TAX SALE SUPPLEMENT IN THIS ISSUE.

This issue of The Standard contains a supplement of 30 pages which lists parcels of property in Washtenaw county which will be sold at the State Tax Sale to be held the first Tuesday in May, 1938. Although there are some descriptions list-ed upon which taxes have been paid since compilation of the list was started several months ago, the Auditor General's Department at Lansing has made an effort to have the list as much up to date as possible. Parcels upon which taxes have been paid will of course be withheld from the sale.

"Offended! How could you possi bly offend a Lambert, Martha, after all you've done for us? But there's more to this business than you understand." The man's face darkened. He was recalling a hot June day-a blow that had left his jaw one can't forgive, or . . . ...

He paused, not knowing just how to proceed; and the woman said, in the gentle way she had told him many truths in the years gone by: "Excuse me. Mr. Ned, but there's nothing we can't forgive-if we care enough. Run along up now. Run up and see your father."

"And when I got there." Ned told his wife later that evening, "Dad was sitting in the big wing-chair in Nora's bedroom. There was a fire on the hearth, and the place did look more-well, more cheerful, perhaps, than the rooms downstairs. He was reading a letter, but when he glanced up and saw me he stuffed it into a pocket, which made me wonder if it was from Leonora. I thought-honestly, Corinne, I sort of felt that he didn't like my findhim there. He got right up and said: "Why didn't you telephone? If I'd known you were coming over I'd have been downstairs." But tonight, sitting there in Nora's bedroom, it came over me that I was accountable for this last break that's hurt him more than anything since the trouble with my-my mother. You accountable!"

Corinne closed the most talked of novel of the month, forgot its 50 unread pages, and gave him her entire attention, "Of all the absurd statements! What would your father have had you do when that fellow hit you? Turn the other cheek?" "It was a jaw, dear," Ned reminded her in a feeble attempt at humor. He hated his wife to get "If that's supposed to be junny," she retorted, "I don't see the joke Why, you were black and blue! If your father hadn't stood by you he'd have been a beast, Ned. Well, what else did you say?" "Not much. I ventured the remark that I wondered how their trip was financed; and Father answered with that uncanny way he has of understanding something you haven't said: Well, I didn't finance it, if that's troubling you.' That riled me a little, I'll admit, but I kept my temper. I felt so sorry for him, Gorinne. I've never thought of my father as being an old man; but he looked old tonight, old and unhappy. I decided not to say anything further about Nora; and then with the best intention in the world, I put my foot in it!"

Ned smiled, regretfully.

"It was this way: As the atmosphere seemed a little strained I got up and began moving about the That's such a beautiful room, Corinne."

"Beautiful? That shows your ig-norance of such things, Ned." Corinne spoke as one with authority. "I'll admit it has a sort of charm; but it's no special period, so in an

As told to: Frank e Hagan

The Squalling Squonk COME cold, winter night, as you sit before a rouring fire in a hunting lodge or in the bunkliouse of a lumber camp in the North Woods, you're certain to hear outside a long-drawn-out mouning. But if you think it's the wind in the bare branches of the trees, you're mistaken i Your lumberiack friend will tell you it's a squonk, mourning because it has a warty, ill-fitting skip,

That's all a squank ever does-just goes wandering among the hemiock trees, weeping and sobbing bitterly because its skin doesn't fit. When the thermometer is down to nine degrees above zero, you can follow it by the little globules of ico it leaves behindthe squonk's Irall of frozen tears.

Because it is such a shy, nocturnal animal few men have ever seen a equonk. But once a lumberinck, by imitating its cries, jured one into his cabin. The little benst seemed perfectly satisfied until he shot it up in a wicker basket. Then it begun to seb and moan,

This went on for hours, then died down. The lumberjack peeked into the basket to see if the sations had cried. itself to sleep. But all he found was sait water and a few bubbles. The squank had dissolved itself in its own tears. "I mighta known better," said own tears to the collection, whan to have shut up a squonk in a basket made from branches of the weeping millow tree."

There are now more than 1,000,000 active scouts in America, and 7,500,000 men and boys have participated in the movement at some time. Physilow in typical activities designed to develop character.

one of the "crafts" being demonstrated in home towns throughout America during Boy Scout week. Since America's future lies in its as the last will and testament and youth, the Boy Scout movement has gained popular support

Archery is one of the many activities commanding Scouts' attention. But the important 1938 Boy Scout theme will be safety, endeavoring to cut America's 40,000-death traffic toll of 1937. National Scout headquarters is preparing stage and radio sketches, posters and miscellaneous material to aid the drive.

THE BREAD CROCK ON THE

Of the old Iron Kettle We once wrote a rhyme, Its glories and tributes Were true, every line.

The old Sugar Bucket, I have scraped 'till I'm tired, The Jugs and Flat Irons Are everyone fired.

I've scratched my old pate 'till My scalp's getting sore, In typing old friendships And glad days of yore.

Now listen!-Best Mother A boy ever had. Knew how to make bread that Would make one's heart glad.

An old fashioned stone crock. That stood on the stair. Covered over with cloth To keep out the air.

This was the crock. And this was the bread On which a thick plaster Of butter was spread,

Coming home from the school, With laughter and shout, Our mouth and our stomach Was soon filled, there's no doubt

Dear Mother is gone: The crock and the bread. And what we get now Is an Olco spread.

But the old fashioned pantry. The crock on the stair. The bread and the butter, The boy that was there Fill memory's casket. With only one sigh, and that's For a lunch such as this 'Fore we die.
