Otto D. Luick Taken By Death On Sunday

Otto D. Luick, life-long resident of this community, and a member of the Board of County Auditors, died Sunday afternoon, July 14, at Chelsea Private hospital following a four days' illness of pneumonia.

Mr. Luick was born in Lima township on March 22, 1872, the son of John David and Katherine Laubenguy Luick. He was married to L. May Wood on December 29, 1897 and resided on the farm in Lima until 1918, when they moved to Chelsea.

A life-long Republican, Mr. Luick was prominent in local and county politics. He was clerk of Lima township from 1894 to 1905; was county treasurer from 1905 to 1909; county road commissioner from 1910 to 1931, and in 1933 was chosen as member of the board of county auditors, which office he held at the time of his death.

He was a director of the Chelsea State Bank since its organization, and of the former Kempf Commercial and Savings Bank.

He was also a member of the Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and a member of the church board of trustees, and a member of the board of trustees of Oak Grove cemetery.

Surviving are the widow; two sons, Leigh, of Lima township, and Gerald, at home; a sister, Mrs. D. E. Beach of Chelsea; and three grandchildren. A daughter, Buelah, died May 10, 1928.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 at the Congregational church, Rev. Ray W. Barber officiating. Interment was in Oak Grove cemetery.

Half Year Plates Must Accompany Application

Harry E. Kelly, Secretary of State, said this week that holders of first half year auto license plates must surrender them at the time they apply for the full year tags. This provision is necessary, Mr. Kelly said, to prevent the possibility of the first half year plates, which are good until August 31, falling into other hands and being illegally used.

"A great many applicants forget to bring their first half plates in when applying for the full year and are put to the inconvenience of making another trip," said Mr. Kelly. "I would therefore like to emphasize the fact that we cannot issue new plates until the old ones have been turned over to us and have been destroyed. In the past there have been cases where unexpired plates turned in on new ones have gotten into improper hands and have been used by criminals on stolen cars."

Mr. Kelly placed the full year plates on sale at half price three weeks earlier than last year, in an effort to expedite the re-licensing of 500,000 cars in the state, now operating with first half tags, and to stimulate the sale of new cars.

Tuesday, July 9, Chelsea playing Dexter for the second time of the current season, again came out on top, by the score of 6 to 2. Batting stars of the game were Andy Policht and Richard White, both connecting for home runs. The combined pitching efforts of Policht, Marsh and Rossbach held Dexter to 4 hits, and striking out 14 batters. The final score: Chelsea, 4 hits, 4 runs, 6 hits, 2 runs.

Thursday, July 11, Chelsea journeyed to Manchester, where the Chelsea lads suffered their first defeat. There was no score on either side for seven innings, then in Manchester's half of the eighth they pushed a run across to win. Rossbach pitched for Chelsea, doing a fine job by allowing Manchester 3 hits, and striking out 9. The final score: Manchester, 1 run, 3 hits; Chelsea, 0 runs, 6 hits.

On Thursday evening of this week Ypsilanti plays Chelsea here. The public is invited. No admission charge.

BARRY-MURPHY WEDDING

Mrs. Estella Barry and Guy Murphy of Chelsea were married on Saturday, July 13 at Toledo, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy spent the week-end with Mrs. Murphy's daughter, Mrs. Henry Borchart of Detroit. They will reside in Chelsea.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. George Lehman of New Paris, Ohio announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Marjorie, to Dr. Paul F. Reichert, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Reichert of Chelsea. The wedding will take place September 14.

Village Buys Land To Provide Added Parking Facilities

In order to provide adequate parking space on busy afternoons and evenings the village has purchased four vacant lots back of the business block on the east side of Main street between Park and East Middle streets and will proceed at once to prepare the newly acquired property for use by the public. The lots were purchased from Fred Klingler, Mrs. J. E. Weber and the Gimbach estate (two lots from the latter).

According to Village President Alfred D. Mayer, the work of leveling the lots will be started this week, to be followed with sufficient filling and covering of gravel to make parking possible in the near future. The dimensions of the new parking lot will be approximately 90x125 feet, and it is expected that at least 100 cars can be parked there. The lot will be properly lighted for the convenience of motorists who use this space for parking.

In addition to this parking lot plans are also being made to use vacant property of the Michigan Central north of the Wilkinson building for parking purposes. The railroad company has offered use of the property to the village, and with the installation of lights there it will provide parking facilities for many cars.

There has been a definite shortage of parking space in Chelsea for many years and the addition of these two parking lots will be welcomed by the public.

The state is attempting to enforce the ruling which prohibits diagonal parking on trunk line highways through cities and villages, and if this ruling is enforced on Main street (M-92) in Chelsea, parking space on the streets would be further limited, and make the establishment of new parking space more essential than ever.

Young Men May Cruise 30 Days Free of Charge

Five thousand unmarried young men between 19 and 26 years with two years of college will have a chance this summer to cruise 30 days on a Navy warship, expense free, and qualify for commissions as reserve ensigns.

Applications are being taken at Naval District and Naval Reserve headquarters and at nearest Navy recruiting stations in Detroit, Toledo, Jackson, Kalamazoo, Benton Harbor, Grand Rapids, Lansing, Saginaw and Flint. As part of the Navy expansion program, the government will pay travel expenses and stand the cost of food, lodging, uniforms and other equipment.

Candidates who successfully complete the 30-day cruise are eligible for appointment as Naval Reserve Midshipmen and enrollment in a 90-day course on shore to qualify them for appointment as ensigns in the Volunteer Reserve.

The first cruise began July 14 on the USS Wyoming and additional cruises will begin periodically until January 15, 1941. Gunnery, navigation, engineering, communications, and other technical skills will be taught.

During the three-months shore course, candidates will receive the same pay and allowances as midshipmen of the regular Navy. This course, however, may be postponed in order not to interfere with college courses or other civilian activities.

RECREATION NEWS

Playground Report, Week of July 8-12

Attendance: Monday, 45; Tuesday, 60; Wednesday, 59; Thursday (rain), 37; Friday, 55. This attendance has been about equally divided between boys and girls. The age groups run from 3 to 15 years.

Number of children enrolled to date, 107.

Games played: Softball, badminton, quoits (with horse shoes and also with rope rings), rope jumping, relay races with Indian clubs and with bean bags. Many kinds of circle games have been played. The most popular game to date has been "Duck-on-a-Rock", played with bean bags.

Table games such as checkers and Chinese checkers are popular on very warm days and all the children like to draw and color, but our supply of equipment is very limited. Any games that parents could lend, or old color books and crayons would be most acceptable.

The little children like the swings and this week we are to have a sand box.

The hours are from 1 to 5 Monday through Friday. Ida C. Brown, 5th grade teacher, is the playground director.

YOUNG-MARSTON WEDDING

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Gertrude Young and P. Cavel Marston, both of Washington, D. C., which took place on July 6 at Manassas, Virginia. Mrs. Marston is the daughter of Mrs. Arthur Young, and is a graduate of Chelsea high school and Cleary Business College.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Marston are employed in government work. After August 15 they will be at home at 2020-27th St., S. E., Washington, D. C.

Farmers Given Advice On Wheat Harvesting

With wheat harvest only a few days away, farmers are being urged by officials of the Chelsea Milling Company at Chelsea, to time their harvesting with unusual care this year. This is due primarily to the fact that much of the growing season has been unusually wet and that heavy discounts for damaged or high moisture wheat might substantially cut into the farmers' receipts.

Wheat growers are advised by elevator and milling interests to thresh only dry, mature grain; that weedy wheat be windrowed and dried before it is threshed; that damp grain be spread out and dried before delivery or storage; that combines be operated at recommended speed so that grain may be properly cleaned; and that the grain be allowed to reach its proper state of maturity before commencing harvesting operations.

The use of combines in very recent years in harvesting of Michigan wheat has been found costly to farmers in many instances because of heavy discounts charged due to high moisture content in the wheat. At other times, losses have been incurred because of ill fortune in the weather at time of harvest, with heavy precipitation. This likewise brought heavy discounts because of high moisture content.

Wheat, to grade No. 2 and avoid discount, must test 58 or 59 pounds to the bushel and have a moisture content of not over 14 per cent. Wheat having a greater moisture content than 14 per cent, is discounted all the way from 1c to 5c per bushel. Also wheat with low test weight, usually caused by excessive damage, earns heavy discounts.

Question And Answer Dept.

Problem.—When a young lady races down the beach at Atlantic City—or any other beach, for that matter—and jumps into the water, what is the first thing that she does? (Answer elsewhere in this department).

Ques.—At the birth of Jesus Christ what one of the twelve Jewish tribes did he belong to?

Ans.—When Christ was born, the division of the Holy Land among the twelve tribes had long since given way to another administrative partition, the country was divided into four provinces—one of them Perea, beyond the Jordan; three of them this side of the Jordan, named Judea, Samaria and Galilee. Judea was the most important province, since it was the religious, political and intellectual center of Palestine.

Ques.—Will you please tell me on what day of the week my mother was born? The date was Oct. 2, 1859.

Ans.—That date occurred on Sunday. Therefore that was the day of the week on which your mother was born.

Ques.—When was the first "shut-out" game played in professional baseball.

Ans.—The first shut-out in professional baseball was a game played in Chicago in 1875, where St. Louis was on the losing end of a 1-to-0 score. This feat for several years afterward was known as a "Chicago victory."

Ques.—What has become of Trotsky, the Russian Communist?

Ans.—Trotsky fled Russia for personal safety. He landed in Mexico, where he is at the present time.

Ques.—What is light?

Ans.—Light is waves in what is known as "ether." This ether is entirely different from the ether used in surgical operations. All space is filled with the ether waves. One kind of these waves is called "light."

Ques.—What becomes of water when it evaporates?

Ans.—The single molecules of the water go off, each by itself, into the air. They are so small that they can float around in the air forever, and cannot be seen.

Answer to problem.—She gets wet.

Ques.—How can desert travelers tell the difference between a mirage and a real lake of water?

Ans.—There are three rules that help. First, a mirage quivers a little and changes its shape; second, nearly always there is a band of dark-colored vegetation around a real lake; third, almost always birds may be seen flying near or above a real lake.

Ques.—How does the electric needle remove hair?

Ans.—It passes a current of electricity through the root of the hair and kills it, just as we die if enough electricity is passed through our whole body.

PETER WIRKNER

Peter Wirkner, a resident of Lyndon township for the past 30 years, died Wednesday night, July 10 at his home on Wirkner Road, north of Chelsea. He was born in Valley City, Ohio, March 7, 1860 and was married to Rose Doll.

He is survived by the widow, a daughter, Mrs. Sylvester J. Weber of Sylvan township; three sisters, Mrs. Mary Deimling, Mrs. Lena Mole and Mrs. Catherine Armbruster; and four brothers, Henry, George, William and Bernard, all of Valley City.

Funeral services were held Saturday forenoon at St. Mary church, with Rev. Lawrence Dorr officiating. Interment was in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

PINCKNEY—Rev. Fr. Murphy of Watervliet has been appointed to be the pastor of St. Mary's parish of Pinckney by Bishop Ambers. Rev. Fr. Oiler has been in charge here since the illness of Rev. James Carolan who is in Providence Hospital, Detroit.—Dispatch.

DEXTER.—That patch Joseph Schnebelt, Dexter's baker, is wearing is the result of an auto accident at Howell. Mr. Schnebelt was standing between two parked cars in a parking lot when a woman driver without a license hit the car next to him, toppling it over and crushing Joe between two cars. Mr. Schnebelt was knocked unconscious and badly hurt. Stitches were required to close the two 2-inch gaps in his forehead, where an artery had been cut, and his whole body was badly bruised.—Leader.

TECUMSEH—An Adrian boy was stunned by lightning. A Blaisfield barn was destroyed by fire, and trees and crops were badly damaged in some sections of the county, Monday evening.

ning; during one of the most severe wind, rain, hail and electrical storms of the summer. At Clinton, the storm was accompanied by high wind and trees and crops in that vicinity were damaged. Hail also was reported at both Clinton and Macon, and electrical service was disrupted until about 11 o'clock. In the lakes district, fishermen reported that it was most impossible to handle small craft on the lakes because of the wind. Several fishermen beached their boats on the nearest shore and waited until the storm had spent its energy.—Herald.

would be unwise indeed to compel Senator Vandenberg to leave his senate work and devote his time to a primary contest while our country faces one of its most serious problems since the beginning of our national existence and while the people are demanding that congress remain in session." Michigan approves wholeheartedly of Eaton's views on this matter.

The Plymouth representative has an outstanding record in Lansing. He possesses a thorough knowledge of legislative procedure and knows about state problems. He is one of the hardest workers to ever serve in the legislature.

It is his plan, if nominated, and elected lieutenant governor, to give his full time to the duties of the office, something that has never been done by any person holding that position.

Senator Vandenberg sent the following telegram to Editor Eaton a few days ago:

"Washington, D. C.

"Hon. Elton R. Eaton:

"I am deeply grateful to you for your generous message and for your helpful and unselfish attitude toward the Republican Senatorial primary. I only hope that I may continue to merit your confidence and approval and that I may justify the Michigan faith which you are good enough to express. Your message is typical not only of your friendship but of your attitude toward your own public responsibilities. I wish you many more years of effective activity in the public service in whatever position you may occupy. Please accept my warmest personal greetings."

FOR THE MACHINERY
YOU WON'T FIND ANY IN THE

Silent Gas Refrigerator

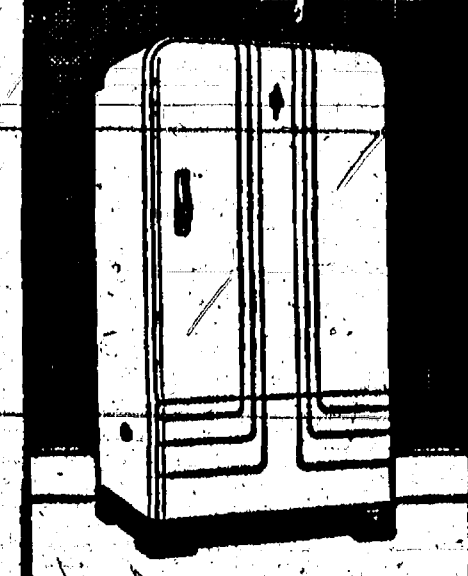

Unlike all other automatic refrigerators, the silent gas refrigerator has no machinery to make a noise or wear out or break down.

It has three exclusive advantages:

1. SILENCE.
2. LONGER LIFE AND TROUBLE-FREE SERVICE.
3. LOWER OPERATING COST because a tiny flame of cheap natural gas does all the work.

Turn in your noisy old refrigerator on a new silent GAS refrigerator. As little as $5 down.

4-Hers Learn and Earn In Meat Animal Project

For the eleventh year 4-H clubsters enrolled in meat animal projects may share in the benefits of the national 4-H meat animal contest conducted by county agents under the direction of the state extension service, which has accepted the activity as a part of its state-wide program.

to learn to grow, feed and fatten meat animals in their projects, through which thousands have been led to start a profitable herd or flock. Gross returns of such enterprises often run into thousands of dollars, and start young men soundly in farming. Last year the three-boys making up the national blue award group reported total returns of their efforts were $17,000.

Clubsters making the best county record will be awarded a specially em-bosmed gold fob, and State winners will receive a 17-level gold watch, appropriately engraved. From the latter, one will be named from each of the four extension sections to receive a trip to the 19th National 4-H Club Congress and International Livestock Exposition in Chicago, November 29 to December 7, with all expenses paid. Three of the four will receive blue award plaques in the nation, and college scholarships of $200 each provided by Thomas E. Wilson of Chicago. Further particulars may be obtained from county agents.

Many New Farm Ideas To Be Displayed July 26

Some queer looking contraptions, which prove that farming may be the oldest profession in the world but still has some wrinkles to iron out, are to be viewed by the thousands who attend Farmers' Day at Michigan State College on Friday, July 26.

How about a chimney in a hay stack? It's an attempt by S. T. Dexter in the farm crops department to cure out exceptionally green hay without having it spoil or get caught out in the field in a rain. Two identical stacks of green material were placed recently cut on the farm for the test, with one equipped with a crude chimney. The idea is that as the hay gets warm the chimney takes away the heat and creates a draft. This draws in air through the hay, aiding in the curing process.

On another portion of the college farm, near the experimental barn east of the dairy barn, is another experiment.

This was developed by H. H. Musselman, head of the agricultural engineering department. It is an above-ground trench silo, fitted with green cut material treated with molasses.

Musselman has placed discarded barrels, filled with water, on one end so that the weight can help exclude air from the fermenting feed. On the other end, Dexter has covered up the silage with building paper and has sealed out the air with a layer of water. Some of the feed is to be examined Farmers' Day.

In other spots on the farm, the Michigan Experiment Station will be open for the day for inspection by visitors. General programs are scheduled from 9:30 to 10:30 a. m. and from 1:30 to 3 p. m.

Simple Meals Should Be Planned for Summer

Simple meals serve more than one purpose in midsummer. Such meals help keep the house cool, please appetites, and provide more free hours for the housewife who does the cooking.

Suggestions provided by the Home Economics staff at Michigan State College indicate some of the time-savers and temper-averting ideas that can be utilized.

Refreshing chilled dishes can fool the weatherman. Crisp salads, jellied soups and frozen desserts come in this classification. They are ready to serve when the clock says bedtime.

Even when the mercury soars there ought to be at least one hot dish. Variety in this portion of the meal can be achieved by serving creamed ham, chicken, veal or seafood in the center of a hot ring mold made of rice or noodles. Some serve the creamed dish of the day in patty shells.

Meat mixtures for stuffing vegetables such as peppers, tomatoes or cabbage leaves appeal to some families. Others prefer vegetable and meat pie casseroles prepared served with some starchy food such as rice, noodles or spaghetti.

Egg dishes cook quickly and usually require little preparation. Hearty main courses with eggs are derived by adding cheese or leftover meat or vegetables.

Vegetables and fruits in season in summer add color to menus and reduce meat costs. Fresh vegetables are approved by nutrition specialists at any time of the year for good diets.

This is a further discussion of the matter of uniform signs. The yellow and black signs have four different shapes that can be seen from a distance: octagonal, round, diamond, and square. Octagonal yellow and black markings are used for boulevard stop signs. Round yellow and black signs are for grade crossings. Diamond yellow and black are slow warning signs for other road conditions: hazards, slow, curve, bump, steep hill, underpass, narrow bridge. Square yellow and black are caution type warning signs for human hazards: cross roads, forks, side roads, schools, hospitals, men at work.

See next week's "Safetygram" for the description of the black and white signs.

Cassidy Lake Events

(By Clyde Melton)
Monday, July 1, the camp softball team defeated "E" group by the score of 11 to 5. The outstanding feature of this game was the pitching of "Rocky" Klopfer. The batter for the "E" group was for "E" group, Tibbits, Nelson, Breckner and Lambert; for the camp team, Satterlee, Shiemke, Klopfer and Melton.

Wednesday, July 10, C group was defeated by E group by the score of 13 to 10. Batteries for this game were Tibbits, Pipp and Lambert for E group, C group used Satterlee and Melton.

On Saturday the camp team will play the Waterloo CCC camp, the game starting at 1:30. On the same day the staff will play the Farband camp.

Our camp team has hit the stride of which they are capable and have won their last four games, three of these being in the Chelsea City League. Tuesday night they broke the Spaulding Chevrolet winning streak at six games. In this winning streak of the camp, much praise should be given to Charles Hopkins who, the members of the team say is the best player on the team. Although one could sing the praise of many others on the same team.

A weary but happy band of fellows have returned from the Fourth of July vacation, each with a different story to tell, but you will find that they are all glad to be back.

"Union Pacific", starring Joel McCrea and Barbara Stanwyck was shown at the recreation building July 10 and was enjoyed by all.

"Rocky" Nawrocki is on life guard duty over to Portage Lake. He will work there the rest of the summer.

Rollo Louch has left camp and will go to work in his home town, Owosso. He has a paint job.

The boys at Cassidy Lake send their appreciation to Mrs. Lane for the flowers she gave for the graduation exercises.

Several new faces are now seen around the camp. Bud Doto and Paul Lambert both are from Iron Mountain and are taking up aviation. Also, John Spigarelli from Iron Mountain, who is taking up auto mechanics. Ruby Strauss, interested in auto mechanics and Kurt Elton in machine shop, are from New York City. Louis Kauten, Iron Mountain, Clyde Greenfield, Clinton, and William Campbell, Sault Ste. Marie, are all taking machine shop course.

On Wednesday, July 10, several guests visited our camp and stayed for dinner. They were: Miss James, Miss Perkins, Judge Tripp, of Adrian, Judge Arch of Hillsdale, with Mr. Weatherwax and Mr. Forriester. Also on the same day were Mr. and Mrs. Hall of Eaton Rapids and Mr. and Mrs. Eaton of Ann Arbor.

The auto shop has made a motor mount and have an experimental motor mounted on it. They also have an experimental table made with the front wheels of a car mounted for testing hydraulic brakes.

Children In Court

By Judge Malcolm Hatfield
Youth Versus Age

During the course of a recent trial, an elderly maiden lady advanced the theory that children today are much worse than when she was a girl. To prove her contention she pointed to the fact that more children are brought into court today than were fifty years ago.

The extent of crime in the United States has increased with modern inventions. This nation has developed its material resources more rapidly than its ability to use them. Consequently, it finds itself confronted with many new problems, but with no experience in combating the evils presented by such problems. Crime, the greatest public enemy, in attacking the nation's youth, is striking at the very womb of civilization.

Our Adult Criminals Were Neglected As Children

A visit to many of our state penitentiaries will reveal the fact that numerous convicts have already served twenty, thirty and forty years for acts which they committed as adolescent youths. Before the beginning of the twentieth century, society made no effort to understand the child and to help him solve his problems.

Many of the greatest philosophers of that period did not realize that success or failure in future adult life was to a large extent conditioned by the ideals and attitudes of the adult during his youth. Consequently, persons who are earnestly trying to help the modern child, need only look back a few years to learn that there has been little success in reforming the confirmed adult criminal. This reflection produces the firm conviction that undesirable behavioristic tendencies must be corrected during childhood, or the individual will continue to exhibit them during the remainder of his life.

The fact that we have such large numbers of both adult and juvenile criminals at large in the United States today is an indication that some parts of our social structure must be corrected.

Some of the changes which must be made can be ascertained by a study of the individual who is classified as an average adult criminal. This person can best be identified by the following description: He is twenty-three years of age, possesses a seventh grade education and is below normal, intellectually. He is very unstable emotionally, has no specific skill or training in any one of the various trades and is the last to be hired and the first to be discharged from his job. In former days we placed property rights above human rights when dealing with this unfortunate type, classifying him in accordance with the offense he committed against property. A judge was then expected to determine how long a period of unsentimental incarceration or treatment would be required before the offender could be returned to society to face more periods of depression and unemployment. Very little effort is made to remodel the character of a criminal while he is in prison, nor does he receive sufficient training to enable him to earn an honest living when his period of confinement has expired. We need not be surprised that our reformatories serve as the elementary schools and our state prisons as the high schools of crime, when society fails to provide adolescent boys with proper treatment.

M. S. C. To Probe What Makes Eye In Birdseye

"What makes the eye in birdseye" maple has become the object of a study at Michigan State College following receipt of an anonymous gift of $550 for such a study.

The gift was accepted by the State Board of Agriculture, governing body at the college, from a donor who prefers to remain anonymous and whose only interest is curiosity according to P. A. Herbert, head of the college forestry department.

No one seems to know now why a hard maple takes on the peculiar growth that turns out birdseye grain in the wood. Woodmen do know that a good log around two feet in diameter can be worth around $200 and that such logs usually occur at the rate of one or two in an acre of virgin sugar maple forest.

Alan Marra, graduate student from Syracuse University in New York, has been appointed by Professor Herbert to help conduct the study.

Marra is to aid in the two-fold attack on the problem. Each phase is somewhat technical. One involves an anatomical study. Marra is obtaining living tissue from certain trees in the college owned woods at Dunbar near Sault Ste. Marie. These are to be studied under the microscope.

The other phase involves an attempt to graft twigs from birdseye maple trees on other maple stock at East Lansing. Staff members in the horticulture department are assisting in these grafting operations.

So, what makes the eye in birdseye maple? Perhaps the anonymous donor and the public will discover through these experiments, says Professor Herbert, the secret of this high priced wood used in furniture.

BROESAMLE REUNION

About 40 members of the Broesamle family assembled on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Broesamle for their annual reunion. Representatives were present from Detroit, Battle Creek, Bridgewater and Ann Arbor. A social afternoon followed the co-operative dinner. No officers were elected, as the Broesamle families are considering the matter of uniting with the Paul families for their annual get-together. This will be decided at the Paul reunion to be held in August.

WACKENHUT GALL REUNION

The 13th annual Wackenhut-Gall reunion was held on Sunday at Ella Sharp park, Jackson. Sixty members were present, coming from Fowler, Mason, Williamston, Eden, Ann Arbor, Manchester, Grass Lake, Jackson, Whitmore Lake, Chelsea, and Rochester, N. Y.

Election of officers followed the dinner, the following being chosen for 1941:

President—William Kappler, Ann Arbor.
Vice-Pres.—Edwin Wagner, Ann Arbor.
Secretary—Mrs. Ray Wurster, Ann Arbor.
Treasurer—Howard Kimball, Manchester.

Sports Committee—Mrs. Wurster. Games furnished amusement for the afternoon and prizes were awarded the winners. Mrs. Elizabeth Wackenhut of Chelsea and Mr. Kappler were the oldest members present; Mrs. Tina Weick of Rochester, N. Y. came the longest distance and Mrs. Kappler, with 11, had the largest family. The 1941 reunion will be held at the same place.

Those attending from Chelsea were Mrs. Wackenhut, Mr. and Mrs. August Hilsinger, Misses Lillie Wackenhut and Amanda Wolpert.

School Districts Must File Annual Reports

Affidavit blanks for the use of school boards in submitting the published proceedings of their annual meeting to the Department of Public Instruction were mailed last week to the various district boards of the state.

School law requires that graded, rural agricultural, and township school districts shall publish in the local newspaper the complete proceedings of the annual meeting together with an itemized statement of the receipts and expenditures of the district, and that a copy of the paper, together with a properly executed affidavit of publication, must be mailed to the Superintendent of Public Instruction, Lansing, before August fifteenth.

Distribution of state aid funds to the local school district for the coming school year may be withheld if the published report and the affidavit are not filed.

Luminous Beetles

Luminous beetles are carried by certain natives of South America when they journey at night.

Trapping Insects

By trapping insects high in the air, entomologists are able to gather valuable new information on the habits, and particularly on the spread, of some of the destructive pests of farm crops.

HAIL DAMAGES CROPS.

Chelsea and vicinity had two hard rain storms on Monday afternoon and evening. The first storm came about three o'clock, and the second at seven o'clock, at which time it hailed real hard. Some of the hailstones were as large as marbles. Many of the fields were badly flattened by the heavy rain and hail, and apple and berry crops were badly damaged.

In the storm on Monday afternoon, which was especially severe around Stockbridge, James Fall, 69 year old farmer living four miles north of Stockbridge, was burned to death and his son, Phoebe Fall, 85, of Detroit suffered shock and burns when lightning struck the barn in which they were drawing hay. The elder Fall was knocked unconscious and his son was knocked down by the electric charge.

Two neighboring farmers, Melvin Latimer and Howard Gauss, who also were working in the barn, helped the younger man out of the barn, but when they returned for the father they were driven back by flames.

Much damage was done by wind at Portage and Base lakes, where boat docks were blown over, trees blown down and large limbs broken from the trees. Some cottages were also damaged.

The Broesamle reunion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Broesamle of Chelsea on Sunday. About 40 were present. Those from here were Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Riemenschneider.

Mrs. Tena Riemenschneider, Miss Ricka Kalmbach, the Wm. Broesamle family, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Notten.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Schweinfurth, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Notten were in St. Charles on Saturday, where they attended the summer picnic of the Michigan Jersey Cattle Club at the Herman Waters farm. Prof. Keide of Iowa University classified the herd of Jerseys owned by Mr. Walters. Several breeders from Washtenaw county were present.

The 4-H Calf club met at the home of Leroy Loveland on Wednesday evening. H. S. Osler of Ann Arbor showed moving pictures.

Herman, Arthur and Carrie Oesterle were entertained by the Elmer Sager family on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Notten were in Ann Arbor on Tuesday.

Ed. Simmonds of Ypsilanti and Clifford Frayer of The Oaklands visited the Notten farm on Wednesday to make plans and select cattle for the S. E. M. Parish Show which will be held at the Hayes farm in August.

The social at the church, given by the Epworth League on Wednesday evening of last week, was well attended.

Miss Doris Sager was in Jackson on Tuesday.

Herman Schatz and Miss Sophia Schatz of Chelsea and Geo. Schatz of Fresno, Calif. visited at the home of Fred Notten on Friday evening.

Lloyd Heydlauff and family were callers also.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Kalmbach were in North Baltimore, Ohio on Sunday, where they visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kalmbach, a former resident of Francisco.

Mrs. Jennie Miller returned from Hastings on Monday. She attended a school reunion in the district where she was a pupil in former years.

Victor Shultz of Wayne was a caller in this vicinity on Saturday.

Francisco

Mrs. Truman Lehmann was hostess, Tuesday, to the Frisco Ladies' Club. There were eighteen in attendance. Mrs. Chester Notten, sister of Mrs. Lehmann, was a guest. A fine dinner was enjoyed, following which games and contests were in order. Prizes in those were awarded as follows: Mrs. Albert Bachman, Mrs. Walter Gardner, Mrs. Jas. Caldwell, Mrs. Thomas Wortley, Mrs. Clifford Wolfe, Mrs. Eva Bohne, Mrs. Walter Kalmbach and Miss Marie Bender.

Several from here attended funeral services in Chelsea for Mrs. Minnie Plowe on Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Plowe had resided in Francisco for many years, before taking up residence in Chelsea. Her husband, the late Henry Plowe, was telegrapher here in Francisco for 47 years until falling health forced him to retire.

Mrs. Plowe's body was interred in the

The annual piano accordion contest sponsored by Grinnell Bros. and held July 5 at their store in Ann Arbor, was won by Grace Kiss, 20 years old, of Chelsea. Seventeen contestants competed for the honors in the Ann Arbor area. Miss Kiss will receive a four-day trip to Chicago on July 29, with expenses paid, where she will compete for district honors. The winner of the Chicago contest will receive an expense-paid trip to the San Francisco World's Fair, where the national Grinnell Bros. finals will be held.

Standard Liners Bring Quick Results!

Lansing—The "I told you so" prophets are still busy. Way back before the Republican party convened at Philadelphia, a few observers of public opinion were daring to raise their voices in advocacy of Wendell L. Willkie for the Republican nomination for president. They did so on the basis of several interesting assumptions. These include the following:

1. The war crisis demanded a man of mature judgment and practical experience who had demonstrated ability to get things done.
2. The party desperately needed a man with personality who could match the famous Roosevelt fireside magnetism.
3. The public was fed up on political ballyhoo and bosses. Old guardism would invite defeat.
4. If the voter was willing to cross party lines, the party should be willing to cross them for its nominee.

Willkie, a life-long Democrat until four years ago, is proof to these prophets that political changes of a revolutionary kind are taking place in the United States.
Do they point the way to similar changes in Michigan? Let us examine the arguments.

Phenomenon
In these fast-moving blitzkrieg days, the nomination of Willkie has been widely proclaimed to be a phenomenon of first magnitude.
Out of the unknown the Hoosier comet suddenly appeared crossing our political skies.
To the amazement of old-timers, the Willkie candidacy was in utter contradiction and defiance of most established rules of politics.
The utility president declined to accept contributions, mailing back checks to donors. He spent only around $4,000 of his own funds. His hotel reservation for a headquarters was for two rooms. He declined to make deals with party bosses. He spoke frankly in favor of adding the Allies with supplies at a time when Republican non-interventionists were labeling the Democrats as having a "war party".

Where some campaign promoters deemed it to be traditionally expedient to tempt delegates with free liquor at lavishly equipped bars, the Willkie technique scorned the device.
Was the Willkie abandon and disregard for conventional customs an astute analysis of the 1940 public mind? Here is what happened:
One by one the favorite sons—Dewey, Taft and Vandenberg—fell by the wayside before this strange combination of social forces. The alliterative Wendell L. Willkie, a college radical in his Indiana youth and a New Dealer from 1932 to 1939, became the 1940 nominee of the Republican party! Little wonder that commentators and writers have written profusely since the convention.

Parallel in Michigan?
That a parallel exists in Michigan public opinion is a contention advanced by many independent-thinking Republicans today.
We present it solely as speculation in keeping with our policy of non-partisan writing.
Whether the parallel is true or untrue is for history to decide.
The national and state situations are not exactly the same. In the first place, a Democrat occupies the White House; a Republican is in Michigan's capitol executive office. Secondly, war responsibility is largely national, not from Lansing.
Then where does the "parallel" begin?
The argument goes like this: The Willkie disregard for state bosses and ballot ballyhoo is a sign that Michigan voters want leaders who are "free" and "independent" from alliances and commitments.
In these days of labels, few voters will disagree with "free" and "independent" as being desirable qualifications for any public official. The difference arises when we try to define what we say.

Independents
Among the present Republican candidates in Michigan who are definitely known to be "anti-boss" independents are Elton R. Eaton of Plymouth, running for lieutenant governor; O. L. Smith of Detroit, candidate for governor, and James Thomson of Jackson, aspirant for lieutenant governor.
The other candidates may be entitled also to this label, but so far they have not openly spurned assistance which Michigan's new national party committee, Frank D. McKay of Grand Rapids, might be able to give them. Hence their position is not a matter of record. Such is our distinction.
In this latter classification are such candidates as Arthur Vandenberg, Luren D. Dickinson, Miller Eunkel and Felix Flynn. They are party organization leaders in the accepted sense.
To jump to the conclusion that Willkie's nomination is proof of new trend in Michigan politics and hence that Michigan voters are going to let the proverbial apple at the September primary are comforting thoughts, of course, to the supporters of Messrs. Eaton, Smith and Thomson.

Reminders
But then as you think you have everything nicely figured out, several disturbing reminders arise. You recall it was the Michigan delegation, officially led by McKay, which spectacularly accelerated the Willkie landslide in the sixth ballot.
However, despite what prophets may say and what analysts may deduce on paper, the only answer will come from the primary and convention in September. We do not venture even a surmise as to the outcome.

Twilight Ball League

(By Roland Spaulding)
For the past few weeks I have picked what I thought to be the "game of the week" and told you about it. However, during the past week there were three outstanding games played.
Hi-Speed secured a win to step back into second place from where Emmett's boys will try to defeat the leading team, Spaulding Chevrolet, tonight.
Federal Screw led Spaulding Chevrolet until the last inning when "Peewee" Dvorak stole home for the tying run. Then, in an extra inning, a home run by "Coke" Lanning with Stan LaSavage on base finished the game in favor of Spaulding Chevrolet.
Now for the third "game of the week", Chelsea Spring, with King and LaSavage back in their lineup, nosed out Federal Screw by one run in a very close game.

Results
Thursday, July 11—Chelsea Spring 12, Hi-Speed 28.
Friday, July 12—Spaulding Chevrolet 6, Federal Screw 5.
Monday, July 15—Cassidy Lake Tech. and Cassidy Lake Fac. rained out.
Tuesday, July 16—Chelsea Spring 7, Federal Screw 6.

Schedule
Thursday, July 18—Spaulding Chevrolet vs. Hi-Speed.
Monday, July 22—Hi-Speed vs. Cassidy Lake Fac.
Tuesday, July 23—Federal Screw vs. Cassidy Lake Tech.

Folks, we're really playing ball this year. All the players are working hard and spending a lot of time on the field. Our sponsors, altogether, have spent over $100 for equipment so far this year. We play Monday, Tuesday and Thursday of every week, on good diamond, with very good seating facilities for the spectators. Certainly now, we deserve a larger fan attendance. Drop out every once in awhile, say at least once a week, will you?

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Mureken of Highland Park spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Clem Waggoner, and Sunday guests were Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Enos and son of Ferndale.

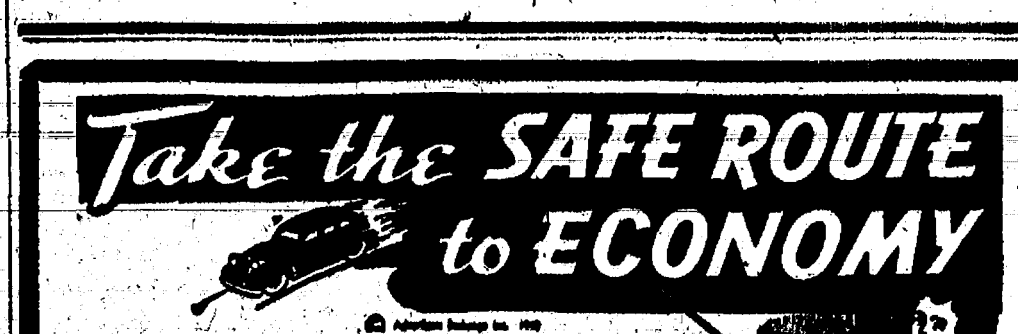

FIRE EMPLOYEES HOLD PICNIC
Employees of the Detroit and Chelsea plants of the Central Fire Products Co., with their families, held an enjoyable picnic on Saturday at Independence lake, north of Ann Arbor. It was an all-day gathering and was attended by about 300 people.

Music for the occasion was furnished by the Cassidy Lake band. Following the picnic dinner at noon, contests were enjoyed, with prizes for the winners and air-guns and balloons were given the children.
In the drawing for prizes among the workmen, Mr. Roberts received the grand prize and others were won by Leon Fox, James Roberts and Stephen Slane.

A baseball game, Chelsea vs. Detroit, with Donald Bacon as umpire, was an afternoon attraction, the umpire's decisions being made to suit conditions rather than according to the rules of the game.
Hot dogs, ice cream, etc. were furnished by the company.

The question had, for Gay, only one implication. Resentment, like a fresh breeze blowing through a room too warm and perfumed, cleared the confusion from her mind.

"Did you think I knew you were here?" she asked quietly but with warmth-kindling in her voice.

He turned to look at her in surprise.

"But if you didn't, why did you come?"

Resentment flamed into anger.

But anger was stupid. She returned his glance directly, her chin unconsciously lifting, her eyes bright and scornful.

"You haven't become less—fatuous, have you?" she asked.

"I didn't mean that the way it sounded," he said quickly. "I'm not that fatuous. I meant how did you expect to get in unless someone was here?"

Her level glance did not waver. His momentary confusion gave her the advantage. She pressed it resolutely, still smarting from humiliating pride.

"Why should I have had the faintest idea that you, especially, should be here?" she asked.

"But who else would be?" His expression was frankly puzzled. "I've never rented it. My kid sister had a house-party here this summer. Otherwise it hasn't been occupied except when I've been here."

She pressed her advantage stubbornly, incensed by the possessive tone in which he spoke of her property. "Who gave you permission to use the cabin at any time?" she asked.

"Permission?" He stared at her in perplexity.

"Didn't you know that Uncle John left the cabin to me?"

"To you?"

"Yes." It was the granddaughter of David Graham speaking, the granddaughter of Peter Schuyler, secure in her inherited assurance, quite obviously taking pleasure in the routing of an intruder.

"But that's impossible," he said crisply.

"His lawyer sent me a key three years ago nearly," Gay said, "just after Uncle John died."

She watched him intently, expecting some attempt at justification, explanation, an apology, perhaps. She did not expect the smile of somewhat incredulous amusement which crept slowly upward from his lips into his eyes.

"Does that impress you as being amusing?" she asked with dignity. "Uncle John was my godfather. There's no particular reason, is there, why he shouldn't have left the cabin to me?"

"I suppose there isn't," he said, as though that point was of small importance. The smile deepened. "I was just wondering how many other people are likely to pop in here with keys. You see," he continued in reply to her questioning glance, "Uncle John's lawyer sent one to me. I naturally assumed that the cabin was mine and have used it whenever I've had a chance."

She had not considered that possibility. It was true, of course. It was the only logical explanation. She felt, for a moment, in sympathy with John, who, as well as she, was the victim of some sentimentality or eccentricity contrived by a member of an older generation. But Uncle John, as she remembered him, had been neither sentimental nor eccentric. The lawyer had made a mistake, perhaps. At any rate, it wasn't John's fault any more than it was hers.

"I understand that," she said, "because I assumed that it belonged to me." Neither pride nor resentment was entirely proof against the humor in the situation, against the charm of his rare slow smile. Her eyes met John's in laughter and sympathy. Then—

"So you can't turn me out after all, can you?" he asked.

"No," she said slowly, considering. "But I can ask you to go."

His smile faded a little.

"Are you planning to stay—indefinitely?" he asked.

"Not longer than a week, perhaps."

"I have another week," she knew that he, too, was considering, choosing his words with deliberation, trying to gauge their probable effect upon her. "It's rather an important week," he went on, "my last vacation, probably, for some time."

"This week is important for me, too," Gay said with equal deliberation. "My last of—." She paused; then added, smiling, "—of vacation probably for some time."

The slanting smile, more mocking than amused, told her that he understood the implication of the pause and the smile.

"I should be a gentleman and clear out, I suppose," he said slowly. "Unfortunately, it isn't as simple as that. I'm making an experiment," he said diffidently. "It's just getting well under way."

"Amateur photography?" Kate asked from her position against the chimney.

"Probably of no greater importance," he said with a deprecating laugh.

Kate shouldn't have, Gay thought, feeling again that reluctant but compelling sympathy for John. Kate was getting back at her. She deserved it, perhaps, but he didn't. Even six years ago when he'd barely started, he'd been very earnest about his work. Kate shouldn't have—She wanted, somehow, to make amends.

"I suggested photography," Gay said, "I thought possibly the materials in your laboratory were things Uncle John had left."

"I'm sorry. It's just that—" He ran his hand with an impatient gesture across his crisp dark hair. "It probably won't amount to anything, but I want to see it through. If I leave here now, all that I've done will be lost."

"I suppose I should be a lady and leave you in peace," Gay said quietly, quite steadily, but with a sliver of threat of retaliation running through her voice. "Unfortunately, that isn't so simple, either. I'm making an experiment."

"And you must make it here?"

"Yes," she said, after a moment. "I came for that purpose. I must make my experiment here."

A pause followed, not warm and intimate as the first had been. This was a truce, a break in active hostilities. John walked to the table and picked up his pipe. Gay stood half-leaning against the back of the chair, watching the movements of his hands in the yellow cone of lamp-light. She remembered them, brown and strong, against a canoe paddle, brown in lamplight as she

CHAPTER III

He'd have to clear out. He'd have to clear out, now, tonight, before he saw her again. John walked, restlessly, along the plunging strides, along the rutted clay-shell road. The experiment was less important than what was certain to happen to him if he remained at the cabin. He'd fought that battle twice before, and he had no intention of exposing himself to the necessity of fighting it again.

But wasn't that necessity already upon him? He'd wondered how he would feel if, by chance, he should meet her again. Chance, assisted by Uncle John, had given him that knowledge. He felt as he'd felt when they parted six years ago. There was something between them which time and separation had not altered, more vital than it had been three years, six years ago, because they were more mature, now, more emotionally aware.

Not that he hadn't been emotionally aware of her that summer she'd spent at the cabin with Uncle John. He should have cleared out then, he told himself a trifle grimly, instead of prolonging what he had intended to be a week-end visit into a stay of three weeks.

He should have left before the day she'd turned her ankle walking with him through the woods and he'd carried her to the cabin in his arms. After that nothing could have induced him to leave. He remembered with a feeling of tenderness for the innocent ardor of their relationship which resentment could not efface, the week which had followed. He remembered saying goodbye to her at the station in Machesia, straining for a last glimpse of her face, young and defenseless in the transient grief of parting, tears glittering on her lashes, her wide sweetly curved mouth trembling in an effort to smile. "I'll see you soon, John," she'd said, clinging to his hand as they stood together in the vestibule of the train. And, sustained by his presence, too much in love with her to reason or question, "Yes, very soon," he'd replied.

But he had not seen her again until he'd gone with Uncle John to New York for her debutante party. Her mother had taken her abroad that fall after her summer here. She'd written to him at lengthening intervals during the first year, from Geneva where she was in school, from various points on the French Riviera when her vacations permitted opportunities for travel. He'd been relieved when the letters stopped coming, glad that he had been on a canoe trip in Canada when, nearly two years later, the cablegram announcing her return to America had arrived, glad, too, though he'd watched the mail for weeks, that she had not answered his formal note of apology and explanation. It had been easier, then, to close a door in his mind, for reason, during long hours of logical rebellion.

Gay glanced at her in gratitude which held, as well, an element of surprise.

"You can draw straws in the morning," Kate continued. "Or perhaps one or the other of these experiments will be completed by then."

"Of course," he said, after only a slight hesitation. "There are, unfortunately, no hotel accommodations nearer than Machesia."

"And that," Kate said cheerfully, "would, I think, be carrying matters much too far."

"I agree with you," he smiled appreciatively at Kate. "There's a cot in the room I work in. You can have the larger room, there. I see you've brought blankets and there is linen, I think." He started toward the door. "I'll get my things out of the way."

"Don't bother," Kate said, starting with her tray toward the storeroom. "We can manage just for tonight."

They were ignoring her, Gay thought, making plans in which she had no voice. He was friendly enough with Kate. Gay resented that friendliness from which she was excluded. She felt, again, a compelling urge to attract and hold his attention.

"John—" she said. He stopped at the door, turned, stood waiting for her to continue. Kate, at the kitchen door, glanced back over her shoulder.

Gay held herself very erect. "I will not be leaving tomorrow," she said, conscious of and regretting the arrogance in her voice. "She would have liked to reach him through friendliness. Arrogance was too obvious and too petty an approach. But whatever he felt for her it was not friendliness. The glance he exchanged, now, with Kate impelled her to add, "Kate can do as she likes, of course. I shall stay."

"Which means—" he asked.

"That I will appreciate it if you'll remove your things from the room."

He was silent for a moment. Then, "Certainly," he said civilly.

"Now, Gay," Kate began with some asperity, paused, rolled her eyes upward, compressed her lips and went out into the kitchen. John remained standing in the opposite doorway. The slanting smile appeared as her eyes met his.

"The long arm of coincidence," he said.

"It is—Incredible."

"Not too incredible. You might have found me here any one of a number of times during the past three years."

"I had no thought of finding you."

"I know that." He had, she thought, interpreted the statement as a rebuff. The smile vanished.

"I'm sorry to be a complication."

He was a complication. He had been a complication since the night they'd driven together through Central Park, before that evening, since the summer here at the lake. She realized, now, how largely he'd been responsible for her dissatisfaction, her restlessness, her uncertainty concerning that approaching marriage to Todd. A complication? That was too unimportant a word. Looking at John, silent and unapproachable in the doorway, feeling his presence here in every tingling nerve, with every racing heartbeat, Gay knew she had found the answer to troubling questions. He was necessary to her. He'd always been, since she was fifteen years old. Todd was not a necessity. It was as simple, as hopelessly, frighteningly involved as that.

CHAPTER III

He'd have to clear out. He'd have to clear out, now, tonight, before he saw her again. John walked, restlessly, along the plunging strides, along the rutted clay-shell road. The experiment was less important than what was certain to happen to him if he remained at the cabin. He'd fought that battle twice before, and he had no intention of exposing himself to the necessity of fighting it again.

But wasn't that necessity already upon him? He'd wondered how he would feel if, by chance, he should meet her again. Chance, assisted by Uncle John, had given him that knowledge. He felt as he'd felt when they parted six years ago. There was something between them which time and separation had not altered, more vital than it had been three years, six years ago, because they were more mature, now, more emotionally aware.

Not that he hadn't been emotionally aware of her that summer she'd spent at the cabin with Uncle John. He should have cleared out then, he told himself a trifle grimly, instead of prolonging what he had intended to be a week-end visit into a stay of three weeks.

He should have left before the day she'd turned her ankle walking with him through the woods and he'd carried her to the cabin in his arms. After that nothing could have induced him to leave. He remembered with a feeling of tenderness for the innocent ardor of their relationship which resentment could not efface, the week which had followed. He remembered saying goodbye to her at the station in Machesia, straining for a last glimpse of her face, young and defenseless in the transient grief of parting, tears glittering on her lashes, her wide sweetly curved mouth trembling in an effort to smile. "I'll see you soon, John," she'd said, clinging to his hand as they stood together in the vestibule of the train. And, sustained by his presence, too much in love with her to reason or question, "Yes, very soon," he'd replied.

But he had not seen her again until he'd gone with Uncle John to New York for her debutante party. Her mother had taken her abroad that fall after her summer here. She'd written to him at lengthening intervals during the first year, from Geneva where she was in school, from various points on the French Riviera when her vacations permitted opportunities for travel. He'd been relieved when the letters stopped coming, glad that he had been on a canoe trip in Canada when, nearly two years later, the cablegram announcing her return to America had arrived, glad, too, though he'd watched the mail for weeks, that she had not answered his formal note of apology and explanation. It had been easier, then, to close a door in his mind, for reason, during long hours of logical rebellion.

Gay glanced at her in gratitude which held, as well, an element of surprise.

"You can draw straws in the morning," Kate continued. "Or perhaps one or the other of these experiments will be completed by then."

"Of course," he said, after only a slight hesitation. "There are, unfortunately, no hotel accommodations nearer than Machesia."

"And that," Kate said cheerfully, "would, I think, be carrying matters much too far."

"I agree with you," he smiled appreciatively at Kate. "There's a cot in the room I work in. You can have the larger room, there. I see you've brought blankets and there is linen, I think." He started toward the door. "I'll get my things out of the way."

"Don't bother," Kate said, startling thought, had convinced him that the door must be closed and locked and the key thrown away.

The key? John turned, realizing that he had reached the village. Why had Uncle John made that gesture? he wondered, walking more slowly back toward the cabin. He'd known, of course, of that young attachment between himself and Gay. It probably hadn't been difficult for Uncle John to read his thoughts the morning after the party in New York when he, John, had insisted, stubbornly and not very considerably, that they return to Cambridge. And Uncle John loved Gay. He had for her a deeper affection, perhaps, than for anyone in the world except him.

But Uncle John should have foreseen, he thought irritably, that nothing of lasting value could come of that attachment. He was romantic, idealistic, in the way of his generation, but he was neither sentimental nor impractical. He must have seen that he, John, and Gabriella Graham lived in different worlds, that each would be a stranger in the atmosphere familiar to the other. Perhaps, though, the thought continued, when you were dying, such things as wealth or a lack of it—the differences in viewpoint which wealth engendered, the distinctions and antagonisms it raised seemed relatively unimportant. Uncle John had known he hadn't long to live when they'd gone to New York. Perhaps during the following weeks, when his grasp on living had loosened, some wisdom had come to him which, by the gesture, he had attempted to communicate to them.

Perhaps—but the wisdom which might come with death was, now, of no practical value. He and Gay had in all probability a great deal of living to do. Their divergent courses were charted, had been determined, he supposed, long before they met here at the lake. That meeting was accidental and had no influence upon the direction of their separate lives. He was going to Portland to take over Dr. Sargeant's practice for a year—in payment for loans which had enabled him to complete his medical course at Harvard. After that, if he could manage to support himself, he was going on with scientific research. There were before him years of work which he loved, of loneliness which he accepted. Gay was to marry Todd Janeway.

He had not allowed himself to think of that until now. His thoughts had revolved warily, dodging that painful fact. But it must be faced, squarely and honestly. The fact must be accepted and removed from his mind. He'd known, of course, almost as soon as the engagement had been announced, he'd thought he'd accepted it. He'd been able, during the summer, to look at camera-poses of Gay and Todd Janeway with interest not too intolerably mixed with pain. There had been a great many of them. It would be an important wedding. Todd Janeway was connected with the private bank in New York of which his father was president. The Janeway estate on the Hudson adjoined "Dunedin," the Graham estate. It was all eminently suitable, he supposed. He'd met young Janeway at Gay's party and had been impressed with his friendly manner and blond good looks. Oh yes, it was all eminently suitable, Gay's destiny, determined at her birth, an eventuality which no chance meeting could alter or efface.

The cigarette he had lit and neglected had burned his fingers. The smart of physical pain routed memories, brought him abruptly to his senses. What he'd been thinking was madness. Uncle John had not intended them to have a stolen week together, hidden away in the woods. And he'd been presumptuous in assuming that Gay had any such thought or desire. Besides, there was Miss Oliver—

No, not too presumptuous, reverting to Gay's possible thought and desire. He'd seen the expression in her eyes when she'd looked at him through the lamplight. There was no safe middle-course of friendship for them. At a word, a gesture, the antagonism which was their safeguard would melt and with more far-reaching consequences, now, perhaps, than in the past, since now they met as a man and a woman and would never meet again.

His resolution wavered as he opened the door into the kitchen. Knowing that she was there seemed to give the door she had opened an especial significance. He felt her presence in the atmosphere of the kitchen and more materially in the perfume that filled the air with a fading scent. A light burned in the living-room. He would not go in there. He passed the door with his face averted. And then he heard her voice, calling his name. He turned, disconcerted, incensed at having his resolution so unexpectedly frustrated, immensely and joyfully relieved.

"Hello," he said from the doorway. "I thought you were asleep."

"I am—almost." She sat curled against heaped cushions in a corner of the couch beside the hearth. She wore a soft white woolen robe fastened close up around her throat with long sleeves and a cord knotted about her waist. The light from the lamp fell upon her loosened mop of red-brown hair, lay warmly against the curve of her cheek. She smiled up at him drowsily, an overtone of friendliness in her long very deep blue eyes.

"You should be in bed." He walked to the fireplace in which a log she had evidently placed there burned above a bed of embers. "Are you warm enough? It's cool here at night."

"It's heavenly. New York has been a blazing furnace."

"The papers report a heat wave." He bent over the log on the andiron, making a clattering noise with the tongs.

"It's been really dreadful."

"So I've understood."

She laughed suddenly, disarmingly. "Must we talk about the weather?" she asked.

He rose to a standing position, stood looking down at her, unable to resist the appeal of her smile. "You suggest a subject," he said. "I'm afraid I lugged in the heat-wave."

The smile slowly vanished. "I've been thinking of Uncle John," she said. "I was terribly sorry not to have come for his funeral."

"It was pretty ghastly. The college turned out. You were fortunate to have escaped it."

"But I would have come. I was in Bermuda."

"Yes, I know." He walked to the side of the hearth opposite to the couch, rested his elbow on the low stone shelf, stood looking down at her through the smoke of his cigarette. "You wrote me."

"Dad cabled. I couldn't have made it." Her eyes moved slowly, a little sadly around the room. "It's strange to be here without him."

"I've become accustomed to it. I've been here half a dozen times in the past three years."

"Kate told me I shouldn't have assumed that he left me this." Reviving-humor glinted between her thick dark lashes. "She pointed out a few things I'd overlooked, that there would have been a deed, a transfer of property, tax-bills."

"Uncle John's estate pays the taxes. There has been a transfer of property. The estate—there's a very little—is held in trust for my mother during her lifetime. At her death it reverts to my sisters and to me."

"Then I am—intruding?" she said uncertainly. "The cabin is—yours?"

"Not entirely, apparently. Not for an uncertain number of years."

"I've been wondering. That's why I waited up to talk to you. I'm afraid you've been bearing some expense which I should have shared. After all, my option—is that the word?—should entail responsibility as well as create privilege. Do I owe you anything?"

"Certainly not," he said a trifle brusquely.

"But the expense of taxes and upkeep must cut into your mother's income," she persisted.

"There's a special fund for the maintenance of the property."

"But that's hardly fair, is it?" she asked impulsively. "That fund might be added to your mother's income if some other arrangement was made. Why can't I help? If Uncle John intended me to have the privilege of coming here whenever I like, certainly you shouldn't object to my sharing the expense."

"That's quite unnecessary," he said stiffly and saw her expression change. She had, he knew, interpreted the words, the tone of his voice, as a rebuff. And rightly, too, he thought in bitter self-reproach. Her offer had been fair and generous. Why couldn't he have accepted it in the spirit in which it was made? Why couldn't he make amends, now, instead of letting moments pass in stubborn silence until the opportunity was gone.

Presently, with a gesture which expressed some thought completed, some course of action determined, she dropped the fringed end of the cord. As he watched her, still broodingly silent, she rose from the couch, composed, lovely, remote.

"Then I shall be obliged to stay as your guest," she said and walked toward the closed door into the room she was to share with Kate.

"You win again, Gay." Strange that it was less difficult to renew his resolution now that he realized he'd been a presumptuous fool. Odd that now, when her manner expressed indifference, he was impatient to go. "I won't be here. I'm leaving."

But flinging off at this hour was unnecessarily dramatic and so he added, "—tomorrow."

"You're being pretty—stuffy about this, aren't you?" she asked.

"Possibly." The knowledge of what he had seen in her face was sustaining. He felt himself relaxing as though, by some agency, a strain had been relieved. "Worse than that," he continued—responding to the humor and the friendliness in her smile. "I'm being, I've been, unparadoxically rude."

"You have," she agreed cheerfully. "I understand, though. The shock was, is, mutual. We've neither of us behaved very well. Let's not make—decisions tonight."

"But my decision is made."

He knew that his voice lacked conviction. He saw her smile widen and deepen. "Trevocably," she asked.

"What big words you use, Gabriella!"

She appeared to be satisfied. "Shocks are wearing," she said. "I'm going to get some sleep."

"You'd better. You look all in."

"Thank you. Aren't you afraid you'll turn my head?" She stood smiling back over her shoulder, her hand on the knob of the door. "Good-night."

"Good-night. Pleasant dreams."

"I know I shall have them. Remember. No decisions. We'll draw Kate's straws—tomorrow."

Gay lay on the floor in front of the cabin, her face buried in the hollow

Between her crossed arms. The sun shone warmly on her back and legs and the wind, ruffling her hair, was refreshingly cool. The float moved gently, rocked by waves which scurried before the wind across the surface of the lake. The warmth, the gentle motion, the whispering sound of the water, induced a state of drowsy contentment. She found it increasingly difficult to concentrate upon problems and eventualities though that was what she had gone there to do.

Not that problems were pressing. They seemed to retreat farther into that hazy distance with each day that she spent at the lake. She was active from the hour of their early breakfast until the inevitable moment when her eyes dropped over a magazine, the patchwork board of the word games which Kate insisted to while away the after-supper interval when darkness fell over the woods and the lake. She slept soundly, without dreaming.

It was the air of Maine, she supposed.

"Yes, I know." He walked to the side of the hearth opposite to the couch, rested his elbow on the low stone shelf, stood looking down at her through the smoke of his cigarette. "You wrote me."

"Dad cabled. I couldn't have made it." Her eyes moved slowly, a little sadly around the room. "It's strange to be here without him."

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of money secured by a mortgage dated the 25th day of June, A. D. 1935, executed by Herbert S. Reese and Ellen Reese, of the City of Ann Arbor, County of Washtenaw and State of Michigan, to Ann Arbor Savings and Commercial Bank, a Michigan Banking Corporation, which said mortgage was duly recorded in the Office of the Register of Deeds of Washtenaw County, Michigan, in Liber 212 of Mortgages, on Page 519, at 4:00 o'clock P. M. on the 27th day of June, 1938.

And Whereas, by the terms of said mortgage, it is provided that in case default be made in the payment of any installment of principal or of the interest, taxes, assessments or insurance, or any part thereof on or any day whereon the same is made payable, and should the same remain due and unpaid for the space of 30 days, then, and thereupon, the principal sum of said mortgage, together with all interest, taxes, assessments and insurance paid, shall at the option of the mortgagee, become and be due and payable forthwith, and default having been made in the payment of the interest and taxes provided in said mortgage, which default has continued for more than thirty days, the said mortgagee doth hereby exercise its option to declare the principal sum of said mortgage and all arrearages of interest and taxes due and payable.

And Whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice is the sum of $199.04 principal and interest of $6.97 to date and the attorney fee provided by statute in said case, and the whole amount claimed to be unpaid on said mortgage is the sum of $206.01, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt now remaining secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the said power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder at the south front door of the courthouse in the City of Ann Arbor, in the County of Washtenaw, on

Fish Factory

Drayton Plaine hatchery, operated by the state Department of conservation and recently enlarged, is to be dedicated Sunday, July 14. Located near Smiths, it has been operated since 1931. The hatchery now has facilities for production of five million brook trout and a half million bass each year. Above are shown main buildings and exhibition ponds. Ex-pansion has provided 45 acres of rearing ponds. Visitors, Sunday, will gain insight into methods department employs in producing millions of fish for transfer to lakes and streams every year.

STATE OF MICHIGAN

In the Circuit Court for the County of Washtenaw, In Chancery.

Edith G. West, Plaintiff, vs.

Clifford West, Defendant.

Order of Publication

Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the County of Washtenaw, on the 1st day of July, A. D. 1940.

It is satisfactorily appearing to this Court by affidavit on file that a chancery summons has been issued out of and under the seal of said Court for the appearance of said defendant therein, and that the same could not be served on or before the return day thereof because the said defendant, being a resident of said State of Michigan, was concealed therein or elsewhere, and said chancery summons having been returned with the certificate of the sheriff of said county that the defendant could not be found in said State of Michigan on or before the return day of said summons, on motion of Victor H. Lane, Jr., attorney for said plaintiff, it is ordered, that the said defendant, Clifford West, cause his appearance to be entered in said Court and cause within three months after the date of this order, and that in case of his appearance he cause his answer to the plaintiff's bill of complaint to be filed, and a copy thereof served upon the attorney for the plaintiff within twenty days after service upon him of a copy of said bill, and notice of this order, and that in default thereof, the said bill be taken as confessed by said defendant.

And on like motion it is further ordered that within forty days after the date hereof, the plaintiff cause a notice of this order to be published in the Chelsea Standard, a newspaper printed, published and circulated in said County of Washtenaw, and that such publication be continued once in each week for six weeks in succession, or that she cause a copy of this order to be personally served upon said defendant at least twenty days before the time herein prescribed for the appearance of said defendant.

And on like motion it is further ordered that the said plaintiff cause a copy of this order to be mailed to said defendant at his last known post office address, by registered mail, and a return receipt demanded, at least twenty days before the time herein prescribed for the appearance of said defendant.

War Service in Services

Members of the Druid Hills Baptist church at Atlanta, Ga., kept abreast of the European crisis even during Sunday services. Dr. Louis D. Newton, pastor of the church, had a radio installed near the pulpit and halts at intervals during his sermon to bring his congregation the latest radio news bulletins.

Individual Freedom

FREEDOM BELONGS to the individual, and no system that denies this can possess truth and retain the support of enlightened thinkers. Intelligence votes slavery, which always results from obscuring that eternal freedom which is vital and real. Stephen and Paul did not hesitate before adverse popular opinion or misguided numbers of men, who think it was an urgent need to voice the truth. In the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," Mary Baker Eddy says (p. 224): "Truth brings the elements of liberty. On its banner is the soul-improving motto: 'Slavery is abolished. The power of God brings deliverance to the captive. No power can withstand divine Love.'"

It is an old argument of error that tyranny is justified because it works to bring about good for the majority; that it will procure orderliness and peace, and various other things. All practical needs, well into unity elements that appear discordant and erratic. Such a belief, manifesting itself in a form of government which denies individual freedom of thought, speech, and action, may appear for a time to improve material conditions by check-reins and other abuses which prey on individual rights. But the core of tyranny is its seeming power to produce a semblance of obedience through fear, instead of through intelligent self-discipline, and the basis upon which it rests cannot be made sound by over-sensuous eloquence. Tyranny rejects spiritual values, without which existence is a meaningless dream. Devoid of reality, lacking the divine attributes which ensure the continuity of all right ideas, its pretense to power falls before the law of God.

God is omnipotent, omnipresent, omniscient, and omnibenevolent, governing all His children through spiritual law. This divine law can be understood and demonstrated by all, for their mutual good. There is nothing in mortal being that can intervene between God and His creation, including man-made in His likeness, who is wholly good.

Even though this truth may be obscured for a time, it will stand in spite of all efforts of evil to erase it. Man cannot be separated from God, the cause of his being; the source of all real existence. Soon or late, every mortal will awake from the dream of separation from God, good, to hear and respond to the call of Love. The will principle and its reflection be understood as existing in everlasting harmony; and Love's likeness will be seen as eternally loving. Truth will sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall overflow the hiding place. (Isaiah 23:17)

Let us, therefore, seek and maintain the true sense of government that manifests the unalterable relationship existing between God and man; and let us not violate it by interposing a command to worship the idols of human will. Individuals must be free to offer their sole allegiance to God. The dawn of His day appears; the "bright and morning star" (Revelation 22:16) is seen as the coming of the Christ. Truth, the effect of this spiritual dawning on human thought, bringing hope and healing to men, is shown in the life and words of Christ Jesus. Right thinking individuals are united

In the prayerful effort to see true freedom and law as divine attributes, and to claim their benefits for all. Mankind must gain a fuller understanding of the First Commandment, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me" (Exodus 20:3), for obedience to it brings about the destruction of all evil. Then, like John the Revelator, all the people shall hear "a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God."

CHURCH CIRCLES

ST. PAUL'S EVANGELICAL
Rev. P. H. Grabowski, Pastor
Thursday, July 18th—
2:00 o'clock—Women's Guild picnic at the home of Mrs. Arthur Schairer, Pot-luck.
Sunday, July 21st—
10:00 o'clock—English service.
11:15 o'clock—Sunday school.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
Rev. Ray W. Barber, Pastor
The service of Divine worship is held each Sunday at 10:00, followed by the Church school at 11:15. Next Sunday reports will be heard from Robert Egton and Dwight Gadd, who attended summer conference at Klinger lake near Sturgis. John Hale will report on his attendance at the National Hi-Y conference at Oberlin, Ohio. The sermon subject for the morning will be "I Dare You!" This is the second sermon on this subject. Junior chorus practice is held each week. The chorus will sing on the closing Sunday of the church program, August 4. Senior choir meets today (Thursday) at 7:30.

Last Sunday the Pilgrim Fellowship of the church had charge of the morning worship service. The minister led the opening worship. Janet Haselwerdt read the Scripture lesson. Miss Joyce Ordway of Jackson was the guest soloist. The following were included as parts of the service:

Reports of Olivet delegates: Russell Olson, Peggy Almond, Lillian Allhouse, Doris Allhouse, Martha Barber. Olivet delegates are selected on a three-fold standard: Church school attendance, mid-week attendance and active participation in the work.

Attendance reports—Presentation of payment of current expense pledge by Mary May to Carl Hagg. Presentation of payment of benevolence pledge by Catherine Barber to Mrs. Anna Hoag.

Presentation of Pilgrim Fellowship pins by Raymond Gadd, Supt. of Church school.

Presentation of "I Dare You" award by the minister to Catherine Barber and Russell Olson.

A brief address: "I Dare You!" There were at the service three past presidents of Pilgrim Fellowship, the retiring president, and the president-elect.

The Pilgrim Fellowship has built its own mid-week program and published it semi-yearly. Mrs. Jennie Barber is the teacher and Mrs. Hilda McClure is sponsor for the organization.

There were twenty-one members of Pilgrim Fellowship this year. That is a larger group than the church has had for some years.

Lillian Allhouse and Doris Allhouse have had perfect Sunday school attendance this year. Lillian Allhouse has not missed a mid-week meeting.

Doris Allhouse has not missed a single mid-week meeting in two years. Russell Olson has not missed a mid-week meeting, Sunday school class or association meeting this year. He has missed just one choir practice.

Catherine Barber, Martha Barber, Peggy Almond, Dwight Gadd, and Gladys Harrison have not missed Sunday school class, and only one mid-week meeting during the year. Doris Allhouse and Lillian Allhouse have not missed a mid-week meeting this year. Bob Perkins has not missed a mid-week meeting since joining in March. Amos Binder and Charles Lane have not missed more than two mid-week meetings this year.

This year the Pilgrim Fellowship not only met all its financial responsibilities—church pledge, benevolence pledge, state dues, special Pilgrim Fellowship Fund—but have done so by their own efforts in giving and earning, without aid from the Sunday school, Ladies' Guild or Men's Club. They have sent five young people to Olivet Summer Conference.

Catherine Barber has not missed Sunday school or mid-week meeting, has been president of our Pilgrim Fellowship, vice-president of the Association Pilgrim Fellowship, and chairman of the committee for the Special Pilgrim Fellowship Fund. She has already raised $20 out of the hundred assigned to her by the association.

Peggy Almond is the new president for next year and has already been to conference to equip herself for the task.

Church Ball League

(By William Rademacher)
The Methodist softball team, behind the fine pitching of Dick White, triumphed over Congregational by the score of 13-6. This lifted the victors into a first place tie with St. Mary's who were tasting defeat at the hands of St. Paul's. White was never in trouble and it wasn't until his teammates had given him a big lead that he eased up and allowed their hapless opponents a few runs.

On the south diamond St. Mary's and St. Paul's hooked up in the best game thus far in the season. Regardless of the fact they made only 8 hits off the delivery of Bill Rademacher, St. Paul's capitalized on four St. Mary's errors to triumph, 5 to 4. Paul Schneider, St. Paul's pitcher, got fine support from his teammates, with Bob Stricker displaying some brilliant defensive work by catching a couple of long, hard-hit St. Mary's drives in deep left field. Art Lindauer collected a pair of singles for the victorious St. Paul's team while Bill Rademacher again led St. Mary's attack with a double and a single.

Standings: W L Pct.
St. Mary 3 1 .750
Methodist 3 1 .750
St. Paul 2 2 .500
Congregational 0 4 .000

Results July 10—
Methodists, 13 runs, 16 hits, 3 errors; Congregationals, 6 runs, 10 hits, 6 errors. Batteries: Methodists, D. White, Klemenscheider; Congregationals, Kinsey, Gaken.
St. Mary's, 6 runs, 6 hits, 2 errors; St. Paul's, 4 runs, 9 hits, 4 errors. Batteries: St. Paul's, Schneider and Lindauer; St. Mary's, Rademacher and Birch.

Games July 24—Methodists vs. St. Mary's, south diamond; St. Paul's vs. Congregationals, north diamond.

They Like Hot Dogs
Hot dogs, waffles, apple pie a la mode and coffee "just like mother makes" are four of the reasons why Canadian soldiers flock to the canteen in British Columbia house, Regent street, London. The canteen is operated by the Y. M. C. A. and all the service is provided voluntarily by members of the Canadian Women's club.

Civil Service Laws
Three states, Minnesota, Rhode Island and Alabama, adopted civil service laws during 1939. Civil service laws were, however, repealed outright in Arkansas and greatly modified in Michigan during 1939.

Announcements

The annual Odd Fellow-Rebekah picnic will be held July 21 at Huron River Park. Cars not having loads will meet at the I. O. O. F. hall at 12:30. Please bring one passing dish and own table service. Don't forget to bring the kiddies.

Actor Eats 'Paper'
The "paper" which Melvyn Douglas eats during one comic sequence of "Too Many Husbands," actually was made of very thin candy. So tasty was the prop paper, in fact, that Douglas' co-stars ate up the reserve supply before Douglas had completed his scene to the satisfaction of Director Wesley Ruggles.

An Old Custom
Ski competitions were held in California in gold rush days.
