Realizes Liberty Dream of 21 Years.

Promised a parole by four governors, but always disappointed, John Higgins, a Jackson prison inmate, has after twenty-one years, realized the dream of liberty. He is now a free man, being pardoned by Governor Sleeper.

Higgins was sentenced from Adrian in June 1898.

During the many years, he points out many reforms in penitentiary life. When he came to prison the lock-step, striped suits, solitary confinement and the silence treatment were common, he says.

Higgins began raising canaries eighteen years ago and during that time has sold more than 6,000 birds. He has 400 birds at the prison at present. He also took up the study of photography which he mastered and for years has been the official photographer at the penitentiary.

The freed man said he did not know what branch of work he would take up on the outside.

Questions That Will be Asked.

A large number of personal questions will be asked when the census enumerator calls upon you. Personal differences between man and wife as to temporary chieftainship will be of no concern to the enumerators, nor is politics of any moment. Husbands are listed as the heads of the family. Age is another question everyone will be asked. And feminine modesty must be set aside when census time comes, for Uncle Sam imposes a jail sentence for refusal to answer census questions.

Here is the list of questions every person must answer:

What is your surname, your given name and your middle initial?

Are you the head of your family, the wife, the son, the daughter, sister, brother, mother, father, boarder, servant, grandmother, grandfather, grandson, granddaughter, niece, nephew, uncle or aunt?

Do you own the home or rent it, and if owned, is it mortgaged?

The amount of mortgage will not be asked.

What is your sex?

What is your color?

What is your age?

Are you single, married, widowed or divorced?

In what year did you immigrate to the United States?

Are you naturalized or an alien?

If naturalized, in what year?

Have you attended school since September 1, 1919?

Are you able to read?

Can you write?

In what or foreign country were you born?

What is your mother tongue?

Where was your father born and what is his mother tongue?

Can you speak English?

What is your trade, profession, or particular kind of work done?

In what industry do you work?

Are you employer, on salary, wage worker or on your own account?

Each occupant of a farm will be asked how many years, if any, he worked on a farm for wages; how many years, if any, he was a tenant; and how many years, if any, he farmed as an owner.

Whether he (a) owns, or (b) rents, or (c) partly owns and partly rents his farm, or whether (d) he operates the farm for others as manager superintendent.

How many acres in his farm? Number of improved acres? Number of unimproved acres and number of acres of woodland?

Total value of farm? Total value of buildings? Value of implements and machinery on farm?

Whether farm is mortgaged? If so, the amount of the mortgage?

Expenses for feed, fertilizer, and labor in the year 1919?

Several questions concerning artificial drainage of his farm.

Number of cows, horses, sheep, chickens, and other domestic animals on the farm January 1, 1920?

Quantity and acreage of all crops grown on the farm in 1919, including fruits and vegetables?

Quantity of milk and butter sold off the farm during the year 1919?

Acreage of timber land on farm and value of forest products.

B. V. R. C. will meet with Mrs. C. M. Stephens Monday evening, December 29.

Special meeting of Olive Lodge, No. 156, F. & A. M., will be held on Tuesday evening, December 30. Work in M. M. degree.

Olive Chapeter, No. 140, R. A. M., will hold a special meeting, December 26. Work in Past Master degree.

There will be a special meeting of Chelsea Lodge, No. 194, K. of P., on Monday evening, December 29. Work in second degree.

MOTORMAN KILLED IN WRECK SUNDAY

First Section of Interurban Rammed by Second Section.

Edward Webb, aged 42 years, of Jackson, motorman on the D., J. & C. Ry., died Sunday night as the result of injuries received when his car crashed into the rear of another at the Francisco switch. Mr. Webb was caught in the crushed vestibule of the car he was driving.

The car was the second section of train 174 eastbound, and left Jackson at 5:55. Two other men were slightly injured by broken glass.

The exact cause of the accident has not been learned, but it is believed that Webb forgot the first section was on the switch and crashed into it before he was able to stop. The wreck occurred at 6:33 o'clock, just as the westbound car was due and car. The conductor on the car driven Webb was sent to Jackson on that by Webb was Harry Graham of Jackson. The conductor and motorman of the car which was waiting on the switch were Russell Wallace and Fred Prieskorn, both of Ypsilanti.

Mr. Webb is survived by his wife and four sons. He was a brother of Addison Webb, a former resident of Lima Center.

The second section entered the first car as far as the second row of seats.

Among the pasengers were Miss Winifred Benton, Miss Hannah Hall, Mrs. Ed. Kunyack and L. L. Winans.

WAGON WRECKED ON THE McKINLEY ST. CROSSING

Lewis Stapish Escaped Injuries When His Was Struck by Train Saturday

About 6 o'clock Saturday evening, Lewis Stapish of Chelsa, had a narrow escape from death on the McKinley street crossing of the Michigan Central railroad .

He was returning from the farm of his mother, Mrs. Clara Stapish, of Dexter township, with a load of wood, and drove onto the track just as a fast eastbound express train was coming. He struck his horses with a stick of wood and they jumped taking the front part of the wagon off the track. The rear of the wagon was demolished and part of the load scattered. Both Mr. Stapish and the team escaped without injury.

The cylinder head of the locomotive was broken and the train was detained here for several hours until another locomotive could be brought.

Pay Dog Tax to Township Treasurer.

After January 10, any dog not wearing a license tag, which may be found anywhere except on the premises of the owner can be killed by any officer or any other person.

Under the new law, after January 10, a dog that is not licensed is defined in the law as a "public nuisance" and any person is privileged to take the dog's life as explained above.

The license tags may be procured from the township treasurer. They will cost $3 for a male dog and $6 for a female.

The license tag must be attached to a collar and must be worn by the dog constantly.

In talking with Township Treasurer Fahrner this week he stated that notwithstanding the fact that there are so many dogs on the streets that a person almost falls over them, no owner have appeared to pay the tax. It will soon be the open season for dogs, if their owners do not come in and get the tags.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

S. P. I. will meet with Miss Esther Faist next Monday evening.

A recess meeting of the Maccabees will be held at 7 o'clock Friday evening.

Regular meeting of Olive Chapter, O. E. S., Wednesday evening, December 31.

The Y. P. S. of St. Paul's church will hold a box social at the home of Mrs. Fred Niehaus, Tuesday evening, December 30.

The American Legion will give a dance in the Welfare building, Saturday evening, December 27. The boys have been fortunate in getting excellent music for the occasion, and expect a large crowd.

A "self serve" or cafeteria supper will be given by the ladies of the M. E. church, Wednesday evening, December 31, beginning at 5:30 p. m. A yourself. The cafeteria will be in cordial invitation to all who like good "eats" and a chance to serve the basement of the church.

Organize Cow Testing Association.

A number of the farmers in the vicinity of Ypsilanti and Willis have organized a cow testing associaton. Such an association includes twenty-six farmers who agree to have their herds tested once each month by an official tester employed by teh association.

The tester keeps an account of the amount of feed consumed, the amount of milk produced and its butterfat test for each individual cow in the herd. By comparison of the results, as shown by these figures, it enables the farmer to determine his most economical producing cows and assist him in eliminating the star boarders.

There are quit a number of these associations in Michigan but this is the first one to be organized in Washtenaw county.

Community Service.

There can be no disagreement on the statement that friendly relations within the social structure should be cultivated. The best instrument at hand is Community Service, an organization which has grown out of War Camp Community Service.

The aim of Community Service in all its work will not be to impose a cut and dried program from without, but to draw on the strength that is in the people and to make them efficient directors in their own affairs. Community Service is, in fact, organized friendship localized and made practical.

It does not require much argument to convince the average American that Community Service is worth while, that the neighborly spirit is a valuable thing to cultivate and that mutual understanding and tolerance in relatively smaller matters make for the speedier solution of the so-called larger problems. The appeal in each community is made to all the people, not as rich or poor, as native or foreign origin, but as citizens. All are invited, not to give or to accept assistance, but to work together for the community of which they are a part to make it a hospitable place and a better town to live in.

Good citizenship cannot thrive where the incentive for good citizenship does not exist. A love for the community will develope in proportion to the satisfaction or legitimate dissatisfaction a man feels for the place of his abode. The community must have the first consideration outside of the family. An undertaking that has for its chief aim lofty ends is worthy of the highest emulation and that man or woman who fails to recognize in the Community Service movement one of the greatest forces for good yet thought out, has not realized how vastly important is the conservation of the community in the present vast social readjustment.

The Michigan Community Council Commission created by the legislature and an outgrowth of the Council of National Defense and War Board held a conference in Grand Rapids during the past week. This Commission is preparing a complete statement of its program, methods of procedure in organization and relationship to the community. It is the plan of the bill creating this Commission to have a County Community Service Board in each county in the state and Community Councils appointed in as many of the communities of each county as the county board may decide.

Already fifty-nine of the eighty-three counties of the state have been organized, including Washtenaw, and seventeen of them are employing paid secretaries.

Better Get Your Auto License.

Michigan state police will get you if you don't get your 1920 automobile license plate before New Year's Day. There will be no time allowance for those who defer application until the last minute, it is announced. The department of state and the state police force headed by Col. Roy C. Vandercook, have made arrangements to enforce the law.

The state department is maintaining thirty offices in various parts of the state to issue licenses. Autoists, however, are delaying as they have been wont to do in the past. "There will be no excuse for car owners not obtaining their licenses on or before January 1," said Frank D. Fitzgerald, deputy secretary of state, "as the offices are open and adequate to care for the situation."

The next meeting of Cavanaugh Lake Grange will be held in the basement of Salem church on Tuesday evening, December 30. All candidates for initiation in the first and second degrees are requested to be present.

In turning over a new leaf, be sure to lay a 1,000-pound weight on it, so it won't fly back.

YEARS MERELY LIFE'S CHAPTERS

Offer Opportunity for Each of Us to Write Therein a Record Better Than the Preceding.

THE coming year lies spread like the white plain that sweeps from the roadside to the distant forest where the gray squirrels are making tracks in the light snow. On this white sheet a little record may be written; not a full life story, but merely a brief chapter or two, like the chapters of squirrel life that may be read by one who today ventures into the white forest.

It is a great mystery that lies ahead, a treasure house of endless possibilities. The span of a man's life is short; shorter in absolute measurement than the span of a year. For each year, when October fades into November, has wrought completeness. No human life can bring completeness. It cannot bring completeness of knowledge or completeness of happiness or completeness of good works. The best man can do, in his poor, limited way, is to glean as much wisdom and win as much happiness and do as much good as the number of his days permits. When the human October fades it may thus be rich and peaceful and without the scars of stormy days or the blight of wasted days and without undue regret that what should have been seen and known and done has not been seen and known and done.

A YEAR'S completeness is but a twelvemonth. Our human incompleteness covers many twelvemonths. How fortunate that each dawning year means a new opportunity to live and learn. Again and again we may take up the thread and advance toward the goal of apprehension. We may study God's works and year by year come nearer to an appreciation of them. We can never fully appreciate them, for our minds are finite, and they are infinite. But each succeeding year is a new opportunity. It offers the perfection of completeness, and by even a partial comprehension of its fullness we may move toward fulfillment of the measure of our lives.

"I am not afraid," said Thoreau, "that I shall exaggerate the value and significance of life, but that I shall not be up to the occasion which it is. I shall be sorry to remember that I was there, but noticed nothing remarkable —not so much as a prince in disguise; lived in the golden age a hired man; visited Olympus even, and fell asleep after dinner, and did not hear the conversation of the gods."

The new resolution will be simply the same old resolve broken with such frequency.

ONE who loves only artificiality, who does not note the excellence of the world he has been set to rule, proves himself unworthy of his heritage, and is punished by bitter unrest. His life lacks the boon of contentment which includes all boons. There are, or course, the few whose mental scope is too narrow for self-measurement. They do not even know that they are discontented and may enjoy life as the ox enjoys life. They are fortunate. The unfortunate man is the one who has, even dimly, an understanding that the world is good and beautiful and that he is failing to reap the richness that is rightly his.

The coming year is indeed a great mystery, full of possibilities. Whoever has not watched and studied the

HOW many of us are waiting for the opportunities of the coming year! With how many of us is it the unuttered hope that tomorrow, next week, next month, the next year may be as today in its privileges and opportunities, only far more abundant.

We are told that the first day of the New Year is an appropriate time to form good resolutions. But the New Year is tomorrow, and there is a better time for such a task, and that time is today. For "now is the accepted time."—Bishop H. C. Potter.

passing years may begin today; it is never too late. Whoever has long watched and loved the years will know that to his knowledge, however ripe, much will be added. He will advance a step nearer to the goal of contentment, and in so advancing will increase his human usefulness, his helpfulness.

THE year dawns on an earth red with blood, an earth torn with strife. It will be for most of the people of the earth a year of sorrow and of sacrifice. But for all this it will not be a bad year. Not half of civilized mankind but all mankind that has not forgotten the meaning of civilization has been unselfishly, heroically engaged in the needful work of ridding the world of a noxious parasitic growth, the poisonous fungus of militarism. For those who gave themselves to this essential work it will be a good year. For all who are suffering that the years to come may be happier and healthier the year will be a good year.

February will bring its crystal brightness. April will spread her feast of flowers. June will display her green perfection of beauty. August will offer the ripening grains; October the linden orchards. The year will take no heed of the crime that has been done by man or of the vengeance that marched inexorably.

POETS died in the trenches of Gallipoli and France, watching God's sunrise or the wispy clouds in the blue. British gentlemen caked with the mud of Flanders wrote detailed reports of their observations of migratory birds and of the effect of drumfire on bird life. French students and scholars, bearded and dirty, made careful notes of the flora of the Meuse and the Somme.

These men visited Olympus and did not fall asleep while the gods conversed. Neither did they permit the roar of man's fury to drown out the divine voices.

So it must be a good year that is ahead. There can be no bad years. The years are measured by God and not by the evil that men do.

Joy That All Can Have.

The joy of living is best found in the real success of life. Take away success and there's no joy in life to one alive to opportunities and responsibilities. No live man is satisfied with mere existence, for he wants to contribute something to the world's progress, the world's good. And it is in such contribution that real joy is found, the satisfaction that comes from full realization that one has done what he could in the year given him. So this is the joy this journal wishes every reader may have the coming year; and will have if they fully appreciate that the new year is theirs, to make it truly a happy new year.

Day Means Much to All.

New Years suggest intimate personal views of self. The annual crop of good resolutions shows how near most people are to becoming radically better. The day also bring a sense of the inexhaustible resources of life. It is the door into a wonderful future, new inventions, new discoveries, new achievements, of social justice and privilege and joy for the masses of men.

Little old last year's resolution is as good as any, and probably will wear fully as long as a new one.

If you leave it to the schoolboy New Year's day is what comes before he has to go back to school.

Michigan News Tersely Told

Bay City—Daniel Baumgarten, 80 year, old, a resident of this city since 1869 and a former business man, is dead.

Bay City—A fire in garage of the Stevens Creamery Co. destroyed the building and three automobiles. The loss is $2,500.

Schoolcraft—William Benton Cobb, supervisor for 16 terms and village president for many years, celebrated with his wife the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding.

Grand Rapids — John K. Agnew, former superintendent of the Pere Marquette railroad and prominent Michigan railroad man for nearly a quarter of a century, is dead.

West Branch—Miss Helen Tolfree, daughter of John Tolfree, banker and merchant, was married to Edward W. Winters, of Detroit, at the Episcopal parsonage at Royal Oak.

Cadillac.—More than $6,000 worth of food and clothing has been sold from the carload of surplus army stock bought from the Detroit army store by Cadillac merchants and sold at cost plus transportation.

Kalamazoo—John McCafferty, who jumped from the third story of old Borges hospital after eluding his nurse, will be committed to the State hospital for the insane. He was driven insane by pain of his illness.

Charlevoix. — Workmen digging trenches for a foundation found a human skeleton deeply imbedded in the roots of a large tree. The bones are thought to be those of an Indian or trapper, buried many years ago.

Grand Rapids—While conducting a hearing on a petition for a mandamus writ to require the school board to admit a girl truant to high school, the city attorney suddenly demanded change of venue, declaring Judge Dunham in Superior Court had prejudiced the case. The venue was denied.

Howell.—Stephen G. Fishbeck, 79, was found dead in his home with his clothing on fire. It is believed he suffered a faint spell while carrying a kerosene lamps, which was overturned near him. A brother discovered the body, going to the house, when the man did not appear for work.

Kalamazoo — Sheriff Eaton released Melvin and Mrs. Webb after administering a stern reprimand at the request of the Kalamazoo humane society. An investigation showed the couple had allowed a horse and two cows to go without food for three days and without water for two days.

St. Ignace.—Hunters near Moran report having killed a deer without feet. The animal had been caught in the forest fires last summer, had apparently run miles through embers and been permanently maimed. It was killed to put it out of its misery. The deer was pushing itself about subsisting on herbage.

Mt. Clemens—Newton Elliott, 10 years old, 787 McClelland avenue, Detroit, was killed instantly when a limited interurban struck him as he stepped on the rails. Elliot, with several relatives was touring to Mt. Clemens in an automobile. He attempted to shove the machine from the tracks after it had stalled.

Lansing.—Michigan public utilities commission has fixed December 23, as the date for determining whether it will permit the Detroit Edison company to increase its capital stock from $35,000,000 to $60,000,000 and also to issue 10-year, 7 per cent. convertible debenture bonds to the extent of the outstanding capital stock of that company on February 20.

Ann Arbor—Sebastian Neff, Donald Wilson and William Wilson, Jr., charged with selling intoxicating liquor, demanded hearings. The arrests followed investigations to determine where students in the university had been securing whisky. More than nine barrels of liquors, several cases of bottled intoxicants, and a miscellaneous assortment of jugs and bottles of whisky, champaigne, gin, rum and wines were confiscated.

Grand Rapids — Judge W. E. Eichorn, of Bluffton, Ind., appointed by the attorney general to assist Special Prosecutor Frank C. Dailey in preparing for the trial of United States Senator Truman H. Newberry and the 134 others indicted on the charge of conspiracy to violate the election laws, has arrived in Grand Rapids. He was formerly a circuit judge in Wells county, Indiana. He was defeated for congress in the eighth Indiana congressional district last year by a small margin.

Fruitport—The village may consolidate all its schools into one central standardized school.

Roscommon—John N. Bauer, an old resident near here, hanged himself in his barn. He fell a few days ago hurting his head.

Gaylord.—An epidemic of smallpox is reported in the vicinity of Johannesburg and the schools have been closed and all public gatherings abandoned.

Coldwater—An unwelcome surprise awaits Coldwater property owners when they go to pay their winter taxes, the rates having increased considerably over last year, the total being $18.53 per $1,000.

Grand Rapids—The Grand Rapids Citizens' league will ask a special session of the legislature this winter to secure legislation which will relieve the emergency existing as a result of the inadequacy of teachers' salaries.

Coldwater—"Some of the popular songs ought to be prohibited by law," Branch county teachers, attending an institute here, were told by Song Director Bently, Grand Rapids, who read the words of a "Jazz" song to prove his point.

Kalamazoo—The trial of J. Leo Hart, former bookkeeper of the Kalamazoo Stationery Co., is the first criminal case set for hearing after Jan. 5. Hart is one of three accused of defrauding the company out of a large amount of money.

Schoolcraft—Failure of the village to receive any coal shipments since the strike was called off has made fuel conditions worse than ever here and the municipal electric plant has been compelled to close between the hours of midnight and 5 a. m.

Big Rapids—The Mecosta county supervisors have been called into session December 29 at which time will be presented the question of building and maintaining a hospital owned and operated by Mecosta county. The estimated cost is $125,000.

Grand Rapids.—Delbert E. Clow, Ellsworth postmaster, was convicted in district court of a charge of misappropriation of war savings funds amounting to more than $50. A personal check for the deficiency, which he tendered the post inspector, was refused.

Bay City—L. M. MacArthur, probate judge, and a committee of the Ingham county board of supervisors, all of Lansing, investigated conditions at the Juvenile Home here, upon recommendation of the local institution's methods and equipment, by Arthur Murray, secretary of the State Board of Corrections and Charities.

Battle Creek — Charging him with abduction, the police arrested Charles Alfred, 23, an Italian employed in a local shoe repair shop. Alred, the police say, brought a pretty 16-year-old Kalamazoo girl to this city and, according to the city authorities the two since Sunday have been living in Albert's apartments.

Saginaw.—Sixty-one dollars each for a solution to keep automobile radiators from freezing is not exorbitant in the view of sheriff's officers—when the solution is paid for from other county funds. A raid on a fruit store recently netted 900 bottles of Jamaica ginger extract valued at $183. It is now in the radiators of three county automobiles.

Bay City.—A man, found dead in a hotel here, has been identified as John McCarthy, by Mrs. A. B. Hawley, of Houghton, his mother-in-law, who relates in a letter how, after a long absence, he returned to find Mrs. McCarthy re-married, believing him dead, and how he went away again rather than embarrass her.

Grand Rapids—Nineteen local aviators, headed by Major William Alden Smith, Jr., who served in the world war, have expressed a desire to be the first in aiding the government in case of a break with Mexico and have addressed a letter to the director of military aeronautics of the war department, offering their services.

Grand Rapids.—An ordinance to prevent motion pictures and shows of the speaking stage, believed detrimental, has been drafted by the city commission. The commission acted as the result of the denunciation of a dance act of a local vaudeville house by Ernestine Meyers recently. A censorship board of five persons, one to be the director of public welfare, is provided.

Ann Arbor—Furs valued at $15,000 were taken from Grlar Swerdling, local furrier, by four unidentified automobile thieves. Patrolmen Sodt and Kiehl, pursued the thieves as far as Dearborn, where trace was lost of them in the early morning traffic. At Ypsilanti, about nine miles from Ann Arbor, the police nearly overtook the thieves, but the distance between the two speeding cars was too great to allow the officers to shoot. According to the proprietor of the fur store, none of the stolen furs was insured.

Lansing.—A new species of warfare against fraternities and sororities in high schools is to be waged by Thomas E. Johnson, state superintendent of public instruction. Mr. Johnson declared he will seek legislation at the next session of the general assembly making it illegal for high schools students to belonging to organizations which elect members by secret ballot. Through the lack of such a law, he contends, students of high school have been able to hoodwink, the anti-frat law now on the statute books.

RAILROADS TO GO BACK TO OWNERS

SENATE PASSES CUMMINS' BILL SIMILAR TO HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MEASURE

CONTAINS ANTI STRIKE CLAUSE

Both Houses Agree on Terms of New Law Except Provisions Touching Labor

Washington.—The Cummins' bill, paving the way for return of the railroads to private ownership, passed the senate by a vote of 46 to 30, ending a prolonged discussion of the measure. It went through without change in the anti-strike and other important provisions around which the senate measure was drawn, and was sent to conference for adjustment. Final enactment of the permanent railroad reorganization legislation is hoped for by leaders early next month.

The ultimate disposition of the railroad problem, however, still is in doubt as the senate and house bills will be in conference and congress in recess on January 1, the date previously set by President Wilson for return of the lines to their owners. No further word regarding his present intention reach*ed congress before adjournment over* the holidays.

Unless vetoed by the president, the pending legislation, according to plans of congressional leaders, would require return of the roads by January 31. The railroad administration, however, has plans ready for their return January 1 under a presidential proclamation, should Mr. Wilson adhere to his announced program.

Preceding the final vote, the senate rejected, 65 to 11, a substitute bill offered by Senator LaFollette, Republican, Wisconsin, proposing retention of the roads another two years.

The Cummins bill was supported by 33 Republicans and 13 Democrats.

Representative Esch, chairman of the interstate commerce committee, who will head the house conferees, said that the labor sections of the two bills were "so radically different that the conferees would later have to ask the house for instructions."

Both senate and house bills propose private ownership and operation of the railroads under strict government supervision, but differ radically in other respects than their labor provisions. The senate bill would transfer the roads at midnight of the last day of the month in which the legislation is enacted; the house bill would return them similarly if enactment should come before the fifteenth of the month, otherwise to the end of 30 days.

ROOSEVELT HOUSE IS SOLD

Will Be Converted Into Sanitarium and Funds Converted to State Treasury.

Lansing. — Roosevelt Community House at Camp Custer, constructed and furnished by the War Preparedness Board last year at a cost of $302,000 was sold for $90,000. The furnishings and equipment had previously been sold for $10,000. The building was purchased by Lorey A. Wood, of Chicago, president of the International Health Resort Co. It will be reequipped and opened as a sanitorium.

The community house was originally intended as a hostelry for relatives visiting men in training at the military camp and as a center of the camp welfare work undertaken by civilian organizations. The armistice was signed, however, before it was ready for use.

The War Board also voted to close all other branches of its activities and disband at the end of January, 1920. Any unfinished work, such as collection of money loaned from the fund for officers' uniforms, will be taken over by the State Treasurer and other state departments.

Calls It Frame-Up

Washington.—The Farmers' National council, which represents 750,000 farmers, will demand a congressional investigation of the dissolution of the packing trust as announced by Attorney General Palmer. Declaring that the plan will not dissolve the trust or prevent the evils charged against it, the organization denounces the scheme of dissolution as a "nice little way to save the officials of the trust from criminal prosecution." It will issue a "red hot statement later."

Washington.—A hint that the settlement which the government made with the coal miners may be upset by action of the senate was given by Senator Frelinghuysen, Republican, of New Jersey. "I feel the committee investigating the coal situation will not approve or permit any more that will result in the increase in the price of coal to the consumer," he said. "The administration must come to congress for power to fix wages," he added.

LITMUS PAPERS TO TEST DEATH

French Scientist Discovers Method to Prove if Life is Extinct.

PRECLUDES BURIAL ALIVE

Test Is Physico-Chemical and Has to Do With Alkalinity of the Body in Life—Litmus Paper Applied to Serum Taken From Body.

Paris.—The fear of being buried alive is perhaps an elemental fear—one of the horrors that have haunted mankind through the ages. Not only the simple and ignorant have suffered because of it but wise men as well, and some of our most gifted writers have employed the theme of suspended animation for the basis of weird and terrible tales and of poems of Dantesque horror.

There has been some speculation among medical men during the war just over as to the possibility of a considerable number of ante-mortem burials of soldiers who received their last attentions in villages where the facilities for caring for desperately wounded men were of the most primitive kind.

Precedents at Hand.

Occasionally a newspaper carries a story of a victim of catalepsy or hysteria undergoing a narrow escape from premature burial, and recently an English daily told of a nurse who was found in a forest between Berlin and Potsdam, apparently dead from an overdose of veronal, and who was placed in a coffin ready for burial. Just before closing the coffin the undertaker discovered to his horror that her heart was beating and removed her at once to a hospital, where she was given electrical treatment, under which she finally opened her eyes and uttered a few incoherent words. Such authenticated incidents cause the reader to ask if there is not some infallible test of death known to the medical profession.

In the "Review of Comparative Pathology" Dr. Severin Icard of Marseilles gives the results of his investigations in progress during a long period into this subject. His test is physico-chemical and has to do with the alkalinity of the body in life. In other words, as long as life is present in the human organism the fluids (with the exception of the urine, the gastric juices and the sweat) are alkaline. On the other hand, the tissues after death are acid.

For a short period after death the tissues are both alkaline and acid, and the litmus paper test shows both blue and red. But seven or eight hours after death is supposed to have taken place the test is positive; if life is extinct the acid test is unmistakable and the blue paper becomes a deep wine red.

This passage from alkalinity to acidity is found in all the animal series, and as far back as 1870 it was urged as a test for death by a French physician, Doctor Delugree, who proposed in cases where death was doubtful to introduce litmus paper into small incisions in the muscular mass. But this method is likely to be repugnant to the family of the subject—an objection which Doctor Icard has overcome in his experiments.

Litmus Paper Test

The latter practitioner has made use of a very simple method for procuring a few drops of serous matter from the tissues without mutilating the body. He attaches a small pair of forceps to a fold of skin and clamps them in place, leaving them in position for five or six minutes. At the end of this time the forceps are removed and in the depressions on each side of the "pleat" of flesh made by the confining instrument are seen to ooze several drops of serum. The blue litmus is placed in contact with this fluid, and if it turns red there is no doubt that the patient no longer lives, for the acid test is established. Sometimes it is necessary to wait as long as ten minutes for the change from blue to red to take place, but once apparent it is indisputable. It must be remembered that this test is useless before the lapse of six hours, as acidity does not thoroughly establish itself in a dead body under this time.

It is interesting to recall in connection with Doctor Icard's test that one of the tests commonly employed under such circumstances has long been that of grasping a fold of flesh with the forceps and retaining it there for several moments. In the case of a living body the "pleat" gradually returns to normal, but when life is extinct the compression of the flesh persists. Doctor Icard's test (which has been adopted in the Marseilles hospitals) has a double value in that it includes the physical test of the compression of the skin and the chemical test which establishes a state of acidity, thus "making assurance doubly sure" and removing from the realm of chance the establishment of death in cases where doubt exists.

TAKING MEN'S POSITIONS

Finnish Women Take Up All Kinds of Employment.

Even Serve as Porters on Sleeping Cars—Do Office and Manual Work.

Helsingfors.—An astonishing sight for the stranger in Finland is the number of women engaged in almost every field of employment. In England during the war one became accustomed to the sight of women performing various kinds of work in which previously only men were engaged. But in Finland the visitor gets the impression that the women are doing everything.

Not only are they at heavy manual work in fields and factories but they have become skilled as mechanics and have invaded business offices to an extent that is probably undreamed of in any other country.

In banks the proportion of women employees to men appears to be about ten to one. In the biggest financial institutions in Helsingfors women hold positions involving great responsibility and calling for exceptional ability.

At the Finnish foreign office the Associated Press correspondent noticed that women were holding offices that would be entirely beyond the aspirations of their sisters in the state department at Washington or the British foreign office.

This change has come about almost overnight. Finland's man power has been greatly depleted, and a large part of what is left is required for military service.

The Finnish business woman is remarkably keen and intelligent. She has a kind of masculine interest and absorption in her work that seems to admit of no margin for sentiment or frivolity. She dresses simply and smartly, as do the majority of the city-bred women of this country. An American walking through the principal streets of Helsingfors might well believe, judging from the costumes and brisk walk of the Finnish women, that he was in the heart of Chicago.

GAVE A BOOK; GOT A HUSBAND

New York Girl Evidently Was As Sweet as Poetry Volume She Donated.

New York.—When the "Books for Soldiers" campaign was at its height early last year, Miss Hazel Bell Gilbert of Sheepshead Bay, a daughter of Detective Sergeant George P. Gilbert of the bomb squad, turned in a volume of poems.

The book, with her name on the flyleaf, found its way to a rest station behind the firing lines, and there fell into the hands of Lieut. William J. Edwards of the marine corps, who wrote her a letter asking her if she were as sweet as the verses.

When he came home he called, and apparently found her so, for they were married the other day at the Gravesend Reformed church. After a honeymoon in Bermuda, Lieutenant Edwards and his bride will live in Washington.

TO MAKE MAPS FROM AIR

Airplanes to Be Used to Chart Amazon Area.

French Experts Plan to Survey Route of River From Flying Machines.

Para, Brazil.—Airplanes may be employed to map the valley of the great Amazon river. If the French are successful in their effort to use aircraft for surveying the routes of the rivers of French Guiana. It is understood the Brazilian government will apply the same method to the survey of the Amazon and its affluents.

A French company is said to have been formed in Cayenne, with hangars on the Maroni river, and French aviators with flying experience gained in the war are being employed to run the 25 hydro-airplanes sold to have been furnished by the government.

In addition to making maps, the machines will be employed for carrying valuable freight, mails and passengers. There are immense rivers in French Guiana, which, because of the presence of many rapids, are now only navigable in canoes, which take weeks to transport freight over distances which the hydro-airplanes can cover in as many hours, with always large stretches of smooth water offering a suitable surface for landing and "take-offs."

The freight charges are said to be high, and the traffic is expected to consist mainly of gold, balata and essence of rosewood, which are the principal exports of the colony. The passenger business is not expected to be heavy.

These hydro-airplanes will also be used for prospecting the forests for balata trees, which grow in groups, so that the foliage can, it is said, be readily distinguished by aviators flying low over the tops of the forest trees.

In the past the securing of fresh sources of balata has been a work of much danger and difficulty. Specially trained balata workers, well armed, traveling in bands of 15 or 20, have been employed to explore the forests, and they had to carry with them supplies to cover many months.

WHAT IS TON OF MANURE WORTH?

Increase in Yield of Various Crops Would Place Price at $4.83 for Each Ton.

NET PROFIT OF $3.83 MADE

Liberal Application of Fertilizer Every Four Years Will Result in Permanent Improvement to Soil—Straw Is Valuable.

Trials made on the various experiment fields throughout the state by the University of Missouri college of agriculture have shown that an average application of eight tons of manure to the acre once in four years has increased the yield of corn 10.5 bushels, oats 5.17 bushels, wheat 5.24 bushels, and clover hay 937 pounds. At prices which prevailed the first of the year this increase would be worth $4.83, and at pre-war prices $2.34 for each ton of manure applied. It will cost the farmer not more than one dollar a ton to collect the manure and haul it to the field. This would leave a net profit of $3.83 at present prices, or $1.34 at pre-war prices, for each ton of manure applied. The full value of the manure is usually not obtained during the first four years, for it leaves the soil in better condition and its effect upon later crops is often quite significant. This becomes more noticeable after the first two or three applications, since a liberal application of manure every four years will result in permanent improvement to the land.

Piling Manure Outside Where the Rain Will Wash Out Its Fertilizing Elements.

Careful Handling Necessary.

By very careful handling of manure a livestock farmer, on average soil, should be able to return annually about two tons of manure per acre to his cultivated fields. It is not easy to save this amount except by very careful methods and persistent efforts. It is necessary that all straw and other suitable materials be worked through the barn as bedding. This not only adds to the comfort of the animals, but serves as an absorbent for the liquid manure. If straw piles are sold, burned or left to rot it is, of course, impossible to return this amount of manure.

Keep the manure together; don't let it get scattered about the barn or lots. Hogs and chickens may waste much of it. Where possible haul it to the field as soon as produced. If this is not possible, store it in shallow, concrete lined pits to prevent leaching. Use plenty of bedding in the stable or on the feeding floor to absorb the liquid. Straw, old hay, grass and leaves may be used for this purpose.

Prevent Fermentation.

About 35 per cent of the nitrogen and 55 per cent of the potassium is to be found in the liquid material. There is, however, practically no phosphorus in this part. The plant foods in the liquid are all in soluble form and are very easily lost through leaching. Furthermore, the nitrogen in this liquid portion readily passes off as ammonia when the manure is allowed to ferment, hence the necessity for preventing fermentation as far as possible.

The total solid and liquid manure produced in a year by a well-fed, mature horse, is about eight tons, with a plant-food value of more than $30. In the case of a well-fed steer weighing from 1,000 to 1,200 pounds the production is nine to eleven tons, with a slightly greater total value than the manure from a horse.

Three to five months' exposure to the weather in an open lot may cause manure to lose approximately one-third of its plant food. If manure must be exposed to the weather it should be in a pit with a water tight bottom.

SYSTEM OF RUNNING WATER

Nothing Adds More to Comfort and Health of Family—Carrying Water Is Tiresome.

No convenience adds more to the comfort and well being of the family than a good system of running water. After it has been in use a short time, the farmer and his family wonder how they ever got along without it. Carrying water is hard, tiresome labor and usually must be done at the busiest time when other work is most pressing.

CANDLED EGGS BEST

1. Candling provides a fixed standard for trading by doing away with guess-work.
2. It makes possible a fair price to the careful producers of good eggs.
3. It shows who is responsible for the bad eggs, and who wastes food.
4. It leads to a general improvement in quality.
5. It conforms to law.
6. It saves freight charges, transportation space, and case material by eliminating the handling of worthless products.

IT IS POOR ECONOMY TO UNDERFEED STOCK

Object Should Be to Carry Them Through Winter Cheaply.

Heavy Feeding of Calves and Yearlings Is Expensive—Cows Can Be Wintered on Good Hay Alone—Provide Shelter.

The principal object in wintering stock cattle is to carry them through cheaply without letting them lose flesh. It is poor economy to underfeed cattle in winter and let them lose much that they gained in the summer time. Heavy feeding of calves and yearlings in winter is expensive and reduces the gains they will make on grass the following summer when gains are cheap.

Straw, beet pulp, sugar beets, can all be used to advantage. Cows can be wintered on good hay alone or on 30 pounds of kafir silage and one pound cottonseed meal per day. Alfalfa hay or upland hays make good rations in themselves, while with prairie or cane hay or Sudan grass, it will be better to give some extra feed, especially to cows that are to drop calves.

Some shelter is advisable in winter, even though only a windbreak. Where there are plenty of trees, cattle can often get along very well with these for shelter. The following are some representative rations that might be used in wintering stock where fattening for market is not desired: (1) 20 pounds hay (alfalfa or park hay). (2) 25 pounds cane hay or corn fodder, one pound cottonseed cake. (3) 30 pounds cane or kafir silage, one pound cottonseed meal.—Chas. L. Bray, to "Live Stock in Colorado."

GRADING BUTTER AIDS PRICE

Profitable to Creamery Men to Make Best Quality and Then Market It on Scored Basis.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The United States department of agriculture provides a butter-inspection service on the New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, and Minneapolis markets. This service is not compulsory, but it is valuable to producers or dealers who market butter of superior quality as the "official once over" guarantees the quality of the product and correlates it to its selling price. One day recently a 63-pound tub of butter at one of the markets scored 87 and sold for 50 cents a pound, or a total of $31.50, as compared with another similar weight tub of butter which scored 93 and sold at 63 cents a pound, or for $39.69. The higher-scoring butter commanded a gross price of $8.19 higher than that of its lower scoring mate. It pays creamery men to make the best grade of butter possible and then to market it on the scored basis in order to realize its full worth.

EXPENSE OF RAISING CALVES

According to Expert Estimate Cost Is About $8 Per Head—Veal Is Good Side Line.

It costs about $8 per head on the average, according to expert estimate, to raise a calf to the stage where it can be profitably sold for veal. The production of veal forms a profitable side line for dairymen.

ABOUT FOUR MILLION TURKEYS GO INTO HOLIDAY MENU OF THE AMERICAN FAMILY

American Bronze Turkey Is Hardiest Variety, While Bourbon and White Holland Are Most Domestic.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Turkey is the favored fowl at holiday tables. But turkey raising is on the decrease in the United States. This is because many turkeys range through the grain fields of adjacent farms and thus become a cause of neighborhood ill will, while the high mortality among young poults as ordinarily cared for on the farm, the outbreaks of such serious diseases as blackhead, and serious losses from predatory animals have all tended to discourage turkey raising. However, for people favorably situated raising of turkeys is one of the most profitable side lines which can be combined with general farming.

Given plenty of range, turkeys will rustle for grasshoppers and other insects, green vegetation, weed and grass seed, waste grain, acorns, chestnuts and other waste nuts, and convert them into delicious meat at a minimum expense. Plenty of range is essential to success in turkey raising, and usually the discouraging results have come from the attempts to raise the fowls under close confinement.

Pick Your Breed.

It is a free-for-all choice as to what breed the farmer will raise. Six varieties of domestic turkeys, including the American Bronze, the White Holland, Bourbon Red, Black, Narragansett and Slate varieties of domestic turkeys, are recognized by the American standard of perfection. Because the Bronze turkey is heaviest, it is most popular among turkey raisers, as the fowls are sold by weight. Generally speaking, other conditions being equal, the Bronze is the hardiest variety, the Bourbon Red and the White Holland are the most prolific.

Turkeys generally are raised in small flocks on general farms. Few extensive commercial projects devoted exclusively to turkey raising are operated. Usually from 10 to 15 turkey hens and one vigorous tom constitute a flock, the fowls being allowed free range during the breeding and laying season. The turkey flock requires particular care during the laying and hatching season and during the early life of the young poults, or until these youngsters are able to range at large with their mother.

Fattened and Prepared for Market.

The incubation period of turkey eggs is four weeks, the average number of poults raised under ordinary conditions being about 50 per cent of those hatched out, or about seven poults for every turkey hen. The greatest loss occurs when the poults are quite young, the high mortality resulting largely from exposure to dampness and cold, improper feeding, close confinement, lice, and predatory animals, and to inherent weakness, the result of carelessness in selection of parent stock. As soon as the poults are old enough, the mother hen and her brood should be placed on the range in an individual coop, where the hen may be confined and the poults allowed to pick about on grass, clover, alfalfa and other green feed at will, so that the youngsters will become accustomed to this feed.

Young poults usually remain with the mother hen until about October or November, when the males ordinarily separate from the females and range by themselves. Improper feeding combined with close confinement has been the cause of many failures in turkey raising. When on free range the poults are busy searching for feed most of the day, and hence there occurs no overfeeding or lack of exercise. Even if the range is good and the supply of insects abundant, it is usually advisable to have the flock come home at night—the daily feeding of a little grain inducing the return of the birds to the home roost—in order to accustom the fowls to a common sleeping place.

Natural Roosts for Poults.

At the age of about 6 weeks the turkeys are old enough to go to roost. Most turkey raisers allow the birds to roost in open trees or on fences, or on other roosts especially provided. One of the greatest difficulties is to keep flocks from wandering over too wide an area and invading neighboring farms. To some extent feeding heavily night and morning reduces the area over which turkeys range, but even then they often go too far. An effective plan is to drive them into an inclosure, and keep them there until about noon.

Fattening for Market.

Turkeys are fattened for market from about the 1st of October up to selling time. They are fed just enough so that they go away still feeling a little hungry. The quantity is gradually increased until they are given all they will clean up three times a day during the week before marketing. Some turkey raisers feed wheat and oats during the first part of the fattening season, gradually changing to corn as the weather becomes cooler. New corn can be fed safely if the turkeys are gradually accustomed to it by feeding lightly at first. As a rule, it has not paid to confine turkeys during the fattening period, as they lose appetite and get off feed when penned up. Nuts of various kinds are a natural fattening feed picked up by the turkeys on the range. Of these beech nuts, chestnuts, pecans and acorns are those most commonly used. Many Texas turkey raisers depend solely upon acorns for fattening their turkeys, and when such mast is plentiful the birds are marketed in fairly good condition.

Holidays Best Market Season.

The marketing season for turkeys is short, running from the middle of November to the latter part of December. Most turkey raisers sell their birds alive to poultry dealers who either dress them or ship them alive to city dealers. Farmers near the city markets and particularly those in the Middle Atlantic and New England states often dress the turkeys and either sell them direct to the consumer or to city dealers. In some sections shortly before Thanksgiving there is held what is known as turkey day. On the day before this event every turkey grower in the neighborhood kills and dresses his turkeys and the following morning brings them into town, where they are sold to the highest bidder. In the extensive turkey raising sections of Texas, dressing plants have been built by poultry dealers who buy the birds alive and dress them for city markets.

MARKET SURPLUS COCKERELS

Fowls Not Intended for Breeders Should Be Sold as Soon as They Reach Right Size.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

All cockerels not intended to be kept or sold for breeders should be marketed when they reach suitable size. Such birds confined in a home-made fattening battery or coop and fed a fattening ration for a week or ten days will not only increase in weight but bring a better price on the market, because of improved quality.

POULTRY NOTES

There are better possibilities for raising ducks and geese than many realize.

Where there is range, and generally it is plentiful, little feed is required for geese.

Table scraps and kitchen waste are best prepared for feeding by running them through an ordinary meat grinder.

Keep all the birds from the earliest hatches that show good type and vigor and the marks of good laying power.

With feed high in price and in many cases difficult to get, it is of the greatest importance to cull the poultry flock this fall.

Ford
THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Weak Links in a Strong Chain

That's just what imitation parts are when they become a part of your Ford car. They look strong enough, but the metal isn't there—the strong, durable Vanadium steel that goes into the Ford chassis and every Ford part. Ford parts are specially cast and heat-tesred, each according to its use. Some require a hard, flint-like wearing surface, others need resiliency, and some need just "toughness."

Ford metallurgists have been studying these problems for sixteen years and know just how each unit should be made to endure a maximum of wear and tear. They know that best results can be obtained only by the use of special formulas for different parts, and that honest Ford parts wear from thirty-five to one hundred per cent longer than counterfeits.

We carry complete assortments of genuine Ford parts for both passenger cars and trucks. And our garage is equipped to give careful, prompt Ford service—from minor adjustments to complete overhauls. Drive in, it's better to be safe than sorry. Come to the Authorized Ford dealer for service.

Official Resolution.

The following resolution was passed:

Resolved, That the curbing on certain portions of East street and Washington street, in the Village of Chelsea, heretofore ordered, in the opinion of the Common Council is, and is hereby deemed and declared to be a necessary public improvement, and

Resolved, further, That all lands, tenements and premises hereinafter mentioned are deemed and declared to be benefited by the construction and completion of the curbing heretofore ordered, and it is hereby ordered and determined that two thirds of fifty cents per running foot, of all the cost, outside of all the private driveways and public driveways, shall be and is hereby levied on and assessed against the lands, tenements and premises situated in the special assessment district hereinafter designated and said special assessment district is hereby fixed as follows, towit: All those certain pieces or parcels of land situated and being in the Village of Chelsea, County of Washtenaw, and State of Michigan, fronting on that part of East street, which lies south of the alley, north of Edward Fahrner's land, and north of a straight line, running west on the south side of Washington street, and all of lands fronting on Washington street, which are within the curbing district known as East and Washington Streets Curbing District Number Two (2) and more fully described as all lands abutting on East and Washington streets, commencing on East street, at the alley lying north of Edward Fahrner, and running south on East street to a point directly south of Washington street; thence east on Washington street to Madison street, according to the maps and diagram of said curbing district now on record with the Village Clerk, and

Resolved, further, That the Common Council hereby requires and orders that the sum of two thirds of fifty cents per running foot, and the total cost of all private driveways shall be assessed against the several owners of said lands and tenements, in one installment, to be raised by tax and special assessment on and against the lots, parts of lots, lands and tenements aforesaid and situated in the special assessment district, and tax against the owners thereof. All to be assessed on and against said lands and tenements and premises according to the frontage to each parcel thereof. And the Board of Assessors is hereby required to levy and assess the said sum of money aforesaid on and against the lands and tenements aforesaid and upon the special assessment roll for the curbing district aforesaid, all to be assessed in the manner and for the purpose aforesaid pursuant to law.

Resolved, further, That the Village Clerk do hereby certify this determination and order of assessment to the board of assessors pursuant to law.

Village Clerk.

Says It is the Best In the World.

There is one remedy that those who know depend upon for relief from coughs that "hang on" after the grip. Foley's Honey and Tar clear the passages, soothe raw, inflamed membranes and banishes irritation and tickling in the throat. A. H. McDaniel, box 51, Lindside, W. Va., writes: "I am glad to tell you that Foley's Honey and Tar is the best medicine in this world. I have had a severe cough and before I used half a bottle I was better." Sold everywhere.—Adv.

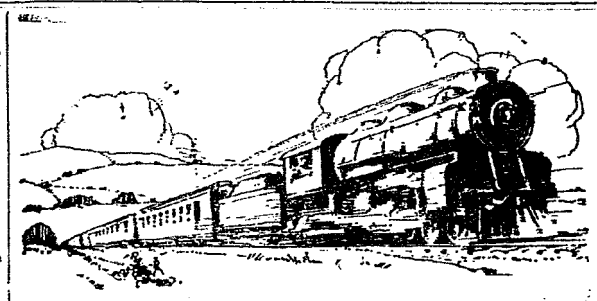
J. E. HARKINS & SON
306 S. MAIN STREET, ANN ARBOR, MICH



The railways of the United States are more than one-third, nearly one-half, of all the railways of the world. They carry a yearly traffic so much greater than that of any other country that there is really no basis for comparison. Indeed, the traffic of any two nations may be combined, and still it does not approach the commerce of America borne upon American railways.
—United States Senator Cummins.

Ask Any Doughboy Who Was "Over There" and he will tell you that American railroads are the best in the world.

He saw the foreign roads — in England and France, the best in Europe — and in other Continental countries — and he knows.

The part railroads have played in the development of the United States is beyond measure.

American railroads have achieved high standards of public service by far-sighted and courageous investment of capital, and by the constant striving of managers and men for rewards for work well done.

We have the best railroads in the world — we must continue to have the best.

But they must grow.

To the $20,000,000,000 now invested in our railroads, there will have to be added in the next few years, to keep pace with the nation's business, billions more for additional tracks, stations and terminals, cars and engines, electric power houses and trains, automatic signals, safety devices, the elimination of grade crossings — and for reconstruction and engineering economies that will reduce the cost of transportation.

To attract to the railroads in the future the investment funds of many thrifty citizens, the directing genius of the most capable builders and managers, and the skill and loyalty of the best workmen — in competition with other industries bidding for capital, managers and men — the railroad industry must hold out fair rewards to capital, to managers and to the men.

American railroads will continue to set world standards and adequately serve the Nation's needs if they continue to be built and operated on the American principle of rewards for work well done.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE CHELSEA STANDARD, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 25, 1919

BREVITIES

Fowlerville The Fowlerville fair this year showed the largest financial gain in the history of the society. So it was announced at the annual meeting recently. All indebtedness is paid off and there is a balance of $2,377 in the treasury.

Brooklyn Surveyors now stopping at the Brooklyn hotel are working to complete the Chicago pike survey as far as Somerset before Christmas. They say they have taken all the kinks out of the Irish hills, making it a straight road and reducing the grade to not over six per cent.—Brooklyn Exponent.

Stockbridge We hear that the building to be used by the Michigan Seating Co. is about ready for occupancy. The village has already begun to feel the result of a factory locating here, as it is reported that there is not an empty house to be rented in the village.—Stockbridge Brief-Sun.

South Lyon The South Lyon night watch made a valuable "pick-up" one night recently, when he took into custody a couple of strangers who were snooping around the bank. One of them is claimed to be a noted safe-blower with many aliases, and who is wanted in several places for "professional work."

Ann Arbor One University student and another former student, both boys, and a young woman were taken into custody by county officers last Thursday night in a raid. A drinking party was discovered and eighty-one quarts of whisky, gin and wine confiscated, it is declared. Officers believe Clayton E. Holcomb and his brother, D. F. Holcomb, a former student, have supplied fraternity members with liquor.

Tecumseh Up at George Isbell's they have a cross between a rabbit and an old cat. "Rags and Carrots." This George left to ride the horse on the corner the other day, and when he turned to the pet he was gone. Search of the premises failed to find Mr. Rabbit. Nothing about the case had happened before since they had advertised. The last 25 acres of corn by Bond and Arthur Bowdish has been husked and the crop is now all in the crib. Tecumseh Herald.

Paula Earl Farley is recently reported missing since the morning of last week. In the course of patrolling the electric railway tracks he had come across a couple of tramps, which he followed to a farm. After looking at all the evidence he decided that it was a long and deep job and hard digging. He therefore let D. Shaver and Sam in on the deal and together they dug out four chunks in the form of three quarts, for which they received twenty-seven dollars. He now has, he says, he will do all the work himself.—Parma News.

Jackson For the benefit of those persons who think a man of Jackson Dr. Frederick Stocker has left the city, we would say that the Post of St. Barnabas, one of the prominent churches of Jackson, is without a rector, and Dr. Stocker has been called to the post. In case the call is accepted, it is probable that the Rev. Dr. Stocker will continue to reside in Jackson, but will commute to the city of Detroit.—Jackson Citizen-Patriot.

Brooklyn The Hart & Howell Pop Corn Industry has been investigated by the U. S. Department of Agriculture at Washington, which has sent in an order for 100 pounds of the corn to use in experimental work as a basis for information sent out by the department. The Hart & Howell factory is now working night shifts to fill the heavy run of orders and with several times the usual amount of corn will be drying and picking for many more weeks.—Brooklyn Exponent.

Webberville Last week while Archie Hawley of Webberville was digging a drain near the village he ran into a vein of coal. Taking some of the newly discovered article home and putting it in the cook stove he found it burned with intense heat and very little smoke. It undoubtedly is a part of the vein which underlies the whole section of that part of the county.

Grass Lake Upon complaint of Humane Officer Pulling, John Mason, a farmer living near Grass Lake, was arrested Thursday on a charge of failing to provide proper food and shelter for his cattle. Mason was the owner of fifty-two head of cattle which during the summer months he pastured on a marsh on his property, with the approach of winter the herd was furnished no shelter except an open shed which offered practically no protection and fed only on marsh hay. Complaints made by neighbors resulted in an investigation of the case made by Mr. Pulling and the arrest of Mason.

Brighton Clarence Taylor had a fall-starting experience one day last week. He was drawing coal from the Gas F. Smith gravel pit and while crossing the railroad tracks at the Westphal crossing a clevis and evener gave way when the sleigh was directly on the tracks. To increase his discomfiture an eastbound train was whistling for that crossing and was just around the bend. One horse was unable to move the load and if Clarence had jerked up the runners with a jerk that happened to be handy, and then the load was just barely off the rails when the train whizzed past.—Brighton Argus.

Tecumseh Henry Gasser of Tecumseh will probably never be admitted to the ranks of the I. W. W. even if he should desire to join them. He is too industrious, his activities during the past summer being an example which all the agitators for little work and much pay would emulate with benefits accruing to employer and employee. Mr. Gasser is 76 years of [illegible]

Farmers Boost Farm Bureau.

[illegible] few days ago about thirty rep[illegible]tative farmers from different [illegible]s of Washtenaw county met at [illegible]county agricultural agent's of[illegible]in Ann Arbor, and talked over [illegible]advisability of having the State [illegible]n Bureau put on a membership [illegible]paign in this county. The [illegible]shing of such a campaign was [illegible]fully considered and it was the [illegible]f of those present that a good, [illegible]g county organization would be [illegible]onsiderable help to the farmers [illegible]ne different communities in the [illegible]ty.

[illegible]e advisability of the county [illegible]n bureau organization to promote [illegible]develope co-operative marketing [illegible]ciations was considered. The or[illegible]zations necessary for education[illegible]ork were discussed, and the idea [illegible]o-ordinating the work of the co[illegible]ative associations, Granges, farm[illegible] clubs and other existing com[illegible]ity organizations was carefully [illegible]idered. The farmers present [illegible]n unanimously in favor of a good [illegible]g county farm bureau organiza[illegible] to assist them in solving their [illegible]l agricultural problems.

[illegible]he farm bureau membership [illegible]paign to be put on in Washtenaw [illegible]nty by the state farm bureau will [illegible]obably be started about the middle [illegible]anuary.

The Popular Car of the Day

The Oakland Motor Car Co. has doubled production since the war, and have arrangements made to double this production again, starting January 1, 1920.

There is a reason for this, and it lies in the fact that the public realizes the great value of a light flexible six at a moderate price.

Before buying that new car ask your local dealer to demonstrate the great amount of power and flexability combined in any of its very conservative models.

Ford
THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Weak Links in a Strong Chain

That's just what imitation parts are when they become a part of your Ford car. They look strong enough, but the metal isn't there—the strong, durable Vanadium steel that goes into the Ford chassis and every Ford part. Ford parts are specially cast and heat-tesred, each according to its use. Some require a hard, flint-like wearing surface, others need resiliency, and some need just "toughness."

Ford metallurgists have been studying these problems for sixteen years and know just how each unit should be made to endure a maximum of wear and tear. They know that best results can be obtained only by the use of special formulas for different parts, and that honest Ford parts wear from thirty-five to one hundred per cent longer than counterfeits.

We carry complete assortments of genuine Ford parts for both passenger cars and trucks. And our garage is equipped to give careful, prompt Ford service—from minor adjustments to complete overhauls. Drive in, it's better to be safe than sorry. Come to the Authorized Ford dealer for service.

LOCAL NOTES

Merry Christmas to all Standard readers.

Mrs. Geo. Bacon, of Fort Wayne, Ind., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Walworth.

Carpenters are at work remodeling the interior of St. Paul's parsonage on East Summit street.

E. H. Chandler was called to Ann Arbor, Sunday, by the illness of his daughter, Miss Esther Chandler.

Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Loeffler have moved from their farm in Freedom to the home on Orchard street which they recently purchased.

The Lewis Spring & Axle Co. started the spring department at work Monday morning. This part of the factory has practically been closed since the beginning of the coal strike.

There will be Christmas exercises at the Methodist church Wednesday evening beginning at 7:30 o'clock. An offering will be taken for the Methodist Children's Home of Highland Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Tucker and Mr. and Mrs. John Fischer attended the funeral of Mrs. Corwin Westfall, which was held in the church at Rowe's Corners, Sharon, Monday afternoon.

The Standard will be printed on Wednesday of next week, as our regular publication day falls on New Year's Day. Correspondents are requested to get their letters in earlier than usual.

Miss Gertrude Eisenman, who has been in the employ of the Lewis Spring & Axle Co. for the past two years as a stenographer, has resigned and accepted a similar position in Detroit. She will leave the first of next week for her new position.

Word has been received of the death of Henry Wolfer, as the result of an automobile accident in Los Angeles, Calif. Mr. Wolfer was a brother of Mrs. John Schenk, and for many eyars was warden of the state penitentiary at Stillwater, Minn.

That innocent little item in last week's issue of the Standard, announcing that women who are keeping house for their families are to be recorded in the census as having no occupation, has stirred up a lot of conversation, and the ears of the man who issued the order must burn.

The fire department was called to the residence of Mrs. Jas. Runciman on Jefferson street, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Belser and Mr. and Vance Ogden about 8 o'clock Saturday morning. The cause of the alarm was an overheated pipe from the furnace. Other than smoke, the damage was slight.

J. E. Weber and John B. Parker have purchased the furniture and good will of the Boyd House of J. H. Boyd. The new proprietors will take possession of the property about February 1, when the house will be closed while being redecorated. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd expect to move to their farm on the Manchester road.

Virginia, the interesting daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. McLaren, celebrated her tenth birthday Saturday, when seven of her friends went to her home to spend a merry afternoon. Pink and white was the pretty color scheme carried out in the home and in the delicious turkey dinner which was served. Miss Virginia received some pretty presents, and her tenth birthday will always be remembered by her friends and herself. Jackson News.

About 7:30 o'clock Sunday morning the firemen were called to the W. R. Taylor rseidence on Taylor's lane. The premises are occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Linton. The blaze was caused by an overheated stove pipe. The floor where the pipe enters the chimney was badly burned, the mopboard in the room in the second floor burned and some of the partitions were damaged, and the entire house was badly damaged by smoke. J. A. Maroney had the blaze extinguished when the department arrived. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

The war department's service and information bureau has undertaken a campaign to inform former service men that all in need of medical or surgical treatment because of illness or injury contracted in the army or navy can enter any army or public health service hospital and local civilian sanitarium, with all expenses paid by the government. Discharged service men should apply to the nearest army hospital or local representative of the public health service for examination or consult Red Cross representatives or state and municipal health officers.

Farmers Boost Farm Bureau.

A few days ago about thirty representative farmers from different parts of Washtenaw county met at the county agricultural agent's office in Ann Arbor, and talked over the advisability of having the State Farm Bureau put on a membership campaign in this county. The launching of such a campaign was carefully considered and it was the belief of those present that a good, strong county organization would be of considerable help to the farmers of the different communities in the county.

The advisability of the county farm bureau organzation to promote and develope co-operative marketing associations was considered. The organizations necessary for educational work were discussed, and the idea of co-ordinating the work of the co-operative associations, Granges, farmers' clubs and other existing community organizations was carefully considered. The farmers present were unanimously in favor of a good strong county farm bureau organization to assist them in solving their local agricultural problems.

The farm bureau membership campaign to be put on in Washtenaw county by the state farm bureau will probably be started about the middle of January.

Ann Arbor—A woman student will lead the junior hop at the University of Michigan this year for one of the few times in the history of the function. She is Wanda Gillingham, of Bayport and has been selected by Roswell Dillon, of Arbor, general chairman of the committee. The hop has generally been controlled by the older group of fraternities, antagonistic to the co-eds since their admission to the university in 1870. The honor of leading the grand march has almost invariably gone to an out-of-town girl. This year it was the engineers' turn to have the chairmanship, and in the election, the fraternity men were split sufficiently to let Dillon in as chairman. This week he announced that Miss Gillingham would be his partner. The hop will be held the night of Friday, February 13.

The Chelsea postoffice will close at 9 o'clock Christmas morning, and remain closed the remainder of the day.

"WHAT HAVE YOU DONE WITH THOSE HYACINTHS?"

Synopsis.—While in a little Swiss town of Vevay, where the "staid, proper spinster" who tells the story is spending a vacation, she is asked to advise a young girl, Claire de Ravenol, to be her companion back to the United States. Although forming an attachment to the girl, the heroine takes a dislike to Monsieur de Ravenol, Claire's father, and declines. On the boat she finds Claire in the care of a casual acquaintance, Mrs. Delario, whom she had met while each was purchasing a pair of slippers, exactly alike, which figure largely in subsequent events. When they reach New York, where Claire was to have been met by her mother, the latter does not appear, and Claire perforce goes to Mrs. Delario's home. In the confusion at the customs house, the spinster carries off one of Mrs. Delario's slippers. Through them happening she learns later that someone unknown to her has been in her flat. Calling on Mrs. Delario, that lady shows her some remarkable gems, believing them to be riches, but which are really blood-red diamonds, and easily worth a million dollars. Mrs. Delario admits the gems were smuggled, but offers no explanation. While they are talking, a pounding on the door thrown them into consternation. The caller asserts he is an officer of the law, with a warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Delario's son on a charge of stealing the diamonds. She outwits him and persuades the spinster to take the gems to her home for safe keeping. Next morning, realizing the responsibility in her possession of the diamonds, the spinster takes them back to Mrs. Delario, but while there she learns that that lady's son has been kidnaped, supposedly on account of the gems, and agrees to keep them for a while. She hides them in a bunch of hyacinths and has the lock of her door changed and a chain-bolt added. Over the telephone De Ravenol informs her Mrs Delario has met with an accident and urges her to call at once. Hastening to her friend, and leaving, the gems, the heroine is met by De Ravenol, who claims the diamonds are his, stolen from Claire on the boat. He accuses Mrs. Delario or our friend the spinster of the theft, and demands their return. She defies De Ravenol, who threatens her with a revolver, and escapes. Alarmed for her personal safety, and almost believing De Ravenol, the heroine fears to return to her flat, and while uncertain what to do meets an old-time friend, Billy Rivers, newspaper reporter. They spend the evening at a theater, and Rivers accompanies her home. There they find the flat has been thoroughly searched but nothing taken. She does not confide in Rivers.

CHAPTER VIII.

Mrs. Jimmson Again.

I had felt myself going and let myself down as gently as I could, under the circumstances. How long I was unconscious, I have no way of knowing, but it came to me gradually that my flat had been robbed—of what and by whom, I couldn't imagine—but as for the diamonds, I forgot them, totally. I undressed and went to bed, pulling the blankets up over me, camp fashion, without waiting to make the bed or clear up any of the wreckage and without feeling any particular apprehension, only a deathlike exhaustion.

I woke in the early dawn and still it hadn't come back to me about the diamonds; but what did swoop on me with a rush was that Mrs. Jimmson was coming to clean and would be there not a minute later than eight-thirty.

She was a refined little woman who had seen better days—before she wedded the decently lamented Jimmson and had to support him through "tuberculosis" by day's work and fancy washing and ironing. My interest in her had been the main prop in her struggles for several years and she reciprocated said interest in a way that would have been insufferable impertinence had it not been so sincere and devoted. She loved me and all my works—particularly my works, on which she regaled the neighbors at such times as she was joyfully permitted to go home with a new one under her arm.

And she'd be here at eight-thirty! "Heaven help us!" I cried, hopping out of bed and slipping on a kimono. "If she gets hold of this robbery, I'm done for—I'll see my name in the papers tomorrow, sure!"

With feverish haste I got the books back in the cases, hit or miss as they came to hand; the pictures hung and the rooms in order. The kitchen was in a state! I gave an apprehensive glance at the window as I scraped up spilled breakfast food and threw it in the garbage can—I knew how my unpleasant visitor had got out and wondered how he had got in, but I wasted no time thinking of it. I was soon enough to know, however.

I had barely finished with the kitchen and was opening the bathroom door to clear up there when my dear Jimmson rung.

I let her in, first asking through the door who it was—a precaution adequately explained by my attire; and telling her to begin at the kitchen for I hadn't had my bath. I piloted her with a seemingly affectionate arm to her quarters. Then I bolted myself into the bathroom and with stealthy movements cleared away the evidence of the search.

My bath refreshed me, and I was clothed and somewhat near my right mind when I came out of the bathroom. I had called out to her, just before I got into the tub, asking her to bake my coffee and get ready the rolls and butter, and she was occupied in setting my tray and did not hear me as I passed the kitchen door. Thus I had time to see what lay on the dining-room table before she told me.

It was a long thin dagger, sharp as a razor. Mrs. Jimmson pulled open the kitchen door and bounced out just as I had taken the dagger in my hand.

"That's what I found on the kitchen floor back of the scrap basket," she exclaimed. Her eyes were rolling.

I managed to say carelessly, "Yes—my new paperknife. I was wondering where I'd dropped it. I wish you'd bring in my breakfast—I'm in a tremendous hurry this morning."

"Oh—it's only a paperknife, is it?" she murmured in a disappointed tone. "I didn't know but it was—"

"Was what?" I demanded, wondering if she had, with her uncanny interest in me and my affairs, sensed something queer and wrong about the flat.

"Well, it give me quite a turn to see that dagger layin' on the floor," she admitted with some spirit, "and natchelly I couldn't help thinkin', now would it?"

"Oh, naturally," said I, and laid it on the tray along with the scissors and paste and the pen box that had, only yesterday, held a million dollars' worth of diamonds; and then I asked her would she please bring in my breakfast. And my knees were shaking under me and I thought, "Oh, boy—you saved my life last night for a fact, by talking to me while he was up here waiting. Oh, Billy—you saved my life, taking me to a silly show. But how long will it last? Where is it going to end?"

"You look real sick this morning," observed Mrs. Jimmson, setting the tray on the dining-room table.

"I don't feel very well." This was the truth.

"Perhaps you better go right back to bed and let me stay and take care of you—I'd like nothing better—"

"Mrs. Jimmson—if you don't mind—I think I'll get you to boil me an egg this morning."

"If you don't mind me givin' you the hint—I feel you ought to find out what ails you before you eat any more—you may need one of those fasting cures the papers are telling so much about."

My Revolver Was Gone.

"I may—but I need a soft-boiled egg now, if you will be so kind as to cook it for me—"

I had broken my roll to crumbs in the effort to control my wrath at her, though the general situation was nothing new.

"—Unless you wish me to boil the egg myself," I added severely.

"Oh, yes—the egg. They do say raw eggs—when a person gets run down—"

With that, I rose and stalked to the kitchen.

She sidled past me, hastily snatching a saucepan off the shelf and filling it with water. I went back without a word. What little appetite I had was gone. When the egg finally arrived, I couldn't eat it—which convinced dear Jimmson, not that she had made my eating impossible but that I was having an "attack!" and needed her watching to see I didn't get any worse! She tagged me up, when I went to my bedroom, to know if she hadn't better telephone the doctor to look in—just as a precaution.

It was in the tip of my tongue to tell her, brutally, that what she'd better do was to attend to her own affairs and let me attend to mine, when I realized that she too might be standing between me and sudden death! So long as she was in the flat I was relatively safe.

I smiled at her—a pleasant and deceiving smile to prove that she was wrong and she immediately went back to work.

I had been standing by the bureau while we spoke and something to my eye seemed missing on it. She hadn't more than left the room when I knew what—my revolver was gone. It lay always on the corner where I could put my hand on it in the night in the dark. I knew I hadn't seen it when I cleared up the room; I knew monsieur couldn't have helped seeing it when he cleared out the bureau. And by the token, I knew that he had taken it.

"The cur!" thought I. But the loss was a good tonic, for after the first minute of fright at finding myself without defense, I got so hopping mad at the sheer meanness of the creature—also so pleasing glad at the little compliment he was paying me by admitting thus he was afraid of me and a revolver in combination—that I'd have sailed into him with a hatpin if he'd shown his face at the door. And at that moment I heard the sound of a latch-key working in a door. I thought it was my own, and dashed out and threw it wide.

It was the lady in the adjoining flat. She said: "How these keys do stick, sometimes! I wonder if anybody has been tampering with my lock."

Tampering with the lock! I closed my door without thanking her for the reminder—I had been in the act of getting a new lock when monsieur called me to Mrs. Delario's supposed death-bed. Oh, if I only had had it put on! Then I remembered that other key on Friday night—the key working in my own door and that I assumed belonged to Mr. Man-down-stairs.

No wonder he didn't swear at me when I called out to him he had the wrong flat: Mr.!Man was—monsieur!

I flung on my wraps, telling Mrs. Jimmson I had an errand out, and in less than fifteen minutes I had a locksmith putting on a new Yale lock and exchanging the small chain-bolt for the heaviest in the market.

I had rung when I returned with the man to give color to my tale of a lost key. Mrs. Jimmson let me in and seemed greatly astonished to see a man begin at once taking out screws.

"So you lost your key?" she observed placidly—just her way of taking everything I happen to be doing as a personal matter of her own. She was now prepared to superintend the operation. "Well, that's too bad to have to go to the expense of a new lock. Couldn't the man find a key that would fit? The key would cost only a quarter and you wouldn't have to buy a whole lock."

Her arms were folded and she showed she meant to see the new lock on to the last screw. I gazed at her in sheer wonder that a person could be so stupid, so obtuse as not to know she wasn't wanted; and from her, my eyes traveled along the hall, to the dining room, to the table—my heart jumped, and stopped: the hyacinths were not there!

"What have you done with those hyacinths?" I demanded, as soon as I could control my voice.

"You mean those faded things in a glass on the table?"

"Yes—what did you do with them?"

"If you'd mentioned them before you went out—"

"WHAT DID YOU DO WITH THEM?"

"Why, they were so faded—I never thought you—wanted them—"

She was beginning to quail and slide away. I caught her wrist—my fingers left marks—she showed them to me later.

"What—did—you—do—with—them? Answer me instantly!"

"I threw them out."

As Mrs. Jimmson said those words—that she had thrown the hyacinths away—the locksmith handed me the two keys, saying that the lock and the bolt were all right and that was all. I had paid him at the shop in order to hasten matters at the house, for I hoped, if possible, to get the job done so quickly that even George wouldn't find out what I had brought the man in for. I was still digging my fingers into her wrist while he gathered up his tools and he gave the two of us a curious look, half amusement, half wonder at my vehemence, before he closed himself out.

As for Mrs. Jimmson, she had been too paralyzed with fright to move. The instant the door was shut, I dropped her wrist and made a dash for the kitchen, hoping the garbage hadn't yet gone down. As I did it, I let out one short unpleasant word. That word was "Damn!" and into it I crowded all the pent-up feelings of the last twenty-four hours.

I saw her look of horror as I closed the door—she thought I had gone insane! Now, I'm not given to profanity, but I am willing to admit that it may have its uses on occasion,—as for instance when your scrubber-lady has just thrown away your million-dollar bunch of hyacinths and "didn't know you wanted those faded things." My one bad word, however, let off enough steam for me to realize that I didn't even know if the diamonds were there or not!

Hastily I pulled out the papers and rubbish and dumped them on the floor and had just pounced on the hyacinths, when the front bell rang.

Were the diamonds safe? I didn't dare at the minute to investigate—I didn't dare even to be caught with them in my hands. Suppose it were monsieur, coming now in broad daylight!

The ring was repeated. I grabbed up a bit of newspaper and rolled up the bunch, cramming it into the kitchen saucepan on the shelf—an operation I hadn't more than finished, setting the lid on as softly as I could, when I heard a man's voice shout my name, followed by the words "special delivery."

Without waiting for Mrs. Jimmson to decide if it were safe to call me, I stepped out and signed for it. As I closed the messenger out I looked at the address—the writing was unknown to me; and I was in the act of tearing open the envelope, when Mrs. Jimmson sank on a hall chair and began to weep.

"To think—oh, to think—to think," she sobbed. "It's hard—"

"Yes, it is hard for some people to think," I observed, lelly glaring at her and running my thumb under the flap.

"It's hard—after all these years I—I—I've tried my best to p-p-please you—"

"No—you haven't. I have repeatedly told you never—under any circumstances whatever—to throw away anything in my rooms without first asking me. Today, you have thrown away some flowers that I had reason to value—"

"You didn't tell me," she murmured "If you had given me the tip, now—told me you valued them—"

"Do you think I have to tell my private affairs to you?" I cried hotly.

"I hope I'm a friend," she interrupted at the word. "If I'd seen any reason—"

"It's not your place to see reasons"—she took a step toward the kitchen at the reminder—"but to obey orders. I'm under no obligation to give you reasons why I value flowers or why I don't."

The indignation faded out of her thin face; a gleam of real intelligence took its place, and this is what she said when I stopped for breath:

"I'm awful sorry I touched those flowers. As true as I stand here, I never once thought it might be a gentleman friend give them to you."

With that she started for the kitchen, adding: "And here I am keeping you from reading your special delivery." She smiled knowingly.

Gentleman friend! In those words all was explained and forgiven between the two of us—there was nothing but kindly sympathy—woman to woman, you know—as she said them. She closed the kitchen door tight—I knew it was the better to wreathe me in new haloes and fresh glories of romance! I could have wrung her neck. Gentleman friend, indeed! The one gentleman actively interested in me was after me with a knife and had threatened me with a revolver.

I had forgotten all about the letter still in my hand, and thought only of the diamonds.

The front bell rang as Jimmson crossed the sill. She stepped back and asked if she should go, but I motioned her I'd answer it myself and she disappeared from view.

It was a boy with a telegram. I found his "sign here" line and scrawled my name.

Then I came to myself. I had lost the special delivery letter!

CHAPTER IX.

The Telegram.

A telegram in the hand is worth two special delivery letters you can't find so I tore open the yellow envelope.

Now, it is a habit of mine to read the signature before the message. The signature was my brother's name. My brother is not a telegraph person, except for bad news, and the sight of his name gave me a shock, and for a good half-minute I could not go on with the message. But when I got the courage to face what had happened in the family, this is what appeared:

"I am obliged to ask you to come to Philadelphia tomorrow on urgent business. Take the train leaving New York at 11 a. m. I will meet you at Broad Street station."

I think the first thing that struck *me as queer in it was the large num*ber of words—words that no experienced business man, using telegraphic communication all the time, would have put in—the "to's" and "the's;" and then, "I am obliged to ask"—my brother would say, "Must ask you come," or "Please come."

The second queer thing was saying he'd meet me when his office is just around the corner from the station, and he knows I don't expect him to waste time standing about waiting for a train that may be late.

From the spinster's brother —or De Ravenol?

To Meet Miss Dale

By JANE DREW

(©, 1919, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"You'll never know her by sight by just that description," said Steve Powers, digging diligently into the spaghetti kettle with a chain dish cloth. "Rotten shame, the way your relatives have played little jokes on you, anyhow. Don't they know you're keeping bachelor's hall here with me?"

"She won't come here. I'm only to meet her at the train and trot her over to the Long Island terminal. Mother says she's blonde and wears a blue serge suit with a white silk waist and white hat."

"There'll be 9,000 girls dressed just like that, Tommy, you poor fish. Saturday afternoon in the Grand Central. I suppose she has a full description of you, too—slender, distinguished youth with dark blue serge suit, brown low-cuts, reddish hair, blue eyes, affable manner."

"Shut up," growled Tom. "Perhaps you'd like to meet her yourself. Nobody'd ever trust you to take a young person under your wing and land her safely in the bosom of her family."

"Yet I shall go with you, Tommy, to see that you behave," Powers warned cheerfully. "Have I ever deserted you in any emergency? No, sir. Brother to brother, through thick and thin, I will stand at a safe distance while you meet her."

Therefore, promptly at three minutes before two, there waited at the lower level gate two anxious young men, watching for Miss Virginia Dale, from Tuckahoe, N. Y. But one after another the arriving passengers dispersed and there was no young blonde person clad in blue serge with a white hat or white silk waist.

"Did we miss her?" asked Tom anxiously. "If you'd shut up and not get me all rattled, Steve, I'd have been sure."

But Powers failed to respond because he had been accosted by a young person. Certainly she was not the one expected. All in pink she was, short, ruffly pink skirts above white stockings and black patent leather slippers. Her brown hair was braided in pigtails with big, bunchy pink bows hiding her ears and she had blue eyes.

"I suppose you're expecting Virginia," she said, in the friendliest fashion possible. "Well, she couldn't come. She's gone to be bridesmaid up at Elaine Farrell's wedding, because Anne got sick and couldn't. You are the right ones, aren't you? Which is Tommy? I've heard your mother and your grandmother talk so much about you. I guess I just know everything that's ever happened to you ever since you were born."

"How did you know about me?" asked Steve, wistfully. "You're leaving me out."

"Well," she replied as between them she tripped to the taxi, "Virginia was telling about you. She says she knew your big brother when he went to the Jassand Military school up where we live. That's about five years ago."

"He's my younger brother," said Steve gravely. "I'm twenty-five."

"Really? You don't look it. Virginia's nineteen. I'm thirteen. I'm tall for my age, don't you think so? Everybody takes me for fifteen. I didn't tell you my name, did I? Guess!"

"Gwendolen," said Tom hopefully. "Agnes, Evangeline, Beatrice, Barbara, Constance."

"Oh, dear, no. It's just Betty," she chuckled. "Is this our taxi?"

It was, Steve thought with relief. All the way to the Pennsylvania she kept up a running fire of questions, and finally made them promise on her way home they would meet her, and give her a spaghetti dinner.

"Right up in your most special, secret place," she urged, last of all. "Good-by. I'll tell Virginia how nice you were. She'll want to know which is the nicer, but I don't know myself. Good-by."

"The little flirt," gasped Tom. "Is there anything she missed?"

"I'm engaged," answered Steve solemnly. "I've got her silver pencil to mend and a snapshot of her, and she's going to send me a box of walnut fudge every Saturday. I think she's a honey. You can keep your lofty, golden-haired Virginias."

Letters came from Betty every other day, all to Steve. Likewise the box of fudge. And he answered all loyally and sent back huge boxes of marshmallow creams and Turkish paste tied in pink satin ribbon. Also he sent out his folding kodak that had seen service abroad, and various other things.

"I want to," he said, in answer to Tom's teasing. "I never had a kid sister, and she's a honey. It takes my mind off my troubles. Let me alone."

Then came a sudden visit from Ted, the younger brother. Certainly he knew the Dale family up at Tuckahoe, he told them, while Steve listened, wide-eyed. Virginia was the finest girl ever happened.

"I like her sister," said Steve thoughtfully.

"She hasn't any sister," Ted retorted flatly.

"Named Betty?"

"No Betties. Virginia's the one and only."

"Blonde?" queried Tom eagerly.

"No. Brown haired. Dimples, blue eyes, little bit of a girl."

The two stared at each other, and Tom grinned aggressively. But Steve was a shade paler and there was a determined look in his eyes. He had a date on Long Island, it appeared, an immediate one. Tom called to him as he left them to take out some Turkish paste with him and a kiddie-car for luck.

And when he faced her in the cool living room at her chum's house not one bit did Virginia back down from her stand, only in her blue linen dress she looked fully eighteen, and only her eyes and dimples gave her away.

"I just did it for a joke, and because Molly, your sister, said I never could put it over. We went to school together. And at commencement last week you didn't come up, you know, and I'd liked your picture so much, and I did want to see you so Molly and I arranged it with Tommy's mother. She's a dear, and well, it did work out, didn't it?"

"I suppose Molly told you a lot of stuff about me?"

"No," honestly meeting his eyes, "only that you'd been 'over there' so long that you needed someone to cheer you up and make you take an interest in life. Did—did you like the fudge?"

"Loved it," he answered, earnestly. "We'll have spaghetti tonight, if you like, and supply even a chaperon if you'll come up."

But she shook her head.

"I can't, but—but you know the way out now, don't you? You might give me back my pencil now and the snapshot."

Steve smiled.

"Maybe you think I don't know when I'm engaged," he answered. "There's no comeback. You're going to make good on all that Betty promised me."

FIND LONG-BURIED NIAGARA

Canadian Engineers Unearth Site of Falls Once as Great as Those of the Present.

A dead and buried Niagara, its thunders stilled for countless ages, once perhaps as great in height and volume of water as the present falls, has been unearthed by excavations made in the course of the new Welland ship canal near Thorold in southern Ontario.

No memories of this lost Niagara linger even in aboriginal tradition. When it existed or when it ceased to exist has not even been conjectured. It may have been thundering in primeval solitudes before the age of man. The mastodon and the pterodactyl may have pastured upon its brink. Giant-winged lizards may have sailed above its clouds of rainbow vapors.

The engineers who partly uncovered it believe it was the original Niagara marking the course of a paleolithic river that connected Lake Erie and Lake Ontario. Some mighty prehistoric cataclysm, it is supposed, diverted the course of the stream and buried the falls and the old river bed level with the surrounding country.

"Canada's greatest asset today is its land," said one of the canal engineers. "It is the 'bread basket' of the empire. Its greatest development in the next few years will come from the settlers swarming in to make homes on its vast uncultivated areas. But if this ancient source of water power had remained in existence and wholly on Canadian soil, it might have advanced the clock of Canada's industrial destiny a century or so. Canada then would not have to share its wealth-producing energy with the United States and the nation might be today one of the great manufacturing centers of the world, which the development of its other wonderful water-power resources eventually will make it."

The edge of the cataract so far uncovered begins at the eastern abutment of the Niagara, St. Catherines and Toronto railway's new bridge near Thorold and extends in a southwesterly direction for 400 feet. The ledge continues under the earth for an unknown distance beyond the point at which the excavation ends.

What is supposed to have been the first fall is in the form of steps, with a total drop of 25 feet. Below it the excavation has revealed a precipice, but to what depth this wall of perpendicular rock sinks into the earth has not yet been determined. This ledge is believed to mark the main plunge of the ancient cataract.

The eastern abutment of the railway bridge has been built on the edge of the steps down which the old river once shot in foaming cascades. The central abutment, 75 feet away, went to a depth of 75 feet before striking rock. This rock sloped at a sharp angle and evidently had been worn smooth by the rush of torrents through unnumbered years.

The grave of this buried Niagara is half a mile from the escarpment of the present Canadian falls. A deep, canyonlike valley, through which the ship canal passes where Eight-Mile creek once meandered on its way to Lake Ontario, is believed to have been the bed of the prehistoric river which furnished the waters of the giant falls their outlet to the sea.

To Vignette a Photograph.

A simple way to obtain a vignette effect, without a mask made for the purpose, is as follows: Expose the paper as usual, wet it in clean water, and flatten against a piece of glass, with coated side out. Touch the fingers in the developing solution and gently rub the paper in the center. As the form of the picture looms up, the fingers should follow the outlines of that part which is desired to show up. The fact that the paper is wet will make the edges of the developed field diffuse. When fully developed as desired, wash in water and put in the hypo bath.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Adds Greatly to Appearance and Service of Buildings—Whitewash Is Cheapest.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Painting adds greatly to the appearance and service of all buildings and appliances. One may buy ready-mixed paints or may purchase paste pigments and oil and mix them. All surfaces should be clean and dry before they are painted. Use a priming coat made of equal parts of paint and linseed oil and cover with one or more coats of paint, which should be thoroughly brushed into the surface.

Whitewash is the cheapest of all paints, and may be used either for exterior or interior surfaces. It can be made by slaking about ten pounds of quicklime in a pail with two gallons of water, covering the pail with cloth or burlap and allowing it to slake for one hour. Water is then added to bring the whitewash to a consistency which may be applied readily. A weatherproof whitewash for exterior surfaces may be made as follows: (1) Slake 1 bushel of quicklime in 12 gallons of hot water; (2) dissolve 2 pounds of common salt and 1 pound of sulphate of zinc in 2 gallons of boiling water; pour (2) into (1), then add 2 gallons of skim milk and mix thoroughly. Whitewash is spread lightly over the surface with a broad brush.

Quality Is Largely Determined by Ease With Which Yolk Moves—Hints on Candling.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is necessary to rotate an egg before the candle if one is to obtain an accurate knowledge of its condition. By tilting at various angles, the location and size of the air space can be seen, and very often the position of the yolk. But the quality of the egg is very largely determined by the ease with which the yolk moves and the direction of its motion. The operator, therefore—

1. Grasps the pointed end of the egg with the tips of the fingers.

2. Holding the blunt end uppermost, places the egg closely against the opening, or spout of the candle.

3. Gives the egg a quick turn to the right or left, watching the movement of the yolk.

If the egg is perfectly fresh it may be difficult to find the yolk at first glance, but as the egg is turned a glimpse of it will be obtained.

MENU HINTS FOR HENS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Use home-grown grains and their by-products supplemented with meat and fish scraps, or milk. Mix these feeds to make a properly balanced ration.

Feed a scratch mixture of whole or cracked corn twice daily. Feed a mash, either dry or wet, made of ground grains and meat scrap.

Make the hens exercise for their feed.

Provide a light feed of corn in the morning, supplying only what the hens will clean up in a half-hour. Give a full feed in the afternoon, especially in cold weather.

THAT CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Mrs. Godden Tells How It May be Passed in Safety and Comfort.

Fremont, O.—"I was passing through the critical period of life, being forty-six years of age and had all the symptoms incident to that change—heat flashes, nervousness, and was in a general run down condition, so it was hard for me to do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, which it surely proved to be. I feel better and stronger in every way since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared."—Mrs. M. GODDEN, 925 Napoleon St., Fremont, Ohio.

Such annoying symptoms as heat flashes, nervousness, backache, headache, irritability and "the blues," may be speedily overcome and the system restored to normal conditions by this famous root and herb remedy Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complications present themselves write the Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for suggestions how to overcome them. The result of forty years experience is at your service and your letter held in strict confidence.

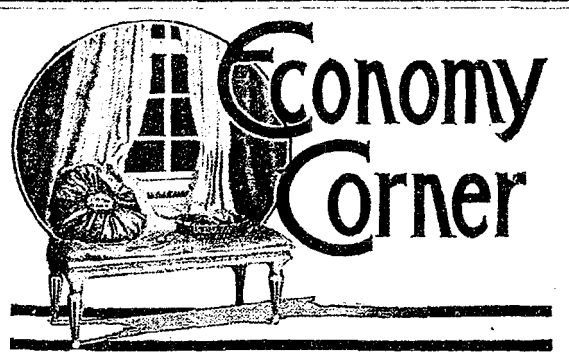
PISO'S



Endless ingenuity and small pieces or bits and scraps of silk or ribbons appear to be the most valuable assets of those who love to do fancy work—and almost every woman delights in making pretty things. The uses that the ingenious find for the odds and ends of silk and velvet that accumulate in the scrap bag, make a scrap bag a regular treasure. There is a long list of fascinating trinkets and belongings that spring from this unpretentious source, most of them personal things dear to dainty women.

Gold lace, gold net, lingerie lace, made silk flowers and fruits are the elegancies that join forces with silken stuffs to fashion all these trinkets and perfumed powders scent many of them.

Starting out with the simplest and smallest, there are little sachet bags, two or three inches square, made of bright colored ribbon and filled with cotton scented with sachet powder. A half dozen of these little bags, each having a tiny gilt safety pin in its edge, are tied together in a package with a narrow ribbon. They may be pinned in the dress or placed in glove, handkerchief or veil boxes or with stationery, pervading everything with a delicate odor. Or the bags may be cut heart shaped, pinned in a row to the edge of a narrow ribbon and placed in a little box to be used as desired.

Very small powder puff bags are made by sewing two plaques six inches in diameter together, running a casing in them near the edge and threading narrow ribbon through it. Place a cake of compact powder the size of a silver half dollar and a little powder puff in the bag also to make it complete.

Little ribbon or silk roses, flowers and fruit are used on so many of the things made of silk that one must learn how to make them among the first things. They are used in finishing touches in all sorts of boxes and toilet belongings—glove, handkerchief and powder boxes, talcum powder and toilet water bottles, pin cushions, comb case and all the requisites of the toilet table. These are covered with silk bound with gold braid or lace often having little frills of lingerie lace and the little flowers finally added.

Candle shades and candle shields, small screens for telephones and other things, innumerable pin cushions and pin trays, bon-bon boxes and picture frames, all are covered with silk and decked out with laces and braids. Then there are the needle and scissor cases and all the company of work bags that prove a joy forever to their owners, together with jewel and powder bags crocheted of mercerized cotton or of silk floss and lined with silk. The coat hanger finishes the list of personal belongings, but it does not cover all the uses for pieces of silk, which include many furnishings for the home.

Fine Cottons in Spring Clothes

For some time cheerful and reassuring rumors have been floating about, like soft, spring breezes, that there is to be a return to fine, sheer cottons for blouses and dresses next spring. This is more than a rumor now, since these lovely materials are demanded by people who are flocking South in greater numbers than ever and at much earlier dates than heretofore to those winter resorts that are filled with smartly-dressed people. For them very fine voile blouses, mostly in all white and made by hand, are already an assured success. Organdy proves popular in headwear, accessories and frocks, many resort hats featuring it both in the body of the hat and in the trimmings.

All gentlewomen will welcome the return of simple dresses and blouses, beautifully made and adorned with old time hand stitchery. There is a refinement about them not exceeded by even the sheerest silk weaves, and the crispness of organdy makes possible certain effects in trimming that cannot be duplicated by other materials. It is manufactured in all the light shades as well as white, and these are used alone and in combination with white.

In the picture above there is an example of what can be done with organdy in frock and hat. It is a simple dress with plain skirt shaped to narrow a little from the middle of the figure to the hem. Narrow frills accent its lines. There is a repetition of this trimming idea on the rather full sleeves. A plain, full waist is finished with a fichu of the organdy, edged with three flounces, and a long sash with vertical frills at the bottom completes a frock that calls for nothing but organdy in its makeup.

The pretty hat to match is of exactly the same character as the dress, but it allows itself decorations in an gora yarn embroidery. This combina*tion of the sheerest of cottons* with the woolliest of yarns would be startling if one had not been educated up to it by the same idea worked out in silk and angora, both taffeta and crepe-de-chine having proved that beautiful effects are wrought by it.

In January the stores all over the country present their first displays of new cotton goods for spring. Already women who are clever with the needle are planning their blouses of sheer cottons for next summer and tucking up things for themselves and their children so that more time may be spent out-of-doors when spring is here.

Poke-shaped hats continue in high favor for little girls. They are especially becoming to the childish face and moreover, they present an inviting surface for trimming of flowers and ribbons.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

SEASONABLE GOODIES.

Safe housed am I from the whitty world,
The blast and the giant storm.
Though long was the day, and lonely,
Forgotten its toil and tire,
There's joy and cheer in my ingle nook,
In the light of my friendly fire.

This is the season when one likes to cater to the sweet tooth of the family, especially youngsters.

Orange Cake. — Beat thoroughly together two cupfuls of sugar, half a cupful of water, the beaten yolks of five eggs, two and one-half cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and the juice and grated rind of one orange; fold in the whites of three eggs, beaten. Bake in layers, and ice with the following: Beat the remaining two whites until stiff, add confectioner's or powdered sugar gradually, together with the juice and rind of the orange until the icing is thick enough to spread.

Cranberry Cake.—Cream half a cupful of shortening and one and one-half cupfuls of light brown sugar together; add the beaten yolks of three eggs. Have ready and sifted two cupfuls of flour with one teaspoonful each of soda, cinnamon and nutmeg, with half the quantity of cloves; add to the sugar and shortening. Fold in one and one-half cupfuls of cooked cranberries which have been slightly sweetened and put through a sieve. Add the beaten whites and bake in two layers. Cover with icing which is colored with a bit of the strained cranberry juice.

Chocolate Potato Cake.—Blend well two-thirds of a cupful of shortening and two cupfuls of sugar; add two-thirds of a cupful of grated chocolate and one of warm mashed potatoes, one cupful each of seeded raisins and chopped nuts, half a cupful of milk and two and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, four eggs, yolks and whites beaten separately; half a teaspoonful each of cloves and nutmeg, and a teaspoonful of cinnamon. If baked in a loaf in a slow oven in a paper-lined pan for one hour it will keep a month.

Eggless Fruit Cake.—Mix one cupful each of brown sugar, sour milk and seeded raisins, four tablespoonfuls of melted shortening, two cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful each of soda, cinnamon and cloves. Bake in a slow oven about one hour.

MORE FOOD FOR THE CONVALESCENT.

We all know those houses scrubbed to a sort of raw cleanliness and reeking with the martyrdom of an overworked wife, from which the unwary guest beats a hasty retreat, and to which the family returns only to eat and sleep. The feminine head of such a house is a business failure.—Hazel Kewley.

Food which is easily digested, attractive and also nourishing, should be served to those who are regaining health.

Egg Soup.—Separate the yolk and white of a fresh egg, and beat each. Add three drops of lemon juice and a tablespoonful of sugar to the yolk, then fold in the white. Pour over the egg mixture one cupful of hot milk, beating while pouring the milk. Flavor with a little nutmeg, or orange juice. Add a pinch of salt and serve.

Baked Apple—Remove the cores from nice tart apples and fill the cavities with chopped raisins or dates and sugar. Currant or any good jelly may be used in place of the raisins. Bake in a moderate oven until tender. Serve on a pretty plate garnished with a flower.

Tomato Toast.—Place a slice of bread in the oven and dry slightly, then toast a delicate brown. Pour boiling water over the toast and quickly remove, then butter the toast lightly and pour a tablespoonful or two of cooked seasoned tomato over the toast and serve. The canned tomato soup may be used for this, thickening it a little if desired.

Pineapple Pudding.—Place a cupful of boiling water in a double boiler. Add, when boiling, a tablespoonful of sugar, the yolk of an egg and a teaspoonful of cornstarch. Stir and cook until smooth and thick, then add a half cupful of pineapple juice or finely grated pineapple. Cook until hot, fold in the stiffly beaten white of an egg and chill. Heap in a pretty dish and garnish with whipped cream.

Rice Pudding.—As rice when well cooked is most easily digested, it makes a very good dish for a convalescent. Take two tablespoonfuls of well-washed rice and cook in a double boiler with one cupful of milk until the rice is tender. Stir in a beaten egg, sugar, salt and any desired flavoring to taste. Serve with cream and sugar, or add a few chopped dates and serve with butter.

Prune Whip.—Stew half a dozen prunes in the water in which they were soaked over night, put them through a sieve, add a few drops of lemon juice and the beaten white of an egg. Serve heaped in a pretty glass topped with whipped cream.

GHOULS ROB GRAVE OF YOUNG WOMAN

Disinter Body and Strip It of Jewelry Said to Be Worth $1,500.

Chicago.—When Clara Gunderberg died, seven years ago, her engagement ring went to her grave with her in St. Boniface cemetery.

Detective Sergeant Steve Barry dug into the grave recently and made the discovery that ghouls had stripped the remains of the engagement diamond, taking with it two other rings. The three articles of jewelry, buried with the girl, were worth $1,500. The police, the girl's mother, Rev. George Eisenbacher of the Angel Guardian's orphanage, Devon avenue and Robey street, and Charles Bigelow, superintendent of the graveyard, are cooperating in a search for the ghouls.

The girl's mother, who lives at Hermitage and Hyland avenues, and is widely known in North side German circles, visited her daughter's grave a short time ago.

The earth appeared to her to have been turned and soft. She suspected it had been tampered with and immediately notified Superintendent Bigelow. She later went to the minister. He asked the police to investigate.

Sergeant Barry found the grave had been dug up and the top torn from the coffin. He could find no jewelry in the remains. Graveyard officials have asked the police to again open the grave and turn the coffin over for a more thorough search for the rings.

"The grave unquestionably had been opened and the rings taken," Sergeant Barry reported to Capt. Max Danner, head of the Summerdale police.

Records show that the girl died in Lakeside hospital in 1912 after an operation.

Gets Heart Balm From Girl Who Jilted Him

Damage to a man's heart resulting from his being "jilted" in a love affair has been placed at $250 by a jury in Hoboken, N. J.

Peter Meehan, past middle life, plaintiff in the action against Miss Bridget Hangley, a comely lass, forty-two, for breach of promise of marriage, has the distinction of being the first man in the county to win a verdict for heart balm against a woman.

The would-be bridegroom testified that he would have never thought of marriage if Miss Hangley had not "popped the question" herself.

PASTOR GETS QUEER BEQUEST

Heir to $87,000 Must Provide Care for Woman's Birds, Cats, Dogs and Rabbits.

Eureka, Cal.—Rev. James MacDonald, a Methodist minister residing here, has been named as sole heir in the will of Mrs. Amelia Smith Woodbury to an estate valued at $87,000. In addition to other property, the minister has been given charge of 85 canaries, 32 dogs, 18 cats and a batch of rabbits, with the understanding that the pets shall receive "all the care and comforts to which they have been accustomed."

Rev. Mr. MacDonald is carrying out the trust, but the rabbits are multiplying so rapidly that he entertains doubts as to how he is going to provide room for them a year from now.

Woman Rivals Burbank.

Centralia, Wash.—Rivaling Luther Burbank, Mrs. S. C. Davis of this city has developed a new variety of aster that is a marvel of beauty to local floral enthusiasts who have seen it. The flower petals are purple, embroidered with white and were developed after four years of careful selection along Burbank lines by Mrs Davis.

SWAMP-ROOT FOR KIDNEY AILMENTS

There is only one medicine that really stands out pre-eminent as a medicine for curable ailments of the kidneys, liver and bladder.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root stands the highest for the reason that it has proven to be just the remedy needed in thousands upon thousands of distressing cases. Swamp-Root makes friends quickly because its mild and immediate effect is soon realized in most cases. It is a gentle, healing vegetable compound.

Start treatment at once. Sold at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

Client Was Somewhat Peeved.

The visitor to the lawyer's office stood in amazement.

"I say, old man!" he exclaimed. "Whatever has happened to you? Had a motor smash, or what?"

The lawyer shook his head wearily as he gingerly touched his bruised and bandaged face.

"No. You remember that case the other day when I defended a man charged with assault? Well, I made a strong plea for him on the ground that he was a fool rather than a criminal."

"Yes; but—"

"I did so well that he was acquitted, and he waited for me outside the court."

Tales of Bum Chow.

Anna was still a "rookie" cook, when her husband invited me over to dinner. Everything went well, but the meat had evidently been cooked in a slow oven and it was tough.

After a little struggle with a piece of meat, I said, without thinking: "This reminds me of the 'dark days' in the army, when we used to have artillery horse and ammunition train mule." And I went on telling imaginative tales of bum "chow." John, her husband, enjoyed the stories, but when I looked at Anna there were big tears running down her cheeks.

Needless to say that I felt like a half a cent.—Chicago Tribune.

"Would you say Gadspur is a credit to his home town?"

"The people in his home town must think so."

"Why?"

"They don't seem able to organize a reception committee without making Gadspur chairman, although that may be because he is the only man in Chiggerville who owns a silk hat and a long-tailed coat."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

World Conditions

Deficiencies in the telephone service which have been quite obvious for a long time are due to the unusual conditions prevalent throughout the entire manufacturing, mercantile and domestic world.

The war took men and women from their accustomed duties where they did good work and sent them in every direction to new tasks, and in many instances inexperienced people took their places.

The various industries are gradually getting back their former efficient workers, but the spirit of service has not yet fully returned; that it will come back in a short time is a foregone conclusion.

The telephone service is probably no better or no worse than the general average of the business and domestic routine.

The telephone management is in a vigorous campaign to get its service back to the old standard of speed and accuracy. Nothing will be left undone to reach this desirable result.
