Insurance won't cover village's case

Chelsea Village is on its own to fight a lawsuit by Farmer Jack grocery store, according to Village Attorney Peter Flintoft. Flintoft said Monday that the type of damages sought are not considered negligence, so they are expressly excluded in village's insurance policy.

Farmer Jack's lawsuit stems from the village's charges for water and sewer hook-up fees, claiming the fees are unreasonable and unconstitutional. Flintoft said the village would file a response to the lawsuit this week.

Street named for former manager

Chelsea Village Council adopted a resolution last Tuesday to name the driveway to Timbertown after former Village Manager Frederick "Fritz" Weber, who died in May 1989.

Village President Richard Steele said Weber, who was instrumental in creating Chelsea's Industrial Park, refused to have the park's main street named after him while he was alive. To honor his memory, the council dedicated the driveway "F.A. Weber Drive."

Chelsea Players to perform next week

The Chelsea Area Players will perform Rodgers and Hammerstein's "The King and I" at 8 p.m. July 29-31 at the Washington Street Education Center (old high school auditorium). Tickets are on sale at Chelsea Pharmacy for $10.

Village buys mower

Chelsea Village Council voted last Tuesday to spend $8,790 on a new Toro lawn mower for the Public Works Department.

The mower was the most expensive of the three bids the village received. But Village Manager Jack Myers recommended the more expensive model because the village owns two other Toros, and he thought it has superior construction.

Village hits MDOT with $15,000 fine

By Eric Bowen

Staff Writer

Chelsea Village Council voted to fine the Michigan Department of Transportation and Norfolk Southern Railroad $15,000 last Tuesday for failing to live up to its part of an agreement to close the East Street railroad crossing.

MDOT and Conrail, which later sold the railroad line to Norfolk, promised in November to make numerous improvements to village roads surrounding the crossing by June 30 in exchange for the closure. With the deadline nearing June 22, the village voted to give MDOT until last Tuesday to come up with a timeline for the project or face a fine.

Trustee Janice Ortring made both the original motion and proposed the most recent fine. She said she thought MDOT ignored the village's situation and should be required to pay for missing the deadline.

"We agreed to a temporary closure and they didn't fulfill their part of the bargain," Ortring said Monday. "How could they possibly think they could walk away from it?"

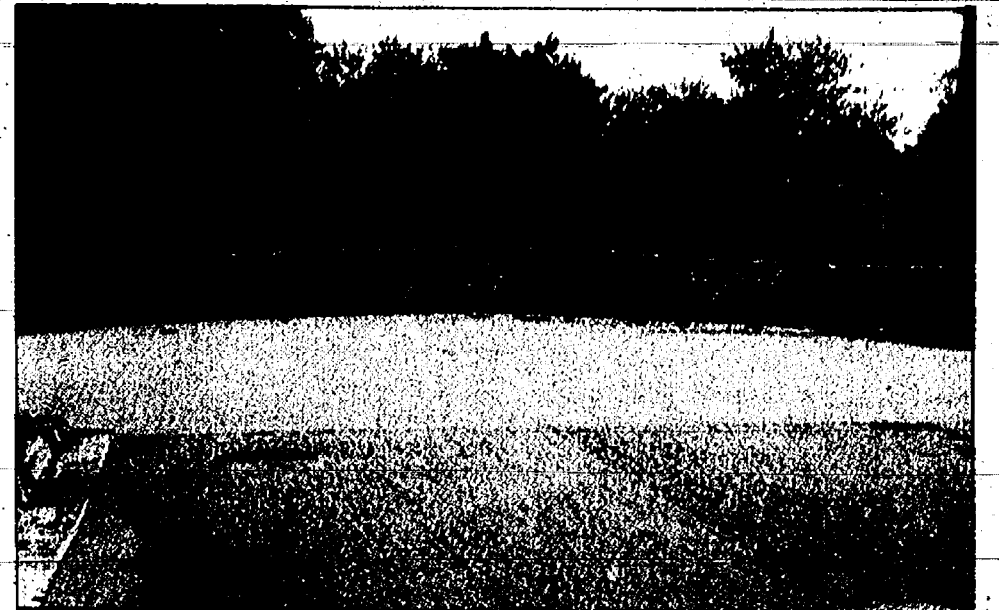

MDOT spokeswoman Janet Foran said the state intends to follow through with the street improvements. She said the state has been working with the village for several months to create a plan for the resurfacing of roads and expanding the intersection of Railroad and McKinley streets to accommodate truck traffic.

The delay came when the state received an estimate from the village's consultant in May that priced the work almost twice what MDOT expected, according to a July 7 letter from MDOT administrator Susan Brook, who is heading up the project.

Foran said the new estimate Brook referred to included reconstructing the road, which is more expensive than putting a new layer of black top on the street. The changes represented a significant change in scope, pushing the total project cost above $400,000.

Because of the difference in price, Foran said, MDOT asked for an extension on the project until July 27, when the three Chelsea Village upped the ante in its dispute with the Michigan Department of Transportation last Tuesday by fining the state transportation agency $15,000 for its lack of progress on construction related to the November closure of the East Street railroad crossing.

Summer Fest Kick-off

Chelsea merchants, businesspeople and friends got together last Wednesday for an island-themed kickoff party at the Chelsea Depot for this year's Chelsea Summer Fest. The event, which featured the Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band, was held as an early fundraiser for the festival. It also gave many busy Chelsea merchants a chance to socialize.

Below, Chelsea Chamber of Commerce President Todd Ortring and festival organizer Laurie Gravelyn play around with a bubble gun. Above, funeral director John Mitchell, center, had a chance to visit with Ed and Kathy Greenleaf, owners of Chelsea Lanes. This year's much-expanded festival will be held next Friday and Saturday, July 30-31, throughout the Chelsea business district. Watch for the special Summer Fest section in next week's newspaper.

Townships avoid library resolution

By Michael Rybka

Staff Writer

The Chelsea Village Council is finding little support among neighboring townships for what it hoped would be a bandwagon resolution it passed May 25, stating a preference that future expansion of the Chelsea District Library take place on the McKune House site and adjoining property.

To correspond with its initiative, the village drafted post-dated, model proposals to Sylvan, Lima, and Lyndon townships, asking them to sign on to its line of thinking.

The model resolution, however, made no specific mention of remaining at the McKune site, stating only that a respective township "support locating the library at a location that will best serve the entire district."

Sylvan, Lima and Lyndon construed the statement to mean the McKune site. Dexter Township Supervisor Robert Tetens said he has not had time to review his township's version, which is post-dated Aug. 3.

Sylvan, Lima and Lyndon townships decided not to succumb to the village's suggestive selling.

The Sylvan and Lima township boards, both of which held their monthly meeting July 8, said that parking and the financial feasibility of remaining at the McKune site should be the primary considerations.

Sylvan Township decided to have a letter drafted to that effect and it will be reviewed at an August meeting.

Lima Township simply avoided taking any formal action but Township Supervisor Gary Adams praised the library board for its efforts up to this point.

Lyndon Township did the same as Lima but a reason for doing so was given by Township Clerk Janis Knieper.

Knieper said when the district library was being formed, it was a stated objective that politics would be kept out of the situation.

Knieper said that accounted for why the appointed library board representatives were independent of the governing bodies of the respective municipalities.

"We appointed these people to do this job," Knieper said. "So let them do it and let's keep

Water Department finds promising spot for village well

By Eric Bowen

Staff Writer

Chelsea Water Department has found the best spot yet for a new well, Water Department Superintendent Dan Rosentreter said Tuesday.

The village drilled a test well Friday on property approximately 1,800 feet north of Sibley Road that Rosentreter said may solve the village's water shortage.

"All preliminary examinations appear to yield plenty of water," Rosentreter said. "At this point in time, that's the best spot we've found locally so far."

The test well yielded approximately 200 gallons per minute, which Rosentreter said could rise to about 500 gallons per minute with a full-size production well. Rosentreter said the site may be able to handle more than one well, which would give the village increased capacity.

The quality of the well also looks favorable, Rosentreter said. The well drilled through between 20 and 30 feet of clay, which acts as a filter, producing groundwater with fewer minerals. The village sent a sample of the water to be tested by its drilling consultants.

The most recent test well is the ninth the village has drilled since June of last year, when the council first authorized the tests. The previous eight tests cost the village approximately $40,000, according to Village Manager Jack Myers.

Only one, near Pierce Road, had sufficient capacity to serve as a village pumping station, but the cost of piping water to the village system was estimated to be between $750,000 and $1 million.

Library director opposes joint millage ballot with fire dept.

By Michael Rybka
Staff Writer

The Washtenaw County Election Division scheduling committee agreed July 6 that the Chelsea Area Fire Authority may request an operating millage on an Oct. 5 ballot.

The authority's initiative will share ballot space with a request by the Chelsea District Library for a 1.75 operating millage and support for a $6.29 million building project.

A three-member committee, appointed by the county clerk, convened to approve a special election. Its composition must consist of one school board member, one elected village/city official and one elected township official, all of course, from within the county.

Sylvan Township Clerk LuAnn Koch was appointed to represent township government.

Chelsea Area Library Director Metta Lansdale accepted an invitation to attend the meeting at which she voiced her concern that competing millage requests could hurt both proposals. She also expressed concern that Sylvan and Lima township residents would be uncertain which ballot initiative they were eligible to vote on due to the simipolitics out of it."

Chelsea District Library Director Metta Lansdale said on Monday that no matter how the townships had responded it would not have affected the library's direction.

"I want to have the parking situation wrapped up," Lansdale said, "and I'm not sure the council is in a position to help."

Lansdale said that council's motive behind the model resolutions may have been misconstrued by the townships.

Lansdale said she surmised that the action's goal was not to rally the townships around a cause of the council's but to motivate the Chelsea Village Planning Commission to rezone parcels north of town that would allow the Staffan-Mitchell Funeral Home to relocate.

This would make land available upon which the library could expand and provide parking.

lar but distinct boundaries of the fire authority and the library district.

Lyndon Township will not have that problem.

The committee rejected Lansdale's argument, citing the cost of special elections and the financial practicality of having the elections together.

Koch said at the Sylvan Township Board meeting last Tuesday that Lansdale was underestimating the sophistication of modern voting equipment.

Koch said that a computer program called Qualified Voter File, which can be borrowed from the county, will eliminate confusion.

Three days after appearing before the committee, Lansdale sounded upbeat despite her setback.

Lansdale said she understood the advantage a single election is to electorates and clerks seeing how special election expenses can be as high as $5,000.

"We'll just have to be good at informing the voters," Lansdale said. "And we've already begun the educational process with flyers. It's not as if we were caught off-guard. We certainly need fire protec-parties are set to meet to hash out the details of the project. With the village seemingly in agreement to the date, Foran said she was surprised by the fine.

"We have been working with the village and thought we had an agreement," Foran said. "On the basis of this letter there is a meeting to discuss the differences on July 27. It sounds like we're talking."

If nothing comes of the meeting, MDOT may be faced with additional fines. Ortring's motion includes a provision for fining MDOT $1,000 a day if the meeting is unsuccessful in setting a firm completion date for the work.

Given that construction season is rapidly ending, Ortring said she doesn't expect the work to be finished for another nine months. But she does expect to have MDOT's assurances the work will be completed within an agreed-upon timeline.

"The meeting can't conclude until we understand and agree to a specific timeline with a date of completion," Ortring said. "If for some reason it does end, they need to begin receiving a fine starting that day. We have to do something to say they can't just run over us."

Foran wouldn't say if MDOT will pay the village's fines. She said MDOT has been talking with the village to try to accommodate the village's wishes and had hoped to receive the extension to iron out the plans.

But Foran said the central issue should be how to go about closing the East Street crossing and improving the remaining crossings in the village. She said the upcoming meeting will be a good way for everyone involved to come to agreement.

"Clearly MDOT's concern is that we making safe crossings in the village instead of money lost to the project," Foran said. "Our concern is to work with the village and resolve our differences so that Chelsea has approved railroad crossings as we had agreed."

DO IT YOURSELF?

In this era of self-help books, it is not at all uncommon to see do-it-yourself divorce kits, wills, and the like. These may help people guide themselves through divorce if there are no children, or if neither spouse demands significant amounts of money or property. And, people can write simple wills for small estates, with uncomplicated assets and straightforward dispositions to beneficiaries (not trusts). If the witnessing instructions are followed carefully. However, if these or other situations involve any significant alteration to suit the circumstances of the person (or people) involved, an attorney's services are strongly recommended. It pays to have knowledge and experience on your side if failing to do so might put you at a distinct disadvantage.

If you have assets that are worth entailing, they're probably worth the time it takes to call the LAW OFFICES OF KITCHEN & STRINGER, J.D., at 426-4695 to schedule a complimentary consultation. We have been serving the community for over 27 years, and handle cases involving estate planning and administration, business and family law, personal injury, civil litigation, real estate, and criminal defense. And will be glad to point out the finer points of law as they relate to your situation. Our offices are located in Dexter, at 3249 Broad St.

Council debates apartment rezoning request

By Eric Bowen
Staff Writer

The rezoning of land off Old US-12 and Wilkinson for a proposed apartment complex was put on hold last Tuesday, despite a favorable recommendation from the Village Planning Commission.

Chelsea Village Council tabled the measure at its meeting after trustees questioned whether the new complex was necessary and financially beneficial to the village.

At issue is what the proper percentage of rental and occupant-owned housing should be for the village, given its limited ability to expand its boundaries. Trustees wanted to know whether apartment properties cost the village more in services, such as water and sewer charges, than they pay back in taxes.

Trustee Jim Myles started off the debate by saying he would like to get an opinion of the proper percentage from The Strader Group, which is consulting with the village on its master plan. The consultants are not specifically contracted to provide those numbers.

Trustee Robert MacLeod said the addition of 190 apartments could make rentals constitute nearly half of village's total housing. He wondered whether the village wanted to have that much rental property.

But Trustee Carol Rauschenberger said she didn't want rental residents to feel unwanted. Referring to comments made at the planning commission meeting that the community should be hidden from surrounding residents, she said she doesn't want to segregate apartments, preferring to integrate them into the community.

The council plans to take up the discussion again after receiving an opinion from the Strader Group. The village has not required a cost analysis of this type before.

In other business Tuesday, the council acted on the following:

- The council accepted a traffic study from Chelsea Police Department that calculated the average number of trucks per day making deliveries along Middle Street. The council requested the study on behalf of Middle Street residents, who were concerned about safety.

Police Chief Lenard McDougall said Monday that roughly 48 trucks passed along the street in an average day. Based on numbers provided by Middle-Street merchants, approximately 42 of those trucks were making local deliveries, leaving only six that were using the street to pass through Chelsea.

The council had been considering posting signs prohibiting through trucks. But because of the high percentage of local traffic, McDougall recommended against posting signs.

"If they put the signs up, the local trucks are still going to be able to come through," McDougall said.

- The council voted to accept rules of order to govern council meetings and policy. The rules have been in the works for several months and spell out how public comment, public hearings and council action, among others will be run.

- The council voted to release a utility easement for property on Wilkinson Street. The village owned an easement for utilities, but were not using the space for village services. Ameritech and Media One also have easements on the site, but are working with the property owner to release those as well so the property can be developed.

- The village appointed Thomas Begres as an alternate to the Zoning Board of Appeals. Begres works for Midwest Medflight and as a reserve firefighter for the Chelsea Fire Authority.

The property now under consideration, which stretches from Werker Road almost to M-52, is owned by developer Rene Papo. Papo's property was the site of a previous test well drilled in July of 1998 that failed to provide enough water.

In the previous test on his property, Papo had offered to enter into an agreement with the village to annex the 25-acre parcel property in exchange for some space to build the well.

Part of Papo's motivation then was to help lift the village's development moratorium, now in its second renewal period. If a suitable water source is found, the village will likely lift the ban that has blocked development for over a year.

The newest moratorium is set to expire Sept. 8, but the council ensured it would automatically be reconsidered once a water source is found.

As in the previous two moratoriums, the ordinance bans any site plans from being submitted to the planning commission, except for single-family homes. Though it was imposed because of a water shortage, it also gives the planning commission a chance to review zoning ordinances as part of a master plan review.

Papo could not be reached for comment before press time.

Y2K

Dear Friends and Neighbors,
I really thought that talk about the potential Y2K problem would have died down by now, but instead there seems to be more talk about it each month.

The concern, as you know, is that many computer systems and computer-run operations world-wide were not set up to accommodate the change of year from 1999 to 2000. The fear is that banks, stocks, utilities, airlines, food distributors, and countless other service providers will not be able to function, at least temporarily.

While most big businesses are assuring us, "We're Y2K compliant," we continue to hear voices predicting anything from temporary inconveniences to global disasters. We probably won't know until January 1 to what extent, if any, the world is affected.

Faith Lutheran believes it is beyond the scope of the church to give advice on matters which are beyond our spiritual base. Each individual should determine to what extent they will take action or refrain from taking action regarding Y2K. Having a little extra cash and non-perishable food on hand by the end of December would not show a lack of faith in the Lord.

The church is here to assure the world that our God is in control, and will continue to be in control next January. He created this world and has preserved it through at least 6 millennia through countless traumas. His Word assures us, "We know that in all things God works for the good of those who love Him" (Romans 8:28).

When you know Him through His Son Jesus Christ you can say each night, "I know who holds tomorrow." That includes New Year's Eve of this year.

Please join us in worshipping Him, this Sunday at 10:00 a.m., or next Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

And don't forget our Vacation bible School tonight, from 6:30-9:00 p.m.

Do your homework before buying first home

PREPARED BY THE
MICHIGAN ASSOCIATION OF CERTIFIED
PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS

MONEY MANAGEMENT

If today's low interest rates are inducing you to buy your first home, the Michigan Association of CPAs suggests you do a little homework before you start gathering paint chips and clipping furniture ads. Here's what you need to consider.

Know what you can afford
Most lenders use a two-part qualification ratio to determine how much money you can safely spend on living expenses and mortgage costs: 28/36. What this means is that lenders will generally allow you to spend up to 28 percent of your gross monthly income on housing expenses — principal, interest, homeowner's insurance, and taxes.

If the down payment that you scrape together amounts to less than 20 percent of the purchase price, your 28-percent allowance also needs to include the cost of purchasing private mortgage insurance (PMI), which protects the lender in case you default.

In terms of the second part of the equation, 36 percent of your gross monthly income is the amount lenders will allow you for a mortgage plus monthly recurring debt, such as your car loans and credit card bills. Normally, only debts that will take more than 10 months to pay off will matter.

Identify your comfort level

The 28/36 qualification ratio establishes the maximum amount you're eligible to be loaned, and lenders will happily lock you into as high a level of debt as you want, using these criteria. However, this number may not be within your comfort zone. Take a look at the past year's income and expenses. If you commit the maximum amount to a mortgage, will you have sufficient funds left over to meet your mortgage commitment? And, after making your down payment, will you have a large enough savings buffer to enable you to sleep soundly at night? These are some of the questions you need to ask yourself.

Make sure your credit is healthy

In order to qualify for a mortgage, you must have a clean credit record for at least two to three years. Even if you think your borrowing history is without blemish, take advantage of federal law and ask to inspect your credit reports; they could contain discrepancies.

And remember, though you are entitled to request corrections, this process can be time consuming. To be safe, contact the credit agencies at least six months before you plan to apply for a mortgage, to save yourself the headache of possible closing delays.

Get yourself preapproved

Preapproval means the lender has checked your credit and verified your income and other financial references. You'll get a document that says the lender will give you a mortgage up to a specific amount, as long as the home appraisal justifies the price. This may help you to beat out a slightly higher bid from someone who does not have a preapproval.

What you should pull together

To save yourself time further down the road, start pulling together the items you need in order to apply for a mortgage. You'll be asked for income tax returns for the previous three years, current copies of pay stubs, records of any past negative credit history that has since been paid off, and records of any supplemental income you may have. If you are self-employed, you will need all business records and tax returns for the past three years.

Also, if you're going to be receiving money as a gift for the down payment from a friend or relative, have that person prepare a "gift letter" for you, confirming that the money is a gift, not a loan. This letter clarifies that you are not going further into debt and jeopardizing your ability to repay the lender's loan.

Shop around for your mortgage

Not all mortgages are created equal. Doing a little competitive shopping can definitely save you money. Check newspaper ads and ask for referrals from friends and co-workers who have recently gone through the process. Ask each lender you're considering for a disclosure that lists all the loan terms. Be cautious of referrals that come from the real estate agent, especially if the agent receives a "referral fee" from the lender.

Don't forget about those other costs

Even if you've decided to go with a no-points mortgage, CPAs point out that out-of-pocket expenses to close on your new home can add up to a few thousand dollars. If you'll be making your purchase with an adjustable-rate mortgage, be sure you base your budget on what the interest rate will jump to in the second year.

And, remember those paint chips and furniture ads mentioned at the start of this article? The National Association of Home Builders says the average buyer of a new home spends $5,200 in the first year just on appliances, furnishings and changes to the property — so be sure you have a few extra dollars to pay for items like these.

VIEWS ON DENTAL HEALTH

GARY GOCHANOUR, D.D.S.

426-8336

WHEN TEETH LOOK CROWDED

If you're embarrassed because some of your teeth look crowded, it's a condition you don't have to endure. Sometimes crowded teeth are a matter of heredity, a condition you've had since you were born. Your teeth may be too large and your jawbones too small to accommodate them comfortably. When teeth don't have enough room, they tend to crowd up and become overlapped.

The condition may have been caused by the premature loss of "baby" teeth. Primary teeth serve an important purpose by helping to guide the permanent teeth into proper position. If some are lost through decay or accident long before the replacements are ready to erupt, this can cause positioning problems. That's why space maintainers are recommended when primary teeth are lost prematurely.

No matter what the cause of your crowded teeth, it's something that you don't have to endure any longer. It's a condition that can be corrected. Why not now?

Prepared by Custom Column Service as a public service to promote better dental health. From the office of:

Did You Know?

It used to be thought that erupting third molars (wisdom-teeth) caused crowding of the incisors (front teeth). This theory was dismissed when research found that even people with congenitally missing third molars demonstrate this crowding.

Someone to watch over mom

I told my mom she didn't need to look any further than The Meadows at Silver Maples—I could live here! Several months ago, I got a call from my mom's neighbor, saying an ambulance had taken her to the hospital, when she woke up one day on the floor. That's when my brothers and I decided that mom needed more attention and better nutrition. "My first impression of The Meadows was first class. But I told my mom that if it wasn't a match, she didn't need to stay here. Well, it is a match! She's made lots of new friends, and the well-balanced meals and special care helped her health improve. Most of all, she is relieved that her sons know there is someone else to watch over her."

All bike riders should wear safety helmets

JOHN C. WOLF, D.O.

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR OF FAMILY MEDICINE
OHIO UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF
OSTEOPATHIC MEDICINE

FAMILY MEDICINE

Question: I know my son should wear a helmet when he rides his bike. In spite of my efforts to get him to wear his, he rarely does so. How great is the risk for him to ride without a helmet?

Answer: Bicycling is a popular activity in this country, particularly with children. Approximately 80 to 90 percent of children have a bicycle by the second grade, as does 30 percent of the total population.

Bicycling is generally safe, but there is some risk involved. Scrapes and cuts are fairly common, as you know. These minor injuries rarely require attention from a doctor. More serious cuts require a visit to the emergency department.

These bicycle-related injuries are then tallied as part of the risk in bicycling. Tabulation of hospital statistics shows 3 to 7 percent of all visits are due to bicycle-related injuries. This translates into 600,000 emergency department visits every year including about 1,000 deaths.

The greatest risk of serious injury or death to a bicyclist is from head injury. If your son were to sustain a head injury and be lucky enough to survive, he still might suffer grave consequences from his bicycle accident. He could sustain a concussion or more serious injury and be plagued with headaches, dizziness, emotional changes, memory problems or coordination difficulties. These could be present for weeks, or in the worst cases, they might last throughout the rest of his life.

When bicycles and motor vehicles collide, the bicyclist always comes out on the losing side. Twenty-five percent of the nonfatal bicycle-related head injuries and 90 percent of the fatal ones involve this type of collision. Overall, the rate of bicycle-related injuries in males and females is about the same, but males between 5 and 15 years old are at the greatest risk of serious or fatal head injury.

Wearing a helmet significantly reduces the risk of head injury, but to provide this protection it is important that the helmet be of good quality. You should only use one that has been accepted by one of these testing groups: ANSI, the Snell Memorial Foundation, or ASTM. A helmet must also be the proper size and be worn with the strap properly tightened.

I know it can be hard to convince your son to wear his helmet. I suggest that you try to convince him to do this by using all the tool of the parents' trade — including the most important — teaching by example. Always wear your helmet when you ride.

Bicycle safety instruction courses have also been shown to reduce the risk of injury. Many schools and community organizations sponsor these in the summer. I'd suggest that you make arrangements for your son to attend one of these, too.

Onions can be grown for looks, flavor

M.S.U. EXTENSION SERVICE

GARDEN CORNER

The plant family that includes onions, garlic, chives, leeks and shallots also includes a variety of ornamentals grown for their looks rather than their flavor.

These ornamental onions are planted either in the fall, along with other hardy spring-flowering bulbs, or in the early spring. Most bloom in June, producing ball-shaped flowers in yellow, pink, red, purple or blue on stalks ranging from eight to 10 inches tall to four feet.

The edible members of the onion family are planted in early spring. In fact, says Mary McLellan, Master Gardener program coordinator at Michigan State University, they are among the earliest planted vegetables.

"Onions grow best in cool weather," she points out, "and they can stand some frost, so they can be among the first crops to go into the garden."

Scallions or bunching onions — also known as green onions — are grown for fresh eating, use in salads or stir-fries, or other uses where a mild onion flavor is desirable. Sweet slicing onions, such as sweet Spanish and Bermuda, are often used in salads, on hamburgers or for onion rings. Yellow or white globe onions are grown for storage. They are usually hotter than other onions and so are best suited to cooking.

Other edible members of the onion family may also be grown in the home garden.

Leeks, a long-season crop, are usually grown from transplants. The flavor is mild and delicate. The edible part is the long white root.

Garlic is grown from the cloves that make up the garlic bulb.

Shallots are milder flavored than globe onions and are grown from cloves, like garlic. They can mature and be harvested like dry onions or harvested while they're still green and used like green onions.

Chives are perennials that produce attractive purple flowers on erect stalks. They are grown for their leaves rather than underground bulbs.

Well drained soil is a must for onion family crops, whether edible or ornamental, McLellan says. A sandy loam soil is ideal. Early planting minimizes problems with pests such as onion maggot, and plenty of water when bulb producers are forming bulbs enhances yields. Weed control is critical — onions and their relatives can not compete with weeds and soon quit growing if weeds are crowding them.

For dry onions, plant sets or transplants one to two inches deep and two inches apart in rows 12 to 18 inches apart. Sow seeds 1/2 inch deep and thin to two to three inches between plants. The thinnings can be used like green onions.

Scallions or bunching onions can be planted about 1 inch apart. Like dry onions, they can be grown from seeds, sets (little bulbs produced the previous year from seed) or transplants.

Single cloves of garlic and shallots should be planted 1 1/2 inches deep and three inches apart with 12 inches between rows.

Plant leek transplants two to three inches apart in furrows four to six inches deep and fill the furrows gradually as the plants grow. Hilling up soil around the plants increases the white area of the roots.

Chives are grown from seed. Sprinkle seeds in rows 12 inches apart. Space transplants 12 inches apart in the vegetable garden or in an ornamental border or herb garden, or in pots.

Sweet onions tend to need a longer growing season (120 days) than other onion family crops. Transplants are more likely to have time to mature than seed-grown plants. McLellan points out. Space them two to three inches apart in rows one to two feet apart.

To harvest dry onions, garlic and shallots, let the plants mature until the tops dry and fall over. Then pull the bulbs and let them dry thoroughly in a warm, dry spot before storing.

For longest storage, grow storage varieties of yellow globe onions. If they're properly dried and stored near 32 degrees F, they should last all winter. White onions generally do not keep as well as yellow or red varieties. Garlic shallots best used within a few weeks. These and other onions can also be chopped and frozen for later use in plastic bags or freezer containers.

BEAT THE SUMMER HEAT

Dr. Jeff LaHuis, D.V.M.

Summer is here and with it comes the summer temps. Humans can deal with excessive heat by sweating (or by buying central air). Our pets, however, have their own methods of staying cool. Typically this is achieved via panting, inactivity, and seeking cool spots to lay in.

Panting is the most effective way dogs have of cooling off. Air is rapidly drawn in through the nose and, exhaled through the mouth, taking in heat and moisture with it. Breeds with shorted noses, such as Pekingese or Pugs, cannot move as much air and are more prone to heat stroke than say a Labrador. These types of dogs especially should be kept inside and provided with a fan and plenty of water during hot, humid days.

Animals also use their coats to control their body temperature. Well cleaned and groomed coats that are free of mats are better heat emitters than dirty, matted ones.

All animals should always have access to fresh, clean, cool water at all times. Feeding your animal less also will help keep them cool. As food digests, it gives off heat; the more food to digest, the more heat produced.

If you have any questions, please call Westarbor Animal Hospital at (734) 769-5391.

Stolen Vehicle

A 1999 Suzuki motorcycle was reported stolen from the 8100 block of Huron Street July 16. A 39-year-old Dexter man told a Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy that he last rode the bike July 15 and parked it in his driveway next to his house at 10 p.m.

The bike had a steering lock in place but no other anti-theft device, and the keys were in his house at the time of the theft.

The man's son last saw the bike at midnight. When the victim went outside at 5:30 a.m. he noticed that it was missing. Neither he nor his son heard anything during the night. The bike is valued at $8,600.

Fraud

The manager of Huron Camera, 8060 Main St., reported that a 35-year-old Southfield woman wrote a check for a video camera on a closed account. Total loss is $443.36. The case is open pending police contact with the suspect.

Chelsea Village

Suspicious Incident

A suspicious incident was reported at Roberts Paint & Body, 610 E. Industrial Drive, July 19. A 37-year-old woman told Chelsea Police that someone ransacked several vehicles at the business. It appeared as if someone checked the glove boxes and one vehicle sustained damage to the lock. It was unknown whether anything was stolen. The break-ins occurred between 7 p.m. July 18 and 8 a.m. July 19.

A suspicious incident was reported at Seitz's Tavern, 110 W. Middle St., July 18. Officers were called to investigate a complaint of indecent exposure in the rear parking lot. A 32-year-old man was found masturbating in the alley between Mike's Deli and Sylvan Township Hall. When the suspect saw police, he ran, eluding officers. However, a short time later, a bartender at Seitz's Tavern called to report the man was back.

Police spoke with the suspect, who denied masturbating in the alley. He told police that he was urinating. Police noted that the man was intoxicated. He told police that he was a truck driver and his rig was parked at a truck stop on Baker Road. He said he came to Chelsea with another truck driver.

Police drove the man back to his truck. No charges will be pursued since the man is from Tennessee and is not expected to be a problem in Chelsea again, a report said.

Warrant Arrest

Gary J. Linsea, 19, of Canton was arrested July 17 on a warrant in connection with malicious destruction of property in Livonia. His father posted a $200 bond and Linsea was released.

Property Damage

Malicious destruction of property and larceny was reported at Faist-Morrow, 1500 S. Main St., Jan. 14. An employee at the dealership told police that someone broke into a 1993 GMC stationwagon and stole the radio. The man suspects a cellular telephone and radar detector were taken.

The vehicle was parked in the northwest corner of the lot. Damage includes a broken passenger-side window and wiring to the radio.

Malicious destruction of property was reported at Lloyd Bridges Traveland, 1603 S. Main St., July 14. A 1991 Pontiac Grand Am parked at the business was damaged. The amount of damage and when it occurred was not mentioned in the police report. The vehicle belongs to an Ann Arbor man who said he had permission to park it there. Initially, police thought it had been abandoned.

A 1999 Ford Mustang sustained damage while it was parked in the Pamida Discount Center parking lot, 1040 S. Main St., July 18. A Chelsea man told police that he saw some skateboarders in the area earlier. When he returned to his car, the front fender was damaged and the antenna was bent. Police have no suspects.

Larceny

Larceny was reported at Chelsea Industries, 320 N. Main St., July 19. An employee told Chelsea Police that someone broke into the production plant between midnight July 16 and 10:30 p.m. July 18. A door had been forced open and the locks on three employee lockers had been cut. A small tool box and an assortment of tools were reported stolen.

A cellular telephone was reported missing from a Jackson man's vehicle while it was parked downtown. The man said he is not sure whether he lost it or it was stolen. The incident happened in early June. The telephone is valued at $150.

Attempted Theft

A home on Taylor Street sustained damage after Chelsea Police chased a suspected car thief who smashed a stolen vehicle through a wall of the home. The driver, who was spotted coming out of the Palmer Used Car Lot shortly after 3 a.m., fled on foot. The pickup truck he crashed was reported stolen from Brighton Ford-Mercury Inc.

The stolen vehicle was towed to an impound lot for fingerprinting and safekeeping.

The suspect is described as a man in his late teens to early 20s with blond hair and a slender build, weighing 130 to 150 pounds.

Fraud

Fraud was reported at Chelsea State Bank, 1010 S. Main St., July 14. A 17-year-old Gregory boy is being investigated in connection with electronic theft of currency. The bank suspects he made fake electronic deposits and then withdrew $850.95 on the account.

Dexter Township

Property Damage

Malicious destruction of property was reported in the 14300 block of Edgewater Drive July 17. Several tires were reportedly slashed.

The homeowner, a 46-year-old man, said he had several friends over to his cottage. Between 2 a.m. and 4 a.m. the tires on four vehicles were flattened. Police report the damage was consistent with a sharp knife being used to cut the sidewall.

The damage vehicles include a Jeep Cherokee, Ford Ranger, Ford Bronco and Geo Metro, all relatively new. Three of the victims are from Dearborn.

Domestic Assault

Domestic assault was reported in the 9200 block of Thumm Street July 13. A 30-year-old man told police that his roommate, 29, punched him in the face during an argument.

The victim said he was watching TV when his roommate came home at 10 p.m. He said his roommate started accusing him of stealing some of his property and threatened to break his leg if he didn't return it. They yelled back and forth for several minutes, the victim said, before the suspect shoved him and then punched his face.

The suspect told police that he confronted the victim about stealing his property. He said he got up to leave the room after a shouting match and his roommate hit his face with a pillow. The suspect said he slapped his roommate's face and then went to bed.

Drunken Driving

A 40-year-old Canton woman was arrested for operating a vehicle while under the influence of alcohol on Dexter Township Road near Stinchfield Woods Road July 4. A deputy was initially dispatched to the area for a report of a crash at 7:35 p.m. While the driver and her 44-year-old male passenger were taken to St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, the deputy got a statement from a witness.

A 37-year-old Canton man told police that he was standing in the front yard of a home in the 8600 block of Dexter Township Road when he heard the noise of a head-on crash and saw the suspect get out of her vehicle and tell the passenger that he was driving.

Later the driver told another officer that she was not driving the vehicle. She said the man, who the witness said was the passenger, was driving recklessly and was trying to kill her when they crashed. The man, however, said the suspect was driving and both had too much to drink.

The woman, who admitted she had been drinking "a lot," agreed to test at the hospital. The results, however, were not available at the time the report was written.

Home Invasion

Home invasion was reported in the 16200 block of Farnsworth Road July 10. A 53-year-old man told police that his neighbor told him that his home had been burglarized while he was on vacation in Coldwater. The neighbor discovered the break-in July 10 when she went over to water the flowers and saw the door had been forced open.

The theft occurred between July 8 and July 10. A stereo system valued at $100 was stolen and $500 worth of damage was reported to the door.

Larceny

Larceny was reported at the Sullivan Lake boat launch on Embury Road near Joslin Lake Road July 15. A 54-year-old Chelsea man told police that someone stole his 14-foot boat trailer valued at $800.

Two men had borrowed the trailer to take a boat to Sullivan Lake, where they wanted to go fishing. While they were on the lake, the two men reported hearing a vehicle pull into the parking lot. When they returned, the men said the trailer was gone.

Larceny was reported at Tel Com Service Corp., 42 Enterprise Drive, July 13. A 32-year-old Jackson woman, an administrator for the company, told police that a license plate was stolen between July 9 and July 13. The plate was taken off a 1997 Dodge pickup truck registered to the company.

The Livingston County Sheriff's Department contacted the company July 13 after arresting a suspect on a traffic offense who was using the license plate. The suspect is a 33-year-old Manchester man.

Larceny was reported in the 5200 block of Polo Fields Drive June 4. A 50-year-old Belleville man told police that a custom-made set of golf clubs and head covers valued at $1,400 were stolen between 3 p.m. and 5:30 a.m. May 12.

Larceny was reported in Scio Farms Estates, 6655 Jackson Road, July 14. A 14-year-old boy arrested for auto theft admitted to stealing property from several other neighbors in the trailer park. Police recovered a portable radio and cassette player, music tapes, a radar detector and credit cards. The suspect told police that he was hoping to sell the property for money. The items were stolen from unlocked vehicles.

Warrant Arrest

Larry M. Mullins, 22, of Scio Township was arrested on I-94 near Zeeb Road July 5. He was initially stopped for driving a vehicle with an improper license plate. A computer check, however, revealed he was wanted on a bench warrant for driving with improper plates, driving with a suspended driver's license, having an expired license plate and failing to stop and identify himself at a crash scene.

Herbert F. Holston, 44, of Scio Township was arrested at his home in Eagle Pointe apartments, 4296 Eyrie Drive, July 14. He was wanted on three separate warrants for driving with a suspended driver's license.

Fraud

Fraud was reported to police at the sheriff's substation on Zeeb Road July 15. A 41-year-old township man told police that someone used his personal information to purchase an $84,000 Jaguar convertible in April. He found out about it after the credit corporation contacted him.

Drunken Driving

A 52-year-old Pinckney man was arrested for operating a vehicle while under the influence of alcohol on Zeeb Road near I-94 July 16. Police were initially dispatched to a crash in front of McDonald's restaurant. The suspect appeared intoxicated. A test later revealed his blood-alcohol level to be .18 percent, which is more than the legal limit to drive.

The suspect's 1998 Dodge pickup truck sustained front-end damage in the crash and a vehicle driven by a 36-year-old township woman sustained rear-end damage. The woman was attempting to turn into the restaurant when the crash occurred.

A 30-year-old Ann Arbor man was arrested for operating a vehicle while under the influence of alcohol on west-bound I-94 east of Jackson Road July 17. He was stopped at 3:30 a.m. in a Volkswagen Jetta for speeding and reckless driving. He admitted to drinking earlier. A breath test showed he had a .12 percent blood-alcohol level, which is more than the legal limit to drive.

Accidental Fire

An accidental fire was reported at Cambridge Club apartments, 5512 Cambridge Club Circle, July 14. A 28-year-old man told police that he heard crackling and popping noises around 9:45 p.m. Later he noticed smoke coming from a spare bedroom where he keeps his computer. Then he saw flames coming up from behind the VCR in his living room. The man said he grabbed a fire extinguisher and put out the fire.

Scio Township Fire Department responded to the scene. Nearly $1,000 in damage was reported.

Stolen Vehicle

A 1993 Chrysler Concord was reported stolen from Scio Farms Estates, 6655 Jackson Road, July 15. A 26-year-old woman told police that a 14-year-old neighbor boy stole her car. Her boyfriend located the vehicle and detained the suspect for police.

The woman had reported her keys stolen to police a day earlier. A next-door neighbor called the woman at 2 a.m. when he heard a noise and noticed the woman's vehicle was missing.

The woman's boyfriend drove through the trailer park looking for the vehicle when he spotted it with the suspect driving and three passengers inside.

The suspect admitted to police that he took the woman's keys the night before. He stole the car the next day and picked up two friends in Chelsea. They bought cigarettes and drove around before returning to the trailer park. The boy said he intended to return the vehicle after dropping off his friends.

A 1999 Chevrolet Blazer was reported stolen from Rumpy Chevrolet, 3515 Jackson Road, July 10. A salesman told police that a 27-year-old Jackson man came in to test drive a vehicle at 10 a.m. After she didn't return several hours later, he became suspicious and called police.

The vehicle she drove to the dealership was reported stolen by Extreme Dodge in Jackson.

Violation of Personal Protection Order

A 39-year-old township woman told police that her former boyfriend violated a personal protection order July 14. She said he came over at 4:10 p.m. and she immediately called 911. The woman told police that he kept asking her to open the door.

Police found the suspect walking in Scio Farms Estates, where the woman resides. He told police that he had been served the protection order but no one explained it and he didn't read it. He was arrested anyway and warned he could be charged with aggravated stalking.

Sylvan Township

Drunken Driving

A 27-year-old Manchester man was arrested for operating a vehicle while under the influence of alcohol on south-bound M-52 near Scio Church Road July 2. The suspect was initially stopped for speeding. A deputy noticed that the driver had bloodshot and watery eyes, so the man was asked to take a sobriety test.

A preliminary breath test showed the man had a .12 percent blood-alcohol level, which is more than the legal limit to drive. The suspect, however, refused a breath test, by placing his tongue in front of the mouth piece of the instrument. A search warrant was obtained to get a blood sample for further testing. Results of the test were not available when the report was written.

Manchester Township

Property Damage

Malicious destruction of property was reported in the 7500 block of Lamb Road July 10. A 42-year-old woman told police that someone destroyed her mailbox between 11:30 p.m. July 8 and 7 a.m. July 9.

(Compiled by Associate Editor Michelle Rogers based on reports filed with Chelsea Police and the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department.)

Story of 'plot' spreads far and wide as many readers blow their lids

Well, I really thought most people would get it, even the preservationists.

"It" was last week's column about Rite Aid and the company's attempt to build at Old US-12 and M-52.

Just so there is no further misunderstanding, last week's column about the Preservation Chelsea (PC) plot with Rite Aid to gain political power by creating a scare was all fiction.

I thought some of the stuff I wrote was so wild — especially the part about interviewing an informant who was in disguise, complete with a fake voice (which is done in television interviews) — that no one would ever believe it. I was not trying to deceive anyone. Guess it wasn't obvious enough.

Turns out, plenty of people either believed the column or weren't quite sure what to think.

I've had many phone calls as well as people knocking on my front door.

I also heard from Rite Aid. The company apparently got bombarded with phone calls — even some of the company's real executive VPs out of state were wondering what all the fuss was about. A company spokeswoman said she felt like the company was being harassed.

So, if you ever have any doubt this newspaper is well read... My apologies to Rite Aid for creating so much office turmoil.

Anyway, the whole column was fabricated.

Well, not all of it, just the best parts. The parts about the plot and all its elements, the Rite Aid senior VP, the part about the two factions within PC, the part about the informant and his disguise and the part about the yearbook and the Rite Aid junior attorney, those were all pure fiction. Oh, and probably the part about PC members sitting around talking about siding and paint jobs and the like.

Think about it. Isn't a "plot" like the one I invented just about the dumbest thing a company like Rite Aid could do? Having someone from the company in cahoots with a preservationist is about as likely as Ted Nugent conspiring with an animal-rights activist to show that everyone really should wear fake fur.

Anyway, most of the rest of last week's column was, at least, somewhat accurate.

PC is the closest thing we have to a political party (for those who don't vote, our elections are non-partisan), despite its attempts to be "apolitical." PC says part of its mission is educating the community about issues (see this week's letter from president Kim Myles), but there's a very fine line between education and activism.

People with preservation

BRIAN HAMILTON

OPENING REMARKS

sympathies do dominate Village Council.

Also, there was a petition circulated that scared a lot of people, although it was reportedly not inspired by PC. I did see photos of suburban Rite Aid stores, one even superimposed on a postcard of Chelsea. And someone gave me a long printout about litigation regarding the company's supposed business practices. Those things are true.

What does all this mean? Who knows? It was all meant to poke fun at the changing political scene — it was all political satire — and how seriously some people are taking it. I thought, hey, this Rite Aid episode couldn't have turned out any better for the preservationists if they had scripted it themselves. So I did it for them.

In retrospect, I'm glad I didn't run the column two months ago — when I originally wrote most of it — while negotiations with the village were still under way.

Rite Aid is one of the best things to happen to PC, partly because it did draw a lot of attention to the issue of preserving historic buildings and the character of the community.

It is also true that there is plenty of interest in having a historic district established, and one of the reasons mentioned is that it will deter any proposed widening of M-52 through town. I know that a lot of people are very skeptical about the idea, partly because these districts have gotten a lot of bad press, especially in Ann Arbor.

It's too early to tell whether such a district is a good idea for Chelsea or not. I, for one, don't know enough about it to judge. I have talked to people who swear it's the best thing that ever happened to their towns. I have talked to other people who believe they are nothing more than a bureaucratic pain in the neck.

Supporters of the historic district concept have a lot of educating to do.

We, at The Standard, will be glad to help with that educational process. Among other avenues, we invite letters and guest editorials from all sides of the issue.

In the meantime, tell a joke to a preservationist. Promise them you won't paint your home or building hunter orange. They need a little humor.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Preservation Chelsea's real mission defined

Even after having learned that your editorial was intended to be a joke, we remain dismayed over your misrepresentation of Preservation Chelsea's activities and motivations.

Preservation Chelsea is apolitical. Our charter specifically prohibits political activities.

All Village Council members are voted into office by the majority of voters.

All petition efforts regarding Rite Aid were designed, organized and carried out by private citizens. They were not Preservation Chelsea initiatives.

As an organization, we will not make public pronouncements against Rite Aid or any other company.

Preservation Chelsea's position regarding the property at M-52 and Old US-12 is to promote the education of the community about its intended use and to ensure community awareness of any potential developer's citizenship record and development policy. In the case of Rite Aid, their corporate development policies are stated on the Rite Aid Web site.

Preservation Chelsea has communicated often with the Pierce family, who owns the property at M-52 and Old US-12. We continue to offer help in finding a buyer for the property who will, at best, use the charming stone buildings as part of any development, but minimally will develop something beautiful, unique, profitable and in character for our village gateway.

Preservation Chelsea's goal is to promote meaningful growth, with development that is in harmony with the character of the village and for the village to be pro-active through zoning ordinances that enable our planning commission to ensure development that is aesthetically consistent and pedestrian friendly.

Preservation Chelsea supports the proposed downtown historic district, but we are not its founders. The historic district is defined and created by the Historic District Commission. A public hearing on this matter will be held on Sept. 28.

The threat of widening M-52 is real. Since our mission statement includes promoting awareness, we will continue to take opportunities to heighten citizen awareness of these real threats.

A Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) employee who attended a National Trust for Historic Preservation convention in Chicago stated that the presence of a historic district always deters MDOT's efforts to widen a state thoroughway and generally results in a re-route of the road. (I would offer this individual's name but I have been unable on short notice to contact this person to ask permission.)

Preservation Chelsea supports the efforts of the Village Council, DDA and library board to acquire the Staffan-Mitchell property for the expansion of the McKune Library and its evolution to a regional library.

Preservation Chelsea is NOT anti-business or anti-growth. Our mission statement guides all our activities. It reads:

"It is our mission to preserve Chelsea as a village rich with history and charm, reflected by beautiful historic buildings, surrounding farmlands, and as found in our beautiful and vibrant village center. We aim to work through education, offering to ourselves and the community the history of Chelsea as well as the issues shaping our future."

We intend actively to preserve historic landmarks and to have a voice in all issues that affect any possible decentralization of our village. It is our intention to pursue this mission with full involvement and input from the merchants and citizens of Chelsea and to act in ways that make sense for the preservation of Chelsea's charm and historic integrity while supporting a vibrant and successful downtown.

Preservation Chelsea isn't just about preserving old buildings. It's about preserving the economic vitality, character and heritage of our community and the quality of life that it offers. We know that not all things can or should be preserved. Preservation is about making intelligent decisions about what to preserve and about adaptive re-use of old buildings in order to renew their economic vitality while preserving their character.

We are reasonable, hard-working people. We are not hysterical. We invite you, your reporters and the entire community to join us at our next meeting on Sunday, July 25, at 7 p.m. in Pierce Park where we will be having an ice cream social. The whole family is welcome and we are working on providing childcare while we conduct a brief meeting to discuss upcoming community events that we support.

We will be planning our volunteer efforts for our Summer Fest booth, the fair parade entry in August, coordination of effort with Chelsea Area Historic Society, our annual Labor Day block party celebration, our Festival of Lights home tour and the Gingerbread House entries for December. We will remind everyone of upcoming public hearing events to promote citizen awareness.

We are about volunteerism, community involvement and support, and serving as a resource for information not only to our members, but to all of Chelsea. Please join us on Sunday.

The Chelsea Standard's participation in celebrating citizen initiative and community effort would be a welcome and refreshing change.

Kim Myles
President, Preservation Chelsea

Farmer Jack sought fairness

This letter is in response to the July 15 letter to the editor from Janice Ortring.

Since my name appears in the letter of July 15 without explanation and proper background, I feel compelled to at least present a little more data. Ortring's letter was titled "Farmer Jack should live by village rules." (Editor's note: The titles for letters are chosen by the newspaper, not the letter writer.)

Farmer Jack is suing the village over fees it believes to be unfair and inequitable. The important information that somehow never was provided in the letter includes the fact that the village's consultant, the consultant who developed the fee system, advised the village to lower the fee schedule for grocery stores to at least half their current rate.

Why? Because the data for the fee schedule was developed in the early '70s and grocery-store operations have changed considerably since that time. Additionally, the consultant advised the village to monitor the store's water usage for at least three years and use the data to set a proper rate.

This monitoring involved summing the village water meter readings over the period, dividing by the total number of days in the monitoring involved summing the village water meter readings over the period, dividing by the total number of days in the monitoring period, and comparing the value to the fixed residential value. This is not rocket science! This is an approach to a fair and equitable fee schedule.

Yes! I did motion to lower the fee schedule and to add monitoring, based upon the consultant's advice. The council chose not to follow the advice and, as a result, Farmer Jack is suing for relief. Now, I ask the residents, who is responsible for this lawsuit? Farmer Jack gave council the opportunity to settle this issue outside of a courtroom.

It is an interesting concept to suggest Farmer Jack pay what the village demands even if it is not fair and equitable. And the idea they would sue for relief ensures they should be labeled as "poor citizens." I have been under the impression that fighting a perceived inequity was an American concept, a right and privilege we cherish. Perhaps that is one more right and privilege we are losing in the name of "good citizenship!"

Choice of law firm should be questioned

How does the Chelsea school board justify its decision to return Thrun, Maatsch & Nordberg as the Chelsea School District attorneys?

Consider the following, as reported from Ann Arbor, the gist of which is as follows:

The law firm in question, while employed by the Ann Arbor School District, gave such poor legal advice (at the cost of about $56,000 for legal fees) that now the Ann Arbor School District is in the process of paying millions of tax dollars in damages to their past substitute teachers.

Obviously, Thrun, Maatsch & Nordberg no longer are employed by the Ann Arbor School District.

Why should that law firm be retained by the Chelsea School District?

W.F. Storey

Chelsea teachers wonderful group

I would like to say how much I enjoy reading the weekly articles about the Chelsea school teachers.

Since I have only lived in Chelsea for two years and do not know them, this is a wonderful way to get to know them. My observation of the past interviews reveal that they are all a very dedicated group. They put their classroom teaching and students first and their personal lives last.

Chelsea citizens should be very proud of this wonderful group of teachers.

Top 10 reasons for lawsuit against village

Top 10 reasons why Farmer Jack is suing the village:

10. They are experimenting with different tactics to endear themselves with communities.

9. Their building is sliding to the north, which is a higher rent district.

8. They feel excluded from being the true gateway to Chelsea.

7. They have been told "no hanging cows allowed."

6. M-52 is blocking their view, man.

5. They thought PMU (Planned Mix Use) stood for "Poor Merchant Utilities."

4. They claim that THEIR clock tower was here first.

3. They need to accumulate extra finances to help pay for flying concrete blocks.

2. Since Rite Aid bailed they fear FFS, Fatal Franchise Syndrome.

1. Despite the name it turns out they really don't like farmers.

New company provides vital statistics in emergencies

By Eric Bowen
Staff Writer

In a life-threatening emergency, a few minutes can be the difference between a patient's survival and untimely death. Paramedics have to make swift decisions about everything from medications to jump-starting a person's heart with an electric jolt.

Three Chelsea residents hope they can shave a few precious moments off of a paramedic's response time. The local men have developed a medical identification card that contains information vital to a medical practitioner — information that could improve a patient's chances in an emergency.

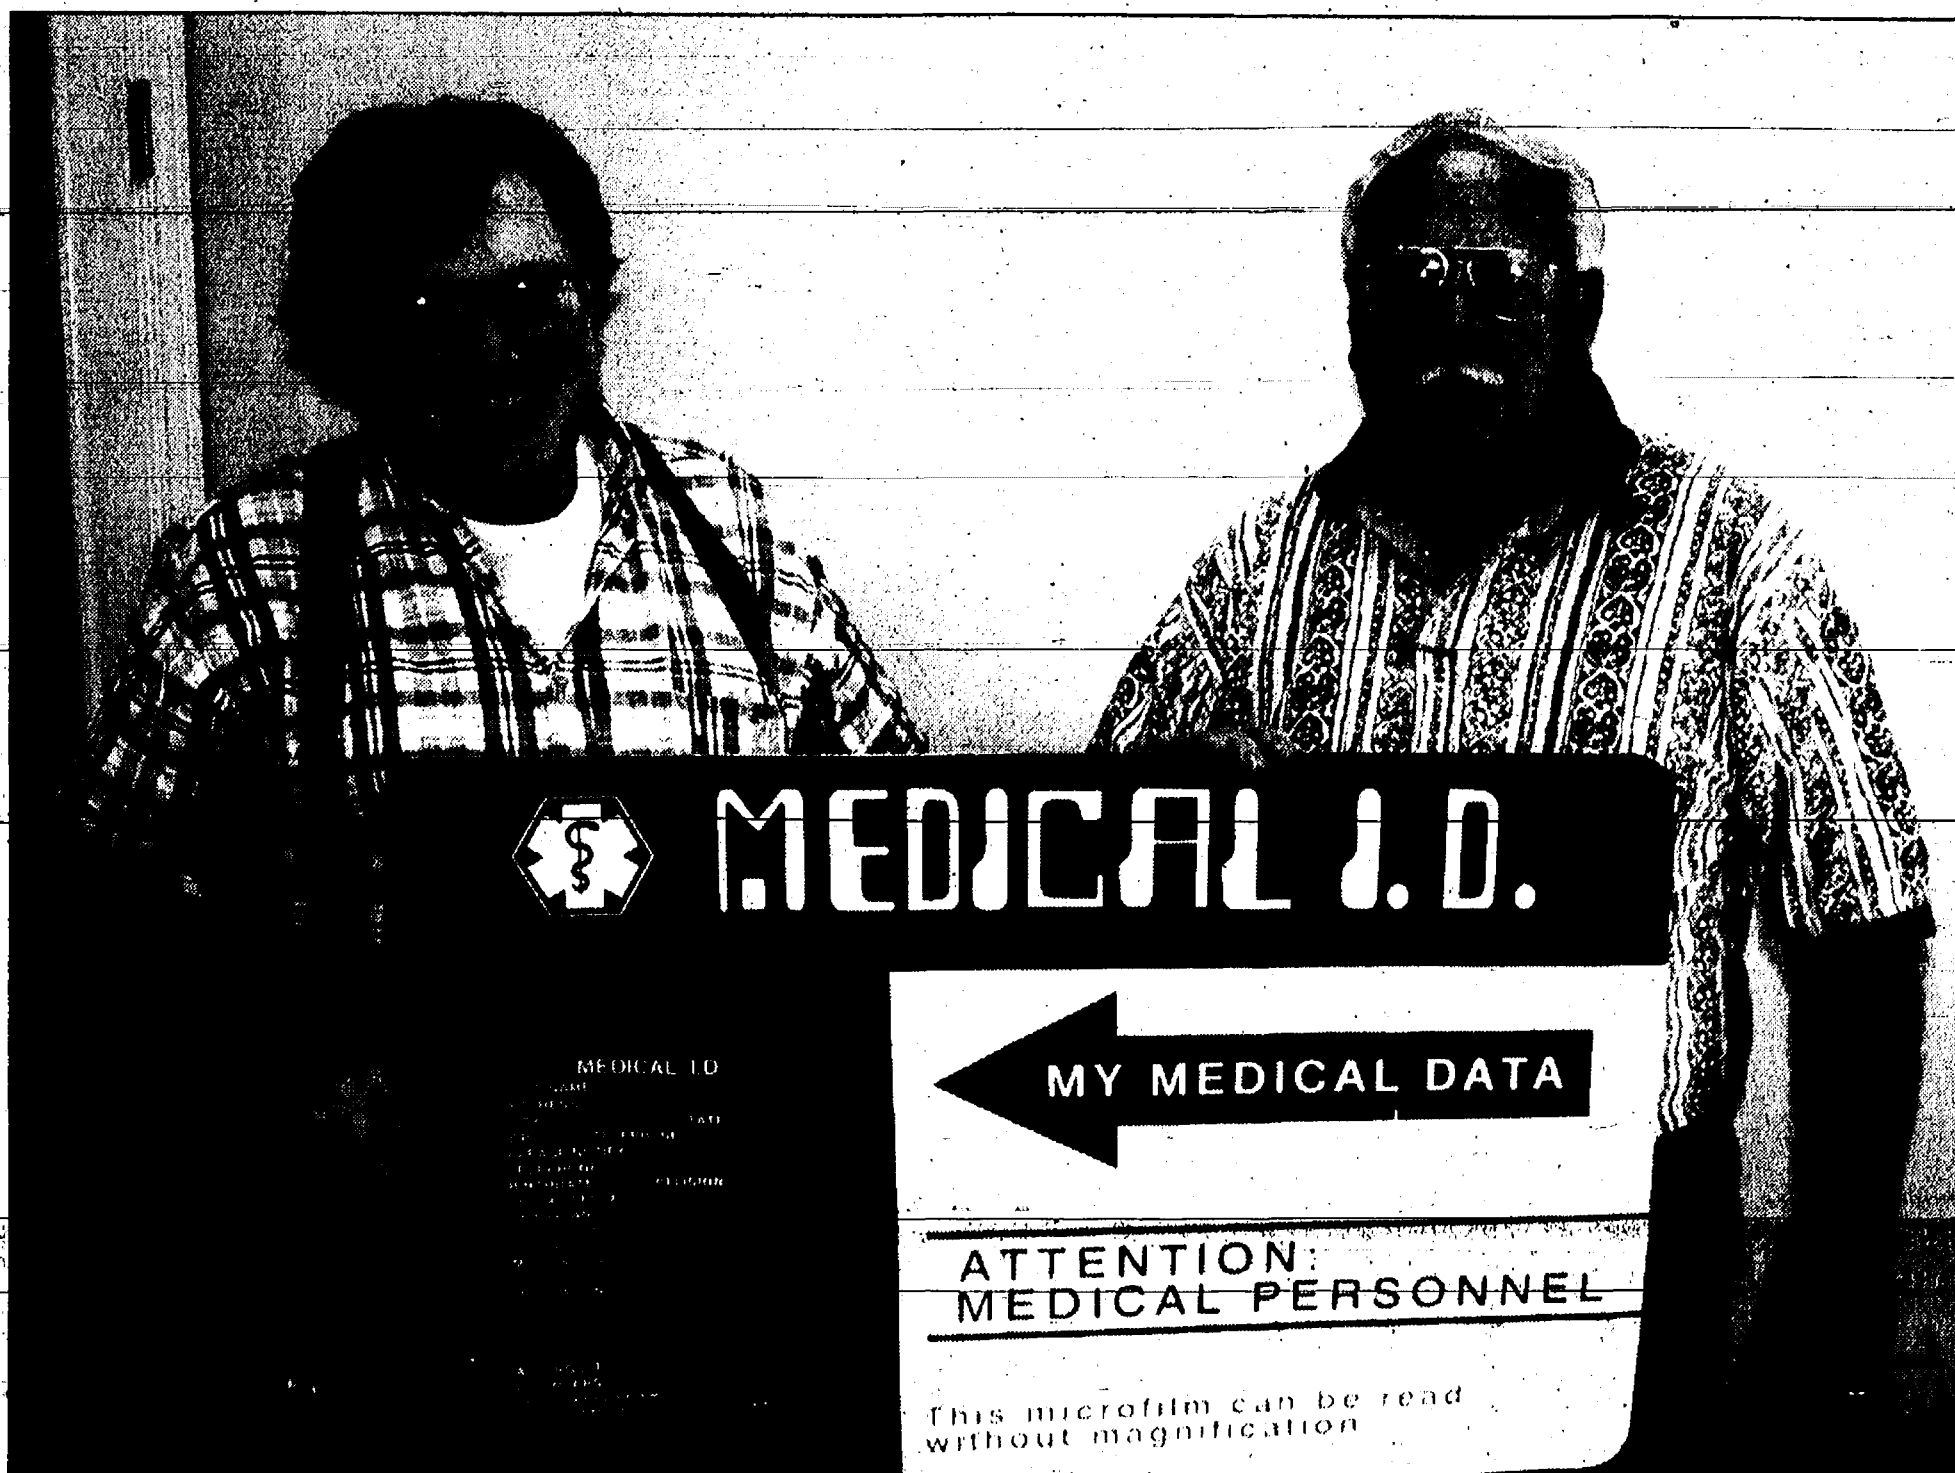

"Someday this card might save your life," says Steve Leeman, managing director of Medical ID Co. as he recites the company's slogan. "The card can speak for someone if they can't speak for themselves."

The medical ID card contains basic information, such as a patient's name, address and emergency contacts. But it goes further to include allergies, medications and blood type, information Leeman says is important in treating patients.

To receive the card, a patient fills out a form, then mails it to the Medical ID headquarters in Chelsea. The company takes the information on the form and reduces it to the size of a credit card, which can then be placed in the purchaser's wallet or purse behind a person's driver's license for easy access.

The cards come in two varieties, Leeman says. The original card uses microfilm to take a picture of the submitted form, which is then embedded in a laminated card. The print is large enough for emergency personnel to read without magnification.

The newer model employs a typesetter to print the information on the card so it is easily

Longtime Chelsea residents Dick Lee (left) and Steve Leeman have developed an identification card that holds all of the medical information doctors and paramedics would need in an emergency, yet it fits inside a wallet or purse. The two, along with their partner David Jachalke, started the business venture in January and have recently begun rolling the production cards out to the public. Pictured, Lee and Leeman show off a larger-than-life-size card.

readable in an emergency.

In either case, Leeman says, none of the medical data is kept on hand at Medical ID Co. All of the information is destroyed or returned after the card is made to protect a patient's privacy.

The company also does not sell its mailing list to outside parties.

Director of Business and Development Dick Lee says he and his two partners — the other is Vice President of Manufacturing David Jachalke — began developing the ID card in early January. Lee says the three struck on the idea from the experience of Leeman's wife, a registered nurse, and the emergency background of Jachalke, who is a retired police officer.

Lee says the project took on more meaning in February when a boiler exploded at the Ford Rouge plant in Dearborn. The three men began to think that timely information given to emergency workers could have helped save the lives of some of the explosion's victims.

"There's a crisis time when things have to be done to impact treatment," Leeman says. "We thought there has to be a way to get the information to (paramedics) to start treatment on a person."

Out of that realization grew the idea of providing a simple and inexpensive way to give a patient's medical information. While several companies sell computerized medical cards, Lee says their product can be used without a computer and without the high cost of maintaining a computerized network.

The card also allows medical personnel to access information at all hours of the day and night, Leeman says. Often emergencies happen when a patient's regular doctor's office is closed and medical records cannot be shared easily.

Lee says the company had to overcome several stumbling blocks on the road to a finished product.

He says the first was the price tag, currently $8.95, which Lee wanted to keep under the cost of a typical $10 co-payment. Lee says the company also had to devise a way so the information could be easily read and noticed by paramedics in the field.

To this end, Lee says the company consulted with emergency medical technicians to improve the information needed. The collaboration resulted in a redesigned card that was easier to read and had new information, such as organ donations.

Lee and his fellow entrepreneurs also had a setback when the Tennessee-based printing company they had contracted with to create the cards went out of business. That's when they decided to move the entire operation to Chelsea.

The Chelsea connection was an easy one for all three part-

McGuire combines love of science, teaching

By Michelle Rogers
Associate Editor

Growing up in Manchester, Molly McGuire quenched her scientific thirst by exploring the outdoors and figuring out on her own what made things tick.

Years later, she is sharing her lifelong interest in science with students at Chelsea High School.

McGuire was hired by the school district five years ago to teach chemistry after completing a semesterlong student teaching assignment in Chelsea. Science teachers Barb Pruess and Sandy Kutschinski were her mentors.

It was not by accident that McGuire ended up as a student teacher in Chelsea. She had requested the assignment while studying to become a teacher at Eastern Michigan University.

"I knew (Chelsea) was a growing community and supportive of the schools. So I knew it would be a pretty positive experience," McGuire says is the reason she asked to be placed here. McGuire majored in chemistry and biology, earning her bachelor's degree in 1994. She was hired at the end of her student-teaching assignment that year.

While McGuire had a strong interest in science growing up, she says the drive to become a teacher was always there, too. "I think I knew all along. I wanted to be a teacher," McGuire says. "I really liked the sciences and found them interesting. I also liked the feeling of helping people in that area who were struggling, giving them new information and maybe turning them onto something they didn't know about."

As a student in Manchester, McGuire says her high school economics teacher was a role model to her.

"She was super energetic and she was the first teacher we had who was totally interested in our world," McGuire says.

Today she tries to emulate that teacher, who has since moved on. McGuire says she enjoys not only sharing her knowledge about science but guiding students who are seeking advice about the future. She says many turn to her about such topics as where to go to college.

"That's neat — helping them pick and choose and make decisions that will affect them for the rest of their lives," she says.

"I enjoy that relationship. It's more than getting up in front of class and telling them about chemistry."

It's at the high school level where McGuire has found her niche. She is certified to teach grades 7-12 and says initially she would have worked at any grade level. But now she has no intention of leaving.

"I like it here. (High school students) are a little more in control," McGuire says. "They're really thinking. 'How does this affect me?' You can see them trying to find that information."

What McGuire says she enjoys most about high school students is that she can relate to them as adults.

"You can have more adult conversations with them," she says. "You can talk to them about stuff happening in their communities or the world around them."

"They're fun and super energetic. They're creative. They're positive. I feel like they enjoy being (in class) and that helps me. I enjoy coming in and working with them."

For the most part, McGuire teaches sophomores, juniors and seniors. She has clear expectations of them and says most abide by her rules.

"I expect them to listen to each other, to try to learn from each other, to respect each other," McGuire says. "When they're in my classroom, I expect them to focus and pay attention to what's going on."

"I rarely have any problems. The class runs really smoothly from bell to bell, and hopefully they get something out of it."

they can understand," McGuire says. "Chemistry is pretty straightforward. There isn't a whole lot of subjectiveness. (Students) know when they get the right answers."

"They can read about it, do some problems and actually make it happen," is what McGuire says she finds exciting about the subject she teaches.

McGuire takes pride in her work and says she puts in a lot of extra time developing lesson plans. As a result, she hopes students see her dedication. She also hopes they see other sides to her.

"I hope they perceive me as positive, as a role model, as a moral person — somebody they can come to with questions — and hard working," she says. "I hope they see I have an

Most Improved Player

David Fishburn of Chelsea was named the most improved player in all of the Ann Arbor Amateur Hockey Association for the 1998-99 season. Shown with David are coach Mike Redeka and referee John McGovern.

Fishing tradition comes from family

Do you remember the first time you went fishing? Chances are it was when you were younger and you were probably accompanied by an adult who enjoyed fishing to some extent, and who thought that you might enjoy it also, if given the chance.

I have an uncle to thank for my first fishing experience. Many times I had listened to him tell about the enjoyment he got from a day on the water and after much hinting and begging he finally included me on one of his Sunday trips to the lake.

I don't remember whether we caught anything to brag about, but that wasn't the important point here. The part I remember was that I was included, and this is a feeling that many young people don't always have in this day and age.

My uncle went on to become a champion fisherman, winning many contests in the Saginaw area, and I went on to become an average fisherman.

Each year, thousands of kids, both boys and girls, are introduced to the sport of fishing by some thoughtful adult who was probably given this same opportunity by another thoughtful adult at some time in their younger days.

There are now several states that have programs set up to give kids the opportunity to enjoy fishing. Texas has a program called "Kidfish," sponsored by the state's parks and wildlife foundation.

In Florida there is a non-profit organization called, "Florida Fishing and Boating

JERRY D. POSEY

ABOUT THE OUTDOORS

Buddies" that is very active. Over the past three years they have introduced over 30,000 kids to fishing and boating for the first time.

Some states also have a Bass Master program called "Casting Kids" that will reach over 100,000 kids this year. Not all of these kids will be first timers, but it will allow the repeaters to build on their skills and continue to enjoy a good clean outdoor activity.

Many kids do not have an active fisherman in their immediate family and many do not know a dry fly from a nightcrawler. But, if given the chance, some of these kids could develop into people who are more interested in our natural resources, and the fish and wild game available in our state.

Personally I have had the opportunity to introduce several youngsters to their first day of fishing, and I have seen several of them develop to the point where they can fish circles around me.

If a child is introduced to this type of activity at an early age it may help to fill up some of the spare time later in life when he could be doing much worse things. I have yet to hear of a kid getting into trouble with the law, (or his neighbors), while he was fishing off the bridge at the edge of town.

When inviting a young person to join you on a trip to the lake or river, plan on supplying the necessary equipment the guest will be using. Most non-fishermen will not have even a pole or rod when invited on their first trip but I have seen some of these avid fans show up for the second or third venture with better equipment than I own.

Starting a young fisherman out right is a good way to introduce him or her to the conservation and protection of our natural resources.

Kids whose parents fish have a better chance to learn about fishing. Those who come from non-fishing families, or one-parent households, don't always discover the enjoyment that can be gained by a day of fishing. The fresh air, the exercise, or the companionship are all part of what makes an experience that won't soon be forgotten.

Few people fish just for the meal that can be obtained on a lucky day, but if a nice catch can be taken on the first time out, the youth should be given the chance to join in on the cleaning of the catch and the meal that was the goal the unknowing fisherman was striving for in the first place.

If the trip to the water is not a successful one, the beginner should be made aware of the experience that was gained by the trip. You might point out that the two of you were just practicing for the next time out.

Some things take a lot of practice and I've found fishing to be one of them, so take a kid fishing. Let him get in a little practice.

WHAT DOES THE BIBLE SAY ON...Y2K...???

The Bible says NOTHING concerning Y2K, although you might have thought differently. The fallacy that the Bible gives us the time of the Second Coming of Christ is simply not true. The Bible does address the Second coming, the return of Christ as being "as a thief in the night" (1 Thes 5:2-4). And other signs that are given are as follows:

1. The Lord himself will come down from Heaven (1 Thes 4:16)
2. There will be a loud command, the voice of the archangel and the trumpet call of God. (1 Thes 4:16)
3. Dead Christians will rise first and the living Christians will meet Jesus in the clouds (1 Thes 4:17)
4. The Righteous will go to Heaven with Jesus.

Obviously we were NOT meant to know when Jesus would return, so why would God make it at a time when people expect? If you have been told that this will be the time, then it is a lie, as God cannot break a promise. Prepare yourself for the Second Coming and then you will always be prepared for the return of God, and not have to worry about meaningless tales of Y2K.

NEW BUSINESS

Clothing, glass, computer companies open

A company specializing in clothing with a Chelsea identity has opened at 106 S. Main St. in Chelsea.

Work of Ort, owned by Todd and Janice Ortbring, who also own the Edgar Norman Creative advertising agency, features custom designs for Chelsea T-shirts, hats and sweatshirts. Some will also contain the Chelsea High School bulldog. Graphics will feature local scenes and "warm, feel-good sayings. A full range of sizes is available for children and adults.

This fall, the company plans to offer derby hats, jackets and other outdoor wear.

"The idea really came from a shopping experience we had last fall when we were looking for cool Chelsea bulldog sweatshirts for our kids," said Todd Ortbring.

"We decided to put our creative minds to work and developed our own line of Chelsea wearables that are designed, produced and sold right here in town."

Ortbring says that a portion of the proceeds will be donated to Chelsea Area Responding to Teens (CART).

For more information call 433-1311.

The Dexter area also has two new businesses.

The Glass Touch at 2484 Wylie Road, is owned and operated by Otto and Lynn Sorg.

The business specializes in decorative glass panels for entry doors, with a showroom in the Dexter Commerce Building downtown. The showroom is open by appointment only.

The company takes existing front door or sidelight panels and inserts a decorative, leaded glass panel into it, saving the replacement of the existing door. However, the company will replace an entire door, if necessary.

The concept is also applicable to cabinets.

The company will also make custom glass panels for any use, as well as repair glass objects such as lamp shades and stained glass panels.

The Sorgs had operated the glass business as part of Sorg Electric Repair Co. in Canton. In January, the roof of their building caved in and put them out of business. They're rebuilding it in Dexter.

For more information call (313) 514-1191.

The other recently established business is called Your Training Partner, located at 5894 Dexter-Pinckney Road.

The company, operated by Jennifer Rice, brings computer trainers to the job site to give instruction in specialized software.

"I have trained several engineering and administrative clients while they were eating lunch," Rice says.

"In order for them to maximize their efficiency, they really need customized training to learn only the features of a program that they need to use on a daily basis. We are ideal for companies that cannot afford their staff being out of the office for training on features that they may never use."

U-M School of Dentistry offering free mouth guards

In exchange for a few hours on a summer Saturday, active kids and adults can get a mouthful of protection from sports injuries.

On July 31, the University of Michigan School of Dentistry will offer free, customized athletic mouth guards to elementary, middle school, high school and college students and the general public.

Impressions will be made 9 a.m.-noon on the third floor of the School of Dentistry Building. Once in the dental chair, the impression process takes about 20 minutes. (Depending on the crowd, there may be a 30- to 45-minute wait for a free chair). The finished guards will be available for fitting and pickup one to three hours after the impressions are made.

As they have every summer since 1987, U-M School of Dentistry faculty and students and several local dentists will volunteer their time to make the protective guards. No appointments are necessary — it's first-come, first-served while supplies last. The clinic will have supplies for making about 125 mouth guards in a variety of colors, and organizers recommend arriving early to get the best choice. Schools may also send their athletic trainers to receive instruction in the proper use of mouth guards.

Mouth guards not only protect the teeth, lips, cheek and tongue, they also help prevent head and neck injuries such as concussions and jaw fractures, says William C. Godwin, U-M professor emeritus of dentistry and a specialist in sports dentistry.

According to the American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry, dental and facial injuries have been significantly reduced in sports such as football, lacrosse and ice hockey, in which kids are required to wear protective equipment. However, such injuries are also a risk in other sports and leisure activities such as soccer, volleyball, gymnastics, skateboarding, bicycling and in-line skating. The Academy recommends protective equipment for kids participating in all such activities.

Custom-made mouth guards are considerably more comfortable than off-the-shelf guards sold in stores, Godwin notes. And the more comfortable the guards are, the more likely kids are to wear them.

Godwin stresses that the mouth guard clinic is not just for Ann Arbor residents and not just for kids. In previous years, adults who participate in whitewater kayaking, karate, taekwon-do, touch football, soccer and weightlifting have been fitted with mouth guards.

The clinic is funded by grant from Samuel Harris, U-M dental graduate who practices in Detroit.

This high-energy audience-participation event features the Pippin Puppets entertaining children of all ages with music, songs and laughter. The program is free and open to everyone. No registration is required.

"Waltzing Matilda" is part of this year's "G'Day for Reading" Summer Reading Program, offered to families throughout the summer.

Morning comes early in African village

TIM FISCHER

LETTERS FROM AFRICA

Tap, tap, tap . . . tap, tap, Tap.
 "What on earth could that be," I mumbled somewhere halfway between a restless slumber and a premature reveille.
 Tap, tap, tap . . . tap, tap, tap. A small voice cries the African name the village elders bestowed upon me, "Mauri Sidibe," and again with more volume, "Mauri."

 I cover my head with a pillow and turn over in my sweat-soaked sheets, with insolence I refuse to acknowledge that morning has broken. The rusty hinges of my door creak and I peer from under my pillow to view the pixed image of a little girl through my mosquito net.
 "I ni sògoma," I grudgingly offer. "Nsé," she replies. "hére tiénna," I return. I ka kéne wà?" I continue and finally come to the end of the equivalent to our "good morning."

"What time is it?" I try in French. She responds with a annoyed look. I look at my watch, 5:45 a.m. I want to explain to her that I have been a college student for the past five years, and that in all those years I have only been up this early if I didn't go to bed; either out of academic necessity or reasons purely social.
 Unfortunately, however, the few nouns I know in Dioula (the local language) hardly come close to communicating immediate necessities, let alone the frivolous.
 This little girl brings me water for bathing and drinking every morning, and also doubles as an annoyingly punctual (and effective) alarm clock.

 The heat of the previous day subsides a bit for two or three hours in the early morning, creating a small window for potentially restful sleep; half of which however, the water girl interrupts.
 She impatiently tells me that it is time to get up and bathe. Eventually I relent. Thusly, and reluctantly, I begin my day, as I have for the last two months and will until I can train my mouth to construct the phrase in Dioula: "Go away and don't come back until the sun is in the middle of the sky."

Land trust to produce grower directory

The Washtenaw-Potawatomi Land Trust (WPLT) is seeking to contact farmers for inclusion in a grower directory, to be published later this year.
 The directory will serve as a resource for consumers, businesses and restaurants who wish to buy locally grown food. Local growers of fresh foods are encouraged to contact WPLT to have their information included in the guide. This service is free of charge.

 The farm directory is the first attempt to compile a comprehensive list of Washtenaw County growers. Using the guide, consumers and businesses would be able to look up farms according to the products they sell. The project is part of WPLT's ongoing effort to build understanding between urban and rural communities.

 The land trust is dedicated to preserving farmland, natural areas, and open space in Washtenaw County. A major part of the organization's focus is educating the public on land use and conservation issues.

WPLT currently owns two nature preserves and holds conservation easements on another three properties. A total of some 230 acres of land are protected through these methods.
 Farmers who would like to be included in the farm directory should contact WPLT's Executive Director Barry Lonik at (734) 426-3669, by e-mail at BLonik13@aol.com or write to P.O. Box 186, Dexter, MI 48130.

FARM FACTS

In 1804, a Yankee clipper ship brought soybeans to the United States. When leaving China, the sailors loaded the ship with soybeans as inexpensive ballast. When they arrived in the United States, they dumped the beans to make room for cargo.
 During the Civil War, soldiers used soybeans as "coffee berries" to brew "coffee" when real coffee beans were scarce.

A long-running energy deficit may play a role in the suppressed nutrition and growth caused by Rett Syndrome, according to studies conducted at the Children's Nutrition Research Center in Houston, Texas. A surgically implanted gastrostomy device delivers nutrients to the body while the patient sleeps. This allowed for one 7-year-old patient in the study to increase her weight from 31 pounds to 48 in one year, allowing her to sit up for the first time. Rett Syndrome is a debilitating disorder that strikes only girls and causes mental retardation and growth failure. There is currently no cure for this disease.
 Guayule, a shrub that yields high quality, hypoallergenic latex, is now easier to genetically engineer. Native to Texas, the Guayule can be processed to yield milky latex that is free of allergens that can cause severe reactions including anaphylactic shock. It is estimated that 20 million Americans are allergic to the latex found in gloves, condoms and other products made from the Brazilian rubber tree.
 Onions contain a mild antibiotic that fights infections, soothes burns, tames bee stings and relieves the itch of athlete's foot.
 Farming has changed dramatically over the last 150 years, for example:
 1850 — About 75 to 90 hours of labor are required to produce 100 bushels of corn with a walking plow, harrow and hand planting. Yields are about 40 bushels per acre. The self-governing windmill is perfected.
 1900 — The amount of labor needed to produce 100 bushels of corn is down to 35 to 40 hours using a two-bottom gang plow, disk and peg-tooth harrow, and two-row planter. Yields are still about 40 bushels per acre.
 1950 — Commercial fertilizer use helps increase yields. One acre now yields 50 bushels of corn. A farmer works 10 to 14 hours to produce 100 bushels of corn with a tractor, three-bottom plow, disk harrow, four-row planter and two-row picker. Farmers make up 12.2 percent of population.
 Today — Only two labor hours and one acre of land are required to produce 100 bushels of corn with a farmer using a tractor, five-bottom, 25-foot plow; 25-foot tandem disk; planter; 25-foot herbicide applicator; 15-foot self-propelled combine; and trucks. Farm population is only 1.9 percent of the total population.

Real goal of prison should be rehabilitation of criminal

DON LINDMAN
AMY FOUNDATION

REAL ANSWERS

Frank, a friend of mine since we both were children, was convicted of shooting and killing a gas station attendant during a robbery, and he was given a life sentence in the state penitentiary.

While he was in prison, however, he experienced a major change in his life — he committed his life to Jesus and became a changed man. Mutual friends of ours who visited him regularly saw the change, and after they were convinced that it was real they began to try to find a way he could be paroled.

It wasn't easy. Government, and society in general, doesn't like to parole convicted murderers. But when the warden said publicly that "this man shouldn't be here in prison," the parole board listened. After 15 years behind bars, Frank was paroled and became a free man.

He married, raised a family, was a faithful churchman, and established himself in a barbering career. For 30 years he has served as an example of the kind of citizen we want a person to be if the purpose of imprisonment is reformation and rehabilitation.

But is that the purpose? Early in 1998 the state of Texas executed a woman who also had a conversion experience. Karla Faye Tucker had demonstrated a changed life long enough so that even those who had helped convict her were convinced the change was real and permanent.

But she had murdered two people, and those with the ability to do so refused to commute the death sentence. The question was debated as to whether the purpose of incarceration is punishment or rehabilitation, and the state of Texas came down on the side of punishment.

Now the question is being raised again with the arrest of Sara Jane Olson in St. Paul, Minn. In her former life as Kathleen Soliah, Olson was active in the Symbionese Liberation Army of the early '70s and is accused of committing a number of serious crimes while active in that group. She went underground, surfaced in St. Paul under her new name, and for 25 years has lived a model life by most standards.

Married to a physician, she has served as a missionary with him in Africa. The stay-at-home mother of three daughters is involved in church and community theater, volunteers in charitable causes, and has been a good neighbor. Her conduct was so exemplary no one even thought to connect her with something as radical as her past life.

She has demonstrated that she has been rehabilitated. The state of Minnesota, however, apparently will insist that she also be punished and punished the full amount for her lawbreaking. Recognizing the difficulty these situations present, I find myself wishing we would come down on the side of rehabilitation.

For many of us, a regular part of our weekly worship is the saying of these words: "...And forgive us our sins, as we forgive those who sin against us." How often should I forgive my brother? Simon Peter asked Jesus. Should I do it seven times?

Jesus caught him and us off guard when he answered: "Seventy times seven!" In other words, as many times as we are asked to forgive.

Those on the strict enforcement side of the argument frequently say that to commute a sentence would be to tell people that if they change their behavior they can be set free. My reaction is that it would be great to be able to release into society a whole bunch of people who have been changed significantly for the better. What a way to help alleviate the problem of overcrowded prisons!

Maybe Sara Jane Olson should be convicted of her crimes and suffer the sanctions that felony convictions bring, but then paroled in recognition of her exemplary life for over two decades. I suspect she would gladly settle for that.

And we would be demonstrating that the overall goal of conviction and imprisonment is rehabilitation and not revenge.

I.D. CARDS

Jachalke and Leeman grew up together in Chelsea, with Leeman's family having lived in the area since 1903. Lee moved to Chelsea 25 years ago, and his four children graduated from Chelsea High School.

"All three families have a lot of ties to Chelsea," Leeman says. "It doesn't matter how big (the company is) going to get, this is where it's going to stay."

The Chelsea-based company has received interest from a variety of companies around the country. Lee says several dealers, from Pennsylvania to Oklahoma, have agreed to carry their cards, and a major oil and natural gas supplier has listed the card on its Web site.

Lee says the company has also approached several local businesses and created its own Web site. Chelsea Pharmacy carries the order forms with its own logos on the cards, and the company has been talking with Chelsea Community Hospital and Chelsea Retirement Community to recommend the card for their patients.

"We come in to do training on what to look for in the ID cards," Lee says. "We learn more about what the market needs, and we teach them what to look for in an emergency."

The fledgling company has been rapidly gaining success as its card is now in its 10,000th printing. But it has yet to receive endorsements from local emergency medical teams and hospitals.

Joyce Williams, public affairs manager for Huron Valley Ambulance, says a variety of products have come on the market professing to provide medical information, but they all suffer some basic flaws.

One problem is that paramedics rarely search a person's clothes for identification, she says. Paramedics are usually too busy assessing the patient and quickly interviewing bystanders to spend time going through a person's wallet.

Most identification also contains outdated information, Williams says, because people fail to keep the information up to date. She says emergency personnel often can't trust the information because people's medical needs change so often.

An example is HVA's own medical database which the emergency transport company offers for people in its service area. The medical information can be drawn upon when a paramedic goes out to handle an emergency, but even HVA's lists become outdated as patients' medication changes.

"They are wonderful programs in theory but sometimes people forget to keep them updated," Williams says. "This is not to say this program is not positive. The intention is good, but none of these things would we rely on exclusively."

What Williams recommends is for patients to be aware of their own medications and those of their family members. This information is especially useful once a person reaches the hospital, where the doctors can use it to administer treatment, instead of just stabilizing a patient.

"The best thing people can do is to make their family members aware of their medical information," Williams says.

"When (paramedics) get to the hospital and they have more time, that's really when (the cards) may come in handy. For us out in the field, that's not something that we're going to be looking for."

Leeman says his company has addressed the importance of keeping the information updated. He says patients can receive free updates within a year of the original purchase, and after that the update is $5.

Lee says the company also recommends that other family members carry the cards so they can give information in an emergency. Lee says he carries not only his card, but those of his wife and children.

In general, Leeman says the response to the ID cards has been positive. He says the concept just makes sense.

"We ask people to tell us, 'Why wouldn't you use it?'" Leeman says. "People say, 'It's so simple, why hasn't it been thought of before?'" enthusiasm for chemistry ... and that I am really trying to help them learn that information and (help them learn) about themselves and life."

What McGuire finds unusual about Chelsea schools is the number of extra curricular activities offered. In addition, McGuire says she is impressed with the high participation level, whether in sports, drama, debate, music or yearbook, and the juggling act students pull to do it all.

A highlight of McGuire's career came in the first year when she was named as one of the most influential teachers in a student's life during the high school Cum Laude Banquet.

"I'll never forget that," she says.

McGuire has been recognized twice in the past five years.

What this young educator looks forward to, among other things, is a fulfilling career.

"I look forward to working with more students, hopefully developing the curriculum to become more applicable to the real world, and making new contacts and relationships with students and colleagues.

"I am hoping somehow, I'll open up more doors for students and turn a light on, whether it's chemistry or not, so they can use that information to better themselves."

Besides her work in the classroom, McGuire, a former high school cheerleader, has coached Chelsea High School's varsity cheerleading squad for the past five years. Five years previous, she coached Manchester's junior high squad.

McGuire also volunteers as an assistant track coach for Chelsea High School's girls' varsity track team and accompanies the Chelsea Outdoor Club on its annual caving expedition in Kentucky.

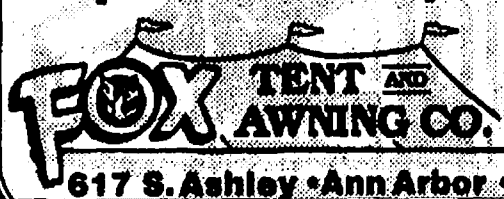

In her spare time, McGuire enjoys traveling across the United States, waterskiing and running. She participates in 5k and 10k runs and last May ran her first marathon, the Flying Pig Marathon, in Cincinnati.

McGuire also enjoys spending time with her family. She says family is an important part of her life.

"Those are the people who will always be there for you and have supported you your whole life," she says.

McGuire resides in Sylvan Township, where she recently bought her first house.
