Pedestrian Accidents Kill 26 People In June

One-quarter of all the persons killed in traffic accidents in Michigan during June were pedestrians. Preliminary figures show that over 100 persons were killed in traffic during the past month. 26 of them were pedestrians. The ages of the victims ranged from 2 years to 79 years. These figures were released by the Michigan State Safety Committee this week.

The committee is composed of State Police Commissioner Oscar G. Olanoff, Superintendent of Public Instruction Eugene B. Elliott, Secretary of State Harry F. Kelly and State Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner.

Pointing to the large percentage of pedestrian accidents, the committee declared that preventative action could be effective in this field. Three-quarters of all fatal pedestrian accidents occur during one-third of the day—the hours of dusk and darkness—from 5 p. m. to 1 a. m. By concentrating upon the factors known to contribute to such night fatalities it should be possible to reduce the death toll. Blame for pedestrian accidents is shared by both the motorist and the pedestrian.

A common explanation advanced by motorists involved in pedestrian accidents is that the glaring lights of approaching automobiles blinded them. The committee believes that such an accident cause could be eliminated. When blinded by approaching headlights motorists must slow down. There is no excuse for maintaining speed when visibility is seriously reduced.

Pedestrians share the accident blame when they fail to walk upon the left side of the highway, facing approaching traffic. The state law requires pedestrians to walk to the left. Violators are subject to arrest.

Michigan Banks Make 800,000 Loans In 1940

Forty-eight per cent of Michigan's commercial banks made more than 800,000 loans totaling over $900,000,000 to business firms and individuals throughout the state during the year 1939, according to the second semi-annual survey of bank lending activity of the American Bankers Association made public this week.

The survey was participated in by 209 banks or 48 per cent of the 433 commercial banks of the state. The 209 banks reported that during 1939 they made:

406,069 new loans totaling $456,973,081.
374,614 renewals of loans totaling $384,033,245.
21,224 mortgage loans totaling $59,138,609.

Total—801,887 loans, $900,194,935.

The survey reveals that business firms in the state are using only about one-third of the "open lines of credit" maintained for their use on the books of the banks. Ninety-eight banks in the larger centers of the state reported that they carried on their books during the second half of the year $118,603,351 in "open lines of credit" consisting of specific amounts of credit offered to and kept available for established borrowers for use as needed by them. Of this amount $38,311,048 or 32.5 per cent was actually used.

The average number of new loans made per bank was 1,943 and the average new loan was $1,125.

The average number of renewals per bank was 1,792 and the average renewal was $1,025.

The average number of mortgage loans per bank was 101 and the average mortgage was $2,791.

The Michigan survey was part of a national bank lending activity survey made by the American Bankers Association.

For the country as a whole 6,333 or 44 per cent of the commercial banks reported that they made 24,998,000 credit extensions totaling $39,816,516,000 during the year.

CHELSEA'S IN THE MOVIES!

Chelsea was selected by Wilding Pictures, Inc. of Detroit as the locale for small town scenes in the moving picture "Melody Comes To Town", which they are making for John Deere & Co. Other scenes will be made in the studios of the company at Hollywood, Calif. Representatives of the company were in town Monday and Tuesday getting their "shots", which included the presses of The Standard in action, some of our factory buildings, the post office, street scenes and numerous other scenes about the village and nearby territory.

President Al Mayer Leads Raid On Rats At New Parking Lot

Led by Alfred D. Mayer, village president, a ruthless blitzkrieg was loosed upon the rat population of Chelsea last Friday afternoon when the operation of leveling the new municipal parking lot was started.

The rats, hundreds of them, had grown up, married and raised families of their own in the Klingler barn which was recently wrecked. When the barn was razed the rats sought refuge in the rubbish piles in that vicinity, but when B. R. Cuyler of Ann Arbor started his bulldozer over the newly acquired property of the village the rats were forced to leave their hiding places and were slaughtered by the hundreds by local citizens who were armed with sturdy clubs.

In addition to the energetic and perspiring village president, other ringleaders in the murderous onslaught against the rats were L. R. Freeman, Carl Huston, Philip Broesamle, Bill Kolb, George Sidwell, and others. Estimates on the number of rats killed ranged from 60; this guess being by conservative Al Mayer, to a wild estimate of 1000 given by Otto Schanz who is more liberal with his statements.

However, in addition to eradication of the rats, the work of leveling the parking lot progressed very satisfactorily, and by 12 o'clock on Saturday the bulldozer had the lot in readiness for the finishing touches of some filling and later the surfacing to make it ready for use by the public. According to President Mayer it is planned to have the property ready for use in a couple of weeks. During the past week the village department purchased a parcel of land 34x89 feet of Oscar Ulrich at the rear of his lot, which will be used as an exit from the parking lot, so that motorists may drive either to East or Park streets when leaving.

Now that new direction signs have been placed on US-12 by the village it is believed that all available parking space will be used as anyone desiring to come to Chelsea can easily find the way if they are traveling on the new highway. The signs which are very attractive and easily seen were completed last week. In addition to the two large signs placed near the Manchester Road intersection, smaller signs were placed at each end of the old and new US-12 intersections. The state highway department has promised to install small reflector signs also, which will aid in directing motorists to Chelsea at night.

The efforts of the village administration in placing the signs and providing much-needed parking space within the village is a commendable step and they are to be commended for their spirit of cooperation with local business interests.

POSTMASTER H. D. WITHERELL WEDS MRS. EVA L. MOORE

Announcement is made that Chelsea's genial postmaster, H. D. Witherell and Mrs. Eva L. Moore were quietly married at Dexter on Saturday, July 20, with Rev. A. A. Schoen performing the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Witherell left for their summer home at Lewiston and a tour of the northern peninsula of the state. They will return to Chelsea about August 1 and their friends state that there will be a very cordial reception awaiting them upon their return. They will reside in their home at the corner of South and Garfield streets.

Church Ball League

(By William Rademacher)

The pacesetters of the Church Softball League, St. Mary's and Methodists, were victorious last Wednesday night, and this comes up to their crucial game on July 24, with identical records of 4 victories against 1 loss.

While Congregationalists were forfeiting to St. Mary's, Methodists were having a tough time with an ever powerful St. Paul's team. It wasn't until the last inning that the Methodists pushed over two runs to eke out a close victory, 13-12. White was the winning pitcher while Schneider lost a tough one.

Modified Ruling Issued
By Secretary of State

Harry F. Kelly, Secretary of State, warns car owners that when they buy full year license plates to replace half plates expiring August 31, they must destroy the half plates.

"The half plates are good until August 31," said Mr. Kelly, "and unless destroyed might fall into improper hands and be used illegally on other cars."

An earlier ruling by the department required full year plate purchasers to surrender half year plates to the department, but due to inconvenience to great numbers of persons who neglected to bring old plates with them the rule has been modified.

Instead, purchasers are being warned that failure to destroy old plates might cause them trouble should the tags fall into the hands of criminals. Full year plates at half price were placed on sale July 10.

Tuesday, July 16—Chelsea playing Ann Arbor for the leadership of the league. The Chelsea lads put forth their best efforts and again were the victors. Gage Rossbach, pitching for Chelsea, allowed Ann Arbor 5 hits, and struck out 7 batters. R. White was Chelsea's batting star, banging out a triple, also turning in some fine fielding in the outer garden. The final score: Chelsea, 5 runs, 6 hits; Ann Arbor, 3 runs, 5 hits.

Thursday, July 18—The local lads banged out 3 hits for 4 runs to set up a lead in the first innings which the Ypsilanti nine could not overcome. A. Policht, pitching for Chelsea, held the Ypsi sluggers to 3 well scattered hits, fanning 9 batters. A. Policht and D. White were again the main stays in the hitting department. The fielding stars of the game were the Miller boys: Jack, playing his first full game at first base. The final score: Chelsea, 5 runs, 5 hits; Ypsi, 3 runs, 3 hits.

Satine will play here tonight. Come, one and all.

34 Years Ago

Thursday, July 26, 1906
The terrific wind, hail and rain storm accompanied by lightning on Sunday evening did many thousands dollars worth of damage to crops and buildings and many trees were uprooted in this vicinity.

The grain in this vicinity is nearly all harvested.
Sunday was the hottest day of the summer. The thermometer registered 94 in the shade.

Fred Covert has bought 6 acres of land of Myrtle Clements and also a house of George Steinbach which he will have moved to his property this fall.

Thomas Fleming of Lyndon sold home grown peaches in Chelsea on Wednesday.

45 berry pickers went to the Drake whortleberry marsh in Sylvan on Monday.

Fred Riemenschneider has been appointed mail carrier for rural free delivery route No. 4 from the Chelsea post office.
Several new residences will be built in Chelsea this summer and fall. Miss Myrtle Fenn will build on Grant street, J. A. Maroney, two houses on McKinley street, and G. J. Crowell on McKinley street.

Our Neighbors

PINCKNEY—The Teeple Hardware firm which has operated in Pinckney for a period of 70 years has passed out of the hands of that family, having been purchased by Sherman Haller, Howell hardware merchant, who intends to operate the store. Dispatch.

TECUMSEH—Improvement of the Walter J. Hayes State Park at Wampers lake, one of the most popular tourist parks in lower Michigan, was started this week with the cooperation of the Works Progress Administration. Some 50 WPA workers are on the job, which when completed will cost approximately $22,000. New cribbing on Cedar Hill to prevent erosion, refilling the beach in front of the bath house with sand, a new parking lot near the playgrounds and two new baseball fields are included in the program. It also is planned to landscape the entrance to the park at US-112, and additional picnic tables and benches.

camp benches will be placed in different parts of the park.—Herald.

NORTHVILLE—With the completion of two new buildings on the fair grounds anticipated this week, officers and superintendents of the twenty-fourth Northville-Wayne County Fair scheduled for Aug. 21-24, are concentrating on details in their respective departments preparatory to giving to the fair-going public an outstanding four-day exposition. The poultry building, which replaces the one destroyed last August by fire, will definitely be completed by the end of the week. Its approximate cost is $2,000. A new horse barn with 12 box stalls and 24 tie stalls is also nearing completion.—Record.

HOWELL—Honoring the 84th birthday of the Rev. C. L. Adams a birthday dinner was served by Mrs. Adams at the home Sunday, guests being children of Mr. Adams and their families. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Hartman and daughters, Kathryn and Margaret, of Holland; Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Adams and three children, Elizabeth, Marjorie and Fritz, of Birmingham.—County Press.

PLYMOUTH—Out on the Schrader luffalo ranch west of the city, there is running about in one of the big fields, the post-humous son of old John, born just a few days ago. Never was there a finer looking buffalo calf ever seen running the plains of the far West than is this young son of old John. Its owner, Fred D. Schrader, says it will be about a year before its light brown coat will turn to the almost black hue of its father and mother. This fine little buffalo calf is not the only addition to the Schrader buffalo ranch. The other day, Mr. Schrader purchased a two-year-old buffalo bull out at Sterling, Colorado to take the place of old John. Edwin Schrader brought the newly purchased buffalo to Plymouth in his father's horse trailer, making the entire trip without accident.—Mail.

Tips About Food In Electric Refrigerators

It takes a little engineering knowledge for a housewife to properly use today's modern electric refrigerator, it is agreed by members of the home economics staff at Michigan State College.

Here are some of the ideas that will make the machine operate more efficiently and serve its purpose of reducing food spoilage.

Convenient location is desirable, with a work table nearby to hold food as it is put in or taken out of food storage. The fewer the trips and the fewer times the door must be opened, the more efficient the refrigerator will prove.

More economy is involved in making sure the machine is on the level and in a comparatively cool place away from the stove or from the sunny windows, and in the winter away from radiator or heat register. Temperatures are important. A temperature a little under 50 degrees Fahrenheit will keep most perishable foods a reasonable length of time. There should be one area that is 45 degrees or lower, and service men usually point out this is directly below or beside the ice or freezing unit.

Milk, cream and butter quickly take up odors from other foods, so these perishables should be kept covered and in the coldest part of the refrigerator. Meats, fish and poultry also rate the colder portion of the storage space. Uncooked or cooked, these should be kept covered and until cooked should not be stored very long, especially fresh fish. Eggs should be popped into the refrigerator, too, as a few hours at room temperature can injure quality.

Cleanliness is essential. Spilled food should be wiped up immediately and a thorough weekly cleaning is recommended with defrosting, or when the ice is low in an ice refrigerator.

Ancient Indian Temple
One of the most amazing constructions erected by man is the Kailes temple in India. Dating back to the reign of King Krishnu 1,200 years ago, the temple—hewn from a mass of solid granite—is 90 feet high, 109 feet wide and 184 feet long. Rooms 17 feet high were cut from the interior of the granite mass and these were covered with plaster and coated with paint.

Cassidy Lake Events

Softball News

Saturday, July 13, the camp team won its fourth straight victory by defeating the Farband camp by the score of 26 to 6. The camp team used twenty-four players in the game. Satterlee and Klopfenstine did the pitching with Yaw and Ackley catching for the camp team.

Sunday, July 14, the camp team traveled to Grass Lake and came back with a well earned victory, winning by the score of 6 to 3. Hubert Johnson pitched, with Paul Lambert doing the catching for Cassidy Lake.

Tuesday evening, July 16, the camp team defeated the staff in a Chelsea league game by the score of 6 to 1. The staff got a break in the third inning when with a man on second "Boots" Prin popped a foul fly to the third baseman, which was dropped. Then on the next pitch he lined a hit over third, with the man on second scoring their only run. Hubert Johnson turned in one of his best pitching performances of the year. The batteries for this game were for the locals, Elsher and Olah, and for the winners, Johnson and Lambert.

Wednesday, July 17, the camp defeated Mill Lake, 10 to 2 for our seventh straight victory. Mill Lake scored their two runs in the seventh inning when Jim Conolly dropped a perfect throw, then with one on the next man lined a home run down the third base line to score two runs. Johnson then got the next three men and the game was ours. Hubert Johnson pitched and Paul Lambert did the receiving for the camp team.

Friday evening the camp team plays the Waterloo CCC camp in a postponed game which will be played here.

Personals

Monday, July 15, a Battle of Wits was held in the recreation hall between two teams of six men each. The captains for this event were Wilmore Yaw and Ray Shienke. The winning team was captained by Shienke and they won by the narrow margin of one and one-half points. The canteen gave them the prizes. After the Battle of Wits four educational pictures were shown on the screen.

Tuesday evening the Business and Professional Club of Lansing were guests for supper.

Two members of the staff, Mr. Hill and Mr. Glas, are looking rather sheepish these days. The reason for this is Hubert Johnson, member of the camp. It seems that Hubert was looking for someone to play tennis with and Mr. Hill, who is a fair tennis player, volunteered to play. The story is that Mr. Hill had a very busy afternoon wondering why he couldn't win. Maybe Hubert Johnson forgot to mention that he was considered pretty good while a freshman at Michigan State College.

Mr. Glas' trouble all started in the staff camp team softball game. Glas watched one of Hubert's fast balls blaze across the plate. Then on the next pitch he took a very healthy cut at the ball but missed. But the count was only two strikes and Mr. Glas decided to really show the pitcher how to hit this fast ball so he tightened up on his bat and got ready to swing on the next fast one. Now Wagar only got one thing mixed up—the next ball was one of those slow ones that you can count the stitches on—and he looked very bad striking out.

Wednesday, July 17—"Sooky" was the picture shown at recreation hall this evening, starring Jackie Cooper and Bob Googan. The show was enjoyed by our guests from Mill Lake.

Today I want to tell you about the black and white signs for highway markings.

Black and white signs are all oblong, placed either vertically or horizontally. Vertical oblongs are for regulations—speed limit, no U turn, keep in lane, drive to the right, no parking. Horizontal oblongs carry informative material—distances to various cities, names of towns and rivers, state lines, city limits, historical landmarks.

Besides these, black and white arrows are used to indicate direction—one-way street.

In future issues I will discuss the use of these signs, as well as their abuse.

Imitation of Wood

The interior walls of a California cafe display something unusual in decoration. It is a reproduction of weathered wood, obtained by painting on plaster. First, a coat of wall primer was used, and after drying, a grained effect with knots was executed on a semigloss coating, the graining traced in with burnt umber, and the imitation of board divisions marked off with a strip and burnt umber.

Fun is where you find it!

No one in Michigan need hunt far for vacation fun. This State is one of America's greatest natural playgrounds... with many excellent trout streams... beautiful forests... magnificent State Parks... and five thousand lakes in which to swim, fish and sail.

We residents of Michigan are extremely fortunate in having so many and such fine vacation facilities within our own borders. Being spared the time and expense of traveling to distant States, we have more time and more money to spend on vacation pleasures.

M. S. C. Will Study Effect of Snow on Soil

What effect does snowfall have on Michigan soil temperatures and soil moisture?

Beginning of a scientific experimental project to study this problem is announced by Dr. C. E. Millar, head of the soils department at Michigan State College.

The federal soil conservation service, seeking the information, selected Michigan for its study and is to receive cooperation of the Michigan Experiment Station.

W. U. Garstka, experienced technologist of the federal soil conservation service, will supervise the research. He has brought a large amount of scientific apparatus to be installed in selected watersheds on the college farm and in the laboratory of the soils department.

Eight outlying experimental installations are to be placed out in the state in various snow belts to determine total precipitation, snowfall, soil temperature and moisture.

Readings are to be taken throughout the year at various depths in the soil, with complete records of rainfall, snowfall, run-off of water and erosion.

Mr. Garstka is to work with a committee which includes Dr. N. L. Partidge of the college horticulture department, Dr. C. M. Harrison of farm crops and Dr. Millar.

Sharp Drop In Diseases Reported During 1940

A sharp drop in the prevalence of communicable diseases throughout the state and no major disease outbreaks—that's the encouraging report this week from the Michigan Department of Health covering the first six months of 1940.

Cases of all major diseases declined from 38,914 during the first half of 1939 to 37,957 cases for the similar period this year. Important reductions were noted for all communicable diseases except measles, poliomyelitis and gonorrhea.

The 31-per cent drop in pneumonia cases during the first half of this year is one of the most striking declines ever recorded for this disease. There were 1,853 cases reported in 1940, compared with 2,696 in the same period last year.

Whooping cough, too, was among the leaders in the decline, with reported cases dropping from 5,170 to 4,082. It is probable that the widespread use of whooping-cough vaccine, distributed free for the first time this year by the Michigan Department of Health, had some part to play in this decline.

Diphtheria cases are running 58 per cent less than in 1939, with a total of 114 cases compared to 273 last year. Tuberculosis, smallpox and syphilis cases also dropped below 1939.

Increasing prevalence of measles from 8,948 cases in 1939 to 12,167 cases so far this year marks the beginning of an extensive outbreak of this disease which is expected during the coming year as it reaches the peak of its three-year cycle. In view of this increase, parents are being cautioned that measles can be prevented or modified if medical treatment is obtained for children immediately after exposure.

The Lieut. Governor - - What Are His Duties?

By Elton R. Eaton, Editor and Publisher, The Plymouth Mail.

The second most important place in the Michigan state government is the Lieutenant Governorship. The position became vacant more than a year ago when through the untimely death of the Governor, it became necessary, under the constitution, for the Lieutenant Governor to become Governor.

What are the duties of the Lieutenant Governor? What are the official responsibilities of the office?

These are questions asked many times by the citizens of Michigan, more so than ever at the present time, because Michigan does not, right now, have a Lieutenant Governor.

The constitution of the state fixes certain definite responsibilities for this official. The state legislature has added considerably to these constitutional duties.

In this article only the constitutional duties of the office will be discussed. No one can be elected Lieutenant Governor of Michigan who has not attained the age of 30 years. He must have been a citizen of the United States at least five years and a resident of the state not less than two years.

In case of the death of the Governor, or his inability to serve, his resignation or absence from the state, all of the powers and duties of the governorship devolve upon the Lieutenant Governor.

Under the constitution the Lieutenant Governor is made president of the senate. But he does not have the right to vote upon any question pending before the legislature.

As president of the senate he appoints all senate committees and presides at all sessions.

He occupies a position where he can do much to maintain friendly relations between the two branches of the legislature and the executive office.

Outside of the Governor, he is probably one of the busiest officials in Lansing during a session of the state legislature.

It is not frequent that a Governor spends much time away from his position, but it will be recalled that a few years ago the Lieutenant Governor served so much time as Governor because of the absence from the state of the Governor that he asked for the Governor's compensation. The constitution fixes the compensation of the Lieutenant Governor the same as that of the Governor while he is carrying on the duties of the executive office.

Sometime ago the legislature deemed it advisable to make the Lieutenant Governor a member of the state administrative board, delegating to him the same powers and responsibilities as possessed by other members of the board. The legislature took this action because it believed that the second highest official in the state should be in close touch with all state activities and problems at all times.

The duties of the Lieutenant Governor under the acts of the legislature will be discussed in the next article of this series.

Question And Answer Dept.

Problem—A boy had a board from which he desired to saw a piece five feet three inches long. The only thing he had to measure with was a piece of string which he knew was three feet long. How did he measure the desired length without cutting or mutilating the string? (Answer elsewhere in this department.)

Ques.—How was the Republican candidate for President of the United States elected when his Democratic opponent in 1876, Samuel J. Tilden, received a big majority of the popular vote and a majority of the electoral vote?

Ans.—The election at that time, following so closely on the heels of the Civil War, was held with bitter feeling in the South, and somewhat so in the North. By all alleged irregularities in South Carolina and Florida these States were thrown out in the electoral college, resulting in a tie between Hayes and Tilden. Congress appointed a commission composed of 7 Republicans and 6 Democrats to elect a President. By a strict party vote of 7 to 6 Hayes was chosen as the President.

Ques.—What players in the major leagues led in the fewest strike-outs in the past ten years? In other words, who are the two surest hitters?

Ans.—These records are held by Charlie Gehringer and Jos. Sewell in the American League, and Lloyd Waner of the National League, indicating these players have the best "batting eye" in major league baseball.

Answer to problem—He measured the full length of the string (3 ft.) and marked it off; doubling his string he began where he left off and added one and one-half feet more; doubling again he added the required three-quarter feet to make five feet three inches.

Ques.—Why do flowers smell sweeter after a rain?

Ans.—In dry weather the surface of the petals of the flower becomes tough, and all the little holes close up so that the odoriferous oils cannot get out very well into the air. After a rain the little holes in the petal surface are more widely open and the smell is more noticeable.

Ques.—What is the speed of radio sounds?

Ans.—The speed of radio waves is about the same speed of light—186,000 miles a second. For all practical purposes this speed is considered instantaneous.

Ques.—Why does fire give out a yellow glow light when you put salt in it?

Ans.—This is because salt contains the chemical element "sodium." If sodium vapor is heated very hot it glows with a strong yellow light. When you put salt in the fire some of the sodium is vaporized by the heat. This vapor gets hotter still in the flames and thus produces its characteristic glow.

Ques.—What is fog?

Ans.—Fog is simply cloud close to the earth. It is formed whenever moist air gets cooled enough to condense its water molecules into small droplets. They are so small they evaporate in the sunlight, and usually do not condense into water.

Back to Mother

Daniel J. Evans was digging a ditch near Van Wert, Ohio, when he found a wedding ring. Taking it home, he gave it to his mother. The ring was the one she had lost 37 years before.

ENTERTAIN PATRONS

HERBERT GLENN SHUTES

Herbert Glenn Shutes, 45 years old, a former resident of this vicinity, died Saturday afternoon in the Veterans hospital in Dearborn. A World War veteran, he was gassed while serving overseas. He was a member of the 32nd division.

Mr. Shutes was a member of Olive Lodge, 156, F. & A. M. and Herbert J. McKune Post, The American Legion.

He is survived by the widow, formerly Viola Dietle; a son, Robert G. of Detroit; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Addison B. Shutes of Chelsea; and a brother, Leon D. Shutes of Chelsea.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 at the Wetherly funeral home in Jackson. Interment was in Roseland cemetery, with Masonic and Legion rites.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Charming, wealthy Gabriella (Gay for short) Graham, engaged to be married, returned to a cabin in the Maine woods accompanied by a friend, Kate Oliver. The idea of a stay at the cabin occurred to her when she received a letter following the death of her godfather, Uncle John Lawrence. The two girls noticed immediately that someone has been and probably is living in the cabin. Kate suspects that Gay knows the identity of the mysterious occupant.

CHAPTER II—While the girls talk the mystery man returns. Gay, surprisingly enough, introduced the man to her. He is John Houghton, a young doctor whom Gay had known in previous years. Soon after arriving at the cabin, Gay discovered his identity through an old monogrammed sweater. Immediately aggressive, Gay asks him by what right he is in the cabin. His right, she finds, is greater than her own. He, too, possesses a key, but more than that, it is his Uncle John, Gay's godfather, who states courteously that he will leave. Looking at him in the doorway, her old feelings return. She knows that he is more necessary to her than to Todd Janeway, the man she is to marry.

CHAPTER III—Before he leaves, John goes for a walk. When he returns he finds Gay sitting before the fireplace. They begin talking on a more friendly basis, and she asks him to reconsider his decision to leave. The next morning brings a different feeling, and John decides to remain for his vacation—more weeks.

"That's bad. That's really very bad," Gay gave an exclamation, half dismay, half exasperated rage. "Aunt Flora probably cabbed him," she said.

"Your mother has not been idle," Kate reminded her grimly, "not to mention a varied assortment of relatives."

"They're such an articulate family," "Yes," Kate said dryly, "and, unfortunately, cable rates are no deterrent."

"But why couldn't they have waited?" The humor that had brightened her voice was gone. "Though he saw her only in profile, John knew that her eyes were dark and mutinous. Why must they jump to conclusions? Aunt Flora would, of course. But I thought Mother had more sense!"

"It's been five days," Kate pointed out. "They probably think you've been kidnapped. You can't wonder that they're anxious," she added in a tone of increasing exasperation. "I've been away longer than the"

"But not at a time like this when something has been arranged for you practically every hour. Think of the excuses, the questions, the evasions."

"You think of them. I haven't strength."

"You haven't communicated with anyone?"

"No. Why should I? Todd understood. I told both Mother and Aunt Flora in the notes I wrote them that I would return at the end of the week."

"And will you?" She remembered him, then. John's heart leapt at his eyes; for a moment, met her shadowed glance. It sank again as she replied with unconscious arrogance.

"I usually keep my promises, don't I?"

"In that case," Kate said, and he thought she sounded considerably relieved, "we'll be obliged to start in the morning. And I think we should both apologize to John. He can't have enjoyed having this discussed in his presence. And he couldn't escape," she added, humor, fostered by relief, breaking through concern and irritation. "He's holding me steady. Very generous of him not to have set me adrift."

"Think of me as a landing post," John said, "if that will make you feel better."

Kate drew the rope into the canoe. "It would—if I could," she said. Her smile was faintly derisive but the expression in her keen light eyes was not unsympathetic. She took up the paddle. "I'm going to get lunch," she said, speaking past John to Gay who sat still and aloof at the edge of the boat looking down into the water. "I'll call when it's ready."

The canoe moved off from the boat. The dip and swish of the paddle grew fainter as Kate approached the landing. Gay remained silent; her eyes fixed upon the tiny waves disappearing in bright succession beneath the float. John's eyes rested upon her profile. Moments passed in an entrancing silence.

"You needn't, you know," John said presently. She glanced at him questioning. "Apologize," he said. "You can think of me as a landing post, too."

"I am, I suppose," she said, after a moment. His glance, in turn, questioned. "All the things you're thinking," she laughed, a clear brittle laugh, quickly stilled. "Spoiled, selfish, inconsiderate."

There was no humility in her voice. She was neither apologizing nor admitting. She seemed, John thought, to be taking some sort of perverse pride in the unadmirable qualities she listed. The sincere protest which sprang to his lips remained unspoken. Tenderness crystallized into antagonism.

"If you are referring to the anxiety you are probably causing at home," he said coolly, "I think I agree with you."

"Of course," she said brightly. "What else could you think? I have everything, haven't I?"

"Certainly, by any standards, you have a great deal."

"There's no sensible reason why I should run away less than a month before my wedding?"

She did not look at him. Her eyes were again fixed upon the waves disappearing under the float. Color had flushed into the cheek that he saw in profile. Her hands were clasped so tightly about her knees that the knuckles showed white.

"I can't answer that," John said. "I know nothing of the circumstances."

"You needn't, you know," John said presently.

"Well, there isn't," she said. "No sensible reason. Todd is splendid. I suppose we've been half in love with each other since I was six and he was nine."

"Only half in love?" he wanted to ask. Instead, thoughtfully silent, increasingly astonished, he lit a cigarette.

"We're to be married at Southampton in the Little Red Church on the Dunes," she spoke lightly, quickly, adding word to word as though she were building a house with cards which a breath, a too impetuous touch would destroy.

"It's Mother's show. You see Dad gave me my debutante party. Now she has her inning. It's a little complicated," she laughed again, that clear, brittle laugh, quickly stilled. "Aunt Flora insists that she won't attend the reception. In my step-father's home. She will, though, if only to point a reproving moral."

"Todd's father is giving us a boat for a wedding present," she went on as though there had been no break in the clear rippling stream of words. "We're sailing south. We'll leave the boat in Florida for the winter and bring her north next summer. The Janeways have a place at Palm Beach."

"Will you actually sail?" John asked, his interest for the moment quite detached from Gay.

She could not have made a stronger appeal to his imagination. She could not have presented her fiancée in a role which would so quickly have won John's admiration and respect. A love for sailing was his heritage from ancestors who had captained their own vessels around the world. The glory of the days of clipper and packets remained in the childhood and early youth, in memory and mementos. The house in which he'd been born and in which his mother lived now had a square "look-out" on the roof; the walls of the library were covered with tea-paper from China; the bowl from which he'd eaten cereal as a child had been brought in the hold of a ship around the Horn. The sort of sailing she spoke of was different, of course, but the swift vision of sails filling in the wind, the smell of brine-soaked rigging and rope, the thrill of a deck canted beneath feet instinctively braced, moved him to enthusiastic and, for the instant at least, quite unenviable response. "That's a pretty swell prospect," he said.

"Yes, isn't it?" she said brightly, too brightly, so that again he was aware of the passion beneath the light mocking words. "And that's only the beginning. Todd's father is giving us his place in Connecticut, too, so that we'll have an anchorage and Dad has bought an apartment house over by the East River because, of course, we'll have to spend some time in town. We're to have the top floor. The contest is on as to whether the decor is to be smartly modern or quaintly Victorian. I'm backing Mother to win. She's all for glass and chrome. Aunt Flora's whatnots and ball-fringes haven't a chance."

"So you see there's no sensible reason why I should have run away. It was the whim of a spoiled little brat who hasn't sense enough to know her luck."

"Gay—I," he said, louder this time, his voice gritty with effort. "Will you stop talking like an absurd little fool?"

"But I am," she was moving, now, with a rocking motion back and forth on the float. "What a gift for description you have!"

"You're trying to make me think you are," he said brusquely. "But you aren't succeeding. He bent toward her and his voice softened from a demand to an appeal. "What are you getting at? What are you trying to tell me? Please."

She drew a long sobbing breath and the house of cards tumbled into fragments. She looked up at him, her eyes dilated by tears, then down into the water.

"I don't want to go back to New York," she said, so low that he scarcely heard her and as though the words were forced from her by some agency beyond her control.

He did not reply. The sympathy that welled from his heart in an ungrudging flood made coherent thought impossible. He sat watching her efforts to regain the control his appeal had shattered, fighting a desire to take her in his arms, feeling in his own senses the throb of the pulse at the base of her throat, the trembling that shook her body. Presently she grew quiet. When she turned to him again, her face was composed.

"I suppose I should apologize, now," she said coolly. Her poised, her detachment, checked the rushing flood of sympathy and tender concern.

"It isn't necessary," he said stiffly, feeling that she had tricked him, humiliated because he had been so naively moved by what might very well have been feminine histrionics.

"I won't, then," she bundled her bright hair into a rubber cap. "Apologies are misleading." She sprang to her feet. "Come on. I'll race you to the landing."

She dove from the side of the float, came to the surface, set off toward the shore, swimming with an easy over-arm stroke. He followed, after a moment. His strong brown body cut through the water, caught up with her, slackened its speed to the slackening rhythm of her stroke. She smiled at him across the strip of water rippling between them.

"What's the use? I'm licked before I start."

Her face sobered. The smile, curving her lips, trembled.

"John," she said, hesitantly. "Yes, Gay."

But she ducked her head. When it emerged, water streamed over her face as though she were weeping.

The bow of the boat cut through water which shimmered with the reflected glow of the sunset. Gay lifted and dipped the paddle slowly, watching circles, rimmed with gold and flame and amethyst, widen out across the still surface of the lake.

The wind which had blown all day had died down but the air was growing cold. She wished she had dressed more warmly but the sun had been hot when she'd set off, alone, directly after lunch.

He'd thought she was dramatizing that afternoon. Well, hadn't she been a little? The rebellion beneath the words she'd spoken was sincere enough but her expression of it had been theatrical. Why couldn't she have talked to him directly? He'd given her an opportunity. She'd felt very close to him, for a moment, nearer to mutual understanding than they had ever been. Then pride had gotten in the way, had checked the spontaneous response to the tenderness in his voice that she had wanted to make. It was just as well. She was leaving tomorrow to keep a promise. What John thought of her was unimportant. She would, in all probability, never see him again after tonight.

No use thinking of that. Gay, at some distance from the shore, turned the canoe toward the landing. There was only one explanation, when she talked to John this morning, of the impression she'd probably given John of him had nibbled uneasily at her thoughts during the afternoon. She was fond of Todd. She loved him as her best and dearest friend. Strange—But that was true. He was her best and her dearest friend.

But how could she explain Todd to John? The bow of the canoe bumped gently into the landing. Gay dropped the paddle and held on to the plank with one hand while she reached for the rope. Wouldn't anything that she might say be too much for too little? They hadn't really drifted into an engagement. It wasn't only proximity or the suitability of the match which had culminated in the promise she was leaving tomorrow to keep. They'd been dearest friends since she could remember, separated for long intervals when he or she had been traveling or in school or involved in a temporary infatuation, but always coming together again, taking up their friendship where they had dropped it, never admitting but mutually conscious of the fact that they liked each other best.

John's voice called her name. She turned. He was walking down the path toward her, a dim figure in the deep twilight of the thickly crowding trees.

"I was just setting out to look for you," he said.

"Were you?" Her voice steadied. "Supper, yes?"

"Some time ago." He stepped back to allow her to precede him but the narrow path to the cabin. "Kate took her car to the garage in the village."

"What for?"

"To have everything checked before you start in the morning. I offered to take it for her but she seemed to prefer to go herself. Where have you been all afternoon?"

"Just drifting."

"Didn't it occur to you that I—that we might be concerned about you?" He held the screen door open for her.

"Not especially." She glanced up at him as she stepped inside. He was frowning and the set of his mouth was stern. "If you were, I'm sorry," she added.

A fire blazed and crackled in the fireplace. She went to the hearth

He was frowning and the set of his mouth was stern.

and held her hands to the warmth. "Are you cold?" He struck a match to light a lamp.

"A little. The air is chilly after the sun goes down."

"And you've had nothing to eat."

"I'm not hungry." The constraint in the atmosphere lay like a weight upon her spirits.

"Kate left something in the oven for you." His eyes avoided her glance. He adjusted the wick and replaced the shade on the lamp.

"I don't want anything, thank you." She stood with her back to the fire, now, printing his features upon her memory as she saw them in the light striking up from the lamp. Her throat ached. Her heart felt too big for her breast.

"You'll be making an early start in the morning?"

"Probably."

"Then I'd better fill the wood-basket tonight."

He came to the hearth and bent to lift the basket. The firelight shone on his thick dark hair, on the lean angle of his jaw. By extending her hand she could have touched him. Why not? There was only tonight. The telephone on the wall whirled and jangled.

"What the devil—" he exclaimed in an undertone and walked across the room to the telephone box against the wall.

She watched him place the receiver to his ear, heard his brusque "Hello! Hello! Will you get off the wire, please? HELLO! The call is for the Lawrence cabin, Mrs. Sprague. HELLO! Yes—" His voice quieted to a less aggressive tone. "Hello, Ralph. Yes, Houghton speaking."

The call had nothing to do with her. Gay's apprehension subsided. She waited for the end of the conversation, not gathering much information from what she heard. John said, "Yes" at intervals, asked a question, said, "Yes. Right away. Yes. Thanks, Ralph. Good-by."

"This telephone!" He smiled in comic exasperation as he placed the receiver on the hook. "Everybody from here to Machias listens in. It's a favorite amusement in Washington County."

"That's jolly, isn't it?" His smile, her response, relieved the constraint. "I thought it might be long distance," she said.

"Long distance? Good Lord! A call from here to New York would probably take a week," He hesitated, then asked, "Will you be afraid to stay here alone until Kate returns?"

Her quick glance questioned him. "That was Ralph Sprague up at the store. They need a doctor at the Whitaker place. Somebody went to the store to telephone. They couldn't locate either Dr. Nelson or Dr. Branch, and Ralph thought of me. I don't like to leave you here alone."

She thought that he was less concerned with her than with getting away. It didn't matter that this was her last night here. He was grateful for an excuse, perhaps. She lifted her chin.

"I'm not afraid to stay alone."

"You might ride out there with me," he suggested diffidently and without, Gay thought, any special enthusiasm.

"No, I'll stay here. Kate will be back before long."

"All right." He walked to the door opening into the kitchen, paused there to ask, "You're sure you don't mind that you won't be afraid?"

"Certainly not," she said coolly, wanting to go with him more, she thought, than she had ever wanted anything in all her life before; feeling each foot-step that took him away from her fall like a blow on her heart.

His expression became more resolute. "You're probably right," he said crisply. "It might not be too comfortable. I may be detained."

He left the room without looking at her again. Standing on the hearth, she heard him moving about in the room he used for a laboratory. Moments passed slowly, dropping like water which might not be gathered up again, spilling, wasted, gone forever. Presently footsteps thudded across the kitchen floor. The back door closed.

The sound of the door closing vibrated through her senses. Gay took a step forward, stopped, then went running out through the kitchen, jerked open the door, sped down the steps and across the clearing.

"John!" she called breathlessly. "Wait for me! I'm coming!"

John opened the door of the farmhouse and looked out across a stretch of weed-grown lawn. His car was there under the willow where he had left it at the edge of the lane.

"Good-night, Ben," he said to the lanky young man in overalls who had accompanied him to the door. "Don't worry. Everything's all right."

"Thanks, Doc. Jenny and I are mighty grateful."

"That's all right. I'll run in some time tomorrow—today."

A thin high wall came out through the open door. The unshaded lamp trembled in the shaking young hands which held it. John laughed.

"Only a healthy one could make that much noise. He's going to be an opera singer."

"Not if he takes after his Dad."

The boyish face traced with lines of weariness and anxiety alone, then darkened. "You sure Jenny's all right?"

"Fine. She'll probably sleep until noon. Your mother will know what to do. You get some sleep."

"All right, Doc. We sure thank you, Good-night."

The door closed. John walked across the stretch of lawn toward the car. The full moon had dropped below the dipping hills but the farmyard was bright with radiance it had left. John drew in deep breaths of the cool damp air. He came up to the car walking quietly, shortening his long eager strides.

But she was not asleep. "Hello, Doc," she said, and sat erect in the seat of the car.

"I thought I told you to go back to the cabin," he said, but his attempt to sound stern was not very convincing.

"You did," Gay said. "You've been telling me that at intervals all night."

"Are you frozen? Let me look at you." He leaned past her into the car and turned on the dash-board lights.

She wore his old college sweater, too large for her, the sleeves rolled back to free her hands and she had bundled herself into a cocoon of car robes and blankets.

"You should have gone back," he said as he slipped in behind the wheel. "They would have taken me or I could have stayed here all night. Do you realize that it's nearly three o'clock?" He released the brake and the car moved out into the road.

"What do you suppose Kate is thinking?"

"The worst, probably." She moved closer to him in the narrow seat. "What is it, a boy or a girl?"

"A boy," she was unconscious of having moved toward him. He thought, Wonderful to have her here very close to him, wearing his sweater, waiting for him to ride back to the cabin. Not real, of course; a piece of a dream, a part of the strange intimacy of this night they had spent together.

"I heard it." Her voice was hushed. "It sounded like a furious kitten. I'd like to have seen it. I've never seen one so small."

"They improve with age. He had a close shave. It's the first one and there were complications. I'd have given my soul for hospital equipment. That—" He broke off abruptly, then added with brusqueness induced by embarrassment and the fear that his enthusiasm might bore her. "I shouldn't have let you in for this. I didn't know it was a baby. Why didn't you take the car back to the cabin hours ago?"

"I wouldn't have missed it," she said, still in that hushed and wondering voice. "Nothing as real as this ever happened to me. I should think that doing what you did tonight would make you feel like—God."

"Good Lord!" he said, trying to conceal the pride and pleasure her comment gave him. "I didn't do anything she couldn't have done for herself. Made it a little easier, possibly. There's too much sentimentality over doctors," he concluded severely.

"Oh, John, don't!" she cried with soft vehemence. "Don't be ashamed of enthusiasm."

Co-eds Would Wed in Five Years

Results of a survey made among Northwestern university seniors showed today that 80 per cent of the women expected to be married within five years after leaving school, and two-fifths figured they wouldn't marry unless their husbands made more than $50 a week. Two-thirds of the women thought it's all right for wives to work, while only half the men reckoned they approved of this. To show that times were good, 80 per cent of the men reported they had jobs lined up and 40 per cent of the women said the same.

Results of a survey made among Northwestern university seniors showed today that 80 per cent of the women expected to be married within five years after leaving school, and two-fifths figured they wouldn't marry unless their husbands made more than $50 a week. Two-thirds of the women thought it's all right for wives to work, while only half the men reckoned they approved of this. To show that times were good, 80 per cent of the men reported they had jobs lined up and 40 per cent of the women said the same.

Edith G. West, Plaintiff, vs.

Clifford West, Defendant.

Order of Publication

Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the County of Washtenaw, on the 1st day of July, A. D. 1940.

It is satisfactorily appearing to this Court by affidavit on file that a summons has been issued out of and under the seal of said Court for the appearance of said defendant, and that the same could not be served on or before the return day thereof because the said defendant, being a resident of said State of Michigan, was concealed therein or elsewhere, and said summons having been returned with the certificate of the sheriff of said county thereon endorsed showing that after diligent search and inquiry the said defendant could not be found in said State of Michigan on or before the return day of said summons, on motion of Victor H. Lane, Jr., attorney for said plaintiff, it is ordered, that the said defendant, Clifford West, cause his appearance to be entered in said Court and cause within three months after the date of this order, and that in case of his appearance he cause his answer to the plaintiff's bill of complaint to be filed, and a copy thereof served upon the attorney for this plaintiff within twenty days after service upon him of a copy of said bill, and notice of this order, and that in default thereof, the said bill be taken as confessed by said defendant.

And on like motion it is further ordered that within forty days after the date hereof, the plaintiff cause a notice of this order to be published in the Chelsea Standard, a newspaper printed, published and circulated in said County of Washtenaw, and that such publication be continued once in each week for six weeks in succession,

Tall Tales

As told to: FRANK E. HAGAN and SCOTT WATSON.

The Artistic Goat

GEORGIA'S delightful climate gave continuous employment to the goats owned by that eminent Atlanta, Pat Candler Dinkins.

The goats were Sandy and Mandy. Mandy was tied in the barn most of the time. Pat noticed casually that she amused herself by plaiting straw into various shapes and sizes.
