With Your Money

Our Nation

is in need of more money to push this war to a victorious end. It requires vast sums of money to equip our army and navy and to place them in the field and to provide for them while they are waging war. To meet this need—

The Second Liberty Loan Bonds

are offered to the amount of $3,000,000,000. It should be clearly understood that in purchasing these bonds that we are only loaning our money. We are not giving it outright. These bonds are as good as gold. Our Government promises to redeem them in 25 years, but if one purchases the bonds and then later on needs the money, they can be sold at full face value at any time. Nearly every store in the land will accept them the same as they accept "Greenbacks" now. Then on top of this you get interest on the amount you invest in the Bonds at—

DROVE AUTOMOBILE IN FRONT OF CAR

George Miller, of Manchester, Forgot to Stop, Look and Listen Monday Forenoon.

Notwithstanding that there is a bell and a moving signal to mark the Main street crossing of the D. J. & C. Ry., there came near being a fatal accident there Monday morning, when an automobile driven by George Miller, of Ann Arbor, accompanied by his brother Frank, of Brooklyn, drove directly in front of an eastbound car. George Miller received injuries to his head and left arm, while his brother got off with but a slight injury to one of his hands. Both men were able to be about after the doctors finished dressing their wounds. They were on their way to attend the funeral of the late Chauncey Staffan. The auto was badly wrecked.

Koffberger-Schoen Wedding.

In the presence of a few immediate relatives, Mrs. Hannah Koffberger and Rev. Albert A. Schoen, pastor of St. Paul's church, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. and Mrs. G. Eisen, 210 Washington street, at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, October 17, 1917, the ceremony being performed by the bride's father.

The bride's gown was taupe satin trimmed with fur, and she carried a bouquet of cream rosebuds.

Before the ceremony Mrs. Adolph Eisen, of Detroit, played the Lohengrin wedding march, and during the ceremony, "Oh, Thou Sublime, Sweet Evening Star." After the ceremony she sang "Perfect Love."

Immediately after the ceremony a wedding supper was served.

In the evening the ladies of St. Paul's church gave a reception in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Schoen at the parsonage, which was attended by a large number of their friends.

They left later for Sandusky, Ohio, to visit relatives, and after November first will be at home to their friends.

A Bold Hold-up.

A bold hold-up was pulled off at 1:50 o'clock Tuesday morning between the Michigan Central passenger station and Main street, and the victim was relieved of a roll which amounted to $127.45.

About midnight a man with a crew of fifteen laborers for the Michigan Central at Francisco, stopped off here as the train upon which they had traveled from Buffalo did not stop there.

The men were of all nationalities and the one who was robbed was a foreigner. After wandering about the station for nearly two hours he started up the track toward Main street and was followed by a couple of the crew. He received a blow in his mouth and his shirt was torn to secure the cash which was in a pocket on the inside. The yells let out by the victim aroused many of the residents in the vicinity of the scene, some of whom soon arrived on the ground, thinking that some one had been hit by a train which passed just before the victim of the hold-up commenced to yell.

Three of the men disappeared. Night telegraph operator, A. K. Collins, called Deputy Sheriff Cooper, who notified the near-by towns to be on the look out for the robbers but at the last reports they had not been apprehended. The crew was taken to Francisco over the D. J. & C. line early Tuesday morning.

Red Cross Notes.

Declaring that efforts to disparage the work of the American Red Cross are being made in various sections of the country as a part of an anti-patriotic propaganda, General Manager Harvey D. Wilson Friday telegraphed all Red Cross division managers to begin a nation-wide campaign to trace the movement to its source and combat it.

"It is evident that rumors and innuendos, critical of and calculated to embarrass the Red Cross, are being industriously circulated as part of an anti-patriotic propaganda," the telegram reads. "Insofar as such statements or questions are merely efforts to obtain information they should be earnestly and sincerely met, but many of the stories, utterly unwarranted in fact, emanate simultaneously from too many different parts of the country to be merely accidental."

A QUARTER CENTURY

Happenings in Chelsea Twenty-five Years Ago This Week.

The dynamo at the electric light station burned out and the village was in darkness.

The four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America was appropriately observed by the citizens of Chelsea.

More smutty faced people in town Tuesday than had been seen for a long time. The cause was an eclipse of the sun.

The hardware firm of Hummel & Whitaker had been dissolved and the business was being carried on by C. E. Whitaker.

The market: Wheat, 68c; rye, 50c; beans, $1.35 to $1.60; potatoes, 50c; apples, 50c to 75c; hay, $8; onions, 70c; corn, 25c; eggs, 17c; butter, 18c.

PROCLAMATION.

The United States Navy's second call for men has reached Michigan. It is a call that should be considered seriously by every citizen.

The first call for sea fighters to combat the menace that has claimed a heavy toll of American lives and property came shortly after the United States entered the war. The Navy called for approximately 200,000 men to join the 50,000 who at the outbreak of war went forward to meet the enemy.

The United States answered as it should. Men arrived at the Navy Training Stations by the thousands. The Navy machinery had to turn with lightning speed. A steady stream of untrained men poured into the stations and a steady stream of well drilled fighting men poured out, seaward. Every available foot of ground at these points was covered with tents and temporary buildings to accommodate the recruits, but finally the strain became so great that restrictions had to be placed on recruiting. Michigan was limited to thirty men a week and for a while these had to be sent to their homes until room had been made for them at the training stations.

Now the Navy has caught up, and by increasing accommodations for recruits is now handling the work swiftly and efficiently.

Michigan has been notified that the Navy is ready for more of its men; that there are places in the first line of defense beside the 6,000 or more red blooded sons of Michigan now serving under the Stars and Stripes on the high seas.

I am informed by Ensign D. J. D. Coleman, the Officer in-Charge of this district, that not only is the Navy the best paid branch of the military service, but that the opportunities for advancement are unexcelled.

The Navy depending upon the patriotism of Americans to enlist in this time of need and not being able to get men by the Draft, I, Conrad Lehman, president of the Village of Chelsea, do issue this proclamation, calling upon the citizens to consider the Navy's call, to enlist or if they cannot enlist to urge eligible young men to take their places beside Michigan's first 6,000 who are now sweeping the seas to safeguard the passage of American soldiers and others who must go to foreign lands. Every citizen should lend a hand. Every citizen should do his best. The Navy, the only branch of the service that has seen action in this war up to this time, the Navy that bounded forward to crush the enemy the moment Congress said "War," is calling for men, and Michigan must answer as stoutly and as gallantly as she did when the first call sounded.

CONRAD LEHMAN,
Village President.

"Hell Morgan's Girl."

Dorothy Phillips, one of the most beautiful and talented women on the screen, will lead the company presenting "Hell Morgan's Girl" at the Princess theater on Thursday, October 25, when that photographically perfect Bluebird picture will afford entertainment for all classes of screen devotees. Sensational in the extreme the photoplay pictures a story of love and adventure in San Francisco, at a time just preceding the dreadful earthquake and attendant fire events that had their beginning in "Sailors' Rest," on the Barbary Coast, and ended amid the sorrows and despair in the Presidio, whither thousands fled. True love is the impelling motive of it all—a love story that will hold the interest unwavering to its end.

HELD LIBERTY LOAN MEETING AT SCHOOL

Addresses Were Made By Professors Hobbs and Effinger of Ann Arbor.

A good sized audience of men and women interested in the second Liberty Loan were present at the meeting in the high school building, Monday evening. N. S. Potter, jr., chairman of the committee for Sylvan, Lima and Lyndon townships presided. Messrs. Harbourn and Magner gave several guitar and mandolin duets, and J. Howard Boyd gave a vocal solo, Miss Nina Belle Wurster, accompanist.

Prof. W. H. Hobbs, of Ann Arbor, county chairman of the National Security League, was the first speaker, and gave a scathing arraignment of the unpatriotic attitude of many residents of the county, and also paid his compliments to the Washtenaw Post, which has just been barred from the mails, giving it credit for much of the disloyalty manifested in the county. He also told of the reasons why we are in the war.

John I. Effinger, dean of the literary department of the U. of M., told of the Liberty Loan, of what it would mean if the amount asked for is not subscribed and of the effect that it will have on our enemies if it is over-subscribed, as was the first loan.

Helber's Paper is Banned From Mails.

Ann Arbor Times News: Postmaster H. J. Abbott received an order from Washington, D. C., Friday morning, barring the Washtenaw Post from the mails, as second-class matter. The order was signed by the third assistant postmaster general.

The Washtenaw Post is a German paper, printed in German, and edited by Eugene Helber. From the very beginning of the war it has been keenly pro-German in its sentiments, and as this country drew nearer and nearer a declaration of war, his editorials, both English and German, became offensive to loyal American citizens. After war was declared Mr. Helber printed a great many editorials, alleging that Wall street interests had dragged this country into the conflict.

Last week Mr. Helber was notified to present himself before the third assistant postmaster general in Washington, at 2 o'clock the afternoon of October 9, to show cause why the order admitting his paper to the mails as second-class matter should not be revoked. He was given the privilege of sending a representative or of putting into writing these reasons and he chose the latter course. In this statement he made a plea for sympathy, when he called attention to the fact that he was "an old man, over 70 years of age," but evidently that statement together with his plea at the end to "Forgive me" did not impress the third assistant postmaster general. Thursday Mr. Helber's paper appeared as usual. Possibly he had a feeling that it would be his last issue, for the edition contained the following editorial, translated from the German, which might well endure as his swan song:

"There are strenuous times ahead for the German press. The day is not far distant when we, as loyal citizens, must make ourselves ready to prove our loyalty before the court. In the meantime, endure, keep your mouth shut, and hold out."

Chauncey L. Staffan.

Chauncey L. Staffan was born in Chelsea, February 26, 1873, and died at Pontiac, Thursday, October 11, 1917, after an illness of several months duration.

He was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Staffan, and until a few years ago had made his home in Chelsea. Later he made his home in Ann Arbor. He was united in marriage with Miss Edna Wahr, October 11, 1908, who with one son, and his parents survive him.

He was a member of the Elks, the Oigarmakers' Union and the Knights of Columbus.

The remains were brought to the home of his parents Friday and the funeral was held from the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Monday forenoon, Rev. Father Considine celebrating the mass. Interment at Mt. Olivet cemetery.

The Young People's Society of St. Paul's church will hold their quarterly business meeting on Friday evening, October 19, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Pilemeyer, of Lima.

$10,000 for an Old Bicycle

Edward A. Dix, of Chicago, took a "flyer" by trading an old bicycle for Lot 9, Block 21, C. T. L. & I. Co.'s second addition, located on what is now Broadway, between 9th and 10th Aves. He almost forgot the transaction until suddenly he was besieged by buyers, who woke up to the fact that Gary was fast becoming an actuality instead of a possibility. Today Mr. Dix could cash in on his lot for $10,000.

From $300 to $65,000

The property at the corner of 9th and Broadway was first offered for $300 and refused. A few months later, it was again offered for $800, and again refused. Just a year later, the Schlitz Brewing Co. was glad to get it at $14,000. Today the ground value alone is conservatively estimated at $65,000.

How Fortunes Were Made Overnight at Gary, Indiana

400 Per Cent in One Year

On August 31, 1909, Emil Woldt sold to Fred Waldron Lots 11 and 12, Block 26, in the town of Tolleston, now a part of Gary, for $1,600. On Sept. 8, 1910, Fred Waldron sold the same lots to Anna Mulcahy, of Chicago, for $8,000, a clear profit of $6,400 or 400 per cent within a year's time.

These Points

we believe, must impress you as they did us. They are the features which will have the greatest influence in causing values to double and treble. They give Ojibway the supreme position of advantage in this district. Think it over. Then select your lot early.

THE UNITED STATES STEEL CORPORATION

Transformed the sand dunes along the shores of Lake Michigan that boasted no other inhabitants but dreary sand, stagnant water and scrub oaks into what is now the beautiful and prosperous city of Gary, Indiana. There were those who said a city could never rise on Gary's barren sand dunes. Others, basing their faith on the tremendous power and resources of the steel corporation, invested a few hundred dollars, reaping thousands in return. What was accomplished at Gary will be repeated at Ojibway only on a larger scale, for back of Ojibway and her future stands the greatest organization of capital in the world.

Success or Failure of Second Liberty Loan Depends On Individual Efforts.

The foundation on which the success of the Second Liberty Loan will rest is the savings of the people, in the opinion of Mark T. McKee, of Detroit, secretary of the Michigan Advisory Liberty Loan Committee. In a statement just issued Mr. McKee places the strongest emphasis on the imperative need of individual saving for investment in the new government issue. "The success of the Second Liberty Loan," he said, "cannot be brought about alone by the efforts of committees, bankers and organizers, but must, for real success, rest on the savings of our people. Thrift has always been practiced by the Anglo-Saxon. Savings must of necessity be the basis of the progress of a nation and the economic success of a community or an individual. The natural resources of this country, conserved and developed, have resulted in the capital which is now represented by its tremendous railroad and industrial development. "To float this loan successfully will call for much greater effort on the part of the people than a help. Thrift, therefore, and all aids to economic living and economic industrial operation should be the basis on which those who are behind the lines and thus supporting our men at the front must aid our Government. Let us remember that to preserve our economic independence our savings must nearly equal our investments before the third loan is offered, so that we may again be ready to answer our country's call."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

- 1. What is a Government Bond?
It is the Government's engraved acknowledgment (signed by authorized officials) that the Government has borrowed from you a stated amount of money, that it will repay this full amount at a stated time, and that it will pay you interest on that amount at a stated rate on certain dates.
- 2. How do Liberty Bonds differ from other bonds issued by the Government?
Not at all, except that the money received by the Government on Liberty Bonds will be used in this country to purchase materials and supplies for the prompt and effective ending of this war.
- 3. How much money will the Government raise by selling these Bonds?
Three billion dollars (that is, three thousand millions).
- 4. Does the Government need all this money?
Yes, it will probably need even more, before the war ends. In that event, more bonds will be sold.
- 5. Where will the Government spend this money?
In buying supplies, the Government aims to spend the money in the districts where it is raised as far as possible.
- 6. If I buy Liberty Bonds will I get interest on my money?
Yes, twice a year at the annual rate of 4 per cent. If a later issue of bonds is issued at a still higher rate of interest, you will get that higher rate of interest by exchanging the bonds you buy now for the new bonds.
- 7. If I buy Liberty Bonds will I get back all the money I pay for them?
One hundred million people—the whole United States—give you their promise, printed on every bond, to pay you back every dollar, plus 4 per cent interest each year.
- 8. Suppose I buy Bonds and am later in need of money. Can I turn my Bonds into cash?
Easily. Any bank or broker will be glad to sell them for you. Any bank will be glad to lend you money on your Liberty Bonds, for they are the safest collateral in the world.
- 9. If I sell my Bonds, will I get as much as I paid for them?
United States Government Bonds seldom sell below par—that is, the price you pay for them, the face value. Many times they go above par, so that you can sell them at a profit.

New Power for Battleships.

"Were it permissible to write of shipbuilding developments in another sphere," says the London Telegraph, "a truly marvelous tale, reflecting everlasting credit upon those who design and build our ships of war, could be told. But that story, like so many others, will have to wait until after the final victory that these engineering triumphs alone will have made possible of attainment by the allied nations." As the writer was at the time discussing the progress of geared turbines for warships it may not be a bad guess that he refers to electric propulsion for naval vessels. In referring to the progress of shipbuilding in 1916, he noted that whereas in 1915 six vessels having geared turbines were built, the number had increased to 52 vessels under construction a year later. Of these, 25 were being equipped with Parsons single-geared turbines and 27 with Curtis double-reduction-geared turbines. He then made his obscure hint of some great advance.

Riches in Tennessee Caves.

The development of two historic caves, known as Arch cave and Bone cave in Van Buren county, Tennessee, is now under way. The caves are estimated to contain from 50,000 to 75,000 tons of bat guano, which is rich in potash and ammonia, besides other elements of plant food. The underground area is about six miles. Millions of bats inhabited these caves for centuries prior to the Civil war, when they were driven out by the manufacturers of powder. It is told that when Gen. John H. Morgan's detachment which raided Nashville during the Civil war became separated and was hard pressed by superior federal forces they concealed themselves in the Arch cave for several days.

Flashlamps Without Batteries.

A practicable flashlamp without a battery—either primary or secondary—sounds almost too good to be true, yet, according to L'Industrie Electrique, the feat has been accomplished in Germany by utilizing a tiny magneto-generator driven by a spring and clockwork. The mechanism is provided with an escapement which insures constant speed of revolution for the generator armature, and hence constant voltage. Nothing (the Electrical Review observes in noting this interesting innovation) is said about the initial cost of the apparatus, which must be greater than that of the battery lamp; but by manufacturing in great quantities it should be possible to bring it down to reasonable limits.

THE COST OF WAR
THE NEED OF SACRIFICE

In the nation-wide campaign for the second war loan, the United States is emphasizing the vital need of money for the successful carrying on of the war. Millions of men are being trained and equipped. Ultimately they must be transported over seas and followed by an unending supply of stores, the lack of which would spell disaster. To carry out its plans it will be necessary for the Government to spend more in the present year than it has in all the previous years of the twentieth century. Nor is this all. We must stand ready to advance to our Allies the funds which they may require to enable them to properly finance their fourth year of war.

This will cost from $18,000,000,000 to $20,000,000,000—half our annual income. To raise so vast a sum speedily, it is necessary to draw on the resources of the whole nation by war loans. No individual, class, or section can hope to shoulder this burden. The task is too great. It demands the combined energy of the whole American people. This is a fact which must be understood by everybody. War loans and Government bonds are rather new things to the American people as yet. How essential these loans are to the success of the war must be generally appreciated and every man must feel his obligation to subscribe.

Owing to the vast size of the country, the task of placing this situation before everyone must not be left to the officers of one Government alone. Each individual must take an active part in supporting the loans and in winning the support of others also. Only in this way can we hope to attain results proportioned to our size and wealth. To some extent we feel disposed to congratulate ourselves on the first Liberty Loan, in which it is estimated $3,000,000,000 was offered to the Government by about 4,500,000 persons; but when we remember that France, with considerably less than half our population, subscribed as much to its first loan and that England, after two and a half years of war, raised $5,000,000,000 from 8,000,000 subscribers, we can understand how far we must go to make as good a record. That it can be done is unquestioned, but it will require the conscientious effort of everyone of us.

The country's responsibility in this war to preserve freedom is enormous. Help, by buying Liberty Bonds.

Your Bond will help to break the Hindenburg Line.

This is the BADGE OF HONOR which is given to every Liberty Bond purchaser.

DO YOU OWN ONE?

By Midnight
Wednesday Sept. 12th

Up to midnight, September 12th, during a period of 8½ months, we sold and delivered to tire dealers more United States Tires than we sold to dealers during the entire 12 months of 1916.

This phenomenal sales increase was made notwithstanding our epoch-making sales increases of 1916 over 1915.

These record-breaking sales increases of 1917 over 1916 and our record-breaking sales increases of 1916 over 1915 definitely and finally prove three facts:

1. The supremacy of United States Tires.
2. The fact that the vast army of automobile owners who used United States Tires in 1916 are using them in 1917 on the sheer merit of their experience.
3. The fact that another vast army of automobile owners have been won over to the use of United States Tires in 1917 on the sheer superiority of our tires over other tires that they have tried.

WHAT A LIBERTY
BOND WILL DO

If you can't serve in the ranks of the army yourself, you can at least help to send a fighting man.

Do you know what a $50 Liberty bond will do? Consider; it will—buy three Springfield rifles, complete;

buy 1,500 rounds of ammunition, enough to supply sixteen soldiers going into battle;
buy ten new rifle barrels to replace those worn out;

pay one soldier for seven weeks;
feed one soldier for five months, or a company of 150 enlisted men one day;

equip one soldier with clothing complete for a three-year enlistment;

keep the clothing of one soldier in repair and replace worn-out clothing for two years.

And a $100 bond will place a soldier on the firing line fully clothed with complete equipment, including overcoat, extra clothing, underclothes, shoes, rifle bayonet, cartridge belt, two blankets, poncho, ninety rounds of ammunition and one day's rations.

Bonds of larger denomination will get action in proportion.

Patriotism involves sacrifice. To be patriotic you must buy more Liberty Bonds than you can afford.

Help to sink the submarines—Buy a Liberty Bond!

Don't let your money be neutral—Buy a Bond!

WHAT IS THE SECURITY?

Q. A United States Government bond is frequently spoken of as "best security in the world." Why is this true?

A. Because the promise to pay a Government bond is backed by the faith and honor of the United States of America and by the taxing power of this whole country, which is the richest nation in the world.

Q. Has the United States issued bonds before; and, if so, has it ever failed to pay all of its bonds when they became due?

A. This Government has issued bonds before, and has never failed to pay every bond when it became due with all the interest on same. Even after the Civil War, when the country was suffering from a heavy debt and was not nearly so rich as it is today, all of the Government bonds were paid when they became due.

HOW TO BUY A LIBERTY BOND

Ask any bank.
Ask any member of any Liberty Loan committee in your township, town or county.

Any of them will gladly explain the easy-payment plans which have been approved.

You can buy a bond by making a small payment down—2 per cent.

You can pay 18 per cent of the remainder on November 15th, 40 per cent on December 15th and 40 per cent on January 15th, 1918, OR—

Many banks will accept regular weekly payments of small amounts. No commission nor fee of any kind is charged by any sales agency.

Don't hesitate. Get your bond today. YOUR COUNTRY NEEDS THE MONEY!

The Kaiser started this—we can finish it. Buy a Bond!

THE BADGE OF HONOR

The government has arranged to give one of these badges to every purchaser of a Liberty Bond of the second issue.

SLACKERS FOILED BY APPEAL AGENTS

INVESTIGATIONS PREVENT MANY EVASIONS OF SELECTIVE DRAFT LAW.

MANY CLAIMS WITHOUT MERIT

Agents Make Formal Appeal of Cases Where Local Boards Appear to Have Made Errors.

Lansing—Many people do not realize how important to the draft system are the appeal agents, who make formal appeal of cases in which the government has been worsted before the local boards and conduct investigations.

Investigations have prevented many evasions of the selective draft.

Colonel Bersey, several days ago, received one of the most heartrending letters a man ever had to read. The writer, a woman with three children, wanted the case of her husband repented and his return from Camp Custer to the bosom of his family ordered. She had nothing to eat, the children were not clothed, and she was so sick that she could not work to bring in enough revenue to see to it that the children and herself were well taken care of while the husband and father was away fighting for his country.

Colonel Bersey asked an appeal agent to investigate. The seriousness of the situation dwindle in a moment. The whole case was pure "bunk." The man had been called to the colors August 10—a single man. August 18, and before he had been sent to Battle Creek, he had married a widow with three children. The widow had a fairly good income of her own, and, having managed to live with her three children before she had married the soldier, could easily do so again.

The "widow" was puffed because the appeal agent notified Colonel Bersey that he was in favor of her husband's staying in the army.

Other cases of a similar nature have been run down by the appeal agents.

1% OF GUARD HAS TUBERCULOSIS

Many Michigan Men, Touched by White Plague, Discharged.

Waco, Texas—One per cent of the guardsmen of Michigan and Wisconsin have "manifest cases" of tuberculosis. This is the finding of the board of experts, sent here by the government, after examining men of the 32d division, under the direction of Capt. A. C. Morgan. This same percentage obtains in camps all over the country.

In cases of suspicion there is a second examination. An immediate discharge for the man is ordered if his case is positive. The examination includes officers also.

"These discharges are for the good of the man and for the protection of other members of the army," said Mr. Morgan. "If he has tuberculosis he will be unable to stand the hardships of a campaign. Also it would not be fair to eight or ten other men living in the same tent with him to expose them."

7 OUT OF 100 "SELECTS" UNFIT

Army Doctors Peeved Over Apparent Carelessness of Local Boards.

Camp Custer, Battle Creek—Camp Custer is turning back more than seven men out of every 100 recruits sent here by local examining boards. So many cases are on record where men who are absolutely incapacitated for the life of a soldier, because of obvious physical disabilities, have been sent on, that the authorities here charge the local boards with "passing the buck" to the army in a shameful manner.

Naturally it is impossible to quote the authority for the figures or the statements made, but they come from a high quarter, and the records themselves are enough to convince the local boards of the charge made against them. They show that men with one leg shorter than the other, insane men, men with lost teeth, men with glass eyes, men in the last stages of tuberculosis, men with the most active form of loathsome diseases, all have been sent on to Camp Custer.

All of these things were obvious at a glance to even a layman. How physicians could pass such physical specimens, is beyond the understanding of the army surgeons.

WITH THE BOYS AT CAMPCUSTER

The old days when a sergeant "cussed" a recruit for not getting the drill regulations have gone.

Two men in each company are being selected to take instruction in first aid work. Later they will act as instructors.

Steamfitters working in camp who have been drafted will probably be excused until camp is finished.

It is possible American soldiers in France may be quartered in houses manufactured in this country, knocked down and sent abroad.

Men of the next increment will be urged to give their civilian clothes when they discard them, to the Belgian relief commission for shipment to Belgium. Clothes will be collected by companies, sent to a central point, sorted, and shipped to Belgium via Holland.

MICHIGAN NEWS BRIEFS

Whitefish spawning in northern Michigan is at its height.

Tuscola county supervisors will establish a county agricultural agent. G. E. McGee, of Ionia, is reported wounded in the Canadian casualty lists.

Seven men, 50 per cent of the post-office force of Menominee, have been called to the colors.

Gregory Delsile, 89 years old, a meat dealer in Flint for 60 years, is dead. He leaves 11 children.

Muskegon leads the state in proportional recruiting. Since July 1 there have been 358 voluntary enlistments.

August Runzel, of Muskegon, 37, years old, died of infantile paralysis two days after his infant daughter.

Tobacco dealers in most parts of the state have boosted 5-cent cigars to 6 cents and 10-cent smokes to 12 cents.

Judge Frederick, of Sault Ste. Marie, has sentenced Rolla Duncan, motorcycle speeder, never to ride a motorcycle again.

Red Cross seals will soon go on sale in all Michigan counties. For war purposes it is hoped to double the total this year.

The permanent force, Michigan state troops, moved from the East Lansing post on a hike to Grand Rapids and Muskegon.

Commonwealth Power Co. of Manistowic has appealed to the supreme court the decision of Judge Weimer that the 75-cent gas ordinance is invalid. The circuit court says Michigan cities have no power to fix water or gas rates.

The Dixie highway between Flint and Mt. Morris for seven miles has been completed and soon will be open to travel. Work will start next at the Mt. Morris northern limits and continue to Pine Run.

Three Kalamazoo schools, St. Joseph's Catholic, Portage and Lake street buildings, were closed upon order of the health department, after it had been discovered that there were 46 cases of diphtheria in the southeastern part of the city.

In the past year Detroit chapter of the Red Cross has received $326,256.98 and has expended $315,472.13, according to the report of Treasurer Emory W. Clark, made at the annual meeting of the chapter. More than 136,000 people are members of the organization.

The annual report of Mine Inspector Alfred James to the Houghton county board of supervisors shows that in the year ending September 30, 45 men were killed in the mines of Houghton county, out of 16,423 men employed. The percentage of fatalities is .0029, the highest since 1915.

George Patterson, 41 years old, of Grand Rapids, was killed at Birch Run, 15 miles south of Saginaw, when he was struck by a Saginaw-Flint interurban he was trying to board. Patterson was knocked down by the front end of the double-decker, and struck again by the rear end as it passed him.

The nursing profession is one of the few professions in which women are not subjected to the competition of men. The Michigan State Nurses' association is calling attention to this fact in its campaign to induce high school and college girls in Michigan to enter one of the training schools for nurses.

The body of a man, decomposed beyond recognition, was found at Iron Mountain in a clump of bushes by two boys. The skull had been crushed, his coat had been dragged over his head. It is believed he was murdered. Nothing of value was found in his clothing. The condition of the body indicates it had laid there for months.

A movement for a tuberculosis sanitarium in Oakland county in conjunction with one or more neighboring counties has been started. A committee of Pontiac women took up the subject with the supervisors. Steps must be taken at once if the sanitarium is to be equipped to care for soldiers returning from Europe who are affected with tuberculosis.

The Muskegon county board of supervisors has appointed a committee to investigate the need of the families of married men who have enlisted from Muskegon county. While the new state law provides for dependents in a measure, the board thought there might be some suffering and the members believe the county should do its share in looking after them.

Bituminous coal prices have not been raised in Michigan yet, but if the operators in the central competitive field grant the increases to the miners which is contingent upon the federal coal administrator allowing the operators to raise their prices, then the price will be raised in Michigan. Coal miners in this state are governed by the central field and any raises in that district will automatically react in this state.

Howard C. Burnham, of Flint, arrested at Pittsburg, offered to go to war rather than support his wife. He was sent to Ionia, from where his prison wages will go to his wife.

Faunus, Menominee county, is the scene of the first Michigan hunting fatality this year. John Schout, 17 years old, was mistaken for a bear and shot by Frank Stebbins. Schout and his two brothers were gathering beech-nuts. Seeing the Schout boy stooping over, Stebbins shot and hit the lad in the lower back. The boy died in 15 minutes.

6,000 BOYS FROM CUSTER GO SOUTH

WAR DEPARTMENT ORDERS 3,000 TO WACO, TEXAS, AND 3,000 TO LITTLE ROCK, ARK.

ALL TRAINING CAMPS AFFECTED

Similar Orders Sent to Every Camp—Part Will Fill Guard Ranks. Others Form New Divisions.

Washington—Three thousand Michigan and Wisconsin selected men now at Camp Custer are to be transferred to Waco, Texas, to fill the Michigan-Wisconsin national guard division to war strength. An additional 3,000 men from Camp Custer will go to Camp Pike, Little Rock, Ark., to form part of the new Rainbow National army division recruited from selected men of northern and western states. A complete division of troops still will be left at Camp Custer.

The orders to Gen. Dickman, at Battle Creek, to transfer the troops was issued in conjunction with orders to commanders of all of the 32 army camps making similar shifts, the main purpose of the general transfer is to make room for training some of the Negro troops of the south in northern camps. The orders provide for a transfer of 75,500 men from the various cantonments.

None of the Negroes will go to Battle Creek under present plans.

Of the troops transferred from Battle Creek to Waco, 1,625 will be taken from the Michigan contingent and 1,375 from Wisconsin. It is presumed that the troops shifted to Little Rock will be divided similarly.

BRITISH OFFER LABOR ADVICE

Explain Their Experiences to Manufacturers in America.

Washington—Lessons drawn from Great Britain's experience in dealing with labor problems during the war are being communicated personally to American labor leaders and employers by four officials of the British ministry of munitions, who have started this week on a tour of American cities, including Pittsburgh, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, New York and Boston.

The delegation, headed by Sir Stephen Wilson, director of the labor supply department of the munitions ministry, makes the trip at the request of the council of national defense and several state councils. To discuss particularly the distribution and efficient employment of labor, and to answer questions concerning British methods of avoiding strikes, preventing excessive shifting of men from plant to plant or industry to industry, and suspending minor union regulations for the war emergency, without endangering the labor movement's future.

OHIO TOWNS ARE SEIZING COAL

Shortage Forces Drastic Steps to Supply Fuel for Householders.

Akron, Ohio—One hundred cars of coal consigned to lake ports for shipment to the northwest were ordered seized here Saturday by Mayor W. J. Laub to alleviate the serious local shortage.

The cars contained about 5,000 tons of coal and are being distributed in Akron through local dealers.

Mayor Schrantz of Canton also seized 1,000 tons owned by the Central Power Co., which furnishes that city with electricity.

Good Potato Crops Reported.

Traverse City—The great potato harvesting season in northern Michigan has arrived. In all parts of the region are farmers rolling their wealth out of the ground. In some localities near here "potato vacations" have been declared in the schools that children may help dig the produce. The crop is as good if not better than normal, farmers having fortified themselves against the shortage of last season in anticipation of last season's prices.

M. C. FLYER HITS AUTO; KILLS SEVEN

MACHINE DRIVEN DIRECTLY IN PATH OF TRAIN—DRIVER WAS WARNED.

OCCUPANTS ALL DETROIT PEOPLE

Approach to Crossing Is Clear On Both Sides—Similar Accident Occurred Last Thursday.

Detroit—Seven Detroit persons were killed Sunday afternoon when an automobile they were driving was struck by a Michigan Central passenger train at Hartsig crossing, 11 miles north of Detroit.

The dead are: Joseph J. Pohl, 40 years old; Mrs. Joseph J. Pohl, 35 years old; Mrs. George Harvey, 34 years old; Mary Harvey, 1 year old, children of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey. Ralph Pohl, 3 years old, and Helen Pohl, 5 years old, children of Mrs. Pohl.

The party, which had left Detroit in the afternoon to purchase poultry, was returning to the city, and approached the crossing from the east. The car was driven by Mr. Pohl.

Occupants of another automobile preceding the Pohl car crossed the tracks, and according to Charles Van Dam, a farmer who witnessed the tragedy, warned Mr. Pohl of the approaching train.

The automobile continued, however, at about 20 miles an hour, it is said, and ran directly into the path of the flyer.

Supervisor Hartsig, whose home is near the crossing, says that the side curtains of the machine were attached. He saw the crash and rushed to the scene.

Mr. Hartsig believed one of the women was alive and rushed back to the house for water. On returning he found her dead. Three of the children were taken from the pilot of the engine. They died before reaching Mt. Clemens. Other bodies were picked up 10 to 12 rods below the crossing.

The crossing which is two miles south of Warren village in Macomb county, has a clear approach from either side.

At the same crossing where the fatal collision occurred Sunday, a truck from Rosebud Creamery company was struck by a freight train last Thursday. Two men were seriously hurt at that time.

CRAMPTON ASKS COAL FOR STATE

Wires Washington That Michigan Must Have Immediate Relief.

Lapeer—Failure of the government to fix a price for Michigan produced coal is blamed by Rep. Crampton for the high prices at the mines in this state in a telegram he sent to Harry A. Garfield, national fuel administrator at Washington, in an effort to relieve the shortage here.

"Industries are threatened and in many homes in my district there is actual suffering because of the lack of fuel," a part of the telegram reads. "Lapeer is typical of many small cities in Michigan; not a pound of coal of any kind is available here for sale and numerous homes are without fuel of any kind. Michigan operators are taking advantage of the necessity and demand extortionate prices for their coal, $5.75 at the mine being a recent quotation."

FOOD PLEDGE WEEK OCT. 21-27

Postponed One Week So It Will Not Conflict With Loan Drive.

Washington—Food pledge week, set for October 21 to 27, has been postponed to the week of October 28 to November 4 by Food Administrator Hoover, at the request of President Wilson, to avoid conflict with the final week of the second Liberty Loan drive.

The president, in his letter to the food administrator, said it seemed undesirable in "the interest of both these capital matters" that they should be in motion at the same time, and laid emphasis upon the importance of enrolling the people of the nation in food conservation.

Plans had been laid by the food administration to have its 500,000 pledge campaign workers assist in the flotation of the Liberty Loan while enrolling families under the food administration and these will be carried out.

250 DIE ON TORPEDOED SHIP

French Steamer With 500 Passengers Aboard Sunk by U-Boat.

London—Two hundred and fifty lives were lost when the steamer Medie was torpedoed September 23, in the western Mediterranean, says a Reuters dispatch from Paris, received Tuesday.

The explosion of the torpedo detonated the munitions in the ship's cargo. There were more than 500 passengers on board the steamer including soldiers and prisoners of war.

The Medie was a French vessel of 4,470 tons. She was built in 1912 and her home port was Marseilles.

Upper Michigan Called "Godless."

Niles—Michigan, north of Bay City, including the upper peninsula, was declared to be the most godless territory in the United States by the "lumber-jack sky-pilot," Jack McCall, and the syndicalist worker by the prisoners from the county workhouse, which it is said it will soon be necessary to construct because of the overcrowded condition of the county jail and the fact that the Detroit house of correction has served notice that it may be forced at any time to cancel its contract with the county.

THREE MEN KILLED BY POWDER BLAST

EXPLOSION IN DU PONT WORKS BLOWS WORKERS BODIES TO ATOMS.

ONLY 4 EMPLOYED IN BUILDING

Force of Explosion So Great That Windows Within a Radius of Five Miles Were Shattered.

Philadelphia—An explosion in the nitro starch dry house at the du Pont powder works at Gibbstown, N. J., resulted in the instant death of two workmen. A third man is missing and is probably dead. The bodies were blown to pieces. Another man was seriously injured. The destroyed building was a small one-story one isolated from the rest of the plant. The force consisted of the four men mentioned.

The force of the explosion was so great that windows were shattered in buildings within a radius of five miles or more. Skyscraper in Philadelphia, nearly 20 miles distant, were rocked.

Gibbstown is an isolated town 15 miles below Camden, on the Delaware river. It is the scene of intense activity, where the du Ponts manufacture great quantities of war explosives. Woodbury, 10 miles north of Gibbstown, reported that the explosion was the worst ever felt there, and the town has felt many from the powder section of lower New Jersey to Delaware.

The du Pont company says there is nothing suspicious about the explosion.

GERMANS TAKE RUSS ISLAND

Advance Above Riga Golf—British Troops Hold Gains.

Petrograd—German forces which landed on the Island of Oesel at the head of the Gulf of Riga have captured Arenburg, capital of the island, and are pursuing the Russians at various places. Aiding the operations as far as possible are German cruisers and torpedo boats, which have shelled coast batteries and towns. Attempts by the German fleet to enter the Gulf of Riga or to operate in the waters between Oesel and Dago islands, however, are meeting with resistance respectively from the Russian land batteries and Russian naval units. In the latter region the Germans declined to accept battle and retired in the face of the Russian warships.

British Hold Gains.

London—The British are clinging doggedly to the strips of territory which they had wrested from the enemy last Friday. That Field Marshal Haig's men were able to advance at all over this ground made almost impassable by continuous rains, is still a matter of wonder among observers.

The British have greatly improved their positions, especially along the important Passchendaele ridge and on the left wing of the offensive north of Poelcapelle.

DON M. DICKINSON DIES AT 71

Former Democratic Leader Passes Away After Long Illness.

Don M. Dickinson, former Postmaster General under President Cleveland and one of the two great democrat leaders produced by Michigan during the period of her statehood, died Monday at his home in Trenton. He was 71 years old.

He had been ill for a long time and his death was not unexpected. No other state political leader, with the exception of Lewis Cass, enjoyed the esteem and the confidence that democrats all over Michigan reposed in Mr. Dickinson. No one since his active days has been so truly a leader.

KIDNAPPER IS GIVEN 35 YEARS

Abductor of Lloyd Keet, Baby of Banker, Gets Heavy Sentence.

Marshfield, Mo.—Claude Piersol was found guilty of kidnapping Lloyd Keet by the jury and was sentenced to 35 years' imprisonment.

Baby Keet was kidnapped from his home at night while his parents were attending a social function. The nurse did not know of the kidnapping until Mr. and Mrs. Keet returned home and going in to see their child before retiring, found the crib empty.

Several days later, posess which had organized and threatened lynching of the kidnapers found the body in a well only a few hundred feet from the Keet residence.

Jump Train to Avoid Being Hit.

Maistique—John W. Lanier, real estate dealer, and his daughter escaped serious injury when their automobile was struck by a Soo freight train, by jumping on the pilot. The machine, which rolled over several times before the train was stopped was demolished.

Potato Price Average $1.05.

Greenville—Potato price average $1.05 to farmers, ranging from 94 cents to $1.22.

GREAT FOR ECZEMA AND OLD SORES

I Guarantee My Ointment, Says Peterson.

"If you are responsible for the health of your family," says Peterson. "I want you to get a large box of Peterson's Ointment today."

"Remember, I stand back of every box. Every druggist guarantees to refund the purchase price if Peterson's Ointment doesn't do all I claim."

"I guarantee it for eczema, old sores, running sores, salt rheum, ulcers, sore nipples, broken breasts, itching skin, skin diseases, blind, bleeding and itching piles as well as for burns, scalds, cuts, bruises and scalds."

"I had 30 running sores on my leg for 11 years, was in three different hospitals. Amputation was advised. Skin grafting was tried. I was cured by using Peterson's Ointment."—Mrs. F. E. Root, 287 Michigan St., Buffalo, N. Y. Adv.

The Retort.

"Two wrongs don't make a right. Still—"

A senator was discussing the food control bill.

"While the bill has its drawbacks," he went on, "there would be worse drawbacks without it, and so we can face our opponents like the lady."

"My love," her husband said to this lady, "you spend all your money getting your palm read."

"She smiled sweetly."

"And you, dear," she retorted, "spend all yours getting your nose red."

How's This?

We offer $100.00 for any case of catarrh that cannot be cured by HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is taken internally and acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. Sold by druggists for over forty years. Price 50c. Testimonials free. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

Mental Preparedness.

"Children trained from the very start to self-expression enter school with invaluable mental preparedness for the work to be done there. They have a poise that keeps them from being diffident in class. They are not afraid to ask questions, declares a prominent educator. They know how to tell what is in their mind. In associating with other children they get more joy from it because they know how to make themselves understood. Older people find them more charming and interesting."

"Effective training toward self-expression in the young child means that characteristic for life, and there is no training more effective than telling him stories and teaching him how to tell them."

"Asking about a child's doings will encourage him to tell you about them."

"For instance, when your little boy comes home from a walk get him to tell you all that he has seen while out. When he comes in from play get him to tell you all about the fun he has been having."

"Always make him feel your vital interest in his thoughts and actions."

What's the Use?

"I have been reflecting," said an old-timer, "upon the case of the average man, as his neighbors see him."

"If he is poor, he is a bad manager. If he is prosperous, everyone wants to do him a favor."

"If he is in politics, it's for pork. If he is not in politics, one can't place him, and he's no good for his country."

"If he gives not to charity, then he's a stingy dog. If he does give, it's for show."

"If he is active in religion, he is a hypocrite. If he evinces no interest in matters spiritual, he's a hardened sinner."

"If he shows affection, he's a soft sentimentalist. If he seems to care for no one, he's cold-blooded."

"If he dies young, there was a great future ahead of him. If he attains old age, he has missed his calling."

Codfish Are Scarce.

Last year the codfish caught off the coast of New England amounted to 60,000,000 pounds—less than half the amount caught a hundred years ago.

FARMERS PROFIT FROM BOND SALE

$500,000,000 OF LIBERTY LOAN WILL BUY FOODSTUFFS FIRST YEAR.

2,145,117 MEN ARE TO BE FED

Products of the Soil Must Be Purchased in Million Pound Lots For An Indefinite Period.

The importance to the Michigan farmer of the $2,000,000,000 Liberty loan war fund which the government is raising is well set forth in the statement on equipping and feeding our national army, recently published by the war department. During the first year alone the greater part of $500,000,000 of the fighting fund must be returned to the farming communities of the United States.

There are at least 1,645,117 men in the army and navy, and the first national army. If 500,000 men are called in the next draft, as seems probable, there will be at least 2,145,117 men to be fed, clothed and equipped.

It is estimated that it costs 35 cents a day to feed a man in the army and 45 cents in the navy. This would mean that $282,647,239 would have to be spent for food in one year for the army and navy, the first draft army, and the half million who probably will be called.

It is believed that it costs $50 to equip a man for the army, and $60 for the navy. At this rate it would cost $109,587,000 to equip the forces mentioned above.

There must also be considered an item of $118,625,000 for feeding horses and mules in the army. Taking all these items together, the bill is $510,859,239.

The British army contains 5,000,000 men. The British government has spent $1,250,000,000 for feeding and clothing these men. That means that $500,000,000 was expended for 2,000,000 men on the other side, or as much per man as the United States is spending.

Horses and mules accompanying the American army to Europe must be provided every year with 45,000,000 tons of hay, 18,000,000 bushels of oats, 16,000,000 bushels of bran and 100,000 tons of straw bedding. In round figures, this produce will cost the government $325,000 every day, or $118,625,000 every year. The farmer is the one who profits most from this great expenditure on the part of the government. Another instance where the farmer benefits from the war is as follows. The navy department in the next twelve months will need canned vegetables in the following amounts:

Corn, lbs. 5,000,000
Peas, lbs. 5,000,000
Lima and string beans, lbs. 5,000,000
Tomatoes, beets and spinach, lbs. 10,000,000

Then, too, three-quarters of a million pounds of dried apples, two million pounds of apricots and almost four million pounds of jams and preserves will be required.

The rationing of the new army, including the men who have been drafted, is a stupendous task. There will be sixteen cantonments, and these will require annually:

3,200,000 bu. of potatoes,
920,000 bu. of onions,
48,000 gals. of pickles,
40,000 gals. of vinegar,
54,000 bu. of navy beans,
70,000 bu. of evaporated apples,
50,000 bu. of evaporated peaches,

16,500,000 lbs. of butter,
25,000,000 lbs. of canned tomatoes,
15,000,000 lbs. of coffee,
40,000,000 lbs. of sugar,
240,000,000 lbs. of bread,

250,000,000 lbs. beef, mutton and pork; and this does not include tea, milk and fresh vegetables.

For every man in the trenches, four persons must work behind the lines to keep him supplied with food, clothing and ammunitions. Not the least important of these four is the farmer. Remote from the scene of activity—often uninformed from day to day of the movements of our troops—none the less does the duty rest upon him of supplying the soldier with food and a considerable portion of the raw material used in his equipment.

All of this increased buying is going to bring an added income to the small communities, to the farmers and stock raisers. Though the activities of the people of this country are going to be different than those in times of peace, there will be no lull. On the contrary there will be more work to do than there are men and women left on this side of the Atlantic to do it. To supply our own army and navy with food and equipment, and to furnish our allies with the wherewithal to continue the struggle, is a task that requires the unceasing energy of every American.

Since so large a part of the money raised by the Liberty Loan will be spent with the farmer, it is not only a patriotic duty but a good business proposition for him to invest in government bonds. The increased income from larger profits should be invested in the safest and best possible way.

No country ever waged a more righteous warfare than the United States is now doing. Help—by buying Liberty Bonds.

BREVITIES

Grass Lake—Hubert Foster was notified to be ready to sail last Sunday, and is no doubt now on his way to France.—News.

Fowlerville—Notwithstanding the bad weather the Fowlerville fair last week was a success. The people always turn out to the Fowlerville fair.

Manchester—A man who is working by the week at a not princely wage, walked into one of our banks and subscribed for a $1000 Liberty Bond, and paid for it. He is a patriot.—Enterprise.

Ypsilanti—Twenty car loads of coal were received here Saturday by W. H. Harrington who has voluntarily assumed the responsibility of supplying coal for the citizens of this city. His method is to go right to the coal mines, and pay cash for the coal and see that it is shipped.

Pineckney—We came near getting a number of obituaries to print this week when a foreign car collided with a telephone pole at Norme Reason's corner, a short distance from Pineckney. The car contained three men who refused to tell their names or where they were from but said that they had been to Chelsea, which was sufficient. The men were badly bruised and the two wheels smashed and other things too numerous to mention.—Dispatch.

Stockbridge—C. Rowser, a druggist from Lansing, was seriously hurt Sunday near the Ives farm east of town. He had stopped beside the road and changed a tire on his auto, and stepped around the front of his car into the road when he was struck by another machine. One of his legs was broken, also an arm and he was otherwise seriously cut and bruised. An ambulance came from Lansing and took him home.—Briet-Sun.

CRYING FOR HELP.

Lots of It in Chelsea But Daily Growing Less.

The kidneys often cry for help. Not another organ in the whole body more delicately constructed; Not one more important to health. The kidneys are the filters of the blood.

When they fail the blood becomes foul and poisonous. There can be no health where there is poisoned blood.

Backache is one of the frequent indications of kidney trouble. It is often the kidneys cry for help.

In speaking of the formation of the law firm of Wood & Rathbun, the Tecumseh Herald says of the junior partner:

In July of the same year he came to Tecumseh where he formed a partnership with Judge J. W. Wightman. The firm of Wightman & Rathbun continued until 1912 when the judge retired. Since this time Atty. Rathbun has continued the business alone and has worked up to a position of prominence in his profession."

One of the elements that led to the success of Mr. Rathbun was the fact that when he decided that he needed a wife, he picked out a Chelsea girl, Miss Lelia Geddes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Geddes.

THE HILLMAN

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

JOHN HEARS MYSTERIOUS PHRASES WHICH TROUBLE HIM WITH GRAVE DOUBTS ABOUT LOUISE—AT TIMES HE WISHES HE WERE BACK IN THE HILLS.

Synopsis.—Louise Maurel, famous actress, making a motor tour of rural England, was obliged, when her car broke down, to spend the night at the ancestral home of Stephen and John Strangeway, bachelor woman-haters, in the Cumberland district. Before she left the next day she had captivated John. Three months later he went to London and looked her up. She introduced him to her friends, among them Grailiot, a playwright, and Sophie Gerard, a light-hearted little actress. John, puritanical in his views, entered the gay bohemian life of the city with enthusiasm. It was soon seen that John and the prince of Seyre were rivals for the heart and hand of Louise. Sophie also loved John secretly. The prince tried to entice John into evil ways by sending fascinating women to charm and bedevil him.

CHAPTER XIV—Continued.

"Sometimes with Miss Maurel, sometimes with her little friend, Sophie Gerard, and sometimes alone," John replied. "I have bought a Buick, taken a taxi cab by the day, and done all the sights. I've spent weeks in the National gallery, picture gazing, and I've done all those more modern shows up round Bond street. I have bought a racing car and learned to drive it. I have been to dinner parties that have bored me stiff. I have been introduced to crowds of people whom I never wish to see again, and made one or two friends," he added, smiling at his guest, "for whom I hope I am properly grateful."

"The prince has been showing you round a bit, hasn't he?" Grailiot grunted.

"The prince has been extraordinarily kind to me," John admitted slowly, "for what reason I don't know. He has introduced me to a great many pleasant and interesting people, and a great many whom I suppose a young man in my position should be glad to know. He has shown me one side of London life pretty thoroughly."

"There is No Secret About It. It is Louise Maurel."

"And what about it all?" Grailiot demanded. "You find yourself something more of a citizen of the world, eh?"

"Not a bit," John answered simply. "The more I see of the life up here, the smaller it seems to me. I mean, of course, the ordinary life of pleasure, the life to be lived by a young man like myself, who hasn't any profession or work upon which he can concentrate his thoughts."

"Then why do you stay?"

John made no immediate reply. Instead, he walked to the window of his sitting room and stood looking across the Thames with a discontented frown upon his face. Between him and the Frenchman a curious friendship had sprung up during the last few months. "I gather," Grailiot continued, "that you put it concisely and truthfully, you are the most bored man in London. There is something behind all this effort of yours, my friend, to fit yourself, the round human being, into the square place. Speak the truth, now! Treat me as a father confessor."

John swung round upon his heel. In the clear light it was obvious that he was a little thinner in the face and that some of the fat had gone from his complexion.

"I am staying up here, and going on, with it," he announced doggedly, "because of a woman."

Grailiot stopped eating, placed the remains of his cake in the saucer of his teacup, and laid it down. Then he opened his lips to speak and abruptly closed them. His face suddenly underwent an extraordinary change. A few seconds ago his attitude had been that of a professor examining some favorite object of study; now a more personal note had humanized his expression. Whatever thought or reflection it was that had come into his mind, it had plainly startled him.

"Who is the woman?" he asked breathlessly.

"There is no secret about it, so far as I am concerned," John answered. "It is Louise Maurel. I thought you must have guessed."

The two men looked at each other in silence for some moments. Out on the river a little tug was hoisting vigorously. The roar of the Strand came faintly into the room. On the mantelpiece a very ornate French clock was ticking lightly. All these sounds seemed suddenly accentuated. They beat time to a silence almost tragical in its intensity.

Grailiot took out his handkerchief and dabbed his forehead. He had written many plays, and the dramatic instinct was strongly developed in him. "Louise!" he muttered under his breath.

"She is very different, I know," John went on, after a moment's hesitation. "She is very clever and a great artist, and she lives in an atmosphere of which, a few months ago, I knew nothing. I have come up here to try to understand, to try to get a little nearer to her."

"There was another silence, this time almost an awkward one. Then Grailiot rose suddenly to his feet.

"I will respect your confidence," he promised, holding out his hand. "Have no fear of that. I am due now at the theater. Your tea is excellent, and such little cakes I never tasted before."

"You will wish me good luck?"

"No."

"Why not?" John demanded, a little startled.

"Because," Grailiot pronounced, "from what I have seen and know of you both, there are no two people in this world less suitable for each other."

"Look here," John expostulated. "I don't want you to go away thinking so. You don't understand what this means to me."

"Perhaps not, my friend," Grailiot replied, "but remember that it is at least my trade to understand men and women. I have known Louise Maurel since she was a child."

"Then it is I whom you don't understand?"

"That may be so," Grailiot confessed. "One makes mistakes. Let us leave it at that. You are a young man of undeveloped temperament. You may be capable of much which at present I do not find in you."

"Tell me the one quality in which you consider me most lacking," John begged. "I want you on my side, Grailiot."

"And I," Grailiot replied, as he shook his friend's hand and hurried off, "want only to be on the side that will mean happiness for you both."

He left the room a little abruptly. John walked back to the window, oppressed with a sense of something almost ominous in the Frenchman's manner, something which he could not fathom, against which he struggled in vain. Side by side with it, there surged into his memory the disquietude which his present relations with Louise had developed. She was always charming when she had any time to spare—sometimes almost affectionate. On the other hand, he was profoundly conscious of her desire to keep him at arm's length for the present.

He had accepted her decision without a murmur. He made but few efforts to see her alone, and when they met he made no special claim upon her notice. He was serving his apprenticeship doggedly and faithfully. Yet there were times like the present when he found his task both hateful and difficult.

He walked aimlessly backward and forward, chafing against the restraint of the narrow walls and the low ceiling. A sudden desire had seized him to fly back to the hills, wretched in mist though they might be; to struggle on his way through the blinding rain, to drink down long gulps of his own pure, less civilized atmosphere.

The telephone bell rang. He placed the receiver to his ear almost mechanically.

"Who is it?" he asked.

"Lady Hilda Maurel is asking for you, sir," the hall porter announced.

Lady Hilda peered around John's room through her lorgnette, and did not hesitate to express her dissatisfaction.

"My dear man," she exclaimed,

"what makes you live in a hotel? Why don't you take rooms of your own and furnish them? Surroundings like these are destructive to one's individuality."

"Well, you see," John explained, as he drew an easy chair up to the fire for his guest, "my stay in London is only a temporary one, and it hasn't seemed worth while to settle anywhere."

She stretched out her graceful body in front of the fire and raised her veil. She was very smartly dressed, as usual. Her white silk stockings, which she seemed to have no objection to displaying, were of the latest vogue. The chinchilla around her neck and in her little toque was most becoming. She seemed to bring with her an atmosphere indefinable, in its way, but distinctly attractive. Brisk in her speech, a little commanding in her manner, she was still essentially feminine.

John, at her direct invitation, had called upon her once or twice since their meeting at the opera, and he had found her, from the first, more attractive than any other society woman of his acquaintance. None the less, he was a little taken aback at her present visit.

"Exactly why are you here, anyhow?" she demanded. "I feel sure that Eugene told me the reason which had brought you from your wilds, but I have forgotten it."

"For one thing," John replied, "I have come because I don't want to appear prejudiced, and the fact that I never spent a month in London, or even a week, seemed a little narrow-minded."

"What's the real attraction?" Lady Hilda asked. "It is a woman, isn't it?"

"I am very fond of a woman who is in London," John admitted. "Perhaps it is true that I am here on her account."

Lady Hilda withdrew from her muff a gold cigarette case and a little box of matches.

"Order some mixed vermouth with lemon for me, please," she begged. "I have been shopping, and I hate tea. I don't know why I came to see you. I suddenly thought of it when I was in Bond street."

"It was very kind of you," John said. "If I had known that you cared about seeing me, I would have come to you with pleasure."

"What does it matter?" she answered. "You are thinking, perhaps, that I risk my reputation in coming to a young man's rooms? Those things do not count for me. Ever since I was a child I have done exactly as I liked, and people have shrugged their shoulders and said, 'Ah, well, it is only Lady Hilda.' I am quite convinced that if I chose to take you off to Monte Carlo with me next week and spend a month with you there, I should get my pass to the royal inclosure at Ascot when I returned, and my invitation to the next court ball, even in this era of starch. You see, they would say, 'It is only Lady Hilda.'"

The waiter brought the vermouth, which his visitor sipped contentedly.

"So there is a woman, is there?" she went on, looking across the room at her companion. "Have you committed yourself already, then? Don't you remember what I told you the first night we met after the opera—that it is well to wait?"

"Yes, I remember," John admitted. "I meant it."

He laughed good-humoredly, yet not without some trace of self-consciousness.

"The mischief was done then," he said.

"Couldn't it be undone?" she asked lazily. "Or are you one of those tedious people who are faithful forever? Fidelity," she continued, knocking the ash from her cigarette, "is really, to my mind, the most bourgeois of vices. It comes from a want of elasticity in the emotional fibers. Nothing in life has bored me so much as the faithfulness of my lovers."

"You ought to put all this into one of your books," John suggested.

"I probably shall, when I write my reminiscences," she replied. "Tell me about this woman. And don't stand about in that restless way at the other end of the room. Bring a chair close to me—there, close to my side!"

John obeyed, and his visitor contemplated him thoughtfully through a little cloud of tobacco smoke.

"Yes," she decided, "there is no use denying it. You are hatefully good-looking, and somehow or other I think your clothes have improved you. You have a little more air than when you first came to town. Are you quite sure that you haven't made up your mind about this woman in a hurry?"

"Quite sure," John laughed. "I suppose I am; rather an idiot, but I am addicted to the vice of which you were speaking."

She nodded.

"I should imagine," she said, "that you were not an adept in the art of flirtation. Is it true that the woman is Louise Maurel?"

"Quite true," John replied.

"But don't you know—"

She broke off abruptly. She saw the face of the man by her side suddenly change, and her instinct warned her of the danger into which she was rushing.

"You surprise me very much," she said. "Louise Maurel is a very wonderful woman, but she seems to spend the whole of her time with my cousin, the prince."

"They are, without doubt, very friendly," John assented. "They have a good many interests in common, and the prince is connected with the syndicate which finances the theater. I do not imagine, however, that the prince wishes to marry her, or she him."

Lady Hilda began to laugh, softly, but as if genuinely amused. John sat and watched her in ominous silence. Not the flicker of a smile parted his lips. His visitor, however, was undisturbed. She leaned over and patted his hand.

"Simple Simon!" she murmured, leaning a little toward him. "If you go on looking like that, I shall put your checks, too. You are really much too nice looking to wear such thunder clouds!"

"Perhaps if we chose some other subject of conversation—" John said stiffly.

"Oh, dear me!" she interrupted. "Very well! You really are a most trying person; you know, I put up with a great deal from you."

John was silent. Her face darkened a little, and an angry light flashed in her eyes.

"Well, I'll leave you alone if you like," she decided, tossing her cigarette into the grate. "If my friendship isn't worth having, let it go. It hasn't often been offered in vain. There are more men in London than I could count who would go down on their knees for such a visit as I am paying you. And you—you," she added, with a little tremble of real anger in her tone, "you're too hatefully polite and priggish! Come and ring the bell for the lift. I am going!"

She slid gracefully to her feet, shook the cigarette ash from her clothes, and picked up her muff.

"You are really an egregious, thick-headed, obstinate countryman," she declared, as she moved toward the door. "You haven't either manners or sensibility. I am a perfect idiot to waste my time upon you. I wouldn't have done it," she added, as he followed her dumbly down the corridor, "if I hadn't rather liked you!"

"I am very sorry," he declared. "I don't know quite what I have done. I do appreciate your friendship. You have been very kind to me indeed."

She hesitated as his finger touched the bell of the lift, and glanced at the watch on her wrist. She sighed, and watched the top of the lift as it came up. Then she dropped her veil.

CHAPTER XV.

"This is very nearly my idea of perfect happiness," Sophie murmured, as she leaned across the table and listened idly while John ordered the dinner. "Give me very little to eat, John, and talk a great deal to me. I am depressed about myself and worried about everything!"

"And I," he declared, "am just beginning to breathe again. I don't think I understand women, Sophie."

"Wasn't your week-end party a success?" she asked.

"Not altogether," he confessed; "but don't let's talk about it. Tell me what is depressing you."

"About myself, or things generally?"

"Yourself first."

"Well, the most respectable young man you ever knew in your life, who lives in Bath, wants me to marry him. I don't think I could. I don't think I could live in Bath, and I don't think I could marry anyone. And I've just thirteen shillings and fourpence left. I haven't paid my rent, and my dressmaker is calling for something on account on Monday morning."

"There's only one thing to answer to that," John insisted cheerfully. "I am going to lend you fifty pounds while you make your mind up about the young man."

"You Really Are an Egregious, Thick-Headed, Obstinate Country Man."

She made a face at him.

"I couldn't borrow money from a strange gentleman," she protested.

"Rubbish!" he exclaimed. "If you begin calling me a stranger—but there, never mind! We'll see about that dinner. Tell me more about your love affair, Sophie."

"It isn't a love affair at all!" she exclaimed, almost indignantly.

"Why, I am sorry. Your prospective alliance, then, shall I call it?"

"Oh, it isn't interesting," she said. "It's just a young man in Bath. He is a lawyer and moderately well off. He has wanted me to marry him for years. He was a friend of my brother's. Lately he has been bothering a little more than usual—in fact, I suppose I have received what might be called an ultimatum. He came up yesterday, and I went out with him last night. He has gone back to Bath this morning, and I have promised to let him know in a month. I think that is why I went out to Waterloo bridge in a mackintosh and got wet."

"Do you like him?" John asked practically.

"Like him, I suppose," Sophie sighed. "That's the worst of it. If I didn't like him, there might be some chance. I can't realize myself ever doing more than liking him in a mild sort of way; and if he expected more, as of course he would, then I should probably hate him. He tried to kiss me on the way to the station, and I nearly scratched him. That isn't like me, you know. I rather like being kissed sometimes."

John buried himself in the wine-list.

"Well," he admitted, "it doesn't sound very hopeful. I'm no sort of judge in these matters, but I have heard lots of people say that one gets on all right after marriage without caring very much before. You don't seem to have a very comfortable life now, do you?"

"Comfortable? No, but I am free," Sophie replied quickly. "I can come in and go out when I please, choose my own friends. It's rather fine to be here, you know—to be in the atmosphere, even if the limelight misses one."

John sighed, and regarded her thoughtfully. "You're a queer little girl, Sophie," he said. "I don't know how to advise you."

"Of course you don't," she answered. "No one could. As for you, I suppose you will marry Louise. What will happen to you after that, I don't know. Perhaps I shouldn't care so much about London then. You've made it very nice for me, you know."

"You've made it bearable even for me," he told her. "I often think how lonely I should have been without you to talk to. Louise sometimes is delightfully companionable, and kind enough to turn one's head. Other days I scarcely understand her; everything we say to one another seems wrong. I come away and leave her simply because I feel that there is a wall between us that I can't get over."

"There isn't really," Sophie sighed. "Louise is a dear. Considering everything, I think she is wonderful. But you are utterly different. She is very complex, very emotional, and she has her own standards of life. You, on the other hand, are very simple, very faithful and honest, and you accept the standards which have been made for you—very, very rigidly, John. What are you looking at?"

John's whole expression had suddenly changed. His eyes were fixed upon the door, his face was stern as a granite block. Sophie turned quickly around. The maître d'hôtel, with another satellite in his rear, was welcoming with much ceremony two lately arrived guests. Sophie clutched at the tablecloth. The newcomers were Louise and the prince of Seyre.

"I don't understand this!" John muttered, his lips twitching.

Sophie Gerard said nothing. Her cheeks were pink with excitement.

Suddenly Louise saw John and Sophie. She stood quite still for a moment; then she came toward them, slowly and a little languidly. The prince was still studying through his eyeglass the various tables which the head waiter was offering for his consideration.

"What an astonishing meeting!" Louise remarked, as she laid her hand for a moment on Sophie's shoulder. "What is going on behind my back?"

John rose very slowly to his feet. He seemed taller than ever, and Louise's smile remained unanswered.

"The rain broke up my week-end party," he explained, "and I met Sophie in the Strand. In any case, I intended returning tonight. I understood that you would not be here until tomorrow about eleven o'clock."

"Those were my plans," Louise replied; "but, as you see, other things have intervened. Our little house party, too, was broken up by this abominable weather, and we all motored up to town. The Faradays have gone home. The prince heard from Miles that I was at home, and telephoned me to dine. Me voici!"

John was struggling with a crowd of hateful thoughts. Louise was wearing a wonderful gown; her hair was beautifully arranged; she had the air of a woman whose toilet was complete and perfect down to the slightest detail. The prince's slow drawl reached them distinctly.

"It was my servant's fault, I suppose," he said. "I told him to ring up last night and order the table for two in that corner. However, we will take the vacant one near your desk."

He looked around and, as if for the first time, missed Louise. He came toward them at once.

"The prince seems to have ordered his table last night," John remarked, his tone, even to himself, sounding queer and strained.

Louise made no reply. The prince was already shaking hands with Sophie. "I thought you were spending the week-end with my cousin, Strangeway," he remarked, turning to John.

"We did spend part of it together," John replied. "The weather drove us back this afternoon."

"I congratulate you both on your good taste," said the prince. "There is nothing more abominable than a riverside retreat out of season. We are taking the table on the left, Le

He led her away, and they passed down the room. John slowly resumed his seat.

"Sophie," he demanded hoarsely, "tell me the truth. Is there anything between the prince and Louise?"

Sophie nervously crumpled up the toast by her side.

"The prince admires Louise, and has done so for many years," she answered. "No one knows anything else. Louise never speaks of him to me. I cannot tell you."

"But you must know," he persisted, with a little break in his voice. "Forgive me, Sophie, if I made an ass of myself. First Lady Hilda, and then Grailiot, and then—well, I thought Louise might have rung up to see whether I was at home, if she came back sooner than she expected; and the prince took the table last night!"

She leaned over and patted him on the hand.

"Don't worry," she begged. "If Louise has to choose some day between him and you, I don't think she'll hesitate very long. Don't look so stern, please. You look very statuesque and perfect, but I don't want to dine with a piece of sculpture. Remember that I am finding you too attractive for my peace of mind. There's your text!"

He poured a glass of wine and drank it off.

"I'll do my best," he agreed. "If it sounds like rubbish, you can still believe that I appreciate everything you've told me. You are pretty, and I am lucky to have you here. Now I'll try to make you believe that I think so."

She leaned over so that her head almost touched his.

"Go on, please!" she murmured. "Even if it hurts afterward, it will be heavenly to listen to!"

She Leaned Over and Patted Him on the Hand.

The next night Sophie acted as showman at the first production of the play, so long delayed because of Grailiot's insistence on a scene that promised to be startling to English playgoers. Her part was over at the end of the first act, and a few minutes later she slipped into a seat by John's side behind the curtain.

"What do you think of it so far?" she asked a little anxiously.

"It seems quite good," John replied cheerfully. "Some very clever lines, and all that sort of thing; but I can't quite see what it's all leading to."

Sophie peered around the house from behind the curtain.

"There isn't standing room anywhere," she declared. "I don't suppose there ever was a play in London that was more talked about; and then putting it off for more than three months—why, there have been all sorts of rumors about. Do you want to know who the people in the audience are?"

"Not particularly," John answered. "I shouldn't know them, if you told me. There are just a few familiar faces. I see the prince in the box opposite."

"Did you telephone to Louise today?" Sophie asked.

John shook his head.

"No. I thought it better to leave her alone until after tonight."

"You are going to the supper, of course?"

"I have been asked," John replied, a little doubtfully. "I don't quite know whether I want to. Is it being given by the prince or by the management?"

"The management," Sophie assured him. "Do you come and take me! It's going to be rather fun."

The curtain went up upon the second act. John, from the shadows of the box, listened attentively. The subject was not a particularly new one, but the writing was brilliant. There was the old "Marquis de Guy," a rascal, a degenerate, but still overbearing and full of personality, from whose lips came some of Grailiot's most brilliant sayings; Louise, his wife; and Faraday, a friend of the old marquis, and obviously the intended lover of his wife.

"I don't see anything so terrible in this," John remarked, as the curtain went down once more and thunders of applause greeted some wonderful lines of Grailiot's.

The mystery about the life of Louise further troubles John and he sets forth to get the exact truth, no matter how tragic for him it may be.

Faulty Kidneys Caused Acute Suffering. Completely Recovered Since Using Doan's.

Mrs. Harry A. Lyon, 5 St. William St., Boston, Mass., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have surely done me wonderful good. About two months prior to the birth of my baby, I had two convulsions and was taken to a hospital. Doctors said the convulsions were due to my kidneys not working properly. 'I had swelling of the feet and ankles so that I had to wear large-sized slippers. My back ached intensely, I was nervous and unable to sleep. I also suffered from awful headaches and felt weak, tired, languid, and run down. 'After I came home a friend suggested that I try Doan's Kidney Pills, and I got some. I soon noticed improvement; my back became stronger and I felt better in every way. I kept on taking Doan's and was cured. They are surely reliable.' Mrs. Lyon gave the above statement in May, 1915, and on March 12, 1917, she said: 'My cure has lasted. I take Doan's occasionally, however, as a strengthener for my kidneys.' Carl Emil Junck Tells How Teutons Are Tricky in Other Ways Than in War.

Carl Emil Junck, a dye importer of Chicago, was talking about Germany. "The German spirit today is tricky, shifty and false," he said. "The Germans today think it's clever to cheat. Their war, with its violation of every law and every international agreement, is a cheating war. 'Here is an illustration of the German spirit. 'When I lived in Elberfeld I organized a football team among the Elberfeld boys. Once, when the team was to play a neighboring team, I gave the boys 100 marks to buy shoes, leg guards or whatever would most help them to win. 'Well, they won, but their shoes and leg guards were very old and shabby, and I said to the captain after the game: 'Glad you liked 'em, though certainly some of the decisions were close. But what did you do with the money I gave you?' 'The captain answered with a knowing smile: 'You said, Herr Junck, that we were to use the money in any way that would best help us to win; so of course we made a present of it to the umpire.' Don't Neglect Kidneys

Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Prescription, Overcomes Kidney Trouble

It is now conceded by physicians that the kidneys should have more attention as they control the other organs to a remarkable degree and do a tremendous amount of work in removing the poisons and waste matter from the system by filtering the blood.

The kidneys should receive some assistance when needed. We take less exercise, drink less water and often eat more rich, heavy food, thereby forcing the kidneys to do more work than nature intended. Evidence of kidney trouble, such as lame back, annoying bladder troubles, smarting or burning, brick-dust or sediment, sallow complexion, rheumatism, maybe weak or irregular heart action, warns you that your kidneys require help immediately to avoid more serious trouble.

An ideal herbal compound that has had most remarkable success as a kidney and bladder remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. There is nothing else like it. It is Dr. Kilmer's prescription used in private practice and it is sure to benefit you. Get a bottle from your druggist.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper. Adv.

WORDS LOST THEIR FORCE

Schwab Should Have Spoken Into Phonograph, He Is Told, When Discussing His Speech.

A banker who was told that Charles M. Schwab, the president of the Bethlehem Steel works, was one of the most forceful speakers ever heard at a banquet table, said he believed it, and then told this story:

About the time that Schwab was buying Bethlehem Steel, and had made arrangements with Pliny Fisk of New York, to handle the bonds, he went over to New York, and, of course, was entertained at a dinner. There he made one of his most forceful utterances. Mr. Fisk was moved to such an extent that he said to Mr. Schwab: "That will sell the bonds. Only, you should write it out for me when you return, so I shall make an accurate statement."

Mr. Schwab wrote out his remarks as soon as he got back to his home and sent them to Mr. Fisk.

Mr. Fisk saw him soon afterward, and said: "Why didn't you write me what you said?"

"I did," responded the steel master. "I wrote the exact words."

"Well," answered Mr. Fisk, much disconcerted, "you should have spoken them into a phonograph."

An Expensive Incumbence.

"Old Bostely says he has a million dollar brain," observed the man who was always picking up information.

"He's quite right," answered the other; "it would cost him fully that much to find out what's the matter with it."

CARE IN FEEDING HOGS PROFITABLE

Hogs Brought in From Pasture Should Be Kept in Good Condition.

KEEP THE APPETITE KEEN

Substitutes Must Be Provided for Succulent Pasture—High Price of Pork Warrants Careful Feeding.

By W. E. J. EDWARDS, Department of Animal Husbandry, Michigan Agricultural College.

East Lansing, Mich.—With the price of pork abnormally high and still soaring, the wise farmer is carefully studying the mixing of feeds for hogs so that the largest and cheapest gains will be produced in the shortest time. As the price of pork has advanced, all feeding stuffs for hogs have advanced correspondingly, and in some cases to a greater extent, so it is essential that these high-priced feeds be used to the very best advantage. The proper balancing of the ration, important in normal times, is doubly important now. The right amount of lean meat, bone and fat-forming constituents should be fed so that there will be no loss. Hogs must have certain amounts of these constituents, but if any one is fed beyond a certain point the excess is wasted. On the other hand, if there is a deficiency in any one of the food properties, the cost of production is increased and the gains decreased.

Hogs which have been on pasture when put in the feeding pens should be fed very carefully for some time at least. With the diminished amount of exercise, they are easily put off feed. The feeder should not be overly anxious to increase the feed rapidly as a hog once put off feed, if closely confined, as the bulk of our hogs are when being finished, may never be as thrifty again. It is much better to feed slightly too little, and thereby keep the appetite keen at all times, so that the amount can be increased gradually throughout the whole feeding period, than to get overly anxious and increase the feed faster than the appetite and capacity of the hog develops, thereby sickening the animal.

While on pasture hogs do very well on such fattening grains as corn, barley or rye. In the fattening pen, where succulent feed is not available and the quarters are necessarily small, other feeds must be added. Even with a fattening hog which is to be finished quickly, a heavy fattening feed such as corn cannot be used advantageously as a certain amount of growing or bone-and-muscle-forming food must be added in order that the hog maintain a strong, healthy condition. A lack of growing food is responsible for many crippled hogs.

Skim milk or buttermilk, which have about equal feeding value, give good results with any of the fattening foods. The milk has the greatest feeding value when three parts, by weight, is used to one part of corn, barley or other fattening food. This gives a balanced ration for hogs weighing around 150 pounds. Three parts of wheat middlings with two parts of any of the above grains furnishes the proper constituents for a hog of the weight mentioned, in a very palatable form. Digestive tankage (60 per cent protein) can also be used to good advantage in balancing the ration. It should be fed in the proportions of one part to eight or ten parts of fattening grain, depending upon the size of the hogs. Hogs relish a mixture of grains. The larger number of feeds in the mixture, if the proper proportions of growing and fattening constituents are maintained, the keener will be the appetite of the hogs and the larger the gains.

STORE ONLY GOOD POTATOES

Diseased and Bruised Tubers Will Cause Loss

By G. H. COONS, Plant Disease Specialist Michigan Agricultural College.

East Lansing, Mich.—Each year in order that the crop supplies may be equalized, potatoes are stored in pits or warehouses. Some years this storage leads to great disappointment, due to rotting of the tubers. We read that the cause of the great food distress in Germany is the loss of potatoes in storage. There is a naturally great interest to know what we may expect if we put potatoes into cellars or pits this year. Late blight, the disease which is the common cause of rotting in the cellars, is entirely absent in Michigan this year, because of the dry weather conditions during the first half of the potato-growing season. Fortunately, we can store potatoes this season without fear of rotting from this disease.

There are, however, fungi always present on potatoes, which will cause rotting if the storage conditions are not good or if the potatoes are wounded or bruised. These fungi lead to the various dry rots. Hot, humid conditions are ideal for the development of these molds, while dry, cool, well-ventilated locations are safe. Too immature potatoes, with broken skins, bruised potatoes, or potatoes with fork holes or grub injuries are prone to rot. This, of course, may be easily avoided by proper sorting.

Occasionally pits are found in which the potatoes show blackened hearts. Experiments have shown that a high temperature (100 degrees Fahrenheit) in the storage cellar or car may lead to a breaking down of the tuber, which manifests itself by blackening of the heart. Recent work by New York investigators shows that even at low temperatures, black heart may occur if aeration is poor. In the reported trials potatoes kept for ten to twelve days at room temperature with scanty air supply showed blackened hearts. It is evident that these results have great importance because of their applicability to pit and warehouse storage. Potatoes must be kept cold, and in large pits ventilation must be provided for.

In some of the northern regions black leg is abundant. This is a bacterial disease, and affected tubers rot at the stem ends. Tubers showing black leg should be used at once, since there will be considerable loss in storage.

The grower can store without fear of rotting from blight this year. However, potatoes affected with black leg are unsafe for storage. Only sound tubers should be put in pit or warehouse. The pits must be made with care, in order that the potatoes may be kept cool and well ventilated. The

GERMANY CUT OFF BY TRADE BARRIER

NEW REGULATIONS ISSUED, AIM TO FORCE TEUTON EMPIRE INTO SUBMISSION.

ENFORCE ENEMY TRADING ACT

Stop Trade With Allies of Enemy in United States As Well As All Trade Abroad.

Washington—President Wilson has issued the regulations for the enforcement of the trading with the enemy act. They constitute far-reaching control of every phase of intercourse between the United States and the remainder of the world.

They give legal force to every move of the United States in casting about Germany an economic barrier which will compel her into submission.

German Trade Cut Off.

Not only do the new regulations provide for cutting off trade between the United States and Germany, but they cut off trade with Germany's allies; and with those who trade with either Germany or her allies. They further provide custodians for all enemy property in the United States and require special license for trade or intercourse with any enemy or ally of an enemy within the United States.

Other provisions in the regulations: Authorize the secretary of the treasury to investigate and supervise all foreign exchange and prevent its working to the advantage of the enemy. Empower the secretary of the treasury to prevent taking into the United States of any communication other than by mail, telegraph, cable or wireless.

Create Censorship Board.

Officially create a censorship board, consisting of representatives of the secretaries of war and of the navy, postmaster-general, war trade board and committee on public information, to censor mail, cable, radio and other means of communication.

Authorize the federal trade commission to keep secret patents that may be developed for the interest of the United States and to regulate the use of enemy owned or controlled patents in the United States.

Vest in the postmaster-general the authority to censor foreign language publications.

Charge the secretary of state with control over the entry and egress from the United States of enemies or allies of the enemy.

Authorize the secretary of commerce to hear appeals from refusals of customs officers to grant clearance papers to vessels.

Charge the attorney-general with the enforcement of the criminal sections of the trading with the enemy act.

Empower the president to regulate imports as well as exports.

Regulations Defined.

In an official statement accompanying the regulations this is said of these definitions:

Any persons, no matter of what nationality, who reside in the territory of the German empire or the territory of any of its allies, or the territory occupied by any of their military forces, is expressly made an "enemy" or an "ally of the enemy." Thus, those American citizens who have remained in these territories are nevertheless enemies for the purpose of these regulations.

Any person no matter where residing or of what nationality, who is doing business within these territories, is made an enemy or an ally of the enemy. This, of course, applies with special force to the border neutrals, and it is this definition that will give great force to the embargo.

German Firms Included.

Any corporation created by Germany or its allies is an enemy or an ally of an enemy, no matter where located.

Not only is it made unlawful to trade with the persons and firms defined above, but it is unlawful to trade with:

Any person who is believed to be acting for or on account of or for the benefit of an enemy or an ally of an enemy, wherever and wherever they may be.

It is pointed out in the president's order that in dealing with subjects of Germany who are residents of the United States, it must be remembered that their nationality does not prevent ordinary commercial intercourse with them. The test of their "enmity" in this law is whether they are trading with or for the benefit of Germany. It is pointed out that they may be interned under other provisions of the law.

An "enemy" or "ally of enemy" doing business within the United States, before November 5, may apply for a license to continue to do business in the United States.

Need Not Close at Once.

The main application of these provisions, the official statement says, "will be to German or ally-of-German concerns which are doing business in the United States through branch houses or agents, such as insurance or re-insurance companies. Such an 'enemy' or 'ally of enemy' may continue to do business within the United States until such applications are acted upon."

The license provisions of the act do not apply to Germans, Austrians, Turks or Bulgarians doing business in the United States and having no business connections with Germany.

Thus thousands of alien enemies having small business establishments in the United States need not apply for license to continue operations unless they have dealings with companies having connections in enemy or ally of enemy territory.

The act authorizes the president to declare all these alien enemies subject to license regulations, but he has not extended the provision to those persons by his order.

His Sensitive Soul.

George Challis, owner of a theater in Muncie, Ind., believes that the craving for passes to shows becomes a mania, and relates a case in point, according to the Indianapolis News. He had been besieged for weeks by a man for passes to show in the theater, and two or three times, just to get rid of him, had passed him in, which only seemed to make him the more insistent the next time, although Challis was under no obligation to him. Finally the fellow struck Challis one day when the latter was suffering from the effects of a "poor house" the night before, and, exasperated, he reached down in his pocket and handing the importuning one a dollar, said, "Go over there to the box office and buy yourself a ticket like other people do." Puffing up, his dignity ruffled and his feelings apparently hurt, the other replied, "What do you take me for—a cheap skate?" And then haughtily walked away—with Challis' dollar in his pocket.

She Studied Byron.

Mrs. Hawkins, who posed as a literary woman and professed a great admiration for Byron's works, had recently purchased a little dog and was showing him to a caller.

"What have you named him?" asked the caller.

"Perchance," was the reply.

"What a singular name for an animal!" commented the caller.

"I named him after Byron's dog," she explained. "Don't you remember the line in 'Childe Harold,' where the poet says, 'Perchance my dog?'"

Wireless Air Raid Warning.

The London Daily Chronicle reports that Mr. Thorp Hines has devised apparatus for giving warnings of impending air raids. It is claimed to be especially applicable to factories and public buildings. An electric resonator is placed on the roof, and on the sound of a given pitch being produced, the resonator causes a bell to ring in the building until it is stopped. It is said that large areas, such for instance as the whole of a city, can be simultaneously and instantaneously warned.
