MDOT Reverses Position, Funds Study

By Scott Bishop
Staff Writer

Late last week dispute continued over funds for a study designed to diagnose traffic congestion problems on M-52 going through Chelsea. Local officials charged the Michigan Department of Transportation with reneging on a verbal commitment to contribute funds to the study. State officials answered that no money was available and the study had never been formally approved.

Then a Monday meeting of local officials with Andrew Irwin, a planner for MDOT, produced a reversal; MDOT would share in the expenses, and the study would go on as originally planned.

Last week, Irwin said that the state did not have funds available to contribute to the Chelsea study, whose cost was initially proposed to be split among village, county, state, and federal money.

Bob Teitens, Executive Director of the Urban Area Transportation Study in Washtenaw County, maintained that MDOT had verbally committed itself and that its withdrawal was politically motivated.

"This appears to be an MDOT policy now, to put the squeeze on local governments to underline the need to increase the gas tax," he said.

Washtenaw County Road Commissioner Joe Yekulis also indicated that state policy was putting pressure on local governments. "The whole thing is being politicized up in Lansing. They made a verbal commitment to us back in July (to contribute funds to the study)...The state is pushing everything back down on local (governments)," he said.

Michigan Gov. John Engler is pushing the legislature for an increased gas tax and a revised formula for splitting revenue, which would direct more money to the state and less to local governments.

State Rep. Mary Schroer (D-Ann Arbor) agreed that politics was undermining local transportation projects. "(State Administrators) are taking all the money away from the locals so (local governments) will agree to a different formula," funneling more gas tax revenue toward the state, Schroer said.

Teitens concluded saying UATS still held hope that MDOT could be convinced to contribute so the fully funded study could be completed. "We think it's still possible. We're working with other area's of the department," he said. Monday afternoon proved him correct.

At a meeting with local officials, Irwin indicated that the state had reversed its field. "We decided to make the funds available. We think it's a worthwhile effort so we are going to participate," he said following the meeting, going on to deny that political tensions in Lansing had anything to do with MDOT decisions.

Irwin also said a public meeting would be held Dec. 7 to take community input regarding potential solutions to traffic congestion problems in Chelsea.

Chelsea Village Manager Jack Myers said that at Monday's meeting Irwin indicated MDOT had finalized its decision to participate in the study and contribute funds just that morning.

Village President Richard Steele said the timely reversal was appreciated. "I'm very pleased. The project will go ahead...We've worked a long time on it and we don't need it to get stalled," he explained.

McKune Library To Close Temporarily

Instructional sessions for persons unfamiliar with public access library terminals will be scheduled during December and throughout the winter. If you have questions, please call the library at 475-8732 and speak with Ann Holt, director or Josie Parker, youth services librarian.

Faith in Action Hosts Magic Show Benefit

"The Magic of Giving," one of the main fundraisers for Faith in Action's holiday activities, will be held this Sunday, Nov. 19 at 2 p.m. in the George Prinzing Auditorium at Chelsea High School.

The show features some of the top magicians in the area, including Chelsea's own Boyer & Fitzsimmons; Jeff Jackowski, known as the Polish Prince of Magic, whose act contains pyrotechnics; The Moss Family, who have performed all over the world; Dr. Don & Shannon; Richard Dean, whose magic contains just a little mystery; The Derringers, who have performed at the Magic Castle in Hollywood; and emcee Jeff Scott, an inventor, dealer, teacher, and performer of magic.

Every year, Faith in Action, a non-profit organization, creates holiday baskets for needy families, relying heavily on donations as well as their own fundraising activities. Their service area is a radius of 15 miles from Chelsea, so all of western Washtenaw County is included. Last year the volunteer staff put together more than 65 Thanksgiving Day baskets and 90 Christmas baskets.

Advance ticket prices are $3 for adults and $2 for children. Prices at the door are $4 for adults and $3 for children. Advance tickets can be purchased at Chelsea Pharmacy, Dexter Card and Gift, and the Faith in Action House.

DETROIT-AREA UAW MEMBERS protest against Chelsea Industries' policies in downtown Chelsea last week.

Chelsea Industries Vs. UAW

By Scott Bishop
Staff Writer

Last Wednesday, Nov. 8, the morning after a protest by Detroit-area UAW members shut down operations at the company's Main Street plant, Chelsea Industries President Ron Thompson downplayed the incident.

"There's not really much of a statement we need to make. The facts are about as clear as they can be. I don't want to get in a debate with the UAW. We're satisfied with where Chelsea Industries is at," Thompson said.

According to Thompson, Chelsea Industries employees don't want the UAW representing them, as evidenced by a February, 1995 vote rejecting the union, which followed a 1991 vote to join it. The UAW is appealing the 1995 vote, charging that it is invalid. The Tuesday morning protest on Nov. 7 resulted from UAW accusations that Chelsea Industries management refused to negotiate with workers.

Harvey Morrell, President of UAW Local 437, said that, following last week's protest, the company should make the next move. "We're waiting to see if Chelsea Industries will sit down and start negotiating. As of right now, we're waiting for them. The ball is in their court," Morrell explained.

Morrell said that UAW Regional Director Bob King would likely contact Chelsea Industries management to propose negotiations.

TIMBER TOWN designer John Dean shares ideas with students at North Elementary School on Design Day last Wednesday. The youngsters had many good ideas for the project. And yes, apparently there will be some replica of the Chelsea Clocktower in the design. Leathers & Associates is designing the project, which will ultimately put together by a huge group of volunteers next year. The project is slated for land next to Weber Fields on Sibley Road.

Disconnected? No, Phones Were Moved

Many people who called The Chelsea Standard/Dexter Leader offices last Friday heard a recorded message that our telephones were disconnected.

Unfortunately, that was the case, but it was a temporary condition.

The Standard/Leader numbers were supposed to be switched from one location to another early Friday morning. However, an error caused the numbers to be disconnected early that morning, and they weren't reconnected until early that evening.

We apologize if the problem was an inconvenience to you—it certainly was to us.

For the record, our telephone number is 475-1371. Our fax number is 475-1413. The previous Chelsea Review fax number, 475-7842, has been disconnected.

Our address is 114 N. Main St., Chelsea, 48118.

Chelsea Program Model for Country In Community Ed.

By Scott Bishop
Staff Writer

The Chelsea Community Education program was on stage before a national audience last Wednesday, Nov. 8. The National Center of Community Education brought 33 trainees to Chelsea to learn from a model program.

Anne Valle, Chelsea Adult Education Program Director, speculated why Chelsea was chosen as a model. "I think it is a good example of a small community education program. I think Chelsea diversified a long time ago into all these other areas where other community education programs did not," she said.

Chelsea Community Education Director Jeff Rohrer explained how diversity gave the entire community access to education. "The community education process allows us to utilize all of our school resources to provide the best educational program possible for everyone that lives in the district, not just kindergarten through 12th grade students, but everyone from infants to senior citizens," he said.

The Chelsea program offers a wide scope of courses and activities to involve the wider community, ranging from early infant programs for children as young as six months, youth enrichment like tutoring and after school programs, adult education like GED preparation, and senior citizen enrichment courses and activities. Additionally, Chelsea Community Education coordinates with other services to meet resident needs district-wide, for instance a partnership with Chelsea Community Hospital to provide a before and after-school child-care program.

NCCE delegates saw presentations from Chelsea staff focusing on the diversity of program offerings.

NCCE Associate Director Shane Tiedeman explained his purpose in bringing Community Education directors and staff from around the country to Chelsea. "The reason we came here today is to actually see a community education program in practice. We chose to come here really because of the leadership that (Chelsea Community Education Director) Jeff Rohrer has provided the community education in this community and also the strong community education background that Chelsea has," Tiedeman said.

Rohrer expressed gratitude that Chelsea's program was recognized and honored by the trainee's visit, and shared the credit with the entire school and community.

Rohrer said he hopes that seeing Chelsea's program will benefit the NCCE visitors. "I hope that they go back to their states and their communities with an idea of a better way to involve the community in Community Grieves Over Loss of 'The Sweetest One'

The Chelsea community said a sad goodbye last week to 16-year-old Monica C. Royce.

Royce was found by a passing motorist early last Wednesday morning, Nov. 8 below the Freer Road overpass near the westbound lane of I-94. She died later that day at University of Michigan Hospital due to massive head injuries and chest injuries.

Police said there appeared to be no foul play involved and they were treating it as an apparent suicide. However, as of press time an official ruling had not been made by the county coroner's office.

There was a profound feeling of disbelief among the people who knew Royce. They say she did not appear to be a girl in emotional turmoil. She was an A-B student, popular, pretty, and involved in her church, and volleyball. She was also a talented ballet dancer, loved to draw and paint, and play music. She comes from a large family—her parents, Mark and Mary, and six brothers and sisters, Jon, Theresa, Katrina, Emily, Anna, and George.

The Rev. Fr. Philip Dupuis told his congregation at St. Mary's Catholic Church, and others who attended the Mass on Saturday, that "Because we didn't live through (Monica's) experience...it is useless to ask ourselves why we didn't recognize what was happening." About Monica, he added, "One such psychic falling-off-a-cliff doesn't negate everything that went before."

MONICA C. ROYCE

Members of the Royce family were not ready to talk about their daughter and sister. However, they offered some written comments—some from them, some from others—which were shared at the vigil for Monica last Friday.

"Monica is sweet and serene. If you know 1,000 people, Monica is probably the sweetest one you know."

"Monica is shy and quiet, liked to melt into the background, never sought the limelight, even resisted having her picture taken."

"Monica was a great friend, someone you could count on, and someone who was easy to get along with...If anyone would be there for you, it was Monica."

"You were soft as a rose, hard as a diamond, graceful as a butterfly, and you were my little sister."

Letters to the Editor

Thanks to Walter and Helen

I would like to take this opportunity to wish the Leonards well. As someone who has many brown shopping bags full of the product of their lives, I thank them for capturing our special moments in print, thereby making our memories permanent. Walter, Helen May and Helen Kay embodied the Leader and Standard. Those papers reflected their talents, their love for the community and their gifts for capturing our lives in print and photos. We are all richer for their efforts. My heartfelt thanks to each of them.

In reading about the current changes to public education and re-evaluation of its purpose and delivery, it occurs to me that you could be instrumental in effecting important changes to both your paper and our schools. I would encourage you to explore a working arrangement with the english and journalism instructors in both schools to provide our students with the opportunity to cover local activities and see the product of their efforts appear in your papers. You better to cover local sports, for example, than those most interested in and knowledgeable of the teams and their players? We could all benefit from their efforts and, as a result, hopefully retain two unique papers.

Finally, thank you for continuing the tradition of the Leonards. May you weave many more threads in the fabric of our lives.

Cindy Bradbury

A Big Event

I'd like to notify you and others in the community about a big event for our family.

On Oct. 19, 1995, a daughter, Elizabeth Kathryn, was born at our North Lake Home to Floyd and Mary Boyce... a big event. Elizabeth and her siblings are seventh generation North Lakers and we're quite proud of them.

We all thought it was a pretty cool event. My Aunt Elizabeth (Boyce) Worden was also born at the North Lake Cottage in 1922. I thought that made it even cooler.

Well, this proud dad wrote up a birth notice, hooked up the horses and buggy, and drove right to that old Glazier Building to give the information to "The Chelsea Standard." Unfortunately a sign on the door stated, "Sorry Closed... be back at 3:00." I couldn't wait for hours so I drove those horses back home and said to my wife Mary, "Don't worry honey, I'll take the birth notice in tomorrow."

Next day I had to shuttle three kids to various soccer activities in Chelsea and Jackson. Can you relate? For about 5 1/2 hours I watched kids play soccer in the rain with 40 mph winds at about 40 degrees! What a good time! I had about two extra minutes in between cities and games to drop off that announcement. I sprinted to the door only to find a new note. The note said, "Sorry, moved to Sylvan building on North Main Street."

My choices became instantly clear! Drop off the announcement at the new location and be late for the kids game or get to the game on time (i.e. another birth announcement delay or disappointed, waiting kids). I had to delay the announcement until next week. Can you relate?

When I got home I said to Mary, "I'm sorry Mary. I'll get poor little Elizabeth's birth notice in next week's paper." We simply had to understand this transition in the paper's ownership.

Next week came. I was determined. I hooked up the horses and buggy and drove right up to that newly, refurbished Sylvan building. I marched right in and personally handed them the printed up birth announcement. It was almost as good as a fax. We went over it. There were no cats but I was satisfied anyway. I drove those horses right back home.

We waited. We received the next edition of "The Chelsea Standard" but alas, nothing about our baby Elizabeth.

Well, I said to myself, "before this girl turns one year old we'd better try that announcement again."

This time Mary drove those old horses into town. She hand-delivered yet another birth announcement. We anxiously awaited the next week's paper. It finally came. Yup! You guessed it. Nothing. Our poor little Elizabeth! Will she need therapy for this oversight-of her birth? Will we? After all, they printed up all her sibling's birth notices. Why not hers?

Well, this time we're going straight to the head honcho. I'm hooking up those horses and I'm about to depart again. Please Mr. Editor, put this in your paper. Elizabeth is still waiting.

Thanks,

Floyd Boyce

P.S. Honestly, we're not really upset about all this. We're just poking a little fun at ourselves. We don't want to keep driving those old horses into town.

(We understand what you are going through. When The Chelsea Standard changed hands, it was a cold, blustery, rainy day. For us, it was also a little like being editorially "born again." Some people still don't know about it, but we're mighty proud just the same. THE EDITOR)

Halloween Parade

What happened to Halloween this year?

Let me start by saying I'm a 35-year resident of this town. I was born and raised here. Year after year I have looked forward to the Halloween celebration in Chelsea. As an adult, I still dress up in costume with the kids. I even have friends over to celebrate with us because Chelsea traditionally has a great parade, and safety is not a question.

Again, what happened this year?

The friends came over and we went trick or treating from 4-6 p.m., which is unrealistic because half of the parents aren't home from work, and some kids aren't home from school. We then arrived at Beach Middle School for the annual costume judging right on time. Cider and donuts were at the back of the room. Costumes were judged and pictures were taken for the paper. No parade, was announced. We read in The Chelsea Standard that a parade would take place around the school. The whole idea of having a Halloween Parade down town is to show off your costume to the village people. I can't tell you how many people from the village were there to watch the parade because we did not get to participate in the parade this year. Did it happen?

What happened to tradition? I understand, due to the weather on past Halloween celebrations people want to be inside, but not at the expense of the Down Town Parade.

Too many traditional ideas and plans are being sacrificed.

I hope next year's Halloween Celebration Committee rethinks the location of the Halloween Parade.

Trick or Treat,
Gwen Graham-Feldkamp

Opening Remarks

By Brian Hamilton

This has been one of those stretches in the newsroom that sometimes makes me long for a different career.

We have reported on separate tragedies involving children in both Dexter and Chelsea. In Dexter, we watched as a community reacted after a 10-year-old boy, Robert Ridenour, was struck and killed by a truck on a busy road. Here, of course, the community grieved for 16-year-old Monica Royce.

I do not know either family, with the exception of Monica's brother, Jon, who plays basketball with us old guys during the summer and regularly makes us feel six steps too slow and six inches too short. I've met his beautiful infant daughter, Olivia, whose one goal in her early life seems to be to put a smile on the face of anyone who greets her. I had seen Monica around town at games and other places—I recognized her photograph.

It's never easy to cover stories like these, even if I don't know the people involved, simply because they are about children and they make me think about children in ways that are very uncomfortable, although probably very necessary.

I can't pretend that I'll ever know how the Ridenours or Royces feel, but my heart aches for them. To lose a child, as the Rev. Fr. Philip Dupuis said during Saturday's Mass at St. Mary's Catholic Church, is every parent's worst nightmare. Yet I can count, without even trying, six families I know in this small town who have had to bury a child. As a parent of an eight-year-old, this fact alone makes me pause and realize that all of us parents are one step away from the "worst nightmare." We try to do everything we can to protect our children and help them lead their own lives, but there is so much out of our control. We can't be there every time our child crosses the street.

Fr. Dupuis offered some very wise observations about children and the pressures they face, and it occurred to me that in a roundabout way his comments apply in both of these situations. He talked about "the unspeakable pressures" on children and how kids these days are routinely asked to handle situations that are really beyond their years. He was speaking more about emotional pressures, but how well equipped is a 10-year-old to cross a busy road? Or to put it in another context, we routinely, consciously or not, ask our children to cross an emotional four-lane road which they may not be ready to cross.

Thirty years ago, when I was a child, neither kind of highway, especially in a small town, was as busy or complex as it is now. Conditions have changed so gradually that I don't think most of us—at least those of us in my generation—are truly aware of the hazards.

GIFT THAT LASTS A LIFETIME

Today, it seems that major appliances and cars have built-in obsolescence. Toys given at holiday time seem to be broken by January and clothes have a way of wearing out before they're even broken in. Is there really a gift that can last a lifetime?

What parents don't want for their child — good looks, confidence, better health and a beautiful smile? Some go through their entire lives lacking these because of crooked teeth or an overbite (buck teeth) or an underbite. It's not hard to see children (and adults) go out of their way to hide their smiles so that people won't see their dental defects.

When parents bestow upon their child the gift of straight teeth through orthodontics, then they can be sure that they have given a gift that lasts a lifetime. With straight teeth will come the precious bonuses of a perfect smile, improved self confidence and (because of the corrected bite) lower future dental bills.

Another hunting season has officially begun, and it's sure to bring with it a flurry of stories about incidents between hunters and landowners. Is hunting safe? Or do we all need to bundle away our children, wear flame orange jogging suits, and shun the woodlands until the madness is over?

Tim Warren insists it is safe. He says approximately one-third of all adult males in Michigan will take to the woods during hunting season, a group larger than the standing army of the United States. Still, he claims, there will only be a few incidents which result in injury or death, making it safer than golf or tennis, for example. In fact, more people die of heart attacks while hunting than other causes. Firearm deaths are extremely rare now.

Warren should know the statistics. He used to be with the Michigan United Conservation Clubs, and was recently appointed by Roland Harnes to the Game and Fish Trust Fund Oversight committee for the state of Michigan. He's an active member of the Chelsea Rod & Gun Club.

Warren says the biggest problems for hunters come from animal rights groups. One group wants to ban all bear hunting. Another group wants animals freed from all control by humans. They are even opposed to people having pets. In one instance while he was out hunting, some people were in the woods shooting off fire crackers and yelling to scare away the game. In a chilling twist to the controversy, investigators suspect the most recent hunting fatality might actually have been committed by some anti-hunting activist. During bow season last year, the victim was shot in the back with an arrow while he was sitting up in the branches in his tree stand.

So much for hunters, but what about property owners? Is it safe for them? Debra Reithmiller of the Grass Lake area says she hasn't had any close encounters with hunters' bullets, but she is sure she would if she lived closer to state lands. Her parents have had problems. Their property borders state lands, and they have heard bullets whizzing past on more than one occasion. Once, when her father went down to inform some hunters that they were on private property, they became very belligerent, one man even threatening to beat her father with the stock of his gun. She insists that she isn't against hunting; her man was out hunting when "we spoke on the phone. She's just against hunters with bad manners, bad training, and ignorance of the principles of good hunting practices."

Surprisingly, Cheryl Cameron isn't against hunting, either. Even though their house has bullet holes in it from at least two separate occasions, and her barn has at least one. One time, for six months straight, some people from a Detroit suburb were in the state woods by their home every weekend for six months straight, playing music and firing semi-automatic weapons. Another time, a man with a shotgun walked up toward their house and shot and killed two geese in a pond in their front yard. The geese were year-round residents. One couldn't fly and since geese mate for life, the other one stayed as well. The man ran off after shooting them. The Michigan Department of Natural Resources (MDNR) wouldn't come out.

In fact, she blames most of the problems on the MDNR. Cameron has called them on a number of occasions, trying to get them to respond to her complaint, but until a couple of months ago, they hadn't been at all responsive. Then, at a meeting set up by the MDNR in mid-August to hear people's concerns, she got her chance. Since speaking up at that meeting, Bruce Baker of the MDNR has come out with a prison crew and clear-cut the woods along the boundary of the state lands. She feels much better about her situation now, but is still concerned for other people with property that abuts state land. "They shouldn't be buying more land than they can take care of and patrol," she says.

State Rep. Mary Schroer, an attendee at that August meeting, agrees. "The bottom line is that the MDNR needs to provide more enforcement," she says.

Besides problems with hunters on and around state lands, some hunters don't seem to care whether they are on state lands or not, according to Debra Reithmiller. "I don't mind if someone asks, but some people don't bother to ask. They only care if they get caught."

Tim Warren says, "There are some bad apples out there. As sportsmen we need to police ourselves better. If we see people committing criminal acts, we need to report them."

"But people only hear the bad things. They forget that it is the hunters that have brought turkey and elk into Michigan. Hunters work all the time with organizations like Turkeys Forever and Ducks Unlimited. Hunters are involved with wildlife management, and are very active in improving the environment. We have the biggest turkey and deer populations we have had since the 1800s, and that's largely due to hunters. Wildlife is a renewable resource that can be managed and enjoyed just like any other resource."

Agriculture Department To Conduct Two Surveys

As farmers finish harvesting corn and soybean crops, the Federal/State Michigan Agricultural Statistics Service will conduct two major surveys. To get the final story on 1995 crops, 9,000 Michigan farmers will be contacted on the 1994 Farm Report, and around Dec. 1, more than 1,800 farmers will be asked to complete the December Agricultural Survey. Most selected farmers will receive a questionnaire in the mail, while some will be contacted by telephone or interviewed in person. These surveys will provide the data necessary for establishing final 1995 crop acreage, yield and production estimates and 1996 winter wheat and rye seedings. It will also provide current information on grain stocks, chicken inventory, and hog inventory and farrowings.

Producers receiving a copy of either the December Agricultural Survey or Farming Operation Survey in the mail are encouraged to complete and return it promptly. This will eliminate the need for telephone or personal follow-up, thus keeping survey cost to a minimum. Individual reports from farmers are kept confidential, and are only summarized to set county, state, and national estimates of crop production and livestock inventories.

Published estimates from these surveys will keep everyone in the market equally informed. Some users of these statistics include farmers and farm organizations, government agencies that manage farm programs and set farm policy, food processors, farm supply firms, exporters, foreign and domestic customers and transportation firms. Reports based on the December Agricultural Survey will be released on Dec. 28, for hogs and pigs and Jan. 11 for crop production, grain stocks and 1996 crop winter wheat. County level estimates based on data from both surveys will become available in the spring of 1996.

What's Your Excitement Feature

Dr. Stewart L. Tubbs
College of Business Dean
Eastern Michigan University

The 1996 Chrysler minivans have rear doors on both the driver's and the passenger's sides. The Lincoln Mark III has a small phone receiver built into the driver's side front pillar. Oldsmobile has unveiled the sleek new Aurora and is phasing out the boxy Olds 98 model. Virtually all the auto manufacturers are now offering cars in a color called wild lavender. All of these are examples of "excitement features" that are designed to offer customers something new and different in order to stimulate sales. The idea of developing excitement features for products comes from the Kano model developed in Japan by Dr. Noriaki Kano. In this model products are said to have three kinds of features: (1) basic, (2) performance, and (3) excitement.

Basic features on car or truck are things like the vehicle starting every time the driver turns on the ignition, or the door locks working, or the turn signals blinking, etc. These features are expected by the customer and are rarely mentioned as a source of satisfaction with the product.

Performance features encompass the entire range of satisfaction and dissatisfaction. If the manufacturer executes these features well, he or she creates a high level of satisfaction. However, if he or she fails, a high level of dissatisfaction will result. Examples of these features are fuel economy, vehicle noise, seating comfort and paint appearance.

Excitement features, on the other hand, tend to exceed customer expectations. These are exciting precisely because customers don't have specific expectations for them. These features exceed what the customer has experienced in the past. It is reported that no customer ever asked the auto companies to produce the minivan, yet these vehicles have virtually replaced the station wagon. Now the sport utility vehicles have taken the marketplace by a storm creating a new form of excitement. Over time excitement features become basic and simply become expected by customers.

The interesting question to me is, "How can each of us add excitement features to our businesses?" It seems that the first step would be to educate others in your company to the concepts of basic, performance and excitement features. Then you can get others involved in the identification and pursuit of each kind of feature for your products or services. This effort will be improved if the company's culture encourages creativity and reasonable risk-taking.

Creativity can be taught and increased in any company. Try holding a seminar on creativity. How long has it been since you last had an all out brainstorming session in which you really stuck to the rules of brainstorming i.e., no criticism allowed, the wilder the ideas the better, building on each other's ideas, saving evaluation and prioritizing of ideas until later. It seems that all of these activities might be worth trying on an experimental basis. These concepts also might apply to your company as well as your products and services.

What policies and practices might be created to add excitement? Peter Senge's concept of the learning organization involves continuously encouraging personal and professional growth in each employee. This certainly can add excitement. For example, do you have systematic professional development plans for all your key employees?

It is axiomatic that in order to build excitement into your business you must have true closeness to your customers. Out of the closeness came such examples as the Pizza Hut system. In this case, each local Pizza Hut store keeps computer files on each customer's preferences. Now you don't have to repeat which toppings you want every time you order. It's kept in the computer. Another example is the Marriott hotels that now have your reservation paperwork filled out when you enter the lobby, similar to the rental car companies. The entire interaction can be done in less than a minute. A third example is UPS, which found that its customers liked spending a few minutes talking to the drivers. So the company actually planned an extra half hour a day into each driver's schedule for customer contact.

Chelsea 4-H Members Bring Home Awards

Melissa Bycraft, Joshua Hofing, and Stephanie Wesolowski, all of Chelsea, represented Washtenaw County in the Premier Stockman Livestock Judging Classic held in Columbia City, Indiana on Oct. 14. 4-H and FFA members from seven states competed in the contest.

DR. STEWART L. TUBBS

So the next time you and your staff are wondering how to best target your efforts, think of these examples and ask yourselves, "What are our excitement features?"

Farm Bureau Board Lobbies Congress

During their visit to Washington, D.C., Oct. 23-25, the board of directors of the Michigan Farm Bureau made sure Congress understood that the shape of federal farm policy is critical to the future of Michigan agriculture.

"We told the Michigan congressional delegation about our vision for agriculture in the 21st century and the role that the U.S. government should play in it," said MFB President Jack Laurie. "Michigan has some unique needs because of the type of diverse agriculture we have in our state. When we look at the role that federal farm programs should play in Michigan agriculture, without question that role should include continued and possibly increased support for those programs that move our products into the world marketplace," he said.

Sufficient funding for agricultural research is also very important to Michigan farmers, said Laurie. "Research is an investment of public dollars in agriculture that has a return to all taxpayers across the nation, because research provides us with more efficient ways to farm, more nutritious food products and increased supplies of affordable food. So, the direct beneficiaries of investment in agricultural research are consumers, not just farmers."

Other issues discussed with congressman included crop insurance, reform of the Endangered Species Act, a cut in the capital gains tax, estate tax reform and federal wetlands policy.

Members of the MFB Board are Jim Miller of Coloma, Blaine Vansickle of Marshall, Michael Fusilier of Manchester, Thomas Guthrie of Delton, Alan Garner of Mason, Wayne Wood or Marlette, Rick Johnson of Leroy, Richard Leach of Saginaw, Joshua Wunsch of Traverse City, Margaret Kartes of West Branch, Robert Wahmhoff of Baraga, Faye Adam of Snover, Judith Emmons of Sheridan, Jan Vosburg of Climax, Andrew Hagenow of Rockford and Brigitte Leach of Climax.

World AIDS Day Vigil Set

The HIV/AIDS Resource Center (HARC) will sponsor Ann Arbor's fourth annual World AIDS Day Candlelight Vigil and March beginning at 6:30 p.m., Friday, Dec. 1. The program will start in the Anderson Room of the Michigan Union, on the University of Michigan's Central Campus.

"We're really very excited about this year's vigil," says Patrick Yankee, Executive Director of the HIV/AIDS Resource Center. "Every one of Ann Arbor's World AIDS Day events have been planned and executed by HARC's volunteers and dedicated community leaders and organizations. . . this is truly an event that belongs to the community," Yankee continues.

This year's program, entitled "Shared Rights, Shared Responsibilities," will begin with a series of speakers, including Congressperson Lynn Rivers, followed by a candle lighting ceremony on the steps of the Union. A procession will follow through the streets of Ann Arbor and end at the First Congregational Church of Ann Arbor on the corner of State and William.

The closing ceremony will be at 8:00 p.m., followed by a reception in the Pilgrim's Hall adjacent to the church.

The World AIDS Day vigil offers the opportunity for reflection and healing for those who have lost loved ones as a result of AIDS. It is also a chance to raise awareness in our community of HIV and AIDS. All interested persons are welcome. Participants are encouraged to dress warmly and bring their own candles.

Elycia Hall Named U.S. Air Force Cadet

Elycia Hall has been officially accepted as a cadet at the United States Air Force Academy, Colorado Springs, Colo., as a member of the 1999 graduating class.

The cadet's acceptance marked the completion of six weeks of basic cadet training which included military courtesies and customs and daily testing of their physical endurance and mental strength.

With their acceptance into the academy, the new cadets embark upon a four-year journey toward graduation to receive a bachelor of science degree and a commission in the Air Force as a second lieutenant.

Hall is the daughter of Rodney E. and Darcel R. Hall of 12766 E. Michigan Ave., Grass Lake.

She graduated from Grass Lake High School in 1995.

Crowswell Opera House

Everybody loves Little Orphan Annie. Her trials and tribulations in finding a secure life outside an orphanage caused a nation of people and the highest level of government, the President of the United States, to take her to their hearts.

The stage musical Annie Warbucks is live on stage at the Crowswell Opera House, 129 E. Maumee St., downtown Adrian, Nov. 24-26 and Dec. 1-3. Annie Warbucks picks up the story of the orphan where the first musical, Annie, ended.

The first musical, Annie, appeared on stage in 1977 and soon everyone in the country was singing the optimistic lyrics of "Tomorrow" and rooting for her "forever happiness" with her beloved Daddy Warbucks.

With the new stage musical, Annie Warbucks, it's 1934 and her story continues. Annie and Oliver Warbucks are together forever, assured by their friend, F.D.R., that the "New Deal" is here. However, "not so fast" say the authorities, the New York City Department of Child Welfare, who have jurisdiction over orphans such as Annie. Harriet Doyle, commissioner of the Child Welfare Department tells Oliver Warbucks that he must find a wife to be a mother to Annie for it is the law in the State of New York (1934) that an unmarried male cannot adopt a child, and the story of Annie Warbucks, the stage musical, begins. Daddy Warbucks has 60 days to find a mother for Annie, or back to the orphanage she goes. The adventures continue with new songs, new heroes, new villains and new shen-

FDA Approves First Excimer Laser System

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) approved the first excimer laser system in the United States for Photorefractive Keratectomy for laser correction of nearsightedness. The vast majority of the estimated 60 million Americans who suffer from nearsightedness may be candidates for this laser treatment. Summit Technology, Inc. developed the excimer laser and is the only company in the U.S. to receive FDA approval for the treatment of nearsightedness using the excimer laser.

"Today's approval by FDA marks a new milestone in the treatment and correction of vision for millions of Americans with nearsightedness," said David Muller, Ph.D., president and chief executive officer of Summit Technology, Inc.

"People now have a very safe and effective alternative to contact lenses and glasses for improving their vision," Dr. Muller added.

Ophthalmologists who are specially trained by Summit to use the excimer laser will perform Photorefractive Keratectomy with the Company's computerized excimer laser system. Prior to treatment, the laser is programmed to emit a specific number of pulses of ultraviolet light which removes a small amount of tissue and gently reshapes the cornea. This reshaping process flattens the cornea so that the eye can focus properly, thereby treating the nearsightedness.

The excimer laser is a non-thermal laser that generates a minimal amount of heat from its beam and removes tissue by breaking the bonds that hold the molecules together. The excimer laser is so precise that it can remove a single cell without affecting neighboring cells, resulting in an extremely smooth corneal surface. Unlike older surgical methods used to correct nearsightedness, such as Radial Keratotomy (RK), Photorefractive Keratectomy does not involve the use of a scalpel and leaves the remaining corneal tissue virtually unchanged. In fact, the laser treatment only involves approximately ten percent of the cornea compared to RK where the scalpel cuts into as much as 95 percent of the cornea.

Results from the studies reviewed by the FDA to approve Summit's application for treating nearsightedness indicated that all treatments resulted in improved natural vision, or vision without eyeglasses. In addition, more than 90% of the treatments resulted in at least 20/40 vision without correction, meaning those patients no longer needed to wear contact lenses or glasses to pass a driving test or to perform most functions in everyday life.

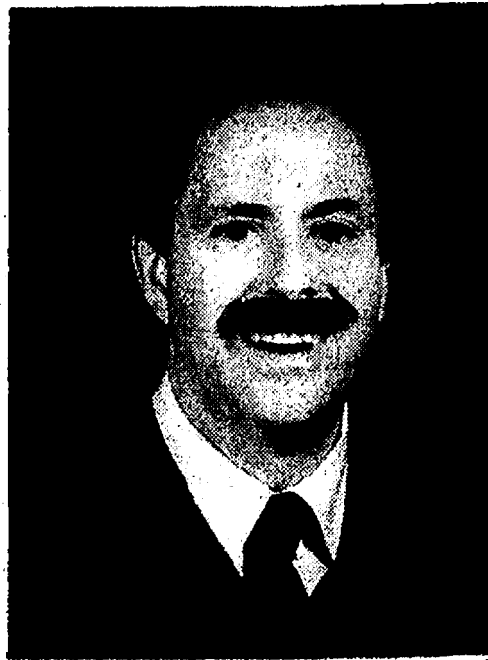

Festival Preparations Start Again

Preparations for the 8th Annual Festival of Lights on Friday, Dec. 1 are well under way.

This year the organizing committee is led by Allen Cole, and includes the following committee members: Ken Gietzen, the Rev. Wayne Hawley, Sheri Conrad, Carolyn Chase, Lois Speer, Ann Feeney, Jill Seitz, Sue Starkey, Mike Jackson, Sally Heil, Bill Kalmbach, Kathy Finger, B.J. and Chris Hohnke, Donna Burnette, Donna Palmer, Rod Powers and Keith Bloomensat.

Once again awards will be given for the best decorated homes and businesses, and everyone is encouraged to participate. Decorations for Best Use of Lights, Most Artistic or Religious will need to be prominently displayed by Tuesday, Nov. 27, to be considered for the contest. If you live outside of the village and would like to be considered, please call the Chamber of Commerce to register your address (475-1145). The awards will be presented at the All Community Sing at the Chelsea Depot, at 9 p.m.

For more information, call the Chelsea Chamber of Commerce office at 475-1145.

Property Rights Bill Reported

A House subcommittee in Lansing this week reported out a version of property rights legislation that somewhat scales back the private property rights protections originally sought by Farm Bureau. But MFB Associate Legislative Counsel Scott Everett says this cloud has a silver lining.

"The subcommittee is going to be taking a look at a lot of other issues dealing with private property rights, such as laws dealing with wetlands and inland lakes and streams," said Everett. "The bottom line is that Farm Bureau believes there is some positive potential for some excellent changes in the direction of private property rights protection. That would be very good for Michigan agriculture," he said.

Everett expects final legislative action on private rights legislation before the end of the year.

VAN BLARICUM

Ageless Wonder

Some people think they should slow down when they get to 55, but Dexter's Harlan Van Blaricum is accelerating into later life.

Van Blaricum, 55, recently won five gold, two silver and one bronze medal at the Huntsman World Senior games in St. George, Utah. He set a new Games age-group record in the 1,500 meter race-walk, competing in the 55-59 division, and also earned honors in diverse events like the duathlon, long jump, and high jump. The race-walk record is a better time than the record in the 50-54 age division.

More than 3,000 senior athletes from across the U.S. and some foreign countries competed. The Huntsman World Senior Games have been held each year since 1987.

Van Blaricum explained that he has been competing at the Huntsman Games for the past five years, that he enjoys the competition, but camaraderie is the real draw to go back. "It's very nice and over the years I've met people from all over. We go back and have a reunion (each year). It's more of a social thing. That's why I go out," he said.

The sprinting sage still competes with the Ann Arbor Track Club, the Wolverine Pacers, and Detroit Striders, though he recounts that running wasn't part of his life for many years.

Van Blaricum ran in high school, but it wasn't until he hit 40 years old that he renewed his interest in competing. But once he began working himself back into condition, he says, he was hooked.

"I was out running the roads and I was all by myself, there was nobody out there. (I was) just getting in shape and then these races started coming up and I thought I'd go to some of these races, and even with little training behind me I did pretty well in my age group. Then I got gung ho," Van Blaricum said.

Carbon Monoxide Detectors Save Lives

Natural gas is one of the safest energy sources available. By itself, natural gas is not toxic. But, it natural gas does not burn completely because of dirty, improperly adjusted burners or recirculation of flue products, carbon monoxide may be present. The best way to protect your family from carbon monoxide is proper use and care of your natural gas appliances.

To further protect your family from the threat of carbon monoxide and alleviate concerns about CO in homes, Michigan Consolidated Gas Company (MichCon) is selling carbon monoxide (CO) detectors.

"The best way to protect against carbon monoxide is an inspection of flues, chimneys and fuel-burning appliances such as furnaces and hot water heaters," said Mary Findlay, MichCon's vice president of customer related services. "We have received inquiries about CO detectors from customers who want the added peace of mind CO detectors provide. We are offering what we believe to be a very reliable product."

Carbon monoxide is a colorless, odorless, toxic gas resulting from the incomplete combustion of a fuel. Some of the most common symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning dizziness, headache, nausea and sleepiness. In extreme cases it can be fatal.

MichCon began selling the TRAK-IT CO detector earlier this year. The detector plugs into any standard outlet and emits a high-pitched alarm when it detects potentially dangerous levels of CO.

"Since the TRAK-IT is a plug-in type detector, it does not require a replacement of a battery or sensor at any time. Additionally, it did not respond to household vapors such as bleach or aerosols during testing in our laboratories," Finally said. "We want to make sure our customers receive protection without the nuisance of an improperly functioning detector."

Anyone can purchase a detector by calling MichCon at 1-800-432-7689. MichCon customers will receive information about ordering the detectors in their gas bills and can pay for the detectors through their monthly bills.

Deer Hunters Should Use Caution

Nov. 15 marks the opening of the 1995 firearm deer season, and the Department of Natural Resources is reminding hunters to use caution in the field and handle firearms safely to avoid tragic accidents.

"Michigan has more land open to public hunting than any state in the eastern half of the United States," DNR Director Mike Moore said. "We're fortunate to have a whitetail deer population that's the envy of hunters everywhere. This season is expected to be one of the best in many years, but only if hunters observe some basic safety rules that will keep them alive and safe through the season."

Michigan is one of the safest places to hunt in North America; the 1994 firearm deer season was Michigan's safest on record. This good safety record is attributed to Michigan's Hunter Education classes. This year approximately 32,000 young men and women successfully completed the class before they could purchase a license to hunt. Since its inception in the 1960's, more than 1.2 million persons have completed these classes in Michigan. The goal of the hunter education program is to train responsible hunters while further reducing the numbers of firearm and bow accidents.

The year during the 15-day firearm deer season, nearly 700,000 hunters will spend tens of millions of hours afield pursuing whitetail deer in Michigan. Hunters can take simple, practical measures to avoid becoming an accident statistic.

First, make certain you will not be mistaken for a game animal. The easiest way is to prominently wear blaze orange as an outer garment. Hunters concealing themselves in a blind should hang or paint blaze orange prominently on the exterior of the blind. When moving during low light conditions, hunters are advised to carry a lighted flashlight to alert other hunters to their presence.

Hunters should select their hunting partners carefully, and refuse to hunt with persons who do not obey the game laws or are risk-takers. All too often persons who are excessively competitive become involved in hunting accidents. They seem to feel that they must get the most, the best, the biggest or the first. Being over competitive can be a formula for tragedy.

Two-party hunting accidents rarely involve strangers. Keep alert to the movements of your hunting partners at all times. Expect the unexpected. Do not let a momentary lapse in your concentration result in a tragedy.

These are some especially important rules to remember when handling firearms:

1. Treat every firearm as if it is loaded. Never touch a firearm without checking the chamber for live rounds. Never hand a firearm to someone or receive a firearm from another person without first checking the chamber and magazine.

2. Always control the muzzle of your firearm. Point it safely. The gun's muzzle should never be pointed at another person even for an instant. Keep fingers off the trigger until you are ready to shoot. Insist that all hunters in your group handle firearms carefully and respectfully. Real friends do not take chances with the safety of others.

3. Be certain of your target and what is beyond. Never shoot or even point your gun at a movement, a color or a sound. Be aware your surroundings. Look, not only at the target, but beyond the target for persons or objects in your line of fire.

Remember these basic guidelines, and have a safe and enjoyable firearm deer season in Michigan.

Deep inside the Venezuelan jungle, a genetic disease has plagued the inhabitants of a small village for generations. Moved by their plight, we went there to better understand the disease. Not only did we accomplish our mission, but our research led to the discovery of the gene that causes Huntington's disease.

Driven by a passion for improving health care, we've traveled to the far corners of the Earth. To places like the countryside of Japan and a small shipping town in Costa Rica. Even to outer space to conduct research.

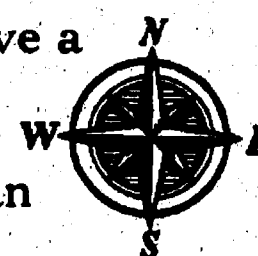

Everything we've learned we've brought back to you, through the physicians and

Pinckney High To Perform Neil Simon Comical Fable

Act 2, Pinckney High School's theatre company, is performing Neil Simon's comical fable Fools. Act 2's new director, Fran Goldstein, describes Fools as a light hearted, romantic comedy about a village under a kooky curse.

The cast of Fools includes several talented actors. The lovers, Aral Gribble as Leon Tolchinsky and Michelle Eilber as Sophia Zubritsky, are the backbone of the play. Leon has to educate Sophia within 24 hours in order for the town's curse to be broken. Unexpectedly, Leon falls in love with Sophia and teaching her to do more than set properly becomes a hilarious struggle. As for the rest of the cast, Rob Hubbard and Brenna Lehman are Sophia's eager, doting parents, Dr. and Lenya Zubritsky. Dr. and Lenya Zubritsky shower humor throughout the play as they try to answer the meaning to man's existence. The villagers, each an original "Fool", include Snetsky the sheep loser, played by Melissa Gawlowski, who blow her ram's horn wandering throughout the town in search of her sheep. Jessica Comfort is the accident prone magistrate. Eryn Lauckern is the fish seller with a catch. John Ohm plays Leon's rival for Sophia's hand. Shea Pouders as the butcher, and Katie Stein as Mishkin the mailperson, all add humor to "Fools" from their most original characters.

Fools will be performed on

Nov. 16, 17 and 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the Jane Tisch Performing Arts Theatre, on East M-36 and McGregor Road.

Bridge May Be Out For a While

By Scott Bishop
Staff Writer

"Bridge Over Troubled Water" has been a classic song for over 25 years. Renovating the bridge over Mill Creek won't take that long, but the Trinkle Road bridge won't be drivable for some time.

Bob Polens, managing director of the Washtenaw County Road Commission, said that rust-weakened steel beams undergirding the bridge forced its closure on May 31. The problem was detected during a regular bridge inspection, required every two years by state law.

"We looked at some alternatives to repair the bridge," Polens said, "and our estimates are approximately $85,000 just to replace beams on the bridge." Repair, Polens continued, would leave the 14-foot wide bridge with only the one lane it currently has, while replacing it would allow widening the road to two lanes. Replacement estimates ran about $200,000.

Polens said the bridge would be replaced and widened to 30 feet, with two traffic lanes, adding that state and federal aid would help defray the cost. "We applied for State Critical Bridge funds, which is a state and federal program which will pay for 95 percent of the construction costs." He estimated that fees for design and approach work would increase the road commission's share of the final bill to approximately 40 percent.

According to Polens, the state committee which appropriates Critical Bridge funds would review state-wide applications and reach decisions in January. Polens noted that, depending on the committee's decision, the bridge replacement funds could be available within one year or not for two to three years.

Because of low traffic over the bridge, approximately 80-100 cars per day, the opportunity to widen the bridge to two lanes, and available financial aid, Polens said, the bridge will be replaced rather than repaired, and that may prohibit traffic over it for an indeterminate time, possibly up to three years.

Currently, traffic is detoured south on either Fletcher or Lima Center Roads, which are connected east and west by Seitz Road.

Manchester Coop Plans Fundraiser

The first annual Manchester Co-op Preschool Auction will be held on Saturday, Nov. 18 at 3 p.m. at the St. Mary's Parish Center Hall.

Designed as a fundraiser for the Co-op Preschool, the auction will offer new items including Longaberger Baskets, computer games, U.S. Bonds, many new and high quality toys, hand-crafted decorative items and some special services. You say you need your gutters cleaned? How about a roof inspection? How about theater tickets to the Purple Rose and dinner at The Common Grill in Chelsea? U of M and Michigan State autographed footballs, perhaps? Auction chair Tracy Zigala has been accepting items from businesses in Manchester, Saline, Chelsea, Ann Arbor and Brooklyn.

All proceeds from the auction will go to support the Manchester Co-op Preschool, which has served Manchester area families for the past 30 years and is located in the lower level of the Emmanuel Church. Donations of new items are still being accepted and are tax deductible. For more information, please call Tracy Zigala at 428-9243.

Term Limits Don't Apply Here

State law which limits state legislators to two terms does not apply to village or county government, according to the Washtenaw County Election Division.

For example, three-time Chelsea Village President Richard Steele will be eligible to run for reelection in March.

THIS BRIDGE ON TRINKLE ROAD just east of Fletcher is closed to vehicular traffic because of concerns about the structural integrity of the bridge. The bridge is likely to be closed for quite a while before repairs can be made.

Commission Approves Plans For Pierce Lake Condos

By Scott Bishop
Staff Writer

The Chelsea Village Planning Commission put its stamp of approval on the Pierce Lake Village project, which promotes its plan of pedestrian-friendly connections throughout the village.

Planning commission chairman Tim Eder termed the Tuesday, Nov. 7 meeting a success. "We approved the final site plan for Pierce Lake Village. I think one of the noteworthy things about this project is a pathway and boardwalk that will connect sidewalks which are going to be built," he said.

The 59-unit development just south of Old US-12 will feature a public access pathway through the development, connecting to Pierce Lake Park and the county golf course. Developer Rene Papo agreed to grant an easement to the county for the construction of the path.

Washtenaw County Parks and Recreation Director Fred Barkley explained that the county will extend the pedestrian access from Old US-12 through the condo development to the park and golf course. The county agreed to construct on the donated land a 300-foot boardwalk across wetland areas; the rest of the path will be of crushed limestone. The developers also agreed to build sidewalks along their portion of Old US-12.

The developers will clear the route to allow access path construction, acquire any necessary permits from the DNR, and assure the county that only the 300-foot boardwalk would need to be constructed. A letter from Barkley to Papo indicated that if these guidelines were not followed, residents of the private development would be denied direct access and could only enter the park through the general entrance off of M-52.

Eder expressed satisfaction with the approval of the project. "The planning commission is very pleased with the way the final site plans for Pierce Lake Village turned out. Chelsea is going to have a first-rate condominium project. But even more important for the village is the fact that we will have a major link in our pedestrian pathway system," he said.

Eder described the "broader vision" of the planning commission as the construction of sidewalks and pedestrian paths interconnecting all areas of the village. The Commission recommended, according to Eder, that the village council make a priority the construction of sidewalks around the intersection of Old US-12 and M-52, with a secondary goal of sidewalks on both sides of Old US-12 east of M-52.

Eder was hopeful that the council could act quickly. "We think a real good goal would be to walk (along sidewalks) from downtown to the fairgrounds by fair time next summer," he said.

SITE WORK has begun on a new condominium complex on Pierce Lake behind Polly's Market. The development, which was recently approved by the Village Planning Commission, will have more than 50 units. Local boy Rene Papo, who developed and later sold Chelsea Shopping Center, is one of the developers.

Kids Are Under Pressure But Help's Not Far Away

The tragic death of 16-year-old Monica Royce has prompted much conversation about the pressures kids face these days. However, there is also plenty of help available for kids who need it.

The Rev. Fr. Philip Dupuis of St. Mary's Catholic Church, and Chelsea High School counselor Sue Carter had similar observations about the pressures on today's youth. Their comments were not directed in particular at the local tragedy.

The Rev. Fr. Dupuis, during the Mass at St. Mary's Catholic Church last Saturday, noted that in a recent conversation with others of his generation, that "In our own experience, we couldn't think of a single classmate who had ever been lost to us in any way except an accident. This was only 40 or 50 years ago. Human nature has not changed. That means society has. Somehow, unbearable pressures are being put on these young people and I think it's important we try to identify what has changed because if we don't, nothing will change."

Carter, who's been a high school counselor for more than 20 years, says "There is a lot of pressure to do well. Take a look at a child's schedule these days. Kids don't have time to play." She said family life has changed. There is more divorce, and fewer extended families. Drugs are more widely available. For many kids, church is not the anchor it used to be.

The Rev. Fr. Dupuis also noted that in his youth, "Society was not pressing us to accept responsibilities beyond our age and maturity. We were allowed to fail and still survive. To try and flop."

For kids feeling pressure, no matter what the problem, there are local avenues for help. One easy place to start is the completely anonymous Chelsea Helpline (475-0111), a local crisis telephone line.

School counselors and local clergy are also available. Carter also suggests the family physician, or a family member—perhaps a grandfather if the child can't communicate with the immediate family.

"I'm really a believer that if we're going to effect a long-term change, we have to work with the whole family," Carter said.

"I really get nervous if the only help a child is seeking is from peers. But that's often where they want to go."

When a problem is immediate and affects the school population, Chelsea School District's Crisis Management Team goes to work. Last Wednesday they began addressing the situation as soon as they heard about it. High School counselors were extremely busy throughout the rest of the week trying to help kids sort out their feelings and deal with perhaps the most difficult situation a classmate can ever face. Each counselor has approximately 270 assigned students to deal with on a routine basis. However, in crisis situations they are often called upon to help another counselor's student. In addition, a psychiatrist and social workers were available. Every district building was monitored, as were the hallways at the high school, as staff tried to identify students who were having a hard time coping.

"It is every classmate's worst nightmare because classmates aren't supposed to die," the Rev. Fr. Dupuis said during the Mass held at St. Mary's Catholic Church Saturday night.

Carter said these kinds of traumatic situations sometimes cause another kind of problem. A student who reacts strongly may also be upset "about a lot of their own issues." She said there's also "a lot of guilt and anger, and kids who aren't upset question themselves, 'what's wrong with me?'"

It's an entirely understandable and natural response, but one that can be dealt with through the help of caring adults.

POLICE BLOTTER

Scio Township

Stolen Vehicle

A 53-year-old Stockbridge man reported his 1987 Ford van was stolen while parked in front of a business in the 6900 block of Jackson Road, Nov. 3. The van is valued at $9,000. A Ditch-Witch trencher valued at $23,000 was also stolen, according to Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department.

Larceny

Larceny was reported at Huron Valley Electric, 425 Jackson Plaza Dr., Oct. 20. A 23-year-old Onsted man told a Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy someone stole a cellular bag telephone valued at $150. The phone was left on the front seat of a van parked in a fenced area next to the business.

Larceny was reported in the 4800 block of Jackson Road, Nov. 6. Approximately $1,200 worth of electric tools were stolen from a building under construction. Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputies have no suspects or evidence in the case.

Suicidal Subject

Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputies responded to Scio Farms Estates, 6655 Jackson Rd., Nov. 9 after a 20-year-old man barricaded himself in his bedroom. The man was reportedly upset because his mother was going to tell his probation officer he snuck a teenage girl into his bedroom. When deputies arrived, the suspect was holding a fire bomb and lighter. A deputy attempted to talk the man out of hurting himself, but he became more distraught. He lit the fire bomb and threw it into a pile of clothing. Both deputies on the scene climbed through the barricade, grabbed the suspect and extinguished the fire. The man was transported to University of Michigan Hospital for psychiatric treatment. He will be charged with preparing to burn property.

Breaking and Entering

Breaking and entering was reported at Uptown Coney Island, 3917 Jackson Rd., Nov. 9. A 40-year-old Ann Arbor man told a Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy someone broke into his business between Nov. 8 and Nov. 9. Thieves pried open an outside door, causing $300 in damages to the rear door, an office door and cash register. An undetermined amount of money was stolen from the cash register.

Breaking and entering was reported at Elite Bakery, 3917 Jackson Rd., Nov. 9. A 30-year-old Ann Arbor man told a Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy he arrived at his business shortly after midnight to find someone had broken into the building. The cash register was damaged, but nothing was taken.

Trespassing

Trespassing was reported in the 4900 block of Waters Road, Nov. 1. A 33-year-old township man told a Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy he recently bought property and has found his neighbor trespassing on it often. He said the neighbor, a 64-year-old woman, has roamed the property and then reported to township officials and the Department of Natural Resources about the trash on site. The man claims the trash was left from the former owner and it is taking time to clean up. Since posting "No Trespassing" signs, the man said the woman has been seen on the property. The suspect denies being on the property since the signs were posted.

Lets Go Bulldogs!

Bulldog Girls Win SEC With Perfect League Mark

Royalty in England may be having its problems, but the Chelsea girls' basketball team is wearing its SEC championship crown very well indeed.

The Bulldogs swept their final two games of the regular season last week to complete a perfect 12-0 Southeastern Conference season and finish 17-3 overall heading into state tournament play beginning this week.

"I'm very pleased. I couldn't be happier," said Coach Charlie Waller. Chelsea dropped the guillotine on Pinckney last Tuesday, Nov. 7 and Saline Thursday, Nov. 9, led by its upper classmen. "The seniors really stepped up in both games. I think you can see it in their eyes that this is important," Waller explained.

The win Tuesday over traditional SEC power Pinckney, the second of the season for the Bulldogs, was a highlight for Waller. Chelsea broke away from an 8-8 first quarter tie and held off the Pirates for a 39-32 win.

The senior front-line triumvirate of Annie Terpstra, Jessica Inwood and Heidi Wehrwein capped the Pirates' inside game, combining for 28 points and 21 rebounds. Kasie Ruhlig added four points, five rebounds and five assists and Cindy Richard grabbed five rebounds of her own.

Waller was pleased at his team's handling of Pinckney's defensive pressure late in the game, an area that plagued them earlier in the season. "I think they're doing a much better job. There's no observable let-down at the end of the game," he said.

Thursday, an inspired first quarter, particularly by point guard Ruhlig, staked the Bulldogs a 19-5 lead. Despite a good effort by the Hornets to get back into the game, Chelsea maintained a safe margin throughout the 55-43 victory.

Ruhlig led the first quarter rush, scoring 12 of her 20 points in the opening minutes. She added eight assists for good measure. Terpstra scored 20 points of her own and Wehrwein six. Terpstra snared 21 rebounds, Inwood nine, and Heidi Kennitz seven.

With the league title in hand, the Bulldogs are concentrating on district play, Waller said. "We need to get back to practice, reorganize, get focused for the teams in the district. I think that what we really need to do is re-focus the intensity and get up for this week," he said.

Chelsea opened the district last night at district host Onsted, taking on the winner of Monday's Dexter-Brooklyn/Columbia Central game. A win Wednesday would put them in position to win a second straight district title tomorrow night.

JV Basketball Ends Season

The Bulldogs dropped two games last week to finish their season with a 9-11 overall and 6-6 SEC record. Four players moved to join the varsity for the state tournament which began this week: sophomores Sarah Pruess and Hillary Spooner and freshman Margaret Schick and Karla Dettling.

Last Tuesday, Nov. 7, Chelsea couldn't overcome a slow start, as turnovers and poor free-throw shooting allowed visiting Pinckney to grab the lead early and keep extending it for a 35-21 win.

Amy McCalla grabbed 10 rebounds, while Dettling, Spooner, and Schick combined for 19 points.

The game was much closer Thursday, Nov. 9 at Saline. Chelsea outscored the Hornets in three of four quarters and led 19-13 at half-time but a 12-3 third quarter sting by Saline vaulted them into the lead and the Hornets held on for a 34-32 victory. "In the third quarter we stopped running our offense and had some turnovers and let Saline get back in the game," said Chelsea Coach Paul Terpstra.

Terpstra credited Pruess with an outstanding game, as she amassed eight points, eight rebounds and seven steals. Dettling hauled in seven rebounds, Schick had seven points, and Spooner, Lisa Zimmerman and Megan Holefka combined for 14 more.

Kent Young Is Grid MVP

At the Chelsea football banquet, 14 graduating seniors and award winners were honored. Kent Young was team Most Valuable Player, Peter Straub was Unsung Hero, and Garth Hammer and John Tyrrel Most Improved.

In addition, Damon McLaughlin and Jordan Dyer were named Best Linemen.

Not Necessarily The Sports News

By Scott Bishop

Here in The Chelsea Standard sports department we've been getting some interesting questions from readers like, why does Milan keep winning the SEC girl's swimming championship when Chelsea is so much closer to the Pacific Ocean? We thought about it long and hard, and even went so far as call a geography teacher and determine where Milan actually is, but ultimately we realized we're just not qualified to answer technical questions like that.

So we turned to an expert, sports philosopher Dr. Mix D. Upliche. Our conversation went like this.

So Dr. Upliche, how can the Bulldog swim team break Milan's hold on the SEC championship?

Remember, it's not the size of the dog in the fight, it's the thought that counts!

Very interesting. Look, Doc, maybe swimming isn't your thing. Tell us this: If Chelsea's girl's basketball team took on the Los Angeles Lakers, would they have a chance to win?

Intriguing question. In sports philosophy we have a saying. On any given day, finders keepers.

Obviously, Dr. Mix D. Upliche didn't help us very much. So we went to a better known sports expert, television commentator Dick Vitale.

HEY! CHELSEA STANDARD! I LOVE IT, BABY!

Thanks, Mr. Vitale. By the way, do you always talk in capital letters?

YOU KNOW IT BABY! CHELSEA AGAINST THE LAKERS? NC, BABY! NO CONTEST! BULLDOGS ROLL!

Easy, Mr. Vitale, we haven't even asked you a question yet.

QUESTIONS! WHO NEEDS QUESTIONS? JUST LISTEN TO ME, BABY! I GOT THE ALL-AIRPORT TEAM, THE ALL-PROMINENT DENTAL WORK TEAM, THE...

Okay, thanks anyway, but... I'M NOT DONE! LISTEN TO ME! I GOT THE ALL-ZANY TA-TOOS TEAM. I...

WE MEAN IT! LEAVE US ALONE!

We at the Standard are sorry we haven't been able to get answers to your questions about Chelsea...

Chelsea? I love to talk about Chelsea! She's been a great help to me, making decisions about foreign policy and...

With all due respect, Mr. President, we're talking about Chelsea, Michigan here. Sports.

Well, we haven't answered any questions, but we tried, and it's the thought of the fight in the dog that counts, right?

JV Football Wins Finale

Despite having only 13 players available to play, the Bulldogs defeated a strong Jackson Northwest team Thursday, Oct. 26 to finish a successful season.

After trailing 14-6 at the half, the Bulldogs scored a touchdown and added the game winning field goal in the third quarter while shutting out Jackson Northwest throughout the half for a 15-14 win.

Coach Dave McWhorter was pleased with his team's performance this season. "I could not possibly be prouder of a team. They stuck together in hard times as a team. Everything you look for in a team—heart, desire, character, courage—they had," he said.

The Bulldog defense allowed only 93 points in nine games while the offense racked up 183. Chelsea's final record was 5-2-2, one of the best JV seasons in recent memory.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT—Holy Spirit, you who made me see everything and showed me the way to reach my ideal.
You who gave me the divine gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me, and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in the short dialogue, want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in perpetual glory.
Amen. Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. You must pray this prayer 3 consecutive days without asking your wish. After the third day, your wish will be granted no matter
how difficult it may be.
Promise to publish this dialogue as soon as your favor has been granted.

DURING TIMES of loss and separation from loved ones, the caring support of friends and community is especially appreciated. Our deepest thanks go to the Rev. David Cleaver-Bartholomew,
First Congregational Church, Chelsea: His
gentle counsel, prayers and presence helped us through a challenging time. John Mitchell, Staffan-Mitchell Funeral Home, offered great sensitivity and thoughtfulness—our gratitude goes to home as well. To all of his friends and neighbors: your visits during the past four years were the essence of joy for our father, grandfather and brother. Those calls brought the world to someone who increasingly could not go out to meet. To all of you—may your lives be blessed because you gave of yourselves to another.

LETTERS FROM AFRICA

"Africans are animist," I was told as I prepared to leave for Benin, West Africa. In my mind, I saw groups of Africans sitting around in a religious stupor worshipping rocks. Now, after spending more than a year with the Bariba of northern Benin, I see how wrong this perception was and I feel as if I'm beginning to fathom the character and depth of the traditional beliefs of my village.

I think the two things that most set us Americans apart from the Bariba are technology and education. In the United States, we are able to diagnose and treat most illnesses. In my village, an illness that is unknown or untreatable by local means is often attributed to sorcery. Similarly, if we have done someone wrong, we feel guilty, which we recognize as a rationalization of our feelings, psychology. If a Bariba in my village wrongs someone, however, a piece of bad luck might be considered an evil spirit sent by whoever that person hurt.

Yet if we look beyond this superstition based on lack of technology and "Western" education (surely an oversimplification, but humor me), I see some similarities between my village's perception of the supernatural and ours. I'd like to approach this in two ways; our common perception of one God, and the great religious diversity in both of our cultures.

The Bariba have expressions to wish you well in the name of god for almost every occasion. At the market? May god bless your market booth. Coming home from the fields? May God remove your fatigue before eating? May god protect you from too much hot pepper. Believing that animists worshipped spirits in rocks and other inanimate objects, I was confused about who this "God" was, so I started to ask around. No matter who I asked, the answer was always, "well, God. You know, God." You mean the fetish, the great spirit? "No, God, up in heaven, god who knows all. God." I soon realized that the concept of an all-powerful, all-knowing God in an integral part of the Bariba's beliefs, so much the same as our Christian God that I can't help feeling that they are essentially the same.

The other similarity I see in our beliefs is the great religious diversity within each of our cultures. The way people understand and relate to God in our culture differs from person to person, and sometimes that difference is great. Some Dexterites feel that it is wrong to have statues or crucifixes in the church; others find comfort in them. Some have a very personal relationship with God and bring Him specific problems; others feel God as a benevolent presence, a flowing source of joy. Some relate strongly to the paternalistic imagery of the Scriptures; others experience God more holistically. Some feel God should be worshipped as a single entity; others look for guidance from Mary and the Saints, or imagine that angels are looking out for them.

The Bariba have a similar diversity of faith, though it is based on a belief in spirits and fetishes as well as in God. For example, some Bariba feel that spirits are simply manifestations of one, true God (probably the belief closest to our Christian faith.) Others feel spirits are separate entities, apart from God but in His power. Some feel these spirits are devils. Others feel that they are souls of those who died with pure hearts. Some others believe that spirits are smaller gods, just not as powerful as the God. Still others feel that God exists, and fetish spirits exist, and there is no contradiction in this.

Though the Bariba fetish spirits might seem strange, I'd like to mention a few things in my experience that seem relevant to the different forms our beliefs take on.

When I was a child, I remember hearing different people talk about so-and-so looking down on us from Heaven, or this person or that keeping watch over me or someone else. Though these don't play as large a role in Christianity as they do in the traditional beliefs of my villagers, it is interesting that they exist in our faith today.

The similarity seemed even more striking in a passage from Rosemary Mahoney's book Whoredom in Kinnage (a very interesting book, by the way). A man speaks at a Patrician's meeting in Dublin (a forum for Catholics to speak freely about their faith):

"Do angels influence us? We all have a guardian angel to whom we should pray more often. Angels were created by God to protect us.

They are known messengers of God. There are angels of God and angels who are our worst enemies. The angels of sin entice us to walk into wickedness, but we must evoke a good angel, especially our guardian one, who will show us how to conquer our wicked temptations. So I think angels will have a big influence on where we spend eternity. It's up to us to decide which way we will go. The way to hell or heaven is in our hearts. Thanks very much."

"The way to hell or heaven is in our hearts." Putting the quirks of any of our faiths aside, I think this phrase sums up the essential beliefs of the people in my village as well as all of us in Dexter. What can I say but "Amen" to that?

The final and perhaps most important thing we share with the Bariba is the belief that our faith rests in our hearts whether Christian or animist, a central belief is that love and forgiveness will bring us our just reward, and what can I say but "Amen" to that?

Thanks,
Hugh Smeltkeop

Host of Festivities to Highlight 'Christmas in Village' Event in Manchester

The Community Resource Center of Manchester and the Manchester High School Student Council are sponsoring the fourth annual Christmas in the Village on Saturday, Nov. 18 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Manchester High School will play host to many crafters and displays will include jewelry, carved wood, dried flowers, and many German, Spanish, Art, Band, Student Council, Cross Country, Athletic Boosters, Cub Scouts, and the Key Club.

Scores of featured artists will be on hand at Christmas in the Village with a host of unique items. Margaret Chase will display porcelain dolls, wreaths, potpourri, and baskets; Helen Fisher will be highlighted with clothes-holiday designs.

"The location has been moved this year," noted an event spokesman. "Hopefully, this new location will serve to accommodate more craft booths."

NEW THIS year will be a student marketplace. Funds raised from the student booths will benefit several organizations at Manchester High, including pin doll ornaments and angels; Dawn Klein has hand-painted jewelry and embroidery; and James Stewart will be in the spotlight with his wood carvings.

Other juried artists include: Diane Simmons, Mary Stanford, Cynthia Nye, Ruth Osburn, Hal Horton, David Stuart, Dorothy Tedrick, and Debbie Spring.

A $1 donation will be requested. For more information, call 428-7722.

IN CONJUNCTION with Christmas in the Village, Margaret Shaw will hold an annual studio sale at the M. Shaw Folk Art Studio at 12845 Pleasant Lake Road in Manchester, 2 miles east of M-52 on November 18 and 19.

Marti's Salon will offer refreshments November 18 at the shop, along with a new selection of gifts. The new collection was designed by area artists and includes afghans, dried flower arrangements, and angels.

Emanuel United Church of Christ will sponsor its annual Christmas Bazaar from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday with lunch available from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.
