Honored On Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Leach, who celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Wednesday, were guests of honor at a delightful evening party given by his sister, Mrs. Inez Bagge, at her home on South Main street. A three-course dinner was served at 6 o'clock with covers for 20. Guests included relatives and old-time friends of Mr. and Mrs. Leach. A feature of the dinner was a wedding cake in gold and white, while the favors were yellow rose-nut baskets. Bowls of Johanna Hill roses formed the house decorations. The waitresses were the Misses Faye Bagge, Kathryn Staffan, May Prudden and Luella Huston.

Following the dinner a piano solo, "Memories," was rendered by Miss Faye Bagge, a reading, "Fifty Years," was given by Mrs. J. Nelson Dancer and Mrs. J. Vincent Burg, favored with solos, "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet" and "Silver Threads Among the Gold." Mr. and Mrs. Leach were presented with a gold piece as a souvenir of the occasion. Cards furnished the diversion for the evening.

Mr. Leach is a life-long resident of this vicinity and was born in 1862 on West Middle street, Chelsea, the son of James and Emily (Downer) Leach. When he was ten days old, his mother died, and he was later adopted by his grandparents, Darwin and Rebecca Downer.

Mrs. Leach, formerly Emma Smith, the daughter of Sylvester and Anne Allyn Smith, was born in 1866 in May City, coming to Chelsea in 1874. Mr. and Mrs. Leach attended the Chelsea public school. They were married Jan. 18, 1883, in May City and have since resided in the village or on their farm in Lima township. Their only child, Frank Roy, died in February, 1888, at the age of four years.

Postmaster and Former Publisher Died Friday

Orrin Tichenor Hoover, postmaster at Chelsea for nearly 25 years, died at his home on Garfield street, Friday afternoon, Jan. 13, after a long illness.

He was the son of John and William (Tichenor) Hoover and was born in Grass Lake, January 6, 1860, coming to Chelsea when 10 years of age. In June, 1891, he purchased the Chelsea Standard, continuing as its editor until 1906.

He began his first term as postmaster in 1902, which office he held until 1914, when he was succeeded by a democrat. In 1908 he repurchased the Standard, again disposing of it to the present publisher in 1929, when he received his second appointment as postmaster.

Mr. Hoover was married in March, 1891, to Miss Mary Goodyear. He was a member of Olive Lodge, No. 156, F. & A. M., Olive Chapter, No. 106, O. E. S., the Knights of Path and the Methodist church. He is survived by the widow, a son, Claid G. Hoover of Akron, Ohio, a sister, Mrs. Henry Hall of Manhattan Beach, Calif., and two grandchildren.

LOCAL BUSINESS MEN FAVOR OPERATION OF STATE CEMENT PLANT

More than 45 local business and professional men attended a mass meeting held Monday evening in conjunction with the regular meeting of the Kiwanis club in the room formerly occupied by the firemen. The purpose of the meeting was to formulate plans of activity in an effort to convince the new state administration that the local cement plant could be operated to the advantage of the state prison industries.

Following the dinner, which was served at 6:15, the regular Kiwanis meeting was held with V. O. Nelson of Ann Arbor, speaking on the new Kiwanis objective, namely, "Boys and Girls Work." Music was furnished by Barbour's Synchopators, of Lima Center.

The meeting was then turned over to the guests, with H. D. Witherell presiding as chairman. Mr. Witherell in his opening remarks, stated that with the change in the state administration the cement plant had ceased to be a Republican political football and that it is now time for the Democratic party to take it under consideration as a business proposition.

Several members of the group expressed opinions as to the course of action which would be advisable, and it was decided that a committee of five, with Mr. Witherell as chairman, should investigate the possibilities of profitable operation of the plant, and with all available data collected they should call upon Edward Frensdorff, director of prison industries, and Governor Comstock, and present their case in an effort to convince them that the plant should be put in operation, the manufactured article to be either cement or fertilizer. Mr. Witherell will appoint the other four members of the committee.

In accordance with an Act passed by the 1931 legislature, it is mandatory that the cement plant be disposed of not later than June 30, 1933. The duties of the committee headed by Mr. Witherell will be to propose to the administration that this Act be repealed during the present session of the legislature.

Operetta Presentation Decided Masterpiece

One of the finest entertainments ever given in Chelsea was presented on Friday evening by the High School chorus when they made their first appearance in "The Toreadors," a Spanish two-act operetta, under the direction of Stuart Vander Ven, principal of the High School.

The story of the operetta centers around Senor Dictorio, a wealthy farmer and a great admirer of Toreadors, who is giving a large party in honor of the birthdays of his twin daughters, Benita and Juanita. Senor Dictorio was splendidly portrayed by Junior Seitz. Luella Huston and Luella Widmayer, the twins, one a blonde and the other a brunette, costumed alike, were very clever. Earl Huch and Elaine Hawley as the admirers of the twins were good. May Buss and Mildred Beman in their roles as friends of the twins, were fine. Wayne Wiseman and Leo Allshouse, who from the time of their entrance, singing the "Beggars' Song," promised to Toreadors much against their wills and amazement, until their final exit with the friends of the twins, kept the audience in a constant state of joviality. The dancing girls and the choruses of 20 girls and 10 boys added animation to the scenery and spontaneity to the songs. The outstanding number was the Tambourine Song. Miss Johanna Brueckner and Miss Marie Wenk at the two pianos are to be congratulated on their splendid accompanying.

The beautiful costumes, which were rented for the production, gave the necessary color to the operetta. Mr. Vander Ven displayed his ability as a conductor by his composure and the instant response of the cast and choruses to his signals and earned the hearty applause of the large audience.

Annual Scout Meet Will Be Held Tonight

ASSOCIATION
1932PLAN SECRECY
FOR TAX SALESScheme To Keep Public In Dark About
Title Sales Is Revealed
In Lansing.

By Elton R. Eaton
Lansing, Mich., Jan. 18.—What is believed to be a scheme on the part of a Lansing lobbyist acting in cooperation with a number of tax title sharks to prevent distressed home and land owners from knowing anything about the sale of the tax titles to their property, upon which taxes might be delinquent is seen in a bill introduced in the senate during the past few days. Under the deceptive guise of an economy claim this trick bill would keep home owners from knowing of the loss of their property by tax title sales. It has been known for a number of years that certain tax title sharks have had such a plot in view and apparently thinking now with the change of State administration would be a good time to put the deal over on the distressed property holders of Michigan, they have brought the bill forth which it is passed will suppress from the delinquent tax payers any knowledge of the danger confronting their life savings. So brazen is this proposed trick legislation that those back of it have not openly shown their hand. A Grand Rapids lawyer who is a member of the senate, introduced the bill.

The bill, which if enacted into law, do away with the public notice given of each description of property put up for sale because of non-payment of taxes. It would provide that only a small notice be published in some newspaper in the County of just the date of these tax sales.

When the present law was passed years ago it was framed with but one object in view, to protect by public notice, as far as possible the property holders. The makers of this old law deemed it advisable to put into the notice of the delinquent tax sales, a brief description of delinquent tax property, so that one would know of the danger that confronted his holdings, and so that he would have an equal opportunity to save his real estate from tax title sharks.

Now it is proposed under the guise of an economy measure to take that protection away from the home owner.

By the publication of property descriptions in past years a property holder knows when his property is up for sale because of non-payment of taxes, and he is given plenty of time under the present law to protect and save his holdings. But this law has never been a popular one with tax title sharks.

Because of the business depression and the fact that taxes will soon be delinquent on many valuable pieces of property in all parts of the state, it has been suggested that this piece of vicious legislation has been started with the idea in mind of giving some unknown group an opportunity to buy tax titles to valuable real estate without the owner knowing his property has been offered for sale.

The bill did not come from the Democratic forces and prominent Democratic leaders say they knew nothing of it until introduced in the senate.

This is the first move made in years to do away with proper public notice in all property and legal matters and old legislative observers indicate that it has not fallen on fertile ground.

Representative Earl Bohans of the Van Buren district, is anxious for the legislature to get down to business and enact some of the economy measures that the Legislative Commission of Inquiry has recommended. This Commission of which Representative Vern Brown of the Ingham County News was one of the active members, says Mr. Bohans in his resolution, has pointed the way to many immediate economies that will help the people of Michigan. Like all other sessions, the present one is a bit slow in getting under way.

Myles Gray, Republican, who has just been re-elected clerk of the house by the Democrats, is a former well-known Michigan newspaper publisher. For many years he owned the Plymouth Mail. Mr. Gray is considered one of the best informed parliamentarians in the State.

With the approach of the coming spring election two names have been freely mentioned around Lansing as possible candidates for the State Board of Agriculture. One is the grand old man of the house of representatives, former Speaker Fred Ming of Cheboygan. The other is former State Senator Henry Ross of Livingston County.

It has been indicated by friends of Governor Comstock that he believes the most good can be accomplished for the taxpayers as well as the wage earners by a general reduction of salaries and not wholesale dismissals from jobs. It is understood that he plans to keep as many people working as is consistent with the work to do but save by cutting down the size of pay envelopes. The Governor's suggestion has met with popular public favor.

Efforts to keep political jobs under the law they had passed which sought to prevent war veterans from being dismissed have proven fruitless since the change of administrations. The attorney general has ruled that veterans appointed can hold office only during the tenure of the time of the official appointing them. It has been observed that newly elected officials are somewhat worried about appointing veterans for fear they cannot be dismissed if their services should not prove entirely satisfactory. The law that veterans thought would help them is proving somewhat of a stumbling block to political appointments.

Dillman Will Seek
Re-election In April

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 18.—State Highway Commissioner Grover C. Dillman Tuesday announced his candidacy for renomination and reelection on the Republican ticket.

Mr. Dillman has been highway commissioner since Jan. 1, 1929 when he was appointed to the post to succeed Frank P. Rogers, who resigned. Mr. Dillman was elected in April of that year to fill office for the four year term starting July 1, 1929.

He was born on a farm near Bangor, Van Buren County, and after graduating from the Bangor high school, attended Michigan State College and received a degree in Civil Engineering in 1918. In 1927 the college awarded Mr. Dillman the honorary degree of Master of Highway Engineering. He is married and has two daughters.

Mr. Dillman joined the department in 1913 as a draftsman. In 1916 he was made district engineer in charge of road and bridge construction and maintenance in the Upper Peninsula. In 1920, he returned to Lansing as Maintenance Engineer and was promoted to Deputy Commissioner in 1922.

Michigan
Department of State
WEEKLY NEWS BULLETINFrank D. Fitzgerald
Secretary of State

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 18.—General administrative salaries and expenses of the Department of State for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1932 were $119,581 below the amount allowed by the legislature, according to the department's financial report to the governor and the 1933 legislature.

The legislature allowed $380,453 for administrative expenses, but only $240,871 was expended. Administrative expenses also were $43,000 less than was spent for the same purpose for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1931.

Total revenues collected by the department for the 1932 fiscal year were $52,109,804 or $1,338,483 under collections for the previous fiscal year ending June 30, 1931. This represents a decrease of approximately two per cent in the state's receipts.

Motor vehicle weight tax receipts for the 1932 fiscal year were $18,792,129 while for the 1931 fiscal year revenue from this source was $20,190,147. The drop in gasoline tax collections was not as great. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1932 gasoline taxes yielded $23,343,712 or not quite $500,000 under the previous year. Corporation privilege fees were $7,112,063 or approximately $600,000 below collections for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1931.

Due to the enactment of a new malt tax law by the 1931 legislature, malt tax revenues showed an increase of about 30 per cent. For the last fiscal year the state received $1,060,586 from malt taxes as compared with $857,485 for the previous year.

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1931, motor vehicle operators' license fees yielded $148,780. Because of the new law, revenue from this source increased to $1,047,065 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1932.

HOWELL.—The church bequest of $5,000 was settled out of court on Tuesday afternoon by a 50-50 agreement between the Grace Evangelical Lutheran and the Evangelical church. The late M. J. McPherson left $5,000 to each of four Howell churches, one of which was the German Lutheran. There was no church by that name and both German churches claimed the bequest.—Republican Press.

BRIGHTON—Work on the construction of the 130 foot steel tower at the grounds of the Michigan State Ski Club at Brighton has been going steadily forward and the big slide is expected to be ready for service within a very short time. The final section of steel was being put into place on the tower Monday of this week and the cables are now in process of being suspended. It is expected by Friday or certainly by the end of the week that the entire slide will be completed. Then nothing will be needed but one big snow to provide skiing for the rest of the winter: since snow can be stored for use for a long time.—Argus.

MASON—Effective January 1, telephone rates in Dansville have been reduced drastically. Business phones previously have been $28.00 per year and are now reduced to $18.00 and residence phones have been $20.00 per year and are now reduced to $15.00. During 1932 a large number of phones in the village were taken out. At the beginning of 1933 there were only 14 telephones left in the village and several of the 14 were contemplating the discontinuance of their phones, it is reported. Mrs. Heidlin, manager of the exchange, realized the seriousness of the situation and decided on the reduction of rates. The utilities commission were reluctant at first but after some persuasion decided to make the change, it is said.—Ingham County News.

ity has just been completed and early this week the last of the beets left in the field for the refineries at Mt. Clemens. The crop is the largest, both in tonnage and in valuation, according to the reports from the sugar refineries. Nearly a thousand acres of land in the vicinity of Milan were under cultivation for beets this year. During the past few months, two hundred and fifty-nine carloads of beets were shipped from this vicinity by rail and about twenty cars shipped direct by truck. The crop totaled a little more than ten thousand tons and local growers were paid in excess of $50,000 for the crop.—Leader.

Pres. Inez Rank of the Chelsea Trade Territory Teachers' Club, together with Miss Leut Hazard and Mrs. Marjorie Olds of the club's executive committee, attended a meeting of club officials from other villages and cities of Washtenaw county, in Ann Arbor last Saturday morning. Supt. Poore was also a visitor at this meeting.

The eight teachers' clubs of the county are united under the chairmanship of Supt. Tapp of the Lincoln Consolidated school located near Ypsilanti. County Commissioner Cora L. Haas is secretary of the county organization.

The Washtenaw County Teachers' clubs have set for their main objective during the winter and spring the education of all of the people of the county with regard to the critical condition of school finance in Michigan, with special emphasis on the effects of the tax limitation amendment adopted last November.

The executive board of the Chelsea T. T. C. club met at the home of Mrs. Marjorie Olds on Tuesday evening of this week and perfected plans for a get-together of the entire club next week. All of the teachers serving schools that are in Chelsea's natural trade territory are invited to associate themselves with the club.

Your Help Is Needed

There has been a select group during the past week that has been carrying eight hours of work. However, this eighth hour has brought no credit but, has brought dishonor to these students. Every day of the week from three thirty till four o'clock, rain or shine, there is that little class in Room 24. And why are they there? Some foolish motive probably prompted them to break one of the corridor rules or they may have broken one of the rules of the library. In the case of both, their names were taken, reported and in due time they were informed that they were to stay. In many cases when there is a failure to report, the length of their detention is increased.

Students, why can't we abolish this detention room? We can with your help.

Girls' Basketball

The girls of C. H. S. have a basketball team. Now don't be alarmed, we haven't been practicing much, because of the lack of time. Even though we did lose that game with the alumnae, we do plan to win that game with Clinton. It's going to be here, so come and see us win.

Our team is a little undecided about who is going to play what. Although we have a pair of very clever guards, the real line-up has not been decided, so you'll read about it later.

This week a new system of policing the library has been installed. During the weeks following Christmas vacation, the library has been policed by teachers. The new system of student patrol has been inaugurated in order to give the teachers more time for consultation with students. It is felt that this system will benefit both students and teachers. The only disadvantages is the loss of one study period per day for each pupil. Monday.

METHODIST HOME

Last Wednesday Mrs. Susan Danson entertained her granddaughter, Mrs. Rose Danson of Detroit.

Thursday, Miss Emma Leeman received a call from her brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Leeman of Sharon.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Whitacre and Mr. and Mrs. James Mynaham of Howell were guests of Mrs. Dora Davis on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Cox of Detroit called Sunday on Miss Rachel Knaggs. On Friday, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Carlton had as visitors, Mr. and Mrs. William Fogg of Highland Park. They were accompanied by Mrs. C. L. Margeson of Lansing.

Wednesday, Miss Emma Leeman received a call from her cousin, Mrs. George Maute of Francisco. She was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Esther Maute, and Mrs. Elmer Maute, the bride of her son, all of the same place.

Miss Carrie Shuler of Detroit and Mrs. Edith Andrews of Ann Arbor were entertained by Miss Abbie Carey on Monday afternoon.

Miss Almada Beach is confined to her bed these days. The carrying of her 93 years of age seems to be too much for her frail constitution.

Dr. W. J. Balmer is spending a few days with each of his daughters in Royal Oak and Port Huron. Mrs. Wm. Bowlich and daughter, Miss Edith Bowlich of Lansing, arrived Mrs. Frankie Sanford by a via-

Are Decimal Points Worth Anything?

Charles (discussing a decimal point in a geometry problem): "Well, I almost had the problem right. Decimal points don't matter much any way."

Mr. Cross: "Well, don't they? Let me tell you a little instant that happened in a town."

"An engineer had just graduated from college and was engaged to build a bridge for a city. After the bridge had been constructed some large trucks went over it loaded heavily. The bridge went down and the trucks were dropped into the large deep river."

The mayor and some other men went to look for the man and when they couldn't find him they asked the city hotel clerk if the constructor had said anything. The clerk said he left on the train with his trunk and suit cases and when paying all he said was, 'Darn that decimal point!'

Ye Ol' Snooper's Column

Basketball is the main attraction around here for a week or two. The first league game is to be here in the gym, Saturday, the 21st. Here is a little advice as to buying your tickets. Get a season ticket. See all the home games at a big saving.

Our little Sophomores are still practicing diligently. On what? Their play and believe it or not—it's "Nothing But the Truth."

"Was you dere?" Where? At the opera, "Toreadors." If you didn't go you sure missed an evening of worth-while entertainment.

Hope to get some more news next week. This depression is even making news harder to get.

I WONDER WHAT JESUS WILL SAY?

When I enter the portals of Heaven,
 With hopes fruition fulfilled;
 When those gone before come to greet me,
 And with unfettered glory I'm filled;
 When one who outshines all the others
 In love's crystal light leads the way,
 And I stand before Christ the Redeemer,
 I wonder what Jesus will say?

Will He reach out both hands to receive me,
 Will there be a bright smile on His face,
 Will the words "In as much" thrill my spirit
 With the rapture that fills all the place?

Will He say, "your mansion is finished,
 I've prepared it especially for you;
 Enter in, enter in to my Glory
 Because my dear child, you've been true."

He has promised all this my dear brother,
 All this, my dear sister, and more;
 He is pulling today at your heart-strings,
 Today He knocks at your door.

Ho brings you the blessed assurance,
 If your heart is with Him in accord,
 You'll some day receive the glad summons
 "Enter into the joy of your Lord."

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—Will you please be kind enough to answer in your question department the date that the State of Indiana was admitted to the Union?

A says it was in 1814 and B says it was in 1815. We thank you.

Ans.—Indiana was admitted to the Union on Dec. 11, 1816. Hence neither of you were right.

Ques.—I wish to ask you when and where Martin Van Buren, one of the presidents of the United States, was born?

Ans.—Martin Van Buren, the eighth president of the United States, was born at Kinderhook, N. Y., on Dec. 5, 1782.

Ques.—At the close of the Spanish-American War where was the treaty signed by these two countries?

Ans.—The treaty between the United States and Spain was signed at Paris on Dec. 10, 1898.

Ques.—I will thank you very much if you will please tell me the correct form in introducing people to each other.

Ans.—There is no set form to use in an introduction, aside from the fact that you should always address a lady for her permission to introduce a gentleman to her. Beyond this, simplicity is the keynote in introductions.

Many people seem to think that a certain measure of grace and courtesy of manner is necessary to conform to "good manners." This is erroneous. An introduction should be made with the friendliness that is in accord with whole-hearted warmth for which the Americans are famous. The correct introduction does not consist merely in making two strangers known to each other. Its purpose is to create an immediate friendliness; to do away with all hesitancy and embarrassment; to create smooth and pleasant conversation. Make it as simple as possible, and be perfectly natural in doing so, and then you will have the correct form.

Ques.—Can you tell me in your question and answer column where the home of St. Paul was?

Ans.—The home of St. Paul was in Tarsus Cilicia.

Ques.—When and where was the first street car operated in the United States?

Ans.—The first street cars operated in the United States were in New York City in 1825. On Nov. 28 of that year a horse-drawn car was put in operation on Broadway.

Ques.—Will you please answer if there are any living descendants of George Washington, and where they are now living.

Ans.—There are no direct descendants of George Washington, as he had no children. George Washington's brothers had children, the descendants of whom are scattered throughout the United States.

Ques.—Does the City of Washington cover the whole District of Columbia or are there other towns in the District?

Ans.—There are no other cities, towns or villages in the District of Columbia. While Washington covers only about one-third of the District, the territory was set aside for the site of the federal city, which may in time grow to occupy the whole territory. Washington is not independently incorporated and has no boundaries other than the District of Columbia.

Ques.—My father was born on Feb. 8, 1856, but he says he is sure the day was on Monday. Our baptismal records show that the day was Sunday. Now which is right?

Ans.—Sunday is correct. Your father has evidently overlooked the fact that 1856 was a leap year. This would account for his mistake.

Ques.—Why is the president's mansion called the White House?

Ans.—When the British fired the executive mansion in 1814 the freestone wall remained standing. In restoring the building a few years later the walls were painted white to obliterate the marks of the fire. After this, outside of official usage, the building was called the White House.

Ques.—I would like you to answer in your good-question and answer column how the Indians tanned their furs.

Ans.—The Indians' method of tanning was very crude. They buried their pelts in tanbark for a period of time during the process of curing, and then made them pliable by rubbing.

Ques.—What does the abbreviation "deg." stand for?

Ans.—"Deg." is the abbreviation for "Degree or Degrees."

TECUMSEH—The old Brownville schoolhouse, abandoned many years ago only to be restored by Henry Ford, will reopen on Monday, January 23, representatives of the Detroit automobile manufacturer announced today. The school has been completely rehabilitated and to the observer today presents the same appearance it did 40 years ago, with its oil lights, box stove and whitewood seats and desks. The building is of brick. Herald.

MICHIGAN BELL TELEPHONE CO.

TELEPHONE BRINGS AID TO INJURED CHILD

An actual incident, reported to this company

The small daughter of a Michigan family, playing in the basement of her home, was painfully and critically injured.

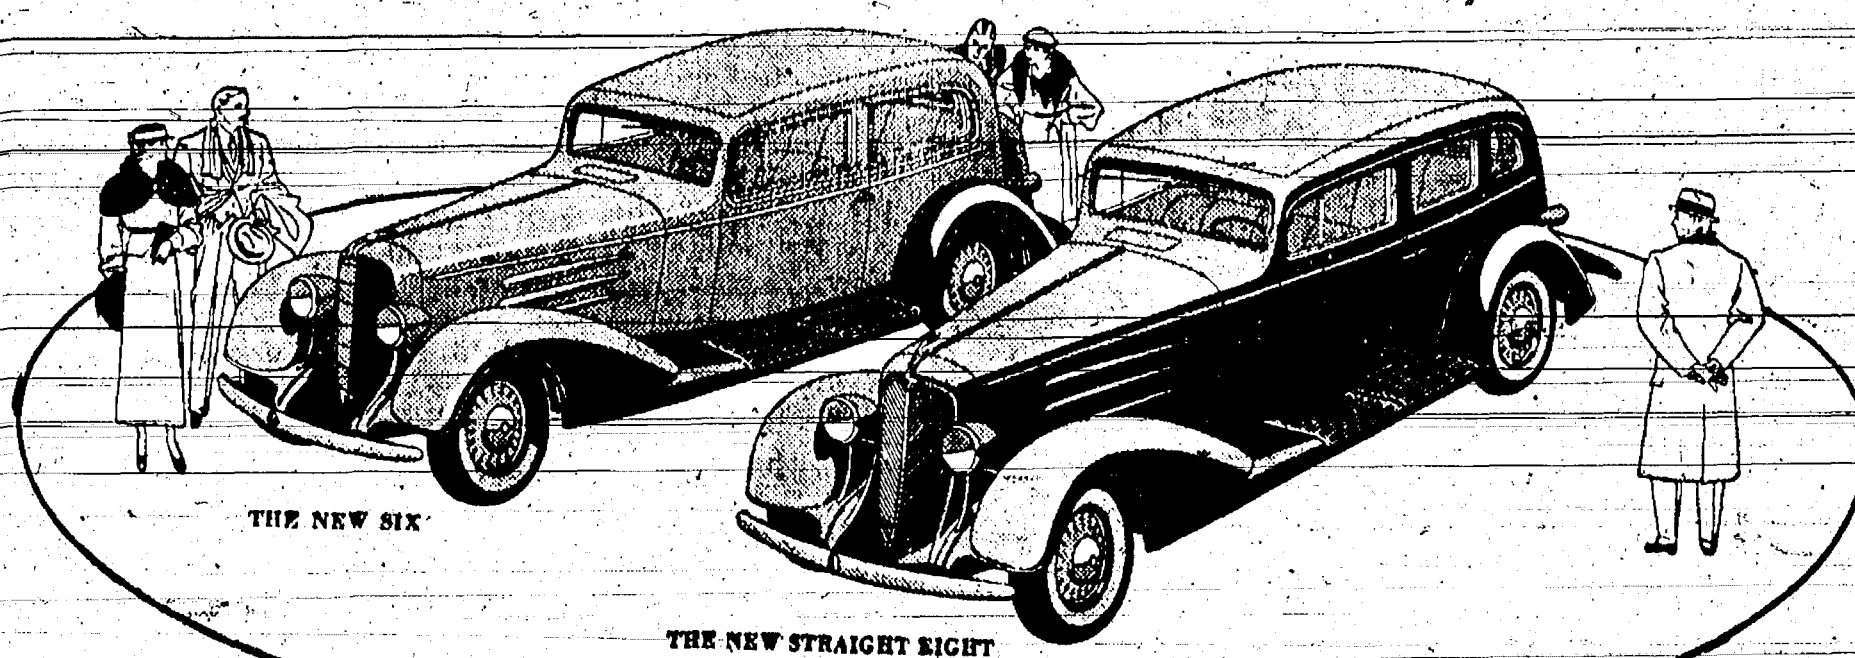

Her mother, hearing the child's screams, and seeing what had happened, dashed frantically to the telephone and called the doctor. The physician arrived without delay, and through immediate and skillful medical attention, was able to treat the child's injuries successfully and prevent serious complications.

In such emergencies, just one telephone call for assistance may be worth more than the cost of the service for a lifetime.

Two New Style Leaders THE 1933 OLDSMOBILES

THE NEW SIX

THE NEW STRAIGHT EIGHT

PRICES REDUCED '130 TO '145

A Roomier more Powerful Six $745 * A Larger more Luxurious Eight $845

NEW!... Two motor cars entirely different from anything you ever saw—symmetrically new in design from end to end. And with style leadership, these 1933 Oldsmobiles also bring you every other desirable modern quality—at the lowest prices in ten years.

The new Six is a roomier, more comfortable car... the Eight is larger and finer in every respect. Both are extremely brilliant performers. And progressive engineering has carried still further the dependability for which Oldsmobile is famous.

The Six engine is larger and develops 80 h.p.—the Eight is increased to 90 h.p. As a result, the Six will do from 75 to 80, the Eight from 80 to 85—actual stop-watch miles per hour!

Both the engines are cushioned on a scientific new three-point rubber mounting that overcomes all sensation of effort or vibration from the source of power.

In these 1933 cars Oldsmobile has employed a special double-drop X-type frame, which greatly strengthens the chassis and provides unusual driving stability.

Outwardly and inwardly, Oldsmobile's new Fisher bodies offer many important refinements. The revolutionary new Fisher No Draft Ventilation, Individually-Controlled, is built into all closed models.

Don't compromise this year! Demand style, performance, and durability... at prices which represent top value. The new Oldsmobile Six and Eight are outstanding General Motors values. They offer balanced excellence in everything essential to motoring pleasure, comfort and satisfaction.

The 1933 Oldsmobile Sixes range in price from $745—the Eights from $845—f.o.b. Lansing. Bumpers and spare tires are extra. Convenient G. M. A. C. time payment plan.

Red-Cross Continues Distribution To Needy

A great treasure is awaiting Wash-tonaw county's needy, according to latest reports issued from the executive offices of the Wash-tonaw county chapter of the American Red Cross, by Mrs. Nellie E. Ball, executive secretary.

A shipment of more than 1,400 sweaters was received at the executive offices early this week and are ready for distribution at the present time. These sweaters came in a great variety of styles and colors and are found in all sizes for both adults and children.

In addition to the sweaters, the Red Cross has received a large shipment of out-fitting flannel in a variety of colors and designs, suitable for under clothing and pajamas.

The third shipment of Federal flour was received early this week and is being distributed throughout Wash-tonaw county. This allotment is the first of the 1,400 barrels which will take care of the needs of the county during the next three months.

The large supply of 20,000 yards of materials and the 4,700 garments, including stockings and underwear has almost been exhausted.

The American Red Cross has distributed more than $8,000 worth of flour and cotton materials throughout Wash-tonaw county during the last six months, entirely without cost to the agencies or the beneficiaries which has meant a great saving to the taxpayers.

OUR NEIGHBORS

NORTHVILLE—Of the five hundred names listed in a directory of Northville which was published by the late E. S. Neal in 1895, after he had numbered the houses of town, only 80 people are still living here. The entries were by home owners or tenants so that the head of the family was the only name listed. Deaths and removals in this thirty-eight year period have made a wide gap.—Record.

WAYNE—Plans for the formation of a new County Government, excluding Detroit, were made at a meeting Tuesday of a special committee of the out-County supervisors held at the home of Mayor Clyde M. Ford, of Dearborn. It was the consensus of the committee that the cities, villages and townships, outside of Detroit, can save at least $1,500,000 by the change.—County Review.

Rings About Sun and Moon

The weather bureau says that there are two kinds of rings about the sun and moon. Those that are close in—only one to four or five diameters of the moon, say, away which we call coronas, are caused by water droplets. The smaller the droplets the larger the rings. The other rings, the aureoles, occurring much farther away, are caused by ice crystals. There are several such rings, but each one always has the same angular size. The size depends on the shape of the crystals (usually, but not always, a short six-sided column with flat ends perpendicular to the sides), the course of the light through the crystals and the amount of bending this light undergoes as it enters a face of the crystal at a given slant.

Aqueducts in History

As far back as Babylonian and Assyrian times, aqueducts were used in irrigation. By the reign of Thutmose II, in the Fourteenth century B. C., Egypt contained channels to make use of the Nile's annual overflow. In Cyprus the Phoenicians dug tunnels and built siphons to hoist water to their temples. Old Jerusalem had water conduits, and so did Greece. The ancient Hadrian aqueduct only comparatively recently having been repaired and put back into use. Most famous perhaps, of all aqueducts was that of the Roman emperor, Claudius, builder of the Apollon way, whose covered water course reaches more than ten miles into the countryside east of Rome. Today its ruins remain an impressive reminder of that long time.

Medieval Ship Launching

Humble was the site of England's foremost dockyard in medieval times, and there it was that the great craft, the Sovereign, was launched in 1493 in the presence of Henry VII. The ship had been renovated and was formally renamed, and she was blessed upon that occasion with the ceremonial display customary at that period, that is, before the reformation. The procedure has been described in this number: "A mildred prelate with attendant train of priests and choristers, crosier in hand, with candle, book and bell, with holy water stoup performing the benediction."—Grace Log.

Trials

Have you sorrows or trials that seem very heavy to bear? Then let me tell you that one of the best ways in the world to lighten and sweeten them is to lose yourself in the service of others. In helping to bear and lighten those of a fellow-being whose, perchance, are much more grievous than your own. When turned in this way, sorrow is the most beautiful soul-refiner of which the world knows, and hence not to be shunned, but to be welcomed and rightly turned. R. W. Trino.

Sahara Made Waste by Destruction of Forests. Everybody knows that trees apart from their direct economic value, exert a beneficial influence affecting climate, agriculture, and even the very existence of man. This can be more clearly demonstrated in Africa where vast areas are drying up and becoming depopulated as the direct result of forest destruction. Recent scientific research has shown that the Sahara has not always been desert. Remains of trees have been found on the banks of vanished rivers and on the shores of dried-up lakes.

At the time of Mohammed it is estimated that about 1,000,000 Arabs invaded parts that are now desert. They cut the forests to make their farms, moving on to repeat the same process of destruction as soon as they had reaped their crops. They brought with them vast herds of goats. It is probable that each Arab possessed about 100 goats. Now, 100,000,000 goats following in the train of 1,000,000 nomadic farmers would not allow of much tree growth, for the goat is the bete noir of the forest.

To the north of the Gold coast, in a territory under the French sphere of influence, vast areas are drying up and becoming depopulated as the direct result of forest destruction. In certain tribes the chiefs have forbidden marriage and their women refuse to bear children, because they see the end of the forest in sight and they will not raise sons and daughters to starvation.

Briefly Told. A friend is the first person who comes in when the whole world has gone out.

Far From Madding Crowd. The world's loneliest couple, a shepherd and his wife live in a desolate stone hut a few miles from Newton Stewart, Scotland. Their primitive habitation is located on the hills of Galloway and cut off from the world by impassable moss-hogs. The inhabitants of Bargrennan, the nearest village, know the couple are still alive only by the weekly visits of a weather-scattered pony, which ambles into the village and halts at the door of the general store. The storekeeper loads up the primitive pannier on its back and sends it off to the solitary cottage on the hillside with the week's provisions. The pony is the only living thing that can pick its way through the deadly hogs.

Many progressive changes in design and construction. And selling at new, greatly-reduced prices that only the world's largest builder of cars and trucks could achieve.

All 1 1/2-ton models are now powered by a remarkable new Six-Cylinder Special Truck Engine. This is basically the same reliable power plant of last year—but Chevrolet has made it even smoother, more powerful, and more economical by the addition of 33 new improvements and refinements. In addition, the Chevrolet 131-inch truck now has a much stronger frame, with deeper, heavier side members.

The 1 1/2-ton models have a sturdier universal joint, as well as larger brakes, improved springs, and a new 15-gallon fuel tank.

Nothing that Chevrolet has ever done before in trucks can equal the importance of this announcement: A stronger, more powerful, more durable six-cylinder line. Even more economical than last year. And priced as low as $440!

This Woman Lost 64 Pounds of Fat

Mrs. H. Price of Woodside, L. I. writes: "A year ago I weighed 160 lbs. I started to take Kruschen and now I weigh 96 and never felt better in my life and what's more, I look more like 30 yrs. old than the mother of 2 children, one of 19 and the other 12. My friends say it's marvelous the way I reduced."

To lose fat SAFELY and HARMLESSLY, take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—don't miss a morning—a bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle—but don't take chances—be sure it's Kruschen. If not joyfully satisfied after the first bottle—money back.

CHAPTER I

In his young days Tom Belknap may have squirmed now and then; most men who have undergone the vicissitudes of fortune-building in the lumber industry have. But this much is certain: for a brace of decades, if he had occasionally felt discomfort, he kept it well to himself, concealed behind that brusque, gruff front.

Now, however, he put on a first-rate exhibition of a man in an uncomfortable, shabby corner as Harrington, small and gray and unamused, stood in that sparsely furnished chamber and stared at him.

"The old fellow had made his assertion with a growl, as he always did when at variance with his aids, and ordinarily that tone ended argument abruptly. Not today.

"But," said Harrington, after that long pause occasioned by indignation, "what's the boy going to say to that?"

"Hell to do as he's told!" "Twice? You'll disappoint him twice, Tom. A boy with... with as much spirit as you have yours!"

He scratched his thin hair absently and frowned, and old Tom, sunk in the depths of that great chair, rolled an uneasy eye at him, an eye which had in it defiance and determination and, perhaps, a hint of appeal. "Why, he took it standing a year ago in June when you sent him from college to Witch Hill instead of to Kampfest. That was a body-blow, after all the talk and planning, but you told him to go, and show what he could do and he did."

Now, he's coming here in a few minutes to claim the reward you held out to him, and instead of sending him to Kampfest, you're shutting him off on Belknap Seven! It beats me!"

The other flinched with his watch chain and cleared his throat irritably. "Well," he said, "John isn't going to Kampfest yet."

"Not yet?" "No, sir! Not to Kampfest!"

Harrington's gray eyes were prying now, suspicion rising in them as he studied the averted face of the man he knew so well.

"Are you in trouble at Kampfest?" he asked quietly, and the old face flushed up at him.

"If I am, it's my own trouble." A watcher might not have noticed that Harrington had tensed on his query, but the sudden relaxing of his body was obvious.

"I thought as much," he said grimly, meeting the challenge in those eyes. "It was a fair fight, might follow when you took Gorbil in on this thing. I've suspected matters weren't right there for two years now; last month, when you came back from Kampfest, you had the look of a better man, and I was pretty sure. Now, I know."

"You know a lot," he replied as he hitched closer to the massive desk.

The other did not respond. With pursed lips he pondered a moment and then burst out:

"Look here, Tom! Why don't you let us help you on there? Why don't you come down off your high horse and let the office situation things out while you're away?"

Belknap gave a helpless laugh. "You're doing a lot of guessing," he snorted. "You're guessing at things, Harrington. He swung in his chair to confront his inquisitor and slapped the mahogany with his palm. "Guess, work! I'll admit nothing; I'll deny nothing. But I'll go this far: If I'm in a bad way, it's because of the way you've run this place."

"From the beginning you've all been against me on my opinion of Gorbil, from me on down through this organization," he said to John himself.

"You didn't like him; you didn't like the idea of a partnership. John, my boy, warned me after he'd talked to the man twenty minutes. Warned me."

"But I bet on Gorbil. He had the lay-out I've wanted all my life, had it tied up. I took him on and listened to all of you yelp and predict trouble, and made up my mind that the Belknap & Gorbil business, I put it under my hat and it's been there since. That's where it's going to stay, Harrington, and you can stuff that in your pipe!"

His face was flushed now. The other shrugged. "The ought to be that," he said grimly. "But what frets me, Tom, is where John comes in... or isn't he in?"

Old Tom sank back in his chair and stared bleakly through one of the great windows against which a savage December gale hurled itself in across Sullen Lake Michigan.

"That's something else," he growled. Harrington persistently eyed him, and the old man squirmed again.

"There's only one thing that really matters, when all's said and done," he said finally. "That's a man's reputation. And a man's reputation narrows down to his reputation with certain folks. I've got a rating as an honest man, which is something everybody with self-respect's got to have; and I'm rated as rich, but I don't give a hoot about how much money the Belknap Lumber company's worth, or the value of any of the assets it controls under other names. I'm glad I've got a name for being a hard-fighter; glad that men must concede I'm a fair fighter. But there's only one thing that matters much to me, that gets in close to a man's heart." He paused. "That's what John thinks of me."

Silence for a moment, except for the buffeting of the gale about that Chicago skyscraper.

"You've got three kids, Harrington. I had only one... and a husband or? That's all. It's hell, a man can't say what he feels on some things! Nobody'll ever know how hard I tried to play up to what he's thought of me ever since he was so high; nobody ever can know what a burden it's been to be the kind of a party he thought I was."

The rough voice had become a monotone now, as though he fought for self-control.

"He opposed me just once, he warned me just once. Him, a kid, warning me about my judgment of a man! I laughed at him and—"

Well, I laughed at him and—"

Harrington added: "And he was right."

"Another guess," in another surly growl. "But," looking up again, face furrowed with intense earnestness, "if that was so, I'm not admitting it, but if it was so, would you let him find it out first? Would you let him come to you and say I told you so?"

"Not on your life, you wouldn't!"

"You wouldn't let him even suspect that the thing he'd worked for and waited for wasn't what he'd expected? You wouldn't let him think that the one present he'd wanted was marred before it got into his hands. Not much you wouldn't! You'd fix it up, somehow, even if the trouble was so mysterious you couldn't locate it, before you handed it over so... so the estimate he'd had of you wouldn't lose anything of... of what it had! Then you'd tell him he'd been right, but not before!"

He waited a long moment. "Wouldn't you?" he insisted.

"If I had your devotion and the Belknap pride, Tom, I expect I would," Harrington answered gravely. "But the devil of it is that you're leaving today for Europe, and won't be—"

"Yes! The devil of it! And the devil of it is, the d—n doctors are right! I'm no fool, Harrington; I know that they know. I know when they say I need three months in a place where business can't touch me that I'd better hit the grade for that place. Well, nobody but the doctors and you know this trip's forced. I ain't going to worry anybody. A big timber operation can't go to h—l in a heap in ninety days. I'll be back; I'll be fit to go into the Kampfest thing with sleeves rolled up, find out just what and how much is wrong, and I'll set it for John as we'd planned to do it."

"But don't you see that while you're away the office could—"

"I wish my own dirty linen!" "But suppose, Tom, something should happen?"

"The old man shook his head, half in negation, half in agreement.

"I'd have to come clean, then, I guess. I've prepared for that. He opened a drawer and took out a sealed envelope. "I wrote this last night. It's for John if... if some catastrophe should fall on me. If I come back, I want it back from you. I... And if I don't come back, you might just say, Harrington, say to the big—that—that he was a hum-dinger—will you?"

"The SPEAKING voice shook a trifle as Harrington eyed the firm non-stroking, inscribing the name of John Steele Belknap on that envelope.

"Sure, Tom," the secretary said just a bit huskily. "Sure thing. And I hope hell go to Belknap Seven. But remember he's got his father's pride, he's high-strung. You can't give a coin too much hit even to save him a fall!"

And a half-hour later in that chamber, the brain-housing of a stout, burly, a young man was about to burn up.

A big young man, this John Steele Belknap, tall and broad and thick of chest, out of place, he looked, in this room, with its deep-plumaged rug and heavy hangings. He wore a maroon checkered sweater and a striped shirt, and his hair was spread a bit as a man will when he meets an assault.

His face was weather-beaten but a bit pale now, his nostrils dilated though he fought to keep at least a vestige of good humor in that deep blue eyes, and the semblance of a grin on the wide mouth by telling himself to stay by it another minute, to hold the old danger down just another second!

"But don't you see, Tom," he began, "that it's what I've worked and waited for all these years? It wasn't any plan of mine in the first place I'd made for myself."

"I didn't want any help from you. I'd always figured on hitting it off for myself to see how good I am; just as you did, and grandfather did. I wanted forestry school and got it, and thought when I finished that I'd make up with some other organization and see what I could do and, if I checked out, would then get in here with you and help pull the load."

"Then you stumbled on to a location and the properties that fitted like a glove to a plan. You couldn't wait for me to start, of course. You had to go ahead because if any demonstration is going to be of account it's got to show profit, and big timber holdings can't be carried along any more without operating. You and Gorbil got the mill up and running, the best mill ever built! You got the chemical plants operating. You were going to exercise your agreement with Gorbil and buy him out and we'd go to it, you and I... Together!"

He extended one hand in a little gesture.

"And when I thought I was ready for that I went up to Witch Hill. I admit now that it was a bitter dose. But I took it, didn't I? I stayed on longer than you'd said I'd have to stay before getting my finger into the Kampfest thing. I've been waiting for you to get out that I could drop it, and the word has never come."

"We would her up. When I knew you and mother were going home I got the last of the equipment loaded, the last chore done, and high-tailed down here without even stopping to buy civilized clothes because I thought—"

Kampfest at last! And instead of that I'm told that I'm now superintendent at Belknap Seven!"

His face fell on the desk; and he neither said nor did anything.

His father snorted and rattled the sheet of paper he held.

"That's the trouble with you young gaffers. Don't have the guts to walk."

"That's the Trouble With You Young Gaffers—Don't Have the Guts to Walk."

Got to jump in and learn jobs from the top down. Stuffed shirts, for God knows how many years! Yes, men. You won't take the time to learn from the bottom up."

"Doesn't that mean anything? John asked with a curt gesture towards the paper in the age-mottled hands.

The man's eyes dropped to that scrawled, written on the letter-head of the Witch Hill Lumber company. He read it once more:

"To whom it may concern, dear sir, John Steele has worked as camp foreman here for one year. He is only a kid but as good a logger as ever wore sox. Respy J. Mciver supt."

The lowering of his face concealed from the son's burning eyes the pride which swept it. And John could not know the warmth which re-reading the words generated again in the old heart.

And for a long moment after he had read the message and felt at what he was now doing. But the belittling grunt and the dismissing gesture as he tossed the letter back to the desk told made the boy stir on his feet and tighten his lips.

"Sandy," old Tom growled. "Sandy, write a recommendation!" He laughed. "Think he's ever done that for anybody before? Not much! Why, he was so rattled he left out the only part of your name that counts! Done it for you because he liked you. As my old timers always have done, he probably babbled you from the time—"

"Babbled!" The interruption was hot with anger. "Babbled me, did he? D—n funny babbling, I'd call it!" He laughed bitterly. "I know what went ahead of me to Witch Hill. Sandy told me when it was all over. You ordered him to see what kind of a Belknap was left after the college professors got through with one! You told him to make it as rough for me as he knew how!"

He nodded again, that brisk, tense gesture.

"And what of it?" "This!" He flung his cap into a chair and slapped the desk. "I didn't break! I didn't even ask for a fair trial so bad Sandy couldn't keep round-bulldozers in the woods. He put me in there with what he had left of a crew and I stuck. I was the only one of the gang I started with who stayed through, and when we wound up I was boss!"

"Did I get something better than? Guess again! I swamped, I drove team, I went with the loading crew, and every place I was put I set the pace for the rest of 'em. Yeah, Col lege boy. Getting sand-papored because he was son of the push!"

He nodded once more, a bit white now.

"Four things I'd proved I could do better than anybody else there. Four!"—holding up the fingers of a trembling hand. "Says next. Could I get a partner to stay with me even at the money I made for him? I could not! They brought in a Phil who'd never found a man to stand his pace; he hoisted his turkey the ninth day and went out with his tail dragging, and when Swanson got sick there was nothing else to do but put me in to run the show, was there?"

"You know what happened then. Forty cents a thousand I saved you below anything that'd ever been done at Witch Hill, and when we were winding up the job at that! And the boys liked me. I had 'em working their heads off for you and showed the lowest labor turnover they'd had in the country since God knows when!"

"Stuffed shirt? Yes, man? H—l, sir!"

"My," said old Tom with forced sardonic mildness. "My, you're proud, ain't you?"

"The boy caught his breath as though for a stormy denial; checked himself, and fared:

"You're dead right, Lant! It showed what I can do on one job! It gave me something to go on when I ask for the bigger one, that's been promised me!" His voice trembled. "You'd admit it to anybody else, too, you'd admit it of any other kid who turned the trick. Then, sir, why the devil won't you admit it to me and about me?"

His face fell to the desk again, but this time with a shrug that told Tom Belknap's eyes left that accusing gaze, and he stared once more through the window.

"No," he said dryly, as if to end debate with himself, and the suggested alteration of his face which had threatened, perhaps, a melting, a softening, came to nothing. "It goes back to where we started; that Phil running this outfit yet and hiring men and putting 'em where I think they'll do me the most good."

"One thing," he propounded, "you've got to learn is to know men to get along with men. You don't like Gorbil?"

"No! I never have! Neither does anybody else around this outfit!"—with an inclusive gesture. "You've got a price on his interest, and even if you aren't ready to buy him out I won't lock horns with him. Let him run the office and the mills; let him run the bank. I want to get into the woods, Tom, and at Kampfest. There'd be no conflict!"

"As I was saying, you don't like Gorbil and for no reason, I can see. You've got to learn why you like and don't like men. You've only been on one job. You try another, now, and come spring you show me what you're wound on!" Color was deepening in the lined face and the eyes showed pale against it. "We've had a lot of gabble this forenoon! Here's your letter from Sandy. See if you can make a show of somewhere else, and when I get back we'll see what we can see."

He rose.

He rose.

"That's all then?" John asked, oddly restrained.

"That's all there is. The Century leaves in two hours. If you're going to say good-bye to your mother you'd better be about it."

The boy stiffed irresolute, conflicting impulses surging within him. Then, with a sweeping movement, he snatched up his cap.

"Good-by, sir,"—crisply.

"Good-by, John!"—well-groomed by a—gruffly.

Their hands met briefly, formally. "You'll go on to Seven tomorrow. . . . Difficult to tell whether that was statement or query, difficult to tell, too, whether the clearing of the throat had been necessary or not.

"I seem to have my orders," the boy said, and none could have told what impulse lay behind the words.

He wheeled and went quickly out, and for a long moment after he had gone his father stood, a gaunt, a wired old figure. He lifted one hand with a helpless movement and waked into the great chair, chin on knuckles. . . . An unhappy man, this, helpless to rectify his mood.

CHAPTER II

Now when a young man, seven hot with rebellion, at odds with his world, set upon, treated unfairly, finding his fastest trust betrayed, mid to his marriage, steps off a train into a strange town and is hit in the mouth by a stranger, certain events are bound to follow. For one thing, the pressure of temper within him finds relief.

It was easy enough for young John Belknap to come to a decision as to what to do, easy enough to decide that the Mid-West headquarters, up in the wilderness, was as good a place as any for a young man going out on his own to present himself and ask for a chance. Easy, simple!

But not so easy to summon that rage which would wipe out the hurt. He had had his fondest hopes betrayed by the one human being he had trusted above all others. It cut and scorched, made him drive himself into a furious temper.

Winter

By KAY WARREN

JUST what got into William Blodgett Traynor after he married Victoria none of his friends seemed able to decide. He was thirty years older than she—a hale and vigorous fifty to her fragile twenty. He was good looking, successful in a large way in business, he had social background and great personal magnetism.

Victoria was beautiful, she was young, she was well bred in the best sense of the term. Though her family had no money she had been well educated and had traveled little and met the right kind of people so that she was perfectly able to take her place as head of Traynor's big house. That wasn't where the trouble lay. He had kept the house open for two or three years alone since his mother's death—she had been one of the social leaders of her day. Victoria stepped into his mother's shoes, so far as social graces went. Everybody talked about the reign of the new Mrs. Traynor as a foreboding fact.

Victoria really loved Traynor. He knew it. He, of course, adored her. Everybody knew that. And they seemed ideally, beautifully happy. The gracious old house glowed with hospitality of the best sort. Victoria's young friends and his older ones mingled in charming groups.

That may have been where the trouble started. One of her friends was Jack Orcutt. He was an artist. Poor. Not more than twenty-three.

One night William Traynor and Victoria were alone in their big library. He gathered her, unresisting, into his arms. And as he held her he was suddenly painfully conscious of her youth, of his greater age.

If one of those fits that change desires—if Victoria had lain there quietly for a moment in her husband's arms, life would have smoothed out for them in a few moments. William Traynor's mood of bitter resentment so ready to turn into raging jealousy would have passed as suddenly as it had come, leaving no memory behind it.

But Victoria, unmeaningly, did just the wrong thing. She loved her husband. She put a soft, creamy hand up to her husband's face.

"William," she said, "I've been thinking. We have so much. I've everything."

He drew her jealously closer. "I've been wondering if you'd do something rather big to make me happy."

She went on: "You know Jack Orcutt? He's—well, he's a genius. I know it. But he needs a year in Paris. And he's—well, he can't manage it. You know he has an invalid sister to look after. He's a portrait painter, and somehow or other he ought to be given his chance. See what I'm getting at, don't you?"

"I think so," said Traynor in a hard, low voice. But Victoria didn't notice his voice. She went on with her plea for Jack.

"Well, I've been thinking about him. And I wondered if you couldn't perhaps do something to give him his year abroad. We've got so much—and he has so little. I thought maybe we could look after his sister—I mean find a place where she could stay in exchange for tutoring—some place in the country. She's a lovely girl and awfully bright. And then you could commission him to paint a portrait of me—next summer, when we go to Paris. But you could tell him he must have training there before he does it, and you could pay him in advance—more than it's worth. And that would fix things up."

She stopped, flushed and delighted with her plan. Getting no reply from Traynor, she asked him: "Wouldn't you like a portrait of me done by Jack Orcutt?"

Traynor rose, pushing her roughly away from him. He stood his back to the fireplace, his hands on her shoulders. He laughed harshly.

"A picture of you—for me—done by Jack Orcutt? A beautiful idea. A lovely thing, of course. A sort of consolation prize given by Spring to Winter. Well, go on. Paris, on my money, and be waiting there for you when we go over next summer? That's a pretty idea. Then do your portrait for me. You'll keep your old husband and his money—and have your youth."

Traynor said no more. Victoria's face whiter than her dress, stood facing him. She stiffened under his hands and he took them away. She said nothing, as she turned and left the room.

In fact, she never spoke to Traynor again. Arrangements were made through others. She left the house that night, and in the course of time a divorce was granted.
