Farmers' Institute.

Despite the cold weather the farmers' institute which was held in the the town hall last Saturday was fairly well attended. There were three sesions, but most of the program for the morning session was postponed until the afternoon.

-Mrs. C. E. Foster delivered an ex cellent paper on "How to Make Poultry Pay." The state speaker, E. M. Moore, handled his subjects at each session in an able manner. Miss Flora Buell, of Ann Arbor, delivered a fine address on the subject of "Co-operation Between Parent and School." At the evening session Prof. Webster Pearce, of the Ypsilanti Normal college, spoke on the "Value-of an Edu-

The music was furnished by local talent for all three sessions, including the pupils of the third grade and the Chelsea high school glee club, under the direction of their instructor, Miss Hazel Speer. Mrs. P. M. Broésamle, Miss Olive Taylor and Mrs. Emerson Lesser rendered a number of instrumental selections in a creditable manner. The male quartet, W. L. Walling, P. M. Broesamle, E. Benton and Wilbur Riemenschneider took a part on the program. G. W. Pfeston, the county association secretary, gave several recitations. At the business session N. W. Laird was chosen as the conductor for the institute next year.

Mrs. Christina Katherine Bauer.

of everything, had, during her illness, made her a present of a pair of pinoculars. She had been able to while away many tedious hours with them watching the traffic on the drive and boats on the river.

Now she slipped into a negligee and slippers quietly, not to disturb her sleeping sentinel. She took up the binoculars and moved to the window. Intellectually Murdered.

Randolph Bourne, an editor of the New Republic, in an address recently said American colleges are institutions in which youths are "intellectually murdered," and the efficiency system upon which universities operated by the curious behavior of a man who has resulted "in a card-index sysmaterialistic." This indictment is true as to the field, but there are many institutions that are not sothose that consult the spirit more than the intellect, and that construct purpose and aspiration rather than devote themselves to learning and knowledge. The fact is that the end of education will never be reached or mankind be substantially advanced until the spiritual dominates the intellectual in the training of the youth. It is hard for scholars to understand that the intellectual is materialistic, but it is .- Ohio State Journal.

Educator's Opinion.

I believe that organized emotion can never take the place of brains; that Yale's first duty in preparing American citizens, whether for peace or war, is to adhere to rigid standards of discipline and scholarship and well-developed sense of proportionate values.

If our students have these things as a basis, the more they prepare themselves for the possible requirement of military service the better. Without them the spirit of preparedness may become a danger; with them it is a safeguard and a blessing.-President Hadley of Yale University.

Perhaps the best reason why fruit There is nothing so destructive to should be grown on the farm is that the welfare of the home and to the health and enjoyment of the family. The farm orchard is not usually a direct money-making enterprise, though it may sometimes be a source of small

A farm orchard or fruit garden, if planted to suitable varieties and well cared for, tends to give a continuous and regular supply of fruit. Even though the quantity actually used in the average farm home could be bought' more cheaply than it could be raised, it would not take the place of the homegrown supply. The purchased supply would usually be obtained spasmodically; in a great many instances it would not be obtained at all. The recognized usefulness of fruit in the diet emphasizes the importance of insuring

Locating the Orchard.

No fruit will thrive on poorly drained soil. Very sandy and heavy She-Oh; no. Every time mother clay soils should be avoided if possitalks about the wedding father says ble. The sandy loams, loams and clay loams are preferred. Fruits require fairly productive soils. A measure of fertility commonly and fittingly used in this connection is a "soil that will grow a good crop of corn."

The subsoil is fully as important as the surface soil. It should be deep and of such a texture that water will soak into it readily. It is partly for this reason that heavy clay soils are undesirable. Then, too, the roots penetrate a fairly friable subsoil much more readily than they do a very hard

In most sections an orchard should be located on a relatively high spot. This is largely to avoid as much as possible the danger of injury from late spring frosts and also to insure better drainage. But there will be many instances where there is no elevated place on the farm; and, if there is, it may be too far away from the buildings to be convenient. Some things may need to be sacrificed for the sake liable nurseries, and do business year of convenience.

Preparation of the Soil.

Having selected the place where the orchard is to be planted, the preparation of the soil to receive the trees is gext in order. If the land is in soil, it is better to break it a sufficient length of time in advance of the planting to permit the sod and grass roots to decay.

Before the trees are plasted, the soil should be harrowed or cultivated until it is as well pulverized as it would be for planting corn or growing grain. This at least should be done over a strip several feet wide where the rows of trees are to stand. The advantages of having the soil finely pulverized when the trees are set in the ground will amply repay the cost of doing it.

Trees for Planting.

The quality of the trees that one plants has very much to do with the for other reasons, nearness of points results which follow. It is not possible to so describe a good tree that be disregarded. ### CONVENIENT MANURE PIT FOR THE FARM

SHALLOW MANURE PIT IS PRACTICAL.

In nearly every case the farmer will find the snallow manure pit the most convenient and practical. The sectional drawing shows the construction of such a pit of slightly larger size then will be needed on the average farm, but the type of construction is much the same as for the smaller ones. In building this size of a basin use the team with a plow and scraper to dig the rat. Trim up the walls with a spade and put in the framework for the concrete forms.

Space these cleats 14-16 inches on the incline. Corrugate the bottom every 6 inches with the edge of a 2 by 4 inch piece to make a V-shaped corrugation If a shed roof is required, insert in the top of the concrete walls while still soft several half-inch bolts two and one-half inches long to which the roof timt ers may be fastened.

SCOFFED AT BALLOON IDEA

It is of record that the first employment of aeronautics to observe the positions of an enemy was made during the French revolution. It was a Doctor Coutelle who produced hydrogen gas from the decomposition of water. He had been interdicted the employment of sulphuric acid in this preparation, as there was a lack of sulphur for the making of gunpowder.

Doctor Coutelle was ordered to put imself at the disposal of General Jourdan, who commanded the army of the Sambre and Meuse. On presenting himself to Duquesnoy, a commissioner of the convention, that dignitary rose in his wrath, exclaiming: "A balloon, a balloon in the camp! You look to me like a suspect. I am going to begin by having you shot!"

Coutelle returned to Paris and his balloons were afterward put to use at Bonn, at Coblenz and at Andernach. At the last named place General Bernadotte, the ancestor of the present reigning house of Sweden, was invited to go up in a balloon. "No," responded that careful man, "I prefer the road of the asses."

There was a school of aerostation at Meudon which Bonaparte closed after his return from Egypt. As nothing could prevent other nations from using like air-flyers, the balloons, he claimed, might become an embarrassment to all the armies, without any special advantage to the French army. "This," says Le Cri de Paris, "was certainly singular reasoning on the part of a man who was not destitute of intelligence, a kind of reasoning that has since often permitted our enemies to employ before us inventions due to the genius of the French

RUSE NOT A GREAT SUCCESS

Why Indianapolis Woman is Somewhat Peeved When Subject of "Preparedness" Comes Up.

Mention "preparedness" to a certain business woman of Indianapolis, and the argument is started. It happened just like this:

She had saved to the point where she decided to invest in real estate. She bought a ten-acre tract on the South side within the city limits and planned extensive improvements as soon as more money could be saved.

Meanwhile, with a view of adding to her little hoard, she planted the tract in sweet corn. When the corn was nearing the ripe age, the woman saw covetous glances cast in the direction of her crop, and the "safety-first" or "preparedness" plan was adopted. She built a little house in one corner, and the finishing touch, a chimney, was to fool the neighbors into believing the

Aid to Reforestation.

The work of reforestation will be greatly facilitated by the recent invention of a machine by which seedlings may be placed in the ground with great rapidity. The new machine has been in use by the United States government engaged in the work of planting some deforestated regions in the far West, and so far it has every indireplacing a smaller building which is cation of proving a success. It is drawn by two horses and operated by three men, one driving while the other two handle the plants, seeing that they are properly fed into the machine. A furrow is made as the machine passes along and there is an indicator, which may be set according to the character of the trees being planted, and it accurately gauges the distance between the plantings. According to Mr. Rogers's estimates, there will be available for the building of good roads from the automobile license fees this year $1,000,000. The trunk line fund will add $550,000 and the expense fund $30,000 more, which will make a total of $1,580,000 of state money, not counting in the federal appropriation, which will jump these figures $145,000 at least and possibly $291,000 more than that. The $145,000 is due and payable June 30 of this year, while $291,000 is the federal appropriation for the next fiscal year and Mr. Rogers hopes to get that in

Besides the 1,300 miles of road the state money will build, the state highway head believes that practically 300 miles will be built by townships and road districts over which the state will have practically no control.

While the federal money is only expected to pay for 75 miles of the total good roads, its contribution will be the most important work of the entire year. Under the plans of Mr. Rogers, the federal money will bo used entirely to fill up gaps in the trunk lines as originally laid out by the legislature. By filling up 75 miles of gaps, the authorities expect to make continuous trunk lines totaling nearly Invite Discussion With United States to Prevent Hostilities.

COMPULSORY SERVICE BILL

All Youths in Nineteenth Year Would Have to Train Six Months.

Washington-The senate military committee reported favorably a bill framer by a sub-committee creating a military and naval citizen reserve force based on universal military training and service.

While the committee report does not indicate a belief that congress will act on the measure at this session, the bill brings to a definite head the universal service discussion of the last few months and offers a specific plan on which public sentiment can crystallize .

The bill requires six months' training without pay for all youths in their nineteenth year. POLICY UNCHANGED

Commanders of Submarines Given Wide Discretionary Powers-First Uncensored Dispatches Tell of Development of the Crisis.

Copenhagen, Feb. 13.-Little hope or expectation prevails in Berlin that war with the United States is avoidable or that a modus vivendi reconciling the policies of the two governments can be found.

There now is a desire on the part of the authorities and a vast bulk of the people to avoid actual hostility in any way consistent with the general lines of the present submarine policy, but only in such a way.

Accordingly, instructions were given, so the Associated Press has been reliably informed, to submarine commanders before they started on their February mission, to take the safe side when neutral vessels, particularly American, were in question, whenever possible. Enemy merchantmen, when recognized as such, were ordered to be sunk on sight, but neutral merchantmen were to be warned when such action, in their judgment, was consistent with the object of the campaign and the safety of their own ships.

Ultimate Break Certain.

It was realized, however, after the prompt and resolute stand taken by President Wilson that these orders could only be palliative and only defer, not avoid, an ultimate break. Also, that if President Wilson stood by his announcement that the destruction of American lives or ships would be regarded as an act of hostility, a casus belli must come sooner or later-prob-

Moreover, it was the discretionary nature of the instructions to submarine commanders, who were informed that while the careful course toward neutrals was recommended and desired, they would no longer be subjected to punishment for departing from their former procedure of warning, if they found this advisable.

Not to Modify Plans.

It is considered that the only possibility of the avoidance of hostilities and so far as could be judged from the mermann, the German minister of foreign affairs, and other officials before has announced that relief work will KAISER HOLDS AMERICANS the Associated Press correspondent's departure from Berlin, there was no probability that Germany would give way this time or abandon the ruthless campaign now started. German-American relations again and again have passed through crises apparently almost hopeless, but this time the crisis is more difficult than out of the impasse.

Development of Crisis:

From a neutral cable office it now is possible to tell the story of the development of the present crisis on which the most rigid censorship has been applied in Germany. To the observer in Berlin the ap proach of the crisis had been plainly and definitely evident since the rejection of Germany's peace overtures. Information as to Germany's submarine war and the form it would take was received by the Associated Press almost on the day of Ambassador Gerard's speech on German-American good relations.

A week later it was stated that a full decision on the situation had not been reached, but that the campaign would not be launched until after further consultation with Germany's allies and the receipt of certain information from Count von Bernstorff.

The final decision on an out-and-out submarine campaign of a so-called ruthless type apparently was taken at the grand Austro-German conference at German headquarters on the German emperor's birthday, though the Associated Press heard the statement that submarines departing several days earlier for their stations were provided with contingent orders for this eventuality. Censor Clamps on Lid.

The censorship, however, shut down tightly on any definite statements or predictions of the approaching crisis. All dispatches going into the subject in detail, however, were either suppressed entirely or references to coming events censored out of Ambassador Gerard, of course, was aware of the current gossip and probably was able to advise the state department of the possible turn in events. But he was given no intimation from official sources.

government therefore were faced with the announcement of an accomplished fact when on the afternoon of January 31 Doctor von Bethmann-Hollweg. the imperial chancellor, gave out the news that a relentless submarine campalgn would begin immediately and read to the committee the text of the memorandum on the prohibited zone and the note to the United Statesdocuments which reached the American embassy only several hours later. by the German people as a whole.

was, therefore, no opportunisex trouble, for any negotiations to prevent the crisis or an attempt to stave off the coming break between the two countries. There was no chance this time for discussion with the emperor, such as served to save the day at the time of the Sussex

Nothing could be done except to report to Washington the developments which appeared in the press of the world before the embassy dispatches hau started from Berlin and await the anticipated explosion.

This came in the shape of a rupture of relations earlier than even Americans had expected, and certainly with a promptness which astonished, and perhaps even dismayed, the German official world, prepared though it was for energetic American action:

Aims at the Germans. Just what results the German experts expect from the U-boat campaign is uncertain, but in conversations in German naval circles the belief was expressed that if it succeeded in raising the amount of tonnage sunk per month to 1,000,000 tons, besides having a deterrent effect on 3,000,000 tons of neutral shipping plying to British ports, the campaign would effect its object and force England to consider

This, it was stated, would have to be effected by not more than twothirds of the available submarines, since, owing to the nature of the work and of the submarine, the boats must spend at least a third of their time in port refitting and repairing or on their way to and from the cruising grounds.

Misled by Dispatches. The German government's attitude

in endeavoring to induce Ambassador Gerard to sign a protocol reaffirming the old-time treaties with the United States regarding mutual protection of nationals in case of hostilities, and the hints of possible detention of American newspaper men as hostages, were undoubtedly influenced by alarmist dispatches from the United States regarding treatment of German citizens and property there. As soon as reassuring advices were received from the United States, and as soon, too as the German government saw that the attempt to negotiate a protocol re-ratifying the treaty of 1799 with additions and expansions, had failed, it gracefully receded from its position, and nothing further was heard of newspaper men as hos-The protocol, which Count Mont gelas, head of the American department of the German foreign office, submitted to Ambassador Gerard on the part of Forein Secretary Zimmermann containéd besides a formal re-ratificaion of the treaty provisions of 1799 and 1828 regarding mutual treatment of nationals caught in a belligerent country in the case of war, a number of important additions and expansions.

It provided that merchants should be allowed to continue their businesses and retain their residences until the end of the war unmolested; that no law affecting the validity of contracts should be applied to Germans in Americae or to Americans in Germany, and that all patents should be inviolate-a question of importance in view of the high value if not the indispensability | not know. of certain German patents in the manufacture of munitions and explosives.

Would Bar Ship Seizure.

Quite as trenchant in its bearing on the pending problems was the provision of an instrument which Ambassador Gerard was asked to sign specifying explicitly that not only enemy property as such should be exempt from seizure or restrictions in its use beyond those applying to all property but that enemy ships in ports of the opponent should not be seized during the war or forced to leave port unless to sail under safe-conduct and guaranty of exemption from selzure by the allied belligerents for a home port. Provision also was made for a safe in the same country. The protocol forbade explicitly any internment or restrictions upon the liberty or movement of enemy nationals within the limits of the opponent conduct when it was necessary to move ships from one port to another

It also provided for confirmation of certain articles of the Hague conventions, particularly as to treatment of the personnel of enemy merchant ships captured or caught within an opponent country. Ambassader Gerard's refusal to sign the treaty after he had ceased to perform his ambassadorial functions or to telegraph for instructions unless he war permitted to use code led Count Mentgelas to hint that a refusal to sign the protocol might materially affect the status of Americans in Germany and the privilege of departure mentioned specifically, of the American correspondents whom Ambassador Gerard desired to take out with him and whose fate apparently was thought to carry particular weight in American public opinion.

The Americans in Berlin and, so far as known, throughout Germany, have during the days of tension following the rupture of diplomatic relations been treated without hostility and even in most cases with marked courtesy. There have been no outbreaks of anti-American feeling or mob spirit, such as occurred occasionally at the outset of the war against the English and nationals of other hostile countries, and except for the uncertainty and alarm regarding eventualities in connection with their plans to depart from Germany the Americans have had up to the present little cause for dissatisfaction as to their treatment a Pontiac auto factory to Chicago

As soon as he finished with the will of General Washington he began the restoration of the will of Martha Washington, returned by Mr. Morgan to Fairfax county. The elder Mr. Morgan having had the Martha Washington will in his possession, and having bound and preserved it carefully, it was in much better condition than that of the first president and gave Mr. Berwick far less trouble. Further, it contains but eight pages.

Notwithstanding Mr. Morgan's care of Martha Washington's will the Virginians apparently are yet somewhat resentful that the document was kept from them so long. The text of the will cription over Martha Washington's Satur in Fairfax court house is as fol-

This omission may have been due to the fact that the last three words on that particular page are "City of Washington." It is easy to surmise that having just written "Washington," and engrossed in thought, the Father of his Country naturally mistook the name of the city for his own and thought that he had signed as in the preamble he undertook to do.

Visitor to Long-Buried Pompeli Finds

Pompeii is the deadest of dead cities, aving been thoroughly and completey killed by Mount Vesuvius. Nevertheless, it is growing as fast as some enterprising town with a busy board of trade. Instead of building up new and desirable districts in Pompeli, they dig tuem out. The town can go on growing for quite a while yet if the appropriation for excavation holds out. There is something exceedingly saddening and depressing about Pompeii. Even the approach seems to have been artistically designed to lead up to the grand effect. The way runs between the sea on the right hand and an old and battered countryside on the left, with half-ruined, rum-down villas set
