Local Committee Joins Fight Against Paralysis

Chelsea, will join in the celebration of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's 58th birthday by cooperating with thousands of other communities throughout the nation in the raising of funds for the fight against infantile paralysis.

Mrs. W. R. Daniels has been named chairman of the local drive for funds, and others on the committee are Mrs. F. W. Merkel, Mrs. W. H. Kusterer, Mrs. A. L. Brock, Mrs. P. C. Maroney, Mrs. A. W. Wilkinson, Mrs. M. W. McClure, Miss Leda Lindenschmidt, Sister Marie Cecile, Thomas Bust and H. D. Witherell.

On Monday, January 22, one thousand birthday cards will be mailed by the committee to residents of Chelsea and surrounding community. These cards contain spaces for any number of dimes up to ten. Those who wish to contribute may place their dime or dimes in the card, and mail it according to instructions on the card, to President Roosevelt.

In addition to the birthday card system for donations, contribution boxes have been placed in local business places by Mr. Witherell. There will also be a contribution box at St. Mary school in charge of Sister Marie Cecile; one at Chelsea high school, in charge of Mr. Bust, one in the grades in charge of Miss Lindenschmidt, and one at Cassidy Lake Tech. school. Children in the schools who donate will receive tabs which they may fasten on their clothing.

Founders certificates may be obtained by anyone who cares to contribute $5.00 or more, and membership certificates will be given to those paying $1.00 to $5.00. These contributions should be paid directly to any member of the local committee. There will be no personal solicitation. Names of all who contribute $1.00 or more will be published in The Standard.

Fifty per cent of funds paid to the local committee or sent directly to Washington will be received by the Washtenaw county chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Inc., for the fight against infantile paralysis in this county.

Legion Raises Funds For County Ambulance

Culminating a successful campaign conducted by the American Legion for contributions for a mobile emergency unit to be given to the Washtenaw county sheriff's department, representatives of the Legion posts, at a meeting held last week Wednesday night in Saline, approved the purchase and placed an order for the car with the Ford Motor Co., Detroit. It will be placed in service in about 30 days. Commander Lyle Christwell and Julius Eisele, of the Chelsea Post, were represented at the meeting.

The new car will be known as the "Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department Mobile Emergency Unit", which name will be inscribed on the car. It will be folkstone gray. The car will be equipped with cots for transportation, when necessary, of injured persons, and with such emergency equipment as oxygen tanks, grappling hooks, gas masks, first aid kits, blankets, fire extinguishers, acetylene torch, stretchers, splints, and ladders. It is planned to place the combination inhalator and resuscitator of the sheriff's department in the car and radio facilities and photographic equipment also are planned. The cost is estimated at $1,200.

Most of the equipment will be installed as soon as the car arrives, but some will have to await further accumulation of funds and contributions still will be received by Mr. Tappe at the Ann Arbor Trust Co. The Ann Arbor post of the American Legion headed the campaign for the emergency unit and had the co-operation of the other Legion posts in raising the funds.

Poultry Specialist Will Speak At Night School

Next Wednesday night, January 24, Chelsea high school's agricultural evening school will finish their livestock feeding discussions by hearing Mr. Shear, a poultry specialist from the extension department of Michigan State College.

Meetings have already been held to discuss problems in feeding sheep, horses, hogs, beef cattle and dairy cattle.

While this is the last of the feeding discussions there will be more meetings on Diseases and Soils. These meetings will be held each Wednesday night at 8:00, at the high school.

POLICE CHIEF TAKING COURSE

Waldemar Grossman, local Chief of Police, has enlisted in an officers' training course, sessions of which are being held in Ann Arbor once each week. The instruction deals in principles and practices of a police department and is open to police chiefs of Washtenaw county. James W. Parry of Lansing, chairman of the State Advisory Committee for Police Training, is in charge of the training school.

MAY RETAIN TAX SALE HOMES

Old people, widows and persons who are incapacitated and who have homes which are up for tax sale February 14, 1940, may be permitted to retain their homes, as tenants, if the State Land Office Board is formally requested by the township or welfare board or city council.

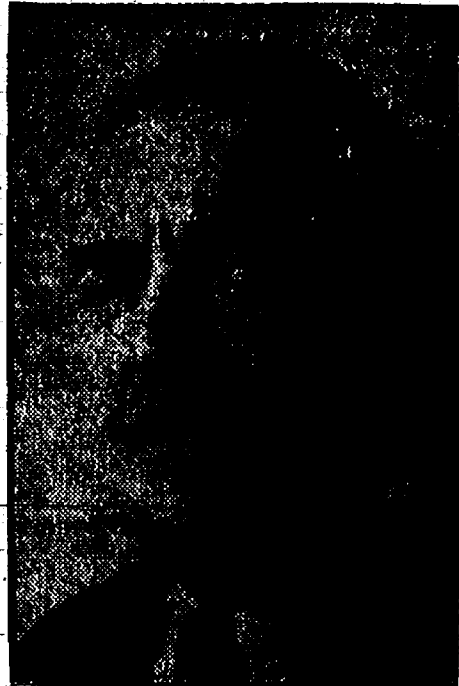

Any person who is about to lose his home should apply immediately to the County Bureau of Social Aid or other welfare agency for certification of the need for exemption. The county welfare official will, in turn, present the documents to the proper board.

Masonic Banquet Will Be Held Friday Night

Plans are complete for the 75th anniversary banquet of Olive Lodge, No. 156, F. and A. M., which will be held at the public school auditorium on Friday evening of this week.

Ticket sales indicate that a capacity crowd of about 300 will be present for the banquet, which will be served at 6:30 by the senior class of the high school.

The principal speaker of the evening will be Francis B. Lambie of Midland.

FRANCIS B. LAMBIE

Worshipful Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of the State of Michigan. Entertainment will consist of a floor show, to be staged by Hazel Bennett and His Gang, from Detroit. Dancing will follow, with music by a Detroit orchestra.

Added Police Protection Given Village Residents

According to village officials, the protective service to residents of the village is being increased to give them police protection if they leave town for any length of time. If the police department is notified by residents who plan to be absent from their homes, regular trips of inspection will be made to the premises.

The police headquarters phone number is 285. This is the phone in the council room which controls the new signal light for officers. Mr. Craven's home phone is 222-R, and Mr. Grossman's home number is 223-J. Call any of these numbers in case of emergency, or for any necessary information.

It is pointed out by village authorities that about $500 is received from the State Liquor Control Commission as the village's portion of liquor license fees paid locally. This money is designated for use in police protection, aiding materially in the increased cost of local law enforcement, which is neglected in many other towns.

MANY ATTEND "OPEN HOUSE"

More than three hundred people attended the open house held Sunday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Daniels at the new residence on Washington street which they have just completed. There was much interest in the fine appointments embodied in the construction of the house, which has a large living room with dining alcove, study, kitchen and lavatory on the first floor, and two bedrooms, bathroom and convenient storage space on the second floor. The basement is also very modern, with forced-air heating plant, water softener, laundry tubs and fruit room. Chris Koch & Sons were in charge of construction work on the house. Mr. and Mrs. Philip Olin and family will occupy the house, and will move there next week.

"All-Michigan" Dinner Will Be Held Jan. 25

By Gene Allemen

Lansing—As the newspapers' salute to the Michigan food and tourist industries, whose 1939 cash incomes totaled nearly a half billion dollars, an "All-Michigan" dinner extraordinary will be given Thursday evening, Jan. 25, at Michigan State college in East Lansing.

Queens of the 1939 Cherry and Blossom festivals at Traverse City and Benton Harbor, respectively, will be present. Assisted by their court attendants, they will help serve choice Michigan fruit juices and foodstuffs.

It is to be an unusual demonstration, arranged by the Michigan Press association, of how self-sustaining Michigan is in the way of producing quality foods. The entire menu, with the exception of pepper, will consist of select meats, vegetables, and fruits. More than twenty state organizations are co-operating with the newspaper publishers' group and the state department of agriculture in the preparations.

The $300,000,000 tourist industry will be represented by managers of the four tourist associations. Spokesman for this growing "cash crop" will be J. Lee Barrett of Detroit. Honored guests will include Hugh Gray of Grand Rapids, Tom Marston of Bay City and George Bishop of Marquette, each one known state-wide for his contribution to the development of the year-round vacation and recreation business.

Many Attend Exhibit Of Conservation Dept.

The cooperative effort of the Chelsea public schools and the Chelsea Rod and Gun club resulted in a very satisfactory showing of the Department of Conservation's exhibit that was on display at the Chelsea high school gymnasium on Monday, January 15.

The exhibit was open all afternoon to the school children of the community and in the evening to adults. The exhibit contained very fine mounted specimens of the birds and fish that are native to Michigan. Among its other features were the different species of reptiles and samples of fur from the fur bearing animals.

Moving pictures showing the work of the Conservation Department, as well as many of the scenic beauties of Michigan were shown several times during the afternoon and evening.

C. J. Tinker, in charge of the exhibit, stated that more than 100 children and adults attended.

FIRE DESTROYS BUILDING

The fire department was called to the farm of Mrs. E. W. Daniels at North Lake shortly after eight o'clock Tuesday morning. A spark from the motor on the pump set fire to the pump house, which burned to the ground. The building was just 15 feet from the barns and the firemen prevented the fire from spreading to the nearby buildings. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Glenn reside on the farm.

State Treasury Deficit
Continues To Increase

"Michigan's Auditor General some weeks ago issued a blunt statement to the effect that the state's finances were rapidly being embroiled in red ink and that if a halt was not soon called on expenditures the result would be far from pleasing at the end of the fiscal year," says Ernest T. Conlon, general manager of the Chamber of Commerce of Michigan.

"This pronouncement came as a disagreeable surprise to taxpayers generally and more particularly to the leaders of the political party with which Brown is affiliated. To protests from other officeholders, he declared that he knew exactly what he was talking about and that, regardless of how anybody felt about this publicity, the public had a right to know the facts.

"Despite the Auditor General's warning there has been no appreciable attempt at economy. The only cut that has been made in the last few months has been where widows' and children have borne the impact of peculiarly inept curtailment.

"In his latest statement Brown points to a $30,000,000 deficit in the general fund inherited from a previous administration and says that, unless remedial action is promptly taken, it will be $2,000,000 greater at the end of the fiscal year.

"The Chamber of Commerce of Michigan is not interested in politics. The question with its directors is not what administration rolled up the previous deficit or what political party is amassing the new one.

"What it does contend is that with taxation in the state an already tremendous burden, those in charge of state finances should immediately make an intelligent and determined effort to do away with any possibility of a deficit.

"The sales tax this year will bring in millions more to the state coffers than any preceding year. This levy was supposed at the time of its adoption to be only temporary. Now it is evidently considered as a permanent impost, working a distinct hardship on thousands of our people, particularly those who are unemployed.

"And in the face of this slated deficit we have the spectacle of increased state payrolls, placed as high as $1,000,000 annually. In this connection we might say that state employees in the lower brackets are paid small salaries. The idea seems to be to get as many workers on the rolls as possible. Whether this has anything to do with practical politics on the eve of an election year is worthy of consideration.

"We have constant talk of governmental reform. Of course, this is only natural—a verbal sop to the taxpayers and the voters. No effective effort is being made to consolidate governmental functions or divisions. Officials have repeatedly been shown that if overlapping functions were abolished the saving would be great with more efficiency. Consolidation, would, of course, wipe out some political jobs. Perhaps that is why no serious effort is made on the part of governmental officials to bring it about.

"We have gone about this job of bringing reason to bear on this taxation problem, and we propose to continue our work until our objective is achieved."

"All-Michigan" Dinner
Will Be Held Jan. 25

symp. Dickinson is a connoisseur of this delicacy, producing it each spring on his Eaton county farm near Charlotte.

According to the federal crop reporting service, maintained at Lansing in cooperation with the state department of agriculture, the Michigan maple syrup industry produced 213,000 gallons in 1939, an increase of $2,000 gallons over 1938. The maple yield also produced 5,000 pounds of maple sugar for use principally in candies.

Michigan agriculture enjoyed a good year in 1939, having a total cash income of $131,748,000 compared with $119,746 for the previous year.

While the state is not generally regarded as being in the "corn belt," yet the corn crop headed the entire food list in 1939 with a total value of $31,449,000. Winter wheat was worth $11,340,000, while oats brought in $13,668,000.

Fruits and Juices

The growing importance of Michigan fruit juices as an outlet for huge surpluses is to be emphasized by the use of these fruit juices and two vegetable juices in the "All-Michigan" menu. The juices which offer a wide variety of vitamins with different appeals to the taste include apple, carrot, cherry, grape, and tomato.

The total value of Michigan fruit crops in 1939—apple, peach, pear, plum, cherries and grape—was $9,978,000, a substantial increase over the previous year.

Because Michigan is a leading fruit state, it is fitting that the importance of fruit to the state economy would be personalized by appearance of 1939 Cherry and Peach festival queens.

Poultry and Meat

Michigan's all important poultry and meat industries will also play a leading role in the publishers' enterprise.

Choice Michigan turkeys, supplied by the Michigan Turkey Producers Association, will be supplemented by a variety of select wild meats furnished by the nation's only farmers co-operative packing company.

Apple, cherry and pumpkin pies will be made the old-fashioned way with hard from Michigan's corn-hog belt, recognized as such by the federal government.

Field crops are to be in prominence with the famed, lowly bean, sugar beet, potato and peas providing satisfaction to meet the most discriminating gourmet's fancy. Composite supplies of these delicacies, furnished by growers' associations, come from more than 55 counties. Also of interest is the fact that the other 30 counties are to be represented on the unique menu.

Upper Peninsula

From the Upper Peninsula will come manufactured dairy products.

They will be in recognition of the growth of the dairy industry in this section above the Straits. Production of all cheese in the Upper Peninsula since 1921 has increased from 597,000 pounds to more than 9,000,000 pounds in 1939. Michigan now ranks third in the production of Italian cheese with more than 1,800,000 pounds, the manufacture of this cheese being entirely confined to the Upper Peninsula. During the past decade processing of condensed milk has been increased from 4,500,000 pounds to 13,260,000 pounds.

Last year, for the first time in history, Michigan jumped into first place in the production of honey. Through the state department of agriculture, drip canisters containing choice Michigan-produced honey will also tempt the appetite.

Approximately 25 different fruit and vegetable condiments, along with rolls and coffee, will go to complete this "All-American" tribute to the food industry. It will be a novel and noteworthy recognition of the part which Michigan agriculture plays in the state's economy.

Machinery for Finland
Aid Is Now Perfected

New York—Herbert Hoover, chairman of the Finnish Relief Fund, who has had some experience in organization work, has given, in 44 words, his formula for getting maximum efficiency through decentralization of authority. In appointing a divisional assistant, Mr. Hoover said:

"Our method of organization is to get a gentleman or lady who knows the job to be done, give them a desk and a pencil, endow them with authority, tell them the telephone number and let them do the job. Check back when necessary."

Mr. Hoover said that the task to date had been two-fold: 1. To get money to aid men too old to fight, and women and children who have been driven from their homes in the war zone, and 2. To set up an organization which would function as a collection agency at minimum cost.

He expressed himself as more than satisfied with the response of banks, newspapers, other organizations and the American public generally to the appeal for assistance for the Finnish people. He pointed out that the most important task was to get money to the homeless and hungry non-combatants as quickly as possible. With the organization of state committees nearing completion and with contributions from co-operating banks and newspapers arriving at headquarters at an increasing rate, Mr. Hoover absented himself from New York long enough to confer personally with state chairmen and others in the Middle West.

International organization has also been completed. Prof. Aimo K. Cajander, former Prime Minister of Finland, has been appointed to head the civilian relief committee in Finland.

Prof. Cajander, a professor of forestry at Helsinki University, was appointed by Finnish Prime Minister Risto Ryti to work in close cooperation with F. Dorsey Stephens, who was named by Mr. Hoover to act as liaison between the Finnish civilian committee and the Finnish Relief Fund.

Prof. Cajander will be in charge of administering funds received in America for relief of aged men and women and children non-combatants. He will advise with Mr. Stephens, a former member of the Religious Relief Commission, who will keep Mr. Hoover informed of needs of non-combatant sufferers. Mr. Stephens is already in Helsinki.

The Chelsea State Bank is cooperating by receiving contributions for forwarding to the Finnish Relief Fund headquarters. There is to be no personal solicitation. P. G. Schaible, chairman of the campaign here, reports that contributions so far have not been up to his expectations, although residents of the Methodist Old People's Home have been very generous in their contribution to the fund, with a total of $78.00.

WILL OBSERVE FAMILY NIGHTS

One of the objectives of the five districts of the Washtenaw-Livingston Council for 1940 is that efforts will be made to better acquaint parents with the purposes, methods, and outcomes of Scouting experiences. Looking toward this informing of parents, four Districts have already set up plans for Scout and Family night programs to which the entire family will come and bring a basket supper and enjoy a Scouting program together.

The Ypsilanti District leads off with their Family Night program on Tuesday evening, January 23, to be followed by similar gathering on the part of the Troops of Saline, Milah, Willis, Whitaker (the Southeast District) on Wednesday evening, Jan. 31. On Lincoln's birthday, Monday, February 12, all the Troops of the Middle District (Ann Arbor, Bixboro, and Saline) and their parents will gather at 6:00 p. m. in the lunch room of the Ann Arbor high school for a Family Night supper followed by a Court of Honor and program of special interest. The Troops of Manchester, Bridge-water, Chelsea, Dexter (the Copeland District) will hold their Family Night dinner on Thursday evening, March 14, in the Chelsea school.

Many interesting editorials have been printed on safe driving. I enjoy immensely the fine instructive comments so many editors make on the necessity of safe driving, and I appreciate their contribution to the cause of safety.

Recently, the editor of the Isanti News, Isanti, Minnesota, wrote the following:

"Upon returning from an automobile trip the other evening, we sat down at the typewriter in a state of veritable frenzy. Foam dripping out of the corners of our mouth, we pounded out the following lines of despair with clenched fists:

"Oh, that some wise jury would see fit to drive Every nocturnal driver Who won't dim his lights!"

Very appropriate, very timely. Let us set the example by dimming our lights eventually some of these "dumb clucks" will realize that that is the courteous thing to do.

Methodist Home

At a service held in the Home on Sunday afternoon of January 7, Rev. Edwin Stephens of Stockbridge brought the message of a communion service, and in that connection read one of his original poems which was highly appreciated, and which by request we publish as follows:

Adversity

I saw a ship go sailing by,
Her tall masts pointing toward the sky
While fair winds kissed her clean, white sails,
And seamen leaned against her rails.

The ocean's bosom rose and fell
As though it breathed, each gentle swell.
Seemed like the heaving of the breast
Of one asleep in quiet rest.

Then, as the ship sailed out of sight,
I mused, and wondered if the night
Would find the ocean, wind and wave,
Still kind to ship and sailors brave.

I wondered if the sea would stay
Through all the voyage, just that way,
No storm, no howling tempest's rage,
The gallant sailor to engage.

Time passed; the ship returned again,
With tattered sails and battered men,
And then I knew that wind and wave
Like maddened demons rise and rage.

They pounce upon their harried prey,
Bent on destruction in the fray;
Kipping the sails and splintering masts
With fierce, recurring, thund'rous blasts!

Again I mused: 'Tis just like life;
Men pass from peace to storm and strife,
The tides that bear them forth today,
Tomorrow sweep the other way.

Fair winds may blow and fill the sails,
But soon they change to raging gales;
And, blinded by the hissing spray,
Men grope along life's stormy way.

Weak souls are harrassed, deluged,
Lost;
The brave hold fast, though tempest-tossed;
Faith holds them fast 'till victory
Is wrung from stern adversity.

Thus, in the midst of raging storm,
Brave souls maintain their fighting form;
And, homeward bound, when storms are past,
They reach God's haven safe at last.

BRIGHTON—Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Stegenga had the novel experience last week of having to stop their car near the William A. Adams home in Pleasant Valley, by cross traffic consisting of a couple of deer, a buck and a doe, which crossed the road just in front of the machine. The deer ran off across the fields and disappeared out of sight. People living in the Valley say it is no uncommon occurrence to see deer occasionally, and they think that there is a small herd of them living in the vicinity.—Arkus.

WILLIAMSTON—Arrangements are nearly completed for the starting of drilling operations on the first of three test wells to be drilled for oil in the vicinity of Williamston. With about 8,000 acres under lease in this area, the favored area seems to be between Williamston and Okemos and it is here that it is planned to drill three test wells. It is thought likely that one may be drilled near the center of Meridian township, and two other tests are planned in Williamston township.—Enterprise.

GRASS LAKE—Earl Marvin received word last Wednesday of the tragic death of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Marvin, in St. Petersburg, Fla., following a fire in the house next door on Tuesday night. It is believed Mrs. Marvin, 72, died Wednesday of shock caused by the fire, and Mr. Marvin, 74, who had recently suffered a stroke, had died in a hospital of severe burns on Thursday. The Marvins resided here for many years where Mr. Marvin manufactured cement blocks. They went to Florida about 10 years ago. Besides Earl, two other sons survive, one in St. Petersburg and one in Colorado. Earl, son Allen, and Clifton Marvin, Detroit, left for Florida last Thursday. Private funeral services were held Saturday with burial in Royal Palm cemetery there.—News.

DEXTER—The engagement of their daughter, Miss Fern Widmayer, to Charles F. Morrison of Hartland and Ypsilanti, was announced at a recent family dinner by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Widmayer of 8127 Baker Rd. Miss Widmayer graduated from Michigan State Normal College and is now teaching at Plymouth. Mr. Morrison, who also is a State Normal graduate, is teaching at Hartland. No date has been set for the wedding.—Leader.

PLYMOUTH—Buffalo stew, made from the choice cuts of "John", the biggest buffalo on Schrader's buffalo ranch, seven miles west of Plymouth, will provide the main dish for the annual All-American Lincoln Day banquet of Wayne county Republicans to be held Monday, February 5 at the Mayflower hotel, according to an announcement made this week. The committee is eliminating fried salt pork and corn meal mush from the menu this year because of the generosity of Fred D. Schrader who is donating the biggest buffalo on his ranch for this affair. It will be made into buffalo stew for the banquet.—Mail.

Question And Answer Dept.

Problem—"Close the door!" angrily called out a housewife. "That's not a door," retorted the husband. "If it isn't," the wife replied, "what is it?" Now can the reader tell us what it is? (Answer elsewhere in this department.)

Ques—What is jello made of?
Ans—The exact constituents of jello are a trade secret. It is said, however, that jello consists largely of sugar and gelatin, in addition to water and flavoring substances.

Ques—Why is "Johnny cake" so called?
Ans—This form of corn bread was a favorite diet of the Shawnee Indians, who lived in Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Ohio. They took corn and crushed it to the consistency of ordinary cornmeal, mixed it with water and baked it on very hot stones. The white people called it "Shawnee" cake. In later years "Shawnee" was corrupted into "Johnny" by those who did not know its origin.

Ques—Has there ever been a Jew in the President's cabinet?
Ans—Yes, Oscar Solomon Straus, secretary of Commerce and Labor in Theodore Roosevelt's cabinet, was a Jew.

Ques—Has Ireland a language of its own?
Ans—The native Irish language is "Erse", which is closely related to the Celtic languages still spoken in parts of Wales and Scotland. An attempt is being made by the Irish Free State to revive Erse.

Ques—I cannot conceive that there is so-and-so to the mighty expanse of space, and yet I cannot conceive what is beyond, if there is an end of space. Can you help me clear it up?
Ans—Sorry to say, we cannot. The vast expanse of space is one of the many phenomena of Mother Nature. It is not known and never will be known. The less we trouble our minds with it, the better off we'll be.

Answer to problem: It is obvious the door is ajar (a jar).

Ques—What is water made of?
Ans—Water is made of two gases—hydrogen, which is the gas used to fill balloons, and oxygen, which is the gas we breathe in the air. Water is a combination of these two gases, not a mere mixture of them. Two atoms of hydrogen both firmly united to one atom of oxygen will produce water.

Ques—What are the colors of the rainbow? And what can I do to remember them without writing them down?
Ans—The seven colors of the rainbow are: Blue, yellow, violet, indigo, green, orange, and red. Just memorize these two words: "by vigor". Each letter stands for one of the seven colors.

Ques—Can you tell me how old Anne is?
Ans—The same age as her twin sister, if she won't tell you.

Ques—How old is the ex-Kaiser Wilhelm, who is now in exile in Holland?
Ans—The ex-Kaiser was born on Jan. 27, 1859. Therefore, he is 81 years of age.

Venice Has Largest Garage
Paradoxically, Venice, whose highways are canals, has the largest auto garage in Europe, having a capacity for 2,500 cars. They are the cars of all the folks who come to the report in them, but who cannot use them until they are ready to leave again.

First Samoan Library
A model of the first library ever built in American Samoa, this country's largest island outpost in the South Pacific, has been presented to the Smithsonian Institution by the navy department. The model represents, it is pointed out, what is probably one of the most unusual undertakings ever attempted by a United States naval officer. The library itself, the first culture center of the Samoan people, was built in 39 days under the supervision of Lieutenant Commander D. J. Holman. It follows in every detail the native Samoan styles of architecture and construction.

The Small Town

By Veach C. Redd
(Reprint from "Hardware Retailer")

The small town is a place where there is not much to see, but the things you hear make up for that. The small town is where everybody isn't three months behind with installment payments and where the wild life that stays up all night belongs to the cat family.

The small town is where you get the social status of the new family next door when you see the family wash on the line.

The small town is where the editor of the weekly paper gets results when he announces through his columns that he is out of potatoes.

I am not here to ridicule the small town. I live in one, myself, have spent 39 years in the retail business in them, and I like them. I have never envied any of my fellows who live in steel and concrete.

I have wondered what you would do for your bank presidents, the chairmen of your boards of directors, and your corporation executives if we did not send them to you from the small towns.

Most of the factories in this country would have to close down if the small town and rural buyers went on a strike. They are the real quantity and quality buyers of the country.

The small town made America what it is today, the envy of every other nation on the face of the globe, and the small town retailer has played his part.

Children In Court

By Judge Malcolm Hatfield
A Dangerous Philosophy

A peculiar kind of philosophy was unearthed in court when a teacher reported that a delinquent boy contended that he would be making a spectacle of himself if he were to prepare a lesson or answer a question correctly.

This youngster always guessed the wrong answer to every question. His instructors would have been amazed had he ever shown the remotest sign of interest in any school activities.

There is little doubt that the boy possessed more than average ability, because his intelligence quotient was 108. Why his parents permitted him to waste his time in school is beyond comprehension.

Somewhat this youngster had conceived the idea that it was exceedingly witty to assume a dunce-like attitude. Therefore, he proceeded to uphold the reputation he had made by always turning in blank pages whenever an examination was given. Being an exceedingly popular student it was not long before a half dozen other pupils had adopted the same tactics. When called upon by a teacher to explain a proposition, they, too, would stand with grins on their faces and flippantly reply, "Goosh, how should I know?" or "You've got me there, teacher." Of course, the entire class always chuckled at their witticisms.

The hands of the school authorities were tied, because each one of these boys belonged to prominent families who would not tolerate the suspension of their children. The entire group of students was finally brought into court for illegally catching a ride to a football game on a freight train. Even though their parents tried every conceivable method to persuade the judge to release them, he steadfastly refused and held the boys in the detention home for two weeks. On the day scheduled for their hearing he committed each one of the boys to the reformatory for three years and suspended further judgment.

Several days later, the boys sent word to the judge, through the matron of the detention home, that they had not realized how serious their case was and sincerely hoped that he would grant them and their parents an interview. At the end of three days they were permitted to appear in court again, where they promised not to fall below a "C" grading in any subject if the judge would only allow them to serve out their sentences at home. Realizing that he had accomplished his purpose, the judge, with a great show of reluctance, finally consented to their request and placed them on probation under the custody of their school superintendent. Three years later each of the boys graduated with honors.

One resolution it's not too late to make

NO matter what's happened to the rest of those first-of-the-year vows, there's still time to resolve to have yourself some fun this year with that power-packed, sure-fire pleasure producer—a slightly, sprightly, roadwise 1940 Buick.

You can put yourself behind a husky Dynaflex straight-eight that's a veritable tornado when it comes to going places—but actually silkier than watchworks in its smooth-and-easy freedom from vibration.

You can switch to gentle coil springs and never need another "lube job." You can discard the old-type gear lever for Handshift transmission that works with a finger-flick.

You can help yourself to room—the spacious expanse of the Buick Super's next-thing-to-five-feet front seats. You can ride in Foamtex cushion comfort, with Safety Plate Glass all around you and everything from a built-in automatic choke to Buick's exclusive Fore-N-Aft Direction Signal to make driving easy and convenient.

So why wait to get your Buick? Prices are low now—lower than on some sixes—and delivery is prompt. Your dealer has a full line to show, too, and your old car's worth more now than it will be later.

How about some action? Time's a-wasting, there's fun to be had—and there's a Buick waiting to hang your license plates on!

"Best buy's Buick!"

SEE YOUR NEAREST BUICK DEALER

The model illustrated is the Buick Super model 51 four-door touring sedan $1100 delivered at Flint, Mich. White sidewall tires additional.

Not a six but an EIGHT for $895 and up

Delivered at Flint, Mich. Transportation state and local taxes (if any), optional equipment and accessories extra. Price subject to change without notice.

Golden Gloves Training Starts At Cassidy Lake

By Stanley "Wahoo" Smith

Preparations for the forthcoming Golden Gloves Tournament in Jackson, Ann Arbor and Adrian, are under way at the Cassidy Lake recreation hall. Charles "Nanny" Van Houten has been coaching the boys since early in the fall season. Morey Hoffman and James Allen have brought out for the Chelsea Gloves entries out for workouts and bouts. The Chelsea boys have furnished a fine competitive edge for the final training sessions.

The club has a very promising group of aspirants competing in the tournament. In the class of hopefuls there are many greenhorns (novices) and slick-duck handlers (open). They are as follows:

Thomas (Sing Sing) Embury in the novice, who has had little previous experience, but packs a mean right. Willy (T. N. T.) Mallette in the novice, related to Mercury in regards to speed, and a clever blow thrower. Next in the novice is Everett "Zipp" George who looks a little green, but handles the left to the other fellows' disadvantage. Dale "Superman" Elliott in novice is nearly prepared for the bouts. Plenty of seasoning and lots of pep. Watch for this lad—he will go places. John "Basher" Guster, also a novice member, has fine footwork, and deals a wicked right.

Francis "Chief" Gowens, a light heavy novice, has the endurance and clever left jab. Charles "Jinx" Smith, a novice featherweight who had nice footwork and a powerful right to top it off—his dodging ability is worth bragging about. King "Val" Vasquez of the novice class, has what it takes to stick in with anything of anybody. Val has fair footwork and a right jab. Ronald "Sphinx" Wibirt, also in the novice class, has good footwork and deals both a right and a left jab. He has plenty of seasoning. Following in line in the novice is Gilbert "J. L. Sullivan" Baker, who has his old barroom style of cuffing. Next we have Zane "Jab" Hunter, also in the novice, who has neat footwork and plenty of style. William "Sluggo" Cottick, in the novice class, lives up to his dubbing and has his dogs. A dancing "Lloyd" "Lefty" Gotthardt of the novice is ready to exchange fist-cuffs. He lacks nothing, and carries a mean right.

In addition to those mentioned above we have Albert "Corps" Sylvester, winner of the District Gloves tournament in Jackson last year. "Corps" looks very promising again this year. He is to fight bantam weight in the open class. We also have Freddie "Dart" Martell in the bantam weight, open class. Dart was the winner of his weight and class last year at Ann Arbor and went to the finals in Grand Rapids. He has good footwork and handles both his hands well. Last but not least is Miles "Standish" Watson, another outstanding fighter. He is a novice who is going a long way this year. He not only fights physically but as well scientifically. A hard lad to beat.

The Cassidy Club hopes to take as many places as possible and will put forth every effort to conduct themselves as true sportsmen, as well as the Cassidy Spirit!

Our fifth grade geography class have completed the southern section of United States, and are now taking some place geography to see how well they know their map.

In music appreciation we are listening to records trying to pick out the different instruments of the orchestra.

Mrs. Robinson visited our school on Jan. 8, to listen to fifth grade geography, hear reports about Michigan geography studied by the eighth grade. She brought with her a case containing a pair of orioles and nest. They were interesting.

We wish to thank the school board for putting in an electric plate for our hot lunches. We receive the Federal Surplus for schools, and so far we have been having an apple and an orange a day. Now we are cooking our cereals. We all like hot lunches at noon.

We elected new officers in Health club this week for the remaining half year. President, Duane Hafley; vice-president, Leonard Quigley; secretary, Merle Leach; librarian for story books, Don Hafley, for reference library, Bernadine West.

We have a very good cartoonist in school, Leonard Quigley—maybe he will become a Bud Fisher.

JERUSALEM SCHOOL NEWS

The third term of school closed Friday for the Jerusalem school. The following were neither absent nor tardy: Lois Schlosser, Robert Trinkle, Genevieve Valant, Junior Barth, Joyce Hoffman, Wilma and Joan Koengeter, Norman Koch, Ruth, Dean, and Earl Guenther, Arlene Halst.

This has been a very busy term because of the Christmas work and program along with our regular work.

The president of our Civic Health club now is Robert Trinkle; the secretary is Joyce Hoffman. We are working on foods and teeth in our health now.

The Beginners are now having Phonics. They are making a picture seatwork book and are writing stories in it. The teacher has been reading stories to them and the first grade for their language.

The first grade is making a phonics and language seatwork book. Arlene Halst and Ruth Guenther, both of the first grade, have a reading certificate and star. We are all very sorry that Ruth broke her leg Saturday and will be out of school for some time.

Joyce Eismann of the third grade also has a reading certificate. All of us are expecting to get one before the end of the year.

The seventh grade have finished their colonial project.

The eighth grade have finished their Michigan Study. They made notebooks and learned many interesting facts about their state and about the important people of Michigan and the Indians of Washtenaw county.

The eighth grade also have their Nature Study projects all up to date and completed. We have had the rock collection from the State Department and have compared the rocks with the ones they found. They have mounted their evergreen samples, twigs and made snowflakes, a peep-hole camera and made several other experiments.

We have studied another picture and added it to our Picture Study Book.

We have some new books for our library which the teacher bought with our library money. They are all reading circle books.

We are all trying to improve in our knowledge of good literature. We are trying to read better books. We have enjoyed some famous poems the teacher has read to us.

We are busy now with music work, learning the songs and folk dances. Jan. 5 we listened to the broadcast over the radio of discussion of opera the world over. On Jan. 12 we heard the presentation of two acts from the opera Hansel and Gretel which is just what we are working on in our music appreciation this year. On Jan. 19 we hope to hear the third act of Hansel and Gretel.

We are constantly working to improve our English. The 7th and 8th grades have made some very good "Good English" posters and rhymes.

Mrs. Robinson visited our school on Jan. 10. She said she was well pleased with all we were doing. The 5th grade had a geography class while she was there.

Other visitors during the period were Arlene Koengeter and Jane Schlosser.

Optimistic Elder

George Butterworth of Bloomfield, N. J., a 70-year-old retired contractor, has paid cash-in-advance for a Florida hotel room for the next 30 years, says the American Magazine. Butterworth expects to get full value, because he figures that by taking things easy and going fishing he can live to be 100.

Egyptian Engineers

The engineering ability of the Egyptians of ancient times is indicated by the fact that the Great Pyramid outside Cairo is built of approximately 2,300,000 stones, each weighing more than a ton. Each of these was quarried some 300 miles up the river Nile and floated down on barges.

Extinct Volcanic Craters

Three extinct volcanic craters have been found in the Redwood Empire of northern California—Mt. Konocli in Lake county; Mt. St. Helena and Mt. Veeder in Napa county. While the region near the craters abound in mineral springs, steam geysers, and hot water springs, no recent volcanic action has been reported.

Giant Hoax

The Cardiff giant, which aroused such a storm of controversy a few years back, was really a hoax worked by an upstate New York farmer, who had the figure rough-hewn from stone and then buried. He later dug it up and pretended it was the petrified figure of a primitive giant.

Fishermen Are Taking Advantage of Thick Ice

Lansing—With thick ice forming fast on Michigan's inland waters, fishermen are losing no time in finding good locations for their shanties.

The spearing season on inland waters ends with the last day of February. Jacks or other artificial lights may not be used, and trout streams and certain other specified waters are closed to all spearing. Species which may be taken by spearing are carp, suckers, mullet, redhorse, sheepshead, lake trout, smelt, northern pike, muskellunge, whitefish, ciscoes, pike, or Menominee whitefish, catfish, bullheads, dogfish and gar pike.

Winter fishing is subject to the same license and creel regulations as apply to summer fishing, the fish division of the department of conservation points out, except that bluegills may not be taken through the ice at night, and in five southwestern counties non-residents are not permitted to fish through the ice from January 1 to the last Saturday in April. Since January 1, the new 1940 one-dollar license has been necessary.

Easter Seal Campaign Endorsed by Governor

Michigan has made rapid strides in the care of handicapped children. Much, however, remains to be done. There are hundreds of crippled children throughout the State in need of our combined efforts; there are many who can be cured of their afflictions; many who can be partially cured; and many who can be trained for useful citizenship despite their physical disability. All this, of course, is expensive.

What the State Government can do through its limited resources is not enough. Private contributions are necessary if the work is to be carried on to the needed extent. The State expends large sums of money in this work, but I realize it does not completely cover the field. Efforts of private organizations will always be necessary.

I cannot commend too highly the Michigan Society for Crippled Children, incorporated under the Laws of Michigan since 1921, and its sponsoring of the Seventh Annual Easter Seal Sale, to be conducted throughout the State from March 1 to March 24, inclusive. May I urge your support?

(Signed)
L. D. Dickinson, Governor.

Essay Contest In High Schools On "Parkway"

A high school essay contest designed to acquaint the people of southeastern Michigan with the issues involved in the proposed Detroit-Huron-Clinton Parkway plan was announced this week by the Committee of citizens sponsoring the project.

Legislative authorization for the establishment of a five-county parkway authority was granted in an act passed at the last session of the Legislature. A referendum provision in the act makes the creation of the inter-county parkway board dependent upon the approval of the voters in any two contiguous counties at the November elections.

Local and county-wide contests will be held in each of the five counties covered by the proposed plan—Macomb, Wayne, Oakland, Washtenaw and Livingston. Winners of the local contests will compete in the county contest and county winners will compete for the grand prizes offered for the best essays in the entire area. It is said that there will be more than 100,000 high school students in the area eligible to enter the contest. Generous prizes are being offered the winners.

"The contest was conceived by the committee as an excellent means of familiarizing people in the area with all phases of the project," said Dr. Curtis, secretary of the association, "so they may cast their ballots next November with full knowledge of the matter." It is part of our educational campaign to bring to the voters a realization of the need for a co-ordinated recreational plan for the 3,000,000 people living in the district.

The general plan of the parkway committee contemplates a series of parks, parkways, bathing beaches, wild life refuges and picnic grounds along the valleys of the Detroit, Huron, and Clinton Rivers, made easily accessible to the people of the area by limited-access highways.

The parkway authority, if established by the voters, would be an independent governmental unit for the planning, creation and maintenance of the parkway.

City Shares in Will

Benjamin Franklin, by his will dated June 23, 1789, bequeathed to the cities of Boston and Philadelphia alike the sum of 1,000 pounds sterling, "to be let out upon interest at 5 per cent per annum to such young married artificers, under the age of 35 years (later extended by the court to 35 years) as have served an apprenticeship in the said town, and faithfully fulfilled the duties required in their indentures."

The fund was to run for 100 years, at which time Mr. Franklin believed it would amount to 131,000 pounds.

He directed that 31,000 pounds should be continued to be let out at interest for another 100 years, and that 100,000 pounds should be "laid out in public works, fortifications, bridges, aqueducts, public buildings, baths, etc., or whatever may make living in the town more convenient to its people and render it more agreeable to strangers resorting thither for health or a temporary residence."

Ann Arbor Kiwanians Hold Sale This Week

The Ann Arbor Kiwanis club is holding its fifteenth annual sale this week Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Jan. 18, 19 and 20, at 314-316 South Main St., Ann Arbor. The entire proceeds of the sale are used to support the work of Kiwanis among the underprivileged children, a great portion of which work is for the children confined in University hospital, for which the Kiwanis club employs full-time teachers. Many of these children come from sections of the state other than Ann Arbor, and other communities have assisted in the Kiwanis club project in the past.

Last year's sale netted more than $2,000.00 and it is hoped by the club that they will realize a similar amount this year so that their work may be carried on without interruption. Both new and used merchandise is being donated by Kiwanians and their friends and the sale is conducted without any expense, all services in connection therewith being performed by Kiwanians without charge. The ladies of Kiwanis will furnish fresh baked goods for the sale and will also provide hot meals for the public during the sale days.

Anyone caring to contribute any merchandise for this worthy cause may call Ann Arbor phone 28295 and club members will call for the contribution.

Automobile's Wartime Value

According to Preston Grover, famed Washington correspondent, the automobile is about as effective a war weapon as the airplane. Trucks and autos are vital in moving an army swiftly. Tanks are one kind of motor car. It is significant that the U. S. today owns 68 per cent of the motor vehicles of the world, and that U. S. industry can produce an unlimited supply.

THE HI-LIGHT

U. High Defeats Chelsea

By Wayne Van Orman
Chelsea was defeated last Friday by a brilliant U. High team, 22-38. U. High turned on the pressure at the start of the game when she scored a basket before the Chelsea boys saw where the ball was. At the end of the first half U. High was way out in front, but Chelsea cut this lead in the third quarter to come within eight points of the victors. The game as a whole was not as uninteresting as the score showed.

Andy Pollock scored 9 points for Chelsea, while Wikel scored 9 points for U. High.

Chelsea's second team also lost by a 21-6 score.

Sixth Grade

Reporters: Bobby Robbins and Arthur Paul.

Anne Lamberton is sorry that she lost her news for last week. It is a good thing that the Sixth Grade has two reporters so they can get the news to the Chelsea Standard on time whenever a copy is lost.

January 9, 1940 we had a spell-down. Myra was the winner, but she did not come until near the end of the spell-down because she was at orchestra. So Anne would have won if Myra had not come.

The Sixth Grade has been learning twenty-two study habits, and are going to try to learn at least the first most important ones. Some already know them.

We are handing in our geography notebooks. Some of us could not make good letters so we used some squared paper to make our letters better. We are studying about British Lands in Asia now.

Joanne Shutes is going to bring a big calendar to school because we don't have one that we can see very well.

Our reading books were getting old and torn so some people fixed them. They mended them and put the numbers in white and covered them with shellac. The workers were Audrey White, Joanne Shutes, Barbara Eaton, Eldore Carlson, and June Vall. The people who could be depended on got the new books.

Eldore Carlson brought a dead screech owl to school before Christmas. We sent it to Dr. Max M. Peet in Ann Arbor on Dec. 9, 1939. He sent us a thank you letter. If anyone finds a dead owl or hawk, bring it to this grade with your name, the date and where you found the specimen. This information is put on a tag for it.

Some are writing letters of thanks to somebody for something we got for Christmas.

Robert Faber brought a book of all the minutes that we had two years ago. We might start another club like it and keep the minutes of the meeting.

The sixth grade went ice skating on January 9, 1940.

U. of M. Symphony To Present Free Concert

The University Symphony Orchestra will be heard in a concert in Hill Auditorium, Ann Arbor, Sunday afternoon, January 21, at 4:15 o'clock. The performance will be given complimentary to the general public. Thor Johnson will conduct, and Wassy Besekirsky, professor of violin in the School of Music, will appear as soloist. Professor Besekirsky has won distinction throughout Europe and America as a violinist of distinction. On this occasion he will play the First Movement from Tchaikowsky's Concerto in D major for violin and orchestra.

Mr. Johnson will lead the orchestra in Elgar's Cockaigne Overture, Op. 40 (In London Town); Bruckner's Symphony No. 7 in E major; and The Pines of Rome by Respighi, in four parts.

The concert is complimentary to the public, but concert-goers are reminded that the concert will begin on time and that the doors will be closed during numbers.

Public health officials, recognizing the potential dangers of unclean bacteria laden milk, spare no effort to safeguard its production, handling, and transportation. The milk delivered to the household's doorstep is unquestionably safe. But whether or not it remains so depends upon the consumer. If milk is to be fit for consumption, it must be kept clean and cold within the home.

Clean containers, clean glasses, clean and sterilized bottles for the baby, and the maintenance of clean hands by the person who pours the milk, serves it, and uses it in food preparation, are all links in the chain of sanitation needed to keep milk fresh and wholesome. Only if these safeguards are observed can milk uphold its reputation for healthfulness.

Milk Needs Cleanliness To Retain Healthful Aids

Ever since the earliest days, milk has been considered one of the most healthful foods. Exaggerated powers were ascribed to it by the ancients and many hoary legends regarding its properties still persist. But with all the virtues intelligent people concede to milk today, we know that under certain conditions it can also be a menace, since bacteria, as well as human beings, thrive on milk.

Public health officials, recognizing the potential dangers of unclean bacteria laden milk, spare no effort to safeguard its production, handling, and transportation. The milk delivered to the household's doorstep is unquestionably safe. But whether or not it remains so depends upon the consumer. Wool of Whale Meat

S. Sasaki of the college of agriculture of Kyushu Imperial university, Tokyo, has succeeded in making artificial wool from whale meat. Raw meat is fermented by adding certain chemicals and is elongated into fiber by a spinning machine. The fiber resembles wool, has considerable tensile strength and floats on water. Combining with cellulose xanthate, it changes into a silklike fiber, depending upon the amount of xanthate used.

"My God!" he groaned at last. "This will just about kill Autumn!" "You'd better go in and fetch Lin," Bruce said tersely. "She'll be the best one to break the news to her."

But Florian was regarding him in blank consternation. Bruce, puzzled, began to feel an impatience at his singular attitude.

"There's no sense in delaying it, Florian," he said harshly. "She has to be told. And Lin is the one to talk to her."

As he spoke he glanced toward the house. It came to him that there was something strange about the place. It seemed deserted, somehow, and although the windows were open no voices came out to them from within.

"Lin isn't here," Florian said heavily. "Autumn and I are alone." Bruce stared at Florian through the gloom with eyes that seemed to go dim and lifeless with the dull flush that had suffused his whole being after that first sharp stab of incredulity.

"Oh!" he said then, in a voice that had died before the sound issued. "On—I see!"

Florian's face was turned toward him in the darkness. For a moment he did not reply. "You don't see at all, you damn fool!" he broke forth at last. "Lin couldn't get here. We were just getting ready to leave when we heard your car coming up the hill. If you think—"

"Shut up!" Bruce rasped. "You don't have to apologize to me. Go in and tell her. She's needed at home—tonight. I'll drive ahead. I don't think I can be of any more use."

With his fists doubled up so that his nails were like blades in his palms, Bruce tore himself away. He had experienced for the first time in his life the exhilarating and horrible impulse to kill. Blindly he staggered to his car, swung it through the gate so that it lurched crazily toward the brink of the trail before he righted it, then paused to await the sounds that told him that Florian and Autumn had started from the lodge.

All the way back down into the valley, with the shameless and heartbreaking sound of that other car following behind him, it seemed to Bruce that the stars rocketed through a delirious sky, and that the night with its burden of madness would descend and annihilate him.

CHAPTER XIII

Strange, Autumn thought with the objective detachment that emotional exhaustion brings, how this gold and white drawing room that had been Millicent's preserved its aloof and reticent singularity, impervious to any unwanted experience of the other quarters of the house. She sat huddled listlessly in a deep chair, part of her consciousness attending Hannah, who was bidding a smothered good-by at the front door, to Snyder, the lawyer, the other part aimlessly adrift on that curiously attenuated sunlight that filled the room. Sunlight—no shadows here, in the room that had been peculiarly Millicent's! How oddly ironic! Even now, when the rest of the house seemed to mourn in sympathy with the Laird's deserted study upstairs, where Saint Pat alone kept his dumb, broken-hearted vigil, this room was a mystically serene denial of death. Or, rather, it was an affirmation of life beyond temporal things. Autumn pressed her fingers against her eyes at the feeling of light-headedness that was coming over her. The ordeal of listening to Snyder read her father's will had undone her completely. And that extraordinary codicil, that footnote that he had written into it to Bruce Lander only a short time since—

But here came Hannah, with a steaming pot of tea! Snyder had refused tea—had helped himself generously to the Laird's choice brandy, instead. Funny how resentful one could become, in times of emotional upheaval, over a small and irrelevant thing!

She glanced at the tiny watch that hung on a cord about her neck. Hector Cardigan would be here again soon. He had been coming faithfully every day, and now she felt that without him she would be utterly lost.

A shadow, unobtrusive, gentle, fell across the threshold, and Hector entered through the French windows from the lawn. Autumn rose and drew another chair close to her own beside the low table on which Hannah, with a silence that marked her own personal grief and not the decorum of a servant in the house of bereavement, had placed the tea things. With pale humor, Autumn had noted how Hannah had taken the loss of her master unto herself, after a due observance of the amenities in consoling the master's daughter.

Hannah withdrew noiselessly, and Hector seated himself beside Autumn.

"One sugar, I believe, Hector!" she said, with an effort at briskness. "And lemon?"

"Quite so," Hector returned. Her very hands, she thought as she poured the tea with an uncontrollable tremble, seemed to have lost their character. They looked weak and purposeless.

Setting her cup on the table beside her, she leaned back in her chair and closed her eyes. "I'm adrift, Hector," she murmured. "Absolutely adrift."

"Now, now, my dear," Hector stammered. "Life must go on, child. Even after—after terrible things happen to us."

"Life must go on? Why?" She opened her eyes and gazed at him, as though in genuine wonderment.

Hector shifted uneasily. He looked worn and shaken, she thought with idle compassion. His friendship for Jarvis had been a long and tried one; he was the only living being who had witnessed the extraordinary drama of that ill-starred soul from beginning to end. Perhaps it was unfair to inflict upon poor Hector the irony of the epilogue.

"That is an absurd question, Autumn," Hector said gruffly. "The daughter of the Laird will go on. You are shocked and exhausted, my dear."

"I have not been the daughter of the Laird for a long time," Autumn interrupted in a pensive voice. "I know now that father died twenty years ago. The ghost of him came back now and then—and on one of those visits he wrote a note in his will to Bruce Lander."

Hector started. "A note?" Autumn rose slowly and went to the desk at the farther end of the room, where Snyder had sat with her and Hannah a half hour ago. When she returned she held an envelope in her hand. She removed from it a narrow sheet of paper on the bottom of his will immediately after Bruce came to visit him one day, at father's request. Snyder could make neither head nor tail of it, of course. We shall have to give it to Bruce."

Hector took the paper from her hand. He read, in the Laird's bold, impatient hand: "To Bruce Lander, the admission that I may have been wrong in many things. At this moment's writing I seem to see a light. But it flickers and goes out, leaving an old man in darkness. I cannot help it if I blunder through the night that envelops me. Life has played me false, making of me that which I would not be."

For some seconds Hector sat looking attentively at the writing. Then his eyes lifted and Autumn was surprised at the solemn radiance of his face. It was a look of relief, almost of happiness. "Yes," he said, as if to himself. "It must have been as you say—the ghost of him came back. I myself have thought something of the kind. I have thought it often. Poor Jarvis! His obsession with the past distorted all his thinking. He wrote this in a moment of—of lucidity. You should be glad he did, my dear."

"Glad?" Autumn said absently. "It alters nothing, Hector."

"On the contrary, my dear," Hector protested. "It alters much." He tapped the paper lightly with his fingers. "This is the equivalent of a retraction of everything that Jarvis had against Bruce Lander."

"Even so, Hector," Autumn said wearily. "What good can that do now?"

"It will not hurt Bruce to know that Jarvis Dean held no real bitterness in his heart toward—"

"Certainly, Hector!" Autumn broke in. "Forgive me, please! That was a selfish thought."

Hector laid the paper on the table and placed his hands awkwardly on his knees. "I see," he said softly. "What you would have preferred, perhaps, would have been your father's written consent to—"

"Oh, Hector!" Autumn interrupted again. "I wasn't thinking when I spoke."

"I can see that," he said. "The fact is, when a young woman is in love she interprets everything in the light of that one fact. Well, my dear, this retraction—small as it may seem to you—may have some bearing even on that."

Autumn looked at him and smiled resignedly. "You don't understand, darling. Bruce has made up his mind about me."

"You are sure of that?"

"Haven't told you," she said hesitantly. "about the night he came to the Parris' lodge to tell me what had happened to father. I had gone up there earlier in the evening. Bruce found me there alone with Florian. Hannah had told him that I had gone to spend the night at the lodge. I had intended to, but Linda was to have been there, too. She became ill that day and couldn't leave home. Florian met me there—to take me back home, of course. But we had supper together in the lodge and before we were ready to leave—Bruce arrived. You know yourself what he must have thought. Florian tried to explain, but Bruce wasn't in a mood to accept his explanation."

"Hm-m," Hector said, knitting his brows. "Has Florian done nothing more about it, then?"

"Florian was incensed, of course, at Bruce's attitude. He will undoubtedly have a talk with Bruce—and force him to listen, but he's away just now on a business trip for his father. It won't make any difference to Bruce, though. You see—he had changed toward me before that."

Hector frowned and cracked his knuckles. The romances of these young creatures were too much for him. He had loved to be understood that young love of the modern variety held the conventions in light esteem. Now, in his day—ah, well, in his day!

"You're a pair of young fools!" he blurted out suddenly, and poured himself another cup of tea.

Autumn got up and stood looking out of the wide spread-of windows into the garden. Hector was endeavoring, she thought to herself, to bring her out of the ghastly enchantment that had imprisoned her since that dreadful night when Bruce had come for her at the lodge.

Only isolated images remained in her memory of the events of that shocking time, brilliant and horrible as exploding stars. The ride home—a nightmare in which the staggering knowledge of her father's death clashed against her knowledge of Bruce's reaction to finding her alone with Florian. Then, suddenly, Hannah taking her in her arms—Hannah, white-faced and speechless. And the closed mask of a door—the door of the little back parlor, behind which her father lay. The comical little undertaker, with the cone-shaped bald head, at whose appearance Autumn had fled to her own room to scream into her pillows with hysterical laughter, until Hector had come quietly in and sat on the bed beside her. From somewhere—Hector had come. She learned later that Bruce had finally reached him by telephone. Then, in the depth of night, the moan of Saint Pat, the deep-throated, forsaken moan of Saint Pat!

Yes, Hector was trying to bring her around. It was sweet of him, of course, but where was the use of their talking any more of Bruce Lander? Bruce seemed more unguessable to her now than ever, in the numbness of her fatigue. It was difficult to remember clearly what he looked like, or to recall the timbre of his voice. It seemed years since she had seen him, severe and silent, at the entrance to the Castle, where he did not turn in after his car had escorted her and Florian home.

"Autumn turned and faced Hector. 'Fools?' she said. 'Yes, darling—and past redemption.'"

He looked at her with curiously bright eyes. "Probably, my dear, probably," he replied. "What, for example, are you going to do about that—little note your father wrote into his will?"

"I don't know yet," she replied. "I should like Bruce to know about it, naturally. I shall think of some way."

"With your permission," Hector suggested. "I shall attend to that myself. Or perhaps you would prefer to look after it in your own way."

"I'd like you to do it," she replied. "It would be simpler."

"I'll make a copy of it now, then," Hector said, and took the paper to a small desk at the end of the room where he sat and wrote while Autumn smoked a cigarette in silence.

Presently he got up and folded the sheet of paper as he came toward her. Her eyes followed him with a slow, spent interest as he thrust the paper into his pocket and drew out a slender packet tied with gold cord. Hector unbound the packet, and with fingers strangely reverent, lifted from it a letter that lay uppermost.

"These letters," he said in a gently modulated tone, "were my reason for asking you and Bruce to dinner at my house that night. As it turned out—you could not come, but I had wanted you both to read them, even then, difficult as it was for me. These letters belonged to your mother. They were written to her by Geoffrey Lander. Before she died she entrusted them to me. I am giving them to you now so that you may read them when you are alone."

In them he tells of his efforts to leave the country with his wife and son when his life here became hopelessly involved."

Autumn drew a quick breath. "You mean—he tried to get away?" she asked softly.

Hector cleared his throat with a painful hesitancy. "He did. I myself know how he tried—quite apart from anything he wrote here."

"I did not know that," she murmured.

"Your father did not tell you that, because to him it was not important," Hector went on. "Jarvis never had a true perspective of the thing that happened to him—to all of them. He was obsessed. Jealousy will drive a man to do things for which he is not altogether accountable. Your father believed it was Geoffrey's plan to leave and have Millicent join him later. But Geoffrey's property at the time was heavily burdened—and Jarvis held the bag, as we say. He had Geoffrey at his mercy."

Autumn sat on the edge of her chair, her fingers tightly interlaced in her lap. Her eyes burned fixedly upon Hector as he talked.

"I shall leave the letters with you, then, to read when you wish. But this—"

he tapped lightly the letter he had selected from the packet—"this one I want you to read now while I am with you. It was your mother's wish that I should give it to you when—and if—I should ever think it necessary to do so."

He removed a fragile, folded sheet from the yellowed envelope that enclosed it.

"Why haven't you told me about this before?" Autumn asked him.

Hector flushed painfully. "You forget, my dear, that your father was my friend. It has been difficult enough for me to decide to tell you even now. Nothing but your resolution to leave this country and spend the rest of your days in England convinced me that the time had come for me to place these letters in your hand."

He unfolded the letter and took from within it a short note that had been enclosed with the longer one.

"This," he said, handing Autumn the shorter one, "you may read before the other."

Autumn took it in trembling fingers and let her eyes dwell upon the delicate, pining script.

"Hector, my dear friend (Millicent had written), I do not think that I shall recover. Please do not forget your promise to me. I trust that the task I bequeath to you will bring you no unhappiness. In gratitude, Millicent."

With unseeing eyes, Autumn stared for moments at the slip of paper in her hand.

"Now, my dear—you may read this," Hector said, handing her the letter he held.

When at last she was able to govern her emotions, the phrases seemed to burn into her eyes with a ghastly incandescence.

"To my beloved daughter, Autumn (she read). When you read these words, if you ever do read them, it will be because Hector Cardigan has deemed it proper that you should do so. They concern things which I myself should have wished to tell you if events and circumstances had made it necessary—or possible."

"I want you to know, dear Autumn, that neither your father nor Geoffrey Lander was to blame in the unfortunate accident that took Geoffrey's life. Geoffrey had done his utmost to get away and forget me—and help me forget him. Hector can tell you who it was impossible for him to go. Since that terrible day, in the spring, your father has brooded constantly over the death of the man he once called friend. I fear that it may become an obsession from which he shall never escape. I am the one who is to blame, Autumn, if any one is to blame for hopeless love."

"I can never tell you, my darling girl, how love came to me at last, after years of groping. I can only tell you that it came, after you were born, but that I never forgot the vows that had made me the wife of your father. I can tell you, too, that love—when it is love—is a woman's whole life and being. She can never escape it though she go to the ends of the earth."

"I do not know what lies before you here, Jane Lander is a strong-willed woman and she has already made it clear that she intends to continue at her own ranch, discharge all her obligations, and bring up her boy in the valley. You and he will be growing up together, Autumn, and the time will come when you must be friends or enemies—according to the will of his mother and your father, who hate each other now. It is my wish, Autumn, that you see things clearly and without prejudice, and that you refuse to be influenced by this tragedy of the past. I should like to think that you would be a friend of Geoffrey's boy. It might help to pay the debt of Your devoted mother, Millicent."

By the time Autumn had reached the end of the letter, the words were moving like a dimly silver caravan beyond her tears. The clairvoyance of the dying! Perhaps Millicent had even hoped that there might be more than friendship between her daughter and Geoffrey Lander's son—and effectuation of that destiny which had begun in her and Geoffrey. Autumn glanced across at Hector where he had seated himself again at the windows, and told the letter pensively in her hands.

"Thank you, Hector," she said. "For showing me this."

He did not turn from the window, and Autumn laid the letter beside the packet on the table and went to him.

"You've done your part," she said, "and I'm grateful to you."

He turned and put an arm about her. For a moment he seemed on the point of speaking. Then he patted her shoulder affectionately and turned away.

"I'll be going, I think," he said brokenly. "Come to see me."

Without another word he left her, picked up his hat from the small sofa on his way out, and walked away, his thin, straight back soldierly and unflinching. From the windows, Autumn watched him go, her teeth biting down into her quivering lip. Then she turned and went to her room.

Bruce Lander, in loose gray flannels, swung his considerable length of limb out of his modest automobile and proceeded carelessly up the steep steps to Hector Cardigan's door. He was somewhat mystified, though he had resisted any suspicion of intrigue, by the urgency with which Hector had pressed him to come to dinner.

Hector, obviously at a tension, ushered him in, took his top coat and hat and hung them on the rather insecure rack in the hall, a rack which, Bruce supposed, one should admire as having belonged to Cleopatra, or perhaps Confucius.

Fancy That!

The New England custom of placing stones in fields to form fences stems from the habit of Grecian travelers who put a stone beside each crossroad signpost. Both the Grecian and New England customs led to clearing farms for plowing and cultivation and roads for safe travel.

General Motors Builds 25-Millionth Unit

Brief ceremonies were held in the Chevrolet assembly plant at Flint, January 11, marking completion of this car, the 25-millionth unit built by General Motors. In behalf of the thousands of workers who had a hand in its manufacture, 75 members of the final assembly line crew handed M. E. Coyle, Chevrolet general manager, a commemorative scroll for presentation to W. B. Knudsen, president of General Motors. Veteran Chevrolet employees, and executives of the Buick and AC Spark Plug divisions, were present as special guests.

In photo, left to right: C. E. Wetherald, general manager, Chevrolet; Mr. Coyle; H. H. Curtice, general manager Buick Division; A. E. Sloan, Jr., chairman of the board, General Motors; Fred Brown, veteran Chevrolet employee; C. S. Mott, vice president, General Motors; C. E. Wilson, executive vice president, General Motors; and Mr. Knudsen.

The car was taken at once to Detroit, to play a major part in the "March of Men and Motors" celebration staged that night in the Masonic Temple.

Mahogany Finishes

With the advent of the use of powerful bleaches, mahogany finishes may range all the way from the light cream of blond mahogany to the black of, bonized mahogany. The honey tones, however, for modern styles are preferred while the "Old World" finishes, those that closely approach the rich beauty of the museum piece, are still favored for styles.

Virginia Glass Collections

Glass of varied types and age, excavated from historic areas in the Colonial National Historical Park, Virginia, form a large part of the archeological collections displayed at Jamestown and Yorktown. Heavy wine and rum bottles, thin-sided Dutch gin containers, delicately fashioned perfume vials and drinking goblets, and window panes are included in the exhibit. There may be traced the evolution of the wine bottle from the globular form with high tapering neck and disk-like collar, commonly used at Jamestown in the early Colonial period, to the final development of the moulded cylinder of the late Eighteenth century. Some of the pieces were manufactured at the early Jamestown glass works.

EVERY man cherishes in his heart a vision of an Ideal Woman. Naturally this woman is beautiful! Beautiful according to his individual estimate of feminine loveliness. She is usually a vision of perfect contour, lovely stature. Her skin is fresh and radiant and her hair is lustrous. Men currently are favoring the more feminine type of Olivia de Havilland. Her physical beauty and gracious personality make her alluringly charming in the eyes of the modern man. She comes close to being his ideal woman.

and her soul—that intangible something every person possesses—is his inspiration.

Through life, Man seeks this creature of divine loveliness. For he lives, works and plans. This Ideal Woman is the animating power behind progress and activity, and the closer you resemble her the more joyous and abundant will be your life!

Priest's Letters Disclose

Early Indian Sacrifices

North American soil has been soaked numberless times with the blood of human sacrifices, old letters of Father Charlevoix, a Jesuit priest, to his superiors would indicate.

The priest reported the sacrifices were common on the huge Munk of copper weighing two tons or more (now in the Smithsonian institute at Washington), which was a religious shrine of the Indians before its removal in 1843. The Indians believed the rock had been sent to their ancestors by the Morning Star and that in times of stress it spoke in the voice of thunder demanding a human sacrifice. The sacrifice offered was usually a prisoner taken in war.

Father Charlevoix related one instance which came under his observation. Before setting out on a hazardous expedition, the Indians were told by their medicine men the rock demanded a sacrifice. They accordingly selected a 15-year-old girl prisoner, told her she was to be married to the son of a chief, and prepared her in the tribe's richest garments. The child was shown unusual deference and, happy in the belief her imprisonment was to end, she was led away by an escort of warriors. Not until she came to the rock and saw the fire blazing at its base did she realize the actual fate in store for her.

Despite her entreaties, she was tied to the rock and a warrior sent an arrow into her heart as the fire burned about her. The braves then sprinkled themselves with her blood in the belief it would make them more valorous.
