The 45-day referendum period started immediately, Myers said.

For more information, call the village offices at 475-1771.

Village residents lost power for 12 hours

Residents in the northern area of the village lost power at about 1:30 p.m. Tuesday when a transformer blew in the substation. Power was not restored until approximately 2 a.m. yesterday when a new transformer was installed.

The power outage affected Chelsea Milling Co., the industrial park, residents on Sibley Road, Lanewood and Quiet Creek subdivisions, and the new water plant, which had just got its reverse osmosis system online Tuesday, Village Manager Jack Myers said.

The 2002 Jeff Daniels Golf Comedy Jam, held Tuesday at the Polo Fields Golf and Country Club in Scio Township, raised $100,000 for Chelsea's Purple Rose Theatre Co. Above, Chelsea residents Art Farley and his wife, Lynne, drove their Harley Davidson motorbike and sidecar — laden with stuffed toys — around the course, handing out boxes of Jiffy Mix to golfers. ## Board OKs millage vote

■ Special election set for Sept. 23.

By Sheila Pursglove
Associate Editor

As Chelsea students return to their school routine later this year, the school board plans to ask the community to support a recreation and sinking fund millage.

The election is set for Sept. 23 — in time to catch the winter tax cycle.

The millage proposal — bearing the acronym SCCORE, which stands for helping Senior Citizens and Chelsea Organize Recreation and Enrichment programs — will help raise funds for recreation and enrichment programs in the community.

The school board, which decided on the date Monday, is looking at a 1-mill levy. The millage would generate approximately $570,000 a year.

For a homeowner with property valued at $250,000, and an approximate state equalized value of $125,000, it will cost $125 a year.

"Our attorney is preparing the language for the resolution setting the ballot language, which we hope to have approved at the July meeting," Board President Scott Broshar said Tuesday.

"We're also preparing a policy to govern how the funds will be allocated if the elections are successful. If passed, the millages will help us to keep our facilities in good shape and enhance the recreation offerings available to our community."

School budget wins approval

■ Estimated revenues increase 1.3 percent.

By Sheila Pursglove
Associate Editor

The Chelsea school board on Monday approved a slimmed down budget that includes cut-backs.

While technology received full support, the textbook budget was slashed by 70 percent and the district will have to make do without replacing one school bus.

Teresa Zigman, executive director of business and operations for Chelsea schools, received the board's approval. She called the school district's 2002-03 general-fund budget a "work-in-progress document."

"The information presented in this preliminary budget represents the estimations of the revenue and expenditure items based on the information that we are aware of at this time," Zigman said.

"Throughout the year, amendments will be done as we finalize the student count numbers, K-12 staffing and other revenue and expenditure items that may change due to state and local impacts."

The amount of revenue from state foundation grants is based on a $200 increase in per-pupil funding. Zigman noted that she expects a decrease in enrollment by approximately 41 students.

Washtenaw County officials test for West Nile virus

■ Five dead crows found in Washtenaw County.

By Will Keeler
Staff Writer

County health officials are gearing up for another year of testing for the West Nile virus.

Officials at the Washtenaw County Public Health Department began testing for the virus in early May after finding a dead crow in Livonia infected with the West Nile virus.

As of June 24, five dead crows in Washtenaw County were tested for the virus. Of the five crows, three were tested and found not to have the virus. One bird is still being tested and the last one was too decomposed to be examined.

Birds are sent for testing to the Michigan Department of Agriculture in Lansing. The birds have not infected any humans in Washtenaw County, health officials said.

Linda Lantry, director of communicable diseases at the department of public health, said that the five birds were found in Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti. She said, however, that the birds could come from anywhere.

Lantry said that the birds become infected through mosquitoes carrying the virus.

"Mosquitoes tend to linger around in several areas, like standing water, rain gutters and swimming pool gutters," she said.

"Eliminating this standing water where mosquitoes breed is important," said Vicki Nighswander, Washtenaw County's health services supervisor.

A total of 244 birds were tested in Michigan last year and 65 were found to be positive for the West Nile virus. Washtenaw County submitted approximately a dozen birds last year, beginning in July, with the first positive bird detected in August 2001.

The first signs of the West Nile virus occurred in 1999 in New York City. Other cases have been found in Africa, the Middle East, Asia and Europe.

By the end of 2001, there have been 149 human cases of the virus confirmed, including 18 deaths. Last year, one case of arboviral encephalitis, eastern equine encephalitis, another mosquito-transmitted virus that primarily affects unvaccinated horses, killed a 14-year-old in neighboring Livingston County.

Nighswander said that the risk of getting the West Nile virus is small and is limited to people in areas where the virus is present with other mosquito-borne viruses.

More than 200 horses have died in Michigan from mosquito-borne viruses since 1980. Last year, no horse deaths were attributed to mosquito viruses in Michigan.

"Vaccination of horses may be a significant factor in the reduc-

Prevention Tips

There are many ways to reduce the risk of becoming infected with the West Nile virus. The Washtenaw County Health Department has several tips to help you protect yourself.

• Use repellent on exposed skin. Repellent should be applied to the face, neck, arms and legs of children and adults.

• Wear long-sleeved shirts and long pants when outdoors in areas where mosquito exposure is likely.

• To report a dead crow or for more information, call the toll-free hotline at 1-800-458-2828.

screens maintained to keep mosquitoes out of the building.

• Drain standing water in the yard. Empty water from flowerpots, water bowls for pets, clogged rain gutters, swimming pool covers, discarded tires, buckets and barrels.

• Wear long-sleeved shirts and long pants when outdoors in areas where mosquito exposure is likely.

• To report a dead crow or for more information, call the toll-free hotline at 1-800-458-2828.

tion of horse deaths," Nighswander said.

Like last year, health department officials will continue to trap mosquitoes to monitor the possibilities of infections.

Senate candidate recovers after recent health scare

■ Gordon Darr rushed to the hospital during planning meeting.

By Michael Rybka
Special Writer

A local government official was rushed to the hospital with chest pains June 10 during a Scio Township Planning Commission meeting.

Gordon Darr, a Scio Township Board trustee and candidate for the state Senate, said last week that doctors found a minor blockage in his artery.

Scio Township Planning Commission Chairman Jack Knowles said that Darr walked out 45 minutes into the meeting. He said it was unusual for Darr to have left since he serves as the commission's secretary.

After five minutes, Knowles said he looked up and saw a rescue vehicle outside. Knowles said that he assumed the vehicle's presence had something to do with Scio Fire Chief Carl Ferch, who was in attendance.

After another 15 minutes had passed, Knowles asked Commissioner Tom Hanson to search for Darr because a vote was ready to come up. Hanson returned and told everyone that Darr was in the rescue vehicle.

The vote involved a recommendation on whether to allow the Meijer store on Jackson and Zeeb roads to build a gas station. With Darr absent, the vote deadlocked at 3-3.

Gordon Darr

Ferch, who had suspected something was wrong and called for the rescue unit, said that Darr was exhibiting classic symptoms of a heart attack.

Darr did not attend the Township Board's June 12 and 18 meetings, but was well enough to attend Dexter's envisioning session June 19 for the town's master plan. Darr is a former Dexter Village Council trustee.

Darr said he was taken by ambulance to the University of Michigan Hospital and stayed overnight. He was put through a battery of tests the next day.

Darr said he reacted positively to nitroglycerin, which is a sign that there is a heart anomaly. He said results were coming up negative until he took a stress test.

"Even at that, I wasn't sweating or gasping," he said.

Darr said he would begin to take the cholesterol medicine that was prescribed to him two years ago.

He said his condition would not affect his pursuit of a state senate seat in the 18th District. Darr is the only Republican candidate. Other candidates are Democrats John Hansen and Liz Brater.

"I find politics to be therapeutic," Darr said. "It's other things in life that cause me stress."

The 18th District is comprised of all of Washtenaw County except for Bridgewater, Lodi, Manchester, Pittsfield, Saline and York townships.

will include mosquito collection, species identification and testing of the virus on a weekly basis.

For the past decade, the Washtenaw County Environmental Health Division has worked with the Michigan Department of Agriculture to trap and test mosquitoes for St. Louis encephalitis and eastern equine encephalitis. The two will continue their efforts testing mosquitoes for various viruses in select areas around the county.

Annual Golf Comedy Jam raises $100,000 for theater

By Sheila Pursglove
Associate Editor

It was high jinks on the links as the seventh annual Jeff Daniels Golf Comedy Jam hit the greens Tuesday at the Polo Fields Golf and Country Club in Scio Township.

Under a blazing sun, the Dexter music group Three Men and a Tenor entertained the assembled golfers as they gathered to register and socialize. Participants rubbed shoulders with TV and sports celebrities, actors from the Purple Rose Theatre Co., and assorted look-alikes.

Daniels opened the official proceedings by welcoming his golf guests in fine musical fashion. Strumming a limited number of chords on his electric guitar, he sang a song with lyrics that were entertaining and fun, but largely unprintable in a family newspaper.

In the idiotic style of the golf jam, there are no first-place winners — or second, third, fourth or fifth for that matter. Winner of the grand prize is the foursome who manages to come in sixth. Go figure.

With all the distractions on the greens, it's a wonder anyone can ever tee off or get around the course. This year's theme was Daniels' many movies, so the greens had movie-related activities.

"Arachnophobia," was the theme of the second hole. Fake spiders and a giant spider web spooked golfers, while an actor clad in a "Bugs-Be-Gone" shirt sprayed the hapless players.

At the third hole, an actor portraying crocodile expert Steve Actor Tobin Hissong (left), Purple Rose Theatre Co. business manager Alan Ribant, and actress and director Suzi Regan helped provide the goofy entertainment at this year's Golf Comedy Jam.

Irwin wrestled with inflatable crocs and snakes.

The fourth hole was the site of the infamous toilet paper dance from Daniels' movie "Escanaba in da Moonlight," while deer hunter "Remnar Soady," sitting in his deer blind, took aim at a guy wearing fake antlers.

The fifth hole featured a reenactment of the movies "Gettysburg," and "Gods and Generals" in which Daniels played Col. Joshua Chamberlain. Here 22 Union and Confederate re-enactors did battle, complete with a cannon.

The sixth NASCAR hole was a tribute to Daniels being a second choice to Tom Cruise for the "Days of Thunder" movie. Purple Rose staff leaped into action washing windshields and waving the golf carts through with checkered flags.

Golfers made their putts at the seventh green seated on a toilet. Anyone who has seen the movie "Dumb and Dumber" will understand the joke. For anyone else, don't even ask.

Selected golfers got their own chance to act, using pages from the "Dumb and Dumber" script, with the best rendition winning a prize.

The eighth hole was dedicated to the movie "Speed" in which Daniels' character met an untimely and violent end. Actors portraying stars Keanu Reeves and Sandra Bullock raced around in a golf cart.

Actors dressed as soda jerks were the order of the day on the ninth hole, or "Pleasantville," with the very, very pleasant Mr. Johnson ingratiating himself

The Washington Street Show Choir at Chelsea High School performed a song and dance routine from the movie "102 Dalmatians" on the 10th green. with the golfers.

Chelsea High School's Washington Street Show Choir sang and danced the "Diggy Dog" song from "102 Dalmatians" on the 10th green, while "Cruella DeVille" entertained the golfers on a green littered with stuffed toy Dalmatians.

The 11th hole was a tribute to the movie "Fly Away Home," which is about the Canadian who led geese south for the winter with his ultra-light plane.

Golfers approaching the 12th hole found actors in tricorn hats and wigs ready for "The Crossing." One golfer from each four, some played George Washington.

Things got decidedly kinky at the "Something Wild" 13th hole, with handcuffs and a brass bed. The tone didn't raise any higher on the 14th hole, a tribute to Daniels' latest movie, "Super Sucker," where golfers putted with a "Homemaker's Little Helper" attached to a Super with Leonard K. Kitchen, J.D. and Thomas L. Stringer, J.D.

Understanding The Law

WHAT IS YOUR CASE WORTH?

Those who have sustained injury due to the negligence or intentions of others must rely on awards of monetary damages for compensation. It is the only method our legal system has to redress injurious acts. How does one translate loss, pain, and suffering into a dollar amount? After all, the average person has no way of knowing what a particular case is worth. The accident victim must rely on personal injury lawyers, who, in turn, rely on their own experience in similar cases, as well as on the opinion of other personal injury attorneys, to gauge the maximum settlement value of a case. Jury research can also be consulted to determine what juries have awarded in similar cases.

Factors that attorneys use to come up with a reasonable amount of compensation include the cost of medical care for related injuries, lost wages, loss of future income, loss of ability to participate in certain activities, replacement costs for material loss, and emotional pain and suffering. If you have been injured due to negligence, assault, or defective product or service, call the LAW OFFICES OF KITCHEN & STRINGER, J.D., at 426-4695 to schedule a free consultation. You'll find our office conveniently located in Dexter, at 3249 Broad Street.

HINT: Because no two personal injury cases are exactly alike, each has a unique value assigned to it.

District to borrow $3 million

■ Business director wraps up school year with hectic month.

By Sheila Pursglove
Associate Editor

The past month has been a busy one for Teresa Zigman, the Chelsea School District's executive director of business and operations.

The accountant, who was recently certified with chief financial officer status through the Michigan School Business Officials professional development committee, came on board in April just as the school year was winding down.

The school district had been without a business director since Jim Novak left for the West Coast last summer. Since that time, Superintendent Ed Richardson served as interim director, assisted by Chelsea High School Assistant Principal Robin Raymond and accountant Michelle Cowhy.

In addition to preparing the general ledger for its year-end close, Zigman has completed the application process so the district can borrow $3.3 million from the Michigan Municipal Bond Authority, which includes projected cash flow for the next fiscal year.

Zigman said Tuesday that there are two reasons why the district needs to borrow money.

"First, the state of Michigan, which provides approximately 72 percent of our funding, doesn't begin its 2002-03 payments to the district till October," she said. "The district requires cash in order to satisfy the '02-03 financial obligations that we experience in July, August and September."

Zigman said the second reason is that the district only levies a millage in the winter. Without a summer tax collection, cash isn't available until collections begin in late December and early January. Taxes make up approximately 17.5 percent of funding, she said.

"Combine the effects of the lag in state aid and the delayed millage collection," she said. "The district has substantial cash flow needs in the fall of every school year."

To get a better handle on the K-12 general fund finances, Zigman is working on a method to move all grant and project-type accounts into a separate fund. Currently, the general fund houses all the K-12 expenses, as well as special programs and grants, she said.

"Pulling out the special programs and projects will allow us to identify clearly any matches in funding or in-kind that the district is committed to once a grant is accepted," she said. "It will allow us to more clearly identify those existing costs that can be subsidized by grant funds and allows us to determine a better percentage of equity retained at year end."

Zigman has also helped with the Chelsea Education Association's contract negotiations by looking at cost alternatives and options. She has also met with the district's workers' compensation agent to review 2002-03 rates; met with the district's student accident insurance agent to review available options; and worked on the consolidation of bills related to cellphone usage.

On the operations side, Zigman rode a school bus on the morning route with bus driver Sue Rodgers; attended the end-of-year transportation luncheon; met with union representatives from the transportation department; and reviewed the mechanics' pay schedule.

School taxes to change next year

■ Shift expected to increase state revenue by $500 million.

By Scott Held

Heritage Newspapers

For home- and property owners who don't pay their taxes through escrow accounts, the days of two annual bills could be ending.

Legislation recently signed by Gov. John Engler mandates that all property taxes assessed to support education must be collected during the summer. The new schedule, which the state hopes will streamline school funding, begins next year.

Many municipalities will collect all property taxes in June rather than splitting the bill into winter and summer payments.

Some communities, where winter tax bills are due in December and summer tax bills are paid in June, likely will follow the same procedure.

For those who pay through an escrow account, the bank already holds back enough for taxes each year, so it won't really change anything for those people.

The bill, which passed the state Legislature easily, will help the state deliver on a promise to increase per-pupil funding by $200 during the 2002-03 academic year to a minimum of $6,700.

Another bill will give taxpayers a slight break next year when the change occurs. In 2003, the state education tax will be reduced to 5 mills from its current 6.

A mill is $1 per $1,000 of taxable value.

In other words, the owner of a house with a taxable value of $100,000 would save $100 next year. The savings, however, might be offset by having to pay a full tax bill six months earlier than usual.

Per-pupil spending will increase, despite the 1-mill tax cut, because the state will be able to collect interest on the money collected earlier.

The tax cut is only for one year. The state assessment will return to 6 mills in 2004.

The shift is expected to increase state revenue by $500 million during the 2003 fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1.

Scott Held is a reporter for Heritage Newspapers. He can be reached at 1-734-246-0835 or scott@heritage.com.

MORE FUN IF YOU HAVE TO WORK FOR IT

Dear Friends and Neighbors,
The Dexter Memorial Day parade seems to get bigger and better each year. Of course, the biggest attraction for many young children - and some not so young - is the prospect of snagging candy that gets thrown toward the spectators. It was the same when I was a boy. Free candy. But it's not entirely free. First, you have to station yourself in a good location. Then you have to grab the pieces of candy when they come your way. This may involve vying with others for pieces that are thrown near you, or reacting quickly before it disappears in a grate in the street. But that's what makes it fun. It wouldn't be as rewarding if someone in the parade just came and handed you a bag of candy, or if your mom or dad gave you a $5 bill and told you to go to the store and buy whatever candy you want. By nature we value things more if we've put some effort in. That's how God made us. He made us to work, and there's nothing more depressing than not being able to work. This concept of effort is what makes the Gospel of Jesus Christ so difficult for many people to accept. The Bible tells us we are sinners, and therefore are unable to do anything toward earning a place in heaven. Therefore God's Son did all the work, and He provided eternal life as a free gift. There's nothing for us to do but believe it. For many, this idea takes the "fun" out of religion, and they go seeking something more difficult, a religion that demands more effort on their part. On the other hand, others, who claim to believe the Gospel, develop a welfare mentality. They fail to see the Gospel of Jesus and eternal life as the valuable gifts they really are; instead, they consider eternal life as a right that God owes them. True Christians are in the middle: True Christians realize that eternal life in heaven is the most precious treasure in the universe, and they thankfully receive it as a gift because they know they could never do anything to earn it. Only after recognizing this they truly offer their lives in thankful service to the Lord. ## School board approves amended 2001-02 budget

Business director estimates district will use $188,062 for debt.

By Sheila Pursglove
Associate Editor

Teresa Zigman, executive director of business and operations for Chelsea schools, presented an amended 2001-02 budget for the school board's approval Monday.

The budget was last amended in January. Amendments are ongoing throughout the school year as circumstances change, Zigman said.

The amount budgeted for revenues for the 2001-02 fiscal year is estimated to increase by $436,551, Zigman said. This was mainly attributable to a one-time payment of $111,913 in Medicaid revenue and an adjustment of $189,125 in state aid.

"The increase in state aid reflects additional identified special education costs from the 2000-01 school year that are reimbursable under state guidelines," Zigman said Tuesday.

The remaining adjustments are from miscellaneous state aid adjustments, additional grants received during the second semester, a decline in interest income for the year, and adjustments made related to grants and projects run by the school district, Zigman said.

On the flip side, budgeted expenditures for the 2001-02 year increased by an estimated $423,683. Approximately $300,000 of the increase resulted from salary adjustments and benefits related to long-term substitutes used while staff members took extended leaves of absences, as well as other contractual obligations, Zigman said.

Other minor adjustments include those made to the special education program, and other grants and projects, she said.

With amended revenues of $25,077,979 and amended expenditures of $25,266,041, Zigman estimates the district will use $188,062 of its fund equity in 2001-02 to satisfy its outstanding financial obligations.

This reduces the undesignated general fund equity by 7.6 percent from $2,461,820 on June 30, 2001 to $2,273,758 on June 30, 2002.

Based on the final amendment, it's estimated that the district will end the year with a balance in general fund equity of about 9 percent, Zigman said. This is based upon the amount in current year estimated equity divided by prior year expenditures.

In the past nine years, the range of year-end fund equity has been from a low of 4 percent to a high of 17 percent, she said.

MILLAGE

The board has spent recent meetings looking at ways of divvying up the possible funding. Board members also have studied how Saline handled a similar situation when the city built the Saline Recreation Center.

Some considerations included allocating 27 percent ($156,750) to parks and recreation, with $99,750 going toward recreation programs and $57,000 toward school recreation sites.

The board looked at giving 25 percent ($142,500) to senior citizen programming, and 15 percent ($85,500) to pool and auditorium operations. Grants, special projects and capital improvements would get 17.5 percent ($99,750).

In a recent presentation to the school board, Chelsea High School Assistant Robin Raymond said that a recreation millage would provide recreational programming without taking away money from the education budget and provide a funding source for current and future needs.

BUDGET

In addition, the local portion of the foundation grant includes an estimated 5 percent increase in the taxable values of the district.

Categorical revenues to be received from the state are estimated at base funding levels for 2002-03 and include only those amounts that the school district was eligible to receive during the 2001-02 fiscal year, Zigman said.

"Should the funding structure change or the district become eligible or ineligible for categorical funding, these adjustments will be made in a future amendment," she said.

Other revenue adjustments from the 2001-02 fiscal year include the loss of a one-time Medicaid contribution of $111,913 used for eligible students.

Adjustments also include an increase in special education funding related to an estimated increase in program costs and other grant-award adjustments, she said.

In total, Zigman estimates the school district will receive $25,391,658 in revenue, which represents an increase of $313,679, or 1.3 percent, over 2001-02.

Zigman estimates revenue from local property taxes will total $4,444,731. She said Washenaw Intermediate School District will contribute $1,636 million; the state, $18,338 million; and the federal government, $777,829. Another $195,143 will come from new students and other transactions.

Zigman estimates the district will spend $25,790,128, an increase of $524,087, or 2.1 percent, from 2001-02.

In estimating the school district's expenditures, Zigman incorporated certain assumptions into the new budget, including a 2 percent across-the-board salary increase; a 17.9 percent increase in health insurance costs; a 5 percent increase in other health-related insurance rates; and a retirement rate of 12.99 percent.

The budget also assumes a FICA rate of 7.65 percent paid on all salaries; 9 percent increase in utility payments; and a decrease of 10 percent for building budgets.

The expenditures include a delay in replacing one school bus; a $60,000 reduction in the textbook budget, from $85,000 to $25,000; but full support for the $228,000 technology budget.

Zigman also made adjustments to expenditure line items to represent staffing costs such as retirements, placement changes and leaves of absence.

Zigman has budgeted expenses of $11,625,437 for basic educational programs; $1,663,085 for added needs; and $808,084 for adult and continuing education.

A total of $10,789,866 has been tagged for support services, including $1,243,250 for transportation, $2,975,585 for operations and maintenance, $610,976 for general administration; and $1,267,993 for school administration.

Overall, Zigman estimates a drop in the general fund equity of $398,470, or a little more than 17 percent. The net general fund equity as of June 30 is estimated at $2,273,758. A year from now, the total general fund equity is estimated to be $1,875,288, she said.

Workers find contaminated soil

Construction crews diverted during cleanup.

By Michael Rybka
Special Writer

Construction work on Main Street resumed June 17, 24 weeks after soil contamination was discovered in front of the Palmer Ford dealership in Chelsea.

Village Manager Jack Myers said that crews, which were replacing old water mains, had to be diverted after gas was found in the soil. Some 400 yards of soil were removed.

Myers said he was hesitant to guess where the contamination came from, but said that the Pump & Pantry gas station once located across the street had similar problems. He said Palmer Ford once had its own gas pumps, as well.

Bliff Weber, owner of Palmer Ford, said Tuesday that tests showed the soil was clean when the village was looking into buying his property a year or so ago.

Weber said gas pumps have not been on his site in more than 30 years and suspected the contamination was from the Pump & Pantry.

Village Engineer Christine Linfield said that the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality requires that contaminated soil be tested to determine what type of landfill can accept it.

Linfield said the soil would have had to been removed anyway and replaced with a soil that is less susceptible to settling and shifting.

Dan Rosentreter, superintendent of public works in Chelsea, said work on Main Street was redirected to Lincoln Street and other areas, so no time was wasted. He said the project is on schedule.

Township Board OKs fence

■ Township to spend some $4,000.

By Kent Ashton Walton
Special Writer

The Dexter Township Board is tired of its neighbors getting dumped on.

Last week, the board decided to dispose of problems related to the township's recycling bins by accepting a bid from Allied Fence and Security Systems Inc. of Ypsilanti to install a fence.

The company will erect a wooden fence behind the bins to protect adjacent lots from recycling overspill and garbage dumped at the site. The bins are located near the parking lot at the township hall, 6880 Dexter-Pinckney Road.

The township will pay up to $4,048 for a 6-foot-high, 176-foot-long fence. The board said buffers may be needed, as well.

The board also looked at the parking lot to determine what type of landscaping is needed to comply with the township hall's site plan. The township hall was recently renovated and plans included additional landscaping.

The board asked Trustee Michael Howard to review the site plan, and determine what trees and bushes are needed. He was also asked to contact companies. The township will spend up to $1,000 on landscaping.

The board also discussed a gate for the entrance to the township hall. Howard was asked to get estimates for a front gate structure, possibly post and chain, that could be closed between the hours of 10 p.m. and 6 a.m.

The board wants to prevent disturbances in the neighborhood from people dropping off recycling materials or dumping non-recyclables late at night.

Since the site lacks a sign indicating the existence of the township hall, a variety of sign designs were reviewed displaying the words "Dexter Township."

The board also discussed use of directed lighting and the placement of the sign. The sign probably will be located north of the entrance driveway, trustees said.

The highlight of this year's Relay for Life is the second annual relay auction with Heller's Auctioneer Service officiating. Items will include spa packages and sports collectibles.

Skinner retires from SWWC

Diane Skinner retires after 13 years.

By Paul Tull
Special Writer

Officially it's called the South and West Washtenaw Consortium.

The name is a mouthful, a jaw-breaker, a super-moniker and then some. It has the sound of big government, a bustling bureaucracy about it.

In the field of public education, South and West Washtenaw Consortium (SWWC) could stand for "Sure Way to Wages, Careers." Or "Student-Work Worth Cash."

For 20 years, the Saline, Milan, Manchester, Chelsea and Dexter school districts have pooled their teaching facilities, portions of their staffs and their budgets to offer lifetime career opportunities to students searching for a fulfilling line of work.

Starting in their third year of high school, students who opt to explore the career and technical education programs offered by the consortium can choose from 15 or more work-study classes offered.

These include auto technology, building trades, child and adult care, hospitality and culinary arts, cosmetology, electronics, print graphics, health sciences, machine tool technology, marketing, metal processing and welding technology, and visual imaging technology.

Turf and landscape management, and agri-science are recent additions.

There's a lot of busing involved. With only a few exceptions, the courses and classes are located in or adjacent to Saline. This means that students living in other areas are bused to and from their SWWC locations.

One of the building trades classes is centered in Chelsea and one in Saline; the print graphics sessions are based in Dexter; the health sciences are taught in Chelsea, as well as at Saline Community Hospital; and the cosmetology teaching sessions are held in rented space at the Huron Valley Beauty Academy on Washtenaw Avenue in Ypsilanti.

With these few exceptions, the consortium classes are all located in Saline. Busing and teaching costs are shared proportionately by the five school districts.

"Busing is a major part of the consortium budget," said Diane Skinner, principal and director of Career and Technical Education with the South and West Washtenaw Consortium.

And, Skinner ought to know. She travels from school to school, class to class, making sure that the mission of the consortium is being accomplished. Based in a small office at Saline High School, she is a smiling leader and inspirer.

"I believe in what we're doing," she said. "We're constantly monitoring the day-by-day progress of classes, and we follow up the employment successes of our graduates."

"One year after earning their diplomas, close to 80 percent of the program's alumni have found employment. A surprising number go on to college, aiming for a profession such as nursing or engineering that they've already gotten a head start in as high school students."

The South and West Washtenaw Consortium was launched in the 1979-80 school year. David Mieras, a longtime teacher in Saline, was the key organizer. After building a strong foundation for the new program, Mieras retired in 1996.

Skinner, his successor, was born and raised in Jackson. She moved to Clinton in 1989, and commuted to Eastern Michigan University, where she earned a bachelor's degree in home economics and science, a master's degree in consumer management, and a specialist's degree in educational leadership.

"I commuted to EMU through Saline," she said, "and I knew Saline was where I wanted to teach. In the fall of 1973, I started teaching home economics and biology here."

In 1981, Skinner joined Mieras on the faculty, and in 1989 she was named director of Career and Technical Education with the consortium. She has served as adviser to Future Homemakers of America and Big Sisters-Little Sisters Club.

Skinner will retire at the end of the current school year. She and her husband, Gary, will move to Lake Columbia in the Irish Hills.

Skinner said she will treasure memories of her "happy, productive years" as a teacher and director.

She is already helping prepare her successor for the upcoming change in management. Jean Britton, assistant principal at Saline High, will take over the program. Skinner said she is confident that the consortium will continue to be an ever-growing "Sure Way to Wages, Careers."

Writer Paul Tull is publisher emeritus at The Saline Reporter and Milan News-Leader, part of Heritage Newspapers.

Four Generations Milestone

Wing is pictured with Carol Jones, a member of the Dexter High School Alumni Association. Cherish Samuels, who is not pictured, was also recognized.

Program set for special needs cyclists

This summer, a new program is giving Southeast Michigan children and young adults with special needs a chance to get a little extra help learning how to ride their bikes.

The Special Needs Cycling Program starts June 26. The program, now under way, is a joint effort between C.S. Mott Children's Hospital and The Arc of Western Wayne County. It reaches kids about different aspects of bicycle and tricycle riding. The University of Michigan Dance Marathon, Mott Rock-N-Roll Party and the Ann Arbor Community Foundation are funding the sessions.

"It's a great opportunity for children with special needs to learn to ride so they can play with their friends," Alexandra Creitz, a physical therapy supervisor at Mott Hospital said in a press release. "In addition, it gives them a chance to develop their strength, balance and coordination."

Trained instructors will teach participants about fitness and safety in addition to basic riding and mechanical skills during the one-hour sessions. Children also can learn specific riding skills based on their individual needs.

The program is open to children who are having trouble learning how to ride, such as those with disabilities or those looking to improve their endurance. While participants will be supervised, parents are encouraged to stay and support their children.

"By staying, parents will be able to understand their children's abilities," says Creitz. "We encourage them to bring their bikes and ride with us."

Sessions will take place from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays at the University of Michigan parking lot at Glazier

Way and Huron Parkway in Ann Arbor.

From the parking lot, children can take advantage of a bike trail that leads to Gallup Park.

Participants should bring their bike helmets. All participants who do not have a helmet will be provided with one that is theirs to keep at the end of the program. Special needs bicycles and tricycles will be provided.

Author talks about endangered livestock

■ An estimated 1,700 livestock breeds are at risk of extinction.

By Kent Ashton Walton
Special Writer

Jan Dohner, a local resident and trustee on the Chelsea District Library Board, presented her book, "The Encyclopedia of Historic and Endangered Livestock and Poultry Breeds," June 17 at the library.

Dohner addressed about two dozen livestock enthusiasts, describing rare and endangered farm animals from around the world. Yale University Press published her 500-plus-page encyclopedia last year.

In her talk, Dohner described changes that have occurred in the relationship between people and animals over the past 50 years. For thousands of years, humans were intimately bound with hundreds of native livestock breeds, she said.

However, with the growth of urban life, traditional native livestock has been selectively crossbred and managed in artificial environments, using intensive methods to provide productive breeds for human consumption.

Dohner said that the benefits of inexpensive food bring disadvantages. Apart from the disconnection from farm animals, there is a loss of breeds and health risks to both animals and humans, she said.

In terms of the reduction of breeds, four out of five cattle in the United States and Europe are Holstein-Friesians, the familiar black-and-white cows found grazing in fields. Once there were more than 300 productive cattle breeds, Dohner said.

The same is true for swine or hogs, which have been reduced to three main breeds. Dohner said that while hogs used to feed on crop waste from farms, they are now mostly grain-fed in captivity.

Caged poultry and their eggs come from a few hybrid chickens. And in the United States, there is only one type of turkey bred for breast meat. It can no longer mate naturally and can hardly stand on its feet because of its weight, Dohner said.

In the book, Dohner writes that three corporations supply the United States and Europe with most of their food, which comes from factory farms that are highly mechanized and use genetic technology.

Dohner said it's estimated that about 1,700 of the world's 5,000 livestock breeds are at risk of extinction. She said people should be worried because the loss of breeds is a loss of genetic traits that may turn out to be important.

Mass livestock marketing practices also require expensive artificial environments, electricity, grain, fertilizers and machinery to maintain production. She said these practices present health risks, as evidenced by the recent outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease in the United Kingdom. They also tend to cause pollution of land and water, she said.

Genetically modified foods and animals treated with hormones are banned in many parts of Europe, and there are policies in place to label food such as eggs "cruelty free," indicating that they are not battery-caged laying chickens.

There is, however, a movement toward sustainable agriculture and organic farming that could help save the family farm, which she said is also endangered.

Dohner thinks older breeds hold the key for survival. For example, she said the Ossabaw Island hogs off the coast of Georgia are diabetic, but require no insulin to live. She said they may provide an answer to diabetes sufferers, but they're not protected.

Dohner illustrated her talk with slides and descriptions of rare species that are making a comeback, such as the Old English goat, dating back to 5000 B.C., and the Shetland Island sheep.

Native to the United States, though originally from 1500s Spain, the Navaho Churro sheep provide wool for carpets made by the Navaho, who sell them for approximately $25,000.

Highland cattle have increased in the United States to approximately 15,000 and are able to survive in harsh weather, feeding on underbrush and pasture, she said.

Organizations exist that attempt to protect rare livestock species, including the Rare Breeds Survival Trust and the American Livestock Breeds Conservancy.

Teach your horse togetherness

LOLLY MINDEL

HORSE TALES

In the time it takes to groom your horse, you can be working on your feel, timing and balance, plus something so ethereal that you may not have noticed it.

In his book "True Unity," author Tom Dorrance explains it this way: "... we need to try to figure out some way to understand this thing the horse is so full of and that he has such a strong desire to get from the person in return."

It's about togetherness. Nurturing togetherness is by far the best reason for letting your horse be free and not always tied or in cross ties. There are times when the horse needs to be tied. But how often is tying more for our convenience?

How does one begin to nurture togetherness? There is no 12-step plan and it doesn't happen immediately. It involves your dedication and, in Dorrance's words, "They (people) need to feel there is something there that they have never recognized before."

Begin by allowing your horse to be free to make decisions. Yes, even the wrong decisions — wrong from our point of view, not his.

For example, grooming your horse untied, using a halter and lead rope, gives you the opportunity to direct and support him and teach him to yield to the feel of you.

Direct and support your horse by encouraging, discouraging or rearranging his movements, which allows him to learn. Do not pull, push or hit the horse because it can make the horse resentful, braced or dull. He may just tune you out.

Increase your awareness of what happens just before it happens and you will find that this awareness increases your feel, which improves your timing.

An increased feel and timing allows you to get closer to your horse — not just physically, but mentally — by being in rhythm with your horse's body movements from moment to moment.

The movement may be very subtle — perhaps a shift in weight, a head bob, a rotation of his eyes or ears, a tail swish — but something always happens before the larger movement.

You want to be aware of the moment between the subtle and the larger movement. Giving your horse the suggestion before the larger movement happens is when you will be your most effective. The slightest suggestion will then work.

In trying to stop the larger movement, you will have to do so much more and still it might not be enough to change your horse's mind.

Your horse will begin to recognize the difference in the feel you are offering him. And, as it happens, the task of grooming provides a calm and relaxed atmosphere for both of you to learn to be together.

It is not the end, but just the beginning.

Writer Lolly Mindel owns and trains three Haflingers. She consults with Katie Laeder, owner and trainer at Sweetwater Natural Horsemanship Farm. Both are Dexter-area residents. Mindel can be reached at mindel@provide.net.

A Lima Township resident called the state police June 3 after receiving several harassing, telephone calls. The man said that someone called him at 1:15 a.m. and made a couple vulgar remarks and then hung up.

Family Trouble

A Lima Township resident called 911 after he and his girlfriend started arguing May 29. The woman became upset when she came home and noticed that her boyfriend was not there. They started fighting when he came home. The man left with a friend after troopers spoke to the couple.

Possession of Marijuana

Two Sylvan Township boys were arrested for possession of marijuana May 30 near the intersection of Fletcher and Trinkle roads.

State troopers noticed the boys in a car parked behind an abandoned building on the west side of Fletcher Road north of Trinkle Road.

Troopers asked the boys what they were doing in the area. They had just left school, where they attended graduation practice. They told troopers that they stopped to smoke and there was nothing illegal in the car.

Troopers searched the car and found a glass pipe underneath the front seat. Inside the pipe was a green leafy substance that smelled like marijuana. Troopers also found a small amount of the green leafy material on front seat.

Lyndon Township

Criminal Sexual Conduct

A couple called the state police May 11 to report a case of possible criminal sexual conduct involving their children.

The parents told troopers that they believe their 12-year-old son molested their 5-year-old daughter between May 5 and May 11 based on conversations with the children. Police are investigating.

False Alarm

State police responded to a false alarm May 15 in the 18200 block of M-52.

Troopers arrived at the Channel 31 TV station tower at 3:30 p.m. and noticed two cable employees nearby. They looked around and did not find anything wrong.

Larceny

A radio faceplate was stolen from an unlocked car June 22 in the 1300 block of Armstrong Street.

The removable faceplate attaches to the car stereo and can only function when attached. The plate is worth approximately $100.

Someone stole a moped from a home June 19 in the 100 block of Jackson Street.

The moped was last seen 6 p.m. June 19 in the man's driveway. Officers logged the stolen moped into the Law Enforcement Information Network.

GUIDE TO SALINE SCHOOLS

Just five years ago, the Saline Area School District put the finishing touches on a $39 million bond issue that included two new school buildings. In 2000, school officials, community members, and parents were involved in a community-wide planning process that resulted in the approval of a $124.5 million bond issue for two new schools, Harvest Elementary will open this fall, and a new high school in 2004.

To better serve the needs of newcomers and long-time residents, The Saline Reporter is teaming up with the Saline Area Schools to produce the fifth annual Saline Area Schools Directory, which will feature information about the district's school buildings, schedules, telephone numbers, community education programs, sports schedules, clubs, and staff as well as the latest reports on the bond issue and a look back at Saline Schools from former teachers and students.

This quality publication is guaranteed to appeal to every parent of school-age children, and will be distributed as well to those families eyeing Saline as a possible home town. The Saline Area School Directory is a valuable advertising tool to market your business or service, so take advantage of this opportunity to let residents in the district know what you have to offer and reserve your space today. More than 5,000 copies.

Visual assaults happen daily

KENT ASHTON WALTON

JUST A THOUGHT

Our visual sense is constantly assaulted by images produced in the name of progress and free speech. In many ways, we are not free to ignore what is put before our eyes.

Take television, for example. TV commercials have become incredibly annoying. There is a commercial term, "jolt." A jolt is a technical event that interrupts the flow of imagery or sound.

Have you noticed in many commercials how the images change or flash rapidly — some more than once a second? The flashing is deliberate. It holds your attention because the mind is naturally alert to sudden changes — a vestige from a time when survival depended on our ability to notice predators. It also keeps us in a state of constant stress. Watching television will tire you out holding your attention.

Then there are clothes. When we buy T-shirts, jeans, hats or jackets, they are littered with logos, advertising the garment manufacturer. Why should people have to act as walking billboards providing free advertising, as well as profits to these companies?

Then there's the stress of driving with the necessity of negotiating other vehicles and road construction. If we can relax behind the wheel, we are constantly visually bombarded with roadside signs, billboards, advertising and logos.

Try to avoid reading a huge billboard when it comes into sight, if you can. Once we have learned to read, it's impossible not to read words put before our eyes.

The right to free speech ought to include a citizen's equal right to freedom from words. Is it fair when another's right to free speech imposes on my right to freedom from speech, especially commercial propaganda?

If I had my way, billboards would come down and advertising would be reined in. I have the right to freedom from propaganda, regardless of how good for the economy it all is. You can choose to put this paper down right now, but you can't drive and ignore highway billboards.

The same right not to be visually impacted should apply to any structure that people can't avoid seeing. Builders of cell towers, TV towers, pylons, chimney stacks and tall buildings should pay a tax or toll to the community who live within sight, in addition to paying the location land owner.

If you were there first, you should not have to move to avoid the sight of structures that obscure a natural view or despoil a landscape. Such structures should not be permitted, or affected citizens should be compensated.

County, township and village ordinances only pay lip service to visual aesthetics, especially when it comes to developments.

A developer's idea of natural landscaping is a three-foot grassed berm, a regimented row of saplings and an artificial pond in site plans.

They provide homebuyers with an extremely limited repertoire of cookie-cutter vinyl mansions with requisite gables in various shades of cream.

Luckily, the Chelsea area still has a few older and unique houses. New houses could be well designed, and good design need not be expensive. Clustered housing that leaves wooded areas and wetlands untouched is becoming the development of choice for many because nature is at a premium and has an aesthetic that humans cannot duplicate.

It is thought that aesthetics are subjective, implying that there are no rules. There are rules that good architects have learned. The Chinese art of feng shui has rules for design and building placement. I have also come up with some of my own aesthetic rules.

Straight lines always need to be visually broken up with curves and random lines (trees do a good job of this). Rectangles are very boring shapes. Proportions are extremely important, such as the ratio of height to width (Pythagoras' Golden Mean provides guidelines).

No commercial building should be taller than the height of the flights of stairs it takes to climb in one minute. Houses should be no higher than what residents are willing to leap from. Roads should always be curved, following the natural landscape.

The attempt to keep buildings looking new is doomed. They should be built to age gracefully. Outside of certain flowers, the color yellow does not go well with any other color. The written language should be reserved for books and newspapers.

Much of the environment already has been claimed and taken from us. Ordinances, however, can be changed. What is left of our natural world needs to be aggressively preserved from the endless encroachment of industry, cheap technology, infrastructure, advertising, development and so-called progress.

I think a lot of the anger at town meetings is about the loss of something that's not easy to define in the face of legal challenges. There's the sense that we have unrecognized community rights that, along with our sense of taste, are being trampled under the foot of corporate and business worlds.

It's about the sense that there are values other than profit and the price of labor and materials.

The cost of a building is not just the raw materials and labor used in construction. It is also the cost of the loss of a place, the spoiling of a view, offending aesthetic sensibility, and the destruction of natural value.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Cemetery gate to help stop traffic

Oak Grove Cemetery, located at the corner of Madison and Middle streets in Chelsea, installed a gate between Oak Grove Cemetery and Mt. Olivet Cemetery June 10. The gate was installed to prohibit motorists from using the main road through the cemetery as a thoroughfare between Madison and Middle streets, and Freer Road.

The installation of the gate was approved by the board of trustees at Oak Grove Cemetery and the sexton of Mt. Olivet Cemetery.

It was installed to address the problem of increased traffic through the cemetery. The traffic can endanger maintenance workers as they mow and trim the grounds in the cemetery. It also disturbs families during funeral services and as they visit the graves of loved ones.

A few years ago, the board of trustees at Oak Grove Cemetery installed signs at the entrance of Oak Grove Cemetery and at the entrance of Mt. Olivet Cemetery that said, "No Thru Traffic." This measure failed to significantly reduce traffic. These signs will now be accompanied by signs reading "No Exit" to help remind drivers that the cemetery is not to be used as a shortcut to Freer Road or the downtown area.

John Hansen deserves our support Aug. 6

I would like to urge you to vote for John Hansen to be our next state senator.

John Hansen has the determination to get things done. He has proven that he is the leader who can create good public policy that will fairly address the varied needs of our district.

As Dexter's school superintendent, he participated along with board members and teacher negotiators in training that helped resolve bargaining issues to the satisfaction of all parties. "Getting to Yes" became the customary labor relations practice. John Hansen knows how to work collaboratively.

In my experience as a Dexter teacher, I saw John respond to a changing community. He laid the groundwork for the district's school expansion to accommodate an increasing population.

John does not resist progress, but uses research, caution and careful planning when examining questions about growth.

John has a long history of involvement with nonprofit community-based organizations. He once encouraged a group of parents to form the Educational Foundation of Dexter. The foundation has since generated large sums of money for Dexter's schoolchildren and is a strong support network between the community and schools.

John believes that educational opportunities for all citizens constitute the core of a healthy community. He acts on his convictions.

John Hansen's experience and accomplishments qualify him to represent us in Lansing. Vote for him in the primary Aug. 6.

Local center hosts talk

■ University of Michigan professor discusses theories.

By Kent Ashton Walton
Special Writer

The Michigan Friends Center near Chelsea hosted an all-day workshop June 15 on global economics.

Alan Deardorff, a professor of international economics at the University of Michigan, discussed several theories with the 33 participants.

Wayne Burkan, an international keynote speaker on change and innovation, prefaced the meeting with a discussion on challenging long-held beliefs.

He explained how invisible boundaries — often promoted by experts — can blind people to new realities. When new ideas conflict with long-held beliefs, the new ideas become "invisible," he said.

Burkan said that people resist changing ideas if they have investments in their beliefs that would be rendered worthless by change. He took a pragmatic approach to change, suggesting that when beliefs no longer solve problems, we have to question those beliefs.

Deardorff defined globalization as an increase of economic interaction. Economics is the process of satisfying wants, he said.

Deardorff gave a brief history on the development of global economics. He talked about the formation of the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, the North American Free Trade Agreement and the World Trade Organization.

He said globalization consists of international investment, with rich countries owning assets in developing countries.

Although this creates benefits, it also creates problems in the poorer countries when capital investments are sold and currencies devalue, he said.

Deardorff also discussed the idea of "comparative advantage," which was originated by British economist David Ricardo. Under certain conditions, countries specializing in what they produce best benefit themselves and their trading partners, he said.

To explain why large numbers of people are concerned about the World Trade Organization and other similar financial institutions, Deardorff referred to the Trade Related Intellectual Properties agreement, which he said was instituted to protect big corporations who had patents. For example, he said the agreement prevents poorer countries from making their own generic versions of drugs at less cost.

All countries are now forced to adopt intellectual property laws, he said.

Deardorff said environmental objections to trade practices have been struck down by the World Trade Organization. He cited the recent "shrimp-turtle" and "tuna-dolphin" controversies.

He discussed disputes that have been resolved by the World Trade Organization such as when Europe wanted to ban imported beef from cows treated with hormones, a common practice in the American cattle industry.

Deardorff said the World Trade Organization sided with the United States despite the European concern about health risks from eating hormone-treated beef.

Several audience members said the decision shows that institutions thwart democratic governments from responding to citizen's wishes over health and food safety.

Some workshop participants said that the World Trade Organization's decisions are made behind closed doors and are not subject to the democratic process of public scrutiny and comment.

Others suggested that corporations are often more powerful and wealthier than nations. This allows global corporations and institutions to avoid being accountable to human interests, as well as quality-of-life and environmental issues.

Participants also took part in economic exercises. They calculated the "comparative advantage" between two fictional countries with specialized products and tried to figure out the relative benefits of maintaining or removing tariffs in a developing Latin American country.

A child's dental health is crucial

Timing of first dental visit controversial.

By Lisa Vidaurri-Bowling

Heritage Newspapers
Almost 18 percent of children between the ages of 2 and 4 experience some form of tooth decay, according to the Academy of General Dentistry.

That may be because their parents don't know the right way to care for their children's teeth, dental experts say.

At a child's first dental visit, the dentist will demonstrate proper oral hygiene, including identifying any early problems.

The timing of the first visit to the dentist is a little controversial, however. The American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry says children should see a dentist when they get their first tooth and no later than 1 year of age.

In contrast, the American Academy of Pediatrics advises that unless a child has risk factors for having problems with his teeth — such as sleeping with a cup or a bottle, teeth staining, thumb sucking, etc. — the first visit to the dentist should be at about the age of 3.

Area dentist Frank Stankiewicz recommends that parents take children to a dentist after the eruption of their first tooth.

"Use gauze or a warm washcloth to clean your child's teeth," he says.

That gets children used to something being in their mouth, he says. Then, graduate to a small, soft toothbrush.

Though pacifiers can be used until the child is 1 year old, prolonged use can lead to dental problems, dental health experts say.

"Parents should check the child's teeth daily, especially at night," Stankiewicz says. "Bedtime is one of the most important times to brush."

"Change your child's toothbrush every six months and make sure everyone in the family has their own toothbrush. Don't share."

Stankiewicz, who specializes in family and cosmetic dentistry, says that when bringing a child to the dentist for the first time it is OK to bring a comfort item such as a favorite toy or a blanket.

He also has advice for what children should drink at night.

"Only let children go to sleep with a bottle filled with water or a 50-50 juice-and-water mixture," he says. "Try diluting a white grape juice if the child wants juice instead of water. Formula, milk and juices can cause tooth decay."

Most pediatric dentists suggest avoiding chewable vitamins that list sugar as their first ingredient.

Choosing the right snacks also is important in diet as well as oral health.

Many parents believe they are doing right by their children by feeding them raisins and other dried foods. However, products like these often are high in sugar.

Naturally occurring bacteria in the mouth devours sugar and creates acid that attacks tooth enamel. That can lead to decay.

When selecting snacks, Stankiewicz suggests replacing foods high in sugar with more nutritious ones.

"The best choices for children's snacks are fresh fruits and vegetables like apples and carrots," he says.

In addition to teaching your children the importance of regular brushing, routine visits to the dentist and a healthy diet, it is important that parents set an example by also practicing good dental hygiene, dentists say.

If parents do not brush and floss each day or regularly see a dentist, then it is unlikely that their children will either.

Joel Gentz of Chelsea has won a three-year Air Force ROTC scholarship to Purdue University.

More than 13,000 high school seniors from across the United States applied for the scholarship.

Lt. Col. Wade Kellogg presented the scholarship to Gentz at an awards ceremony May 31.

HEROES

trek involved clambering up and down steep limestone cliffs.

"I'm in awe of anyone who did this same thing 60 years ago during the war, with a rifle and 60 pounds of stuff on his back," Colmer says.

While the team came up empty-handed, on another trek they came across a Corsair that hadn't been seen in 57 years by anyone other than a few local hunters.

The team discovered that 2nd Lt. James Misley, shot down in early 1945, flew the airplane, whose wreckage was strewn in a gully.

The team found the stick, cockpit pieces, tail section and tail hook, landing gear, an oil cooler, a couple of cylinders and many other pieces. Colmer says the team's best guess is that the Japanese — headquartered only two miles away — found the pilot and buried him, then stripped the airplane of machine guns, ammo and other parts, leaving the wreck intact.

In 1947, staff from Graves Registration found unidentified bodies and sent them to Manila for storage. In 1949, Misley's body was identified through dental records and brought home for burial in Mt. Shasta, Calif.

"However, some of his squad-mates never found out about his disposition," Colmer says.

BentProp project leader Pat Scannon planned to call some of the former fliers later, including Misley's wingman who had waited years for information.

The team hooked up with an elderly Palauan who said that as a boy he saw a B-24 shot down.

One parachute landed in the bay and a body washed up on the shore the following day.

"It was a long shot, but we searched the area," Colmer says. "A mangrove had taken root there, but there were no bones to be found."

"However, the testimony of the old man, as well as other circumstantial evidence, suggests that maybe this was 1st Lt. Arnett's final resting spot, or a member of his crew."

The team visited a known crash site of Major Harry Scullins, who was shot down in his TBM Avenger in 1944 while attacking a land-based Japanese unit six miles from Peleliu.

Scullins and his two crewmen all perished. The Marines launched a recovery mission but had to withdraw with only one of the crewmen.

"Scullins and the other crewman, Bert Smith, had their final resting spot in one of the most beautiful spots on the planet," Colmer says.

Last year, Scannon held a flag ceremony at the site. Before this year's trip, he tracked down Scullins' two sisters, who always wondered what became of their brother. The team held a flag ceremony at the site and sent a flag to each sister.

Palauan Sen. Surangal Whipps took the crew out on his boat to visit several sites where Japanese floatplanes had sunk.

"These airplanes were tucked up to the sheer walls of the islands and had jungle canopy over them but were still found and destroyed," Colmer says.

Debris constantly washes ashore in the islands. The group made one trek to a newly discovered piece of debris that resembled an aviation piece.

A message from the Commandant of the Marine Corps

I want to express my sincere gratitude to the BentProp Project for your altruistic quest to locate the servicemen who fought in World War II and have been declared missing in action in the jungles and waters surrounding the Republic of Palau.

When our country was plunged into the Pacific Campaign some 60 years ago, millions of our citizens heeded the call to duty and joined the armed forces. Many were selected for the Marine Corps, and far too many Marines made the ultimate sacrifice in service to their nation.

For more than half a century, the fates of hundreds of these men have remained concealed beneath the sand and silt, encrusted in coral, or shrouded by leaves and vines while loved ones have lived with the pain of not knowing.

Through your tireless efforts, the families and friends of many of these brave airmen have finally achieved closure. You have helped to show that no Marine is ever forgotten. No matter what battlefield they may fall upon, nor in which era they serve, they are all remembered and honored.

Your recognition of the importance of finding these off-forgotten heroes and filling in the gaps that complete their stories is commendable. It is important that our country always remember the sacrifices made by others so that we may enjoy freedom.

Thank you for inspiring us and reminding us to seek to live our own lives selflessly and honorably and to never forget those who served and gave so dearly. Marines everywhere join me in saluting you for your service, and may health and happiness follow you in all that you do.

J.L. Jones
General
U.S. Marine Corps

"It had plumbing holes and flash holes suggesting aviation," Colmer says. "It still had some red paint suggesting Japanese."

The group also did several dives on sunken Japanese planes, including a Zeke and Zero.

"I think the total count of destroyed Japanese airplanes over Palau was over 200," Colmer says. "And that (was) by the Navy before the Marines showed up."

The group also explored caves that once served as home and work quarters to the tenders of the seaplanes.

"The caves were pretty substantial, including fuel and ammo storage, as well as bunk and cooking facilities," Colmer says.

The group took a boat trip to Nephthang, where a machine gun was sticking up in a coral head. They found a significant debris field, including two cylinder heads, wing root, elevator and other parts.

They took a memorable trip to the island of Peleliu, where local resident Tangie Hesus keeps the memory of the war alive as ticket-taker, curator, coordinator, fund-raiser and guide.

"He truly understands that his personal freedom is due solely to the sacrifice made by American servicemen during this hard-won campaign," Colmer says. "And he is sincerely thankful."

"He knows the history, the people and the places of Peleliu. And he kept us from stepping on unexploded bombs, bullets and mortar rounds."

Colmer says the entire island is a memorial and cemetery, with human remains and equipment everywhere. The team visited a museum building, a Japanese tank, Sherman tank, Zero aircraft, and had a solemn visit to the 1st Marine Memorial, 81st Infantry Memorial and Cemetery.

On their way out, their guide mentioned a new aircraft find. While investigating, the team discovered a Helicat wing, Corsair parts and other wreckage. Colmer says it's against U.S. federal law and Palauan law to salvage any of these wartime items.

During Colmer's trip, retired Marine Lt. Col. Bill Cantrell and his wife, Mary Alice, flew out to join the BentProp team.

Cantrell, who wrote a book, "Friends, Dear Friends and Heroes," was back in the western Pacific for the first time since the war, and entertained the team with Corsair stories.

"We were able to take him to a spot that he attacked many years ago, where his best friend, 'Cowboy,' attacked a destroyer that was tied up to an island," Colmer says. "We let him and his wife take in the beauty of the area."

Cantrell visited the Palauan Senate, where he was introduced as a war hero and the entire senate stopped work so they could meet him.

The group was also joined by Neil Nelson and her husband, Jim, the son of Quintus B. Nelson, a Marine commander of Marine Fighter Squadron 122.

Jim Nelson, born after his father shipped out, never knew him. Nelson was killed in action April 16, 1945, downed over Palau by enemy anti-aircraft fire.

Colmer and his friends spent several hours searching for Nelson's Corsair on one of the islands, finding pathways, steps and bunkers, but no aircraft wreckage.

They were amazed that Japanese soldiers hauled concrete into the hills to make the fortifications.

"Thank goodness we never invaded these particular islands," Colmer says. "History shows that when the Japanese capitulated in 1945, 25,000 soldiers came down to Koror to surrender."

The team, joined by some Marine F/A 18 pilots who were on a tour of the Pacific, held a memorial service for Nelson at sunset.

Two Marine majors handed a folded American flag to Jim Nelson, with a second flag to give his mother. Nelson, who was given a lei to wear, tossed it on the waters in island tradition.

Letters were read aloud from Gen. J.L. Jones, Commandant of the Marine Corps, and from the U.S. Embassy, honoring Nelson.

"Words were said by all and everyone was teary eyed," Colmer said. "This was the first memorial service for Major Q.B. Nelson ever."

The Marine pilots, who left shortly afterward for the island of Yap, did a missing-man formation fly-over for the residents of Koror.

"We heard it but did not see it, as we were in the jungle," Colmer says.

"The sound of freedom ran throughout the gullies we were working in."

Big top coming to town

■ Carson & Barnes Five-Ring Circus to perform Sunday.

By Andrea Blythe
Staff Writer

Ladies and gentlemen, the show is about to begin.

The Carson & Barnes Five-Ring Circus is coming Sunday to the Chelsea Fairgrounds, 20501 Old US-12.

Hosted by the Chelsea Lions Club, the circus will feature two shows Sunday. The first one will start at 1:30 p.m., and the second will follow at 4:30 p.m.

Tickets may be purchased before Sunday at a reduced price or the day of the circus.

Tickets purchased prior to Sunday are $10 for adults ages 12 and older, and $5 for children ages 2-11. On circus day, tickets will be $14 for adults and $7 for children.

Part of the proceeds from ticket sales will go to the Chelsea Lions Club. The Lions Club uses the money to benefit the community with high school scholarships, support of the Chelsea Area Transportation System, diabetic training and sponsorship of the Senior Citizen Prom.

In addition, the Lions Club recently finished constructing a new pavilion at Timber Town. Proceeds from past circuses have helped fund the project.

The circus will roll into town at about 7 a.m. Sunday, complete with 70 vehicles. Early risers can head over to the fairgrounds between 8 and 10 a.m. for a free viewing of the animals. They may also watch the elephants raise the big top and experience the circus coming alive.

The Carson & Barnes circus bills itself as the only five-ring show on the road and the largest. The tent alone is bigger than a football field.

The Miller family has owned the circus for more than six decades. The late D.R. Miller, founder and known as "Mr. Circus," was inducted in the Circus Hall of Fame in Sarasota, Fla., this past year.

His daughter, Barbara Miller Byrd and her husband, Geary Byrd, are carrying on Miller's legacy of family entertainment. They run the day-to-day logistics of the circus, while their daughters perform in the show.

The circus consists of a variety of animals, including elephants, hippopotami, lions, tigers, zebra, horses and many other exotic and domestic animals.

The human performers, which number about 60, are from countries all around the world. Acts consist of aerial acrobatic teams, jugglers and clowns, along with performing elephants, lions, tigers, camels, dogs and horses.

Bicycling trapeze artists will spin two simultaneous double wheels of destiny at the apex of the big top. The Cavallini family will present a thrilling teeterboard exhibition and "Princess Roxanne and her Almost-human Gorillas" will perform a comedy act.

In addition, the circus will feature the "Grand Spectacular Parade." This year the show features a Spanish theme and has been named "Spanish Spectacular."

The star of the circus, however, is a baby elephant named Baby Jennie. She was the first baby born as a result of a breeding program the Byrd's implemented several years ago.

The Endangered Ark Foundation was established to provide a breeding program for the endangered Asian elephants.

Carson & Barnes circus comes to 250 towns and cities each season, moving to a new site nearly every day.

Tickets may be purchased in advance at Inverness Pro Shop, Thompson's Pizzeria, Parts Peddler, Wellness Solutions, Dexter Pharmacy and Chelsea Pharmacy, as well as from any

Varner achieves Eagle

Marius Varner, 18, of Chelsea has received Scouting's highest award, the Eagle Scout award, during a recent Court of Honor ceremony.

The ceremony was held at St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Scituate, Mass., where Varner used to live and where he completed his Eagle project.

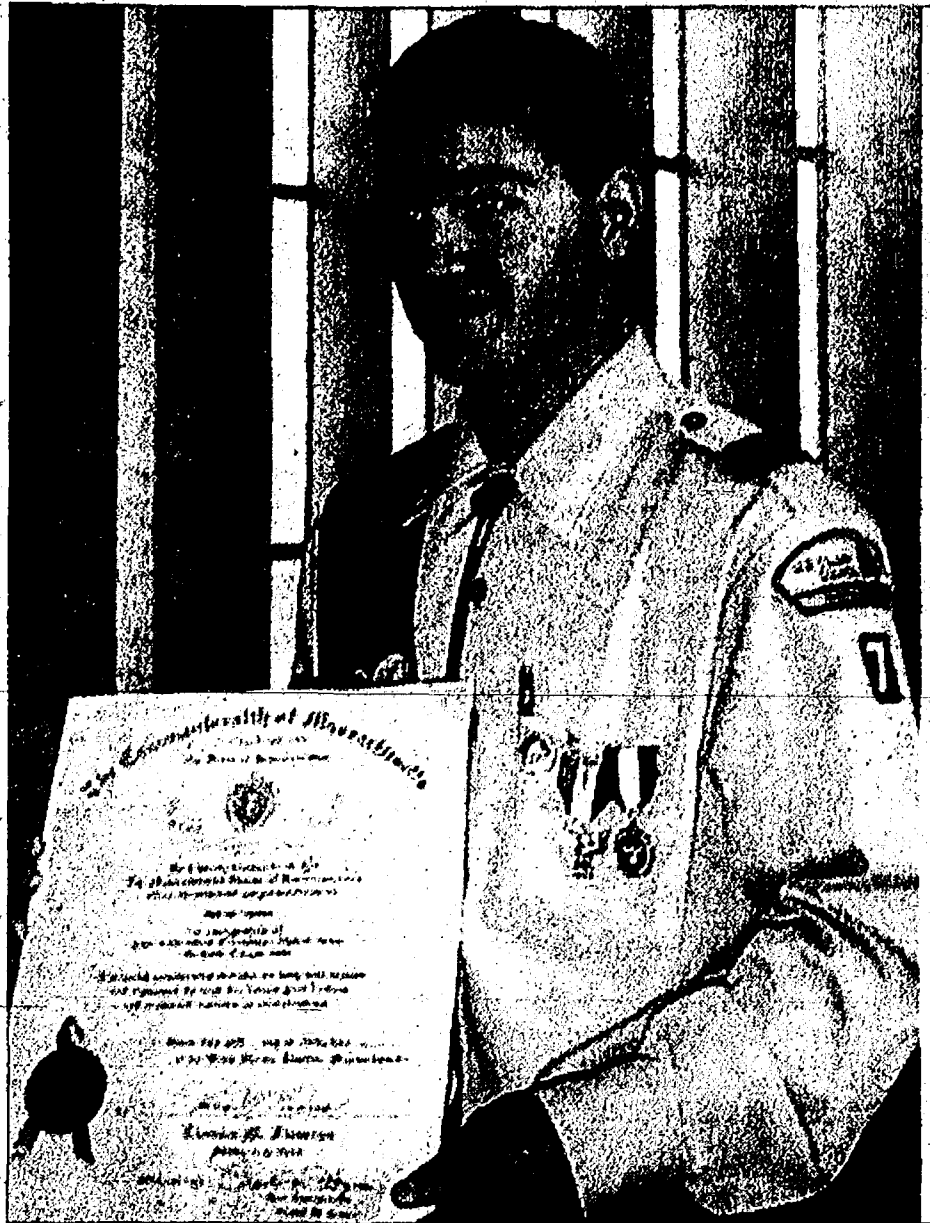

Speakers at the ceremony included the Rev. Ray Low of St. Luke's, Massachusetts state Rep. Frank Hynes, Scituate Town official Richard Lane and Mark Fenton, a nationally-recognized expert on walking and fitness. U.S. Sens. Carl Levin and Debbie Stabenow and U.S. Congressman Mike Rogers provided letters of commendation.

Varner became the eighth Scout in Troop 7 to earn the Eagle rank after earning 24 merit badges. For his Eagle project, he built a walking trail at a Scituate park.

Fenton and others commented on the value of the project to local residents, who now have an additional place to walk and hike.

Fenton, who has written a book about walking, was an editor at Walking magazine and hosted a TV show on PBS about the health benefits of walking. He is a regular commentator on fitness issues on journalist Barbara Walters' daytime TV program "The View."

Varner, the son of Catherine and Christopher Varner, lived in Massachusetts until last August, when the family moved to Chelsea. He is the third genera-

Tripodi, Taylor represent state

By Don Richter
Staff Writer

Remember these two. Chelsea might never see a throwing duo like them ever again.

Joe Tripodi is a two-time Division II state champion in the shot put. Classmate Kari Taylor is a two-time Division II state titleholder in the shot put and discus. The Bulldog combo is, by far, the most accomplished throwing duo ever to wear a Chelsea uniform.

In fact, Tripodi and Taylor might form the greatest twosome ever to compete at the same time, from the same school, this area and, arguably, this state has ever witnessed.

On June 15, Tripodi and Taylor represented Michigan at the Midwest Meet of Champions at Wittenberg University in Springfield, Ohio.

The event, which brought together the top track and field athletes from Indiana, Ohio and Michigan, is one of the most competitive prep meets in the country.

Despite the high-level competition, Tripodi and Taylor shined.

Tripodi placed first in the shot put, with a school record throw of 60 feet, 8 1/2 inches. He beat Michigan teammate and Division I champion Paul Sarantos from Portage Northern, who recorded a toss of 58-7 1/2. Placing third was Ohio's John Caplinger, with a 57-10 1/2, while Michigan's Duane Buchanan (runner-up in Division II) of Three Rivers was fourth with a 54-8 1/2 and Ohio's John Jenkins fifth with a 53-8 1/2.

"Joe was well prepared for the meet," said Chelsea throws coach Bert Kruse. "He had seven throws over 60 feet in practice."

In discus, Tripodi finished eighth with a heave of 148-8. Division I state champion Sarantos captured the event with a toss of 187-8.

Taylor placed third in both the shot put and discus. In each event, she was the highest finisher for Michigan.

In shot put, Taylor recorded a throw of 41-1 1/2. Winning the event was Indiana state champion Andrea Dalla Rosa, with a toss of 48-6. The Hoosier state's Alexis Bowen was second with a 42-7 1/2.

In discus, Taylor finished with a throw of 139-9. Placing first was Ohio's state champion Christen Clemson, with a 145-3. Ending up second was Indiana's Dalla Rosa.

Overall, Michigan won the girls' meet with 181 points. Ohio was second with 127 points, while Indiana was third with 118 points.

In the boys' meet, Ohio won with 180 points. Michigan was second with 154 points, while Indiana was third with 123 points.

Tripodi and Taylor are the seventh and eighth Chelsea athletes to participate in the Midwest Meet of Champions.

Tripodi, an All-State offensive lineman, will continue his football career in the Big Ten at Northwestern University next fall.

Taylor will compete for Central Michigan University in the Mid American Conference.

Moffett, Baker baseball MVPs

By Don Richter
Staff Writer

Chelsea senior Matt Moffett and junior Jimmy Baker were named co-MVPs of the Bulldog baseball team last week.

An infielder, Moffett, who also was presented with the team's Coaches Award, set a school record for hits in a season this year with 65. He ended the season with a .490 batting average. For his Chelsea career, Moffett had a three-year average of .491.

Last week, Moffett participated in the Michigan East-West High School Baseball All-Star game at Comerica Park in Detroit. He started at shortstop for the West squad and went 1-for-2 at the plate. He is the eighth Bulldog to play in the high profile game.

Moffett was further honored by being named to the Michigan High School Baseball Coaches Association Division II All-State first team.

"Few players have worked as hard to be a good player as Matthew," said Chelsea coach Wayne Welton. "He's had a great career."

Moffett plans to attend Michigan State University and play baseball for the Spartans.

Joining Moffett on the Division II All-State first team is teammate senior outfielder

Derek Horvath.

Horvath, Chelsea's leadoff hitter, batted .479 this season. He ended the year with 50 hits. He also plans to attend Michigan State.

Early in the season, Horvath missed eight games.

"We went 3-5 without him," Welton said. "This is certainly a reward for someone instrumental and key to our team's success."

Chelsea finished the year ranked No. 10 in Division II with an overall record of 29-11-1. The Bulldogs captured a district crown before falling, by one run, to eventual state champion Monroe Jefferson in the regional final.

Baker, the ace of the Bulldog staff, finished the year with a 9-3 overall record and a 1.99 ERA. At the plate, he was just as dominant. Chelsea's clean-up hitter, Baker ended the season with 50 RBI and 60 hits, surpassing the previous school record of 59, set last year by Tony Scheffler. Only Moffett bested Baker's 60 hits this year.

Presented with the squad's

Most Improved Award was senior outfielder-designated hitter Griffin Biedron. Biedron batted over .300 this season.

Receiving the team's Dugout Award was junior outfielder Ronnie Herrst. The award is presented to the player who has the most spirit and enthusiasm on the squad.

Earning All-Southeastern Conference first team honors for Chelsea were junior pitcher-infielder David Grabarkiewicz, Baker and Moffett.

Named All-SEC honorable mention were juniors catcher Matt Cunningham and pitcher-infielder Joe Myers, and Horvath.

Making the MHSBCA All-District first team were Baker, Moffett, Horvath, Grabarkiewicz and Cunningham.
