one of the boys.

GRASS LAKE—At a meeting of those citizens interested in a city park and play ground, the report of the committee on available ground was made by E. M. Sanford and L. E. Dwell. Two of these propositions were discussed at length and thought to be worth while. The plot of ground on South street, south of the M. E. church and a strip of land from the M. C. railroad to the lake front, each had its good points. The latter was accompanied by a very liberal offer by Mr. Dwell. Therefore a committee on permanent organization, consisting of Mr. Croman, Mr. Sanford and G. W. Foster was appointed to report at a meeting to be held at the town hall next Tuesday evening.—News.

Monroe has returned to the sensible column once more, and has gone back to central standard time. There was too much confusion and the citizens became disgusted, and would like to meet the man face to face who talked the common council into making the change to eastern standard time.

QUESTION CLEARED UP.

Chelsea Readers Can No Longer Doubt the Evidence.

Again and again we have read of strangers in distant towns who have been cured by this or that medicine. But Chelsea's pertinent question has always been "Has anyone here in Chelsea been cured?" The word of a stranger living a hundred miles away may be true, but it cannot have the same weight with us as the word of our own citizens, whom we know and respect, and whose evidence we can so easily prove.

"Relieved Her Rheumatism"

That is what Mrs. E. A. Boyd of Corning, N. Y., says she accomplished for her baby's leg, just by rubbing it with Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh.

This was another of the "hard cases" for which this liniment is noted. The child's leg was so terribly afflicted, it would not reach the floor. The Balsam of Myrrh put it back in shape.

For Cuts, Burns, Bruises, Sprains, Strains, Stiff Neck, Chilblains, Lame Back, Old Sores, Open Wounds, and all external injuries.
