Life of Timber Wolf

The timber wolf cannot stand advancing civilization, preferring to live and hunt in the densest swamps and forests it can find. As soon as a woodland area is opened up by roads, trails or firelines, the wolf takes to his heels and seldom returns.

OLDSMOBILE SALES GAIN

Oldsmobile retail sales for the first ten days of July totaled 5,945 units which represents a gain of more than 40 per cent in comparison to the same period a year ago, according to D. E. Ralston, vice president and general sales manager of Oldsmobile."From January 1 to July 10 Oldsmobile dealers have delivered 116,784 new Oldsmobiles to retail purchasers.
This is a gain of 29 per cent over the same period last year which was the previous record year in Oldsmobile's history. During this same period, January 1 to July 10, more new Olds-mobiles have been sold than during the first nine months of 1935," Mr.
Ralston stated."During July the Oldsmobile plants are continuing to operate day and night at a record breaking production pace in order to supply the demands from dealers throughout the country.
July marks the tenth consecutive month that the Oldsmobile factories have been running at capacity production," Mr. Ralston said.

A TRIBUTE

A dear old friend once blessed our lives.Our home and children too;
This friend was just an old bay mare,
Faithful, kind and true;
Was almost human, so to speak.Our language well she knew;
Of gee, and haw, giddyup and whoa,
Was natural for her too.The extra hour or extra mile She'd go with willing gait,
And gladly take her oats and hay,
Or even just a bait;Never complaining, true as steel, Would go where she was led,
With children plenty on her back,
And more around her head.The cultivator, wagon, plow;
Of buggy, 'twas the same;
Pricked up her ears and started off,
If you but spoke her name;Almost a score of years went by Before she took her rest,
And if there's heaven for horses, sure I know it's there she's blest.Me-thinks sometimes, by pastures green,
I may be wandering through,
By sparkling waters, pebbly streams,
I'll live this life anew;And should I think a God of Love
Would do so much for me,
And leave the picture I have drawn,
A blank eternally.No No! I cannot think it so,
And more yet I would feign
To put my arms around her neck
And hug Old Lid again.

Arthur Carlton.

Question And Answer Dept.Ques.—If not too much trouble will you please answer what professions the various Presidents of the United States followed in civil life? Thank you.Ans.—All of the Presidents of the United States were lawyers, except the following, who were not engaged in the practice of law at any time: Washington, planter, soldier; W. H.
Harrison, soldier; Taylor, rancher;
soldier; Johnson, tailor; Grant, soldier; Arthur, soldier; T. Roosevelt, author; Harding, newspaper publisher; Hoover, civil engineer.Ques.—How does the fowl known as a "turkey" get that name? I am told it is because the turkey originated in the country known as Turkey. Can you explain more fully?Ans.—The turkey was so called because it was thought that it was native to Turkey. This is erroneous, for it is now definitely known that the bird is purely American and was introduced into Europe in 1530. The term "turki" was used to designate those tribes speaking the Turkic languages. These warlike tribes were very powerful about 5000 years ago.
They gained their independence about A. D. 550. The term "turk" means "power," hence they were called Turks, or the nation Turk. The latter has been corrupted into "turkey."Ques.—What do you think would be the greatest invention of all modern times?Ans.—If you mean goofy inventions we might suggest that the greatest one in our minds would be to invent something that would make telephone poles, trees and other inanimate objects jump out of the way of speeding and reckless automobile drivers.Ques.—I would like to know why A, B, C and D are connected in printing?Ans.—In the early days of printing, the type foundry connected them to make a single character of each, because the old-style "F" had a curved top which was called a "kern." It projected beyond the shank or body of the type. When the above combinations were set, using separate letters, the "kern" or letters got broken when locked in a form. Thereforeeach of these four combinations were cast as a single symbol. Modern type and type-setting machine matrices do not have the above "kern." The use of these combinations was never changed, notwithstanding the letters as now made by type foundries will not break, because there is very little, if any, "kern."Ques.—Can you tell me if the Indian population of the United States is increasing or decreasing?Ans.—The Indian population of the United States for the last ten years has been increasing at the rate of about 9,000 a year. Prior to that time the Indian population was decreasing. The highest number was in 1840, when the Census Bureau estimated the number in the United States to be 400,000. The number at the present time is about 360,000.Ques.—Why does a star precede a number on some United States currency, while we find it is not on others? What does it mean?Ans.—A star or asterisk that appears before the number on United States paper money indicates that it is a substitute for a former bill which was defective or spoiled in the process of printing. As the number of spoiled or defective bills is very small, only a few bear the mark of a star or asterisk.Ques.—May a person fly by plane without a permit over a foreign country where they are obliged to have passports when traveling by other means?Ans.—Yes. All nations claim jurisdiction of the air space over its borders. One must get permission to fly over this space, whether or not they intend to land. Permission is not necessary, however, to persons of a country or nation that is a party to the International Convention of Air Navigation. This automatically serves as a permit.Ques.—What is the name of the ruling house of England of which the new king, Edward VIII is the head?Ans.—Formerly it was known as Saxe-Coburg. During the World War it was changed, and is now known as Windsor.Ques.—I am curious to know what a penthouse is.Ans.—Strictly speaking a penthouse is a shed or roof with a single slope tilted by its upper edge to the wall of a building. Later the word came to apply to all protective structures. It is now commonly applied to any kind of a structure built on the roof of a large building.With Few Amusements In southeastern Poland, Polish Galicia, lies a little town called Zable among the Carpathian mountains.
There live woodchoppers and shepherds who tend their flocks on alpine pastures. The Hungarians, as the natives are called, are obliged to come down from the hills in gay holiday attire to attend church. The principal social event for these hospitable Hungarians is the Sunday gathering in the church yard.Potato Sprays Pay Back Good ProfitWhile Michigan potato growers continue to seek better cash markets both in and out of the state for quality potatoes, extension workers at Michigan State College continue to emphasize the proof that a persistent summer spraying schedule is one of the most important cogs in obtaining quality.After field preparation, seed selection, planting and fertilizing, there needs to be protection against field diseases and pests. Specifically, there are early and late blight diseases and insects including leafhoppers, aphids, beetles, Colorado potato beetles and other insects.Copper lime dust and bordeaux mixtures are the standard applications commonly used in Michigan, according to H. C. Moore and E. J. Wheeler, farm crops extension workers at Michigan State College and specialists in potato growing. They are authors of Special Bulletin 234, "Spraying and Dusting Potatoes in Michigan," available by writing to the Bulletin Department, Michigan State College, East Lansing.Field tests indicate that the liquid spray, using bordeaux, is superior to dusting with copper lime. Bordeaux sprayed plots outyielded dusted plots by 13.7 bushels for Russet Rural and 20.86 bushels per acre for Irish Cob-blers.Spraying with the bordeaux was cheaper than dusting by $3.70 per acre. Some saving in dusting with copper lime can be realized by home mixing; the two men find, as there was a saving of $1.41 per acre with home mixed dust as compared to factory mixed.

Will Make Survey for Fish Planting

"Fish surveys" of 60 of Michigan's inland lakes are to be made this summer by the Institute for Fisheries Research of the Department of Conservation to obtain accurate information on these lakes for future planting programs.

Two groups of institute staff men and their assistants are in the field, one in the upper peninsula and one in the lower peninsula. As soon as all desired information is obtained on one lake, the group will move to another. Data collected will be compiled and announced next fall and winter.

"Accurate information is needed on the important fishing lakes of Michigan if we are to cope successfully with the intensive sport fishing of the future," said Fred A. Westerman, in charge of state fisheries operations.

"We need to know, among other things, what chances of success or survival the fingerlings will have when planted in certain lakes; whether such lakes are suitable for planting certain species only; whether their fish-food resources are low, why they are low and whether we can increase them artificially. We need to know what types of improvement work should be conducted and whether such work will likely improve conditions."

Due to the absence of dependable information on lakes, the fish-planting program in Michigan has had to progress blindly in many cases, Westerman said. "For instance, if we learn by these surveys that certain lakes are adapted to black-bass, but do not have many of those fish because of the small amount of gravel spawning areas where they can nest during the spawning season, we might be able to increase the black-bass supply advantageously by providing gravelly areas in the shallows. Similarly, if a certain lake is not suitable for black-bass or for bluegills because of water or bottom conditions, we could save license money by not planting such species in those waters until the conditions have been remedied, if such is possible practically," Westerman stated.

The survey groups will work systematically, collecting data on lake depths, type of lake bottom, species of fish present and their relative abundances, species of minnow life and other aquatic foods, prevalence of predators, snapping turtles and such.

Lakes in the vicinity of Chelsea which are to be surveyed this summer are in the Waterloo project, the survey to be made from July 1 to July 24.

James I of England
When Queen Elizabeth the last of the Tudors died in 1603, she named James VI of Scotland her successor. James VI had been proclaimed king of Scotland in 1567 when only one year old, but a regency was established. By 1673 he had nominally assumed direction of affairs. When James VI became king of England and the first of the Stuart dynasty he assumed the title of James I of England. During his reign the population of England was somewhat less than 5,000,000.

Clay Pipes Made by Hand
Hundreds of fortunes have been lost trying to make clay pipes by machinery but the handcrafters have retained their supremacy. Over 2,000 different shapes are made yearly by one factory alone. The color and design of the pipes are the only changes in the industry during more than 180 years. A majority of designs have decorated bowls in the east of Hobart Burns, while others faint Shakespeare at the end of a curly stem.

Conspirators
In the first half century of our history, before labor was organized, the courts almost invariably convicted striking workmen brought before them on the ground of conspiracy in seeking to raise wages more than the law of supply and demand would otherwise allow.

OUR NEIGHBORS

STOCKBRIDGE—Tuesday, August 4, 1936, has been set aside by the township officials for a special election for the purpose of submitting to the electors of Stockbridge township the question of confirming or rejecting a grant of franchise to the Ingham County Electric Membership Association for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and using electric lines on, along, and across the highways and bridges of said township and to do local business in the township.—Brief-Sun.

GRASS LAKE—The annual school meeting was held Monday evening and the principal item of business was a vote empowering the board to proceed with the addition of a kitchen at an estimated cost of $1050. This room, 10x30, will be built in a niche adjoining the west and front entrance and gymnasium and will take the place of the present kitchen which will be made into the girls' shower room.—News.

PINCKNEY—Two representatives from the United Press at Detroit were in this office Friday wanting to know all about "Hell". As we have gone there numerous times, we gave them an earful. Misled by the Highland date line, the Detroit papers used last week they went out to that Oakland county burg first. They were especially anxious to know how the place got the name of "Hell". We told them that there were at least a dozen stories relating to that. They could take their choice. They also visited "Hell" and found it not as bad as they anticipated nor even as hot as Detroit. They seem to be fearful that Henry Ford would hear about it and send up a whole fleet of trucks and transport "Hell" to Greenfield Village.—Dispatch.

TECUMSEH—Dr. H. H. Hammel is leaving Friday, July 17, for New Zealand, where, in the Southern Alps he will take moving pictures for a film company, while hunting chamois and thar. He will sail on the "Mariposa" from Los Angeles July 22, stopping at Honolulu to be present at a military maneuver. Further stops will be made in Samoa and the Fiji Islands before landing at Auckland, New Zealand. During his stay in New Zealand, he will be the guest of the New Zealand game commissioner, and military friends with whom he became acquainted during his service with the British Army in France during the World War.—Herald.

MILAN—A crew of State Department Highway Engineers started work here last Tuesday in a project to relocate US-23 from Milan to Ida. This is a project that has been considered by the department for several years and preliminary work was done some time ago. It is expected that the engineering staff will be in Milan for about six months, re-establishing the right of way on the Federal Highway that will eliminate the dangerous sharp curves on the highway south of Milan.—Leader.

CHARLOTTE—Shades of the days of Gen. Coxe's Army and the Gay Nineties! Some rural woman, probably compelled by economic conditions to still use historic means of travel, drove into town with her one-hoss shay the other day. Possibly deciding it was too risky to "park" her ancient equipment on Main street, she stopped on East Lovett, half a block away. The discovery that the old iron hitching posts with which the streets were lined in a former age had long since been removed did not deter the resourceful housewife, who promptly tied up her steed to the front bumper of Earl McGrath's car, stationed in front of the Republican-Tribune office.—Republican-Tribune.

Surgical History

The first "Caesarian" section in America was performed successfully in 1704 by Dr. Jesse Bennett, of Staunton, Va., upon his own wife after another surgeon had declined to undertake it. There was no anaesthesia; the patient was held by two women upon an operating table made by placing boards across two barrels. For centuries "Caesarian" sections were performed only upon dead mothers—required by decree of Caesar, hence the name. Caesar himself was not a Caesarian delivered baby.

Never 39 Stars in Flag

There were never 39 stars in the flag. This is because the thirty-ninth, fortieth, forty-first, forty-second, and forty-third states were all admitted in one year. North and South Dakota were admitted on the same day, November 2, 1889; Montana on November 8 and Washington on November 11 of the same year. The forty-third state, Idaho, was admitted July 3, 1890, so that on July 4, 1890, five stars were added.

WILL PAY $12 PER ACRE

The average rates of payments that will be made to farmers in Washtenaw County for diverting acreage from the general soil-depleting crops to soil-conserving crops or uses under the 1936 Agricultural Conservation Program will be $12.00 per acre, according to a report received by Abner E. Larned, State Director of The National Emergency Council of Michigan. The rates vary among the counties. Mr. Larned states, as within each county the rates for individual farms will depend upon the productivity of these farms. The rates to be paid are based upon county productivity indexes computed on the basis of the yields of 13 principal soil-depleting crops harvested in the county during the 10-year period 1923-1932 inclusive.

The per acre payment which an individual farmer may receive will depend upon how the productivity of crop land on his farm compares with the county average productivity. If his land on the farm is more productive than the average in the county, the rate of payment for the farm will be above the county average rate.

Speed to Escape From Earth

The velocity of escape from the earth—that is, the velocity required to carry a projectile beyond its gravitational influence—is seven miles per second. What is believed to be the speediest bullet, the Gerlich bullet, is capable of traveling almost a mile a second. This would not be great enough speed to carry it beyond the atmosphere.

Ancient Cities in China

Compare With Great Wall

The city of Peking has a fascinating history beginning about 2,000 years before Christ. Peking, officially called Peiping, has seen the reign of over forty Mongol, Ming and Manchurian rulers. In reality the city comprises four different sections, each surrounded by imposing fortified walls.

The heart of Peking is the "Forbidden City" with its yellow tile roofs, marble courtyards and pink walls. Prior to 1912 this was the abode of the imperial family and their retinue. Surrounding this is the "Imperial City" in which are to be found the lakes called "seas" and the winter palace. Encircling this latter city is the "Tartar City" in which are located the Lama temple, Hall of Classics, Bell and Drum towers, legation quarters, and the observatory which is the oldest in the world. Passing through the south gate of the "Tartar City" one enters the Chinese city where is situated the Temple of Heaven and the Temple of Agriculture.

Forty-five miles north of Peking is the Great Wall which ranks with the Pyramids of Egypt as one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World. For 2,500 miles this great stone structure marks the border of Inner China. Not far away are the 18 Ming tombs with their Holy Way paved in marble and lined by huge mythological animals and figures. To the west lies the celebrated summer palace built by the late empress dowager, with its large lake, dragon island, rookeries and famous Marble Boat.

Meaning of Lustrum

Lustrum was the solemn offering made for expiation and purification by one of the censors in the name of the Roman people at the conclusion of the census. The animals offered in sacrifice were a boar, a sheep and a bull. They were led around the assembled people on the Campus Martius before being sacrificed. As the census was quinquennial, the word lustrum came to signify a period of five years.

Existence of God

Walt Whitman said of the existence of God, "There is nothing I feel more at ease about."

Oyster Is First a Male, Then Female, Then Male

At first maturity the oyster functions as a male. Within six weeks of that time it may be a female carrying a full complement of developing embryos. When these are ready for the free swimming stage they are discharged into the water, and the parent, its duty done, again becomes a male and goes into a resting stage from which it will not emerge until the following summer, or, possibly, a year later than that, when the cycle is again repeated, according to an authority in the London Observer.

Unlike the eggs of most fish, the eggs of the oyster are fertilized within the body of the parent, where they are retained until the developing embryos, of which there may be a million or more, have actually reached the form of small oysters. They are not, however, immediately extruded into the water, but first spend an intermediate existence in the mantle cavity of the parent, where they may continue to develop actually in water, but under fully protected conditions.

At first, unless examined under the microscope, they resemble a "milky fluid," and to those in the trade the oyster is then known as "white sick." As the shell develops, the mass becomes gray, and then dark, when the parent oyster is described as "black sick." At the end of this stage the young oysters are literally blown into the water, thereafter to fend for themselves.

Strange Street Names

Rothenburg ob der Tauber, famous German city, where every year on Whit Monday the Meister Trunk festival is held, has street and tower names as quaint as its festivals. A few of them are Little Damppling street, Vinegar Jug, Cheese Chamber, the Dog Tower, and the street of the Little Minister.

Alternating Current
The idea of alternating current which lights the nation was, strangely enough, opposed by Thomas Edison, who built the first power house in 1881 in New York. The adoption of this alternating current was brought about by George Westinghouse.

The Keswick Movement
The Keswick movement originated in England in 1874 when Canon Harford-Battersy experienced a deep spiritual awakening and, returning to his parish church at Keswick, London, called the Keswick convention in 1875. The movement was organized for the promotion of practical holiness.

For the Rainy Days
Copal, a fossilized gum used in varnish, is dug by the natives in Sierra Leone, on the coast of Africa, only during the rainy season. During some months of the year, the red clay soil is said to be so hard that the crude tools used by the natives cannot break it.

Reduced Telephone Rates

Effective on the Dates Shown Below

By order of the Michigan Public Utilities Commission, dated July 1, reductions are made in certain telephone rates and charges in the Chelsea exchange.

On rural lines the charge for the upright or desk type telephone is reduced from 25 cents a month to 10 cents, and will be eliminated entirely after the customer has had that type of telephone in service continuously for 18 months.

The charge for the hand telephone is reduced from 25 cents a month to 15 cents, except on rural lines where it remains at 25 cents, and will be eliminated entirely, as at present, after the customer has had that type of telephone in service continuously for 18 months.

The above reductions will be effective in the case of present customers on July 21.

Reductions also are made in the charges for installing and moving telephones, and for changing the type of telephone instrument. For instance, the charge for installing a business telephone where there is no instrument already in place, is $2.50; for a residence telephone where there is no instrument already in place, it is $1.50. These reductions became effective Saturday, July 11.

Effective July 21 charges for rural multiparty service beyond six miles from the base rate area are reduced. Monthly rates for other residential and business service are unchanged except that the four party business service is discontinued, and two party business service will be furnished at the former four party business rate.

Telephone service now represents greater value than ever before. To place an order, or to obtain further information, call, visit or write the Telephone Business Office. Installation will be made promptly.

History of the Plow

The invention and development of the plow and the wheel spell the imperishable chronicles of progressive advancement, the plow being first-aid to agriculture. The plow and its companion, the wheel, have been the means of betterments in rural civilization, no community or nation faring far ahead of its yesterday, excepting as its plows and wheels have been improved, revolutionizers of society and commerce, torch-bearers of civilization!

Collecting Camphor

Sometimes camphor is found distributed through the grain of the tree in small, white sugar-like crystals, when the method of collection is to fell the tree, split the wood up into splinters and scrape off the crystals; at other times the camphor occurs occupying a single cell like a kidney, about the size of a man's forearm.

Royal Pekingeses

The proud little Pekingeses is indeed of royal descent, for until within quite recent years the removal of a Peke from the royal palace in China was a crime punishable by death.

Lakes, Few Streams

Lakes abound in the Bahamas but the only streams found in the numerous islands are those of Andes Island. The water supply is obtained from wells. It is said that the aborigines of the Bahamas bred dogs that did not bark but these have all passed into history.

Sometimes a Palace

When the Houses of Parliament are not in session the correct name for the building is Palace of Westminster. It ranks as a royal palace and is in charge of the hereditary Lord Great Chamberlain. Sovereigns from the time of Edward the Confessor to Henry VIII made Westminster palace their chief place of residence.

Good Done by Snakes Is Far More Than the Harm

Since the Garden of Eden story snakes have been generally disliked. But the good they do far surpasses the evil, according to a report on "The Reptiles of Connecticut," issued by the Connecticut Geological and Natural History Survey.

"The snake is disliked because it is slimy; while, as a matter of fact, the snake is covered with scales and these are dry, although the coldness of the snake's body may induce one to believe it is slimy," states the report. "The blacksnake is accused of twisting itself about persons and trying to squeeze them, while the whipsnake is supposed to lash them to death with its long, slender body. These tales are false and ridiculous. Then we have the wild imaginative pictures of the hoopsnake taking its tail in its mouth and rolling about. Could anything be more of a contradiction of nature than to have a horsehair turn into a snake when it has been left in the rain barrel over night?"

"Around the barns of farms the banded milksnake is often found and killed because it is accused of stealing milk from cows. A snake has no lips so it cannot suck a cow, and if it were able to, the amount would not be noticed. We hear stories of how a mother snake will swallow her young to protect them, and later allow them to come forth. This story is said to be false."

Mizpah, Anciently Name of Towns in Palestine

Mizpah is a Hebrew word meaning literally "the watchtower." It was anciently the name of several fortified towns or regions of Palestine. Use of the word as a parting salutation, states a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, is a reference to its employment in Genesis 31:40, where a place is called "Mizpah, for he said, the Lord watch between me and thee, when we are absent one from another."

"Jacob gave it the name it bears," says the Standard Bible Dictionary. "In commemoration of the compact with Laban; but the sense in which the word 'mizpah' is used in this connection is slightly different from that in other places. Instead of an outlook-point, it indicates a place where God is invoked as a watcher. Accordingly it was a place invested with sacredness, and on this ground perhaps, was resorted to in making covenants between clans. 'The location of the spot is fixed by the fact that Jacob on his way to Canaan crossed the Jabbok after the covenant with Laban. This would place Mizpah north of the river Jabbok. But, northwest of Jerash, is supposed to many to be the exact spot, but the identification is not quite certain."

However, there were five other places named Mizpah or Mizpeh.

A Smiling Face

A smile! Nothing on earth can smile, but the face of man. Gems may flash reflected light, but what is a diamond flash compared with an eye-flash and a mind-flash? Flowers cannot smile. This is a charm which even they cannot claim. Birds cannot smile; nor can any living things. It is the prerogative of man. It is the color which love wears, and cheerfulness, and joy these three. It is the light in the window of the face by which the heart signifies to father, husband or friend, that it is at home and waiting. Laughter is day, and sobriety is night, and a smile is the twilight that hovers gently between both, and is more bewitching than either.

"Most Lovable of Composers"

Franz Schubert (1797-1828) was born in Lichtental, a village just north of Vienna, and was a son of the parish schoolmaster. He was a student of the famous Salieri. He earned his living by instructing in music in schools and in private homes. He died of typhoid when not quite thirty-two years old. He composed an amazing amount of work for such a brief career. He is known chiefly as a lyric writer and a composer of beautiful melodies and has often been called "the most lovable of composers."

Height Aids Flowers' Hue

The higher up Alpine flowers are found the more intensive are their colors. Thus the gentian is of a much deeper blue than its sister in the valley and the same applies to the rhododendron and other mountain blossoms. The explanation is that these flowers are exposed to a greater radiation of sunlight in the thin air of lofty altitudes.

The Pomeranian Dogs

It is the belief of many that Pomeranians originated in Pomerania. The early specimens were bred from the large and sturdy white Spitz dogs and also bred from the sledge dogs of both Lapland and Iceland. In short—the true Pom's heritage is rich with the tradition of the dogs from the frozen northlands.

When the Houses of Parliament are not in session the correct name for the building is Palace of Westminster. It ranks as a royal palace and is in charge of the hereditary Lord Great Chamberlain. TALOR STEIGER was making no effort to live up to his reputation for reliability about getting garments ready at the promised time. The coat lying on his table had been promised for three o'clock. It was nearing that time and since he had hung it there early in the forenoon Steiger had not touched it.

His mind went over and over the details. The blackguard would soon be coming now. With lips set anew, Steiger sewed grimly on his eyes smoldering, his breath coming irregularly.

Morris Steiger, merrily at forty a girl of seventeen, had been thought foolish. But things had turned out well after all. Not until this very day had he had reason to deplore the fact that his wife had been married too young. It was because she had had no experience of life herself that she had not been able to guard their love to young daughter, Rosa.

But never had her father had one moment of serious worry concerning Rosa until the moment when, as he was holding Floyd Ronger's stained coat in his hand, there dropped from its breast pocket the string of genuine pearls her father had given her on her eighteenth birthday six months before.

Floyd Ronger, known by his evil reputation and his high family connections, had come into Steiger's little shop one day of the previous spring to have a coat cleaned. Pleased with the speed and quality of Steiger's work, he had continued to patronize the shop.

Stupid that he had been, Steiger had not taken alarm when Ronger had spied his wife and pretty daughter on the neat little porch of the cottage. And so on successive visits Ronger had been allowed to repeat his gallantries to the ladies, joking with them when they happened to be in the shop sitting with them for a half hour on the porch while waiting for some garment to be finished, even entering the cottage. And always Steiger would be secretly flattered by these attentions to his women. And always his wife would say nothing, though she would seem more than necessarily flustered. And always Rosa acted as if there were nothing at all to be either flustered or flattered about.

The necklace lay upon the counter where Steiger had dropped it. Pearls were for innocence, he remembered. Rosa, Rosa! How was he to face her again? She would be back home to day. She had gone to visit her cousins at Maryville for two days, and it was Wednesday she left, the day of her mother's evening club. She would be back on the four o'clock interurban. She would come running into the shop to give him a hug and kiss.

Suddenly he heard a car stop before his door. He had scarcely time to fling a cloth over the necklace. Clearing his throat noisily and trying to assume a noncommittal air, he turned toward Rosa.

Her arms were around his neck and she was kissing him. His own arms were limp and his lips were working. "Here already," he managed to get out, "your train—"

"I didn't come on the train, Father. I came by car. Cousin—Cousin Albert brought me."

She was nervous. Almost as tense and shaking as he. "Uncle Bartie said to tell you—she was beginning, but he stopped her. Yes, he would speak to her now at once, before Ronger's arrival."

"Rosa," he began, and he could see his daughter start at the unusual tone of his voice. "Rosa, haven't you something to tell to confess?"

She went a bit white. "You saw him, then? We didn't think you would. Yes it was Goodwyn—Oh who brought me home. He came to Uncle Bartie to see me. We were engaged. I know, Father, how you dislike Goodwyn."

"Goodwyn—Goodwyn—Oh!"

"Yes, Father, I know it was wrong. And Goodwyn feels sorry, too. We really didn't intend to do it this way. Father, he is really the finest young man in the world! If you will only give him a chance to show—"

But Steiger's joy could contain itself no longer. He burst into hysterical laughter and at the same moment the tears sprang into his gray eyes, so that there before his astonished daughter he was laughing and crying at the same time.

Her hand went automatically to her throat. "Rosa," he said in a startled tone as he could command, "your necklace!"

Her hand went automatically to her throat. But her frightened look was too much for him. Quickly he snatched off the piece of goods he had hung over the necklace and looked at her, laughing.

Rosa smiled, though her eyes still looked startled and wondering. "Oh, you—you believed I would think I had lost it? That's what you meant by 'confessing' something?"

Steiger's triumphant laughter checked itself. "You didn't think you had lost it? Weren't you worried?"

Rosa shook her head, smiling. "No, I didn't wear it when I went away. I lent it to Mother to wear to her society that night."

Special Election Will Be Held Here Monday

to the passage of the sewage through the various units of the plant.

Next, the sewage enters the primary settling tank, an open tank in which the velocity of flow is reduced to such a degree that the solids begin, immediately, to settle to the bottom of the tank, the heaviest first and the lighter ones in the order of their weight. These settled solids are called sludge. Given sufficient time this settling would send all the solids to the bottom with most of the harmful bacteria, but some of the solids of lightest weight would require a great length of time and the size of the tank would be of too great cost.

Then, too, the solids settling to the bottom would begin to rot and air would soon begin nature's process of putrefaction, which would create gas bubbles that would agitate the sewage in the tank and create an offensive condition. So the settling solids will be constantly scraped by mechanism moving too slowly to agitate the sludge, to a convenient depressed section of the floor of the tank whence it will be pumped at short intervals to separate sludge digestion tanks before putrefaction begins. Here the light and air are excluded and nature's purifying bacteria called anaerobes bacteria because they operate in the absence of oxygen, begin the putrefying process of the devouring of the organic bacteria of the freshly added sludge.

After a period of several weeks, the sludge is converted into relatively harmless solids, gas and liquid. The solids, being heaviest and lying on the bottom of the digestion tank, are passed onto sand beds where the water content is drained away, leaving the heavy sludge in a condition that it can be easily removed with shovels or rakes or otherwise into carts and will be utilized by farmers and truck growers as an excellent fertilizer.

In the separate sludge digestion tank, the digestive process liberates a gas which is relatively high in heat units, exceeding that of artificial illuminating gas and approaching that of natural gas. This gas will be collected in a metal drum on top of the tank where it will be drawn through gas pipes to a furnace and burned, which will provide heat for the operating building in the winter.

The process of digestion is most rapid when the temperature of the tank is at summer heat and is slowest in winter temperature, ceasing entirely as freezing temperature is reached. Therefore, the furnace heat will be utilized in winter to heat water which will be circulated around the inside of the tank through coils of pipe, thus bringing the temperature of the sludge to that of summer and accelerating the digestion process.

Returning to the primary settling tank, the sewage which has lost almost all of its solids by settling or sedimentation, is sprinkled over a bed of crushed stone, coke, slag or other filtering material by means of a slowly revolving pipe sprinkler. In passing through the air from the sprinkler and through the open spaces between the filtering material, the sewage gathers oxygen and, immediately another of nature's processes of purification begins—so that when the effluent passes from the bottom of the filter bed it will be in a greatly improved condition over that of the raw sewage and in plants located on a large stream of water, can be safely discharged into the flowing stream where the oxidation is soon completed.

Because, in dry periods, there is a greatly reduced volume of water in the small stream passing the Chelsea plant, a secondary settling tank is provided, similar to the primary settling tank, for further settling out of the solids that are the result of the oxidation in the filter bed.

And, finally, on the outlet from the secondary settling tank, there will be a concrete chamber, called the reaction chamber on the plans, where liquid chlorine can be added to the effluent from the tank; the temporary retention of the effluent in the chamber providing time for the reaction of the chlorine upon the remaining bacteria in the sewage.

Tung Oil Extracted From Seeds Produced by Trees

Tung oil is extracted from the seeds of the tung tree, a fast growing ornamental tree with large, dark green leaves and bearing beautiful pink and white flowers in springtime. Notes a writer in the Chicago Tribune, the mature trees are usually about 30 or more feet high, with a wide limb spread. The fruits are about the size of a russet apple.

Each fruit bears from 6 to 30 seeds. They ripen in October. The tung tree has long been grown in oriental countries, and was first introduced into America about 30 years ago.

The Chinese have used tung oil for centuries as a waterproof covering for wood, masonry, and other materials which they wished to protect from the weather. Chinese junk boats are oiled regularly with it. Many other uses are found for this product by the Chinese. In America tung oil is employed chiefly in the paint and varnish industry.

Walnut

Two freak trees that produce peanut-walnuts, that is walnuts with kernels that drop out of the shell peanut fashion, are reported to be in existence in the United States by officials of the Field Museum, Chicago.

Ohio's Early Salt Wells

The first salt works of the white settlers of Ohio was established in 1793 at an Indian source of salt, the springs on the banks of Salt creek, a tributary of the Scioto river, in Jackson county. The settlers, to increase the supply, sank wells to a depth of 30 feet, and for many years the fires burned beneath the salt kettles at this location. These salt springs had been indicated on maps as early as 1755, and before the settlement of the region the Indians used to come from long distances to make salt there. Daniel Boone, as an Indian prisoner, spent some time at the salt works.

Japan's Musical Instrument The national musical instrument of Japan is the koto. An instrument over 6 feet in length, it contains 13 strings of tightly twisted silk, soaked in wax, which are tuned by movable bridges. It is placed on the ground and the player squats at the upper end and plucks the strings with ivory finger pieces.

Vanilla Extract

Vanilla extract is made from the fruit of a robust, high-climbing orchid which grows wild from Mexico to Peru and which is cultivated in many tropical countries. The slender bean-like pods contain a sweet oily pulp and small black seeds.

When Small Hibernates

When the small hibernates it goes into its shell house, then covers the entrance with a thick mucus which completely seals it. Only a few survive. Those which hide under the leaves of a hedgerow, or in the corners of gardens among flower pots and similar places, fall a prey to birds, but it often happens that they find a slab of slate, or some other object under which they can hide. With the approach of warm days the small ventures out of its prison and there is nothing it likes better than young, soft vegetables, but falling these it devours young shoots of the wild plants.

Antiquity Used Paint

Paint for protective or decorative purposes, made from a wide variety of materials, has been known since the early days of ancient times. Pliny, the Roman author who lived from 23 to 79 A. D., writes of finding in Smyrna a native lead, or cerussa, as it was known then, which was used for the painting of ships.

Hunting Dogs Were Used Long Ago by Egyptians

The history of the hunting dog is clouded in antiquity. Ancient rock carvings tell us hunting dogs were known in Egypt thousands of years ago, but the story of the first domestication of the dog and its development into a hunting companion for man is lost to us for always. Possibly somewhere back in the dim ages, when man himself had just risen above the brute and lived in terror of monster carnivorous creatures which then roamed the earth, a caveman captured his first wild dog puppy and brought it back to his home among the ledges where, in his loneliness, he fed and nurtured the animal until he won its affection. Later, probably, he taught the dog to assist him in the chase.

Stratosphere, Troposphere

The stratosphere is the upper portion of the atmosphere, above eleven kilometers, more or less, depending on altitude, season and weather, in which temperature changes but little with altitude and clouds of water never form, and in which there is practically no convection. The troposphere is all that portion of the earth's atmosphere below the stratosphere.

Horned Owl a Fighter

The great horned owl will fight anything and there are those who contend it can whip an eagle. This owl is more destructive to small game than the goshawk in some of the northern states. It is one of the few owls to kill both by day and night.

The Baobab Tree

The baobab tree of Africa belongs to the family of silk cottons. All members of this family are tropical trees, often having large flowers, palm leaves and pods with seeds embedded in pithlike tissues, or supplied with woolly or silky fibrous covering. May are very large, like the baobab. The baobab has a peculiar distinctive shape, the top of its foliage being leveled off on an almost horizontal plane. Belonging to the same family are species of trees which produce kapok, used in upholstery and the manufacture of life preservers, and baobab, the famous therweight wood.
