Killips is top contender for school post

■ Board has scheduled on-site visit to Reed City Monday.

By Michael Rybka
Special Writer

David Killips is the front-runner for the superintendent's post in Chelsea after a second round of interviews Tuesday.

The board is planning to visit his employer, Reed City Area Public Schools, next week. The school district, composed of 2,100 students, is located in the northwest corner of the Lower Peninsula.

David Killips

No other candidate's school will be visited until a final decision regarding Killips is made.

"We've arranged an on-site visit for Monday," Board President Scott Broshar said yesterday. "If all goes as we expect, we look forward to negotiating a contract.

"We had an outstanding group of candidates for this position, and any one of them would have been very capable. It's a question of finding the best fit."

The board was unanimous in making Killips its first choice. Candidate Thomas Smith was second and Robert Howe Jr. was third.

It was the second time Killips and Howe interviewed with the board. Smith, who couldn't make last week's interviews because of a prior commitment, was given an extended interview.

Killips said in his interview that his ideal goal is to have an individual plan for each student that prepares them for the future.

He said this coincides with his philosophy that success for a student does not necessarily mean stressing only academics and culminating with a college degree. He believes vocational and military careers are equally worthy objectives.

Teens save Chelsea family

Three Manchester teen-agers who were following a detour may have saved the lives of a Chelsea family Saturday night.

Andrew Mahony, 17, John Jameson and Lauren Engel, both 16, were on their way back to Manchester from Chelsea when they spotted flames creeping up the side of a home at 757 Taylor St.

"You could tell that it wasn't burning that long, but it was moving up the house pretty good. It was going up to the roof," said Jameson, who drove in a separate car behind the two others.

The three reacted quickly. Mahony and Jameson got out of their cars and Engel stayed

Courthouse to get county historical marker

The 14th District Courthouse in the heart of Chelsea will soon sport a historical marker, commemorating the 2001 centennial of the historic structure.

Washtenaw County Historic District Commission Chairwoman Nancy Snyder will be on hand to present the historic marker to Judge Richard E. Conlin May 16 at the courthouse, located at 122 S. Main St. in Chelsea. The ceremony will take place at noon under the dome in the courtroom.

The event, honoring the historic building that was formerly the George P. Glazier Memorial Building, will take place as part of Historic Preservation Week celebrations.

"The interesting thing is that for a little town, Chelsea has several spectacular, majestic buildings, and this is one of them," Chelsea resident John Frank said Tuesday. Frank and his wife, Jackie, are founding members of Preservation Chelsea.

Frank Glazier constructed the building in 1901 as a memorial to his father, George Glazier, a Chelsea pioneer in banking.

Frank Glazier, who founded the Glazier Stove Works, home of "the Best and Brightest" stove, commissioned Jackson architect Claire Allen to design the neoclassical masterpiece for the Chelsea Savings Bank. Allen also designed the Glazier Clock Tower and the Welfare Buildings, the United Methodist Church and the old retirement home that was torn down decades ago.

"Frank Glazier had a vision for Chelsea and commissioned Allen to create this

Chelsea welcomes new postmaster

■ Ted Duve hopes to bring stability.

By Michael Rybka
Special Writer

A Downriver native has been named postmaster in Chelsea, filling a position that has been vacant for nearly four years.

Ted Duve has been acting postmaster since January. He hopes that his recent appointment will bring a sense of stability to the Chelsea Post Office, resulting in improved morale and customer service.

The Chelsea Post Office has had five interim postmasters in the last seven years and seven in the last 10. Interspersed in the last decade have been postmasters who lasted a year before being reassigned.

"Everyone brings their own policies and style, and our workers have had to continuously adapt to them," Duve said. "This will be a relief for them. It will also be a relief for our customers not to see a different face every time when, God forbid, they have a complaint.

"I want to get to know customers. I want them to get to know me, so together we can figure out ways to make our already excellent service even better."

Duve was raised in Southgate and earned a bachelor's degree in business management from Central Michigan University. Before joining the U.S. Postal Service in 1987, he worked as a retail manager.

Duve began his postal career in 1987 as a city carrier in Southgate. He served as acting supervisor in Southgate and other neighboring locales while their respective postmasters were on leave.

In 1993, Duve transferred to the Ypsilanti Post Office, which gave him the opportunity to move to Chelsea. Up until the time he was appointed

Community mourns Sylvan Township farmer

■ Duane Layher was a familiar face at Chelsea Community Fair.

By Sheila Pursglove
Associate Editor

The Chelsea community was shocked and saddened last week by the sudden death of Sylvan Township farmer Duane Layher, who drowned April 30 after falling from a rowboat in a pond on his property.

The Layher family's roots run deep in this area, and the 67-year-old Layher was well known in the community. More than 370 people attended his visitation and 220 came to the funeral service Friday at Our Savior Lutheran Church in Chelsea.

Layher was on a boat treating his half-acre farm pond with copper sulfate when he fell overboard. Weighed down by his boots and heavy farming clothes, he drowned in the 15-foot-deep, chilly water. His body was discovered at about 8 p.m.

His son, Jeff, said the pond, used for fire protection, irrigation and fishing, was getting overgrown with weeds.

Layher was born and raised in the Chelsea area and graduated from Chelsea High School in 1952. He bought the Sylvan Township farm from his parents, Fred and Mary, in 1970 and grew sweet corn, soybeans and hay. He also raised steer.

After retiring from K&E Screw Products in Lima Township, Layher worked part time with his son Jeff at the Parts Peddler store in Chelsea. He also helped his other son, David, at his business, Smith's Service Station in Dexter.

"We farmed together and he helped us in our businesses," Jeff Layher said Monday. "Whenever we needed him, he was there.

"He was everyone's fix-it man, an old-time neighbor who was always ready to give a helping hand."

David Layher said Monday that his father enjoyed doing odd jobs for the service station, running errands, helping with snow removal and using his farm equipment to help at the scene of rollover crashes involving semi tractor-trailers.

Jeff Layher, who has been on the Chelsea Community Fair Board for 25 years, said his father enjoyed helping with the day-to-day running of the fair.

Lloyd Grau, a longtime member of the fair board, said that Duane Layher was always willing to help.

"With the expansion of the fair, we needed to clear trees and Duane was a fellow who was always ready and willing to help whenever there was work to be done," Grau said Tuesday. "We'll certainly miss him."

"He wasn't a member of the fair board on paper, but he was certainly one in his heart."

Layher was a charter member of Our Savior Lutheran Church and served on its building committee. He was also a member of the Lutheran Brotherhood and Aid Association for Lutherans.

"Duane was an every-Sunday attender," the Rev. Dale Grimm said Monday. "He had his place, where he always sat. I could always look over at that pew and there he was.

"He was also very active in the Lutheran Brotherhood and on our kitchen committee. Anytime we had something special, like the sauerkraut dinners, he'd be there in the kitchen, cooking all day."

Layher had been a widower since 1987 when his wife, Shirley, died of cancer.

"Dad always said he wanted to go quick, and not suffer like our mom did, and I guess he got his wish," Jeff Layher said.

Firefighters battle Lima blaze

■ Crews also respond to Taylor Street fire, motorcycle crash and medical emergencies.

By Sheila Pursglove
Associate Editor

Firefighters from Chelsea and Dexter fought an early morning blaze Monday at Astro Cap, a plant that makes caps for pick-up truck beds. The plant is located at 2055 N. Lima Center Road in Lima Township.

Firefighters got an early morning call at 4:35 a.m. Monday, Chelsea Fire Inspector Matt Tuttle said Tuesday. Firefighters from Manchester manned the Chelsea station while 28 Chelsea firefighters went to scene. They were joined by six Dexter firefighters and a tanker truck.

The fire destroyed a $50,000 40-cubic-yard waste bin and spread to a small part of the manufacturing building before it was put out. No one was injured. The cause is still under investigation, Tuttle said.

In the past week, Chelsea firefighters have responded to six fires, three vehicle crashes and four medical emergencies, Tuttle said.

Firefighters responded to a call on Taylor Street at about midnight Saturday when a fire broke out in an attached garage and spread to the family room, Tuttle said.

Thanks to the quick actions of three teen-agers, who hosed down the flames with a garden hose, the family of five was saved. They were treated for smoke inhalation at the scene by emergency medical technicians with Huron Valley Ambulance, Tuttle said.

Firefighters also responded to two chimney fires May 3 on East Middle Street and on Sycamore Street May 2, and to a burning brush fire on Clear Lake Road May 1, Tuttle said.

Firefighters responded to the scene of a crash May 5 when an Ann Arbor woman's motorcycle hit a van on Old Manchester Road and Old US-12. The woman was transported by Huron Valley Ambulance to Chelsea Community Hospital, where she was treated for back pain, Tuttle said. No one in the van was hurt.

neo-classical building as a memorial to his father, George," Frank said. "The grand, imposing building was designed to create confidence in the bank, reflecting its solidity, stability and soundness."

The courthouse building features rock-faced granite walls laid by George Hindelang of Ann Arbor. Two Bedford limestone columns support the entablature and terra cotta tile roof. Decorative motifs include a memorial wreath, festoons and shells. The structure also includes white marble pilasters and balustrades and carved burr oak woodwork.

After six years in the memorial building, the Chelsea Savings Bank closed during the Panic of 1907, a recession that caused a run on the banks forcing them to fold.

The Farmers and Merchants Bank was chartered the next year to fill the void and moved into Glazier's building in 1927. During the Great Depression that started in 1929, the bank merged with the Kempf Bank to become the Chelsea State Bank.

When the Chelsea State Bank relocated in 1969, it donated the building for the 14th District Court.

In 1988, through a collaborative effort of the Washtenaw County Board of Commissioners and the Historic Courthouse Group, funds were raised to restore the building.

"The ceremony is open to everyone and we hope people will come and join in this very special event," Frank said. "We'll also have some light refreshments on hand."

Marnie Paulus, a preservation planner with the Washtenaw County Historic District Commission, said Tuesday that there are 51 Historical Markers in the county, and this is the first one in Chelsea.

The Washtenaw County Historic District Commission is appointed by the Washtenaw County Board of Commissioners to safeguard the heritage of the county. The commission identifies and preserves significant historical resources, creates historic districts and educates the public through the marker program and annual workshops.

Local elementary school children take part in ACES activities

By Sheila Pursglove
Associate Editor

Elementary school pupils in Chelsea were among 26,113 youths in 52 schools across Washtenaw County to celebrate May Day by taking part in ACES, an acronym for All Children Exercising Simultaneously.

Organizers estimated more than 350,000 children, representing about 925 Michigan elementary schools, took part in some form of physical activity at 10 a.m. May 1 during National Fitness Week.

The event is a program of the Michigan Governor's Council on Physical Fitness, Health and Sports.

At North Creek Elementary School, the entire school population poured onto the playground.

"This was the first year that North took part in ACES," physical education teacher Eric Burris said. "It was a blast. The teachers even commented that they had fun exercising with their classes."

Burris said the school hopes to turn ACES into an even bigger event next year.

"I really liked seeing the whole school outside exercising," he said. "If you needed motivation, then you could look over and see the first-graders walking or jogging with the kindergarten classes, or look at second- and third-graders jumping rope, or watch the fourth- and fifth-grades performing an aerobics routine with Krista Bradley.

"It was awesome seeing so many students having a good time while exercising."

South Meadows physical education teacher Mike Bareis said the entire student body spent half an hour in activities.

"We had a great day," he said. "We had three stations set up, jump rope, fitness laps and throwing and catching.

"Each student received an ACES sticker and a parent handout on the values of a healthy lifestyle."

Bareis said next year's event is scheduled for May 7.

Pierce Lake Elementary School Principal Lucy Stieber said the event was an innovating experience for both students and adults.

"We walked around our field six times to equal one mile," Stieber said. "Some students walked, others ran or jogged. They had an opportunity to chat with their friends and other teachers.

"The activity helped prepare the students to return to class and focus on the remainder of their morning lessons."

The Fitness Council released statistics showing that 13 percent of American children are overweight and that Michigan ranks second in the nation in the number of overweight people.

"Our goal every year is that ACES With-a-Friend will have an impact on children and their families; to show them that physical activity is important to their health and that it's fun," said Marilyn Lieber, vice president of the council's community programs.

While the national average of people with elevated cholesterol levels is 25 percent, 39 percent of Michigan children have the problem and 7.5 percent of them have elevated blood pressure.

According to the council, 75 percent of Americans don't get even the minimum amount of exercise.

The "With-a-Friend" designation encourages parents, siblings, grandparents, friends and others to join in the fun.

The mission of ACES day is to bring attention to the importance of daily physical activity and the impact is has on lifelong health.

ACES was founded by New Jersey physical education teacher Len Saunders in 1989. Saunders wanted to encourage his students to be more physically active. By the third year, the event went worldwide and more than five million children participated.

Now, with ACES in its 13th year, it continues to reach millions of children in all 50 states and more than 50 countries.

North Creek Elementary School pupils Rachel Marks (left), Jennifer Gabbard, Amber Brooks and Liana Pieske walk around the playground during the May 1 ACES event promoting physical activity among Michigan elementary school pupils.

Children who participated took home an educational brochure about a chronic disease that may be prevented with regular physical activity. This year, the Michigan Education Special Services Association provided brochures on cardiovascular disease.

Student drivers may pay for classes

■ Cost has increased 18 percent in three years.

By Sheila Pursglove
Associate Editor

Student drivers in Chelsea may start paying for their driver's education courses beginning July 1.

The school board discussed a recommendation Monday from Chelsea High School Assistant Principal Robin Raymond to begin charging participants in the Driver's Education Program.

"We have expanded the program each year for the last several years to accommodate the needs of Chelsea students," Raymond said in his report to the board. "With the costs of the program increasing over previously accepted budget levels, I believe that it's time that we pass on some of these expenses to the students."

Between October 1999 and September 2000, the total expenses were $46,587. The state reimbursed $22,328. The following year, expenses increased to $50,126, with the state reimbursing $24,148.

The projected expenses for this year are $55,000, Raymond said. The state should reimburse $25,740, leaving a net cost to the district of $29,260.

Raymond said that in a recent survey of state schools by the Michigan Department of Education, 75 percent of schools offering driver education programs now charge anywhere from $75 to $200 for the opportunity to participate in a school-sponsored program.

Students who take private courses pay up to $300 for the class, Raymond said.

"In addition to the direct costs ... there are indirect costs in terms of secretarial time, my time, classroom material costs such as paper and copying, and transportation department time totaling approximately $5,000," Raymond said.

Raymond recommends a fee of $100 for the Segment I class and $25 for Segment II.

"At present we are enrolling approximately 250 students in both of these classes for the given 12-month period," he said. "With the implementation of the added revenues, the Driver Education Program should break even on a yearly basis, based on present expenses."

The board may take action at its next meeting, 7:30 p.m. May 20 at Pierce Lake Elementary School, 275 N. Freer Road. A social half-hour will precede the meeting when parents can meet board members and school staff.

POSTMASTER

postmaster, he was still considered an employee at the Ypsilanti site.

Duve credits his supervisor, Ron Mutchler in Ypsilanti with giving him the encouragement and support to move up in the ranks.

The new postmaster is inheriting a post office that has outgrown its environs and a federal budget freeze that promises no immediate solution to the problem.

Duve said that the U.S. Postal Service listed Chelsea as one of its top five sites deserving of a new facility and blueprints were drawn up, but the project was nixed because of budget constraints.

While Duve is aware of the practical shortcomings of the post office's current location, he appreciates the beauty of the structure and has a desire to learn about the building's history. Particularly intriguing to him is what looks to be a root cellar in the basement and numbers on the doors.

If the Chelsea Post Office is ever relocated, Duve said the Postal Service plans to preserve the building through an arrangement with the Chelsea Historical Society.

With millions of dollars spent recently on security measures at major metropolitan post offices in the wake of the Sept. 11 terror attacks on New York City and Washington, D.C., Duve said it's unlikely that the freeze will be over soon. He also said that a proposed 3-cent hike in postage would do little to offset it.

Duve said the terror attacks and the subsequent anthrax scares have put postal employees on alert. He now works behind locked doors and postal carriers lock their vehicles while delivering door to door.

In addition to Duve, the Chelsea Post Office is currently staffed by 14 full-time employees, five employees who work less than 40 hours but receive full benefits and six part-time employees.

Duve, who makes $50,000 a year, said he will receive an extra $750 a year as postmaster. He said some of his extra income will be spent on out-of-pocket pizza parties for his staff.

When away from the office, Duve enjoys outdoor activities, particularly hunting, camping and golfing.

IT'S HARD TO FEEL SPIRITUAL

Dear Friends and Neighbors,

It's hard to feel spiritual when things go wrong. It's hard to feel spiritual when you're stranded along the road with a car that just quit, or after you've just gotten into an accident. It's hard to feel spiritual when you're struggling to take care of all the obligations you have in this life. It's hard to feel spiritual when you're crunching numbers to figure out how to pay for the things you need and want.

It's also hard to feel spiritual when things are going smoothly, or when you're enjoying a vacation or a sporting event or a movie.

It's even hard to feel spiritual at church sometimes, when you get distracted by another worshiper, or when your mind wanders and relives events of the past week, or you start to make plans for the coming week, or when you're trying so hard to sing the right notes or say the right words that you overlook the meaning of what you're saying or singing.

It's hard to feel spiritual if you're a mother providing round the clock care for an infant, or for young children. It's hard to feel spiritual if you're a mother worried about how your children are dressed and how they're going to behave.

It's hard to feel spiritual if you're a mother chauffeuring your children to music lessons and athletic practices and games week after week.

Thank God, our Christian life does not depend on how spiritual we feel. It depends solely on the fact that our Savior Jesus loved us and gave Himself for us. The love of Jesus, His death on the cross, and His Resurrection, are always with us, even on days when we feel so horrible and unspiritual that we can hardly stand ourselves.

Please worship with us this Sunday, Mother's Day, at 9:30 a.m. Though we have provisions for hearing the service if you feel it's necessary to take children out of the sanctuary, we at Faith Lutheran Church greatly prefer that your children join in our worship from infancy.

Also, join us this evening, as we celebrate the day Jesus ascended into heaven and began reigning over the universe as God and Man. The service begins at 7:30 p.m. and will last about 40 minutes.

Dream job

Local residents enjoy long careers in nursing

By Lisa Carolin
Staff Writer

As the nation celebrates National Nurses Week this week, a recent survey found that 77 percent of nurses across the country are happy in their career choice and 60 percent would recommend the field to others.

Karen Barbour and Valerie Marsh, two of the 242 nurses working at Chelsea Community Hospital, are both testaments to the rewards of nursing as career. Between them they have amassed decades of helping heal the sick.

Barbour, a Gregory resident who works in the Head Pain Unit, once dreamed of becoming a nurse and is now celebrating 30 years in the profession.

"I was born and raised on a dairy farm in Fowlerville and was the first person on my mother's side of the family to go to college," she said. "In my 30 years of nursing, I've never wanted to change careers."

Karen Barbour of Gregory is among 242 nurses working at Chelsea Community Hospital. She has spent 30 years in the field.

Valerie Marsh of Dexter is among 242 nurses working at Chelsea Community Hospital. As the nation celebrates Nurses Week, she can testify to the rewards of the career.

Barbour started her career at McPherson Hospital in Howell. After getting married, she moved to Missouri but returned to Michigan when her first child was born. She started work at a nursing home in Stockbridge before hiring on at the Chelsea hospital.

"My youngest daughter is going into nursing and I warned her that it's hard work," she said.

Barbour received her nursing degree a week after her daughter received her high school diploma.

Barbour went on to become a licensed nurse practitioner and has worked in extended care, intensive care and the burn unit at Chelsea Community Hospital.

Five years ago, she transferred to the Head Pain Unit, which she calls a totally different type of nursing.

"People come here with chronic pain like migraine headaches and they feel hopeless," she said. "We listen to them, and it's a real team effort.

"People will tell us that we've given them their lives back."

Barbour said that nursing is hard work because it requires special training and it's both emotional and physical work. She said there is also a great deal of paperwork, which can lessen the time she has to spend taking care of people.

"It's a balance," she said. "Sometimes you give too much at work, and then you don't have much left to give when you get home."

Her greatest satisfaction comes from the response she gets from patients.

"It's the hug you get when someone is discharged," she said. "I love my profession and like my job most of the time."

Marsh, a Dexter resident, has spent the past 18 months at Chelsea Community Hospital as a nurse educator.

She spent 23 years working as a nurse at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in Ann Arbor and is currently working on a master's degree as a nurse practitioner.

"I wanted to be a nurse since I was 12," she said. "Three of the four girls in my family became nurses because of my mom's influence. She told us to get a job where you can take care of yourself."

Marsh has three children, one in college and two in Dexter schools. She said she has particularly enjoyed the flexibility in her schedule that nursing allows.

"This place advocates for your family," she said. "People are friendly and sincere here, which is why it's in the top one percent for patient satisfaction in the nation. It takes satisfied employees to accomplish that."

Marsh's job as a nurse educator involves training new staff in the surgery, pre-operative and recovery areas. When she becomes a nurse practitioner, she hopes to work in the operating room.

"My goal is to see patients before and after surgery, and I'd be able to write most kinds of prescriptions as a nurse practitioner," she said.

Marsh also works with students from Dexter and Chelsea high schools who are considering a career in nursing and want the experience of being in a hospital.

In addition, Marsh has volunteered at her sons' schools to help with physicals. She also takes care of injured wrestlers at tournaments as a parent in the Dexter Wrestling Club.

"I like to stay involved with hands-on work," she said. "I like to interact with the patients.

"I want to help them laugh or smile, to lighten their load, and to make them comfortable in the environment. People open up to me and trust me, and that's why I like being a nurse."

Friends Center holds conference on ecology

■ Professor says use of fossil fuel cells is destroying the planet.

By Kent Ashton Walton
Special Writer

Approximately 70 people attended the sixth annual Living Lightly conference Saturday at the Michigan Friends Center near Chelsea.

The talk was called "Community Visions, Deliberate Choices." Those attending came from as far away as Ohio and as close as Chelsea.

A morning discussion panel of four speakers introduced the group to a variety of eco-centered topics. In addition, two workshops were held in the afternoon.

In the panel discussion, Marc Ross, professor of physics at the University of Michigan, talked about alternatives to the use of fossil fuels.

Peg and Ken Champney, members of the Yellow Springs Friends group and author of a chapter in Dorothy Anderson's "Downwardly Mobile," discussed how to live simply in a skill-sharing community on a reduced income.

Scott Savage, editor of Plain Reader, Luddite Journal and "A Plain Life: Walking My Belief," talked about simplicity and peace as a testimony grounded in conviction, as well as the avoidance of a "carbo-cult" mentality.

During the panel discussion, the Champneys said that they reduced their income and gave to charity to avoid paying taxes that they say support war. When their television broke, they said they didn't fix it and found they had more time on their hands. They also said they kept their furnace at 60 degrees, reducing their fuel bill by two-thirds.

The 40-acre community that they live in has existed for 50 years and provides free childcare, as well as education for children in first through third grades. Decisions are reached by consensus and community members maintain the land.

Ross argued that the use of fossil fuels for energy is the biggest problem for the United States and is responsible for most of the air pollution and climate change.

He expects to see hotter weather, a significant rise in sea level, an increase in tropical diseases and a worsening of the air pollution problems, particularly in big cities such as Los Angeles, Mexico City and Bangkok. He expects fossil fuels to last 10 to 40 years.

Ross said the solutions for Americans are greater energy conservation and efficiency, and development of alternate energy sources such as photovoltaic cells in desert areas and wind electrical generators in the plains states.

He said the automobile could be made much more efficient. Living closer to amenities reduces driving.

Savage sees simplicity as closely related to community living. He said people should focus on authentic long-term needs. The notions of simple living and living lightly are declining in popularity and people are choosing force as a means of resolving problems, he said.

Savage said the concept of peace has attracted people to communities such as the Friends, but he said the focus has lost a lot of appeal since the Sept. 11 terror attacks at the World Trade Center in New York and the Pentagon in Washington, D.C. He said people must beware of their principles and beliefs being washed away by such events and by other potential crises.

In the afternoon, attendees split up into groups to discuss topics in workshops. Ross's group examined the concept and calculation of an ecological footprint, and how people's choices affect the earth.

Savage discussed the use of water, carbon dioxide and nutrients on a Luddite homestead.

Trudy Huntington, a retired University of Michigan professor of Environmental Studies looked at what the Amish community could teach about patterns of consumption, conflict resolution, resource utilization and agricultural methods.

Patrick Munson, a physician at Chelsea Community Hospital and founder of the Envision Health practice, led an outdoor workshop about clarifying and living an inner vision, involving techniques to facilitate natural healing and well-being.

Anne Elder and Paul Bantle, farmers at Ann Arbor Community Farm, examined the idea of simplicity in agriculture as it relates to disciplines such as meditation and eating simply.

Ann Arbor City Planner Jeffrey Kahan employed slides to talk about local design standards, and addressed how ordinances could be changed to encourage a more efficient use of land and a greater variety and quality of urban housing opportunities.

Paul Tinkerhess, a Quaker musician and Ann Arbor shoe, electric car and bicycle salesman, hosted the event. He entertained the group with a variety of communal songs and stories.

The Michigan Friends Center is a nonprofit Quaker-oriented conference center located at the Friends Lake Community. Its mission is to build community, foster peace, social justice, spiritual healing, and environmental protection.

Reference checks by the board confirmed Killips' assertions in his interview that his strengths were implementing programs particularly suited for an individual school's needs, a talent for diffusing difficult situations and a genuine love for people that extends to community involvement.

Veteran school board members in Reed City had said Killips is the best superintendent they had worked with.

Some people said, however, that he should visit school buildings more often. But he works without an assistant superintendent in Reed City.

In the Reed City schools Killips implemented all-day/every-day kindergarten, expanded a multi-age classroom program, initiated block scheduling at the high school and middle school, and was able to secure state and federal grants.

The board noted that Killips did not have the technology know-how of Smith and some members of the board, particularly trustee Conrad Knutsen, did not want to place Killips over Smith.

Knutsen also said that Smith's compressed double-interview put him at a disadvantage. He suggested the board also visit Smith's Escanaba Area Public Schools.

Thomas Shorkey of the Michigan Association of School Boards, who facilitated the interview process and gave the board direction in the selection process, said that would be unacceptable to the candidates and to etiquette.

"Neither of the candidates would want us to disrupt their school and community, and not be chosen," Shorkey said. "It forces them to have to pick up the pieces with their board. We're not going to be there long enough to find any 'smoking gun.'"

The balance was tipped by a variety of observations.

The board had reservations about the "hands-off" approach that Smith stressed in his interview.

The board also had reservations about Smith saying that rules were merely guidelines.

It was also pointed out that Smith's desire to come to Chelsea was no greater than his desire to be selected in Waterford or Grandville, where he has interviews arranged.

Shorkey summarized the differences between Killips and Smith.

He said that if Killips was called that night to say he was awarded a visitation, he would pull over by the side of the road and high-five his wife.

Shorkey said that Smith would "commend us for acting quickly before we lost him."

Howe, who is superintendent of Leslie Public Schools, was also given a brief overview by the board and Shorkey.

The board hopes to have a new superintendent in place by July 1 to allow sufficient transition time before Chelsea Superintendent Ed Richardson retires in early August.

FIRE

behind and placed a 911 call on a cellphone.

"I saw a trash can on the corner where the garage meets the house," Mahony said. The trash can was filled with burning scraps of wood. "Me and John got out. He started to kick that trash can.

"I just saw the hose and reacted."

While Mahony sprayed the flames with the hose, Jameson tried to rouse the inhabitants by knocking loudly on the doors and windows.

"We figured (there were people inside) because there was two cars in the driveway," Mahony said. Still, no one responded.

It wasn't until the Chelsea Area Fire Authority arrived at 12:03 a.m. and managed to break through a door in the garage that the five inhabitants were found sleeping in the house. Inside were a grandfather, a married couple and twin toddlers. None were injured.

According to a report by Chelsea police, there were no longer flames visible when officers arrived on the scene. Mahony, the son of Washtenaw County Undersheriff Herb Mahony, sprayed until firefighters arrived and contained the fire several minutes later.

"We didn't really think; we never stopped to think," he said. "We're just glad everyone got out OK."

"I was shocked," said Michaela Stribe, who was asleep when the firefighters broke in. "I didn't have much time to think of anything."

Stribe said officials believe a cigarette may have started the fire in the trash bin. Assistant Fire Chief Steve Jaskot said the investigation is not complete. Investigators do not believe the cause was suspicious, however.

The three teens said they were hanging out in a Chelsea park and were trying to get back to M-52 when water main construction routed them onto adjacent Taylor Street.

"It felt good to just know that if we hadn't drove by there and seen what was happening, and done something about it, something could've happened," Jameson said.

"The owner was very appreciative. He thanked me numerous times," Mahony said.

Stribe credited the three teens for saving her family's lives.

"They're the heroes in this," she said.

"I'm just so glad that we got there when we did because the fire almost got through the first wall in the house," Engel said. "I'm just so thankful that nobody got hurt."

Ironically, Stribe noted that the same wall charred by Saturday night's flames had recently been replaced after being struck by a truck three years ago.

"This side of the house is just jinxed, I think," she said.

Commuters face construction

Do you hate learning there's a traffic delay or construction detour too late? The Michigan Department of Transportation has a new way to keep you in the know.

Internet users now can visit a site that will update work progress and detours for six major construction problems in the metropolitan Detroit area by clicking onto www.fixdetroit6.com.

In addition to updated closure information and project details, users also can register to receive construction updates via e-mail.

"When we were setting this up, we were thinking of the best way to reach as many people as possible, but also how we could reach people at their convenience," said MDOT spokesman Rob Morosi.

"This way, you don't have to turn your radio on at a certain time. You'll know before you leave the house."

Among the projects highlighted at the site is the extensive work being done on Interstate 75 in northern Downriver.

Overpass work has begun in Lincoln Park and Allen Park and the two-year project will begin early next month, when the northbound section of the freeway from the southern foot of the Rouge River bridge to Eureka Road is closed.

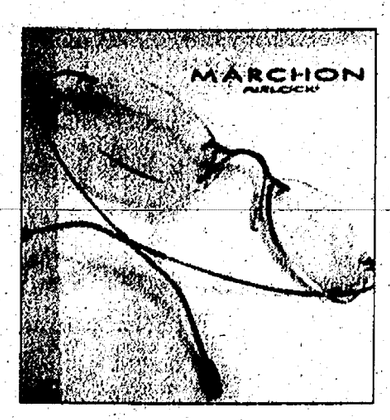

Two lanes will be open on southbound I-75, but one will be dedicated to northbound trucks and other commercial vehicles traveling to the Ambassador Bridge.

MDOT is recommending drivers use I-94, Telegraph Road, Fort Street and/or the Southfield Freeway to bypass construction. The project will continue through November, after which both sides of the freeway will reopen.

About a year from now, crews will begin preparations to do the same work on the southbound stretch of the freeway.

Morosi said MDOT will monitor the site to see if user interest should prompt an expansion of the service in the future.

Lima Township to fix broken porch

■ Board accepts $4,675 bid from Herrst.

By Kent Ashton Walton
Special Writer

The Lima Township Board accepted a bid Monday from Herrst Construction in Chelsea to rebuild the town hall's dilapidated porch.

Lima Township Hall is located at 11452 Jackson Road.

The bid of $4,675 will cover the cost of removing the existing steps and slab, and replacing the steps and deck landing. The existing ramp will be reconstructed with barrier-free access and a handrail for handicap accessibility.

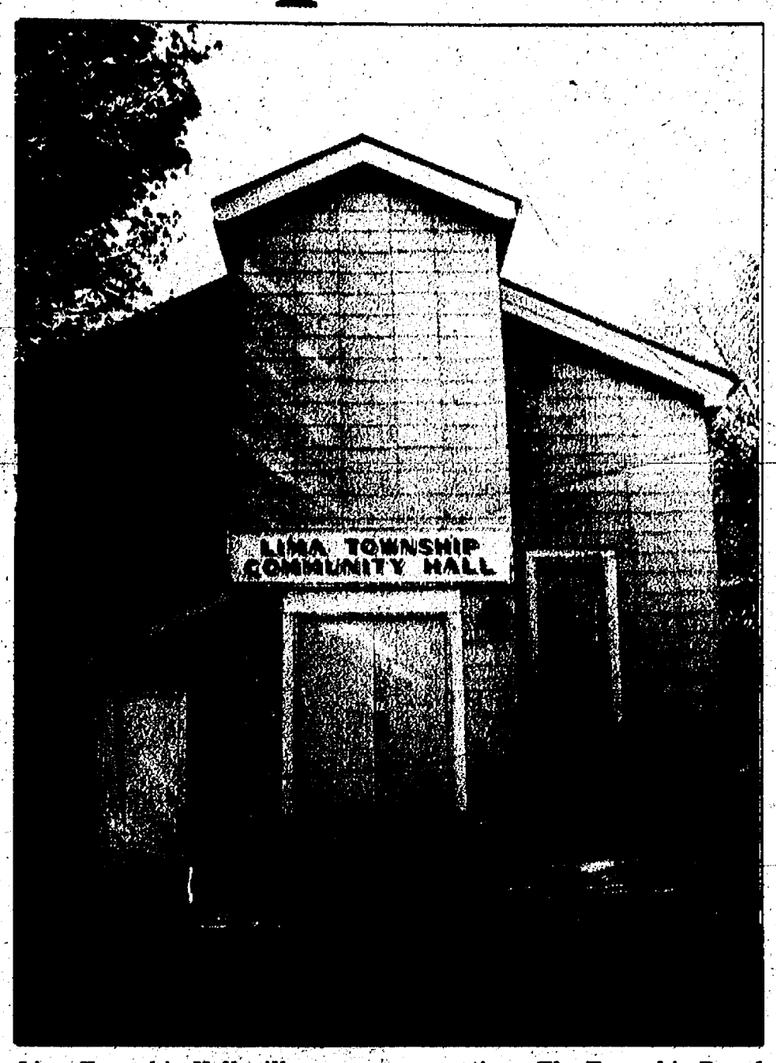

The cost includes $1,825 for removal of the steps and ramp and $2,850 to replace the deck, step and ramp.

The new construction will be completed using wood. The board asked that the contractor use screws, not nails, for fasteners.

The board wants the work completed by July 1.

In other news, newly appointed Zoning Inspector Joseph Wesolowski attended his first official board meeting. He succeeds Charles Schauer, who resigned the position April 28.

Township Supervisor Ken Unterbrink suggested that Wesolowski take advantage of upcoming informational meetings and seminars about planning and zoning laws later this month. The board voted to fund Wesolowski's expenses related to the seminar.

Lima Township Hall will see some renovations. The Township Board awarded a contract to Herrst Construction in Chelsea to repair the dilapidated steps.

Radon is hidden danger in home

RICHARD MORSE

KNOW YOUR HOME

Most of us see our homes as a place of refuge from the outside world. If we feel threatened, our homes are the one place to which we can retreat, be safe and relax. But this may be deceiving.

Modern science has led to the discovery of numerous hazards in our homes, such as indoor air pollution, carbon monoxide and radon. This column will explore the problem of radon.

There are minute deposits of uranium in the ground all around the world. As the uranium decays, it gives off a gas called radon. Over time, the gas rises through the soil and harmlessly dissipates into the atmosphere.

The problem is when the radon enters a home through holes or cracks in the basement floor and walls. The gas will then be trapped within the home and may over time reach dangerously high concentrations. Because the gas is odorless, invisible and tasteless, we do not know that it is there.

Long-term exposure of breathing high concentrations of radon can cause lung cancer. It's estimated that radon inhalation is the second leading cause of lung cancer in the United States after cigarette smoking.

How much radon is too much? Radon gas is measured by its concentration level in the air and expressed as picocuries per liter (pCi/l). The Environmental Protection Agency has created an "action guideline level" of 4.0 pCi/l. If the concentration of radon in a house measures above this level, the homeowner is encouraged to take action to eliminate the problem.

Radon levels can be determined with measuring devices. The devices must be left in the lowest level of the home for a period of time, and then read to find the radon concentration level.

A radon-testing canister may be purchased from the county health department for about $15. You place it in your basement for a period of time and then send it to a testing agency for reading. The process takes several weeks.

A more accurate and reliable testing method is to have a professional place a sensitive electronic monitor in your basement for 48 hours, which will then provide immediate results. This test can be used as a follow-up to the canister testing method if that result is near the Action Guideline Level. This test typically cost about $100. Testing companies and some home inspectors can provide the service.

A professional is needed to analyze and mitigate the hazard of radon. In some cases, sealing openings in the basement floor and walls may halt radon infiltration. If the problem is more severe, professionals may install a vent to draw the radon gas out from under the basement floor.

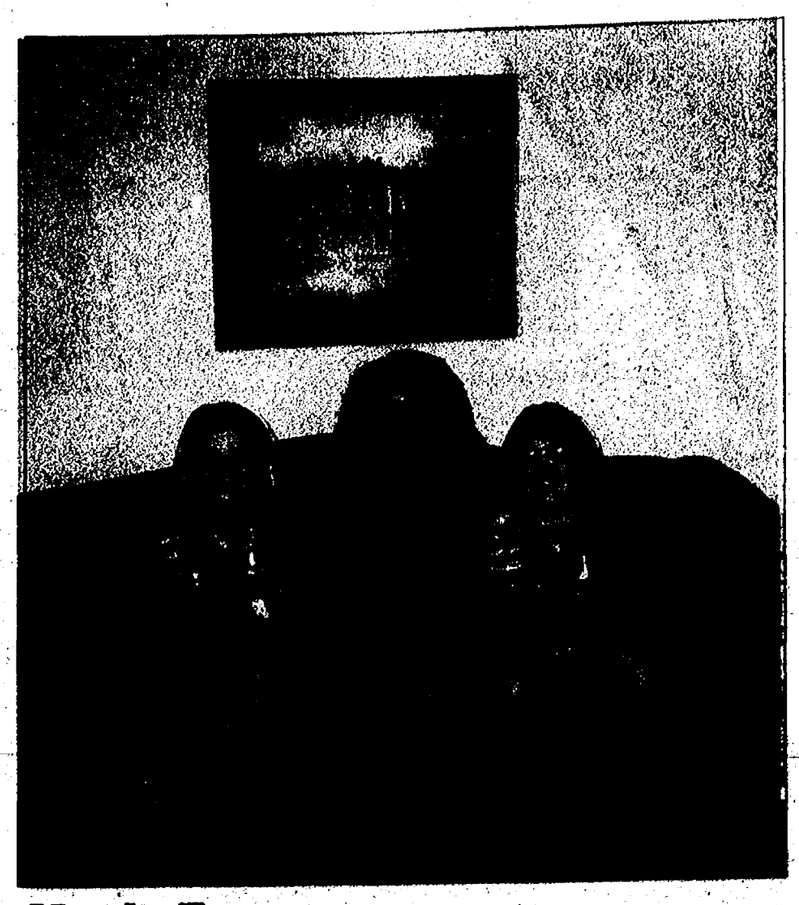

This is accomplished by installing a pipe that extends from below the concrete slab to the outside of the house. The pipe may include an in-line fan to help to dispel the gas.

Many variables will influence the cost to mitigate, but it typically runs between $700 and $900.

The surprising thing is that while your neighbor may not have a radon problem, your house may. Radon concentrations can vary considerably within even a small geographic area. While the EPA estimates that 7 percent of all homes nationally have a radon problem, approximately 40 percent in the Ann Arbor area are affected.

If your home has not been tested, it is a wise investment. The cost is small compared to the long-term hazard associated with breathing radon.

Music Fans

Chelsea Junior Girl Scout Troop 1733 visited with Ann Arbor singer and composer Jennifer Jean Smith to complete the Music Fan badge. Smith taught the girls about occupations in the music industry, different parts of a song and how to sing "True North," her song about the late race car driver Dale Earnhart. Pictured sitting with Smith are Katelynn Becker (left) and Amanda Roderick. Sitting in front are Gabrielle Steudle (left) and Robyn Cleary.

Scouts earn badges with outdoor activities

Chelsea Boy Scout Troops 476 and 425 held their annual Archery and Rifle Shooting Merit Badges Weekend at the Chelsea Rod and Gun Club March 22 through 24.

More than 50 boys, accompanied by adult volunteers and Scout leaders, received training in hunter safety, as well as the handling, proper use and proper care of sporting firearms and archery equipment. They also practiced their skills at the club's ranges and courses.

David Stoll and volunteers from the club led the National Rifle Association-certified training sessions. Scout merit badge counselors, many of whom were members of the club, were on hand to make sure each Scout's achievements were recorded and applied to the merit badge trail.

In total, three Scouts earned hunter safety certificates. Several earned archery merit badges. Some Scouts are well on their way to earning their rifle shooting merit badge.

Trooop 425 held its bi-annual advancement weekend at Camp Teetonkah in Jackson County April 12 through 14.

Scouts worked on their rank requirements, learning how to fold a flag, sharpen an ax or knife, cook meals, use a compass, identify poison plants, first aid and several other skills.

Scouts cooked and camped in patrols, played games, and held a campfire. All the Scouts who attended, many of whom are new to Scouting this year, moved closer to their next rank, worked hard, and enjoyed a fun weekend.

Troop 454 held an Eagle Scout Court April 17 for William Thompson of Manchester. He is the fifth Eagle Scout for the troop, which is sponsored by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

Thompson, who will attend Brigham Young University this spring, is also the ninth member of his family to earn Eagle rank. He completed the requirements of 21 merit badges, worked as a camp counselor at several summer camps, and developed a Vial of Life, distributed in Canton, for his service project.

Mountaintop birthday is the best

FELICIA HERMOSILLO

TALES FROM THE TRAIL

Greetings from Damascus! This is the place to be for hikers. It's a huge milestone, 455 miles. It felt good to hike into town this morning and have my picture taken under the "Welcome to Damascus" sign.

Spring has sprung. The trees have their leaves, and it seems that almost overnight the forest floor has been covered in a thick, green carpet.

Most of the flowers are blooming and they are so beautiful. I saw a perfect lady slipper the other day, and yesterday I saw a lily of the valley in full bloom.

For those of you who don't know, lily of the valley is my favorite flower. I was hiking with five others when I spotted it. I made everyone stop and marvel at its beauty and take in its sweet scent.

This year's birthday ranked among the best. I turned a happy 27 on April 26. My birthday wish last year was that this year I would celebrate my 27th on the Appalachian Trail. My wish came true.

It was a wonderful day. The weather was perfect and the scenery was absolutely breathtaking. I started the day with a climb up Roan Mountain, 6,200 feet. Then we strolled through some rolling, green hills.

At the end of the day, we tackled Little Hump and Hump Mountain. We camped at a beautiful campsite called Doll Flats.

Everyone pitched in to make my evening wonderful. Someone filtered my water, others set up my tent, they built a campfire for me, and they even brought up a pound cake with candles. It was a wonderful birthday. It was a full moon and the sky was clear, so we were able to enjoy the evening sky.

This morning we had a great hike into town, 10 miles in 2½ hours. The terrain was nice and easy.

On our way into town, we saw a junco bird fly out from an embankment next to the trail. We stopped to inspect and found a nest with three perfect little eggs.

As we continued walking, we found two tiny, black salamanders darting across the trail.

Then just before arriving in town, I spotted a bright-orange salamander sunning himself in the middle of the trail. He had four fluorescent orange dots on each of his sides. I resisted the urge to pick him up and examine his tiny toes. I urged him out of the trail with a small stick so he wouldn't get stepped on.

The weather is warm now and only promises to get warmer, and sticky with the added bonus of all kinds of bugs.

Several people have asked me about the origin of my trail name, "Boats." I have a pair of bright-yellow camp shoes. They are incredibly lightweight but a bit loud. People referred to my shoes, and later to me, as "banana boats." After a while, the banana part dropped and I became "Boats."

Things are going great. I have minor aches and pains, but I press on. The scenery has been so great and the company I have found out here has been as great.

Thanks everyone for your continued support. I rely on your support on the days that I don't feel 100 percent. Please keep thinking of me as I continue my trek up to Maine.

Dexter Township resident Felicia Hermosillo, a graduate of Chelsea High School, is hiking the 2,168-mile Appalachian Trail to help raise money for The Breast Cancer Fund. Want the truth about generic drugs?

Generic drugs work as well as brand-name drugs.

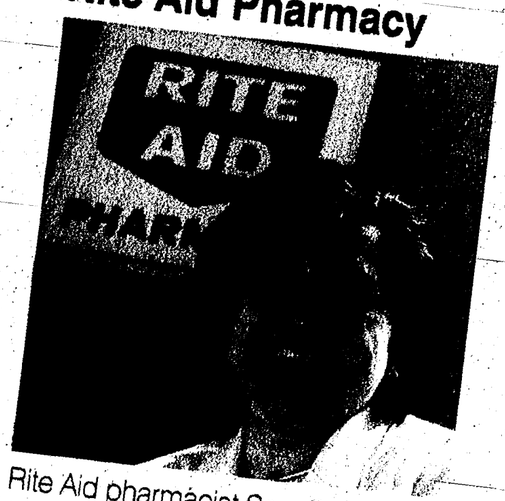

Grand Value Pharmacy

Grand Value pharmacist Kevin White agrees, "Why pay ten times more for a brand name product if there's a generic that's exactly the same and is made at the same plant, but with a different bottle or a different label on it?"

Ask your local pharmacist about generics.

Rite Aid Pharmacy

Rite Aid pharmacist Sara Fakhoury agrees, "I always tell my customers that generics are exactly the same. I take generics home for my family — for my kids, for myself."

According to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's Center for Drug Evaluation and Research

"A generic drug is identical, or bioequivalent, to a brand name drug in dosage form, safety, strength, route of administration, quality, performance characteristics and intended use. Although generic drugs are chemically identical to their branded counterparts, they are typically sold at substantial discounts from the branded price. According to the Congressional Budget Office, generic drugs save consumers an estimated $8 to $10 billion a year at retail pharmacies. Even more billions are saved when hospitals use generics."

'Guys and Dolls' to feature student performances

Twenty Dexter High School seniors will be among the cast and crew of nearly 100 students performing in the musical "Guys and Dolls" March 17, 18 and 19 in the new 800-seat, state-of-the-art Center for Performing Arts, 2200 N. Parker Road.

They will be assuming the roles of gamblers, Hot Box dancers, Save-a-Soul Mission workers, and more in this rollicking romantic comedy.

Eric Statler is the romantic lead as Sky Masterson, the high-rolling gambler who falls for the lovely missionary, Sarah Brown, played by Tricia White. Brown is out to save Masterson's soul from the evils of gambling, but she has other ideas.

Audiences have seen Statler in a number of roles in productions of "The Odd Couple," "Little Shop of Horrors," "The Importance of Being Earnest" and "Grease."

In addition, the teen performs with the high school's symphonic band and leads the parade as a drum major for the Dreadnaught Marching Band.

"When I first saw the movie version of 'Guys and Dolls,' I was hooked," Statler said. "Our production is amazingly energetic and fun to watch."

The production will round out Statler's season at the high school. He will be attending Western Michigan University next fall.

White's beautiful voice and dramatic finesse promises to create trouble for the reluctant Masterson, who doesn't want to leave the action to become an upstanding family man.

She brings experience from the high school chorus, plus an extensive acting background, to her role as Brown. She has performed in productions of "The Odd Couple," "Little Shop of Horrors," "Grease," "Connecticut Yankee" and "Annie."

Also, audiences may remember White from Dexter Community Players' productions of "Return to the Forbidden Planet," "Hello Dolly," "Joseph and the Technicolor Dream Coat" and "Music Man."

"I have been involved in plays and musicals since fifth grade," White said, "so, naturally, I couldn't miss my senior musical. "This is going to be the best musical production put on by DHS. We have awesome performers, excellent directors, music and choreography."

When she's not rehearsing, White works at the Dexter Pharmacy and is heavily involved in YoungLife, a nondenominational Christian youth group. Next fall, she will be majoring in speech pathology at Central Michigan University.

Senior Sam Williamson plays the comic lead, Nathan Detroit, the gambler who won't set the date to marry his longtime fiancée, Miss Adelaide, played by junior Jenna Crawford. Williamson is a relative newcomer to the stage, with previous roles in "Little Shop of Horrors," and in the one-act productions "Canadian Kid," and "Balcony Scene."

Williamson said he wanted to be in "Guys and Dolls" because of his experience in the winter one-acts and the encouragement of Harry Wilcox, the new drama teacher at the high school.

"I love acting," he said. "The direction for 'Guys and Dolls' is great, the vocal direction is fantastic, and it's going to be a great show, an old-fashioned good time."

When he's not acting, Williamson plays soccer, participates in the Model United Nations, and is involved in church and YoungLife. He said his future includes "wife, kids, a job in the computer field and maybe some acting."

Valerie Wilkinson plays Agatha, Brown's best friend at the Save-a-Soul Mission. She is also serving as the stage manager for the production, a responsibility that has her involved in every aspect of the show.

Her previous dramatic experience was in the role of Joy in "Yellow Boat," and as assistant stage manager, assistant student director and understudy for last fall's production of "The Odd Couple."

"This show means a lot to us seniors because it is our last show in high school," she said. "People should come to 'Guys and Dolls' because the cast and crew has put so much work into the production. We have spent hours and hours building, singing, dancing, and performing the same scene over and over again."

Wilkinson is in the high school choir. She is also involved with her church and works at the Dexter library. Next fall, she will be attending Eastern Michigan University, majoring in education. Her goal is to teach middle or high school English and theater.

Corrina Gauss is another senior who will conclude a busy high school theater career with the production. She will play Mimi, one of the Hot Box dancers, and friend and confidant of Miss Adelaide.

Gauss' musical talent has been showcased in "Music Man," "Hello Dolly," "Joseph and the Technicolor Dream Coat," "The Sound of Music," "Grease," and "Little Shop of Horrors." Her favorite role was that of Olive in "The Odd Couple."

"I've been doing theater all through high school and I wasn't about to let this one pass me by," she said. "'Guys and Dolls' will be fabulous, not only because of the beautiful new theater, but because it is full of wonderfully talented people."

Gauss will be attending Bowling Green State University in the fall. "I'm not positive on a major yet, but I know that I will be very active in theater there," she said.

Next week's production will be the acting debut for senior Jon Cook, who will play gambler Society Max.

"Aside from the badgering of Mr. Wilcox," he said, "I wanted to try something new and exciting."

Cook is captain of the varsity swim team and the cross country team. He is in the symphonic band and takes a leadership role as a drum major for the Dreadnaught Marching Band. In addition, he is a member of the National Honor Society.

"The audience will be amazed by the work that has been put into producing 'Guys and Dolls,' and will be captivated by the excitement of the first musical ever performed in the new (theater)," he said.

Cook's plans for the future include earning a degree in international business communications.

Senior Nancy Gaedke will add an international aspect to the production. She is an exchange student from Merseburg, Germany, who has been studying at the high school. She was a cheerleader during the basketball season, and is involved in the high school choir and German Club.

"I love musicals and I have never been in one," she said, "so I thought this would be a good opportunity. This is a very fun show."

These and other seniors fill out the cast and crew of the high school production of "Guys and Dolls." Tickets are $8 and are available for 8 p.m. May 17, 2 and 8 p.m. May 18 and 2 p.m. May 19. All seats are reserved. Group rates are available.

For information and to order tickets, call 424-4240.

Sophomore Zak Murphree and senior John Hughes get into character as they rehearse for the upcoming spring production of "Guys and Dolls." The show is set to open 8 p.m. May 17 at the high school's Center for Performing Arts. The group will perform again 2 and 8 p.m. May 18 and at 2 p.m. May 19. For ticket information, call 426-4240.

"Shadow Tracer"

Holding my little sister's hand,
We skip through the streets,
Just loving the lay of the beautiful land.

The wind nipping at my nose,
As we weave in and out,
Of the Twin Tower's shadows.

Just loving the air,
Never wanting to go back home,
Breathing in and out without a care.

Panic and terror stricken across my face,
As we stumble through,
The same, but now a completely different place,

Instead of the wind, the smoke,
Filling up my chest, my throat,
Making me uncontrollably choke.

Still holding my hand,
My sister stares in disbelief,
Trying in her young mind to understand,

Why there are no more shadows,
Just a huge heap of ruble,
She's so confused, she knows,

That they were here,
Just a day before,
I hug her close and take her near,

She then took her fingers,
And traced the sky,
Where they used to be, where they were.

Sadly, she brings her hand down from the sky,
Examining them curiously,
Wondering how and why?

How can so much alter,
Leaving us behind to stare,
Trying to remember the things that were,

How can things so vivid yesterday,
Be misted over by the smoke,
Leaving us behind, crying in dismay?

I Remember . . .

I remember
Days of nothing but play and laughter
Being made fun of for how I say hundred Barbies, dress up, and high-heeled shoes
Large gaudy necklaces of shells and beads,
Make-up and purses,
Accessories galore
Heart sunglasses
The three musketeers

I remember
Brothers hiding my dolls
Pulling at my hair
Thanksgiving in Tennessee
Late nights of TV with Grams and Aunt Shirley Dad and Uncle Paul out to the antiques
Potatoes for all three meals

I remember
Chicago and Missouri
Friends made and moved
Gorgeous views from the top of the Saint Louis Arc
A speedy black car
Getting mooned by a creep of a guy

I remember
Precious time spent with friends
Laughing and having fun
Shaving cream fights on the last day of school
Skinny-dipping in the fog at 3 A.M.

I remember
Hobbling around on my bright pink cast
Dreaming of becoming An accountant, or maybe a doctor
Dreaming of that day when I will Swim in the ocean off the coast of Hawaii

I remember
Swishing down the rides at Noah's Ark
Pictures with Barbie and breakfast with Mini
Camp days that never lasted long
Things . . . I always will remember

Snow Globe

In subconscious thoughts I hate you
In real life I love you
In my dreams I can beat you
Your charismatic ways intertwined with deception
Have trapped me every time I try to run
My personality suffers from emotional bruising
Inflected by your harsh words
Hope flickers in the depths of my soul
Ignited by the perspective of escape
Escape from your candy coated lies
That slide down my throat and nest in my stomach
Four years I wasted, trampled, by my blindness
Permanent damage done
Never within the grasp of repairing
For the hands of time, sprained with regret, cannot rewind
A heavy heart sinks to my feet
Preventing me from stepping forward in my life
Encased in a snow globe of memories
Chilling me to the bone
Escape is in the child's eye
That shakes me up and down

Thoughts of a Traveler

Beneath a naked night,
I will light in spring,
And who are you?
Between a rain cloud,
And a dream.
A dream of stars,
A moon so bright.
I dream of sun.
I dream of light.
But what a better role to play,
Than that of a traveler, far away.
In the mist
Upon the sky.
I feel wings now
I can fly . . .
Megan Brooks

The Storm

The moon was full.
Rain was falling heavily.
Lightning flared,
the thunder crashed overhead.
Wind howled
with an eerie sound, on the dark summer's night.

Memories

I open the door to my mind
Memories play like an old movie without sound.
The old pictures seem to talk without even moving.
There are no spiders, cobwebs, or dust,
Just these memories playing if they must.
The trunk full of things I laughed and cried about.
They won't stop playing no matter how sad or funny.
Though these memories seem happy and joyful, sad and unhopeful,
They won't stop playing no matter how hard I want to hide them.

Mandy is cute and furry and fine.

Just happens to be mine.
She likes to sneak out to race and run,
And curls up next to me just for fun.
She loves to swing her favorite toy.

Black and White Penguins

Black and white penguins
look like little men, all in tuxedos
in rows of 5-10.

Black and white penguins
with beaks so sharp and wide,
black and white penguins
walk straight in line of pride.

Black and white penguins
have a donkey like bray, they watch out for sea lions while playing in the day.

Black and white penguins
waddle back and forth on foot, seeking through the night and stumble on a root.

Black and white penguins
swim through the day,
black and white penguins
do it for hunt and play.

The Cottage

We wake up early and pack our bags to leave.
When we get to the cottage the sun is reflecting in the lake sparkling red and orange.
Ducks are having babies
the mother duck shows the baby ducks how to swim and she says follow me in a straight line.
Rose runs down to the dock and takes a picture of the duck family.
Night comes we eat
then dad and me go down to the dock
and look at the stars.
The next day
we go fishing
I catch a big fat blue fish.
Dad cleans it
we eat the fish for dinner.

For the Country of America

Red, white and blue are the happiest colors.
They sing through the trees and the balconies.
And the flag swings in the breeze in the morning.
The pageantry of the colors
And the colors of the people
Fly in the breeze like freedom.

AS A BIRD FLIES

As a bird flies
swooping low soaring high circling landing
Oh, to be so free!

As a bird flies
airborne again wings outstretched gliding over woods and meadows
Oh, to be able to fly!

As a bird flies
spiraling up from a nest into the sunrise
as a bird flies!

A Wish To Be A Dragonfly

How I wish to be
A dragonfly,
Daintily swimming through
The sky.
I'd have two giant, jeweled eyes,
Four transparent wings,
A stick-like body and legs.
—Sigh— what wonderful things,
You'd find me
Skimming across aqua freshwater,
Or maybe
Perched atop a blossoming flower.
My wings would flutter (in a second),
30 times!
But being a dragonfly, I don't think I'd
Be able to make anymore rhymes.
Cool! I'd have more than 30,000 facets in my eyes!
But I'd have to eat—
Gross!! Pests and flies.
Maybe I don't want to be
A dragonfly,
Who gracefully glides
With the wind . . . in the sky.
Mary Balkus

I like poems,
What they do,
How they're written,
I don't care,
Imagination, Illustrations,
Poems change feelings,
Ideas,
And what you want,
I don't care what they think of mine,
But rhyming doesn't matter,
I like poems the way they are!

Clean Your Room

My room is a mess.
I spilled crumbs on my new dress.
I have books behind my door,
And sticky slime on my floor,
And clothes hanging out of my drawer.
The ring I got is under my toys,
That give me lots of happiness and joys.
I can't find my happy little guy,
And I really wonder why.
There is melted chocolate on my door,
And much, much more.
There is gooey, goopy paint,
That almost made my mother faint.
So I had better get to work,
Before my mother goes berserk!

STRANDED
I'm stranded,
Only day 1,
I wonder if people are having fun,
In the sun,
Lying on the ground,
Watching birds fly around.

Day 2 was horabibel,
I lay thinking about ice cream,
And all kinds of sweets,
I dream about my friends,
And family,
Food,
And,
Civilization.

Day 3
It's all about me,
My brother's birthday,
The first day I wanted to go away,
To run frantically,
In fields.
Letting the wind comb my hair.

Day 4,
It was a bore,
I felt like snoring,
It was so boring,
I talked to myself about my life,
I want to leave this beehive.

Day 5,
I actually feel alive,
I read a book,
My head it shook,
I took a look at my life,
It is amazing, ya know.

Day 6,
I got sick,
Sick emotionally,
Physically,
And especially mentally.

Day 7,
I wrote to my brother
He hasn't written back,
I told him all I had was a potato sack
And the clothes on my back.

Day 8,
I want to go, I want to live
My life,
I have 1 to live,
"Let me go."

Day 9,
It's almost time for me to leave my Mind.

Day 10,
I want to go away again.

Day 11,
It's the day! I can roam
Free. I can live my life again!
A new day,
I left, I saw my friends,
I never want to get grounded again.

Sandra, Meet the Moon
Looking over my shoulder at the moon
Framed by a window in the clouds
I thought how like you it was last night
A magnificent celebrity
Appearing in the summer sky
A few brief moments, then fading out
Leaving the lighting to fireflies
And the occasional star.

We walked the road at midnight, you and I
So many times
Crunching the gravel and listening to Creatures scuttling in the dark
Trains whistling across the river,
Discussing our fathers, our work,
Our hidden secret selves
As lovers often do.
Totally focused on ourselves
As children often are.
When you first saw the moon each night
You bowed to it and owned it
Introducing us (Sandra, meet the moon)
Like guests at a party
Who had never met before.
And we hadn't – not like that.

Walking the road alone last night
Looking over my shoulder
I noticed the moon looks older
Since you've gone.

Mountains
She was riding
Mountains, Expecting
Snow peaks
And volcanic Eruptions.
She got Oatmeal
And Sundays
Off.
Bowls full of days,
Cartoons for light,
Sandwiches in between
When she was lucky
And there was time.
Linens like truce
Flags,
Over and over,
On the line-in-the-sky,
As high as her reach,
Pin after pin,
After pain,
Afterbirth,
After later,
After all,
All over the yard
After the baby,
Now walking,
Pulled them
Down to the ground,
To his face,
To his feet,
To his shriek
When the wind chose
One
To fly away
"To the mountains,"
She promised him.

Simple
I stopped at a red light,
Turned my head
And it was autumn.
Sitting on the curb
Of the school parking lot
A grandfather –
And a child,
A young girl.
She was dancing
Kind of – play dancing,
Twirling,
A movement only children make.
And he watched.
And the light changed.
And I drove away.
Life had moved on.

When Woman Makes A Fist
Once, many years ago
I overhead my mother tell my father that
"A fist in a woman is not a sign of violence,"
I had been angry earlier that day
And my hands congealed, clenched by my sides
I shouted, but never thought to strike
To swing my fists and pummel as men often do

My mother knew this at the time
Understood; because she too is a woman
Because a fist in a woman is not a sign of violence
Because when woman makes a fist, she squeezes
Twisting blood from her fingertips flowing back into her body
Frustration from her fingertips jolting up to her tongue
Strength from her fingertips pushed pulsing into her chest
When woman's fists draw up her arms,
Form angled tension in her sinews, it echoes
An ancient, aching impulse
A legacy of hushed reluctant patience
Handed silently from mothers to daughters
Under the well-set dinner tables and ironing boards
When woman makes a fist it is a silent scream
Of exasperation and endurance. A pain
Concealed beneath brassiered and bridled curves
Beneath lipstick, rouge, paint and powder
A pain preserved by mildness and discretion
So that when woman makes a fist,
She moves not to strike, but pushes it down deeper
Expels her rage and anguish in words
She siphons up strength and composure
From her clenched calloused fingers
And submerges her outrage
She makes a third fist knotted tighter
Deep in the pit of her stomach
A lump of stone in her womb
To grow and bear wanton restlessness
Set low and tight and heavy within her
Swinging her to grace.
The pendulum of woman's stride is the silent
The swaying drowned detritus of power that remains
When woman makes a fist.

Significance
It is beautiful, that light, as it
Shatters into a million pieces of brilliant glass,
Each spinning, revolving, and floating
In their own atmospheres around me.
Fragmented inches of life —
Thrown at me in the magnificence of the instant,
Where each white light touches and covers me whole.
Tingling electricity flows like a flooded river out of me
Into this light, this awesome display of the sun and moon,
The stars, the soul, the universe — life.
Euphoria could not have been better,
But peace certainly overwhelmed my being as well.
Existence had paused it seemed; a frozen moment in time,
Where only I experienced something unknown to mankind.
I could not sense its arrival, nor could I see, smell, hear, touch, or taste it.
I can merely understand the glory in its arrival as it swallows me whole.
All I can imagine is the true emotion evoked from all of life — happiness.
It is beautiful, that light, and only the dead can see it.

Factory
A mindless factory
Producing all
The gears turn
Slowly . . . slowly
Another mind is created
With each cog of every gear
All different, yet all the same
The machine plods on
It does its duty well
Never wearing down
A beginning of joy

The other end, however
Every mind fears
The chute into the darkness
The black expansive abyss
Every time the machine creates a mind
Another falls to the black
An end of grief

And the factory continues
Never waning at its work
Its parts well-oiled
Mechanical life
And slowly work it does

Breaking and Entering

Someone broke into a garage between April 28 and April 29 in the 1600 block of Baker Road.

The homeowner told Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputies that he had a garage sale on April 27 and an open house the following day. He noticed a chain saw and a scanner were missing after the events. The items are worth approximately $300.

The victim said he heard his dogs barking at about midnight April 29, but thought they might have been barking at wildlife.

Larceny

A total of 50 compact discs were stolen from a car between April 30 and May 1. The car was parked at Banfield's Westside Grill and Tavern, 5510 Jackson Road.

The owner of the car works at the restaurant. When she left work at 1 a.m. May 1, she noticed her passenger door was smashed and the CDs, valued at $900, were missing.

Warrant Arrest

A 22-year-old Garden City man was arrested on a warrant April 26 at Meijer, 5645 Jackson Road.

Deputies noticed the man sitting in his car outside Meijer. A store worker called 911 after they suspected the man in the car to be smoking marijuana.

Deputies spoke to the man and checked his identification with the Law Enforcement Information Network. He was wanted for a bench warrant in Washtenaw County and was taken to the Washtenaw County Jail.

A 43-year-old Ypsilanti man was arrested on a warrant at 1 a.m. near the intersection of Staebler and Park roads. Deputies noticed the suspect while driving south on Staebler Road near Scio Farms Estates, 6655 Jackson Road.

They said the man was driving his car with a burned out taillight. When deputies stopped the man, they checked his identification with the Law Enforcement Information Network.

The man was wanted by the Ann Arbor Police Department for failing to appear in court on misdemeanor charges. He was taken to the Washtenaw County Jail.

Shoplifting

A 17-year-old Gregory boy was arrested for shoplifting April 29 at Meijer, 5645 Jackson Road.

The boy attempted to take approximately $122 worth of merchandise. Loss prevention personnel saw the boy unwrap a compact disc and put it into his coat pocket. Store workers followed the suspect to the front of the store, where he did not pay for the items in his pocket.

The boy was stopped when he tried leaving the store with the merchandise. The boy told store workers that he was stealing the items to sell because he doesn't have a place to live or any food.

The boy was trying to steal a compact disc player, a car adaptor and two key chains. He was taken to the Washtenaw County Jail.

Webster Township

Unauthorized Driving Away of Vehicle

A van was taken between April 27 and April 28 from a home in the 4400 block of West Loch Alpine Drive. It was recovered on the side of a road in Lima Township after sustaining extensive damage in a crash.

The owner said he parked it in his garage, but could not remember if the garage door was open or not. He doesn't know who would have taken it.

The man remembered that a couple of weeks ago he misplaced a set of van keys. He wasn't sure if they were stolen or misplaced.

Drunken Driving

A 45-year-old Pinckney man was arrested for drunken driving May 2 in the 7600 block of Huron River Drive.

He had parked his car in the parking lot at the Dexter United Methodist Church, 7643 Huron River Drive, and witnesses called 911. They told deputies that the man appeared to be drunk.

When deputies talked to the man, they could smell a strong odor of alcohol on his breath. They also noticed a beer can in the front seat of his car.

The suspect was given a Breathalyzer test. His blood-alcohol level was .17 percent. A blood-alcohol level of .10 percent or higher is considered legally drunk under Michigan law. He was taken to Washtenaw County Jail.

Breaking and Entering

A chain saw and a generator were stolen between May 1 and May 2 from a garage in the 7400 block of Scully Road.

On May 2, the homeowner approached his garage and noticed that the side door was partially open. He wasn't sure if the door was locked the day before.

The man said that the last time he saw the items, valued at $1,500, was April 30.

Larceny

An all-terrain vehicle was stolen between May 1 and May 3 from the 9700 block of Merrill Road.

The four-wheeler, valued at $4,700, was parked near a pole barn with the key in the ignition. The owner noticed it was missing May 3.

Dexter Township

Drunken Driving

A 28-year-old Gregory man was arrested May 3 for drunken driving near the intersection of Dexter Townhall and Island Lake roads.

Deputies noticed the man speeding on Island Lake Road. He was driving 64 mph in a 45-mph zone. When they stopped the man, they could smell a strong odor of alcohol on his breath.

The driver was given several sobriety tests and failed them. A Breathalyzer test showed his blood-alcohol level to be .18 percent. A blood-alcohol level of .10 percent or higher is considered legally drunk under Michigan law. He was taken to the Washtenaw County Jail.

Dexter Village

Property Damage

Someone slashed three tires on a car between May 3 and May 4. The car was parked in a lot in the 2400 block of Dongara Drive in Walkabout Creek Apartments.

The car was parked in a dark area with three other vehicles. The tires are worth $400.

Chelsea Village

Larceny

Jewelry and a pair of shorts were stolen April 30 from a locker room at Chelsea High School, 740 N. Freer Road.

The owner of the items put them in a duffel bag and left the bag near a bench in the gym locker room before leaving for a baseball game.

When he came back to the school at 9:30 p.m., the teen noticed that the items were missing. A watch, necklace and a pair of shorts were taken. They are worth approximately $300.

Urinating in Public

A 17-year-old girl was caught urinating in public April 30 near Chelsea High School, 740 N. Freer Road.

An officer noticed the girl walk away from her car and toward the woods on the north side of the school parking lot. The girl pulled down her pants and squatted to urinate.

When she noticed the officer, she quickly pulled up her pants and ran. Police caught the girl and gave her a written citation.

We can help solve traffic problems

GREGORY PARKER

COMMUNITY ROOTS

EDITOR'S NOTE – This is the second of a two-part series where columnist Gregory Parker looks at traffic problems in Chelsea.

Last week, I discussed the four main issues with traffic in Chelsea: inconvenience, quality of life, safety and cost.

This week, instead of just complaining, I'm going to try to present some solutions.

In short, I hold that the amount and type of traffic on Chelsea's roads, especially along the M-52 and Main Street corridors, is one of the village's most pressing issues.

A disproportionate number of commercial trucks (semi tractor-trailers, gravel haulers etc.) blast down Main Street, shaking houses, creating potential safety hazards and deteriorating roads at an accelerated pace. "Through" traffic – vehicles just passing through – uses Chelsea's roads and presents negative benefits, in terms of noise and congestion, to those who live here. As Chelsea grows, internal traffic will only continue to snarl downtown.

Increased development in surrounding communities, as well as increased commercial development, means that this traffic isn't going to disappear anytime soon.

Now, don't get me wrong – I'm not talking about gridlock on Main Street. But I am talking about quality-of-life issues, as well as preserving the small-town nature of Chelsea. In other words, we can't let our beautiful downtown be turned into a quasi-expressway any more than it already is.

While we cross our fingers and hope for an ecologically sound, non-sprawl-inducing bypass, we have to find other ways to manage our traffic, especially given the inevitability that it will continue to increase.

So here's what we can do.

First, you can consider it a political act to follow the speed limit. Sure, 25 miles per hour is slow. It's crawling. But in a congested area, with lots of driveways and intersections and high traffic volumes, as well as people walking and living close to the street, it's necessary to obey the posted limits.

And since most people won't pass you in the downtown area, you can be sure that if you're driving 25, the people behind you will, too.

Speaking of speed limits, the village could work with the state to lower the posted limit on M-52 near the southern part of town from 45 to 35. And while they're at it, they could work to lower the limit north of Old US-12, where Main Street really begins, from 35 to 25.

The village could also lay down the law in terms of enforcing posted limits. I'm not talking about a police state, and I'm not talking about speed traps.

I'm talking about stopping cars from blasting through during rush hour at close to double the posted limit. I'm talking about drivers absentmindedly coasting down the hill on Main Street at 35 or 40.

I'm also talking about policing the commercial trucks that travel through town. These vehicles, which create exponentially more noise and take much longer to stop than cars, bring to mind a Wild West stampede when they're traveling only five over the limit. Keeping them in check is essential to any traffic management strategy.

And if these trucks are using M-52 as a way of avoiding the scales on the Interstates, then bring in portable scales and fine them. Because an overweight semi tractor-trailer can do serious damage to a road. It's downright dangerous, too.

In general, enforcement of basic traffic rules would help matters immensely.

We need the Village Council's leadership here. We need the council to make it a point to enforce the traffic rules in town.

But herein lies a problem. Chelsea's police officers already have enough to do without dedicating more attention to traffic enforcement, to which they already devote a significant amount of time.

So if it takes another officer to increase the village's traffic patrols, then maybe this needs to happen. Perhaps the higher revenues from traffic fines could partially fund this endeavor.

The council could also adopt a general noise ordinance for the town – or enforce the state's existing motor vehicle noise codes – which would help address extra-loud commercial trucks.

To top it off, it'd be easy for the council to adopt an ordinance forbidding engine breaking by commercial trucks. No more of that loud, popping sound as trucks decelerate through town.

There are everyday things that we can do, too. We can leave our cars at home for simple errands. We can drive the speed limit. We can make it a special point to follow basic traffic rules, giving pedestrians the right of way, coming to a complete stop at stop signs and not tailgating. And we can talk to council members about traffic management, encouraging them to consider progressive solutions.

Something else might help, too. Limit development. Endorse regional planning.

And, hey, let's not forget about that bypass.

JACKIE HARRISON-MARTIN

HOME FRONT

Three-year-old Jerren Rayshaun stays with his grandmother during the day while his parents work. Each day he gets a report sent home with him, decorated with stickers for good behavior and being a member of the "clean plate club," if he finishes all of his food.

Jerren received a bad report recently. It informed his parents that when things don't go his way, he yells, "Jesus!" in frustration.

His parents were shocked and called Grandma upon reading the report. She gave the parents a lecture on inappropriate language for children and warned them that she would be firm with Jerren to deter him from using Jesus' name in such a manner.

Grandma picked up Jerren the next day as usual. On the way into her front door, she tripped on the steps and almost fell on top of the child.

"JESUS!" she yelled.

Aaaahaaaa!

Sure, children say the darnedest things, and there's a good reason.

It's because adults say the darnedest things in front of them.

That doesn't come from a Harvard University study. The proof of that statement comes right out of my house, and your house, too, I'm sure.

No elaborate study is necessary. If you don't want children to repeat what you say, you'd better not say it in front of them.

This grandma told me she apologized to Jerren's parents upon realizing she was at the root of the problem. I told her I certainly was not without fault.

I picked up my sons, Jalen, 3, and Jordan, 7, the other day from my husband's job. Jordan got in the car with some candy that looked like a long, flat, rolled-up strip of gum with some kind of powdered sugar all over it.

I rolled my eyes at it and asked, "Where did you get that crap?"

"Daddy bought it for me," he said.

Jalen wanted some.

"Mom, can I have some crap?"

Aaaahaaaa!

If you don't want children to repeat what you say, you'd better not say it in front of them.

I ignored him, realizing I had just inadvertently named the candy for him. Jordan was tickled to death.

Thinking I was ignoring him because he didn't ask properly (which I have been known to do when sentences start with "gimme"), Jalen rephrased his question and said it nice and slow for me.

"MAY, I, HAVE, SOME, CRAP, PLEASE?"

Jordan was doubled over in the back seat. And I admit, I laughed, too. I tried to fix it, but the damage was done.

I was expressing my guilt over this at work when a co-worker chimed in with his own story.

He said he was watching Michigan State University's basketball team taking on Penn State University last season with his son.

My co-worker, the obsessed MSU fan that he is, began yelling at the television, trying to motivate his team. He couldn't believe the Spartans were only one point ahead just before halftime.

"Come on!" he pleaded with MSU through the television. "These guys suck!"

"Suck!" his toddler shouted over and over again.

Aaaahaaaa!

It was too late to take it back. Out of everything Dad had said that day, guess what new and exciting word his little boy picked to put into his vocabulary?

Unfortunately, he decided to share his new word throughout the day with his nursery school classmates.

Now the toddler can tell Dad how being put in "timeout" really — uhhhh — stinks.

Sometimes when children say the darnedest things, it inadvertently gets our attention.

There is a little boy on my street, about 4 years old, who, I'm sure, is very familiar with being put in timeout. His shoestrings frequently are missing from his shoes, his face almost always is dirty and it seems like his house is overcrowded with brothers, sisters, cousins, aunts, uncles and parents who never supervise the children.

The little tyke, who is thin as a rail, stared at the cup of ice water I was sipping the other day while sitting on the front porch.

"That water sure looks good," he said.

I knew what was coming next. Instead of walking down the street to his house to get some water, he was going to ask me to go get him some.

"We ran out of water," he said shaking his head in disappointment. "The kitchen ran out of water, the bathroom ran out of water ... We just ran out."

Jeeezzz.

Obviously, the water was shut off at his house. I gave him some water. And when his cousin asked for some, I gave her some, too.

Only a child can say something like that in such a way that it almost takes the seriousness out of the situation.

Children give us plenty of material to laugh about and share with our co-workers and friends. But we also have to remember to listen to them, too.

Every now and then, there is a message in what they have to say, no matter how goofy it sounds when they say it.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

CATS board, director continue relationship

I would like to clarify recent information printed in The Chelsea Standard as part of the Chelsea Village Council's minutes. Michaelene Pawlak, director of the Chelsea Area Transportation System, is currently fulfilling all areas of her employment. The relationship between her and the CATS board has been and remains very positive.

At a CATS board meeting in March, the board and Michaelene agreed to continue her contract another year. Her contract is reviewed on an annual basis.

As CATS grows, so does the budget. So, we struggle with raising more funds for operational purposes. We currently have three buses with the possibility through grants to purchase a replacement bus and one handicap-accessible van by the year 2003.

That was one of the reasons the CATS board asked the Chelsea Village Council for additional funds. The request for the increase was denied, but what actually transpired was the council reduced its in-kind funding.

CATS has not changed its vision. Through better organization, we have begun to widen it to include the general public. As our mission statement verifies: "Chelsea Area Transportation System Inc. is a nonprofit service organization that exists to provide affordable transportation for older adults, persons with disabilities and other transit-dependant populations in the Chelsea area."

Lastly, I personally, as well as CATS board members, appreciate those who support CATS by the way of contributions, grants and in-kind funds. The CATS board is striving to make CATS a transportation system that our communities can be proud of.

Chelsea meet with Lincoln comes down to final race

By Don Richter
Staff Writer

After all the jumping, all the throwing and all the running, Chelsea's meet with Ypsilanti Lincoln April 30 came down to the day's final event, the 1,600-meter relay.

The situation for the visiting Bulldogs was simple: Win the race, win the meet. Lose the race, lose the meet.

The relay, as one might expect, was close. Chelsea anchor Savannah Hyssong, however, pulled it out for the Dawgs, passing the Railsplitter runner on the final turn before sprinting to victory.

Teaming with Hyssong to close out the meet were Kari Moyle, Kim Gasleski and Sarah Brigham. The foursome came up huge when their team needed it most, clocking a season best 4:15.0 to clinch the win. Lincoln crossed the line a second later at 4:16.0.

"We had about the same kind of meet with them last year," Chelsea coach Bill Bainton said about last season's 69-68 loss. "We didn't say much about it, but I think that was in some of our minds. We didn't want the same outcome again.

"The relay team turned in an outstanding performance. We also had a lot of other fine efforts."

One of those fine efforts came from Alice Gauvin, who placed first in three events for the Bulldogs. She broke the tape first in the 3,200-meter run with a time of 12:24.1, was first in the 1,600-meter run in 6:08.9 and bested the field in the 800-meter run with a time of 2:33.3.

In the 3,200-meter relay, the Chelsea foursome of Kara Stiles, Shannon Kinner, Danielle Houle and Liz Skidmore placed first in 11:47.6.

In four distance events, the Bulldogs out scored the Railsplitters 31-1.

"We thought we could score a lot on them in the distances, so our strategy was to run people three times to get the points," Bainton said. "The girls made it happen."

Chelsea also made it happen in field events. The Bulldogs captured four out of five events.

Defending state champion Kari Taylor won the shot put (40 feet, 4 inches) and the discus (128-6). Brigham picked up a win in the high jump (4-10). Danielle Montpetit placed first in the pole vault, clearing 8-6. Jessica Percha finished third in the long jump, leaping a career-best 14-7.

In the 100 meters, Hyssong placed second in 13.2, while Shanks was third in 13.7. In the 300-meter hurdles, Nina Kramer finished second in 53.2.

Bainton said he wasn't surprised the meet came down to the final race.

"We had the meet figured to be this close," he said.

Chelsea (3-1, 2-0) is in first place in the Southeastern Conference White Division.

The Bulldogs next travel to Lansing to participate in the Waverly Invitational tomorrow.

On Tuesday, Chelsea hosts Saline for a dual meet at 4:30 p.m.

Bulldog baseball winners of last nine of 10 games

Chelsea baseball defeated host Milan in a doubleheader sweep 2-1 and 5-4 last Friday.

With their two victories over the Big Reds, who came into the contest with an 11-1 overall record, the Bulldogs (12-6-1, 6-2) have won nine of their last 10 ballgames.

"We're playing well," said Chelsea coach Wayne Welton.

Numerous players have contributed to Chelsea's recent streak.

The Bulldogs have been getting strong pitching and consistent hitting from throughout their line-up.

Against Milan, in Game 1, junior Joe Myers out dueled his Big Red counterpart, pitching seven innings, allowing six hits, striking out seven and walking one for the win.

"He pitched very well," Welton said. "On defense, we made the plays behind him. We had no errors."

Chelsea scored its two runs in the fourth inning on junior Jimmy Baker's base hit and Myers' 2-run home run.

Milan scored its lone run in the sixth inning.

"That was a good high school baseball game," Welton said.

Leading the Bulldogs offensively were senior Matt Moffett and Baker, who each finished with two hits.

In the nightcap, Baker went the distance for the victory, throwing a five-hitter, fanning six and walking five.

A four-run comeback in the top of the seventh inning won the game for the Bulldogs.

Down 4-1 heading into its last at bat, Chelsea reeled off six straight singles by Matt Eckler, Brett Putman, Ben Daniels, Tim Wacker, Griffin Biedron and Matt Horvath, along with a Moffett RBI ground out, to rally for the lead.

In the bottom of the seventh inning, the Big Reds threatened to grasp victory away from the Bulldogs.

With two outs and runners at second and third base, a Milan hitter ripped a line drive up the gap in right centerfield, but Chelsea's Ronnie Herrst ran down the shot, catching the ball for the night's final out and a Bulldog hard earned "W."

"That was a huge play to end the game with," Welton said. "He made a great catch."

Chelsea junior Jimmy Baker has helped the Bulldogs win nine of their last 10 games. Baker has been a stalwart both on the mound and at the plate for Chelsea in its recent winning streak.

To begin the game, Milan scored single runs in the fourth and fifth innings for a 2-0 lead heading into the sixth inning.

In the top of the sixth, Horvath clubbed a two-out RBI double, trimming the Big Reds' lead to 2-1.

Milan scored two additional runs in the bottom of the sixth for a seemingly safe 4-1 margin, before the Dawgs rallied late.

Last Thursday, Chelsea split a doubleheader with visiting county rival Dexter, losing Game 1 5-2 and winning Game 2 11-0.

In the opener, the Bulldogs committed two errors and had five walks in the first two innings, allowing the Dreadnaughts to break out to a 4-0 lead.

"That really put us behind," Welton said.

Chelsea regrouped in the bottom of the second inning, as Myers singled and was brought home later on Putman's RBI double.

In the fourth inning, Myers reached base on an error and was later brought home by a Daniels groundout.

In the seventh inning, Dexter scored an insurance run for the game's final margin.

Despite the setback, Welton said he was pleased with one player's performance.

"The highlight of the game was the pitching of Kent Reames," he said. "He came in in the second inning and went the rest of the way."

Reames, a senior, allowed one hit and fanned six in five and a third innings.

"It was his best outing on the mound this season," Welton said.

It was the early game miscues, however, that hurt Chelsea.

"The errors and the walks killed us," Welton said. "Plus, (pitcher) Josh Brown was tough for Dexter."

Moffett finished with two hits, while Horvath, Myers and Putman each contributed one hit for the Bulldogs.

In the second game, Chelsea earned a mercy-rule victory.

David Grabarkiewicz (3-0) picked up the win from the hill for the Bulldogs, tossing a three-hitter, striking out five and walking one.

"This was his second straight really good outing," Welton said.

Chelsea jumped all over the Dreadnaughts, scoring runs in all five innings.

Getting key hits for the Bulldogs in the game were Myers with a two-run RBI double, Horvath with a bases-loaded double, and Tim Bentley, Biedron and Baker, who all had RBI doubles.

On April 29, Chelsea swept host Tecumseh, winning 11-6 and 12-9.

In the first game, Baker chalked up the win from the rubber, throwing a complete game five-hitter with six strikeouts.

With the score deadlocked at 1-1 in the third inning, Chelsea broke the game open with a Baker two-run home run and a Myers solo shot.

In the sixth inning, the Bulldogs continued to pound the ball, scoring four times on hits by Daniels and Bentley, a RBI single by Horvath and a two-run RBI single by Biedron.

In the seventh inning, Horvath stroked a RBI double, followed by a Moffett towering roundtripper.

"He hit that three-fourths up the light pole in rightfield," Welton said.

Horvath, recently back from injury, paced the Bulldogs offensively with four hits.

"He's been a big addition to our line-up," Welton said.

Besides Horvath, Moffett,

...each team having quality scoring chances, but neither squad able to convert.

"It was frustrating for us because we had numerous breakaways that we didn't finish," Orlandi said. "But, at the same time, our defense made key mistakes and we were fortunate to escape with a tie."

Chelsea out shot Tecumseh for the game 11-6.

On May 1, the Bulldogs lost to Division I No. 3-ranked Ann Arbor Pioneer 6-0.

The Pioneers jumped on Chelsea early, taking a 4-0 first half lead.

"Our defense played reasonably well," Orlandi said. "But we gave up too many easy chances in the first half. In the second half we were much better. They had to earn their goals that half."

Pioneer out shot Chelsea 25-...

"We had some good possessions in their end at times, but ... was too solid to ... chances."

"All in all, this was another outstanding performance for us," said Chelsea coach Jim Tallman. "It was our best team score ever for a tournament, and the field was very strong."

On May 1, the Bulldogs participated in a tri-match along with Ann Arbor Pioneer and Ann Arbor Huron at the University of Michigan Golf Course.

Pioneer came out on top, scoring a 195. The Bulldogs were second, with a 207, while the River Rats were third with a team tally of 210.

"Scores were five to six strokes above what they have been lately," Tallman said. "But (it was) still respectable considering the difficulty of the course."

Pacing Chelsea (8-3) was Crane, who shot a 49. Following her was Martin with a 51, Lane with a 52 and Inwood with a 55.

The Bulldogs next host the Southeastern Conference White Division Quad at Reddeman Farms Monday at 3 p.m.

On Wednesday, Chelsea travels to Ypsilanti Lincoln for a match at 2:30 p.m.

Baker and Myers each collected two hits.

The Indians scored four runs in their half of the seventh inning for the ending margin.

In Game 2, Chelsea led 4-0 heading into the bottom of the second inning before the Tecumseh bats came to life.

Helped along by an error and two walks, the Indians scored six runs in the frame, taking a 6-4 advantage into the third inning.

Chelsea, however, brought three runs home in the stanza to regain the lead at 7-6. The inning was sparked by Bentley's two-run home run, his first of the year.

The Bulldog lead wouldn't last long, as the Indians came right back with three runs of their own in the bottom of the third inning. With two out in the frame, Chelsea committed back-to-back errors. The defensive lapses led to a Jimmy Roehm three-run home run and a 9-7 Tecumseh lead.

The Bulldogs refused to wilt, however, pushing across four runs in the top of the fourth inning for an 11-9 advantage.

Key hits in the stanza included Moffett's three-run double, Horvath's RBI single, and singles by Eckler and Bentley.

In the seventh inning, Chelsea added an insurance run on Myers' RBI single, scoring Horvath, who had walked earlier in the frame.

Myers earned the victory from the mound, allowing three earned runs and striking out seven.

Welton came away impressed with Myers.

"He pitched very well," he said. "He didn't have his best stuff, but he hung in there. He had a great competitive spirit. He showed me something."

Chelsea next travels to Ypsilanti Lincoln today for a doubleheader at 4 p.m. The contest could decide the Southeastern Conference White Division championship. The Railsplitters are one game behind the Bulldogs in the league standings with a 5-3 record.

"It's a big day," Welton said. "This could decide who wins the title."

On Saturday, Chelsea hosts Jackson.

On Monday, the Bulldogs host Tecumseh at 4 p.m.

On Tuesday, Chelsea hosts Jackson Northwest at 4 p.m.

Chelsea tracksters top Lincoln

By Don Richter
Staff Writer

Chelsea's boys' track and field defeated Ypsilanti Lincoln 99-38 April 30.

The Bulldogs (2-0) swept all four relays.

The Chelsea group of Andy Montero, Adam Montero, Eddie McClendon and Darl Bauer finished first in both the 400-meter relay (45.3) and the 800-meter relay (1:35.0).

In the 1,600-meter relay, the Bulldog foursome of Adam Montero, Levi Hyssong, Kevin Riddle and Robert Houle finished first in 3:46.1.

In the 3,200-meter relay, the Chelsea combo of Hugh White, Andy Hurst, Riddle and Hyssong placed first in 8:54.

In field events, Joe Tripodi was a double winner in the shot put (58 feet, 10½ inches) and the discus (159-1). His throw in the shot put set a new school record.

"In my view, he is the best thrower ever to attend a SEC (Southeastern Conference) school," said Chelsea coach Eric Swager.

In sprints, Bauer bested the field in the 100 meters with a time of 11.2, while McClendon was first in the 200 meters, clocking a 24.4.

Bulldog senior Eddie McClendon is one of Chelsea's top sprinters. Last week he helped lead the Dawgs to a dual meet victory over Ypsilanti Lincoln.

Riddle finished first in the 800 meters for the Bulldogs, ending up with a 2:08.

"He had a fine day, running his season best split in the 3,200 and 1,600 relays and winning the 800," Swager said.

In long distances, Cage Cowan was first in the 1,600-meter run with a time of 4:59, while David Fedele placed first in the 3,200-meter run in 10:38.

In the 110-meter hurdles, Ian Galvin finished second in 16.5. Nathan Clark was third in 17.0.

"This was a solid win for us," Swager said. "Lincoln is the defending league champion and we wanted to beat them for our second win. We had some good performances across the board to solidify the victory."

Chelsea next travels to Lansing Waverly for its invitational tomorrow.

On Tuesday, the Bulldogs host Saline at 4:30 p.m.

Salute to Our Local

Thanks to increased awareness and the combined efforts of communities and law-enforcement officials, crime has reached record lows in recent years, according to FBI statistics. However, there is still far to go. From violence in schools to hate crimes to more random attacks, predators are still out there in numerous supply. Women are at risk for becoming a victim of a violent crime particularly because of their generally smaller stature and physical strength which often doesn't match that of a male, says Pat Malone, a former FBI agent, self-defense expert and international licensed police self-defense instructor.

In honor of National Crime Prevention Month, here are some tips to help you stay safe in your community.

AROUND THE CAR

An attack can happen right in the parking lot of your favorite store. Women have a tendency to get into their cars after shopping and just sit as they balance their checkbooks or cross something off of a list. Don't do this; a predator could be watching, assessing the perfect opportunity to attack you. As soon as you get into your car, lock the doors and leave. Here are a few other tips for around the car:

- Cars parked by your car — Look at the car parked on the driver's side of your vehicle and the passenger side. If someone is sitting

Bulldog softball keeps winning

By Don Richter
Staff Writer

Chelsea softball pounded Milan last Friday, winning a doubleheader in convincing fashion 18-2 and 11-1.

The Bulldogs (15-2-1, 6-1-1), ranked No. 10 in Division II, put a big hurt on the Big Reds.

In Game 1, Chelsea's 18 runs were a season high.

Sophomore Jenna Connelly picked up the win from the circle, tossing three innings, allowing no runs, no hits, no walks and striking out six.

Junior Carly Daniels finished the game, throwing the final three innings, allowing two runs, five hits, walking one and fanning four.

Senior shortstop Stephanie Crews led the offense for Chelsea, collecting three hits, including a double and three RBIs. Senior Jenelle Vicek added two doubles, a single and three RBIs, while senior Tracy Carter chipped in a double and two RBIs for the Bulldogs.

Chelsea scored nine runs in the sixth inning to break the game wide open.

In the nightcap, senior pitcher Cara Long chalked up the victory, yielding one run on four hits, walking two and striking out four.

Juniors Anna Arend and Julia Arnold paced the Bulldogs from the plate. Arend finished with two doubles and four RBIs, while Arnold had three hits, including a double.

Last Thursday, the Bulldogs swept county rival Dexter, prevailing in a doubleheader 1-0 and 3-1.

Connelly earned the win in the opener, scattering six hits, walking one and fanning 11.

Chelsea scored the game's lone run in the sixth inning. With one out, sophomore Katrina Moffett walked and was subsequently sacrificed to second base by senior Connie Kolokithas.

With two out, and Moffett still standing at second base, Crews belted a game-winning RBI double. The clutch hit came off Dexter's Jennie Ritter, who has signed with the University of Michigan.

In Game 2, Connelly recorded the victory from the rubber, pitching three innings, surrendering three hits, walking two and fanning six. Long started the contest, throwing three innings and walking one.

Offensively, the Bulldogs scored two runs in the third inning and one in the fifth inning.

Leading Chelsea's attack was Vicek with three RBI and Moffett with two hits. Moffett's feat was made even more impressive after she was hit in the head early in the game by a Ritter fastball. Ritter throws in the mid-60s.

"She really came back," said Chelsea coach Kim Reichard. "She's a tough kid."

The Bulldogs next travel to Ypsilanti Lincoln for a doubleheader today at 4 p.m.

Frosh soccer battles rival

By Don Richter
Staff Writer

Despite a spirited effort, Chelsea's freshman girls' soccer team dropped a hard-fought 3-2 game to county rival Dexter last Thursday.

"This was a great game between two evenly matched rivals," Chelsea coach James Hicks said. "(We) made a strong push late in the game to try and even the score, but Dexter's defense stood the test, spraying long balls to clear their zone."

The Dreadnaughts led 2-1 at halftime.

Scoring unassisted for the Bulldogs (2-5-1) was Chelsea Taylor at the 28-minute mark. Her goal tied the game at 1-1.

In the first half, Dexter out shot Chelsea 4-1.

Bulldog keeper Meg Wheeler recorded three saves.

In the second half, the visiting Dreadnaughts increased their lead to 3-1 scoring at the 45-minute mark.

Chelsea answered 10 minutes later, as Taylor notched her second goal of the game off an assist from Lindsey Olsen.

For the contest, Dexter out shot the Bulldogs 8-5.

On April 30, Chelsea shut out Plymouth Canton 1-0.

Scoring the Bulldogs' goal was Hanna Taylor. She deflected a crossing shot by teammate Anne Seelbach past the Chief keeper at the 22-minute mark for the day's only tally.

For the game, Chelsea out shot Canton 15-8.

Sharing the shutout in net for the Bulldogs were Whitney Branson and Wheeler.

Branson made four saves, while Whitney recorded three saves.

"Due to a music contest and injuries, we played with 10 players for the whole game," Hicks said. "Actually, in the second half, we went with nine players for six minutes because of an injury."

Despite the lack of players, Hicks said his squad still controlled the contest.

"We dominated the game until late in the second half when Canton made some gallant attempts to go the length of the field," he said. "As tired as the girls were, they were able to track down the ball or allow harmless outside shots. This was a great team effort by the 10 able to play."

Chelsea next hosts Saline today at 4:30 p.m.

On Tuesday, the Bulldogs travel to Walled Lake Central for a game at 6:30 p.m.

Police Departments

alone in the seat nearest your car, you may want to find a guard/police officer to walk you to your car. It's always better to be safe than sorry. If you are parked next to a big van, enter your car from the passenger door. Most serial killers attack their victims by pulling them into a van.

- Sympathy ploy — Don't be too quick to offer help to a stranger — as harsh as that may seem. That "handicapped" individual or well-dressed man who asks for help may actually be a predator. After all, Ted Bundy was a charming, attractive man who played on the sympathies of dozens of women.

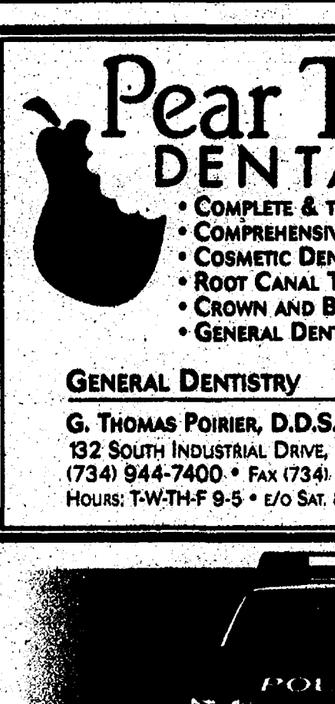

SELF-DEFENSE TACTICS

If you do find yourself under attack, here are some strategies from Malone:

- If the predator has a gun and you are not under his control, always run! The predator statistically can only hit a running target four in 100 times. And even then, he most likely will not hit a vital organ.
- Aim for weak points on the body. The eyes and the knees are weak areas on everyone — even a burly attacker. Gouging the eyes or kicking the knees may bide you enough time to run.
- Find an obstacle and put it between you and the predator. Or, run around the object like "Ring Around the Rosie." This may sound silly, but over the years Malone says this technique saved several lives.
- Scream "Fire!" People usually don't want to get involved when someone yells "help," but "fire" draws attention because people are generally nosy.

JV baseball out hits opponents

By Don Richter
Staff Writer

Chelsea's JV baseball team won three out of four games last week, improving its overall record to 9-5.

Last Friday, the Bulldogs split a doubleheader with Milan, winning the opener 4-2, while dropping the nightcap 6-5.

In Game 1, Nate Chamberlain picked up the win from the mound for Chelsea, pitching all seven innings, allowing three hits, striking out seven and walking five.

The Bulldogs, trailing 2-0, scored all four of their runs in the fourth inning. Jeff Elliott and David Bell both singled, while Lee Woodruff and Chamberlain each had RBI singles. Ryan Keiser had a RBI sacrifice fly for Chelsea in the game-deciding stanza.

For the contest, Elliott and Bell both finished 2-for-4.

"We finally had a nice day to play," said Chelsea coach Jim Ticknor. "But we only played well enough to win."

In the second game, the host Big Reds scored three runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to pull out the victory.

"Walks at inopportune times and untimely hitting on our part cost us this one," Ticknor said. "We pitched well. Milan took advantage of their opportunities and we didn't."

As in the first game, the Bulldogs brought home all of their runs in one inning.

In the third inning, Chelsea scored on Chamberlain's two-run RBI double, and on singles by Tony Reifel, Mark Borders, Anthony Walsh and Elliott.

Kyle Walker and Woodruff combined for the loss from the hill for the Dawgs.

Last Thursday, Chelsea swept county rival Dexter in a doubleheader, winning 17-7 and 10-8.

In the opener, a 13-run fifth inning for the Bulldogs was the difference.

Getting key hits in the frame for Chelsea were Bell, on a suicide squeeze; Keiser and Woodruff, both with two-run RBI singles; Walker, with a RBI double; and Elliott, with a single.

"We made one inning stand up for a whole game," Ticknor said. "We need to learn to be more aggressive and hungry."

Heading into the fifth inning, the Bulldogs were down 6-3.

Both teams finished with seven hits each.

Bell paced the Chelsea attack, ending up 3-for-4 with three RBI. Elliott and Woodruff each finished 2-for-4, while Keiser had three RBI and Jamie Spooner had two RBI for the Bulldogs.

Elliott chalked up the victory from the rubber for Chelsea, fanning five and walking four.

In Game 2, Ty Mitchell picked up the win for the Bulldogs, yielding eight hits, striking out five and walking five in six innings.

From the plate, Craig Urwin finished 2-for-2, while Walsh was 2-for-3 with three RBI for Chelsea.

The Bulldogs scored three runs in the second inning, one in the third, and two runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings for the final margin.

The host Dreadnaughts scored one run in the first inning, two in the fourth inning and five in the sixth inning for their tally.

"We can play better than we did today," Ticknor said. "We have a lot of players contributing to our success."

Chelsea next hosts Ypsilanti Lincoln 4 p.m. today

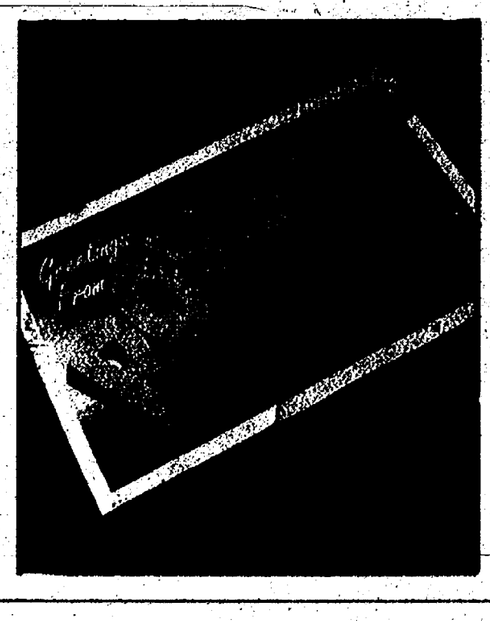

On Monday, the Bulldogs travel to Tecumseh for a game at 4 p.m.

doggone Retirement

As a puppy, Apparatus was right at home immediately in his owner's firefighter and paramedic helmet.

Dalmatian hangs up leash after long career

By Sheila Pursglove
Associate Editor

One of the area's most recognizable senior citizens has retired from a long career in public relations. He will spend his twilight years chasing cats, cadging treats and going on walks.

Apparatus, an 8-year-old Dalmatian, has hung up his leash. He and his buddy, Aerial, have spent several years as ambassadors for the Chelsea and Dexter fire departments.

Lynn Higelmire picked Apparatus from a litter of 12 pups owned by Don and Pam Janisse. He is the puppy chewing on the boot handle.

Local residents are used to seeing spots before their eyes as the pair rides by with their owner, Lynn Higelmire, a paramedic with Huron Valley Ambulance and a member of the Chelsea Area Fire Authority and, until recently, a member of the Dexter Area Fire Department.

The trio has ridden in the Chelsea Community Fair parade and the Dexter Daze parade and appeared at sidewalk sales. They rode on an antique fire truck in a 1996 benefit premiere parade in Ann Arbor for local actor Jeff Daniels' movie, "101 Dalmatians." Apparatus has also appeared at the Ypsilanti Heritage Festival.

The doggy duo is particularly popular with local children, and has given demonstrations on fire safety to local daycare centers, preschools, elementary schools and for Safety Town.

Apparatus' special talent is his ability to respond to Higelmire's hand signals. He can demonstrate how to crawl through smoke and how to stop, drop and roll when clothing is on fire.

The threesome appeared at Pierce Lake Elementary School in Chelsea last fall.

"Lynn and the dogs came as part of the Fire Safety Week presentation in October," Pierce Lake Elementary School Principal Lucy Stieber says. "They were wonderful.

"One of our third-graders said that Apparatus sniffed a coat and then found it in a locker. Lynn demonstrated fire gear and talked about what to do in case of a fire."

Higelmire has decided that, after 7½ years of demonstrations, it's time for Apparatus to leave the "stage."

"He's never been a touchy-feely dog, and doesn't like the kids squealing," Higelmire says.

"He had two different eye surgeries before he was a year old, so he really doesn't like his face touched and that's the first place kids go for. The little ones just don't understand when you tell them not to touch his face."

Higelmire says that last year the canine ambassadors appeared at more schools than ever before. After a long day of four appearances, culminating in a demonstration for a Brownie troop near Romulus, Higelmire says she could tell Apparatus was overstretched.

"He growled for the first time ever," she says. "He didn't show any other sign of aggression. He was just letting a little girl know he had had enough."

After the incident, Higelmire began thinking it was time for Apparatus to hang up his leash. Then, in a recent demonstration at Avila Child Care Center in Lima Township, Apparatus only lasted five minutes before trying to crawl under Higelmire's legs and hide.

Kindergartners at Pierce Lake Elementary School in Chelsea were entranced last fall by Apparatus and Aerial, Dalmatians belonging to firefighter Lynn Higelmire. The trio has given demonstrations on fire safety in local schools and preschools for several years. Apparatus, who can demonstrate such techniques as "stop, drop and roll" and how to crawl through smoke, recently retired. Higelmire and her dogs are pictured with Samantha Loftis (left), Hannah Noble and Jamie Dabrowski.

Beach pupil shares award-winning essay

Three students from Beach Middle School in Chelsea have been named local winners in the 33rd annual America & Me essay contest sponsored by Farm Bureau Insurance.

This year's topic was "Why I am Grateful to America's Veterans."

Erika Palmer took first place locally with her essay titled "America's Courageous." Her name will be engraved on a plaque for permanent display in the school.

Candace Stebelton took second place and Allison Frayer, third.

All three girls received award certificates for their achievement.

Palmer's essay now advances to the state competition, from which the top 10 essays in Michigan will be selected.

Started in 1968 and open to all Michigan eighth-graders, the contest encourages Michigan youngsters to explore their roles in America's future.

Several thousand eighth-grade pupils from nearly 525 Michigan schools participated in this year's contest, which was conducted with the help of Farm Bureau Insurance agents across the state. As contest sponsor, Farm Bureau Insurance has earned 11 national awards from the Freedom Foundation at Valley Forge.

Farm Bureau Insurance agent Dave Rowe of Chelsea sponsored Beach Middle School's participation in the essay contest.

Veterans deserve the gratitude of every American for maintaining a country that's free, strong and united. Many of the men and women who fought during this time lost their lives but their spirit became a part of our country for they created freedom.

The word "veteran" does not only stand for those who fought for the freedom of Americans, but also for freedom around the world. By serving in the Korean War and the Vietnam War, veterans proved their love wasn't only for their country, but for the love of giving people the rights they had acquired as Americans. During these two conflicts, our veterans fought to eliminate the force of communism, the same war they fought during World War I.

The life your grandparents live might appear boring in your eyes, but if you peel back the shell you'll most likely find an amazing tale of freedom. They wrapped for their future generations the best gift of all, a country where they can live their lives free and content.

They also enabled our country to stand united and, from there it has bloomed into a powerhouse.

CAREER

"He did his first event when he was barely four months old, at the sidewalk sales in Chelsea in 1994, and he deserves to live the rest of his life in peace," Higelmire says. "Most dogs only do this for three or four years, so he did well."

Apparatus entered Higelmire's life in 1994 when she bought him from a litter of 12 pups belonging to Don and Pam Janisse.

"I knew I wanted a male so they took all the males out of the whelping box and he picked me out," Higelmire says. "He was the one that kept coming back.

"I swear, when I first saw them, when they were only four weeks old and were just starting to spot up, he looked at me when I said Apparatus."

The dog's registered name is "Awesome FireFighting Fido," or A-triple F.

"The real 'A-triple F' is Aqueous Film Forming Foam, which is a substance used in the fire service to make water float and seal the air away from whatever is burning," Higelmire says.

With an average life span of 10 to 12 years, Aerial, 11, and Apparatus, who celebrated his eighth birthday last month, are considered senior citizens in the dog world.

Higlemire has no plans to acquire and train a replacement.

Apparatus and Aerial share her home with Bear, a Labrador-Retriever mix.

"Three dogs is enough for now, and Aerial doesn't like those changes in her life," Higelmire says.

"Neither she nor Bear know the stop-drop-and-roll or crawl-through-smoke routines, but Aerial may still go on as long as she likes it."

Aerial's true age is a mystery because she was a stray who appeared to have been abused. Higelmire says that neighbors and fellow firefighters helped Aerial learn that "not all hands are made for hitting and most are made for loving."

"She's come a long way, but she's also showing her age and abuse in that she doesn't move as quickly as she used to, and acts like she is more tender than she used to be," Higelmire says.

In retirement, Higelmire says her pets will live the life of any other well-loved dogs — "Chasing cats in their sleep, begging for treats, running around the yard and trying to sneak in the car every time I leave when I'm not wearing my HVA uniform," she says.

"I feel really blessed to have them in my life."

The Chelsea Chamber Players will wrap up its 2001-2002 season with a concert 3 p.m. June 2.

The concert will include Mozart's Quartet in D major for flute and strings and a special arrangement of Prokofiev's "Peter and the Wolf," the story of a boy who outwits a wolf with the help of animal friends.

Each character in the story is represented by a special theme in the music. For the concert, Ian Cumming, the group's viola player, has adapted the orchestral score for flute and strings. He will also act as the narrator.

Mozart's D major flute quartet is one of his most appealing and accessible works, suitable for an audience, including young children, not used to listening to classical music.

Cookies and punch will be served after the concert while members of the audience will be able to meet the musicians.

The concert will take place at the Chelsea Depot. Seating is limited.

Tickets are $12.50 for adults, $10 for senior citizens and $5 for students and children. Tickets may be reserved in advance or purchased at the door.

The Chelsea Depot is located off Main Street on Jackson Street in Chelsea. The facility is wheelchair accessible and parking is located in the adjacent village parking lots or on the street.

The activity is supported by the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs and Nonprofit Enterprise at Work.

For ticket reservations or more information call Sara Cumming at 433-1622 or e-mail chelseachambers@att.net.

Two local students, Kari Ceo and Lance Clevenger, are among 10 recipients of college scholarships.

Ceo, a senior at Chelsea High School, plans to attend Michigan State University this fall. She is affiliated with the Ann Arbor Police Department.

Clevenger, currently attending the University of Michigan, is affiliated with the Scio Township Fire Department.

Palmer Ford to pick up business in Manchester

■ Stu Evans Ford in Manchester closes its doors.

By Sven Gustafson
Heritage Newspapers

The 19 employees of the Stu Evans Ford dealership in Manchester were the recipients of some unexpected news last week when it was announced that the dealership would be permanently closing its doors 6 p.m. last Friday.

The closing of the dealership, which had been run as part of the Stu Evans Automotive Group since taking over Midwest Ford in September 1997, leaves Manchester without an automobile dealership.

Chelsea's Palmer Ford will pick up the slack.

"I absorb the market area, which means that I'm going to take care of the sales and marketing for the Manchester area from now on," said Biff Weber, who co-owns Palmer Ford with his wife, Suzie, a third-generation Palmer. "I am paying for it, but that's for the right to have that as a marketing area.

"There will be no Stu Evans (in Manchester) at all," Palmer said.

John Evans, chairman and president of the Stu Evans Automotive Group, made the decision to close the dealership.

"It's a market consolidation with Ford Motor Co.," he said. "They approached me on it, I looked it over and it makes sense.

"I support any actions like that, and if they didn't have the right dealer taking over that dealer, it wouldn't be a good deal.

"I support Ford Motor Co.'s direction toward market consolidation in those areas."

Evans, the grandson of franchise founder Stu Evans, would not discuss the specifics of the agreement with Ford, saying that information was "proprietary."

It's believed that the move to close the Manchester operation involved a buyout.

Evans said that sales at the Manchester operation, which included a service garage, were double that of Midwest Ford, the previous tenant.

"The sales were good numbers, in excess of 600 cars per year," he said.

Evans said that he has offered many of his 19 former employees positions at Stu Evans Lincoln Mercury dealerships in Garden City and Clinton Township, but didn't provide specifics.

"I couldn't tell you what's gonna happen with those people," he said.

Manchester was the lone Ford dealership in the Stu Evans Automotive Group, which also includes a Mazda and a luxury car operation in Utica.

"The big factor of the whole thing is that the Palmer organization is the right organization to handle this," he said.

Ray Schilinske, a former general manager now serving as a representative of the Stu Evans group, was on hand Friday for the closing.

"Everybody's being terminated," he said. "We'll do whatever we can to help these people."

Schilinske said the Manchester dealership was working on what he called a "skeleton crew" for the past four to five months. He said he learned of the closing during the week of April 22, but believed the dealership would remain open for another 60 to 90 days.

Schilinske verified that the dealership sold more than 600 cars per year, but said that Ford Motor Co. had taken a beating from problems with rollover accidents, tire blow-outs and the weakened economy after the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11.

Schilinske said the dealership has spent thousands of dollars in recent years, upgrading the display lot, signage and showroom.

"We just anticipated that this was going to work out. It wasn't something that we wanted to do," he said. "John (Evans) ran it as long as he could."

Although the 71-year-old Schilinske is technically retired, he will remain employed on a fill-in basis for vacationing employees in other locations. Schilinske, who lives in West Bloomfield, has worked for Stu Evans for 30 years.

Parts manager John Dalton, who has worked at the Manchester dealership since 1991 when it was Midwest Ford, said he has been offered another job with the company in Jackson.

Dalton said he learned the dealership would close on Wednesday at 4:10 p.m. while checking his e-mail. He said he felt betrayed when he heard the news.

Dalton said that he held no grudges against his employer, but added, "I didn't like the way I found out."

"I will prevail," he said. "Somewhere. I have to. But at my age?"

Weber described the move as a way to concentrate distribution in more regionalized areas, explaining Evans resigned his franchise agreement.

"I could not go back in there and build a new facility and put (new) cars there because Ford has determined it's not a distribution point," he said.

"It will be good for me and I hope that it'll be good for the people of Manchester."

Palmer Ford, which has been in business at the same location for 90 years, employs nearly 70 people at four locations in Chelsea. Weber said that he is interviewing one former employee from Manchester for a position. Others, he said, are "welcome to call."

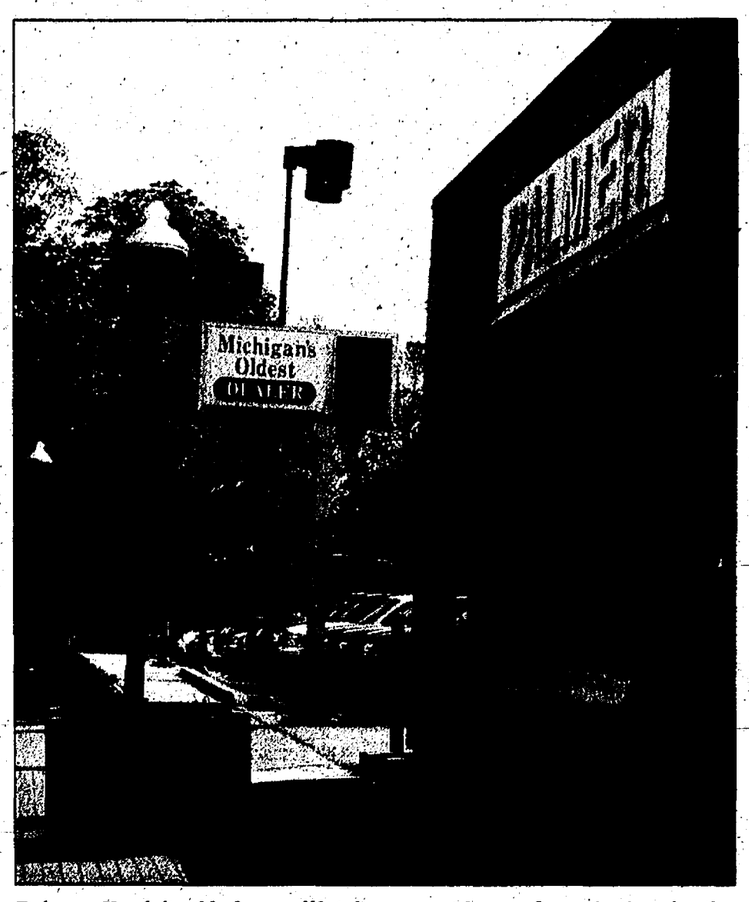

"It's a difficult thing for the people of Manchester and I understand that," he said. "And I'm just going to try to do what they need.

"This thing has just happened so fast."

Ford recently posted losses of $800 million for the first quarter of 2002, its fourth straight money-losing quarter. In all, the world's second-largest automaker lost $5.45 billion in 2001, a nearly $8 billion turnaround from its 2000 net income of $3.47 billion.

As part of sweeping cost-cutting measures, Ford announced 35,000 job cuts in January.

Palmer Ford in Chelsea will take over sales and marketing in the Manchester area for Ford Motor Co. as Stu Evans Ford shuts its doors.

The yellow house at the corner of Baker Road and Ann Arbor Street in Dexter is the new home of Corner House Antiques. Lea Birkle opened the business in March. Her inventory includes furniture, china, pictures, dolls and jewelry.

Birkle said her parents inspired her love of antiques.

"My parents were in the antiques business, and I had the chance to do shows with them," she said.

Birkle has been in the antiques business for 26 years, and loves buying and selling antiques. She said that downtown Dexter seems like a growing area and expects it will be good for business.

"So far, shabby chic is in here," she said. "People are buying pieces that have been painted over. Dishes are popular, as well as old advertisements, maps and miniature cars and trucks that bring back memories from people's childhoods."

Birkle also owns the Garage Sale Gallery in the Independence Plaza on Jackson Road in Scio Township. She sells furniture, vintage collectibles and newer decorator items there. People still ask her about Furniture Unlimited, a consignment shop that she ran 15 years ago on Jackson Road.

Birkle lives in Webster Township with her husband and has two grown sons. She spends much of her time buying items at estate sales and hosting antique shows.

Corner House Antiques, 7971 Ann Arbor St., is open from noon to 5:30 p.m. Thursday through Sunday.

Test screens for glaucoma

The Heidelberg Retina Tomograph II is used to screen people who may be at risk.

By Renee Saunders
Heritage Newspapers

Don't go watching for this thief sneaking around your house. You won't see her.

Her name is glaucoma, and she wants to rob you of your vision.

In the battle to destroy this burglar, Castleman Medical Group has acquired the latest advancement in sight-saving technology for glaucoma detection and testing.

"The Heidelberg Retina Tomograph II is used to screen people who may be at risk," said Dr. Michelle Akler. "It can detect glaucoma earlier than all other devices that we have."

The HRT II scans the optic nerve and the adjacent nerve fiber layer and produces an image on a computer screen.

"It is fast, safe, non-invasive, and typically does not require dilating the eye," Akler said. "The patient sits comfortably in a stationary position, a laser scans the eye for just a few seconds at an energy level lower than what's produced from a television remote control."

After taking the HRT II test myself, I found that the procedure was fast, and most importantly, painless.

Rachel Hoyer, a certified ophthalmic assistant, directed me to place my forehead and chin on the appropriate markers. Next, I was told to find the green light and to blink a few times. Then I was told not to blink.

The test was over before I knew it and I was able to wheel my chair around and take a look at the inside of my own eyeball on a computer screen.

Hoyer showed me how the program worked.

"It makes a map of your eye and shows by the graphs and the image whether you have or are going to have glaucoma," she said.

The change in medical technology is an extreme advancement in comparison to how testing used to be done.

"Years ago, glaucoma was diagnosed by finding higher than normal eye pressure," said

Don't keep customers waiting

TIM KISSMAN

NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY

The call comes in, like all calls do, and the person on the other end of the line is interested in something about your business.

It may be something about your latest service, maybe it's about the product deal you're launching, or maybe it's directions on how to get to your office.

Whatever the case, you have a potential client who wants to spend some money. Make sure they're happy.

Unless you're that guru who sits on top of mountains, wearing nothing but a loincloth and a long white beard while waiting for people to ask you life-affirming questions, you're probably going to have to put the caller on hold while you find the answer.

While they wait, what are they going hear?

Quick, decide: silence, music or a message? Let's make the decision easier and take away silence. Hearing nothing, the potential customer might hang up and redial, thinking the connection ended. So don't do that.

Now we're down to music or a message. A serenade or services, if you will.

Music is always nice. It's not a terrible idea. I've heard some boring music, like elevator stuff, that put me to sleep. Avoid that, please. Some businesses pipe the local radio station into the receiver, filling it with the latest news, weather updates and hottest songs.

The radio is nice, but sometimes I hear competitor's ads and phone numbers. I know I think twice and if the deal is too good and I'm on hold too long, I'll call elsewhere.

A message, though, about your business is by far the best idea. Business owners plunk down some serious coin when they try to grab the attention of potential clients. Budget items on successful ledgers make space for television and radio commercials, as well as printed ads and direct mail pieces.

So why waste valuable time from a captive audience who wants to spend money with you? Record a message and promote everything about your business.

I'm no guru, and certainly don't wear a loincloth or have a long white beard, but a message makes sense.

Overview: Have the message talk about what you do, how you do it and what to ask when an employee comes back on the line. Don't leave anything out. If you have services that change often, remember to change them on the message, too. Special promotions and money-saving ideas work wonders on the line.

The tip of the iceberg: Give advice and establish your expertise. Keep the core of your business essence in mind. For instance, if you own a computer software service, give tips on how to install and remove simple programs.

Cleaning a keyboard or how to wipe down a monitor might be good fodder, too.

Newsworthy: Anything and everything that happens in your business can go on the message. If you sponsor fundraisers, tell the potential client. Hired a new person to handle a new area? Tell the potential client. Published an article or story? Tell the client.

Anything that might hold their interest should be of great interest to you.

Tim Kissman is director of publications for the Small Business Administration of Michigan.

Dr. Marilyn Belamaric of Southland Eye Clinic in Taylor.

"We now know that many patients with glaucoma have perfectly normal eye pressures.

"People need to be aware that just measuring the eye pressure, as it is done at most health care fairs' glaucoma screening, will miss about one-half of all glaucomas.

"The other half can be detected only by careful examination, through a dilated pupil, of the nerve in the back of the eye."

Today, with the exception of the new machine, glaucoma screening includes measuring the eye pressure and an exam of the back of the eye through a dilated pupil.

"Visual field tests, nerve photographs and nerve cells measurements help separate patients with glaucoma from patients who have some of the features that simulate glaucoma," Belamaric said.

"There is no pain or discomfort with any of the tests for glaucoma."

Another myth, which needs to be debunked, is that eyeglass stores do not offer sufficient glaucoma screening.

"Strictly speaking, if one were only being examined for glasses, the disease would be missed," Belamaric said.

"Fortunately, the vast majority of optometrists and ophthalmologists look for signs of glaucoma in all of their patients. As long as the eye pressure is measured and a careful examination of the inside of the eye is done by an experienced observer, most forms of glaucoma will be identified."

Though most people believe that glaucoma is strictly associated with diabetes, that is simply not the case.

"The cause of glaucoma in most patients is unknown," Belamaric said.

"In many cases, genetics plays an important role. We know that brothers and sisters of glaucoma patients are 20 times more likely to develop glaucoma."

Studies have shown that if your parents have glaucoma, your chances of having it are increased. Also, people of African descent are more likely to develop it than Caucasians.

Five years ago, Yvonne Williams had an idea for a business.

She was working at a consignment store in Pinckney and thought the resale shop was exactly what Dexter needed.

So, on May 13, 1997, Yvonne's Consignments opened behind TCF bank on Main Street in downtown Dexter.

Since that day, Williams says business has been growing by leaps and bounds, so much so that she is moving to a bigger location at 8011 Main St. near the Dexter Commerce Building. She'll open the new location June 1.

"Sometimes I get as many as 2,500 items in one month," Williams said. "The new location will be bigger and it will have better visibility on Main Street. It's right across from the park."

In the meantime, the store celebrates its fifth anniversary next week and Williams is anxious to reduce inventory.

Williams works with more than 1,500 consigners. They receive half of what the items sell for. After 60 days, if the items haven't sold, she donates them to local churches, a women's resource center, high school theater groups, and to the Grace Center of Hope, a shelter where she sometimes donates 10 percent of a day's profits.

Salespeople make the difference at Jim Bradley

Jim Bradley Pontiac, Buick, GMC Truck, Inc. takes great pride in being a hometown dealership. Its huge selection of new and used cars, sport utility vehicles, light trucks and vans gives customers a definite shopping advantage, but its friendly atmosphere and customer service is due to many of its salespeople who live in the area.

SANDY BOWMAN lives in Manchester and has worked as a salesperson for Jim Bradley since August of last year.

Sandy is always one of the first people to arrive to work in the morning. "It's because I'm an early bird and I look forward to coming to work," she said with a smile. "I like the challenge and I love meeting different people."

Sandy has been married to Billy Bowman and the couple has 4 grown children and 10 grandchildren. But being a grandmother doesn't slow her down one bit. Sandy owns a 1971 Nova race car that she races frequently at Milan Dragway.

Sandy worked at GM for 23 years before coming to Jim Bradley.

"I'm in the right business. And it is so nice working here. We're like a family here—and I'm like the mom.

RON MARECLE lives in Manchester and has worked at Jim Bradley for 2 years.

"It's a wonderful working experience," he said. "My family has bought cars here for years.

When he isn't working, Ron enjoys snowmobiling and motorcycles.

Ron earned an associates degree in auto-diesel business from Lima North Western College in 1995 and has worked as an auto mechanic.

"I know a lot about cars because of my background and I use it in my work. I really like my job," Ron said.

BRAD NELSON is an alumnus of Saline High School who lived in Saline for many years before moving to Ypsilanti.

Brad said that he enjoys working at Jim Bradley because every day is different.

"It's a fun job," he said. "Everything is constantly changing—new product—new customers—there is never a stale moment."

In his spare time Brad enjoys watching movies and playing video games.

Customers can expect honesty from Brad because, as he puts it, "I'm a straight shooter. I'm honest with the customers. I'm here to help and I tend to be a good listener."

SHAWN HALL has worked for Bradley Pontiac, Buick, GMC for upward of 7 years. He lived in Milan for two years and recently moved to Whittaker with his wife, Dallas and their three children.

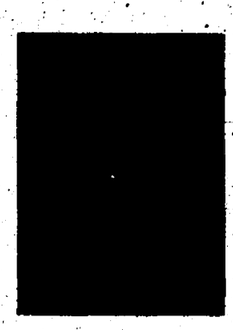

Shawn said that there is a great deal to enjoy about his work as a salesperson at Jim Bradley Pontiac, Buick, GMC.

"I enjoy what I do for customers," said Shawn. "I like working with our great team—from service to management—to help fill the customers' needs. The dealership allows me to do what I need to in order to take care of my customers. We are like a family here."

TONIA KELLEY lives in Saline and has been a salesperson at Bradley Pontiac, Buick, GMC for five years.

Tonia said that it is the variety that makes working at Jim Bradley so enjoyable.

"I don't like to do the same old thing every day. I like something new—and I get that here. I like the freedom I have here to make my work my own little part of the world. But what I like best is the openness of the management because I can go to them with anything. We are like family."

The dedicated sales staff at Bradley Pontiac, Buick, GMC consider themselves your neighbor and you can expect quality service from the moment you arrive.

Bradley Pontiac, Buick, GMC is located at 3500 Jackson Road in Ann Arbor, (734) 769-1200. You can visit www.jbusedcars.com or www.bradleyservice.com for more information.

AUTOMOTIVE EXTRAS

How Much Is Your Vacation Worth?

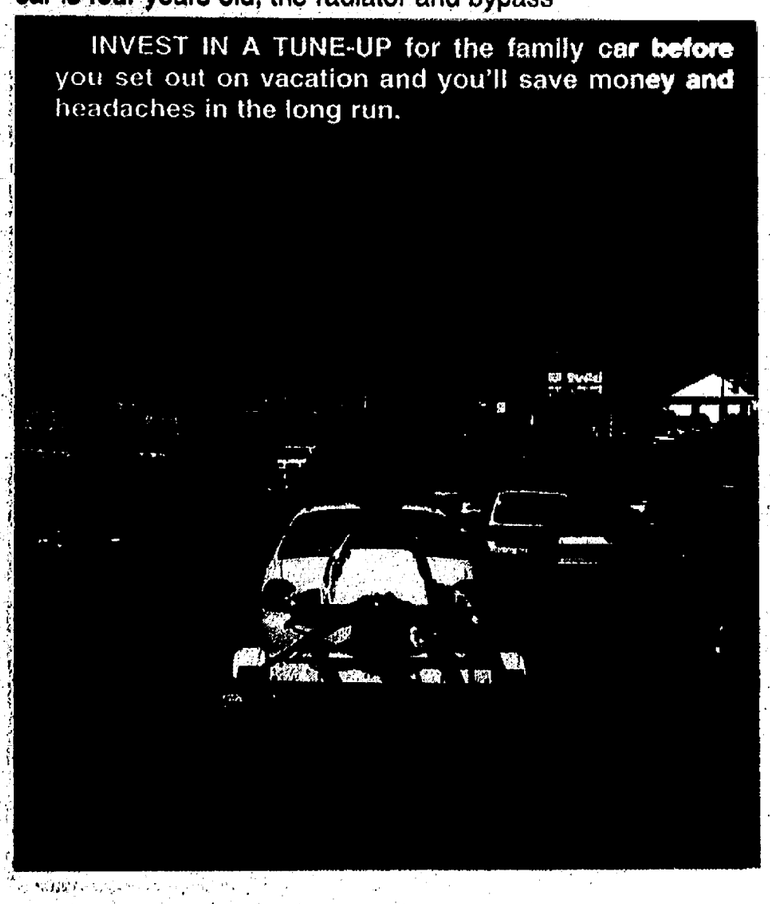

(MS) — A family of two adults and two children can expect to spend an average of $223 per day for food and lodging this vacation season. If it's a trip in the family car, add another $50 to $75 for gasoline, and another $40 for incidentals.

However, for the cost of one vacation day, you can have peace of mind throughout the entire vacation, by having your vehicle serviced before you leave home.

The Gates Rubber Company estimates that for $300 to $350, the average family car could have a tune-up and cooling system flush and fill.

You'll probably be able to replace two or three cooling system hoses, as well. If your car is four years old, the radiator and bypass hoses may be near failure.

This investment of one day's vacation will give you improved gas mileage and will keep your car out of the service bay in a distant location because of an overheated engine.

INVEST IN A TUNE-UP for the family car before you set out on vacation and you'll save money and headaches in the long run.

Getting the Most Out of Your Vehicle's Safety System

If you've been involved in an accident in which one or more of your vehicle's airbags deployed, you probably appreciate more than most people the added safety and protection these seemingly simple devices offer. In fact, you may be one of the more than 5,000 people whose lives, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), have been saved because of vehicle airbags.

But airbags won't effectively do their job of protecting you and other occupants in your vehicle unless you do your part before — and, just as importantly, after — you're in an accident that triggers airbag deployment. Here are some tips to help you get the most protection from your vehicle's safety systems.

• Check the owner's manual for your vehicle to make sure you understand what the airbag light on the instrument panel is telling you. Generally, if the airbag light is ON (other than briefly when you first start the vehicle), there's a problem with the system that should be checked right away.

• Although 1998 and newer vehicles have redesigned airbags that reduce the chance of injuries from airbag deployment, it is always best not to sit too close to an airbag. Drivers should move their seat rearward as far as they can without impeding their ability to see the road ahead and to reach the steering wheel and pedals. (Try to ensure there is at least 10 inches between the steering wheel and the driver's chest.) Don't lean forward as you drive. If your vehicle has a tilt steering wheel, tilt it downward so the airbag will deploy toward the driver's chest, not the head.

• All 1998 and newer cars (and 1999 or newer light trucks) also have passenger-side airbags. All front-seat passengers — not just those who are shorter or elderly — should also move their seat as far rearward as possible to maximize the distance between their chest and the instrument panel to give the airbag room to deploy safely.

• NHTSA recommends placing all children 12 and under in the rear seat. It's the safest place for children in vehicles with or without airbags. Never place a child in a safety seat in the front seat of a vehicle with a passenger-side airbag.

• A deployed airbag cannot be "repacked." In fact, the bag and many of the system's parts are not "repairable." They must be replaced. The parts are designed for each specific vehicle. For the system to function correctly in another collision, the proper parts must be purchased and installed by a qualified technician.

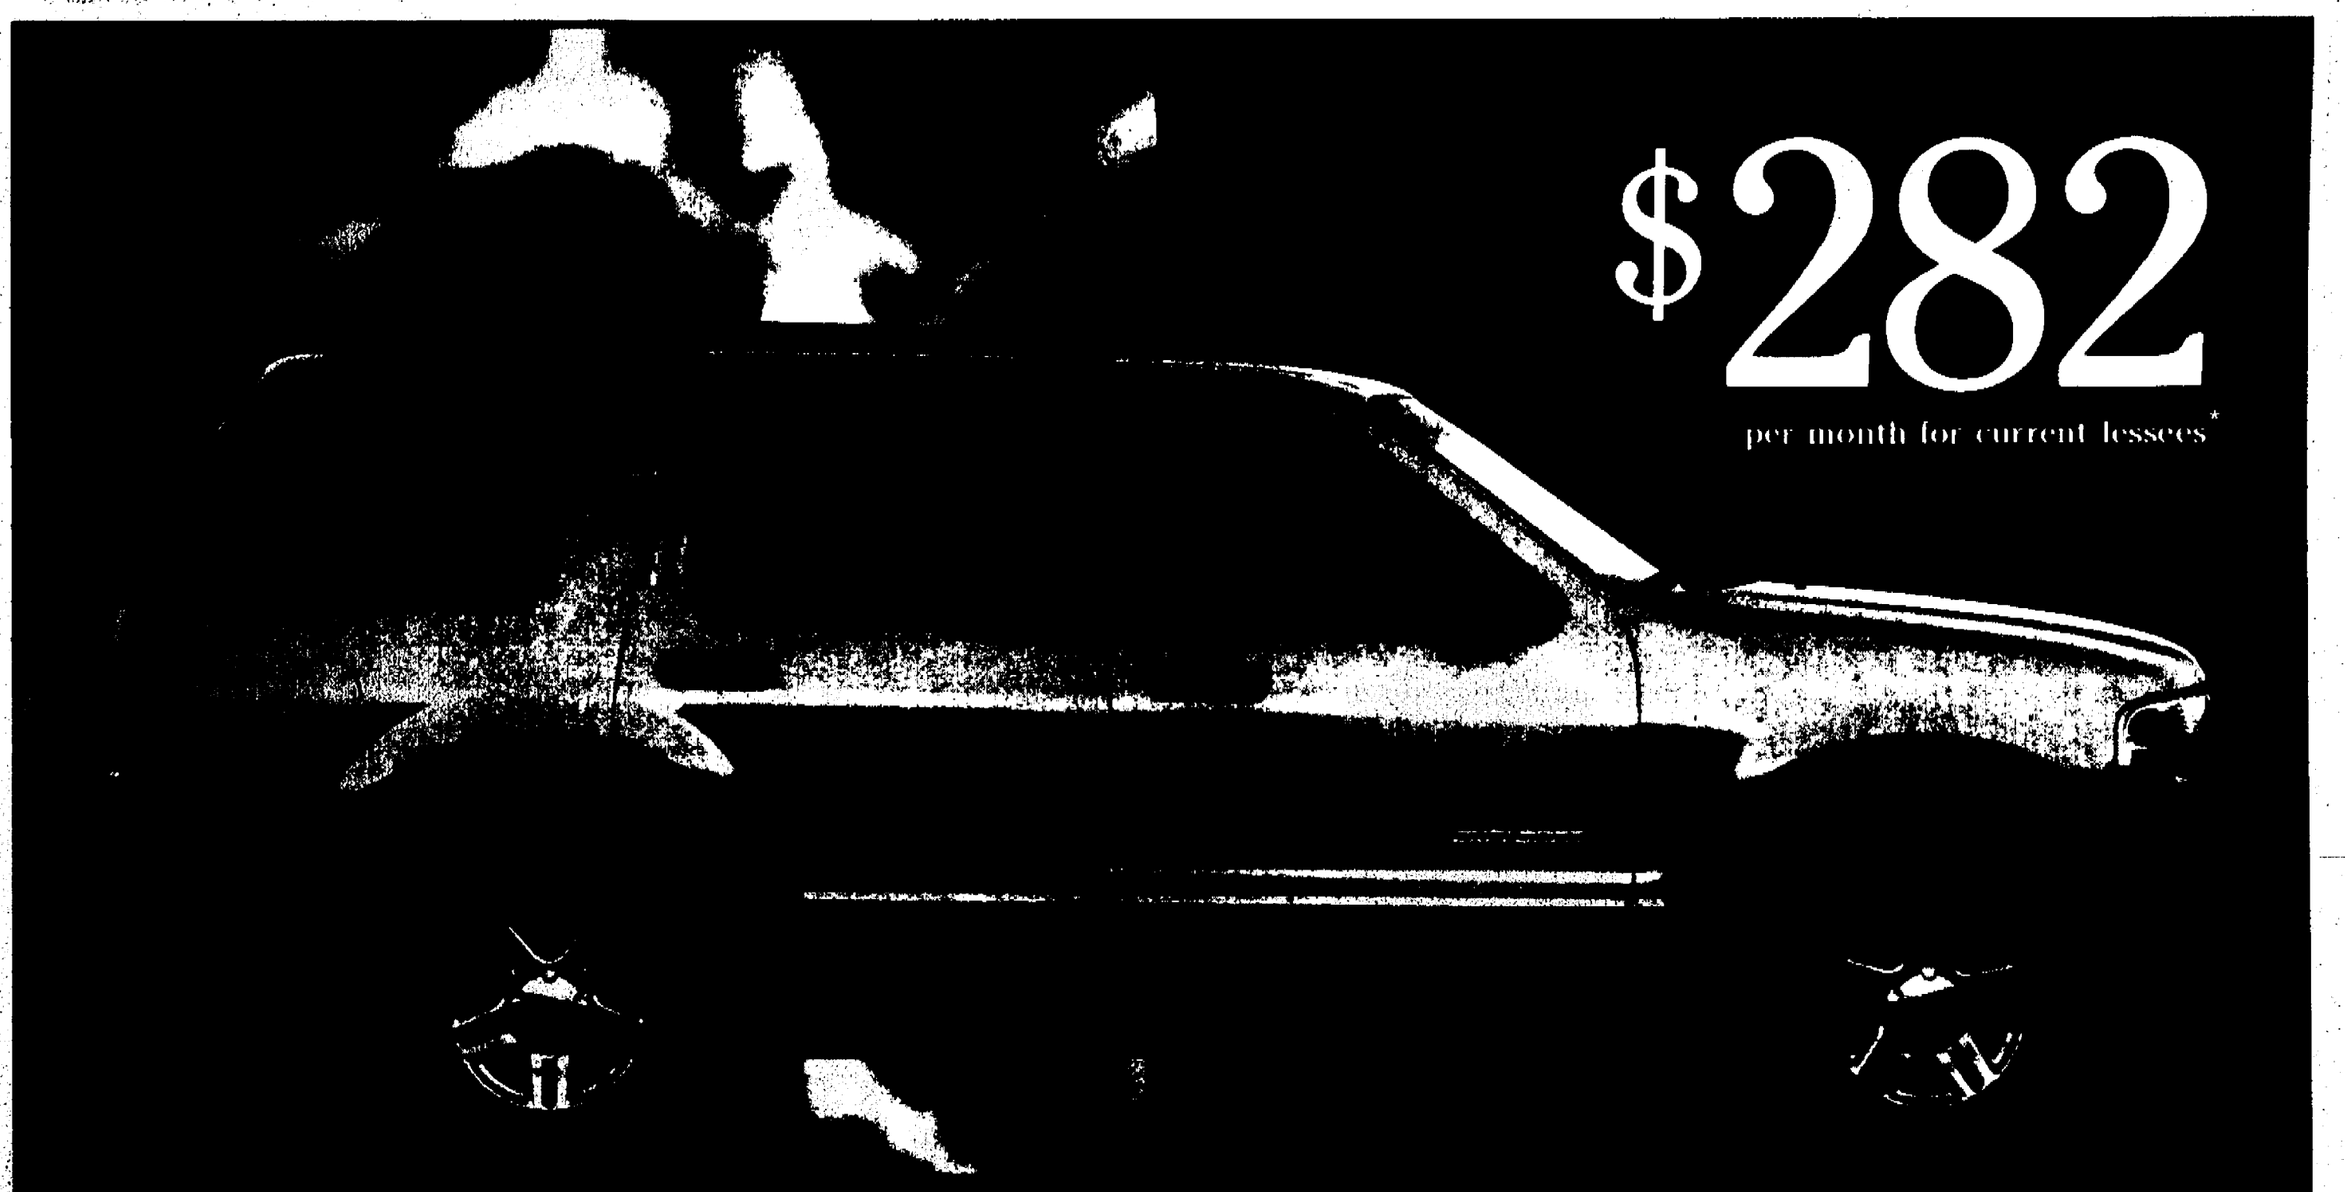

• Airbags won't protect you as well if you're not also wearing a seat belt. They work together as a system. Some vehicle seat belts have a device that automatically tightens the seat belt in the event of a crash; as with an airbag, once it deploys, it must be replaced. Also, in severe crashes, the webbing fabric of the seat belt may become stretched, which could affect its restraining ability in a subsequent collision. Ask to have your seat belts checked after an accident.

In choosing a repair facility, look for evidence that their technicians have been properly trained. Many insurance companies and repair facility associations recommend you look for a business that has earned the I-CAR® Gold Class Professionals® designation. The Gold Class designation indicates that a repair facility's employees have completed a substantial amount of training. They are up-to-date in collision repair knowledge and technology. I-CAR training covers virtually every step of the repair process. This includes analyzing the damage, structural repair processes, corrosion protection, matching your vehicle's paint finish, and checking safety features such as airbag deployment, seatbelts and anti-lock braking systems. I-CAR established the Gold Class Professionals designation to help consumers identify repair facilities that have invested in proper training.
