PINCKNEY—Ford Lamb has the last word in garage doors at his home on the hill-top north of town. As he approaches the garage a unit in his car forms a circuit with a metal plate in the ground in front of the doors and the doors close automatically. When the car is in the garage the unit is turned off and the doors close. These units will open the door for which they are made.—Dispatch.

WILLIAMSTON—The East Lansing weather bureau reported 1.39 inches of rain had fallen from Saturday morning to Monday noon, bringing the total precipitation so far in June to 5.06 inches and the total since January 1 to 15.38 inches or .63 inch over the normal amount for the same period. Rainfall Monday morning measured .28 inch.—Enterprise.

PLYMOUTH—Plymouth post office box renters this week discovered that the high cost of government had hit their pocketbooks. When they received their notices of "box rent due" it was discovered that the rates had been increased by one-third per quarter. Boxes that formerly rented for $1.00 per quarter, now cost $1.50. No, this is not due to the war; the money goes to the post office department.—Mail.

More by force of habit than otherwise, before beginning the marriage ceremony he administered the oath: "Do you swear you will tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?"

House at Washington pooh-poohed the need for educational orders for making of war needs in industrial plants. The senate budget appropriation of $16,000,000 was cut to $2,000,000.

This aroused the ire of Rep. Albert J. Engel, Michigan. He declared:

"We should have tools, dies and jibs made with which to produce the equipment necessary for equipping an army of one million men. If we have the tools, dies and jibs, we will have saved from three to five months and not be dependent upon taking these workers from ordinary production."

"We then should have enough educational orders in these factories to train sufficient men so that on short notice we can go into production of the required material and equipment."

A Pressing Factor

After the United States entered the last war, the armies of Great Britain and France, together with those of Italy and Russia, engaged the Germans for nearly one year until we could train an army and transport them to France. Even Henry Ford in his remarkable offer to build 1,000 airplanes a day said that it would take him six months.

If we are given the time (and the right leadership) the country can properly equip its regular army and its national guard.

Likewise, Ford can build his 1,000 airplanes every 24 hours.

Factories also can ready to turn out war goods on a brief notice.

But the big factor, unforeseen six months ago, is time. Michigan's national guard is offered as exhibit A. Well trained as it is, the guard is not prepared for war this July 4, 1940.

Michigan Bell Names
New District Official

Announcement was made this week of the appointment of Otto W. Baur, of Detroit, as assistant district commercial superintendent of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company at Lansing, effective immediately.

Baur succeeds William H. Wagner who was recently named district superintendent of the company at Flint. The 106th Cavalry depends on horses which are fine for polo games and which are still reliable for military use after the tanks, airplanes and trucks smash through enemy lines.

This is in contrast with mechanized cavalry units in other states. The cavalry also has two riders for every horse.

The 132nd Field Artillery, a motorized unit, lacks some tractors and trucks. (Michigan's guard is to get 42 trucks this year.)

From coast to coast Michigan is known as the foremost industrial state who technological advance has been the marvel of engineers from nations of the world. This lack of arms is also contrast to the state's ability to manufacture them.

Congress has just authorized a four billion dollar expenditure for armaments of all kinds. The regular army is to be almost doubled in size from 225,000 to 400,000. During the last year the Michigan guard was authorized to recruit 1,000 men, and today the state force is more than 6,000 strong.

Horse Cavalry

The World War style of horse cavalry still prevails.

The 106th Cavalry depends on horses which are fine for polo games and which are still reliable for military use after the tanks, airplanes and trucks smash through enemy lines.

This is in contrast with mechanized cavalry units in other states. The cavalry also has two riders for every horse.

Military Viewpoint

If Hitler overrunning the English Isles, military observers are convinced that this country will be forced to embark upon a military training program that would make the Michigan force of 6,000 men look like pygmies.

Instead of 6,000 soldiers, the state would probably have 60,000.

A national guard strength of three million men is being recommended by experts.

Likewise, Michigan's current effort to dig up $50,000 or so to provide some additional armories for expanding guard units will seem like matching for pennies. The explosion overseas has transformed our unemployment problem into a preparedness problem overnight. (Governor Lurene D. Dickinson recently acceded to pressure of advisers and requested the United States government to authorize an anti-aircraft unit for Detroit.)

The cost of modern military arms is fairly staggering to the imagination. Each of Michigan's new observation planes, for example, cost Uncle Sam about $60,000 each. It takes about $10,000,000 to equip one anti-aircraft regiment. That calls for a lot of blue chips in the form of increased federal taxes.

Educational Orders

It was William Jennings Bryan who declared that a threat of war would find a million Americans springing to arms between sunset and sunrise.

The men might spring, all right, but they wouldn't have the arms.

Back Siphonage in Plumbing

Back siphonage in plumbing fixtures is caused by a sucking of waste or drainage matter from the fixture back into the fresh water pipe where it constitutes a serious threat to the purity of the household water supply.

It is usually a case of cracked or faulty fixtures, or faucets that are so low they may be covered by the water level in the fixture.

Ornamental Plant

Vetiver is a perennial plant of the grass family, being introduced from the East Indies to the Gulf states prior to the Civil war, as an ornamental for plantations and because of its aromatic roots.

These were saved, washed, and dried by the wealthy plantation owners to be stored with linens, lingerie, silks, satins and other feminine finery and household goods, on account of the attractive and enduring fragrance which they imparted to such articles.

An oil was also distilled from the roots by homespun methods and after dilution in alcohol constituted one of the favorite ante bellum perfumes.

Children In Court

By Judge Malcolm Hatfield

Advent of the Unethical

The parents of a young man who had just reached his maturity complained to a judge that they could no longer compete with outside influences that were helping to mold their son's character and outlook on life.

No one cares to go on record as voicing the belief that "crime pays" for the nation as a whole still clings to the hope that the criminal will never be able to enjoy his ill-gotten gains. Nevertheless, when young men read and hear about those who fail in small, legitimate business enterprises, they are struck with the fact that the honest, law abiding citizen is at a disadvantage.

In order to make it possible for the conscientious and industrious business man to operate successfully on an honest business basis in competition with the unscrupulous racketeer, we must do less, wishing and hoping, and attack this economic and moral problem at its very source. This will mean a bitter struggle to the end and possibly the uprooting of many of our fixed habits and ideals.

Before that day arrives, we may have to recognize and readjust many of the voluntary recreational institutions which are now coping with the problem to their fullest extent. If crime is to be eradicated, a great levelling influence must necessarily be introduced into individual lives. No nation can hope to grapple with economic and criminal issues successfully as long as it pays bubble, strip-tease and fan dancers thousands of dollars each week, while ministers, teachers, social workers, farmers and both skilled and unskilled workers are forced to exist on starvation wages.

When such conditions prevail it is little wonder that California's Hollywood is overrun with adolescent, movie-struck girls, and that our road houses, beer gardens and taverns are swamped with applications from thousands of young men who aspire to become jazz singers, crooners and night club entertainers.

Strides made in home building during the last decade have done a great deal for the home owner, and, measured on the basis of quality as well as price, the present day home gives the buyer more for less money.

The modern home is planned for exterior and interior beauty and for maximum utility as well. The rooms are arranged for easy access and seclusion as desired. They are light and airy. Work rooms, such as kitchen and laundry, are laid out to save steps.

From foundation to roof, today's house is better built, of more durable, yet less costly materials. Upkeep is at a minimum. It is insulated to keep out winter's cold, reduce fuel bills and minimize summer heat.

Today's house is heated by clean, healthful and convenient automatic heat. The heat output is well-balanced and drafts have been eliminated by the placing of radiators under the windows.

Hot water is always on tap in today's house. In many cases, it is heated by the same boiler which heats the house. The boiler, being in operation the year around, is not affected by summer corrosion, and thus lasts longer.

Electricity is at arm's reach in any room. Built-in conveniences are plentiful—mantle, windows, doors, cabinets and cupboards are more attractive, tighter fitting and more economical to buy because of efficient production.

Closets are more accessible, walls are easier cleaned, and basements are dry, cheerful rooms for family recreation.

Bathroom fixtures are of rare beauty. Tubs are low with a wide, flat rim providing a seat. Lavatories of glistening vitreous china or sturdy enameled cast iron have an integral shelf at the back providing the utmost convenience for the placing of toilet articles. Faucet handles are made of metal for greater beauty and safety. Drain controls act quickly, positively.

Bathrooms are better planned and there are more of them. Glamorous powder rooms have been moved to convenient locations at the front of the house.

Despite the fact that the home of today is superior to anything that has ever been offered to the public before, the basic price of many important materials has not increased in recent years. Staple enameled iron plumbing fixtures, such as bathtubs, sinks and lavatories, are today selling at only 60 per cent of the 1928 base price, as reported by the United States department of labor.
