Masons Held Annual Banquet On Friday

Local Masons, their families and friends totalling approximately 250 attended the annual Masonic banquet sponsored by Olive Lodge No. 156, E. & A. M. and held in the public school auditorium last Friday night. The dinner was served at 7 o'clock by the senior class of Chelsea high school.

George Atkinson, W. M., was in charge of the program, and immediately following the dinner a short talk was given by Prosecutor Albert J. Rapp of Ann Arbor, who commended the work of Masonic Lodges in sponsoring the DeMolay orders as a means of providing the right kind of social life for boys who might otherwise be led astray through association with the life in disreputable "dives" which are so prevalent in every town and community.

The program of entertainment was proclaimed by many to be the best ever staged at any such event in Chelsea. The Little German Band, obtained through the courtesy of Palmer Motor Sales and the Ford Motor Company, made a real hit with their musical numbers and comedy skits.

Five members of the Kaufman-Taylor Revue, Detroit, presented several specialty dance and novelty numbers, including a dance impersonating Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire, a roller skate dance, Apache, acrobatic, cane and comedy dances, etc. These people are real artists and their numbers equal in perfection many performances which are staged in the best theatres.

The concluding number of the floor show was the grand finale, "Stars and Stripes Forever", played by the Little German Band and the Seven Vagabonds, the orchestra which furnished music for dancing following the program.

A grand march, led by Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson, was a feature during the dance program. At the conclusion of the march, as the entire group encircled the hall, a rip-cord was pulled which released 200 balloons, confetti, and serpentine from a container near the ceiling. This added to the festivity of the event and dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

The auditorium was beautifully decorated for the occasion with blue and white streamers, a solid border of blue and white about the railing of the balcony on which silver Masonic emblems were placed at intervals around the room, and a large illuminated Masonic emblem suspended in the center of the auditorium.

Fitzgerald Proves His Sincerity In Economy Efforts

Lansing—Just one month old, the new administration at Lansing has revealed several significant policies. First is economy. Governor Frank Fitzgerald has convinced the most skeptical politician that he is sincere in his efforts to reduce payrolls. Creation of new regulatory bureaus, together with the natural desire of office-holders to entrench themselves in power, have combined to boost state payrolls more than $11,000,000 in two years.

By inducing the legislature to wield an axe on the state public utilities commission, Fitzgerald intends to reduce the salary of commissioners from $7,500 to $5,000. Secretary of State Harry Kelly believes he can save $20,000 in February by putting Detroit branch offices on a salary basis rather than fees. Auditor General Vernon J. Brown took time to hang up his hat this month before he announced the discharge of more than 60 employees on the grounds of economy.

It's all very distracting to county chairmen who think of Lansing solely in terms of jobs.

Spending Demands

Counter to the governor's economy program are the financial demands just submitted by department heads for the coming biennium.

If the legislature approved every request made, the state treasury would be drained dry in 10 days. State Treasurer Miller Dunkel, in the heroic role of Mother Hubbard, has been bemoaning the plight of state finances. Continuation of spending habits would make him a fit candidate for the mousetrap's bench.

Budget Director Harold Smith announces that he is working on another formula whereby the day can be saved. In this connection it will be recalled that Frank Murphy's last act as governor was the abrupt lifting of millions from department appropriations, a gesture that may have a political value in 1940. Budgeteer Smith, twice the proverbial devil and the blue sea, cannot accomplish fiscal miracles for Fitzgerald any more than he could for Murphy.

Local Boxers Again Make Good Showing

(By Geo. Woodward, Cassidy Lake)

Cassidy Lake and Chelsea boxers again flashed their colors under the brilliant floodlights of the Jackson county building ring last Thursday night. The local participants held their own with ease when out of eight bouts there were four winners, one a knockout by Holbrook, colored fighter from Chelsea. For the most part the evening's activities consisted of merely a continuation of last week's preliminary bouts. The only fighter from this region to fight a second time was Carl Demaray who outpointed Wolf of Jackson in a close-fought battle.

To open the show for Cassidy, Lyle Limpert boxed and punched his way to an easy victory over P. Mobley in the welterweight division. The next event saw Bud Doyle, Cassidy boy, climb all over J. Kamp, Adrian, in the opening rounds, but when Kamp came back strong in the third round it was enough, in the opinion of the judges, to take the decision, which also was widely contested in the good old "boozing" manner.

In the third bout Chet Mason, another Cassidy boy, was on the receiving end of a terrific knock-out blow from the right hand of Hunt, Jackson, in the first round. Cassidy then came back into the winner's column in the form of Lawrence Rosa, 135 pound light-weight, who won the decision from Smelter, 137 pounds, in another close and hard fought battle. In the next bout Al Weber, another Cassidy light-weight, looked good in the first round against Matlow, but he lost the decision to his opponent when he tired badly in the closing frames. A novice who showed up well in his division was Slocum, Chelsea, battler, who slugged it out with Kelly, Jackson, all the way but lost when he also was on the receiving end of the hardest blows.

In the next bout Red McKelvie, Cassidy, stood up under a barrage of punches delivered by J. Navawitch. McKelvie held his own until the end of the bout, but lost the decision to Navawitch. The remaining two contestants from this district showed winning form all the way. In the eighth bout C. Demaray, Cassidy welter, out-fought Wolf, Jackson, in an exhibition of real boxing ability for a decision win. The ninth and last bout, in which either Cassidy or Chelsea was represented, resulted in the knock-out of S. Fryt by R. Holbrook, Chelsea negro in the open division. Holbrook also displayed fine form in his knock-out win.

The boys were trained and seconded in the ring by George Hansen, Cassidy Lake Athletic Director, and Morris Hoffman, Chelsea boxing enthusiast, and all the boys were in the best of condition.

As usual the winners of last week's bouts and the bouts of two weeks ago will fight again this Thursday night for higher honors, and let's hope for all-around support for the boys from the residents of this district.

The large barn on the farm of J. J. Wood of Lima burned at 7:30 o'clock on Friday morning.

Henry L. Wood died at his home on Jefferson street on Tuesday, February 3, 1915.

A severe snow and ice storm raged Saturday night, Sunday and Monday. The storm was general throughout the United States. 300 telephone poles in Washtenaw county were down. Toll lines between Ann Arbor and Chelsea are out of commission and only one toll line between Chelsea and Jackson is in working order.

A number of the residents of South Main street gave Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Weinberg a surprise party at their home on the E. E. Smith farm in Lima on Friday evening.

CHILDREN IN COURT

Judge Malcolm Hatfield

Punishment Should Be Gauged According To the Crime Itself

The parents of a nine year old boy were severely lectured by the court before they were permitted to resume custody of their child. The child had committed a series of minor offenses which destroyed property at a loss of hundreds of dollars. The boy actually was blameless, for previously his parents had only slightly reprimanded or completely ignored his activities, whenever such acts were called to their attention. Like many thoughtful parents, they did not realize that one small act could lead to a series of more serious offenses. The theory that all forms of punishment should be meted out according to the extent of the crime which has been committed does not effectively check the child who commits his first anti-social act.

As the great majority of all acts committed by very small children do not frequently harm others, their anti-social activities are too often passed over with a slight reprimand. Consequently, the child continues to increase his pernicious activities. As a result, his first act eventually does more harm to himself than to the person involved.

nor's economy demands which have all earmarks of sincerity.

Home Rule Policy

A second policy of growing significance in the present administration is that of home rule.

It first came to head when gamblers in Macomb county re-opened palatial establishments and sent printed invitations to former patrons. Detroit newspapers raised a front page storm. Civic and church groups adopted resolutions, and there was a revival of public interest in the duties of sheriff and prosecuting attorney.

The public hue and cry resulted in a court injunction against Danby Sullivan's big place near Detroit, prompting Governor Fitzgerald to point out triumphantly that home rule has its merits and the state shouldn't be a big policeman over local morals.

Last week the governor sent a letter to each sheriff and prosecuting attorney, reminding them of their responsibility in enforcing law. But if gambling continues, the problem will be back on the governor's doorstep, home rule notwithstanding.

Welfare at Home

Home rule for administration of welfare is another plank in the Fitzgerald program. And therein is an expectation that the handling of relief, if performed by persons of authority in their home communities, will save a lot of money for the taxpayers. Predicting drastic slashes in budget requests, Fitzgerald told township supervisors meeting at Lansing that they knew the needs of local people better than anyone else. It was a left-handed criticism of professional welfare workers.

The trend to favor home rule is also shown by views expressed by the auditor-general who described township officials as the "last line of defense."

Labor Responsibility

The third policy to be disclosed is that of responsibility for labor.

Legalizing picketing for the first time in Michigan, the proposed labor relations act would outlaw sit-down strikes, an indirect issue in the fall campaign, and would provide a "cooling-off" period of 10 days between the declaration to strike and the actual walkout. During this period a mediation board would try to settle differences, while the employer was required to continue payment of wages to the workers.

Company unions would be forbidden, and employers would be required to re-hire workers engaged in legal strikes.

While some of the proposed restrictions may be modified by legislators, the "notice of strike" clause will likely be retained. It is viewed by the governor's advisers as the heart of the whole act.

New Deal Precedent

Although the notice clause appears to be drastic, threatening workers with loss of seniority rights if they defy it, actually the idea was introduced at Washington by New Dealers in 1933 when they sponsored the railway labor act. It has worked well to head off hasty strikes in that industry, so vital to the nation's economic welfare.

For strikes involving public utilities—electricity, milk, and so on—the Michigan bill calls for a 40-day waiting period.

Effectiveness of the strike notice method would depend on public opinion. Labor leaders now recognize that the 1937 sit-down strikes were costly to the cause of labor, simply because public opinion was emphatically opposed to them.

Michigan Can Boast of Fine Poultry Ethics

Although the national poultry improvement program has been in operation less than four years, poultrymen in Michigan can boast that such a program closely involving suitable ethics of operation has been in effect within this state since 1925.

A survey of Ray Conolly, field manager of the Michigan State Poultry Improvement association, indicates that now there are 26 hatcheries participating in the national plan as U. S. approved hatcheries and 10 operating as U. S. certified. There are also members in the federally supervised Record of Performance work.

Flocks represented in the work of these hatcheries number 795 with 182,327 laying hens. More figures in Conolly's files indicate that the approved hatcheries have 15 per cent of the total capacity in the state.

Goals in the federal plan, which on adoption in Michigan required no revision in the state program, number eight. They are designed to advance the quality and efficiency of poultry and thus protect chick buyers. Much of this work originated with the co-operation of Conolly and members of the poultry husbandry staff of Michigan State College.

Number one requirement checks all advertising for truthfulness. The second requirement is for rigid culling and removal of low vitality birds, also maintaining flocks with standard bred birds.

Goalpost Number Three, all flocks to be kept in sanitary condition. Four involves selection only of good weight and color eggs. Five requires sanitation in hatcheries. Six means culling of chicks before shipping. Seven involves inspection by a recognized official. Last pointer in the program provides for suitable breed improvement.

OUR NEIGHBORS

NORTHVILLE—There are 43 members in the young boys' Drum and Bugle Corps. One member is 8 1/2 years old and plays the bugle.—Record.

DUNDEE—A group of Dundee's young people enjoyed a sleigh ride in a modern manner on Friday evening. Instead of horses, a speedy tractor pulled the sleigh. They had a 30-mile-an-hour ride with no worries about getting stuck, but the sleigh bells combined with the roar of the motor had a peculiar sound effect.—Reporter.

PINKNEY—Edward Sorenson, former Pinkney manufacturer, who is now located in Dexter, regained possession of his factory Monday morning on a court order. He made Ford parts here and later moved to Dexter where he enlarged and increased the production of his factory. Later he took on the manufacture of a truck rear axle for a man from Chicago named Thornton. In some legal transaction several months ago Mr. Thornton got possession of the factory and ousted Sorenson and most of his employees. Now Sorenson is once more in possession. We understand that he, in turn, has dismissed most of the Thornton employees.—Dispatch.

PLYMOUTH—High winds swept Plymouth Sunday to the extent that several large windows were threatened for a period. However, no actual damage was reported. The colored bay window of St. Peter's Evangelical Lutheran church was shaken so badly by the wind that braces were erected to make sure that it would not be blown in. Harold Coleman also put up braces to prevent blowing in of the large show-window of his filling station. At about the same time the winds gathered greater momentum in Detroit, crashed in a large plate glass window of Crowley-Miller and company and made several other panes billow dangerously.—Mail.

Kinda of Rope

The rope used for general purposes about the farm is hemp rope. As most of it is made from Manila hemp imported from the Philippine Islands, it is generally known as Manila rope. Cotton rope is sometimes used for halters or ties. In making rope, the fibers are first spun into a cord or yarn, being twisted in a direction called "right-hand." Several of these cords are then made into a "strand" by being twisted in the opposite direction, or "left-hand." The rope is finally made up of three or four of these strands twisted "right-hand," and is known as a three- or four-strand rope, depending upon the number of strands used. The four-strand rope is constructed on a core, and is heavier, more pliable, and stronger than the three-strand, in any given size.

Giant Reservoir of Ice In southeastern Alaska there is a giant reservoir of ice overflowing into ice streams and containing more ice than all Europe's famous glaciers put together.

Names Used for Corn Corn is used in different senses in various countries. In America it means maize, in China rice, in Scotland oats, in Norway barley, in South Germany wheat, and in North Germany rye.

Ice Age Disappearing The last ice age, which began at least 30,000 years ago, is slowly disappearing, as the glaciers keep on melting; but in Antarctica enough ice remains to freeze the entire earth in a layer 120 feet thick.

Scout leaders from various parts of Washtenaw and Livingston counties will meet at the Michigan Union in Ann Arbor on Monday evening, February 13, for their monthly round table and conference on scout problems. In addition to Scoutmasters, all committeemen and others interested in troop management are invited.

The feature of the evening will be a debate under the management of Walter Holmlund, chairman of the committee of leadership training, on the topic: Resolved, That the troop achievement plan will be beneficial to every troop that uses it.

A moving picture will be taken of the men for possible use later in a moving picture which is being developed to show all phases of the council work.

The meeting begins at 7:30 and will be followed by refreshments at 9:00.

Right here I am going to propose a change in the method of driving automobiles that may seem revolutionary. I should like to see the horn or other warning signals eliminated from every automobile, truck and motor vehicle. I recommend this as a safety measure.

No doubt there will be many arguments proposed against this recommendation on the belief that the horn is absolutely necessary to warn other motorists and pedestrians of an approaching car.

On the other hand, if you had no horn on your car, you would drive with extreme caution and in a safe manner. Rome tried it in certain sections of the city and found a big drop in automobile accidents.

Before criticizing this suggestion, think it over.

Music

Mixed chorus has started, my hearties, but it isn't very mixed. What's the matter, boys, don't you like to sing? Come on, help out, we need you. The music's here and all we need is more boys. Singing is good for you so show up to rehearsals please. Mixed chorus practices on Tuesday and Thursday, every week.

Swing Band

One-two-swing it! Here we go again! Sure nuff it's band practice. By gosh, those kids can really play! The trio has joined the "swingeroos" and have some cute numbers to sing with them. Listen—this is secret, don't tell anybody! The swing band is going to play for the Seniors' dramatic production. That's why it will be doubly enjoyable to come to the Senior play.

Continue Victory March

(By your Sports Editor)

Chelsea journeyed to Belleville last Friday night in quest of their third league victory and came back with one of the most astonishing wins of the season.

Belleville, rated very highly in this year and favored to take Chelsea by at least ten points, ran up against a smooth working Chelsea quintet who allowed two points during the first half of the game. During the second half Chelsea put on the power, completely bottling up the Belleville offense and winding up the game with a 31-19 win, which definitely serves as a warning to the touted Dundee outfit which invades Chelsea tomorrow night.

Alber and Fletcher shared the scoring honors, having 9 and 8 points respectively.

All the boys played a "whale" of a defensive game.

Tomorrow night promises one of the best games of the season so let's see all of you out to help the boys to victory—I'll be seeing you!

Hi-Y Club in the Swim

"Last one is a rotten egg"—With such remarks fifteen Chelsea Hi-Y club members dived, jumped and slid into the Ann Arbor Y. M. C. A. swimming pool. Thanks to E. N. Freund, secretary of the Ann Arbor "Y" this evening of enjoyment was held January 24.

The Chelsea Hi-Y club has several items of leathercraft and leatherwork on display at Mack's service station. Go in and look at the leather work and if you like them, place your order at Mack's and the request will be filled at an early date.

In Appreciation

The following are copies of some of the letters written by the members of vocations class to Mr. Albert Pielemeier in appreciation for the books contributed to our library in memory of his son, Paul. Miss Nelson is instructor in this class.

Chelsea, Mich., Jan. 20, 1939.

Dear Mr. Pielemeier:

During the last three months of this school year the vocations class of nineteen thirty-eight and nine has been assigned the reading of the set of books which you were so kind as to contribute to our library.

I read the three books: "Good-Bye, Mr. Chips," "New Land," and "Planning for College." I think the former two were the most interesting although the last one was of the most value. I appreciate your sacrifice in presenting this group of books to the school. If you feel that our appreciation is a good return for your investment, then, in my opinion you are well repaid.

Gratefully,
Vincent Helm.

Chelsea, Mich., Jan. 20, 1939.

Dear Mr. Pielemeier:

I can think of no better way to express my appreciation for the excellent books which you have so generously contributed to our school library in honor of your son, Paul.

Of these well chosen books I have read "North to the Orient," "Good-Bye, Mr. Chips," and "Planning for College." These are all exceptionally good reading books, especially the one entitled "Planning for College," which proves a great help to those planning to go on to school.

I hope that this brief note will fulfill my purpose, and carry to you my "thank-you."

Sincerely,
Mary Jane Riker.

Chelsea, Mich., Jan. 20, 1939.

Dear Mr. Pielemeier:

I would like to take this time to thank you for your kind generosity in placing at the high school library many books of very valuable interest. I have had the pleasure to read several of these grand books to report on for book reports in many of my classes. There is one book in particular that I shall always remember. It is that lovely story "Good-Bye, Mr. Chips." I am sure that when you decided on this book as one of the many good books you chose, that you were thinking of the making of better character and higher morals in the young people of America. Let me again thank you for your kindness, and I am sure it will long be remembered.

Sincerely,
Charles Bahnmler.

Sixth Grade

We got our report cards Thursday, January 26. Some got higher grades. We had a test in music. There were 21 A's and A minus grades and four B grades.

In Language we learned four kinds of sentences. They are declarative, interrogative, imperative and exclamatory.

We had a test on key words in reading. The ones that got 80 per cent or over got to read a new story about ships. Many people brought pictures of ships. We have a calendar with pictures of ships which shows part of the progress of them from the Roman Gally to the American Schooner.

The county nurse, Miss Halst, was here to look over our health over Jan. 25. Frank Lang and Walter O. put our big calendar up in front of the room. Norman Krontz brought it. Now the students can see the numbers better. We wish to thank Frank Lang and Walter O. for putting it up.

The ice skates haven't been sold yet in Room 12.

We have a new word in our vocabulary—Reciprocal. It means turn around. We use it in division of fractions.

Walter is in charge of putting in and taking out the ventilator from the window.

Seventh Grade

In Spelling we are starting a new six weeks. We are all trying to get on the honor roll. Each week we are having an honor roll. We are all working for it. It takes in five subjects. They are: Spelling, Arithmetic, Geography, History, and English.

You must have a B average in order to be on the honor roll, which makes at least 10 points. This six weeks the following students are on it: Mary Ruth Christwell, 14 points; Ruth Osterle, 14 points; Eleanor, 12; Elaine Schmidt, 12; Esther Riemenschneider, 12; Eva Harris, 10; Ronald Gentner, 12; Dick Poor, 11.

In English we are starting our second semester of Grammar activities. This news was made up by Eugene Aldrich and Felix Holbrook.

Question And Answer Dept.

How many different sounds can a cat make with its mouth or throat? Are you sure? (Answer elsewhere in this department).

Ques.—I was born on January 30, 1874. Will you please tell me the day of the week? I think it was on Thursday.

Ans.—Jan. 30, 1874 was a leap year, and therefore that date was on Friday. Otherwise it would have been on Thursday.

Ques.—What is the legal weight of wheat in the State of New York?

Ans.—The legal weight of wheat is sixty pounds to the bushel in every State and Commonwealth in the Union.

Ques.—What is the proper pronunciation of the word "Orion"?

Ans.—Orion is correctly pronounced "O-ri-on", with the "i" having the long sound, and with the accent on the same syllable.

Answer to problem.—A cat can make five different sounds with its mouth or throat—meow, usually as a plea for food; a purr, the sign of contentment; a cry of pain as when its tail or other part of its body becomes impinged; a cry like a baby in a cat-and-dog fight; a hissing sound when attacked by a dog.

Ques.—To settle an argument will you please answer who Darius was?

Ans.—Darius Hyastaspis, or Darius I, was Emperor of Persia from 521 B. C. to 485 B. C. He successfully finished the work which Cyrus had begun, by setting in order the affairs of the vast empire.

Ques.—What is the name of the Greek god of war?

Ans.—The name of the Greek god of war is "Ares".

Ques.—Is the "Rip Van Winkle" story based on a fact or is it pure fiction? What caused him to sleep twenty years?

Ans.—"Rip Van Winkle" is fiction. It is a tale by Washington Irving, and based on an old German legend, "Peter Klaus", a goatherd, who drank a miraculous draught of wine in a dell of the Harz mountains, which brought on sleep from which he did not wake until twenty years later.

Ques.—What does G. C. E. D. M. W. mean?

Ans.—We do not know. However, Vic of Vic and Sade of the radio says it means "Grand Commander of the Exalted Dipper in the Milky Way."

Ques.—I hear a great deal about television, and I would like to ask you if it is only a theory or is it a fact?

Ans.—Television is an absolute reality. The Radio Corporation of America has already announced the installation of a receiver and transmitter on top of the Empire Building in New York City. Supplementary to this television apparatus will be installed at the World's Fair in New York in 1939 (this year) which is expected to be the springboard for everyday service throughout the land where there are receiving sets. People in remote places will be able to see and hear the production of a stage show in New York or elsewhere if a receiving set is in operation.

Ques.—To settle a dispute will you kindly answer in your good paper what was the middle name of James A. Garfield.

Ans.—"Abram", his father's first name.

Bowler Hat Known as Derby.

The bowler hat, known in this country as the derby, got its British name through having first been made more than 60 years ago by William Bowler of St. Swithin's lane to the design of a Norfolk farmer. The bowler or derby is popular in Britain and has many adherents here. The bowler is a symbol of solidity. The high silk hat represents lofty social standing. John Hetherington invented the "topper" in London some 140 years ago. When he first wore it he was arrested for inciting a riot; the complaint was made that timid persons were frightened by its sheen. A century ago a Frenchman, Antoine Gibus, contributed the opera hat spring. This is the only successful mechanical device in the hat business, and the inventor's family receives royalties from it. High hats are all made by hand.

Negroes Have White Ancestors.

MOTOR BOAT KING WAS A CATTLE HERDER

SOMETIMES I think we place too much emphasis on the stigma of failure. A man may fail at one thing after another that he attempts, but he is never a failure himself until he quits. Many a fortune has been built upon past mistakes. Gar Wood's father had a viewpoint something like that, and he instilled into his children the belief that even though they failed in an endeavor, they had fun in trying it.

Gar Wood was born in Mapleton, Iowa, in 1872, one of 13 children. All of the children had to earn money early to help make expenses, and Gar had little formal schooling.

When only a boy, Gar worked as a cattle herder for one dollar a day. He loved boats and enjoyed constructing mechanically run models from clock parts.

At the age of thirteen, his unusual knowledge of boats run by motors got him a job in Duluth on one of the first gasoline craft to dock there. As automobiles became popular, Gar Wood was hired to sell them.

He obtained one odd job after another. He was a teacher of electricity and gasoline motors in a night class. He ran a garage for awhile in St. Paul. One thing after another he tried, and failed to advance. A less philosophical man, a less courageous man might have become stagnant. But not Gar Wood. His mind was ever alert to new opportunities in mechanics. Then he perfected a hydraulic hoist for trucks, risked the family's savings in constructing a model, and became wealthy almost overnight.

Suppose this man had been as utterly stricken with shame as some of us think we might be, when he failed in his first attempts to make a successful living. He probably never would have had the courage to risk all the money he had saved for the model of an invention others told him was impractical.

Canada's Only Walled City.

High up on Cape Diamond, overlooking the St. Lawrence seaway, stands the time-mellowed ramparts of Canada's only walled city. Towers, secret passages and walls 20 feet thick and 30 feet high testify to the early struggles of kings for the city that cradled the civilization of North America. The citadel, main link in these strongholds, is entered by a narrow roadway just inside the walls near the St. Louis gate. Inside the grim walls is a series of 25 buildings and an expanse of 40 rolling acres.

OBSERVATORIES

Michigan has been among the leading institutions in America in the field of astronomy since the middle of the last century. The above picture shows the original University of Michigan Observatory, constructed in 1855.

It is expected that this building will be replaced at some future date by a more modern observatory which will house the University's new 96-inch reflecting telescope, which will be one of the three largest in the world. In addition to its Ann Arbor Observatory the University maintains one near Pontiac and one in South Africa. The Pontiac Institution, which was the gift of Messrs. Robert R. McKain, Henry A. Hubert, and Charles C. McKain, is pioneering in the study of production of the sun by means of motion pictures.

In the above picture, the smaller dome to the right houses the University's first telescope, a 12-inch refractor, the first telescope to be built entirely in the United States. It was put in operation in 1855.

The larger dome to the left contains a 74-inch reflecting telescope, which at the time it was built in 1811 was one of the large telescopes of the country.

Rialto, Bridge of Sighs.

World Famous Structures

In Venice, a city of many and beautiful bridges, are two that are world famous—the Rialto bridge over the Grand canal, and the Bridge of Sighs, which connects the old doge's palace with the Prison of Saint Mark. The last-named bridge perhaps is the most widely known of all, writes John A. Menaugh in the Chicago Tribune.

The single great marble arch of the Rialto bridge rests upon a foundation of 12,000 piles driven to a depth of 16 feet on the banks of the canal. These piles were sunk by means of a hammer (a heavy weight falling in a groove) that was operated either by man-power or horse power, since steam pile-drivers were not in existence when the bridge was erected in the years from 1588 to 1592. Designed by Giovanni Contino, the Rialto bridge is of the arched type of construction, and in its design can be seen the Roman, the segmental, the Gothic, and the Moorish arch.

The Bridge of Sighs is a relatively small structure, the springs of its one arch thrusting against the walls of the two buildings which it connects. Erected in 1363, it took its name from the fact that condemned prisoners walked through its covered passage from the hall of judgment in the palace to the place of execution in the prison. The Bridge of Sighs in New York, connecting the Criminal courts building with the Tombs prison, got its name from the famous bridge in Venice.

Meaning of Name Hazel

One of the two origins ascribed to the name Hazel by authorities is Teutonic and the meaning is "commander," evidently because a wand of the hazel tree was the symbol of authority with shepherd chiefs of ancient times. Another authority gives the Teutonic Hazel the meaning of "a star" but does not explain this interpretation. The other and older origin of Hazel is Hebrew, the meaning being "protected by God." This form is an abbreviation of Hazeleponi (1 Chron. 4:3), the meaning of which is given as "Give shade (protection) O thou that turnest thyself toward me." A faint connection might be traced between the Hebrew meaning and the first Teutonic one.

Bedloe's Island

Bedloe's Island in New York harbor was declared the Statue of Liberty National monument by presidential proclamation on October 15, 1924. It is owned by the United States government, and administered by the National Park service, department of the interior. Bedloe's Island has flown the Dutch and British flags, and has been owned by several individuals, and by the city and later the state of New York. It is named for its first private owner, Isaac Bedloe, whose family had title to it from the 1660s until 1732.

Firearms Work Same Way

Every firearm from the smallest pistol to the most elaborate machine gun, works the same way; the powder explodes and expanding gases force the projectile out of the barrel, says the Washington Post. Strangely, firearms started 600 years ago, as clumsy cannon requiring two men to operate. The word rifle comes from the Danish "rifle," meaning ripple. This referred to the groove in the barrel, invented by some unknown genius, which sent the bullet out spinning.

Severe Snow Storm Strikes This Vicinity

The principal occupation in Chelsea and vicinity this week has been snow shoveling. On Sunday the thermometer stood at 40 degrees at noon. Snow began falling shortly after midnight and was blown into huge drifts. During the night and Monday more than six inches of snow fell, which, added to the snow that already was on the ground made nearly a foot of snow. According to official reports this has been surpassed only six times in 30 years.

Country roads were blocked and most of the rural schools were closed on Monday. Rural carriers were unable to cover their routes. At nine o'clock there was not a car parked at the local school, as rural students were unable to get to school.

The village council had a crew of men at work early Monday morning to clear the snow from the streets in the business district. By Tuesday night the streets were cleared and the cross-walks throughout the village were cleared.

Motorists had to shovel their drives in order to get their cars out and then often had to shovel and help push cars that were stuck in the deep snow. The temperature throughout the duration of the storm was in the twenties.

WILL PRESENT PLAY

The Epworth League players of the M. E. church will present "Why Should I?" a powerful one-act play condemning war and drink, on Sunday evening, Feb. 5, at the church. The cast:

Richard Conrad, Mimi's father—Joseph Mahoski.
Dick Conrad, Mimi's brother—William Knisely.

Jim Carey, the sheriff—Harvey Knickerbocker.
Dr. Peale, the minister—Ward Corbish.

The sheriff and minister call on the older Conrad to run for prosecutor. He asks "Why Should I?" and refuses.

Suggests they see his son Dick who is a good lawyer but the lawless groups are among his best clients. His reply is "Why Should I?" Mimi is disfigured in an accident at the "Black Cat." This changes everything—but see the play on Sunday evening at 7:30 at the Methodist church. No charge for admission.

Joyce Hoffman has not been absent nor tardy so far this school year. Robert Trinkle has not been absent but he was tardy twice so far this year.

We have received and looked over our Standard Tests that we took before Christmas. We were all glad to see how we ranked. They showed us in what we needed to improve. We think they were good for us.

The 2nd and 4th grades studied about Ekimos, the beginning of January. They wrote stories, drew pictures, and found clippings to add to the Ekimo scrapbook.

Donald Koch, Joyce Hoffman, and Junior Barth each received a pencil from the Michigan Tuberculosis Association for selling 25 Christmas seals.

We are continuing our work on Safety in Health. We have added quite a bit to the Health Scrapbook.

We found clippings, wrote stories and plays and wrote stories about pictures. The president of Civic Health club for February will be Genevieve Valant and the secretary is Stella Valant. The program committee has had interesting programs.

We have now learned all of our Festival Songs and Folk Dances. We have our plans made for a music scrapbook. We have enjoyed radio musical programs. We have heard several good ones this month.

We have made two Michigan scrapbooks and a large product map and written several papers and made drawings in our Michigan work.

The seventh grade have several history maps in connection with their work. They also made some good geography maps, as a review of their work.

Some of us have been doing more reading this month. We have written some book reports.

The fourth grade have made some good English posters. The rest of us expect to make some too. We have been writing letters to children in other states in our English work.

In our Art work we have made some good free-hand pictures, designs, etchings, and some paper-cutting posters.

This month we noticed the birth-days of some of the famous people and we have discussed their work.

We have all made quite a bit of improvement in our penmanship. We enjoy seeing this improvement.

We are still enjoying our weekly current event day. We all try to have interesting and worthwhile news.

We also learn much from our Current Event paper.

We have all found several pictures to add to our geography picture collection.

The beginners have been sewing some cards. They are getting along quite well.

Our visitors this month were Marian Schiller and Dolores Schanz.

Meaning of Name Vincent

The name Vincent, of Latin origin, means "conquering," which makes it an auspicious name. Vincent is the Italian form, according to Florence A. Cowles in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. St. Vincent Ferrer (d. 1419) was called "the angel of judgment" and preached throughout Europe. St. Vincent de Paul (b. 1580) devoted his life to the care of the poor. Vincenzo Catena (d. 1551) was a Venetian painter whose contemporaries ranked him with Titian. Vincenzo Campi (d. 1591) also an Italian, excelled in small figures, fruits, etc. Vincente Espinel (d. 1624) was a Spanish poet whose stanzas came to be called espinelas. Vincent Bourne (d. 1747) was a noted English poet of his day.

DISCUSS H. S. ADDITION

A discussion led by Superintendent of Schools Albert Johnson and Henry Schneider concerning the project of a new addition to the high school took place at the school board meeting on Monday evening. Mr. Johnson outlined the project as presented by the school board.

Mr. Schneider then spoke on the advisability of making such an addition to the school program. He presented first the statement that Chelsea has a high standard of intelligence, and having it, the people have chosen good and able men for their school board. These men, having used their best judgment, have appealed to the property holders to take a step ahead in the school program.

Unless voters are quite convinced to the contrary, they ought to follow the lead of their elected representatives, according to Mr. Schneider.

Next he spoke on the need for such an enlarged school program. This, he maintained, was the only real question at issue. If there is a need, the need should be met.

Other members of the club spoke of the financial aspects, showing how little it would cost the average taxpayer for such an addition, the need for it from the standpoint of the problem child, the sub-normal child and the average child. Among other things, it was called to attention that Chelsea is the only town in this immediate part of the state that is without such a program in home economics and manual arts.

Spanish Town, Jamaica's Capital, Old Attraction
Capital of Jamaica for over three centuries under both Spanish and English rule, the ancient town of Spanish Town, slumbering in the tropic sun 13 miles west of Kingston, draws within her confines visitors anxious to turn back the pages of history and re-live the brave days when from here the minions of Old Castile and their British conquerors governed the island.

While there are very few old Spanish buildings remaining anywhere in Jamaica, the Great square of Spanish Town is authentically Spanish. It was laid out after the plan of Spanish cities when the Dons decided to leave Seville on the North coast and establish their seat of government inland. This is believed to have been in 1538.

Spanish Town was evacuated in 1855 in the face of the British under Admiral Penn and General Venables, but remained the capital until 1872.

The ancient government buildings are among Spanish Town's chief points of interest. The old House of Assembly and King's house date from 1762. The former in particular gives direct contact with the days of the Eighteenth century. In bygone years tradition has it that there was an underground passage leading from the old cathedral across the square to the assembly building, which was used in troublous times by the law-makers as a quick means of getting into and out of the chambers where the assembly sessions were being held.

Praying Mantis Females Require Suitable Mates
The courtship of the male praying mantis is not unlike that of our spiders, for if the lady does not consider him a suitable mate she will pounce on him and kill him. The spider sometimes has a good chance of escaping, for he approaches in a wary manner, and will let the male think she is about to accept him. Then, if she does not consider him sufficiently good-looking, those powerful pincer legs flash out, and there is no hope of escape. Apart from courtship, a mantis will not hesitate to attack another, relates a writer in London "Tit-Bits" Magazine.

The European mantis harmonizes remarkably with its surroundings, but other species have it beaten. Some are colored like tropical flowers and as they remain motionless, bees and other insects alight upon them to be caught and devoured. Others have wings which resemble leaves, with smaller leaf-like appendages on their legs. These change color according to the seasons, and as the leaves change from green to brown, they alter their coat to correspond with spring, summer or autumn.

Animals and Mammals
All mammals are animals; comparatively few animals possess the characteristics necessary for classification as mammals. Mammals comprise the highest class of animals. Their outstanding characteristic is that they nourish their young with milk. Mammals are covered more or less with hair, possess mammary glands, a muscular diaphragm which separates the heart and lungs from the abdominal cavity, and red blood corpuscles without nuclei.

Potatoes Blamed for War
Potatoes are partly blamed for the Great War on the grounds that the introduction of the potato into northern Europe made a great increase in population possible.

MOUNTAIN MAN

HAROLD CHANNING WIRE

COPYRIGHT-HAROLD CHANNING WIRE W.N.U.SERVICE

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Jim Coker, forest ranger, had been mysteriously killed, the pursuit of his duties. Gordon Breck, his best friend, takes over Coker's job, hoping to avenge the murder. "Old Cook," Coker's assistant, is a mountain man who has been in the area for years. He is a quiet, unassuming man, but he is a good friend to the people of the area.

CHAPTER II—Before leaving for his mountain station, Breck buys an outfit and decides to attend the public dance given by the Tillson in Lone Tree.

CHAPTER III—At the dance Breck dances with Louise Temple, pretty "cowgirl" for whom he takes a liking. Unknown to Breck, the dance is being watched by Art Tillson, young son of the three Tillson brothers. Angered by Breck's attentions to the girl, he picks a fight with Breck. Breck's first thought is to fight, but he is rescued by Louise, who tells him that she is quite capable of taking care of herself.

CHAPTER IV—Breck and his chief set out for the mountain station. Halfway, they are met by Sierra Slim, mountaineer, who tells him that he is a forest ranger. Breck is surprised to hear that, but he is not surprised to hear that Sierra Slim is a forest ranger. Breck is surprised to hear that, but he is not surprised to hear that Sierra Slim is a forest ranger.

CHAPTER V—Cook, Breck and Sierra continue their ascent of the mountains. Stopping to rest, they sight the Tillson's mountain cabin, returning to their hideaway.

"Horn here. And that was a long time ago—ages. But we don't have to talk ranches, nor cows, nor how much it is going to rain this summer. Unless you really want to."

Breck laughed. "What then?"

"Anything!" Louise spread her hands in a little gesture almost of despair. "Anything but me. This toast for example. I didn't know a man could make it less than an inch thick. Where did you learn?"

Sierra Slim had said this girl once studied painting. "As far back as New York City," Breck deliberately gave the name of a Village club where you may fix your own dishes. It was a gathering place for student artists. He had often gone there with friends.

"The Old Soak's Cellar."

Louise lifted her eyes, color flowed into her cheeks, but she said nothing and turned from him to stare out of the window.

If faced west, down a stringer of open meadow, and framed, many miles across the range, the triple peaks of the Keweenaw. Mist of the canyons caught each shade of sunset violet deepening into vibrant red, the Keweenaw tops themselves rising golden against an opal sky.

The picture was paintable, and Breck said so. Louise faced him sharply, her lips parted in a breathless question. "You don't don't paint?"

"No. Sometimes I wish I did. I certainly would paint this range. Why is it so many artists study the coast? It is beautiful, but so much the same—always blue water, brown rocks, fans of white surf. But this, out there—look at it!"

She shook her head. "I can't." Breck averted his eyes from hers, aware that he had probed something deep and painful. He would have turned their talk from pictures, but her own words rushed to him.

"You may think I'm silly. But you've just expressed what I have always wanted to do. Paint the High Sierras! And your talk of the Old Soak's Cellar. Don't I know it—where you bring your own bread and butter and fry things, and if you haven't a quarter for the gas meter, there's Jimmy Valentine himself to show you how to work a slug. Blecker Street with its Italian push carts! And a bus-top ride up Fifth Avenue for ten cents! And even Greenwich Village!"

"I know you're wondering how I can fall for its shem. They work so hard at being a sham—that's why. I admire hard work. And some of them tip. I tried to and had to give it up. Out here I whiff a last rope and wear caps, but I've got an old orange slicker down at the ranch—"

Louise broke off, and stared at Breck through the dusk that almost hid her face.

"I think I understand," he said quietly. "You have an old smock—some day you'll go back to it—"

"Do you think so? Do you? Oh, if I could believe that!"

With sudden impulse Breck leaned across the table to her. "You must believe it, Louise."

She started at the sound of her own name softly spoken. Her dark eyes met his searchingly. "Why?"

At once Breck realized there was no explainable reason for his assurance. He hesitated and Louise spoke first.

"No pity, thank you. I didn't fish for that. I'm a ranch woman now, and I'm going to make money at it. Sometimes I'm sure that's the most important thing anyway."

Breck answered bluntly from the depths of his own experience. "It isn't."

"You seem to know."

"I do."

She leaned back from the table and away from him. Color of excitement left her cheeks, her eyes held only their level gaze.

"Who are you?" she asked. "Why are you here?"

With regret Breck felt their warm contact of common interest slip away. "I'm a forest ranger," he answered, "working at my job."

Outside a thunder of hoofs sounded over the meadow. He stood up and opened the door. The drive was coming through the opposite canyon notch, spreading in a great dark wedge into the bowl until, reaching the drift fence, it halted.

Louise left the bunk and stood beside Breck. "I guess your job has come," she said, "and mine too."

"I'll turn this cabin over to you tonight," Breck offered. "You'll rest better."

"Don't you think I've learned to rest with my back on a rock pile, if only my face is to the stars. She smiled, adding: "Thanks just the same. An Indian boy is bringing my camp pack. I always spread it near the creek above this station. Cowhands camp on the meadow."

The boy came before dark, leading a mule and the girl's blue horse. Breck watched her ride up stream until her small figure vanished in a shelter of pine.

For two hours, while he moved his possessions into his room, he could hear a rumble of cattle entering the meadow. It was eight o'clock before the last of them poured in and cowboys' fires began to pierce the shadows.

By nine full dark had come. He went to the telephone hung in its iron box on a post just outside the cabin door, cranked four rings to call headquarters, and when Cook answered, gave his report. "The drive is in, Dad. I'm going out now and take a swing around."

"All right," the ranger's voice returned. "One circle ought to be enough. Show yourself in a few camps to let them know you're at it."

Breck hung up, mounted Kit and sat scanning the meadow bowl. Campfires were mostly at the further end, near where the black mass of cattle lay against the drift fence. His eyes swept those camps, then, continuing back of the station, fell upon one alone and not far away. Even as he watched, the light blinked as one figure crossed in front of the flames, then another.

For an instant it seemed they were being mashed together.

He wheeled his horse, stopped. None of his business who was up there. He shouldn't see the girl again tonight. But that feeling of dissatisfaction was still upon him, dissatisfied that he moved ahead, reasoning he would only ride by on patrol.

At his side the stream talked noisily, human in its wide range of tone, from low guttural voices to silvery laughter. It covered the sound of his horse's hoofs and also any words that might have come from the camp, until abruptly a man's quick report broke through. There was anger in its suddenness, and a threat in the silence that followed.

With no hesitation Breck pushed past the thicket and into the girl's camp. He saw Louise sitting on her saddle, chin propped in both hands, Art Tillson standing before her. Tillson, as he approached and on his face was jealous rage.

Breck looked at the girl. "How are you, Louise?"

"She's all right," Art cut in. "Don't need anything now." With scoffing sarcasm, he added, "Thanks for comin' up!" Then he turned his back.

Louise lifted her face to Breck, but he could not read through the shadows upon it. She might be telling him to go.

Art wheeled. "Well!" he snapped. Breck dismounted, dropped his reins and cast a casual gaze about.

The girl had a comfortable camp, bed roll laid on dry pine needles, a small fire for cooking lighted between two rocks, and a larger blaze for warmth. When his eyes returned to Art Tillson, he saw a set determination tightening on the boy's jaw.

"If you've been sneakin' around," Art blurted, "I suppose you heard what I said just now."

Breck had heard only indistinct words and the heated retort, but replied, "If you don't want the whole meadow to know your business, don't yell so loud."

Art took a step toward him with fists doubled. "All right, I meant what you heard. Suppose we settle it here. Just take off your badge and I'll muss up that smooth face of yours. There ain't anyone to pull the lights out on us like they did down below. We'll go through with it!"

Breck guessed what he was supposed to have overheard. Some jealous boast before Louise. He looked at young Tillson, more amused than angry. There was little enough to be jealous about. What could be set by a fist fight? Nothing; unless Louise thought he was a coward.

She stood up. Breck shifted his glance to her, met her eyes and searched them, yet felt nothing in their level gaze.

"Look here, Art," he said at last, "you and I have nothing to settle with fists. One of us gets whipped tonight—tomorrow things are back where we started."

Yeah, but someone hereabouts would know who's the best man," Breck laughed. "She can probably tell that without a battle. And if you want to ask her, I'm on my way." He paused, one foot lifted to his stirrup. "Just one thing. Don't say you backed me down. You'd have to prove that later."

Art shrugged indifferently. Argument had cooled him somewhat and had drawn the flush of rage from his face. He rolled a cigarette, and also went to his horse.

"You're pretty good at talkin', mister," he flung back. "I reckon I'll have to go packin' a dictionary instead of a six-gun."

He mounted in a lithe spring, and as he did, Louise, let his horse rear once and dashed away, proudly, erect, and showing his full sense of victory.

As Breck swung to his saddle, Louise crossed the freight to him. "You did a fine thing just now, Gordon Breck, and I thank you for it. Don't consider why I say so—you might only make a wrong guess."

With that she turned away and Breck rode from her camp. She had thanked him for keeping out of trouble with Art. She had thanked him for Art's sake. In spite of her asking him not to, he did consider why she had said it, and guessed the only thing possible. She was in love with the boy.

He shook off a stab of jealousy. Why shouldn't she be? Art was handsome. He was hot-headed and looking for trouble most of the time, but no fool. Probably would make something of the cattle business if he had the chance. He wondered if Louise knew about the other business. Of course she did.

Truth came suddenly. She knew and was trying to pull him out!

His hands clenched the saddle horn. Savagely he asked, "What's all this to you? You didn't come for a girl!"

He had ridden preoccupied, with sight dimmed by visions of a small dark face, until now, abruptly, something pulled him back to his job. His horse, going for a time unguided, had with keen instinct followed fresh marks that would have been undiscovered from the saddle.

Breck's first warning was an odor of dust and sweat that pierced the fragrance of pine. He halted, peering ahead. The ridge had come to a short notch, with Rock House Meadow down on the left and a stringer of green running into broken, wooded country to the right.

Wind was blowing from the stringer, bearing that unmistakable stench of cows. Still there was no sound of their movement. But when he rode out on the strip of grass, where trees parted and starlight fell through, tracks of many animals were plain enough.

He followed in the direction they had gone, saw the stringer begin to widen, with pines sweeping away and a stream forming itself from boggy ground, then came suddenly to the edge of a small pothole meadow. A black huddle of steers showed against the floor.

Breck approached slowly, circling to pick up the night rider. These animals were too well quieted to be alone. He shifted in his saddle, and then like a trumpet-bare in the silence, an old cow bawled at him.

White faces swung in his direction; horns tossed above the dark mass. It began to move, suddenly, like a great pool of water released. He spurred Kit upward to prevent the drive from going over the saddle.

Simultaneously a rider broke from the herd and dashed into the nearest pines. Breck raced after him. Blackness of the forest closed in. He could hear the other horse scramble over rock, tried to follow, came to a granite barrier. A game trail must be there, but it was a blind thing, and he was blocked. Behind him, a stampede had started in the meadow.

Wheeling, he cut back across the upper end as a wave of cattle reached it, and plunging into them, turned the rush downward. Once on the move they were easily handled. As they quieted to a walk, he flashed a light on the flanks of those nearest.

The brands were varied, yet one appeared on more than half the lot. J.G.J. Satisfied, Breck fell back, pushed the bunch rapidly down the canyon and in an hour showed them into the main herd at Rock House.

White faces swung in his direction.

Campfires still glowed there. Breck went to one close by, swung off and squatted on the ground with a half a dozen cowhands.

A gray-whisker offered greetings for all. "Howdy, Ranger?" He turned to a boy at his side. "Dud, cut off a steak and stick it on the fire."

"I ate awhile ago," Breck said. "Thanks." And to the boy. "Don't bother, son. He traded news a moment before asking, 'Who's outfit is the JGJ?'"

"JGJ?" the boss repeated. "That's Jackson, John G. Looking for old John G., are you?"

"Yes," Breck answered, "I'd like to see him. Camped near here?"

A lean, worn figure pointed into the night. "Yonder. See a fire next that rock? That's him."

Breck did not rise at once. He wanted the companionship of these men and a share in their talk. But none spoke; no one looked his way. Presently a cowboy stood up, went to a bed roll and began to pull off his boots. Another followed.

"Well," said Breck, moving over to his horse, "sorry I wasn't hungry. Thanks again."

After he had ridden a short distance from camp, he looked back. The two cowboys had left their bed rolls and were returning to the fire.

He found J. G. Jackson sitting with his back against a granite boulder, alone, a gray-haired veteran of the cow country, hard-faced in the flicker of firelight. But when he dismounted and came close to the man, that hardness was gone.

Jackson's greeting was the usual, "Howdy, Ranger. Have you yet?"

Breck sat down across the fire from him, laughing. "This sure is a well-fed country. I've just turned down one meal."

"Ain't no call for a man to go hungry up here," Jackson asserted. He paused over lighting his pipe, then added, "No matter who he might be."

For a moment Breck hated the thought of duty. Here was friendliness, a time for listening to an old timer's yarns. Devil take the cow! Yet the job drove him.

"Jackson," he said, "I have just brought down more than a hundred head from the saddle."

The old man's eyes twinkled over his pipe bowl. "That so? Hell! You oughtn't to have took the trouble."

"I guess they're strays," said Breck.

"Yeah, I reckon so."

"With a night rider behind them," Jackson put down his pipe. "Meanin' which?"

"They were being shoved out of Rock House before the night."

"Any of my stuff among 'em?"

"More than half the bunch."

A low chuckle, rumbled from the cowboy. "By God! That was better than I thought." He ended suddenly, squinted, then, asked, "You mean you brought 'em back?"

Look here, Ranger, I've got a thousand head yonder in the meadow. My permit calls for eight hundred and fifty. Somebody's figures has got to be wrong."

"Not this year," Breck replied. "Don't blame me, Jackson. I'm following orders, that's all. But tomorrow I'm bound to go by the count."

"Just how come," Jackson demanded slowly, "this sudden stick-in-to rule?"

"Too many rules being broken in these mountains, I suppose," Breck offered. "I'm new, but Cook's old in the game and he must know what he's about. We have to start somewhere. As far as we can do it, rules are going to be enforced to the letter."

Jackson surveyed him speculatively. "All of 'em?"

"Yes."

"Everywhere?"

"In this forest."

"And that takes in the Sulphur country?"

"Along with the rest."

"Well," said Jackson flatly, "I don't believe it! You'll count us poor devils on our cattle, but when it comes to law enforcin' in other parts, that's another thing. They've got the money!"

"There's no answer," Breck admitted, "except wait and see. You have my word for it, and if you don't know me, you do know Cook."

Jackson nodded. "Cook was a cowboy once." He said no more, as if that statement carried a meaning of brotherhood.

"Then you'll admit he's right in following the limit rule?" Breck asked.

"No!" Jackson exploded. "Some years there ain't enough feed on these meadows. Again there's too much. Take all you can get, while you can get it—that's what I say!"

"And in a short time have the mountains bare," Breck added, bringing up a lesson he had learned from Dad Cook.

"What of it?" Jackson retorted. "Ain't no money in the cattle business anyway!"

"These mountains aren't only for cattle," Breck argued. "If you clean off the grass, what have the tourists got?"

"To hell with them dudes!" Breck laughed through the smoke of his pipe. "This forest is reserved for everybody. Jackson, if you had ever been jammed in a city, you'd know what it means to get up here, even for one week's vacation."

"You can't talk dudes to me," the cowboy broke in. "Give me my way and I'd tear out every damned tourist pasture and make it open season on pack trains!"

For a time they smoked together. "So you're enforcin' the permit rule tomorrow?" Jackson asked.

He nodded.

The cowboy shrugged a pair of lean shoulders. "Maybe you know I've been elected range boss for this summer, and so I speak for all the outfits. You've started somethin'." He delivered this statement without anger, wholly matter-of-fact.

Breck answered the same way. "Yes, and we're going to see it through."

CHAPTER XI

"If a man makes trouble this year, his permit won't be granted for next. That's your order."

"All right, Cook," Breck cut off his connection and closed the telephone box. He had called headquarters to learn his exact authority for this day's work. Cook's answer was plain enough.

Turning from the instrument, he looked off across the meadow. Dawn had scarcely broken through the night, with only a faint gray over the eastern summit; yet breakfast smoke drifted up from the camps, and wranglers were loping out to gather in the horses.

Soon came a thunder of running hoofs as the animals raced down from the slopes and were made unwilling prisoners in the corral. Other men approached afoot, roped their mounts, saddled and trotted away. Sticks beating against tin pans echoed from camp to camp, and then the welcome call: "Come and get it!"

Breck hurried through his own meal, feeling a keen excitement and eager to begin. By the time he had caught up Kit from the pasture, the cattlemen were already at their job of cutting out.

The groups grew steadily. Men shouted. Cattle bellowed; the brown mass began to mill, sending up a pall of dust that hung in a breathless sky. Sunrise struck it and for one moment turned the cloud to gold.

Breck rode to where a short runway of logs broke the drift fence, tied Kit, and mounted the top bar. Here he would make his count as the bunches passed. His glance went over the riders, picking out young Tillson astride his chestnut, Jackson, the range boss, sitting his horse on a knoll and keeping an eye on the work, and then the one he was really looking for.

She was in the middle of the drive, cutting out with the best of the bunches, rope swinging, falling dextrously, only the smallness of her figure marking her apart from the men. With increased wonder Breck watched the movement of her blue horse; sudden lunges ahead, a wheel to the right, back again, following every sharp turn of a cow that refused to leave the herd. Through it all she sat in effortless ease.

It was more than an hour before any of the bunches showed signs of being completed. Then Jackson rode to the fence.

"Well, Ranger," he said, "guess I'm set."

"Let's go," he sprang down, pushed back a pole that had blocked the runway, and Jackson came through. Together they climbed to the top log and sat side by side. Breck took out a notebook, reading Jackson's brand and number. 880. From his pocket he drew a short pine stick and mechanical counter. Jackson waved to his punchers and the first lot of animals moved to the fence.

They bunched at the runway, heads down, holding back. A cow hand rode in, lashing the first ahead, and with the leader started the rest, followed through the narrow space between the logs. Breck counted rapidly, reached ten, passed the stick to Jackson. At the same time he pressed the mechanical trigger.

In time he looked at his recording instrument. Eighty showed there, meaning eight hundred, for he had pushed it only once every ten animals. Eighty-five came. He held it out to Jackson. The old man's face tightened. Eighty-six; then eighty-seven. Twenty over the limit. Breck leaped down and dragged the pole across the runway.

Slowly Jackson descended beside him. "There ain't any use talkin' I suppose?"

Deep concern in the man's face moved Breck. "I'm sure," he answered. "But I've got to do it. You know what's happened here on this range; you know we've got to enforce every rule of quit the job."

Jackson looked beyond the drift fence to where a hundred steers still remained on the wrong side. The work of cutting out had stopped and other men were riding in. They halted off some distance, faces set, eyes fixed gloweringly. But none spoke, for Jackson was the appointed range boss, and all outfits must go by his word.

Breck knew what might be done. He was alone against the lot. They could easily stampede the whole drive past him and scatter them over the range. He saw sudden gestures among a few of the men, watched them draw together in heated talk, and knew they were arguing of that way. Yet if Jackson had the same thought, he gave it little consideration, for next year would be another story. Grazing would be closed.

Presently he mounted his horse, and without a word rode over to the group. Breck saw him shake his head. In a moment the crowd separated, one coming alone to the runway. He tied his horse and climbed to the top log. "I'm next."

The count went on. Most of the brands were within their limit, only the larger ones running over. Those animals Breck turned back were pushed off to one side, where the herd began to take size.

In a full between counts Louise Temple rode her horse to the fence, halted and surveyed him intently. From his position his eyes were level with hers, meeting them across the top of a handkerchief.

"Do you know what you're doing?" she asked.

Breck, glad to see her, had smiled, but now turned serious. "If you mean my job," he answered, "yes, I know exactly what I'm doing."

She jerked down the handkerchief impatiently. Breck saw the desperation in her face. "I don't mean your job," she said. "You've got your rules and you've probably studied them. I mean do you know what you're doing to these men? They can't turn their cattle back?"

"Then why did they bring them here?" Breck asked. "They all had warning." He had seen a form letter that Cook had sent out in the spring. It had said with emphasis: "The permit rule will be enforced this year."

"Why did they do it?" he persisted.

The girl shrugged, meeting his eyes with a flash of defiance. "Everybody gets by the Forest Service!"

She did not mean to insult. It was simply a statement of fact. Inwardly Breck gasped.

There was something of her defiance in his own voice when he answered. "Sort of a game up here, is it? Putting things over on the new ranger?"

"Don't be foolish."

"I'm not; I'm dead serious. You must have received one of Cook's letters. Do you expect me to sit here and do nothing? A fine egg I'd be!"

For one long moment Louise searched him, and he believed she saw his point. But when it came her turn to go through the count, she sent Palo, the Indian boy, to sit beside him on the top log. In the end he refused eighty of her steers and they were added to the growing band.

By noon he had counted, thousands. Bunches that had been passed were vanishing up the canyons toward their various ranges. Only a few more outfits remained behind the Rock House fence, and of these the greatest number wore the Tillson brand.

They came up for count almost at the end of things. It was Jud who climbed up to check with him. Neither spoke as the stream flowed by. Breck wondered if there would be some extras in this lot, and doubted it. That didn't seem the Tillson way. Too small a matter for them. His eyes burned, he was dizzy from looking down upon that seemingly endless movement. Yet the end came.

One thousand. He glanced at his notebook, found the brand, checked the number. Then he faced Jud.

"What's this? Your permit calls for fifteen hundred."

"I know it. We figured that many, but didn't bring 'em."

Breck waved toward the band of outcasts, suddenly relieved. "Then you'll have to let that lot go in your range."

"Sure," said Jud. "Sure they can—if they want to." He climbed from the fence and strolled over to his horse.

Breck saw Jackson not far off and beckoned to him. "I've got a range for your leftovers," he stated, when the man came. "Tillson's short."

For a brief interval the old man studied him with squinting eyes. "Thanks. Might as well feed 'em to the coyotes in the first place!"

Variety of Metals Mark

Marriage Anniversaries

Married couples who reach the happy time when they have been married 25 or 50 years celebrate these two anniversaries as their silver and their golden wedding, respectively, and the husband is supposed to give his wife a present of the metal named. Other metals are deemed suitable for lesser anniversaries; the longer the length of time the more valuable the metal.

The first year's anniversary is the iron wedding, the fifth the copper, the tenth the tin. As the supply of metals won't go round, other substances are chosen by those who like to celebrate almost every recurring marriage date, observes a writer in London Tit-Bits magazine. So we have paper for the second, leather for the third, wool for the seventh, and silk for the twelfth, the fifteenth crystal and the twentieth china, pearl and ruby for the thirtieth and fortieth, the diamond is the sixtieth anniversary, and the platinum the rarely-reached seventieth.

Queen Victoria was, on one occasion, asked to mark the seventieth wedding anniversary of two old subjects by conferring on them some mark of royal favor. She refused, however, saying that she considered 75 years the diamond period. Not everyone agrees on the appropriate gift; many call the first anniversary cotton, the fifth, wooden; the fifteenth, copper. But all are agreed about silver and gold.

Evolution of Rocks Is Mainly Chemical Action

The evolution of rocks of various "species," as set forth in the theory of crystal fractionation, is mainly a chemical process, according to an authority at the Geophysical laboratory, Carnegie Institution of Washington. It is assumed that all igneous rocks had as their common "ancestor" an enormous mass of molten, perhaps plastic, material deep within the earth. Chemically, this primordial rock stuff, called magma, is believed to have been predominantly basic, rather than acidic, containing large quantities of lime, iron, magnesia, and other bases.

Columns of this magma occasionally rose very slowly into higher levels of the earth's crust, where pressure is less intense and temperatures are lower. Some came to rest within the crust and some issued forth as lava flows at the surface. As the magma cooled, some of its molten elements reached temperatures which compelled them to unite in definite molecular combinations and to separate from the liquid as solid mineral crystals, which sank or rose, depending on their weight, relative to that of the magma. Igneous rocks are aggregates of such crystals.

This crystallization followed a definite sequence analogous to the "evolution of animal species." First the basic elements crystallized out into minerals, forming such basic rocks as basalt, commonly known as trap rock, while the last elements to crystallize were alkalis and silica, forming such acidic rocks as granite. Between these two extremes came intermediate stages, in which rocks containing varying amounts of bases and alkalis were formed.

Carrying the analogy with evolution further, those who support the theory say that after the "higher" types of rocks—those richest in alkalis and silica—have been formed they will not hybridize with "lower" types—the dark-colored rocks rich in iron, lime and magnesia. Study of rocks indicates that such "reversion to type" has actually taken place.

Use of Word "American"

Began Early in History

There are several reasons why the inhabitants of the United States have practically appropriated the name "American" to the exclusion of other nations on the North and South American continents. The process of appropriation was unconscious and began early in our history, notes a writer in the Indianapolis News. Even before the Revolution when Europeans used the term "American" they generally referred to the English colonists. Patrick Henry said in the Continental Congress:

"I am not a Virginian but an American." We were the first independent nation in the Western hemisphere and there was no other nation to protest. Our size and commercial importance made it easy to appropriate the name to ourselves, and usage in nearly all parts of the world has confirmed it, although in a few countries, notably Spain, it is still customary when speaking of Americans to designate whether the term applies to North or South Americans. There is also another consideration.

The official name of this country is "The United States of America," and it is the only name of a country in the New World containing the word "America." The first part of the name does not lend itself readily to a modified form as a name for the inhabitants corresponding to "Canadian, Mexican, Peruvian, Italian, Spaniard or German." Any such noun based on or formed from "United States" would be awkward. It was natural, therefore, for the people of the United States to apply to themselves a name already familiar, one formed from the last word in the name of their country. In like manner the citizens of the United States of Brazil call themselves Brazilians, and the citizens of the United States of Venezuela call themselves Venezuelans.

The Cape Verde islands are off the west coast of Africa and consist of ten islands and five islets, the capital being at Praia.

Origin of Christening Ships

In ancient times when a new ship was launched the libation (or pouring out of wine) was practiced, consecrating the ship to the god whose image she bore. The action of blessing ships is alluded to by the Monks of St. Denis, and there are records of ship christenings from July, 1418, when the bishop of Bangor was sent to Southampton, England, to bless the King's ships for successful voyages. On October 30, 1799, the Constitution, first U. S. Navy ship launched, was christened by an officer who broke a bottle of wine over her prow. The practice of christening ships has thus developed gradually into a recognized custom, and champagne is probably used for the ceremony because it is a rare wine and suitable, therefore, for such an important occasion.

Ancient Drums of India

The drum is something more, in India, than a musical instrument—it occupies an important place in Indian myth and legend. The most ancient of these drums is the mridanga, the two heads of which are made of parchment and tuned by braces. A mixture of flour and water is frequently applied to the head to increase the volume, and the drum is played with the fingers. Among primitive peoples the drum is used as a medium for transmitting signals, news and other types of messages. Some of them can be heard for a distance of six miles, and one small instrument, not two feet high, has been known to send its sound for 10 miles.

Speed of Arrows and Bullets

The range and speed of an arrow cannot begin to compare with that of a rifle bullet. An arrow leaving the bow such as deer hunters use travels at a speed of from 120 to 135 feet per second, while the bullet from a 30-30 sporting rifle has a muzzle velocity of approximately 2,000 feet per second. The killing range of the arrow is seldom over 60 yards, while a rifle bullet has a range upward of 300 yards, but the usual kill is made from about 20 yards.

England's Old Capital

The capital of England at the time of the Wessex Kings—Winchester—was once the city of King Alfred. It saw the parliaments of William the Conqueror and Edward the Confessor's coronation and ranked in importance with London in medieval times. All that remains of its former greatness is the cathedral—the longest Gothic church in Europe.

Water Given Off by Oak Tree
The Garden Encyclopedia says that the average oak tree during its five active months gives off about 28,000 gallons of water.

Oddities in Bermuda

Nature has showered a choice group of "believe it or not" on the Bermuda islands. Oddities in fruit and flowers include the following: The thistle plant with yellow flowering, altogether unlike the American thistle. It has no thorns and is tender enough to be eaten by rabbits and fowl. The travelers' tree, so called because it gives drinkable water when tapped. The monkey puzzle tree, so called because its trunk is covered with thorns and is therefore unclimbable. The air pine vine which grows only upon boards, wires, dead wood, and tin. The small vine, "rock sample," which many natives brew as a substitute for tea and coffee. The dried calabash. Hang it in a tree and the wrens will take possession of it as a home.

Destroyed Many War Planes

Baron von Richtofen of Germany was reputed to have destroyed 80 enemy planes during the World war.
