Village to provide office information

Chelsea Village Council talked again about the village offices last Tuesday then reaffirmed its commitment to taking public input on renovating the village's Middle Street building.

Though the discussion threatened to deteriorate into an argument about the merits of the renovation, the council agreed to fulfill its December vote to take public input. The council decided to compile a packet of information about the renovation, including cost estimates and funding options, and find out what people think.

Several council members voiced concerns about the division in the council, saying that the village has been deadlocked about the office issue for years. Trustee Steve Daut said the public input should not be ignored.

"It makes no difference if we look for public input if we're not prepared to listen," Daut said.

Lima Twp. Board appoints planner

The Lima Township Board of Trustees appointed Howard Sias to serve as a planning commissioner. The unanimous appointment was made at a special meeting of the board Jan. 12.

Sias will replace Marvin Carlson who had been serving as vice chairman. Sias will not automatically be appointed to that position.

Township Supervisor Gary Adams said that Sias is a good choice because he is "representative of the young Lima farmer." Sias is the fourth generation in his family to farm.

Council approves subdivision plan

Chelsea Village Council approved a tentative preliminary plat for the Chelsea Fairways subdivision last Tuesday. The action is one of three the council will see before houses are built.

The 124-house subdivision is set for the northeast corner of Pierce Lake with entrances off Old US-12 and Freer Road.

Schools close for sixth time this year

By Eric Bowen
Staff Writer

Poor weather Tuesday forced the closure of Chelsea schools for a sixth day in the last three weeks, elating many students, but giving their parents fits over how to take care of their children.

Superintendent Ed Richardson said he received dozens of calls from parents asking why the school doors were closed again. He said he made the determination based on a recommendation from Transportation Supervisor Robin Melton.

Melton travels all of the roads on the bus routes to see if they are icy. She also calls other districts to see the road conditions in their areas, and receives weather reports. Richardson said that Chelsea was the only district closed in the local area Tuesday, the first time that's happened this year.

"We make a determination based on what's safe for the students," Richardson said. "Our transportation supervisor drives the roads, and if she feels like the buses shouldn't be on the roads, she makes a recommendation to close the schools. Pretty much if she recommends it, we do it, because she is the one who knows the conditions."

The closures have jumbled students' schedules throughout the district.

Students at Chelsea High School were set to take final exams this week, but the snow days pushed back the exam schedule into the beginning of next week. Richardson said the students were scheduled to have one review day yesterday, then take exams for the next three days, excluding Friday, which is a teacher in-service day.

The additional snow days may force the schools to make up time in the summer, Richardson said. The schools get two free days, but have to make up time beyond the minimum instructional time.

Richardson said in extreme winters, the state Legislature may exempt school districts from the make-up time. He said it's possible the state may take that action this year.

Aside from adding days to the end of the year or getting them excused by the state, Richardson said he doesn't have many options for making up the time.

He discounted one suggestion that he allow parents to drive their children to school when the weather is bad. He said that wasn't worth the danger.

Also, the district is required to have 75 percent of students at school in order for the day to count in the instructional totals. The district could run the risk of holding school but still having to make up the day in the summer, he said.

"I can't imagine doing that," Richardson said. "If it's that bad of weather, why even encourage people to get out if our own buses can't get out."

"Buses are probably the safest vehicles on the road. If everybody would ride the buses then we could probably have school."

Breaking Stereotypes

South Meadows Elementary hoped to break down students' gender stereotypes Friday by bringing in professionals in non-traditional fields. The school brought in men writers from local newspapers and women scientists to show the kids that they can succeed in these fields. Drain cost alarms Chelsea residents

By Michael Rybka
Staff Writer

Representatives coordinating the Palmer-Baldwin Drain improvement plan alarmed some people Jan. 14 when they revealed that assessments for the project would be divided unequally among three separate, specially created, sub-districts.

The estimated total cost of the project is $735,000. The bottom line was recently offset by a $250,000 contribution by the Chelsea School District.

Last Thursday, Washtenaw County Drain Commissioner Janis Bobrin revealed that the difference would be partially covered by levying an initial benefit charge of $256 on each property owner in the main drain district.

Further monetary obligations from these same residents would be based on a per-acre assessment, which would vary among the sub-districts.

The three sub-districts were created to correlate with the amount of repairs needed in each, Bobrin said. They are designated "north," "south" and "west."

Property zoned as residential will pay $391 per acre in the south sub-district, $378 in the west sub-district and $11 in the north sub-district.

Property zoned as agricultural will be assessed at half the rate of residential property in its sub-district. Residents are expected to be allowed to spread payments over a 10-year period. They can pay the full amount at any time in order to eliminate or reduce interest penalties.

The south sub-district includes the new and the old high school and Pierce Lake Elementary. It is where the three worst problem areas and the ninth worst problem area are located.

The west sub-district includes Beach Middle School and Oak Grove Cemetery. It is where the fourth, fifth and sixth worst problem sites are located.

The north sub-district includes Belser Estates and a stretch of Conrail track. It is where the seventh and eighth worst problem sites are located.

Chelsea Board of Education President Jane Diesing, Village Manager Jack Myers and Lima Township resident Leonard Shaffer were among those who expressed surprise with the three-district unveiling.

Shaffer threatened to challenge the approach in probate court.

Some in the audience urged Chelsea School District Superintendent Ed Richardson to stipulate where the school's contribution should be allocated in order to alleviate the south and west district's burden.

Richardson said it wasn't the school district's responsibility to determine how best its voluntary donation should be spent.

Another public suggestion was to limit repairs to the area from Freer and Trinkle roads to Freer Road and Old US-12 — a stretch perceived to have drainage problems.

As election draws closer, trustees throw hat, towel in ring

By Eric Bowen
Staff Writer

With the Village Council elections fast approaching in March, Chelsea Village recently began giving out nominating petitions to interested residents. The petitions are due Feb. 8, but some incumbents have already voiced their intentions.

One-term Trustee Jim Myles said he would try for another two years on the council. He said he sees a lot of work yet to accomplish, and hopes to get some of his priority issues settled during his stay.

High on Myles' list is settling the location for the village offices. He said the lack of consensus on the council has stymied the process for long enough.

"I'd like to get a decision on the village hall," he said. "That was one of my platforms on the last council. It's been quite frustrating to say the least."

Myles also would like to see further improvements in basic infrastructure, such as roads, and sewer and water lines. He said the council has been moving toward fixing those problems, but he wants to see a continuation of the refurbishment.

Myles cites increased communication between village agencies as one of his accomplishments. He said that the council is more aware of what the Downtown Development Authority and the planning commission are doing, which has helped in planning for new development.

Myles' other issues include the master plan, traffic and a healthy downtown. He said many of those issues revolve around handling growth, an issue Chelsea will increasingly face in coming years.

"The growth around Chelsea and in Chelsea is obvious to everyone," Myles said. "Every day Chelsea is becoming more and more a bedroom community of Ann Arbor."

"Are we going to be totally enveloped as a satellite subdivision of Ann Arbor? No we don't want to do that."

Resident comments wanted at master plan open house

By Eric Bowen
Staff Writer

Chelsea Planning Commission members hope to see several hundred people turn out today to gather information about the village's master plan. The commission and consultants from the Strader Group will hold two open house sessions from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. and again from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the cafeteria at the Washington Street Education Center (old high school).

According to Planning Commission Chair Doug Denison, the open houses will be informal sessions for residents to give feedback and find out more about aspects of the master plan. The planners will not give presentations, but will staff booths, give out pamphlets and answer questions.

"We're at the point where we're presenting things and we need feedback," Denison said. "This is the time when we hope everybody will come."

Denison said the commission will primarily outline options for land use in the village and the village's growth boundary. He said the planners will have mock-ups of different uses of land so residents can see the different land uses visually.

The presenters will also discuss creating and improving walkways in the village to promote pedestrian access, Denison said. Other topics include community character, traffic, village services and infrastructure.

Aside from just taking in general impressions, the planning commission and the consultants will ask residents to fill out a form detailing their concerns. The residents' response will guide the commission as it moves forward.

"The master plan belongs to the people," Denison said. "We're not sitting here in the room generating these ideas. Based on the opinions, that will guide the final master plan."

After today's open houses, The Strader Group will synthesize the information and present a first draft of the master plan. The comprehensive document will detail zoning changes, engineering standards, transportation issues and infrastructure improvement, among other items.

The master plan itself does not dictate zoning, but the planning commission recommends changes to the zoning ordinance based on the master plan, Denison said. If someone wants to do something outside the scope of the plan, the planning commission first sees if the master plan needs to be changed. If not, the commission generally recommends against changing the zoning.

Residents will have an opportunity to give more public feedback in the future, Denison said. The planning commission sees the draft plan first, followed by a presentation to the council and another public hearing before it is accepted.

matically eroded since the new school construction.

Bobrin said that areas in the district were interdependent and that neglect in one area could result in failure in another.

It was asked why this logic wasn't applied to equal assessing but another question was asked before an answer was given.

Bobrin, who headed a panel consisting of Deputy Drain Commissioner Dennis Wojcik, Washtenaw County Commissioner Joe Yekulis and Ron Cavellaro and Roger Gaugler from the engineering firm of Ayres, Lewis, Norris & May Inc., said that past experience had taught her that there was not any funding configuration that could please everyone.

It is the expense generated by the scope of the repairs that worries certain landowners. However, the proposed apportionment of costs for property owners in the district versus what municipalities will have to pay is lower than it has been in the past.

Landowners of Lima Township will see their apportionment decrease to 25.34 percent from 29.60 percent, Chelsea Village (Lima) to 15.92 percent from 21.70 percent, and Chelsea Village (Sylvan) to 1.25 percent from 2.24 percent.

The Washtenaw County Road Commission is the only municipal entity that will see its expected contribution decrease to 8.41 percent from 9.46 percent of the total.

Other municipalities are slated to bear a greater brunt of the cost. Apportionment will increase for Lima Township to 20.86 percent from 19.32 percent, for Chelsea Village (Lima) to 22.75 percent from 14.22 percent and for Chelsea Village (Sylvan) to 2.07 percent from 1.46 percent.

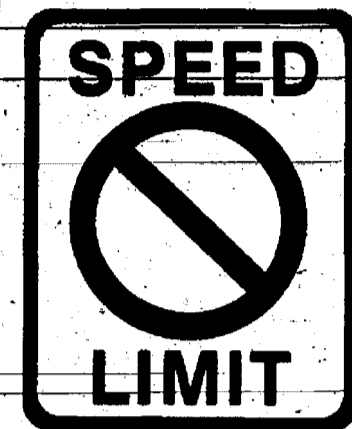

Lima Township Supervisor Gary Adams, who expressed sympathy over the "inequity" facing landowners, said the new apportionment wasn't doing his township any favors either.

Adams figured Lima's contribution would exceed $100,000. "Our millage doesn't even bring in that amount in a year," Adams said, "and interest rates will add another $12,000."

There was some last minute confusion as to whether the estimated costs included interest or not. Bobrin thought they had. Gaugler disagreed.

Gaugler said that 40 percent was thrown into the figures to cover legal and administrative costs. Bobrin thought it was enough to cover the interest too.

announced last week that he would not seek another term on the council. Daut cited the time commitment and a desire to do other things for the community as reasons for his departure.

"At the end of every term, you go through a process of whether you'll run again," Daut said. "I know I always do that. Typically you look at the unfinished business and (decide whether to) say, 'No, I better do a little more.'"

Daut began his stint on the council six years ago, after attending a Chamber of Commerce presentation on local government. He hoped to bring a broad perspective to the position, having served in various capacities in other locales.

When he won a seat on the council, Daut was overwhelmed by the number of issues the local body dealt with. He said the council makes hundreds of decisions about the bypass, trees, water lines and roads, which directly affect local residents.

"There is more effect on everyday life than anything that our (national) congress is going to decide," Daut said. "These kinds of decisions have immediate effect, and some have long-term implications."

Trying to come to terms with all of the issues was difficult, he said. He had to figure out how to listen to input then make a decision about what he felt was best for the community.

Daut won't be totally out of the political scene when he leaves. He was recently appointed to the county planning commission and hopes to be part of a regional planning effort taken on by local communities.

Daut said he hopes that by leaving the council, a new person with new ideas will take over. He said he believes the council should have some turnover so more people in the community get the opportunity to serve.

"It's important to find people who are willing to do it," Daut said of serving on the council. "It's important for ideas to change with the changing ideas of the village."

Trustee Brian Cashman, who has served three terms on the council said last week that he hadn't decided whether he will run again.

Methodist women set meeting

United Methodist Women of the First United Methodist Church of Chelsea will hold a unit meeting featuring Joanne Perez, vice president of the Detroit Conference — United Methodist Women, on Monday, Jan. 25, at 7 p.m.

Perez, from Adrian, will speak on "Following the Vision," a look at the future and United Methodist Women.

Unit meetings are periodic gatherings of the church women's groups. According to event organizer, Ruth Wescott, this is "a church-wide gathering of all interested women." This is the first of several unit meetings featuring guest speaker sand open to the public. Child care will be available.

Chelsea First United Methodist Church is located at 128 Park St. across from the Purple Rose Theatre. For more information, call 475-8119 or visit the church Web site at <http://www.gbpm-umc-org/churches/chelseafumc>.

Park St. land zoned for theater growth

By Eric Bowen

Staff Writer

The Purple Rose Theatre Company's expansion plans got the go-ahead from the village last Tuesday, when the Village Council voted 6-1 to rezone the property next door for commercial uses.

The theater bought part of the property last month, in an agreement with the Village Council and the Downtown Development Authority. The purchase agreement included an agreement with the DDA to pave the northern portion of the lots for parking.

The rezoning faced opposition from Trustee Carol Rauschenberger, who wants to preserve the land as a park. She objected to the paving provision in the sales agreement last month, and voted against the rezoning, which allowed some of the land to be used as a parking lot.

"It was the intent of the planning commission to keep green space," she said.

The village handed over two parcels on Park Street to the Downtown Development Authority in December, selling about 40 feet of property to the Purple Rose. Approximately 20 feet of the remainder was earmarked for parking and scheduled to be paved as part of the deal.

When the plan got to Chelsea Planning Commission, the planners recommended that the land should be saved as green space, except for the land used for the Purple Rose's expansion. The commission recommended the council place a conservation easement on the property to preserve it indefinitely.

The conservation easement turned out to be illegal, according to Village Manager Jack Myers. The village cannot place conditions on its zoning, so the council voted to approve the zoning without restriction.

"The council moved on the rezoning," said Village Manager Jack Myers. "That's really the only thing they had the right to do. They could not create restrictions on zoning."

DDA Director Ann Feeney said the DDA has no plans for the parcels until the Purple Rose finishes its expansion. Once the building is finished, the DDA plans to pave an area behind the theater that has served as a de-facto parking lot.

Feeney said she sees the additional parking as a safety issue because village residents are already parking behind the theater without a designated parking area. She said the village also needs more parking to serve downtown.

"We do plan to pave the area near the Purple Rose, when that's completed," Feeney said. "The original agreement was to provide parking there. It's an argumentative issue, but we do want the parking."

The council took care of two other rezoning issues at its meeting.

The council voted to rezone the Clock Tower building for use as retail space, following the recommendation of the planning commission at its last meeting. Owner Ron Weiser said then that he would like to see the building used as a retail complex similar to Kerrytown in Ann Arbor.

The village also rezoned land north of Sibley Road from agricultural to office. The property is owned by Donna Lane, who plans to use it to build a new Lane Animal Hospital, now located across the street.

Before Lane can build on the site, she must apply for site plan review by the planning commission. She also has to apply for a special land use permit because the veterinary clinic would be considered a special use under the office zoning.

Village Council figures estimate of well cost

By Eric Bowen

Staff Writer

Chelsea Village Council authorized another $3,200 last Tuesday to expand testing on a well that may provide an adequate water source for the village. The money will be used to test the water quality, flow and recharge rate of the well to determine if it can be used as a public water source.

The well, which lies west of Pierce Road and south of Garvey Road in Sylvan Township, was found last month after five previous tests came up with little water. If the tests show a potential source of water, the village will likely drill a production well to pump water to the surface.

Consultant Walter Bolt of Hart Drilling said the village could expect between 400 and 500 gallons per minute from the production well. The council had hoped to find a well that could produce 1,000 gallons per minute, but water officials said that figure was unlikely.

"I'd be satisfied with 400 gallons per minute," said Water Department Superintendent Dan Rosentreter. "It doesn't look like we're going to get 1,000 gallons per minute."

Bolt said the village could consider putting in a second well near the first to increase the flow. A second well could provide an additional 500 gallons per minute.

The main problem the village foresees is the cost of the well. The drilling and pump station could cost as much as $50,000, not to mention a second well if it is necessary. Adding in the cost for pipe and land puts the total above half a million dollars.

Sylvan Township Supervisor Jerry Dresselhouse also said the village would have to negotiate a franchise agreement with the township, and the land would also have to be rezoned for commercial uses.

Under the agreement, the village also could face a charge from Sylvan Township for piping water across township property. The township adopted an ordinance Jan. 5 giving the township the right to charge 4 percent of the proceeds from sale of the water.

"We need to know what are the costs," said Council Trustee Steve Daut. "If we need three wells to make it viable, we ought to have a handle on what the final amount would be."

In a step toward paying for the new well, the council got some input from Glenn Burkhardt of McNamee, Porter and Seeley. Burkhardt said the village may qualify for a low-interest loan from the state, through a program that funds water improvements.

The state ranks communities for funding based on need. Municipalities that violate drinking-water standards, or fail to meet capacity requirements, get the highest ranking for aid.

Chelsea State Bank makes $25k payment to foundation

In keeping with its five-year commitment, Chelsea State Bank has made its third $25,000 contribution to the Chelsea State Bank Community Enrichment Fund through the Chelsea Community Foundation, a local charitable organization.

The gift marks the first anniversary of the bank's announcement to donate $250,000 to the foundation over the next five years, as part of its 100th anniversary celebration.

Chelsea Community Foundation was formed in 1994 when the Foundation of Chelsea merged with Chelsea Hospital's Community Care. The foundation affiliated with the Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan to take advantage of "large foundation" resources, such as experienced money managers and skilled foundation staff.

The foundation is governed by a board of directors made up of prominent people from both the private and business sector in and around Chelsea. The goal of the foundation is to establish a $2 million endowment fund for local investment and charitable causes. A minimum of 5 percent of that fund, which equates to the interest earned per year, is reinvested back into the community through grants, gifts and scholarships. To date, more than $50,000 has been appropriated from the foundation, most going to education-related causes, groups and programs.

Chelsea State Bank and its board made the decision to make the sizable donation due to the perpetual nature of the gift, the organization's local ties in the community, and the fact that all the money stays in the Chelsea area.

"We wanted to do something for this community that has so strongly supported us for over 100 years," said Chelsea State Bank President and CEO John Mann.

"We look at this as an investment in the future of Chelsea. It creates community capital that will last and hopefully grow in perpetuity, and yet at the same time provides a level of funding for current needs."

Chelsea State Bank's gift was a major stepping stone for the foundation, which has since raised over $12 million through private and corporate donations. The organization is chaired by local resident and business owner Walter Hamilton.

"The bank's gift has certainly been a major boost for our group," said Hamilton.

"It's this kind of generosity that will ensure generations to come that there will be funds available for causes of need."

Washington Street Show Choir plans Showcase Saturday, Jan. 30

The Washington Street Show Choir will present its annual Showcase concert on Saturday, Jan. 30, in the new Chelsea High School auditorium at 7 p.m.

In the past, the group has performed many different kinds of shows that have delighted Chelsea residents. Last year's show was based on a piano theme and included many favorite songs, such as "I Love a Piano" and "You and the Night and the Music." The year before it performed an entire show based on the music of Disney's "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." The theme of its show for this year, however, is a secret.

When asked to describe this year's WSSC performers and crew members, director Steven P. Hinz commented, "I am proud of each and everyone of the young people in our group. The effort put forth by every person involved with show choir is what makes this a unique and rewarding experience."

This year the choir will be joined in concert by four other high schools, with singers and dancers from Greenville, Tecumseh, Battle Creek and Livonia.

After the performance, concertgoers are invited to attend the Afterglow featuring the local band "Natural Habitat." Refreshments will be served and it will give the audience a chance to talk with the performers, tech crew and band members.

Tickets for Showcase '99 are available at the Chelsea Pharmacy.

Bank hits snag in effort to set up Dexter branch

Another developer tells the commission an acre of his land is being used without his consent.

By Michelle Rogers

Associate Editor
Chelsea State Bank has run into a snag in its efforts to establish a branch in Dexter.

A dispute over land ownership has temporarily blocked plans for a commerce center and bank office on the northwest corner of Dexter-Ann Arbor and Dan Hoey roads in Dexter.

Dexter Village Planning Commission postponed a recommendation Monday on whether to approve a rezoning request and a planned unit development area plan for Dexter Commerce Center.

More than five acres of the site is currently zoned for commercial use. An acre of it is zoned for multiple-family use and requires rezoning. In addition, the planning commission must consider whether to recommend that Village Council approve an area plan for the development.

The commission's decision to postpone was made after developer Joe Bonar of Blackhawk Development announced during the meeting that an acre of his land was being used without his consent. Bonar is developing Dexter Crossing, a commercial and residential development located on the other side of Dan Hoey Road.

Webster Township resident John Kingsley, developer of Dexter Commerce Center, submitted both applications to the village. He has proposed a 6.5-acre site on the northwest corner of Dexter-Ann Arbor and Dan Hoey roads be used for a bank, gas station, convenience store with fast-food restaurant and multiple tenant commercial and office building.

"This is an opportunity to take advantage of what's going to happen in that area and minimize its impact," said Kingsley's engineer, Daniel Schrauben of Equinox in Brighton.

Schrauben said the architecture will have a consistent, unified look because it will be developed by one developer.

But all that is on the back burner until land ownership can be verified. Bonar told the commission that he owns an acre of the site and was not aware until recently that Kingsley had submitted an area plan to develop it.

Bonar said negotiations to sell the acre to Kingsley have not been successful and Kingsley was essentially taking his land. Kingsley sold 110 acres of his land, now Dexter Crossing, to Bonar on a land contract.

Bonar argued that Kingsley's application was invalid because the ordinance requires that all land owners agree to it. Kingsley has sales agreements with the other property owners who own homes on the corner.

Kingsley said the acre in question, a narrow strip that used to be part of Dan Hoey Road, has been used by those homeowners for driveways. He said they have landscaped and maintained the land over the years and it has essentially become theirs.

The planning commission, however, felt uneasy about continuing. Chairman Terry Walters said the board had been "hit blind side" and for legal reasons could not proceed.

"Hopefully the people involved in this can get it resolved," Walters said before the commission voted to postpone action.

Keeping Kittens Healthy

By Laura Groesbeck, D.V.M.

Kittens have special health care needs. They have incompletely formed immune systems and this makes them prone to a number of medical problems. Soon after adoption they need to have a thorough veterinary exam, which includes a fecal test to look for intestinal parasites.

During the physical exam many things are evaluated. Some common problems that are checked for are ear mites, fungal skin infections, flea infestations, and upper respiratory infections. Also, their general health status is evaluated noting any possible birth defects. During the kittens early visits it is an excellent time to discuss nutrition, blood testing for viral diseases such as feline leukemia, and an appropriate vaccination schedule. Questions about neutering or spaying can also be addressed.

By bringing your new kitten in for veterinary care medical problems can be detected early and many can be prevented. Getting your kitten off to a good healthy start provides the foundation for a healthy adulthood.

To schedule an appointment, please call us at Westarbor Animal Hospital at (734) 769-5391.

Meltdown
 After weeks of frigid temperatures and more than 30 inches of snow dropping on the area since Jan. 1, a meltdown occurred last weekend. Rain showers and above-freezing temperatures caused snow to melt off the Whitney Thompson building on Broad Street, causing icicles to form.

FUELISH OVERSIGHTS

Car owners should be aware that their inattention to some very correctable matters could cost them money at the pump. For instance, misaligned front wheels can increase fuel consumption by two percent, while underinflated tires can increase fuel consumption by five percent. Moreover, a malfunctioning thermostat in the cooling system can increase fuel consumption by seven percent. And, worn spark plugs and other ignition components (as well as clogged air filters) can increase fuel consumption by 11 percent. Taken together, these "problems" have the potential to increase fuel costs by about 25 percent. By having these matters attended to, car owners can expect their cars to run cleaner, more smoothly, and less expensively.

Any parts or system out of proper alignment also cause premature wear-and-tear. At BERT'S AUTO SERVICE, no automotive service job is too big or small for us. We perform all professional car-care from engine overhauls to routine maintenance. We use the latest computerized diagnostic equipment, and factory-authorized tech scanner for the most precise service. Call 734-769-3232 or stop by the shop located at 5984 Jackson Road in Ann Arbor.

HINT: Another way to keep your fuel costs at a minimum is to select gasoline with an octane rating that matches the octane requirements specified in your owner's manual.

1998 growing season offers lessons

New Year's resolutions — everybody makes them and few people keep them. Lose weight? Exercise more? Floss every day? Yeah, right!

If you're a gardener, you can make these vague I-know-I-ought-to-do-this sorts of statements more relevant — and more likely to be carried out — by focusing on your lawn and garden. Michigan State University Extension horticulturists suggest looking back at the 1998 growing season for educational experiences (that's lessons learned the hard way) that you could turn into green thumb resolutions for 1999.

Maybe you'll try something new or do something differently as a result. Or maybe you'll carefully file the list with your garden diagram from last year and never see it again. Either way, making resolutions for the coming growing season is a way of reflecting on past successes and planning for future ones.

In 1999, I resolve:

- To make my list of needed seeds and plants before I start browsing through the seed catalogs.

- To limit the size of my vegetable and flower gardens to what I can reasonably expect to be able to care for.

- To keep records of where I plant what in the landscape, the perennial garden and the vegetable garden, and to file those diagrams where I know I'll be able to find them later.

- To plan the vegetable garden carefully (using last year's diagram) so that closely related crops don't follow one another in the same spot and all available space is productive all season.

- To use disease-resistant vegetable varieties whenever possible.

- To plant using proper spacing so the summer squash plants don't overwhelm the first row of beans and the pumpkin vines don't infiltrate the lawn.

- To plant cool-weather crops early and again in mid-to late summer for a fall harvest.

vest.

- To harvest crops at their peak of quality. No more zucchini large enough to make dugout canoes from. No more lumpy, tough beans.

- To freeze or can produce as soon as possible after harvest to maintain high quality.

- To rotate frozen vegetables in the freezer so the oldest are used up first. No more freeze-dried broccoli!

- To check plants for insects and diseases more often — before tomato hornworms denude the plants, before bean beetles have turned the snap bean leaves to lace, etc. — and to take preventive measures against cutworms. No more peppers snipped off at the soil line.

- To use biological and/or cultural rather than chemical controls for pests and weeds whenever possible — e.g., mulch earlier and deeper!

- To hold the line against weeds all summer so they don't go to seed and make next year's weed problems worse.

- To look at my home grounds in light of future as well as current needs and make major changes according to a carefully thought out landscape development plan.

- To try out major landscape changes with stakes and strings before starting to dig.

- To plant only hardy, relatively problem-free ornamentals in sites that provide the growing conditions they need and the room they need to grow so as to minimize the need for chemical sprays, aggressive pruning and replacement to correct problems.

- To recycle landscape leftovers, garden waste and other organic materials in a compost pile.

- To use the products of the compost pile to improve soil quality in the vegetable and flower gardens.

- To take a preventive approach to home and landscape maintenance rather than wait for small problems to turn into disasters — to prune dead limbs out of trees overhanging buildings before they fall in an ice storm, taking down utility wires, damaging the garage roof and otherwise bringing unneeded excitement into an already stressful time.

- To store firewood outdoors away from the house so that any bugs or rodents that take up residence in the wood stay in the wood rather than migrate into the house.

- To preserve the manufacturer's operating manuals for all lawn and garden equipment and read them frequently — at least at the beginning of every gardening season or before using the equipment for the first time — and following the directions for operation and maintenance.

- To keep a healthy perspective on gardening. It's exercise in the fresh air, not a competition with the neighborhood perfectionist. A list of green-thumb resolutions is a statement of intent, not a nag list. And you can only do what you can do with what you have to work with.

- To remember that Murphy's law is the ruling principle of gardening. Anything that can go wrong — particularly with the weather — most certainly will. But there's always next year.

HTLV-1 less serious than HIV

JOHN C. WOLF, D.O.
ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR OF FAMILY MEDICINE
OHIO UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF
OSTEOPATHIC MEDICINE

FAMILY MEDICINE

Question: I have donated blood through the Red Cross for several years. I received a letter from them saying that I have HTLV-1 and should never donate blood again. My family doctor doesn't know anything about this infection. Can you give some information about it in your column?

Answer: The name HTLV-1 refers to a specific type of viral infection produced by the "Human T-cell Lymphocyte Virus type 1." HTLV-1 is classified as a "retrovirus" — is in the same biological category as the HIV virus. Fortunately, though, HTLV causes much less serious infections than its better known cousin, HIV.

The HTLV-1 virus was first identified in 1980, largely as a consequence of AIDS research. Some individuals who had cancers of the blood and immune system, specifically T-cell leukemias and lymphomas, had initial symptoms similar to AIDS. However, it was discovered that these people were infected with HTLV and not HIV. This led to the development of reliable blood tests that could readily distinguish between these two types of retrovirus infections. Researchers have now been able to identify several groups who have a high prevalence of infection.

Residents of Japan, the Caribbean basin, Melanesia and some areas of Africa have a high incidence of HTLV-1 infection. Further investigations showed that this virus sometimes produces a type of progressive nervous system disorder that causes problems with use of the muscles, particularly use of the legs and urinary bladder. This specific condition is called TSP/HAM. HTLV can also cause T-cell leukemia or lymphoma in some cases.

Now, that is the bad news about HTLV-1 infections. The good news is that it isn't as bleak as it sounds. Less than 1 percent of those with the virus develop the TSP/HAM condition, and only 2 to 4 percent develop T-cell leukemia or lymphoma. All of these illnesses have a very long latency period — perhaps 40 to 60 years — from the time of infection to the development of disease.

The HTLV infection can be acquired in several ways. It is passed from an infected mother to her baby 20 percent of the time. This transmission occurs through breast milk, and therefore, is easily avoided by bottle feeding the baby. This is a concern in the parts of the world where the infection is common, but not here in the United States.

HTLV can also be acquired in the same way as AIDS or hepatitis: intercourse with an infected partner, drug users sharing needles, or transfusions. To protect the public blood supply, blood banks routinely screen for this infection. Occasionally they identify an individual who has this, only 0.025 percent of all U.S. donors are positive for this virus, just as happened to you. Though the risk of developing a serious illness as a consequence of HTLV infection from a blood transfusion is low, it is still an avoidable risk. That is why the Red Cross has told you to never give blood again.

"Family Medicine" is a weekly column. To submit questions, write to John C. Wolf, D.O., Ohio University College of Osteopathic Medicine, Grosvenor Hall, Athens, Ohio 45701.

Country Market to open Jan. 28

The new Country Market grocery store will be open for business on Wednesday, Jan. 28 in Dexter. The 43,000-square-foot store is located at the corner of Dexter-Ann Arbor and Dan Hoey roads.

The Country Market is a full-service grocery store, featuring U.S.D.A. Choice meats. The store will have a full service deli, in-store bakery, floral and gift center and service meat and fish counters. The store has discount pricing, and invites customers to comparison shop.

True to its name, the store offers a country-style decor. Murals throughout the store depict old-fashioned labels.

An unusual feature of the store is a "walk-in" beverage cooler, where customers can pick and choose from a large assortment of cold drinks. The dominant colors of the store are earth-tone greens and browns.

The store is owned and operated by The Kennedy Group, headquartered in Jackson. The Kennedy family has been in the grocery business since the late 1800s, and the current management represents the fourth generation to be in the family business. The family operates several stores under the "Polly's" name in Jackson and Chelsea.

Second-Class Badge

Alex Hatch was awarded his second-class badge in November after completing several requirements. Among those requirements, Hatch had to demonstrate an ability to read maps, use tools, cook with fire, identify wild animals and perform first aid. He also had to complete one hour of community service and the Drug Abuse Resistance Education program. Hatch, a member of Boy Scout Troop 447, is pictured with fellow troop member Bruce Bell and scoutmaster Jack Brigham.

POLICE BLOTTER

Chelsea Village

Train Delay
ConRail was cited for blocking traffic at 7:12 a.m. Jan. 12 at the Cavanaugh Lake Road and Cleveland Street crossing. Contact was made with the railroad company, which said the train would be off the tracks in 10 minutes. They left at 7:28 a.m.

Traffic Accident
An off-duty Ann Arbor police officer was bumped by a car at 3:19 p.m. Jan. 12 while he was crossing Main Street near Park Street. A 49-year-old Chelsea woman said she was distracted by another car that looked like it would hit her, and she accidentally hit the officer with her car.

Larceny
The manager of Perky Panty, 501 S. Main St., told police that someone drove off without paying for almost 18 gallons of gasoline. A driver entered the gas station at approximately 6 p.m. Jan. 11, pumped the gas and left. Total loss is $20.86.

Aggravated Felonious Assault
A 32-year-old Chelsea man called police at 1:25 a.m. Jan. 13 and told police that he had been in a trailer with several people and they assaulted him. He said he had been drinking with friends at a trailer in the 500 block of Main Street. He left and returned, when someone hit him with an unknown object.

Police contacted the owners of the trailer, a 31-year-old Chelsea woman, and a friend, a 32-year-old Chelsea woman. They said they didn't know how the incident could have occurred. The man said there were other men at the trailer when he was struck, but he didn't know who hit him. The man suffered cuts and swelling to his left eye.

Lima Township

Property Damage Crash
A 37-year-old Chelsea man told police that he was driving his snowmobile on the railroad tracks at 7:45 p.m. Nov. 13 near Fletcher Road. One of the skis became caught under one of the track's rails. While he was trying to dislodge the ski, he noticed a train coming down the tracks from the west. The man left his snowmobile and got off the tracks before the train smashed into his vehicle, destroying it.

The train engineer, a 60-year-old Chicago man, told police that he was driving the train when he noticed the light from the snowmobile's headlights on the tracks. He put on the brakes, but couldn't stop until 500 feet past the site of impact. None of the 40 passengers in the train was hurt in the crash.

The snowmobile driver told police that he had been driving along the tracks because he had a previous conviction for drunken driving. He was ticketed for trespassing on the railroad tracks.

Assault
A 20-year-old Dexter man told police he was driving on Jackson Road near Dancer Road at 3:15 p.m. Jan. 1. Another car passed his car then slammed on the brakes. The man's car crashed into the back of the stopping car. The other driver, an 18-year-old Ann Arbor man, exited his vehicle and told the victim he had cut him off earlier on the road. The younger man then punched the victim on the forehead.

Police contacted the 18-year-old. He said the older man had merged into his lane when Jackson Road changed from one lane to two, and cut him off. He sped in front of the man, who then slammed on his brakes. The suspect got out of his car and the older man took a swing at him before the suspect hit him in self-defense. Both men said their girlfriends were in the car and could corroborate their versions of the incident.

Sylvan Township

Property Damage
A 34-year-old Grass Lake man told police that someone had broken the locks on a hot tub he owns between noon Nov. 20 and 4:30 p.m. Nov. 29. The hot tub is outside the man's home in the 16800 block of Kilmer Road. Total damage is $500.

Webster Township

Death Investigation
Police responded to a 911 call at 4:40 p.m. Nov. 10 in the 6500 block of Memory Lane. A 55-year-old Whitmore Lake man collapsed in a corn field near the location. A 45-year-old township man told police that he saw the victim and another man, a 54-year-old Ann Arbor resident, park near his house and walk toward a nearby field. A few minutes later, the second man ran up to the house and asked the township man to call 911.

Police talked to the Ann Arbor man, who said he was walking with his friend on property he owns. They were planning to view deer from a tree stand. The man said he and the victim had made the walk several times before, but this time the man fell down face first and didn't get up.

The deceased smoked cigarettes. He also had suffered a minor stroke and received a triple bypass operation shortly before he died.

Scio Township

Medical Assist

Police responded to help a 40-year-old township woman who had fallen in a snow drift at 10:14 p.m. Nov. 7 in Scio Farms Estates, 6655 Jackson Road. The woman said she had been shoveling her walk and drinking alcohol since her husband left for work. She fell in the thigh-deep snow and was unable to get up. Police found she was intoxicated. They stayed with her until an ambulance arrived. The ambulance said she was probably in the snow drift for about an hour.

Domestic Assault

A 44-year-old township man called police at 10:30 p.m. Jan. 8 to report that his wife, 40, was intoxicated and out of control. He said she had attacked him while he was lying on the couch. He said she scratched his face, arm and chest. The woman said that her husband became angry when she made a comment about his family, and kicked her in the back. She left the room, and he came in then put his hands over her mouth and nose so she couldn't breathe. She then grabbed his face. Both were intoxicated. Police arrested both for domestic assault.

Larceny

Stereo equipment was stolen from a vehicle parked in the 400 block of Little Lake Drive near Parkland Plaza between 9 p.m. Jan. 9 and 3 p.m. Jan. 10. An 18-year-old township woman told police that a stereo receiver, three-way speakers and a portable CD player were taken, for a total loss of $448.

Downtown Chelsea key to vitality of entire area

By John Frank

Chelsea is an extremely attractive community. The human scale, historic downtown, charming neighborhoods, excellent schools, and other amenities are attracting new residents and businesses. Rapid growth in surrounding towns is applying further growth pressures to Chelsea.

It is vitally important that this inevitable growth be managed in a positive way that will allow development without disintegration of Chelsea's sense of place. If left to the developers (many of whom do not live in Chelsea), this rapid development could pose a threat to those qualities that have made Chelsea such a desirable community.

Many towns and villages in America have lost their downtowns to "sprawl." They have busy metropolitan areas, but they have emptier downtowns. Some newer communities, such as Novi, never had downtowns to begin with.

The importance of a downtown goes beyond economics. A downtown holds together a mix of economic, civic and social functions. It is the place where everyone can meet and interact, where monuments and painted rocks are located, where speeches are made, where parades are held and where crowds are entertained. More than anyplace else, a downtown gives a community its collective identity and thus its pride. It is the keystone that keeps the other pieces of the community in place. Downtown is the heart and soul of the city or village.

In their book "Changing Places," Richard Moe and Carter Wikke recall that when the New Jersey Devils hockey team won the 1995 Stanley Cup championship, the franchise had no obvious location for a victory parade, so the team celebrated with fans outside the stadium in a parking lot. "It's too bad to have to rally in a parking lot, but there's no town to go to," one fan told a reporter from The New York Times. One columnist saw the situation as symbolic of the placelessness of contemporary American culture. "The Devils aren't exactly from anywhere."

Reston, Va., one of the successful so-called new towns of the 1960s, appeared to have everything, except that it had no downtown, and thus it had no heart. Now, Reston is building one.

A few miles from Reston, the town of Rockville, Md., once had a traditional downtown but it was bulldozed in the 1970s to make room for the Rockville Mall. The mall has been a disaster, both visually and economically. Soon it, too, will be torn down.

The plan is to replace it, according to Rockville's announcement, with something "more closely resembling a city center of yesteryear"—in other words, a traditional downtown—"designed to look and feel pretty much like the bustling village Rockville once was."

Hundreds of other communities made the same costly and tragic mistake in the 1960s and 1970s and learned the same hard lesson: a mall is not a downtown. Chelsea was lucky. It slept through this urban-renewal fad and as a result much of the original historic fabric of our downtown has escaped the bulldozer.

Nevertheless, with changing economics, towns must evolve. Old functions disappear, and new ones either replace them or move elsewhere. About 10 years ago Chelsea's downtown reinvented itself by creative thinking and entrepreneurial leadership, under the auspices of the Downtown Development Authority.

Today Chelsea has a mixed-use downtown—retail, professional services, financial services, industrial, government, entertainment, residential, and public services such as the post office and the library. Traffic from one use generates traffic for another.

People seek exciting places to spend their time, and people are drawn to places occupied by other people. This diversity and density provides many challenges, but maintaining this mixed use will go a long way toward ensuring Chelsea's continued vitality.

Every town has a major investment in its downtown, and Chelsea is no exception. This investment is in the structures themselves as well as in the infrastructure—streets, water lines, sewers, etc.—and it is fiscally irresponsible to waste that investment.

But that investment is indeed threatened whenever a developer chooses to build new on the perimeter or outside town. Additional investment in infrastructure is needed to support this "sprawl," and since there is only so much business to go around, the payback on the increased total infrastructure investment is diminished. Translation: the downtown declines and the true cost (taxes) to the citizens goes up.

To manage the inevitable growth and yet preserve our village's character, Chelsea will need several arrows in its quiver. Regional planning is one, and the Chelsea Area Planning Team now is off and running. Listing of our downtown on the National Register of Historic Places is another.

Historic preservation in Chelsea has been declared to be a public purpose by the Village Council. Village Ordinance No. 87AA was enacted in 1997 to safeguard Chelsea's heritage by preserving buildings that reflect the village's cultural, social, economic, political, or architectural history. This ordinance established a Historic District Commission to administer its provisions.

About a year ago, the Chelsea Historic District Commission undertook a study, generously funded by the Chelsea Community Foundation, to research the commercial, social, and architectural history of downtown Chelsea. The first results of this study have been compiled in a preliminary report by heritage consultant Lloyd Baldwin. No stranger to Chelsea, Mr. Baldwin has made Chelsea and other Southern Michigan communities the focus of in-depth study for several years.

A copy of this preliminary report is available to the public at the Chelsea District Library.

In a recent editorial ("Opening Remarks," Dec. 31), Chelsea Standard editor Brian Hamilton compared Chelsea with Franklin, Tenn. Although larger than Chelsea, Franklin faced some of the same problems Chelsea now faces.

For example, Franklin's population has more than doubled in 15 years, from 12,000 in 1980 to 27,000 in 1995. Its downtown has rebounded from decay to become one of the most sought after day-trip destinations in the South, a model of success for places trying to keep their small-town character in high-growth locales.

Space does not permit a detailed account of how it was done, but the lesson of Franklin is that places with strong, distinctive identities are more likely to prosper than places without them.

It is my hope that preservation of our historic assets becomes such a local religion that all candidates for Village Council will speak of the importance of maintaining Chelsea's distinctive environment.

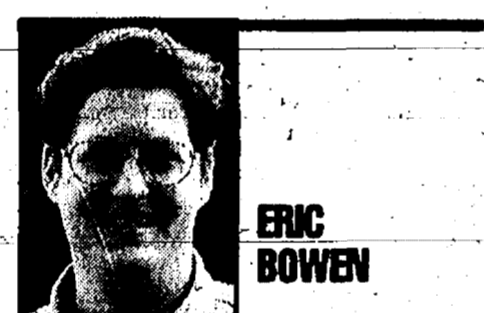

John Frank is senior partner in a management consultant firm and has lived in Chelsea since 1991. He is chair of the Historic District Commission. He also is secretary of Preservation Chelsea and has served on the Chelsea District Library expansion task force.

Talk helps kids see value of academic alternatives

Last Friday I took a step outside my normal role of observer of the schools and became a participant in the education of local students. I sat in front of about 75 fourth-graders at South Meadows Elementary and told them what it is like to be a writer.

When my editor first asked me to talk to the kids, I was a little hesitant. I'm not terribly comfortable speaking in front of people, preferring to give my ideas the form of writing. But since the editor couldn't make it, I agreed to put aside my stage fright and see if I could interest kids in pounding out thousands of words a week and putting them out for people to read.

I planned what I was going to say carefully, writing down a few key points on a note card and coming up with interesting stories about articles I had written. I ran the gamut, from the man who got stuck in a heating vent while trying to break into a building, to the man who stabbed and killed his wife then leapt off a balcony three stories to his death. The stories had the appropriate effect: the students laughed at the former and gaped at the latter.

The next portion of the show was a role-playing exercise where one lucky fourth-grader got to be a journalist. Others made up the usual cast of characters: the thief, the victim, the police, judge and jury. The kids became animated when I asked for volunteers, especially when I asked for someone to act as "the bad guy," who had the honor of being handcuffed by the police officer and sentenced to life in prison for stealing an empty wallet.

For their patience in sitting through my speech, the students received official South Meadows Elementary Chelsea Standard press passes, complete with their name printed on the front.

Aside from entertaining the fourth-grade class, the school had a more high-minded purpose for my speaking to the children. The school's intent was to try to break down gender stereotypes by presenting men and women working in non-traditional fields. To serve that end, South Meadows invited women scientists and men writers to explain their jobs and how they decided to pursue their various vocations.

I hadn't thought of writing as a non-traditional career until talking with school organizers. They said that as boys moved through middle school, their interest and success in writing drops off dramatically. Girls have a similar decrease in interest and success in math and science. The school hoped that by catching the interests of the children early, they would maintain some of the excitement toward learning they had as elementary children.

The idea that I might be able to spark the boys' interest in writing was a gratifying thought, and I hope I lived up to the school's expectations. But what was most satisfying was the boy who came running into the Chelsea Standard building after school that day, waving his press pass and asking for a tour of our operations.

Though I was off reporting at the time, when I heard of the boy's excitement, it brought me back to my first tour of my local newspaper, standing in awe of the printing presses and rolls of paper taller than I was. Our office was a bit more boring—only a few computers and a microwave for heating up lunch—but my coworkers suggested he and his father go to Jackson, where they could see the presses in their glory.

That boy's excitement made the whole day worthwhile, because I knew that I had at least reached one kid. Maybe that's enough to sustain him through the next few difficult years.

It's certainly enough to sustain me.

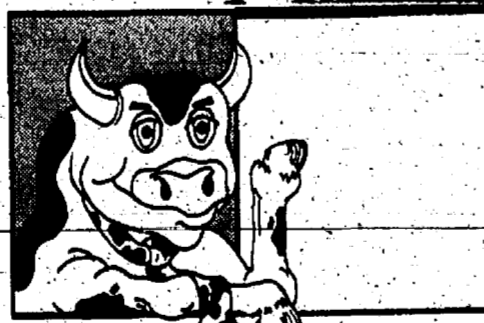

Uncle seeks voters' help to solve village water, road problems

I see where one of the Village People is gonna quit and is looking for somebody to take his place. Sounds like a mandrake to me. My public is calling and my hearing aid is at full volume! Look no further, Chelsea. This is the big break I've been waiting for my entire political career, and I'm good at making splints.

Time to polish off my political machine. Actually, it's not even that dull because I kept it in the garage because I always thought something like this might happen. I didn't oil it very much, of course, because I didn't really drive it since my former running mate, Arlotta Moofellow, went off to ingratiate herself with the governor. Then he turned on her and hired that dead guy from the FFA of course. So she's just been hanging out downtown ever since then.

But now the bell tolls for her, and me. Actually, it kind of clangs if you think about it. That's one of the good things about this bell system that crows came up with—they don't have tolls at all. Once you buy the equipment, it's free, no matter how many times you call and how long you keep clanging.

And that's the very kind of

common-sense, low-cost approach we're gonna bring to this town. We're gonna give the taxpayers clang for the buck! Like, why do we have to spend all this money on stuff like village halls and water wells and roads? I mean, didn't people get along before all those things were there?

Like the water, for instance. What are they doing drilling these wells into the ground to find water? There's rain and creeks and all that stuff I've been talking about for years. Elect me and we'll stop all that foolishness.

And the roads. What was there before the roads? Dirt, right? What's wrong with driving on dirt? It was good enough for our ancestors and it doesn't cost a dime, it seems kinda dumb to me for us to be spending money on this stuff.

Then there's village hall. The more I think about it, the more I wonder why we even need one.

It's like in my house. I have all these rooms, like the kitchen and the living room and bedrooms and stuff. Those are places we actually do things. Then we have these halls. You don't do anything in the halls, you only use them to go from one room to another. Otherwise they're worthless. So why not get rid of them? You can just use doors to get from one room to another and get rid of the halls entirely.

It should be the same way with the village. If we follow this principle, we can do away with the village halls and save a bunch of money, and the employees shouldn't complain because we could use some of the money to make the village rooms bigger. Everybody would be a winner!

Vote for me and my former running mate, Arlotta Moofellow, and we'll use this same common-sense approach to running your village! You'll wonder how you ever got along without us. And if anyone was thinking about running for this open position, you might as well give up now. You can see what you're up against.

Some say senior citizens still productive members of society

By Joan Dyer-Zinner
Heritage Newspapers

Senior citizens may be the last "safe" target for comedians.

In our politically correct and ultra-sensitive society, jokes based on race or nationality are frowned upon and, in some cases, even the subject of legal actions.

However, comedians don't seem to feel any hesitancy to make fun of their parents' or grandparents' generations with crude references to old age. Just as they once stereotyped ethnic and racial groups, they now poke fun with a stereotypical view of senior citizens.

I've never been in favor of placing people in categories because once this is done, we tend to stop viewing them as individuals. If we stereotype older people, then we tend to incorrectly imply that "all" senior citizens do this or "all" senior citizens do that.

First of all, let's get a few things straight:

- All mature adults don't drive 35 mph in the left lane of the freeway. (A few do.)

- All senior citizens aren't cranky. (A few are.)

- All older people aren't incapacitated, Alzheimer's patients or residents of nursing homes. (Only a small percentage are.)

- All retirees don't squeeze their quarters until the eagle squawks. (A few do.)

- And lastly, all older people don't dress funny. (A few do, and they probably were the ones who dressed offbeat in junior high school.)

The myth that older people are not active or energetic was dispelled when my spouse and I took an 11-day Caribbean cruise earlier this year.

A majority of the passengers were feisty 50s, spirited 60s and 70s, and eager 80s. The oldest passenger was almost 93, and, admittedly, she didn't try to keep up with the "youngsters" aboard.

The passengers swam in the pool, danced in the lounges, participated in the contests, gambled in the casino, toured the islands and also scuba-dived and snorkled along the beaches.

Very few of the older passengers bypassed the beach and ocean activities in favor of lounge chairs on the Lido Deck.

A 73-year-old member of our party and his 69-year-old spouse climbed the rocky 600-foot waterfall at Dunn's River Fall in Jamaica, along with a group of youngsters and young adults.

The couple's biggest worry was that a 40-year-old man who had tripped several times on the slippery rocks wouldn't make it to the top with them.

Senior citizens may not buy as many CDs, skateboards or Big Macs as teens do, but they are not reluctant to spend money on the items that they value. They spend generous amounts of money on fine dining, entertainment, trips (including cruises) and quality clothing.

During the cruise, our fellow passengers bought souvenirs for their families and friends plus designer clothing, jewelry, liquors, porcelain collectibles and perfume for themselves.

The service staff told us that our cruise (with an overwhelming number of senior citizens) was "the best" trip of the season for them. To the waiters, busboys, beverage servers and cabin attendants, the word "best" translates into biggest tips.

So much for the stereotypes of inactive, cheap and cranky seniors!

Michigan Farm Bureau offers fun facts

Michigan growers produced 14.3 million hundredweight (cwt.) of potatoes in 1997, up 3 percent from 1996. Yields averaged 300 cwt. per acre for the third straight year. Total quantity sold was 12.8 million cwt. with a value of $82 million. Last year's value of sales was $71 million. The average price received by producers was $6.45 per cwt., up from $5.80 in 1996.

New, environmentally friendly ways to turn cattle hides into leather while ensuring better quality products have been developed by scientists. Cattle hides are the most valuable co-product from the meat packing industry. The United States produces about 35 million hides each year. Exported hides bring more than $1 billion in foreign trade; those tanned in the United States are worth about $4 billion in finished leather. For ages, processors have used salt to preserve hides because it draws out water. But each salt-cured hide produces a gallon of salt waste-ter, posing a disposal problem — adding salt-water to soil lowers its fertility. Using potassium-chloride, or potash, to tan hides would benefit the environment because it is a plant nutrient. Potash is a little more expensive than salt, however, and would add about $2 to the cost of curing each hide.

Village veteran

Barbara Fredette adapts to increased workload

By Michael Rybka

Staff Writer

On Monday morning, Barbara Fredette, administrative assistant for the village of Chelsea, was as ready as one can be to return to the reams of paperwork that she abandoned on Dec. 23 to begin a 10-day vacation.

It wasn't the most relaxing time off because she was sick most of the time. Nevertheless, refusing to dwell on the situation, she was determined to start her work week with a vengeance and offset the inevitable pile of work that accumulated in her absence.

Instead, she became stuck in her driveway. It was mid-afternoon before she arrived at her downtown Chelsea State Bank office. In addition to counteracting the effects of the holiday hiatus, she now had to respond to the deluge of messages left by people earlier in the day who were eager to jump-start the new year.

"When I go on vacation there's no one to take over for me. The work's not actually hard but that's because by now I have it down to a system," Fredette said.

The reliability of Fredette's "system" has been honed by the 29 years she has been instrumental in keeping the wheels of Chelsea turning.

Aside from a relatively brief stint working at Chelsea State Bank — a job sponsored by Chelsea High School that continued for six months after her graduation in 1969 — Fredette has worked exclusively for the village.

The first five and a half years of her municipal career were spent as a clerk. In September 1976, she was promoted to office manager, replacing Richard Harvey. November of '88 until February of '89 she was acting-village manager. When she was relieved of that responsibility she obtained her present title which, Fredette said, encompasses the same responsibilities as did the previous officer manager designation.

As administrative assistant, Fredette's responsibilities include overseeing the payroll of over 100 village employees, maintaining their personnel records and benefit packages, assisting in the preparation and allocation of the budgets for the 10 village departments, and coordinating the annual outside audit.

Fredette said the majority of her time is spent on accounts payable, while the most complex part of her job is keeping informed about new regulations and the increasingly flexible retirement options, such as stock portfolios, for village employees.

Fredette said her change in title from "office manager" to "administrative assistant" occurred when several nearly simultaneous changes took place.

These included Frederick "Fritz" Weber's administration being prematurely curtailed, which forced herself to serve as a stop-gap until Bob Stalker took over for a year; Chelsea evolving from a small town to a potential city; and manual bookkeeping being replaced by computerized methods.

Even though those coinciding transitions have long since been addressed, the fallout from that era still invokes commentary.

Her tenure under Village Manager Fritz Weber, who died in May of '89, evoked the greatest response.

"I had worked with Fritz for such a long time that having to work with someone else was quite a transition," Fredette said. "Fritz was more of a one-man show. The Village Council now takes a more active role than they did back then. Then again, times have changed. The town has gotten much bigger. Maybe Fritz would do things differently today, too."

Fredette's fondest memory of Weber is his being the catalyst for the posthumously-named Weber Fields — the softball diamonds that adjoin Veteran's Park.

"He put so much passion into that development," Fredette said.

Of late, development has concentrated more on commercial lots than sandlots, which does-

Barbara Fredette, administrative assistant for Chelsea Village, has been a mainstay in the village for the past 29 years. She started her career as a clerk and has moved throughout the ranks. In the late 1980s, Fredette served as acting village manager. Today she helps keep the village wheels turning.

n't give Fredette any pleasure.

"This town has certainly grown faster than I would have liked to have seen it grow," Fredette said. "While that has made our work load progressively rise, our staff size has always remained the same. I'm thinking of adding temporary help during the summer tax-billing period."

Fredette said that the number of village employees whose records she oversees has doubled since she began. Some of the added workload has been offset by the cooperation the department heads have always displayed.

"My interaction with them and the other village employees is one of the most rewarding aspects of this job," Fredette said.

ware would ease the workload. If it did, it still created another challenge.

"I had to learn computers from scratch," Fredette said.

PERSONALITY

Nonetheless, even the quality of the cooperation can only partly offset the quantity of the work.

Perhaps one reason why staff was not added in conjunction to growth in those transitional years was a belief that the introduction of modern softond. When that time comes, Fredette said she has given thought to running for Lyndon Township treasurer, following in the political footsteps of her father.

Fredette is the daughter of George and Ruby Bauer. George served as Lyndon Township supervisor for several terms.

The former Barbara Bauer married her high school sweetheart Charley Fredette, a 1967 CHS graduate, in August of 1969. They have two sons. Charley is a mechanic at Chelsea Motorcycle Supply.

'Mr. S' enjoyed school so much he decided to become a teacher

By Michelle Rogers

Associate Editor

While growing up in Manistee, Dennis Strzyzewski loved school. So much so that years later he has made it his career in Chelsea.

"I liked school. I liked the atmosphere, the extra curricular stuff, being around my friends," Strzyzewski said. "It was always a safe place to be, and I wanted to be part of it again as a teacher."

Although Strzyzewski had decided in high school that he wanted to teach, he wavered in college, studying accounting his first two years. Accounting appeared to be a stable and secure profession. But Strzyzewski said he decided to follow his heart instead.

"I had people say 'You don't want to teach because the compensation isn't good' or 'You'll burn out' or 'The kids will drive you nuts.' But I haven't found any of that," he said.

Strzyzewski was hired this past fall to teach geography and English to seventh-graders at Beach Middle School. He comes to the district from Lapeer County, where he taught sixth-graders at Dryden Elementary School.

Strzyzewski earned his bachelor's degree from Central Michigan University in 1994. There he concentrated on social studies and English. Now he is enrolled in graduate school at Oakland University, where he is pursuing a master's degree in guidance and counseling.

It was the small-town atmosphere and reputation of Chelsea schools that Strzyzewski said drew him to this area.

"I was really impressed with the people I met and the facilities," he said about the district.

For the past four months, Strzyzewski had been commuting from Grand Blanc, where he lived with his wife, Andrea. The couple moved to Ann Arbor on Dec. 30, so both could be closer to work.

Since arriving in the Chelsea School District, Strzyzewski said he has been impressed with the students and community at large.

"I feel fortunate to be here, and I hope to do good work for the community and the schools," he said.

Strzyzewski's favorite subject to teach is English/language arts.

"The No. 1 reason is I like to help kids become writers," he said. "I have found there sometimes is a resistance to writing. But once kids see themselves as writers, they kind of blossom and they have a lot to say."

Strzyzewski, known to his students as "Mr. S," teaches expository writing to prepare students for high school and college. He also teaches creative writing, journalism and he enjoys teaching students how to write historical fiction.

In class, students brainstorm topics before narrowing down their choice.

"I like to give them some choice in what they write, but not always," he said.

Strzyzewski describes his teaching style as child-centered.

TEACHER FEATURE

ted.

"I want kids to take ownership of what they do," he said.

"I would say I am very fair. I understand what 12- and 13-year-old kids are thinking and what their priorities are like. And I work very hard to help make education important to them without discounting all the other things going on in their lives."

The middle school appears to be his niche. "I like the atmosphere of the middle school," Strzyzewski said. "I like that age a lot. They're fun, high energy."

"It's an important and difficult age. I think it's important there are people who understand and respect what it's like to be a pre-teen and be someone who is there for them."

Strzyzewski feels it's important to be fair and consistent with students.

"My Dad used to say, 'Say what you mean and mean what you say,' and I think that's very important," Strzyzewski said. "And make sure kids know you care."

"Everything I do, I want (students) to know it's because I think it's best for them."

In turn, he hopes students see him as a teacher with high expectations and someone who wants to help them succeed.

"I think there are a lot of abilities in the Chelsea students and a lot of potential," he said.

There have been three highlights of his career, so far. One came early last year when a student at Dryden called him at home and asked him not to leave. Another came when he was hired in Chelsea. The third continues every day, Strzyzewski said, as he builds relationships with students as a teacher and a coach.

Strzyzewski coached seventh-grade football this year and has plans to coach eighth grade next year. As a student in Manistee, Strzyzewski played on the gridiron in high school.

"I watch it. I play it when I get a chance. I've been involved in it my whole life," he said about the sport.

What this young teacher looks forward to is improving his craft and helping kids learn.

Chelsea cagers drop pair in SEC

By Jon Royce

Special Writer

The two-time defending SEC champion Dexter Dreadnaughts strolled into Chelsea on Tuesday, Jan. 12, sporting shirts that read, "Those on top of the mountain didn't fall there."

Dexter is a confident and talented team. They expected to win and they did, beating the Bulldogs 58-39. It wasn't just their talent that beat the Bulldogs. Chelsea's defense held their two top scorers well under their average. It was Dexter's confidence that beat the Bulldogs, the confidence built by consecutive SEC titles.

Chelsea has the talent to be one of the top teams in the league. They must, however, find the brash arrogance and the belief in themselves that can take them there. The loss against Dexter taught the Bulldogs that confidence is often more important than talent.

Chelsea coach Robin Raymond was disappointed with the loss but also saw positive aspects of the game on which to build.

"This was a big game in the first round, (of SEC games) now we need to make up a game," Raymond said.

"Our goal was to stop their center and their shooting guard and we did a good job there. Their 6-foot-6 forward had a career game with 18 points and 11 rebounds, we can't let that happen. We got off to a good start but when Dexter turned it up we had no response."

Chelsea did get off to a good start. Point guard Rourke

Skelton passed to Sean Davis for two and then the team forced Dexter to commit a back court violation. Guard Aaron Ruhlig dished to center Alan Bairley who scored inside the paint and a few plays later Davis hit a three.

Chelsea led at the end of the first quarter, 15-10.

In the second quarter Dexter set up in a 2-3 zone. Chelsea broke it down with crisp passes and Vince Scheffler completed a three-point play. Ruhlig hit an 18-footer and the momentum favored the Bulldogs.

Then Dexter called a time out and things started going down hill for Chelsea. Dexter picked up the defensive intensity, and by the end of the half they were down one point, 23-22.

The Dreadnaughts scored the first points of the second half and by the end of the third quarter were up 11 points, 43-32. The Dreadnaughts didn't let up in the fourth quarter. They held the Bulldogs scoreless for the first four minutes of the quarter. Chelsea finally scored when Bairley hit a free throw. By then, by then Dexter was up by 20, 53-33, and the game, for all intents and purposes, was over.

Tony Scheffler led the Bulldogs in scoring with eight points. Vince Scheffler had seven, Ruhlig and Davis each had six and Bairley finished with five.

Chelsea lost a close game in the SEC's toughest place to play, Tecumseh's Jungle, 53-51, last Friday, Jan. 15.

The team was disappointed with the loss, knowing it had its chances to win the game.

The Bulldogs came out slowly in the first quarter but battled back in the second to go into the half leading 34-30.

The Bulldogs continued to play well for the third quarter but fell apart the last few minutes of the game.

Tecumseh's final nine points came off free throws as the team forced Chelsea to commit numerous mental errors.

"We came out slow, but came back and we were up by six with just a few minutes left," Davis said.

"But we just couldn't put the easy shots down."

"Tecumseh probably played their best game and we played as well as we've played in a long time, in two out of the four quarters," Skelton said.

"We'll be all right. We just need to put these two behind us."

The team's attitude and confidence, while shaken, still seems to be intact. That is a good sign and bodes well for the rest of the season.

Skelton led the scoring with 16, Bairley had 14, Vince Scheffler eight, and Ruhlig seven.

Hockey club loses to strong Birch Run

No miracles were in store for the overmatched Chelsea Hockey Club, as it fell to the Class AA Birch Run hockey team Saturday, Jan. 16. Though the Bulldogs wanted the score to be closer than 8-2, after the first period it was a pretty evenly played game.

Birch Run scored on its first five shots of the game and dominated play in the first period.

T. Smashey scored midway through the second period, with an assist from Brad Wright. Smashey took the pass from Wright, faked the goalie, and buried the puck in the net for the score.

Team captain Bill Lucas blasted a shot from the blue line to beat the Birch Run goalie for Chelsea's other goal. Smashey assisted on the Lucas goal.

Play throughout the second and third period proved both even and fast paced, teams traded solid checks and good passing. Chelsea took 16 shots on net connecting on two.

Bulldog goalie Casey Johnson stood his ground after the disastrous first period and let in only one goal in the second period and two in the final. On the night he faced 31 shots.

It is often said that to improve you must play better competition. The Birch Run team was two levels higher than the Bulldogs who realistically, except for the first five minutes of the game, matched well against this very seasoned team.

The next home games for Chelsea will be Friday, Jan. 22, at 8:30 p.m. against cross-state rival, Grand Rapids, and Saturday, Jan. 23, at 9 p.m. against league foe Lincoln. Both games are at the Jackson Optimist Rink.

JV hoopsters hold on to nip Dreadnaughts

Chelsea junior varsity basketball team held off a late comeback by the Dexter Dreadnaughts last Tuesday, Jan. 12, to take a 54-53 win at home.

The Bulldogs took the early lead, 11-8 after the first quarter, and by the end of the third quarter pulled ahead 39-33.

Ben Myers paced the Bulldogs with 26 points. Other Chelsea scorers included Cory Picklesimer and Brian Sayers with eight points each, Randy Peace with four, Mike Radka and Chris Brigham with three each and Rob Hohnke with two.

On Friday at Tecumseh,

Chelsea played the Indians strong for the first half but couldn't hold on in a 59-49 loss.

The Bulldogs led after the opening quarter 17-13 but Tecumseh pulled to within one point at halftime. The Indians outscored Chelsea 21-13 in the third quarter and held the Bulldogs to just four points in the final period.

Myers again was the leading scorer with 18 points. Sayers scored 11, Chris Cooper 10, Joel Grimm five, Hohnke three and Picklesimer two.

Chelsea is 5-4 overall and 3-2 in the Southeastern Conference.

SAVING THE ROOTS

When dentures are needed, any supporting bone in the gums can help make them fit more comfortably. This includes whatever tooth roots can be saved. They act just like pilings do in supporting a building.

Sometimes metal attachments are made for dentures and roots, so they connect together. Or a thimble-shaped metal cover is attached to the root, designed so that it fits into the denture for additional support. Saving the roots helps in other ways. Some people lose their "sense of feel" when their teeth are closed because they've lost all of their roots and surrounding nerve fibers. When some roots are retained, they keep this sense of touch when their teeth are in contact.

There is another advantage: it helps prevent further loss of bone by reducing wear on the jawbone itself. Because of the stronger support, the dentures not only fit better, they tend to last longer before they have to be refitted or replaced.

Just like whole teeth, however, the health of the roots must be maintained as long as possible. This makes regular checkups even more important for denture wearers whose roots have been saved.

Miracles or Luck?

Dear Friends and Neighbors,

Is it luck when a patient recovers after the doctors offer no hope?

Is it luck when an inevitable automobile accident is somehow avoided?

Is it luck when an employment opportunity comes just at the right moment, or when just enough money comes unexpectedly to tide you over?

Or could it be that sometimes it's God miraculously intervening in people's lives?

We invite you to join us this coming Sunday, 10:00 a.m., as we consider the subject of miracles. We will address issues such as:

Just what is the definition of a miracle?

What about faith healers and alleged miracle workers?

Can the devil perform miracles?

Is it possible we may be overlooking some of God's biggest miracles simply because we don't recognize them?

Can an extreme fascination with miracles actually keep a person farther away from God?

Could it be that God sometimes makes Himself known in this life because He has something even better for us in the next life?

Wrestlers stay in hunt for SEC title

By Frank Dimich
Special Writer

Injuries have affected the Chelsea wrestling team all season, but coach Kerry Kargel said it's not all that bad because the backups are getting needed experience and are able to win while getting it.

"We always have someone different in the lineup every week," Kargel said. "(But) our backups are adjusting and getting better."

Such was the case Thursday, Jan. 14, when Chelsea won at Ypsilanti Lincoln 40-27 in a Southeastern Conference dual-meet match to go to 5-3 and 2-1 in the SEC.

The Bulldogs also used their increasing experience to finish third at the Athens Invitational Saturday with 140 points. Williamston was first with 191 and Battle Creek Lakeview second with 149 1/2.

Against Lincoln, senior Dan Graff won by pin in 1:15 at 103 pounds.

At 112 pounds, freshman Dav-Broff won by injury default. Senior Dan Blough won an 8-5 decision at 125, senior Justin Nadolny a 17-8 major decision at 135, freshman Eric Lixey a pin in 3:14 at 152, sophomore Ben Vogel a 10-7 decision at 160, sophomore Dal Queenan an 8-6 decision at 189 and sophomore Nate Dawson a pin in 1:43 at heavy-weight.

At the Athens Invitational, four Bulldogs got into the finals and faced tough competition, Kargel said.

"It's usually a good tournament," he said. "They get to see schools they normally don't get to see. That's why we go, to get a look at what's in that area."

At 163, Graff was pinned in 14 seconds by Nick Simmons of Williamston, the defending Division III state champ in that weight class, and finished second.

Junior Derek Egeler, who finished fifth in the state in Division II at 160 pounds last season, lost a 3-2 decision on a penalty point to defending Division III state champion Nate Olmstead of Union City. Egeler also finished second.

"(The match) was very good," Kargel said. "Derek was coming off the flu and that didn't help him much."

Senior Dan Dault pinned Union City's Jud Sybesna in overtime to finish first. Sybesna was third in the state in Division III and was 16-0 coming in.

Dault was down two points with nine seconds left in the third period, and he reversed Sybesna for two to force overtime. In overtime, Dault caught him in an upper body throw and pinned him, Kargel said.

At 215, junior Rick Huntington lost by pin in 2:13 to finish second.

Junior Jeremy Price placed fourth at 140, Vogel fifth at 152 and Dawson third at heavy-weight.

"We did excellent as a team," Kargel said. "Even the kids that lost wrestled well."

Chelsea also sent a junior varsity team to the Eaton Rapids Invitational and finished seventh out of 16 teams.

Kargel said it is one of the best JV tournaments in the state.

Lixey finished first at 152, freshman Jared Powers fourth at 189, Queenan fifth at 189, junior Steve Lafferty second at 215 and junior Ian Kummer first at heavy-weight.

Freshmen win two games during week

The Chelsea freshman basketball team won both its games last week, 58-40 at Tecumseh Friday and at home against Class C Manchester 71-22 Jan. 12.

The Bulldogs (5-1, 3-1 Southeastern Conference) went out to a 26-11 lead against Tecumseh in the first period and led 36-19 at halftime. They were outscored by two in the third, but still led 48-33 after three.

Chelsea coach Scott Barrett has been playing all of his players consistently with positive results.

"Even our second team has been doing a good job keeping us in the game," Barrett said.

Joe Tripodi and Nick Gadbury led the Bulldogs with 13 points each. Eddie McClendon had 10, Dan Mueller had five, Andy Smith, Kent Reames, Tim Bentley four each, Mike Milliken and Kyle Schrotenboer two each and Chris Kinashuk one.

The game was originally scheduled for Jan. 11, but was postponed due to bad weather.

Against Manchester, the Bulldogs went out to a 26-4 lead in the first period and 48-9 in at halftime. They were outscored 11-6 in the third, but were still up 54-20.

All except three of the Bulldogs' 14 players scored.

"All my starters played a quarter's worth of time," Barrett said. "I was real pleased with the subs."

Reames led with a season-high 15 points. Mueller and Bentley had nine, Gadbury and Schrotenboer eight, Joe Walters six, Tripodi five, Smith four, McClendon, Milliken and Kevin Riddle two each and Mike Mignano one.

Bulldogs volleyball team wins tough invitational

Chelsea varsity volleyball team has been strong in the early part of the season.

By Frank Dimich
Special Writer

Chelsea varsity volleyball team beat what Bulldogs coach Dan Montgomery said was its toughest opponent all year in Class A Okemos at the finals of the Wyandotte Invitational Saturday, 14-16, 15-7, 15-0.

"The team looked very good all day," Montgomery said. The match was also entertaining, as many of Chelsea's and Okemos' opponents stayed around to watch it.

The Bulldogs also beat Ypsilanti Lincoln in its first Southeastern Conference match Thursday 15-5, 16-14 to go to 11-4 and 1-0 in the SEC.

Their home match with Tecumseh, originally scheduled for Jan. 11, was postponed until yesterday because of a snow day.

At Wyandotte, the Bulldogs finished first in their pool at the 10-team tournament by beating Wyandotte 15-9, 15-5, Cabrini 15-3, 15-10, Gross Ile 15-8, 15-1 and taking one of two games from Dearborn Gabrielle Richard 15-8, 10-15.

They beat Riverview in the semifinal 15-5, 15-3.

Junior Lindsay Powers led the team with 58 kills for the day, senior Kristen Ellis had 28, junior Lindsey Brink 18, junior Jill Drexler 16 and senior Amy McCalla had 10.

Powers had 20 aces serving. Ellis had seven and senior Celeste Bycraft was 42-of-42 serving with six aces.

Senior setter Miranda Harris led with 90 assists.

Against Lincoln, the Bulldogs came out strong in the first game, but were down 0-5 in the second.

In the second, the Bulldogs committed several unforced errors, Montgomery said. "We were playing rather flat," he said.

Powers led the team with eight kills and Drexler and junior Mora Arnold had four each.

Harris led with 13 assists. Brink, Ellis and Harris were all perfect serving, going 10-for-10, 9-for-9 and 8-for-8, respectively.

JV volleyball team wins conference opener

By Frank Dimich

Chelsea junior varsity volleyball team won its first Southeastern Conference match of the year 15-2, 15-3 at home against Ypsilanti Lincoln Thursday, Jan. 14.

The Bulldogs had good serve reception, coach Laura Cleveland said.

Catie Boshoven served 11 points and Michelle Dettling served 10.

Chelsea also won its first tournament of the season at the Brighton Invitational Saturday by beating Okemos 15-2, 15-7 in the final.

Okemos started the game aggressively, but the defense, led by Laura Baird, was key to the win, Cleveland said.

The Bulldogs gained the momentum after that, Cleveland said, and were up 9-1 in the second game.

"The team came together as a unit throughout the tournament and learned to play well under pressure situations," Cleveland said. "The experience of second year JV players Emily Royce and Laura Baird was priceless as they served the team well as floor leaders throughout the day."

Chelsea beat Plymouth Canton in three games in the semifinal and Troy Athens in two in the quarterfinal.

The Bulldogs finished 7-1 in pool play with wins over Tecumseh, Livonia Churchill, Lake Fenton and Holt.

Dettling led the team with 27 kills, Josie Wells had 13, Baird 12 and Royce 11.

Cleveland said Royce and Dettling's aggressive play at the net helped them to a win against Okemos.

Molly Welton led with eight service aces.

Chelsea's match at home against Tecumseh, originally scheduled for Jan. 11, was postponed until yesterday because of bad weather.

CIVIL ACTIONS
According to the Association of Trial Lawyers of America, state laws introduced in the past few years have limited the liability of businesses and, thereby, made it more difficult for plaintiffs to bring and win medical-malpractice and product-liability suits. This should not discourage those who have suffered injuries of these sorts, however. To begin with, most lawyers take personal injury cases on a contingency basis, which means they get paid only if they win. Beyond that, plaintiffs should have realistic expectations about damage awards in the event they do win. The median award for winners of personal injury cases that go to trial is $51,000. Prospective litigants should discuss their chances with a lawyer.
Awards in the tens of thousands, while not providing a lifetime of financial security, can go a long way towards offsetting the cost of medical bills, lost wages, and the replacement of damaged goods and property. Such awards also serve notice that negligence and assault will not go unnoticed nor unpunished. To learn your legal rights and options, call the LAW OFFICES OF KITCHEN & STRINGER, J.D. at 426-4695 to schedule a complimentary consultation. You'll find our offices located at 3249 Broad Street, Dexter.
HINT: Only 8 percent of plaintiffs who win their civil cases receive more than $1 million.

"I look forward to seeing them go on to college and having success," he said.

Many years from now, Strzyzewski looks forward to becoming a mentor to up-and-coming teachers like himself. Beyond that, he has plans to become a middle school counselor in the next 10 to 15 years.

"I still want to make my life's work helping kids of this age," he said. "But I can see myself wanting to do this in a different way, and counseling may be a way to do that."

When he is not in the classroom Strzyzewski can be found playing recreational softball or coaching football. He enjoys reading historical fiction and watching movies.

this season, the Bulldogs finished third in the Brighton Invitational Jan. 9.

Against Lincoln, the Bulldogs struggled in the second game, going down 12-2, but "had a great comeback" to win, coach Terri McCalla said.

Tracy Carter led the team with 10 kills and Rochelle Stafford had four.

Cara Long was 10-of-12 serving with four aces.

Jenelle Vlcek, who McCalla said "played great defense and backed up everyone," led with five service aces.

Michigan Streams and Lakes

Opening Day of Trout - April 26th

Stream MAP of Michigan

Why every fisherman needs this map

It is estimated that 10% of all the fishermen catch 90% of the fish. Regardless of which group you fall into... there's a sure way to up your odds... simply try new fishing waters. Fish where few fishermen ever fish.

Michigan is loaded with great fishing waters... many of them overlooked. From the AuSable River to all of the Great Lakes tributaries to the Pere Marquette River... thousands of miles of streams, lakes and rivers are now easy-to-locate on one map.

Professor Higbee's Stream Map of Michigan is the first and only highly detailed map of its kind. This new 4 foot by 4 foot color map shows virtually all of the 35,000 miles of Michigan streams & lakes on both peninsulas. That's almost two times the earth's circumference!

RAVE REVIEWS

"It is amazingly detailed and names some creeks in the Mohawk Valley that can't even be found on topographic maps."

John Pittarres
OBSERVER-DISPATCH-Utica

"If you're looking for the most definitive maps ever created depicting every single creek, river, stream, pond and lake then 'Professor Higbee's Stream Maps' are without question the finest."

Howard Brant
THE NEWARK STAR-LEDGER

"It is in showing where to find out-of-the-way trout streams that makes the map such a treasure to the fisherman."

Joe Gordon
TRIBUNE-DEMOCRAT-Johnstown

FREE LOCATION GUIDEBOOK INCLUDED

Pinpoint the best fishing in Michigan with this valuable 40 page guide. Easily locate over 5,000 streams and lakes shown on the "Stream Map." Your map and guidebook will take you to the top 443 fishing waters - select waters for 14 species of gamefish.

REGULAR BOARD MEETING — JANUARY 5, 1999

The regular board meeting of the Sylvan Township Board was held January 5, 1997 at 7 P.M. in the Sylvan Township Hall, 112 W. Middle Street, Chelsea, MI 48118.

The following board members were present: Supervisor Dresselhouse, Clerk Koch, Treasurer Grau, Trustee Heller and Trustee Lesser.
Also present were Michael Rybka, Ray Steinbach, Charles Burgess and Kurt Koscak.

Minutes were approved as presented.

Motion by Lesser, supported by Grau to pay bills as presented. Carried.

Motion by Grau, seconded by Koch to give authority to Supervisor and Clerk to be present and sign all closing papers. Carried.

Dresselhouse also reported on a conversation with the State Police and the possibility of a State Police outpost in the new Township Hall, also updated the board on the Fire Authority, Act 425 Agreement with the Village. The outpouring of food, flowers, cards, phone calls, visitors, memorial contributions, and other expressions of sympathy, was very much appreciated.

We would also like to thank the Chelsea Fire Dept./Rescue Squad and HVA for their help and quick response, along with that of the staff at Chelsea Community Hospital's emergency room. Additionally, we would like to thank the John Mitchell family at Staffan-Mitchell Funeral Home for assisting us with arrangements, and extending their support and compassion to us during the visitation and funeral service.

A special thank-you to Rev. William Donahue for his support, kind words, and prayers, and to the ladies of Dexter United Methodist Church, for the luncheon after the service. We truly appreciate all that has been done to help us through this most difficult time.
