Seniors appeal for funds

City Council OKs $12,500 contribution to help senior center

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

Serious financial concerns have put the Chelsea Senior Center in danger of closing within two years if an alternate source of funding isn't found.

That's what Tina Patterson, director of the senior center, told the Chelsea City Council last week as she made an appeal for funding help.

Patterson requested that the city commit to contributing $25,000 annually to help the senior center meet its operational expenses.

Half of her wish was granted June 20 when the City Council voted unanimously to contribute $12,500 to the senior center to help with expenses for the remainder of the year.

Patterson said the center has been operating on a deficit budget after suffering the loss of two major sources of funding. As a result, the center has been experiencing a $1,500 shortfall each month.

"We are losing money each month. We may lose the center totally in a time period of two years," she said. "We want our senior center to remain. We need it as part of our community."

Many other senior centers are facing similar dilemmas, and Patterson said the cen-

Walkers, such as Larry Hitchcock of Florida, may have noticed that pedestrian crossing buttons have been reinstalled at crosswalks along Main Street in downtown Chelsea. Crossing buttons were removed by the Michigan Department of Transportation several years ago in an attempt to keep traffic along Main Street moving. The buttons create a longer cycle time for pedestrians to cross Main Street and it was believed that the buttons contributed to traffic backups along the busy downtown street. But MDOT has been reinstalling the buttons after finding that removing the buttons did not appear to significantly slow the traffic flow or increase backups on Main Street. The new buttons will beep and light up when pushed.

For the world record

Business hopes to set record for largest teddy bear mosaic

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

Chelsea Teddy Bear Co. is going for a world record.

The local business is holding a weeklong event called the "10,000 Flags Celebration" and plans to unveil the world's largest teddy bear flag Saturday.

The Guinness Book of World Records has created a new category for the world's largest teddy bear mosaic and there is currently no record holder for that category. When the local company measures its American flag, made up of approximately 365 red, white and blue teddy bears, in an official ceremony 2 p.m. Saturday, it will become the world record holder.

"The Chelsea Teddy Bear Co. is very proud to achieve this recognition from Guinness for a world record, but even more so because of the symbol that our teddy bear mosaic represents — the American flag," Bob Turner, owner of the Chelsea Teddy Bear Co., said.

"Our biggest customer is the U.S. military, and we're proud of that. This symbol we've created is a fitting tribute to our freedom and to the men and women who put

City plans to improve wastewater system

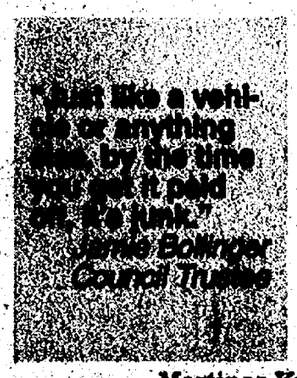

Local leaders hoping to secure funding through the state

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

City residents filled the room where the Chelsea City Council met last week for a public hearing on a proposed project to increase capacity in the city's wastewater system, many of them concerned about investing in improvements to the system before other issues are resolved.

Those issues include two reverse-osmosis units that are part of the city's water system to supply softened water to residents. The units, which cost the city approximately $700,000 and have not worked properly since installed, contribute to capacity issues in the city's wastewater system.

And capacity of the wastewater system is one of the primary reasons improvements are needed. The proposed $15.4 million project involves improvements to the Veterans Park pump station, a sanitary sewer evaluation survey and improvements to the sewer system, with the overall intent of increasing wastewater treatment plant capacity to 1.8 million gallons per day.

The City Council voted 6-1 June 20, with Council Trustee Kent Martinez-Kratz opposed, on a resolution to adopt the wastewater system improvement project plan.

City officials are hoping to secure a State Revolving Fund loan through the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality to pay for improvements to the city wastewater system, which serves approximately 1,500 single-family homes, as well as apartments, and commercial, industrial and institutional properties.

But once complete, the cost of debt retirement and system maintenance would be passed along to sewer customers. And after seeing an increase in water and sewer rates earlier this spring, residents are not looking forward to paying more for sewer service.

Segment I of the project, estimated at $11.16 million, includes the entire project except for the tertiary membrane filter. Annual operating expenses for those

Pets rejoice! There's a new store in town that has listened to your every demand and is ready to make your wildest dreams come true.

Walking across the welcoming front porch into The Pet Emporium in Copper Leaf Crossing at the corner of Ann Arbor-Saline and Pleasant Lake Roads, any pet and pet owner will feel like they have entered a country store made just for animals and their every whim.

Penny candy jars line the pine shelves in the bright store. Instead of jawbreakers and licorice, however, lucky cats can chose from Pawbreakers and Heatable Catnip, Kat Teazz Balls and Cosmic Country Catnip.

Pups can hope for one of the half dozen flavors of Buddy Biscuits like Peanut Butter, Sweet Potato or Veggie Madness. Classic dog toys like Kong and Xtreme Kong are complemented by cool new toys like the Tire Biters and Fetch Me Fido.

If all the fun and games work up an appetite, dogs can visit The Pet Emporium bakery counter for fresh-baked canollis, dog biscuits drizzled with carob and yogurt, wheat-based pretzels, peanut butter cups or fortune dog cookies featuring over 150 different messages just for canines.

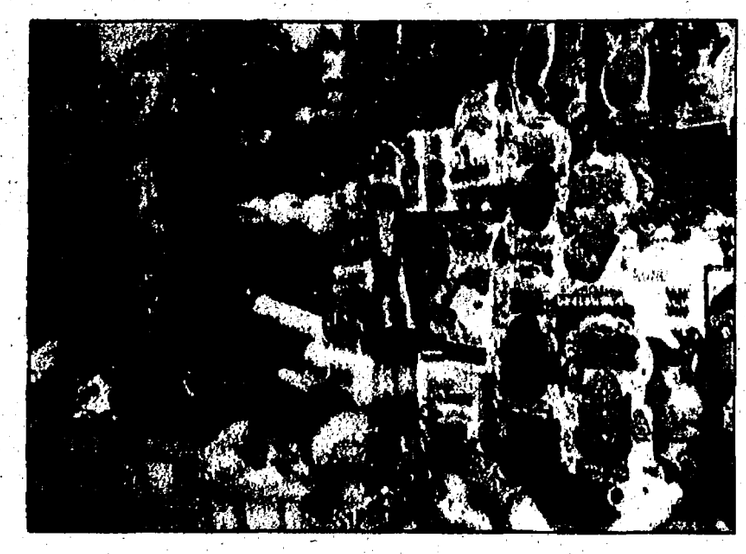

"We are having so much fun finding specialized, cool toys for pets and offering baked good made with simple, human-grade ingredients," said Pet Emporium's owner Beth Lebert. Beth and her husband John have owned Pets 'N' Things in Saline since 1993 and will complement the pets and services in that store with the offerings at The Pet Emporium.

The staff at the new store includes Michelle Hochgreve, Stephanie Kanitz, Jennifer Aycock and Kathy Schamberger. They promise to reward any visiting pet with a different give-away each week. This week cat-owners can take home a peacock feather and pups get a yummy biscuit or maybe even some Pupcorn.

The light pine floors dotted with braided rugs, custom made copper counter, barrels overflowing with stuffed dog toys and wicker baskets full of colorful accessories give the store a warm and welcoming flavor.

"We are focusing on many all-natural products, including raw frozen diets for dogs, which are growing in popularity and have many health benefits," said Beth, who hopes the store will draw customers from Milan, Manchester and Ann Arbor as well as Saline. "We also have a section devoted to homeopathic and herbal remedies to help with anxiety, worms, coat enhancement and arthritis."

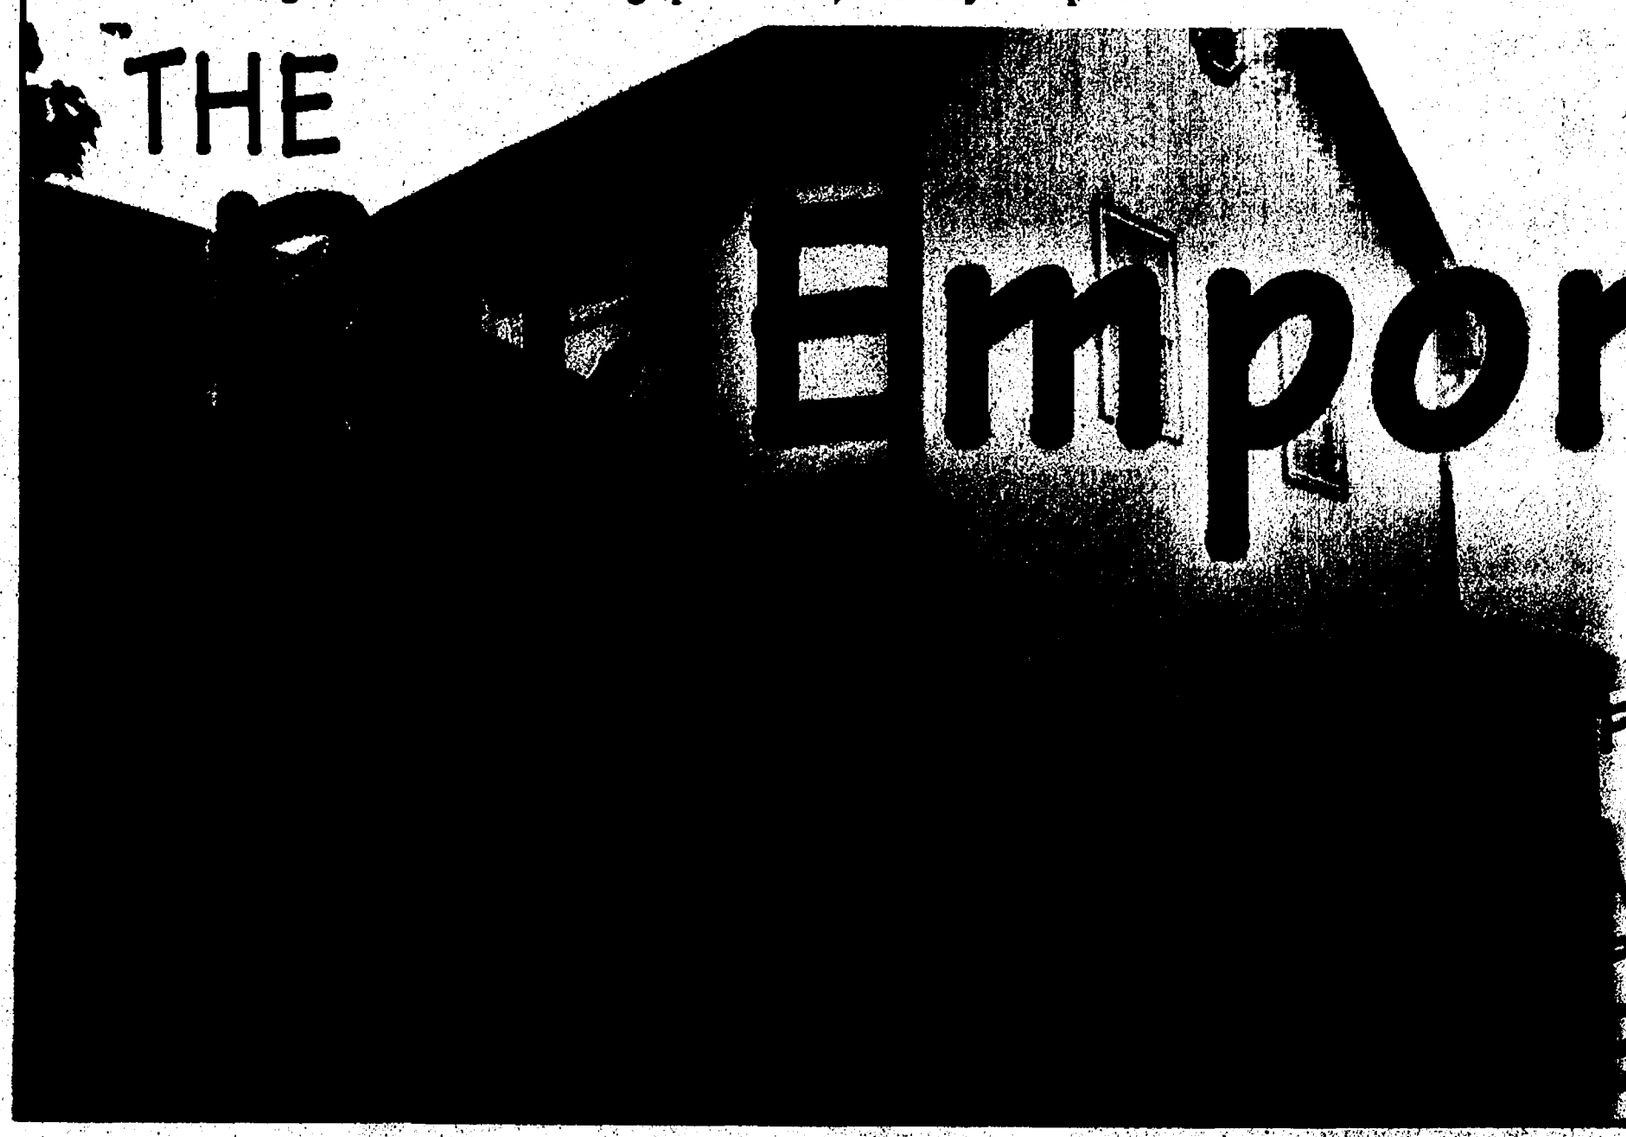

Toys, treats and basics for birds, reptiles and small animals are offered in the shop and games like Horse-opoly, Bird-opoly and Ocean-opoly can keep the family busy, too. Basic necessities like bowls, crates and food are also available alongside pet strollers and fanciful accessories like sports goggles and sunglasses for dogs!

So, whether your pet prefers a "Bling Collar" featuring a rhinestone monogram or a natural hemp collar, begging for bag of chunky "cookies" or longing for a biker's ensemble made just for little dogs, do mosey on into The Pet Emporium. Be sure, however, to bring your dog's ID since the shop will soon be serving Happy Tail Dog Ale (non-alcoholic, promise Beth and John).

Future events at The Pet Emporium may include pet adoption events on the front porch. Call 929-6533. The Pet Emporium is open daily: Mon.-Fri. 9:00 a.m. – 7:00 p.m., Sat. 9:00 a.m. – 5:00 p.m. and Sun. 12 noon – 5:00 p.m.

Medical professionals volunteer at 3-Day

Team includes people from Chelsea hospital and HVA

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

Hundreds of people who have been touched by breast cancer, both survivors and those who have lost family members, are expected to participate in the Michigan Breast Cancer 3-Day in August.

One local group of medical workers plans to go along and offer their services to the walkers.

Dr. Leslie Aldrich, Vickie Kudla Hatch, Sue Glaska, Martha Chiplis and Teddi Creekmore are part of a team from Chelsea Community Hospital that will be volunteering their services during the Michigan Breast Cancer 3-Day later this summer. They are only part of a team of five nurses, one doctor, and one representative of the Chelsea Area Fire Authority and Huron Valley Ambulance, Lance Baird, who will spend four days at the walk.

"It's to support a cause that is so important not only to women also for men," said Donna Baird, who serves on the administrative board of the Michigan Breast Cancer 3-Day and is organizing the local medical care workers.

The Michigan Breast Cancer 3-Day will begin with opening ceremonies at Stony Creek Metropark in Shelby Township at 6:30 a.m. Aug. 11 and conclude at Metro Beach Metropark in Harrison Township 4:30 p.m. Aug. 13.

The exact route has not been finalized, but walkers will essentially spend three days walking to raise money for breast cancer research.

Glaska said as a medical crew they will get up early in the morning each day and throughout the walk they will help walkers with a variety of needs, from caring for blisters to keeping them hydrated. The volunteers can expect to put in 12-hour days of hard work with no pay, but Glaska believes their efforts are worth it.

"These walkers are unbelievable. It's great just to support them," she said.

Each walker has to collect $2,200 to participate in the fund-raiser, but crewmembers are also asked to collect donations to help with expenses. Baird said crewmembers are requested, but not required, to raise $250 to cover expenses. The local medical workers are collecting donations to meet those costs.

City bypasses RO units

The city of Chelsea's reverse-osmosis water treatment system is being bypassed because of high water demand.

The bypassing of the reverse-osmosis units is necessary to maintain sufficient storage and water pressure in the water distribution system, according to a press release issued Monday by the city.

The reverse-osmosis treatment system is used to soften water delivered to the system. The water continues to meet all water quality standards.

It has not been determined when the reverse-osmosis system might be able to be turned on again. Turning it on will depend on a sustained decrease in water demand.

Water customers with water softeners may wish to bring their units online to soften the water to their liking.

The city is reminding water customers that odd-even watering restrictions are in place and that landscape watering is prohibited between 5 a.m. and 10 a.m. daily. Generally, lawns only need 1 1/4 inches to 1 1/2 inches of water each week.

Copies of the city's water conservation ordinance are available at the city offices and on the city's Web site at www.city-chelsea.org. Updates on the water system status also will be posted on the city's Web site.

Former resident receives honor

James Hanson, a 1964 CHS graduate, named Teacher of the Year

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

The rewards of teaching are not always immediate, says a former Chelsea resident who has spent the past 38 years as an educator.

It's when students come back years later and tell him how much he impacted their lives — that's when James Hanson knows that he's made a difference.

Last month, Hanson was surprised when the superintendent of Novi Community Schools, accompanied by several school board members and Hanson's family members, interrupted his class at Novi High School to present him with the Novi Community School District's Teacher-of-the-Year award.

The award came as a complete surprise to Hanson, who teaches chemistry and advanced placement chemistry at Novi High School, where he has taught for 23 years.

"I had no idea they were coming," Hanson later said.

The 1964 Chelsea High School graduate attended Central Michigan University, but originally considered a career other than teaching.

"I like science. I was either going to go into some kind of scientific research or into teaching, and I'm glad I chose teaching. Here I am 38 years later and I love it," he said.

Hanson went on to earn a master's degree from Eastern Michigan University. He began his teaching career at Clarenceville School District in Livonia, where he taught for 15 years.

The Novi Educational Foundation, the Suburban Collection's Excellence in Education program and Novi Community Schools select a teacher each year for the award based on a variety of traits. The award recipient typically establishes high expectations in the classroom, has a strong sense of integrity and professional ethics, is willing to learn and try new teaching techniques, has a positive attitude and a strong knowledge of curriculum content, instructional methods and child development.

Hanson was nominated for the award by his colleagues in the high school's science department and said he felt honored to be recognized.

"I tell people that I represent the whole school district," he said.

"Teaching is a tough profession, but a very rewarding one."

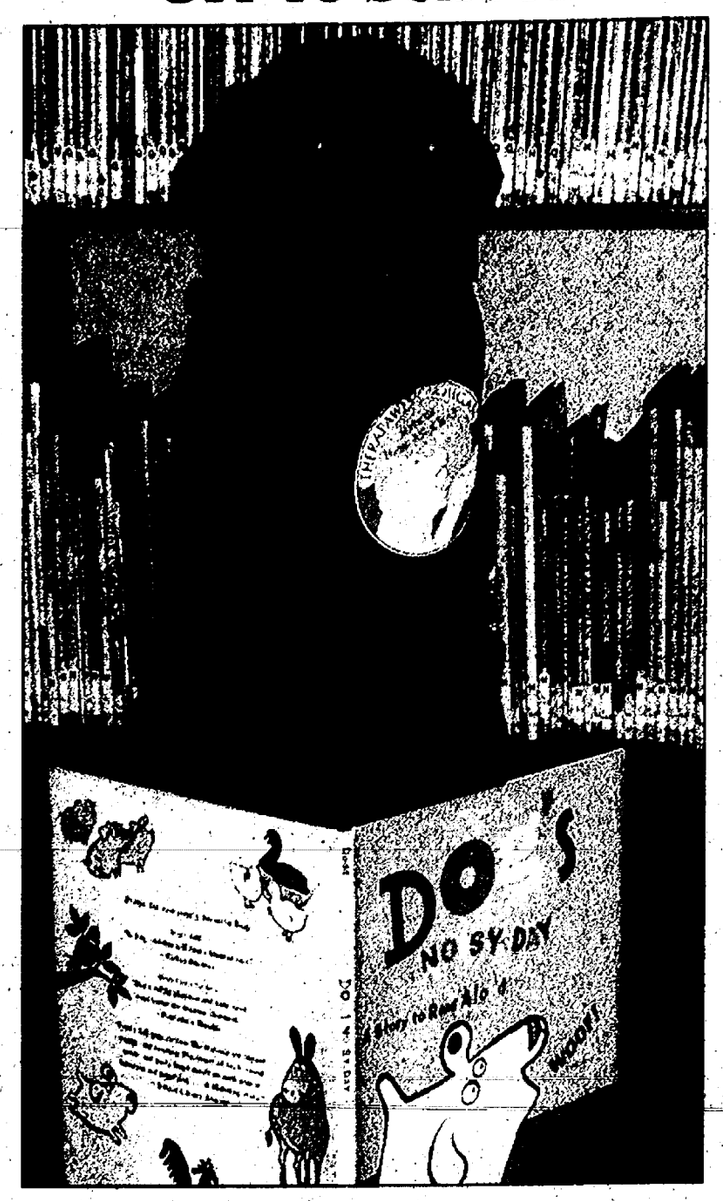

Hanson was formally recognized as the 2006 Teacher of the Year at the May 18 Novi Board of Education meeting at Village Oaks Elementary.

In addition to teaching chemistry, he coaches both boys' and girls' varsity tennis. Hanson has coached boys' tennis for 11 years and girls' tennis for 23 years, and has been named Michigan Coach of the Year twice.

He is the son of Abbie Hanson of Chelsea, and the late Wilbur Hanson.

Teen Animanga Club to begin

Chelsea library to host club for teens from 2 to 4 p.m. Friday

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

The Chelsea District Library will host its first Animanga Club from 2 to 4 p.m. Friday, and July 14, 21 and 28 at the library, 500 Washington St., in Chelsea.

"It's kind of a teen craze that's from Japan," said Shawn Personke, the library's community relations and development coordinator.

Animanga refers to a type of graphic novel using anime cels as manga frames. Manga is the Japanese word for comics and print cartoons; outside of Japan, it usually refers specifically to Japanese comics, Personke said.

The teen event, which will be casual and relaxed rather than structured, will be led by Edith Burney, the library's new youth and teen services librarian.

"Anime and Manga are full of variety, from the dark and violent to the cute and fluffy," Burney said. "Teens love it because the books and television shows are in a serialized format, like popular chapter books, with plenty of adventure, romance, plot twists, humor and horror. There is something for everyone.

"Teens love to escape into the various stories, sometimes even dress up as characters.

"In short, they build community around their shared interest in the genre."

Chelsea teen Corinne Carpenter, an eighth-grader at Beach Middle School this fall, says she believes the Animanga trend is growing. Carpenter enjoys the Manga books, which she says are very different from American comics, including the fact they are read from the back to the front of the book.

"It's just kind of different from normal reading," she said. "They're mostly about social problems, but sometimes it's an adventure story. It shows problems with friends, and teens can relate to that."

The books, which are mostly in black and white although some are in color, are quick reads and there are many in the series, Carpenter said. She also has seen and enjoyed some of the anime movies.

The University of Michigan Anime Club Web site offers a primer on anime, www.umich.edu/~animania/anime.html.

For more information, call the library at 475-8732.

ters that are not supported with operating millages are in danger of closing. If that were to happen in Chelsea, she said, it would be the loss of a community asset.

"We provide numerous services which are not duplicated by any other agency," Patterson said, noting the senior center's grocery shopping assistance and friendly visitor programs.

The Chelsea Senior Center has set a fund-raising goal of $30,000 for this year.

To meet its operational expenses, the center has been taking money from a fund the center established to buy a building. That money, Patterson said, is quickly dwindling.

With the city budget up for approval last week, the City Council was compelled to amend the proposed budget to contribute.

"I think it's very important that we keep our senior center and keep these folks in business," Council Trustee Jamie Bollinger said.

Council Trustee Cheri Albertson suggested contributing a lesser amount this year and considering the full $25,000 next year.

The $12,500 contribution will be taken from the city's general fund.

their lives on the line to protect that freedom."

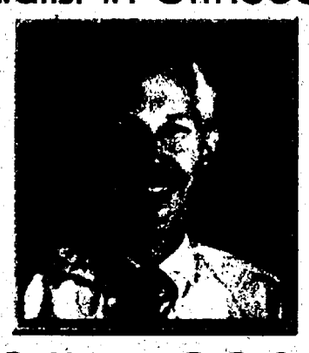

Turner said the flag will be more than 9 feet long, but he won't have an exact measurement until Saturday.

In conjunction with the "10,000 Flags Celebration," the Chelsea Teddy Bear Co. and other local businesses are giving away more than 10,000 gift items decorated with the American flag through July 4.

The free merchandise includes 16,000 lapel pins, 400 lanyards, 1,200 wrist bands, 600 pens, 144 ceramic coffee mugs, 2,000 decals, 700 acrylic key tags and 225 insulated auto mugs. All the items are decorated with the flag.

The community is invited to the unveiling of the world's largest teddy bear flag at the Chelsea Teddy Bear Co., located on Main Street in downtown Chelsea.

Council approves budget

Largest expense public safety at $1.4 million or 38 percent of budget

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

Budget expenditures are up 2.24 percent overall for the city of Chelsea.

The Chelsea City Council approved a $16.1 budget for the 2006-07 fiscal year following a public hearing June 20.

The city's largest funds include the electric fund, at approximately $6.1 million, the general fund at about $3.7 million, and the water and wastewater funds at about $1.7 million and $1.1 million, respectively.

General Fund

Property taxes are the largest source of general fund revenue at 80 percent, generating approximately $3.05 million of the $3.7 million in total general fund revenue. State revenues bring in an additional $381,000, permits and fees total an estimated $231,315, transfers and reimbursements are estimated at $95,000, and interest and other income are budgeted at $32,000. An estimated $10,000 is also anticipated from fines and forfeits.

The largest expense for the general fund is for public safety, at 38 percent or $1,423,860. Insurance and fringe benefits are estimated at $716,500 and another $688,800 is budgeted for public works. The remaining general fund expenditures are for planning and zoning, at 6 percent or $209,500, and legislative/administrative, at 18 percent or $662,412.

Before approving the budget, the council decided to include a $12,500 expenditure from the general fund to help support operations at the Chelsea Senior Center.

Other Funds

The major streets fund is budgeted at $515,000, with $383,000 budgeted for heavy rehabilitation of Freer and Dewey roads. Approximately $94,000 is budgeted for heavy maintenance of East Middle, Washington and West Middle streets. Preventative maintenance of Sibley Road and West North Street is budgeted at $38,000.

The streets fund is budgeted at $339,000 and includes heavy rehabilitation of Owen Court, McKinley and Howard streets, maintenance of Park Street and East Summit, and preventative maintenance at Belser Estates.

Major Capital Expenditures

An estimated $186,000 is budgeted for sanitary sewer pipe along Dewey Street, M-52 and McKinley Street. Treatment plant screws are budgeted at $65,000 and water system security improvements at $30,000.

The city is anticipating a $125,000 expense to update Phase 2 of the 911 system, and $140,000 for parking lot improvements.

Also budgeted is the purchases of a truck for the water department, repair of a dump truck and the lease or purchase of a one-ton dump truck with salter.

Watershed council gets grant

The Huron River Watershed Council has been awarded a $141,000 grant from the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality to coordinate a watershed-wide stream buffer education and policy initiative.

The first goal of the two-year program will be to work with local communities in the Huron River Watershed to adopt and implement buffer ordinances that establish criteria for the preservation and protection of lands adjacent to the Huron River and its tributaries.

The second goal will be to educate riparian and lakeshore landowners on the importance of vegetated buffers in reducing pollution to local waterways and engage them in stewardship activities, including development of multiple demonstration sites that illustrate good riparian buffer management practices.

Riparian buffers consist of plants, shrubs or trees that provide a natural and gradual transition from terrestrial to aquatic environments. These areas are critical for wildlife habitat, storing water during periods of high water flow, and protecting lakes and rivers from physical and chemical pollutants, according to a press statement from the Huron River Watershed Council.

"The Huron is the cleanest urban river in Michigan," said Chris Riggs, a watershed planner with the Huron River Watershed Council. "However, as natural areas in the watershed are increasingly developed, we have to work harder to maintain that title."

Protecting remaining priority natural areas such as land adjacent to rivers, streams and lakes is essential, Riggs said.

"Much of the watershed's streams and river corridors have been stripped of natural vegetation. Natural shorelines and stream banks are being replaced with turfgrass, seawalls, concrete, boulders or other artificial barriers that sever the ecological connection between land and water, cause bank erosion, and allow pollutants to flow directly into the river.

"Establishing buffers that protect the remaining riparian corridors, especially floodplains, wetlands and steep slopes, is critical to protecting the aquatic system against increasing development pressures throughout the watershed and maintaining the Huron River's physical, biological and chemical integrity," Riggs said.

With the help of a technical review committee, the Huron River Watershed Council will first develop a model riparian buffer ordinance, which will be used in partnering with local governments that express an interest in pursuing passage of a buffer ordinance.

The council is seeking landowners who have recently installed riparian buffers, or may be interested in enhancing or installing a model riparian buffer demonstration site. For more info, call 769-512, ext. 13.

Former resident receives honor

James Hanson, a 1964 CHS graduate, named Teacher of the Year

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

The rewards of teaching are not always immediate, says a former Chelsea resident who has spent the past 38 years as an educator.

It's when students come back years later and tell him how much he impacted their lives — that's when James Hanson knows that he's made a difference.

Last month, Hanson was surprised when the superintendent of Novi Community Schools, accompanied by several school board members and Hanson's family members, interrupted his class at Novi High School to present him with the Novi Community School District's Teacher-of-the-Year award.

The award came as a complete surprise to Hanson, who teaches chemistry and advanced placement chemistry at Novi High School, where he has taught for 23 years.

"I had no idea they were coming," Hanson later said.

The 1964 Chelsea High School graduate attended Central Michigan University, but originally considered a career other than teaching.

"I like science. I was either going to go into some kind of scientific research or into teaching, and I'm glad I chose teaching. Here I am 38 years later and I love it," he said.

Hanson went on to earn a master's degree from Eastern Michigan University. He began his teaching career at Clarenceville School District in Livonia, where he taught for 15 years.

The Novi Educational Foundation, the Suburban Collection's Excellence in Education program and Novi Community Schools select a teacher each year for the award based on a variety of traits. The award recipient typically establishes high expectations in the classroom, has a strong sense of integrity and professional ethics, is willing to learn and try new teaching techniques, has a positive attitude and a strong knowledge of curriculum content, instructional methods and child development.

Hanson was nominated for the award by his colleagues in the high school's science department and said he felt honored to be recognized.

"I tell people that I represent the whole school district," he said.

"Teaching is a tough profession, but a very rewarding one."

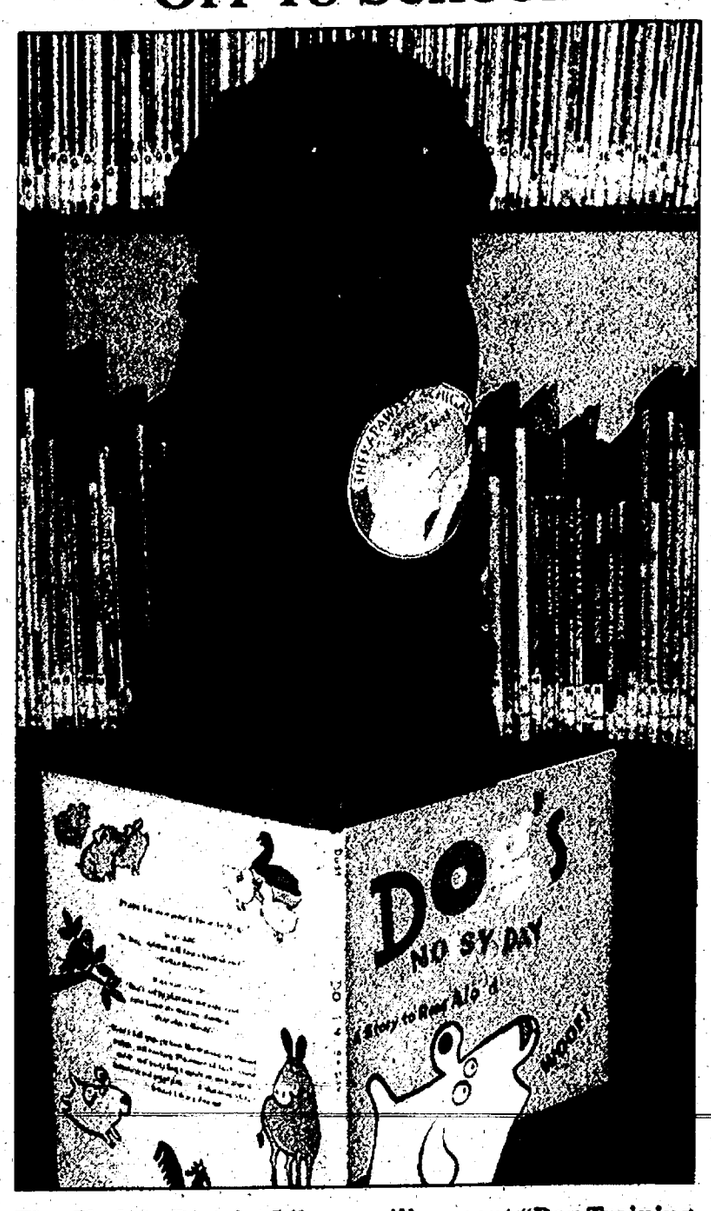

Hanson was formally recognized as the 2006 Teacher of the Year at the May 18 Novi Board of Education meeting at Village Oaks Elementary.

In addition to teaching chemistry, he coaches both boys' and girls' varsity tennis. Hanson has coached boys' tennis for 11 years and girls' tennis for 23 years, and has been named Michigan Coach of the Year twice.

He is the son of Abbie Hanson of Chelsea, and the late Wilbur Hanson.

Teen Animanga Club to begin

Chelsea library to host club for teens from 2 to 4 p.m. Friday

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

The Chelsea District Library will host its first Animanga Club from 2 to 4 p.m. Friday, and July 14, 21 and 28 at the library, 500 Washington St., in Chelsea.

"It's kind of a teen craze that's from Japan," said Shawn Personke, the library's community relations and development coordinator.

Animanga refers to a type of graphic novel using anime cels as manga frames. Manga is the Japanese word for comics and print cartoons; outside of Japan, it usually refers specifically to Japanese comics, Personke said.

The teen event, which will be casual and relaxed rather than structured, will be led by Edith Burney, the library's new youth and teen services librarian.

"Anime and Manga are full of variety, from the dark and violent to the cute and fluffy," Burney said. "Teens love it because the books and television shows are in a serialized format, like popular chapter books, with plenty of adventure, romance, plot twists, humor and horror. There is something for everyone.

"Teens love to escape into the various stories, sometimes even dress up as characters.

"In short, they build community around their shared interest in the genre."

Chelsea teen Corinne Carpenter, an eighth-grader at Beach Middle School this fall, says she believes the Animanga trend is growing. Carpenter enjoys the Manga books, which she says are very different from American comics, including the fact they are read from the back to the front of the book.

"It's just kind of different from normal reading," she said. "They're mostly about social problems, but sometimes it's an adventure story. It shows problems with friends, and teens can relate to that."

The books, which are mostly in black and white although some are in color, are quick reads and there are many in the series, Carpenter said. She also has seen and enjoyed some of the anime movies.

The University of Michigan Anime Club Web site offers a primer on anime, www.umich.edu/~animania/anime.html.

For more information, call the library at 475-8732.

ters that are not supported with operating millages are in danger of closing. If that were to happen in Chelsea, she said, it would be the loss of a community asset.

"We provide numerous services which are not duplicated by any other agency," Patterson said, noting the senior center's grocery shopping assistance and friendly visitor programs.

The Chelsea Senior Center has set a fund-raising goal of $30,000 for this year.

To meet its operational expenses, the center has been taking money from a fund the center established to buy a building. That money, Patterson said, is quickly dwindling.

With the city budget up for approval last week, the City Council was compelled to amend the proposed budget to contribute.

"I think it's very important that we keep our senior center and keep these folks in business," Council Trustee Jamie Bollinger said.

Council Trustee Cheri Albertson suggested contributing a lesser amount this year and considering the full $25,000 next year.

The $12,500 contribution will be taken from the city's general fund.

Turner said the flag will be more than 9 feet long, but he won't have an exact measurement until Saturday.

In conjunction with the "10,000 Flags Celebration," the Chelsea Teddy Bear Co. and other local businesses are giving away more than 10,000 gift items decorated with the American flag through July 4.

The free merchandise includes 16,000 lapel pins, 400 lanyards, 1,200 wrist bands, 600 pens, 144 ceramic coffee mugs, 2,000 decals, 700 acrylic key tags and 225 insulated auto mugs. All the items are decorated with the flag.

The community is invited to the unveiling of the world's largest teddy bear flag at the Chelsea Teddy Bear Co., located on Main Street in downtown Chelsea.

Council approves budget

Largest expense public safety at $1.4 million or 38 percent of budget

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

Budget expenditures are up 2.24 percent overall for the city of Chelsea.

The Chelsea City Council approved a $16.1 budget for the 2006-07 fiscal year following a public hearing June 20.

The city's largest funds include the electric fund, at approximately $6.1 million, the general fund at about $3.7 million, and the water and wastewater funds at about $1.7 million and $1.1 million, respectively.

General Fund

Property taxes are the largest source of general fund revenue at 80 percent, generating approximately $3.05 million of the $3.7 million in total general fund revenue. State revenues bring in an additional $381,000, permits and fees total an estimated $231,315, transfers and reimbursements are estimated at $95,000, and interest and other income are budgeted at $32,000. An estimated $10,000 is also anticipated from fines and forfeits.

The largest expense for the general fund is for public safety, at 38 percent or $1,423,860. Insurance and fringe benefits are estimated at $716,500 and another $688,800 is budgeted for public works. The remaining general fund expenditures are for planning and zoning, at 6 percent or $209,500, and legislative/administrative, at 18 percent or $662,412.

Before approving the budget, the council decided to include a $12,500 expenditure from the general fund to help support operations at the Chelsea Senior Center.

Other Funds

The major streets fund is budgeted at $515,000, with $383,000 budgeted for heavy rehabilitation of Freer and Dewey roads. Approximately $94,000 is budgeted for heavy maintenance of East Middle, Washington and West Middle streets. Preventative maintenance of Sibley Road and West North Street is budgeted at $38,000.

The streets fund is budgeted at $339,000 and includes heavy rehabilitation of Owen Court, McKinley and Howard streets, maintenance of Park Street and East Summit, and preventative maintenance at Belser Estates.

Major Capital Expenditures

Major capital expenditures include $60,000 for structural repairs at the police station; $20,000 for bathroom upgrade, carpet and paint at the police station; $5,000 for police body armor replacement; $7,000 for police in-vehicle video camera; and $26,000 for a police car.

An estimated $186,000 is budgeted for sanitary sewer pipe along Dewey Street, M-52 and McKinley Street. Treatment plant screws are budgeted at $65,000 and water system security improvements at $30,000.

The city is anticipating a $125,000 expense to update Phase 2 of the 911 system, and $140,000 for parking lot improvements.

Also budgeted is the purchases of a truck for the water department, repair of a dump truck and the lease or purchase of a one-ton dump truck with salter.

PROJECT

improvements are estimated at $251,000 per year. Based on the city's residential customer base of 2,116 customers, which represent 75 percent of the wastewater passing through the system, the typical residential customer would pay $27.01 per year in user costs.

Annual operating expenses for Segment II of the project, which includes the addition of a tertiary membrane filter at a cost of $4,065,000, are estimated at $82,000 per year. User fees to cover those annual costs are estimated at $9.50 per year for the typical residential customer.

A wastewater improvement project plan was drafted by Tetra Tech Inc. of Ann Arbor in May on behalf of the city. Among the problems cited in the improvement plan is the capacity issue at Veterans Park pump station, which handles approximately two-thirds of the city's wastewater flow.

The report also indicated that the screening at the headworks is too coarse to capture most objects passing through the system and that the sewers tend to exceed their 24-hour, 25-year storm capacity.

Rainwater is one contributor to the high amount of flow going into the sewer system. Rainwater leaks into the system at a number of points throughout the city and impacts the flow at the sewer plant.

The reverse-osmosis units also pump into the sewer system, said Ted Erickson of Tetra Tech. The Veterans Park pump station receives the reverse-osmosis concentrate flow from the Chelsea Water Treatment Plant and is currently running above the design capacity of the station. It pumps an average of 0.7 million gallons per day, with a peak capacity of 1.66 million gallons per day.

"The RO concentrate does have an impact on the wastewater flow," Erickson said in a presentation of the project during the public hearing.

As a result of capacity issues, the MDEQ has placed a limitation on additional connections to the wastewater treatment system.

But even without the impact of the reverse-osmosis units, the City Council told residents last week that the wastewater system is not sufficient to serve the city.

"We don't have a big enough plant, even if we took the RO out of it," Council Trustee Frank Hammer said.

The wastewater treatment plant was upgraded in 1987 to its current configuration and capacity, which is equipped to handle 1.05 million gallons per day on average.

Council Trustee Joe Merkel said that when the existing plant was built, it was only expected to last until 2006, when it was anticipated that a new one would have to be built to accommodate an increased population in the city.

"What we're looking at is adding on to it, not building a new one," Merkel said.

The age and condition of the system is also of concern for Council Trustee Jamie Bollinger.

"This is a 20-year-old plant that handles sewage," Bollinger said, noting that sewage is destructive to the concrete and steel structure of the plant. "Just like a vehicle or anything else, by the time you get it paid off, it's junk."

A number of options for addressing the issues with the wastewater system were highlighted in the improvement plan by Tetra Tech. One option is to take no action at this time, but that is not recommended.

"Obviously, with a plant capacity issue coming forth, no action is not an option," Erickson told the crowd at the hearing.

Other options include optimizing existing operations, constructing a new oxidation ditch, or replacing the existing oxidation ditch with a membrane bioreactor process. Erickson said a membrane bioreactor would be a little cheaper overall, but Tetra Tech recommends a new oxidation ditch.

"We recommend going to the tried and true (system) of the oxidation ditch," he said.

Under the proposed project, the expanded wastewater treatment plant will have an average capacity of 1.85 million gallons per day and will include an additional 0.9 million gallons per day oxidation ditch, two 66-foot-diameter secondary clarifiers, and the installation of raw sewage pumping and fine screen in a new headworks building.

The project also includes expansion of the ultraviolet disinfection system, a tertiary filtration system, expansion of the sludge handling facilities, a new generator at the wastewater treatment plant, and improvements to the Veterans Park pump station involving variable speed drives and a new discharge force main.

A new generator at the McKinley pump station would provide backup power for both the McKinley and Veterans Park pump stations.

Other components of the project include inflow and infiltration removal as indicated by a Sanitary Sewer Evaluation Survey, implementation of inflow and infiltration removal projects as recommended by the survey, and other associated improvements.

The city of Chelsea intends to construct the proposed project in two segments, since the requirements for the tertiary filtration system cannot be determined until after MDEQ has established the final maximum daily load limit for phosphorous, which is found in the reverse osmosis concentrate.

To seek low interest loan financing for wastewater system improvements through the Michigan Revolving Loan Program, the city must submit the project plan to the MDEQ by July 1.

Duck race to benefit local service club

The Rotary club of Chelsea is holding a fundraiser duck race at Letts Creek in Veteran's Park July 29.

The event, which will raise money to complete the bridge project at Veterans Park, starts at 3:30 p.m.

Tickets will be available starting this week from any member of the Rotary club, as well as Charles Reinhart Realtors, Chelsea Animal Hospital, Chelsea Chamber of Commerce, Chelsea Chiropractic Center, Chelsea Pharmacy, Chelsea State Bank, Cransebill Books, Divine Java, Edward Surovell Realtors, Farmer Supply, The Garden Mill, Gigi's Flowers, Moore Pediatric and Associates, Real Estate One and The Village Shop.

The Rotary club also will have a booth at Sounds and Sights on Thursday Nights, where ducks will be available for purchase.

Each duck is $10. A "Quack Pack," which includes five ducks and a T-shirt, will be available for $50.

First place in the duck race wins $500. Second-place prize is $300 and third-place prize is $200.

If the Rotary club sells fewer than 500 ducks, the cash prizes will be prorated based on the number of ducks sold.

Additional prizes include a round of golf for four at the Polo Fields golf course in Scio Township, and other prizes.

An hour before the actual duck race, event organizers will allow contestants who would like to decorate their duck with markers to come down to Veterans Park and do so before the race begins.

A year and a half ago, the Rotary club started fundraising to rebuild a footbridge in Veterans Park. At this time, the group is still moving forward with the project, but it has taken longer than expected to get the permits from the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality, which has requested more information from the city of Chelsea regarding the creek bed and the location of the bridge.

Rotary club members are hoping to get final approval on the project, which could be completed this fall.

ANN ARBOR

Flapper Era on exhibit

The Museum on Main Street will present a new exhibition, "The Flapper Era and Modern Times: 1920s Washtenaw County," through Sept. 10.

Visitors will learn about the Jazz Age, a time of fads like flagpole sitting and bobbed hair, a time when Bessie Smith, Bing Crosby and Paul Whiteman filled the radio airwaves, and an era when football, pro and collegiate, went big-time and the University of Michigan Stadium opened.

Locally, the 1920s meant big changes in the county's population. Washtenaw County grew from nearly 50,000 residents in 1920 to more than 65,000 by decade's end. Landmarks, including the Clements Library, Angell Hall, the Michigan League and the Michigan Theatre, were built during the decade. Restaurants in Ann Arbor doubled between 1920 and 1925.

The exhibition, sponsored by the Washtenaw County Historical Society, looks at the imprint that automobiles, Prohibition, Flapperdom, travel, entertainment, fashion and sports made on American life in the 1920s, the first modern decade.

Exhibit highlights include Flapper attire from local collections, a '20s raccoon coat and beardskin gloves, 1920s swimwear, memorabilia from the all-male Michigan Union Opera era and many photographs depicting life in 1920s Washtenaw County.

The exhibit includes items on loan from Washtenaw County residents, as well as the Dexter Area Museum and the Ypsilanti Historical Museum and Archives.

An open house, with comments by museum director Alice Cerniglia and exhibit curator Lisa Klionsky, will be held July 16.

The museum is located at 500 N. Main St. in Ann Arbor, and is open from noon to 4 p.m. Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays, and by appointment.

ANN ARBOR

Flapper Era on exhibit

The Museum on Main Street will present a new exhibition, "The Flapper Era and Modern Times: 1920s Washtenaw County," through Sept. 10.

Visitors will learn about the Jazz Age, a time of fads like flagpole sitting and bobbed hair, a time when Bessie Smith, Bing Crosby and Paul Whiteman filled the radio airwaves; and an era when football, pro and collegiate, went big-time and the University of Michigan Stadium opened.

Locally, the 1920s meant big changes in the county's population. Washtenaw County grew from nearly 50,000 residents in 1920 to more than 65,000 by decade's end. Landmarks, including the Clements Library, Angell Hall, the Michigan League and the Michigan Theatre, were built during the decade. Restaurants in Ann Arbor doubled between 1920 and 1925.

The exhibition, sponsored by the Washtenaw County Historical Society, looks at the imprint that automobiles, Prohibition, Flapperdom, travel, entertainment, fashion and sports made on American life in the 1920s, the first modern decade.

Exhibit highlights include Flapper attire from local collections, a '20s raccoon coat and beardskin gloves, 1920s swimwear, memorabilia from the all-male Michigan Union Opera era and many photographs depicting life in 1920s Washtenaw County.

The exhibit includes items on loan from Washtenaw County residents, as well as the Dexter Area Museum and the Ypsilanti Historical Museum and Archives.

An open house, with comments by museum director Alice Cerniglia and exhibit curator Lisa Klionsky, will be held July 16.

The museum is located at 500 N. Main St. in Ann Arbor, and is open from noon to 4 p.m. Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays, and by appointment.

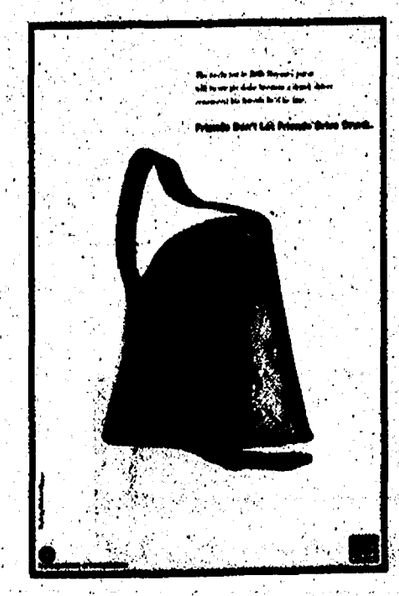

For more information or to set up an appointment for groups, call 662-9092, or e-mail wchs-500@ameritech.net.

Research could save jobs, lives

Michigan can, and should, get involved in adult stem cell research without becoming mired in the debate over the use of embryonic stem cells.

House Republicans said they will introduce a plan to devote $5 million from the state's 21st Century Jobs Fund to stimulate research. They want to create a stem cell bank network for donated umbilical cord and adult stem cells.

Adult and umbilical stem cells differ from embryonic stem cells in that an embryo is not destroyed to harvest the material for research. Adult stem cells can be donated in a number of ways, and can be taken from the body in one area and be re-implanted in another. Umbilical cells are harvested from umbilical cords after birth.

Scientists have touted embryonic stem cell research as a possibility for cures from Parkinson's to heart disease. But the use of such cells is opposed by groups such as Right to Life of Michigan and the Michigan Catholic Conference. Adult and umbilical stem cell research also appears to hold medical promise, without drawing the enmity of such groups.

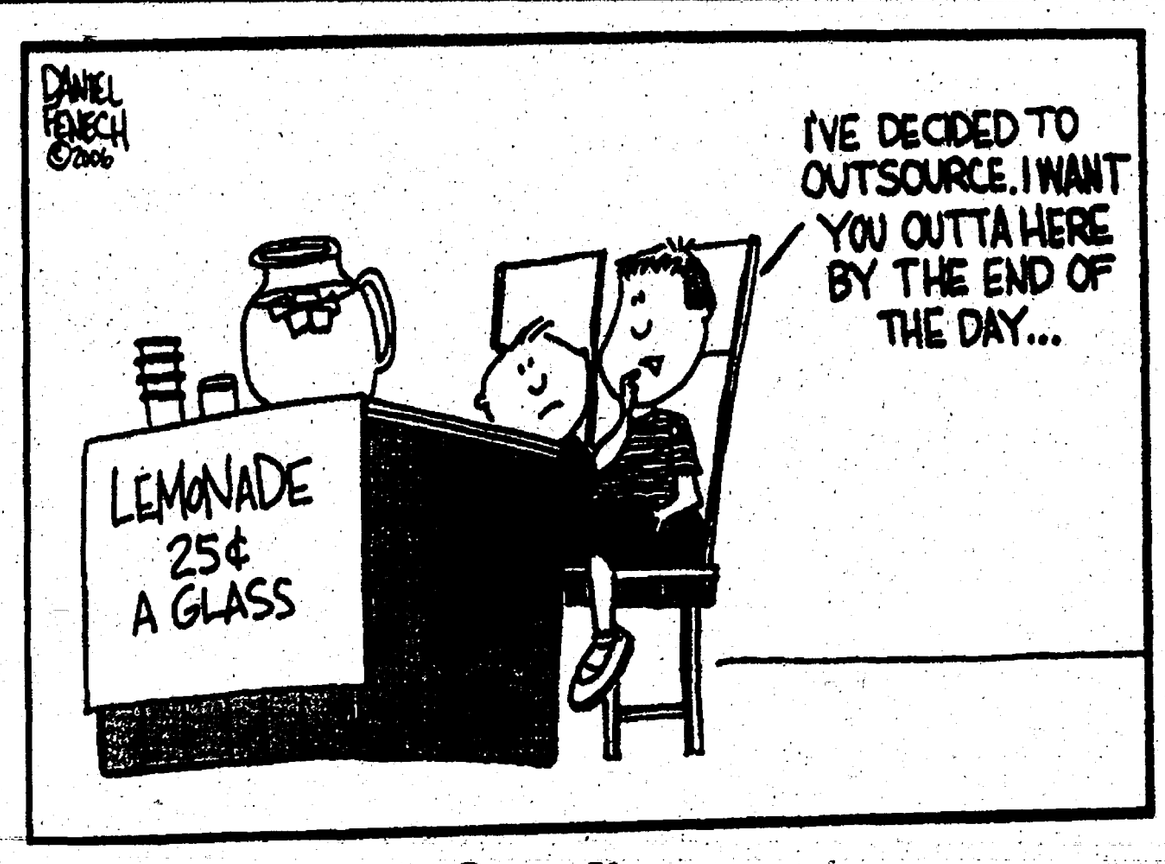

According to the Genetic Science Learning Center of the University of Utah, the versatility of umbilical cord stem cells make them a "potent resource" for transplant therapies. These cells can be used in the treatment of leukemia and other blood disorders. Doctors and researchers also are experimenting with transplanted adult stem cells in the area of repair of paralyzing spinal cord injuries.

The Republican plan would allow Michigan to roll out the welcome mat further for companies interested in conducting testing without rocking the ethical boat over the use of embryonic stem cells.

Some may call that only half a loaf, but in terms of potential jobs Michigan can use all the half loafs it can develop.

Investing in this field of science is good for the state, and sidesteps the ethical concerns about the destruction of embryos.

The Republican plan should move forward. Michigan might still be restricted on embryonic stem cell research, but that doesn't mean we should shut the door to all stem cell research, especially if that investment brings facilities, jobs and potential medical breakthroughs to the state.

ROY SCHMIDT

I'm back.

I just spent 23 days in Alaska on the slopes of Denali. Some days it was fun. Some days I felt that whole body-and-mind ecstasy that only comes when you are high on a glacier, trudging up a steep slope, sweating, aching, huffing and puffing, getting sunburned, but knowing that if you can just keep putting one foot in front of the other, you are going to stand on the summit.

Some days it was like a nightmare. It was damp and cold, and I was threatened by wind, unable to sleep, tired of freeze-dried meals, and wondering whether I was ever going to get home to my family.

I learned some great lessons about patience, tenacity, discretion and valor, and about getting along with a diverse group of people, several of whom were packed into a tent with me and my stinky socks.

During the month I was away, I missed all of the Pistons' playoff games (will someone please tell me what the heck happened?). I missed the Tigers compiling the best record in baseball (no complaints; they're still winning). I missed the lilac bloom. I missed my son's birthday. I even missed both Free Comic Book Day and Free Fishing Day.

Upon my return, I had a few (hundred) e-mails to read. Three stood out. First was a nice letter from my neighbor, in response to my column about meditation. She grew up in Fairfield, Iowa, and was able to give me her perspective on the Maharishi University of Management and its effects on Fairfield. The changes it brought were not all good. I was happy to read Mary's e-mail and talk it over with her. We came to a neat understanding, and I learned from her.

Second was an e-mail from Elsie, who was nice enough to ask, "Where have you been? I keep looking for your comments in Other Voices, and they have disappeared." That was sweet.

Finally, there was a letter from someone who wanted to cancel his subscription because of my "liberal, un-American, traitorous ramblings." I appreciated that letter, as well.

I didn't agree with it, but that's the whole point. I have opinions, and it takes several hours to organize them and put them together into something readable. I don't get paid. I do it because I can. The opinions page is there for me, and you, to use. It's part of the free speech we all enjoy.

The Other Voices forum is available to everyone. You can write, too! Focus on something about which you are passionate. Argue with me. Better yet, complain about Tim Skubick's insidious anti-Democrat editorials. That's why I originally started.

Or write a letter to the editor. It's an incredibly quick, simple way to tear me apart. That's what free speech is all about — everyone getting a chance to talk and everyone being willing to listen. If you don't like what you hear, don't close your ears. Listen. Digest it and come up with an opposing argument. That's not un-American, and neither is criticizing the government, the politicians, the invasion of Iraq, Guantanamo Bay, the city council, the school board, the newspaper, or the cable company.

If we close our minds and our mouths, we'll never learn how similar we all are. In fact, we all have the same goals: we love America, we want what's best for us, we want peace and security, and we get along well with most everyone we meet.

At 9,000 feet on Denali, I sat with Robert Taylor, a Texan who runs a landscaping business. He hires immigrant workers the right way — by traveling into Mexico, interviewing, and getting the proper work visas for his workers. We both agreed that immigrants already in the United States need a chance to earn their citizenship. We both agreed that the borders need to be controlled.

Robert has adopted two kids from Russia. He gives his all to them. He is also part of a volunteer group that profiles kids for adoption, and he is now visiting a 70-girl orphanage in Columbia for a week.

Robert and I talked politics at 11,000 feet, at 14,000 feet and at 17,000 feet. In almost all cases, we saw eye to eye on 90 percent of what we discussed. And yet Robert calls himself a staunch conservative.

Interestingly, I can say the same about my dad, and about three out of four of my closest neighbors. Yet we all see eye to eye on most of the current issues. We are all friends. We are kind to each other. We talk, often, about our opinions. And we listen to each other.

Same sex marriage could have serious implications

In your June 15 issue, Jeremy Heiken began his letter, "I am a homosexual male," and then proceeded to castigate Republicans in Congress for their vast incompetence. Well, I am a heterosexual female, and I heartily agree with the bulk of his letter.

This Republican Congress, with its outrageous spending programs, is a bitter disappointment to the fiscal conservatives who elected them.

Where I choose to take issue with Mr. Heiken is his defense of same sex marriage. He speaks of this arrangement as "a committed relationship." What many people may not realize is that to change the definition of "marriage" necessarily changes the meaning of "commitment."

A 2003 study of gay men in the Netherlands indicated that the average gay man in a "committed relationship" has eight extra-marital partners a year. Gay activist M. Signorile writes, "Monogamy simply doesn't necessarily mean sexual exclusivity." Confirming this, the first same sex couple to receive a marriage license in Provincetown, Mass., told the press that they had an "open marriage."

Mr. Heiken is likely correct when he says "we are not under immediate threat from activities by any other state," but watching implementation of this law in Massachusetts is by itself a call to caution. Is he aware that:

Parents of second-graders in Massachusetts are unable to monitor the teaching of homosexuality to their children in the public schools. To do so would be discrimination.

Catholic Social Services of Boston, which for generations has helped place needy children in loving homes, has been banned from offering adoption services. The reason? For conscience sake they cannot place children in homosexual settings. Goodbye religious liberty.

Is this a sign of things to come? Could the government that refused to license Catholic Social Services do the same to any person or organization with like personal convictions? Will religious institutions increasingly be banned from the public square?

Governor Engler and the Republican legislators and now our dear President for all the disappointment in our economy. Let us stand up and take the responsibility as strong leaders and be so concerned we cannot waver from doing what is right for the future generations and fight with all our might to save Michigan's economy.

Council trustees treated public rudely at hearing

After a highly attended Chelsea City Council meeting June 20, it was with great clarity that I remembered the reasons that I quit going to council meetings years ago.

Here were residents who had questions regarding the unfolding events currently with the wastewater treatment plant and the $15.4 million that directly affected them. If you were a new resident, you would immediately see the animosity directly within the council because of the rude and snide remarks directed to each other.

Even a council trustee's vote was commented on derisively. This also spilled onto the residents who obviously were not as well informed as the council (because we were told so, and we were also offered to have a newspaper read to us since we didn't fully understand the content.)

To witness the blatant rudeness via put-downs was a disappointment. Of course, there were members who didn't participate in this unprofessional behavior and their names were noted for re-election purposes.

Who knew that such a short evening could be filled with so many revelations? Needless to say, the evening was informational and eye opening.

So now I can look forward to attending more meetings to see exactly how my elected officials work together and represent our city and its citizens. I also invite others to attend, so that they, too, will have a voice about how their tax money is being spent and they can be informed of any plans to have those tax monies increased.

While returning to my car after the council meeting, I found a coward's note on my windshield admonishing, "Aren't you ashamed of parking in a handicapped parking spot?"

Well, actually, no, I'm not. I am legally allowed by the state through my physician's recommendation to park in those designated areas. Maybe the person who wrote that nasty judgmental note couldn't see my vascular system working overtime as I walked to the City Council meeting.

I know I am not the first recipient of these kinds of notes, and I feel really bad that people feel the need to get into others' personal health information so they can feel better. Obviously, someone saw me leave my car and I didn't fit his or her notion of being handicapped. I did have the proper blue parking permit on the mirror, but I forgot to wear the blue explanation that is required on the back of my blouse.

To finish the evening, my husband and I were treated to one of Michigan's most spectacular sunsets for our drive home, which soothed all the ruffled feathers. It reminded us that life is good in Chelsea. We hope that everyone enjoyed that sunset, too.

Where's the outrage about the war deaths?

Two American soldiers were tortured and butchered to death in Iraq last week. Where's the outrage?

I've seen letters of outrage to the editor about the torture of prisoners at Abu Gahraib and Guantanamo Bay. I've seen newspapers such as The New York Times allowing a suspected terrorist to write a column in the newspaper stating how he was tortured at Guantanamo Bay. The Times failed to let the readers know that this man's whole family, including his mother, were charged and convicted of terrorist activities, yet another reason why the Times has lost credibility and subscriptions.

Journalists, the BBC, Air America and the main stream media are outraged at the possibility of torture and want Guantanamo Bay closed. Their biased reporting and slanted war coverage of Iraq, always portraying the coalition as villains, helps our enemies.

We have U.S. Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., convicting our Marines in Haditha before all the facts had been presented. The Egyptian newspaper Al-Aram ran an ad featuring Armchair Generals, the Rev. Ted Haggard and Jim Wallace signing an advertisement urging the United States to stop torturing people. Where is the outrage for our two soldiers who were horribly mutilated?

I haven't heard a mention about the Geneva Convention, which is constantly batted about when it comes to charges against our soldiers. I do not condone torture, but we should try to put some of their actions in the proper perspective.

How many of us have been overseas in a situation where we have to make split-second decisions of when to shoot and when not to shoot? How many of us have seen soldiers killed and their bodies dragged behind a vehicle? How many of us have seen beheadings or suicide bombers blow up innocent men, women and children?

How do you think you would react in these situations?

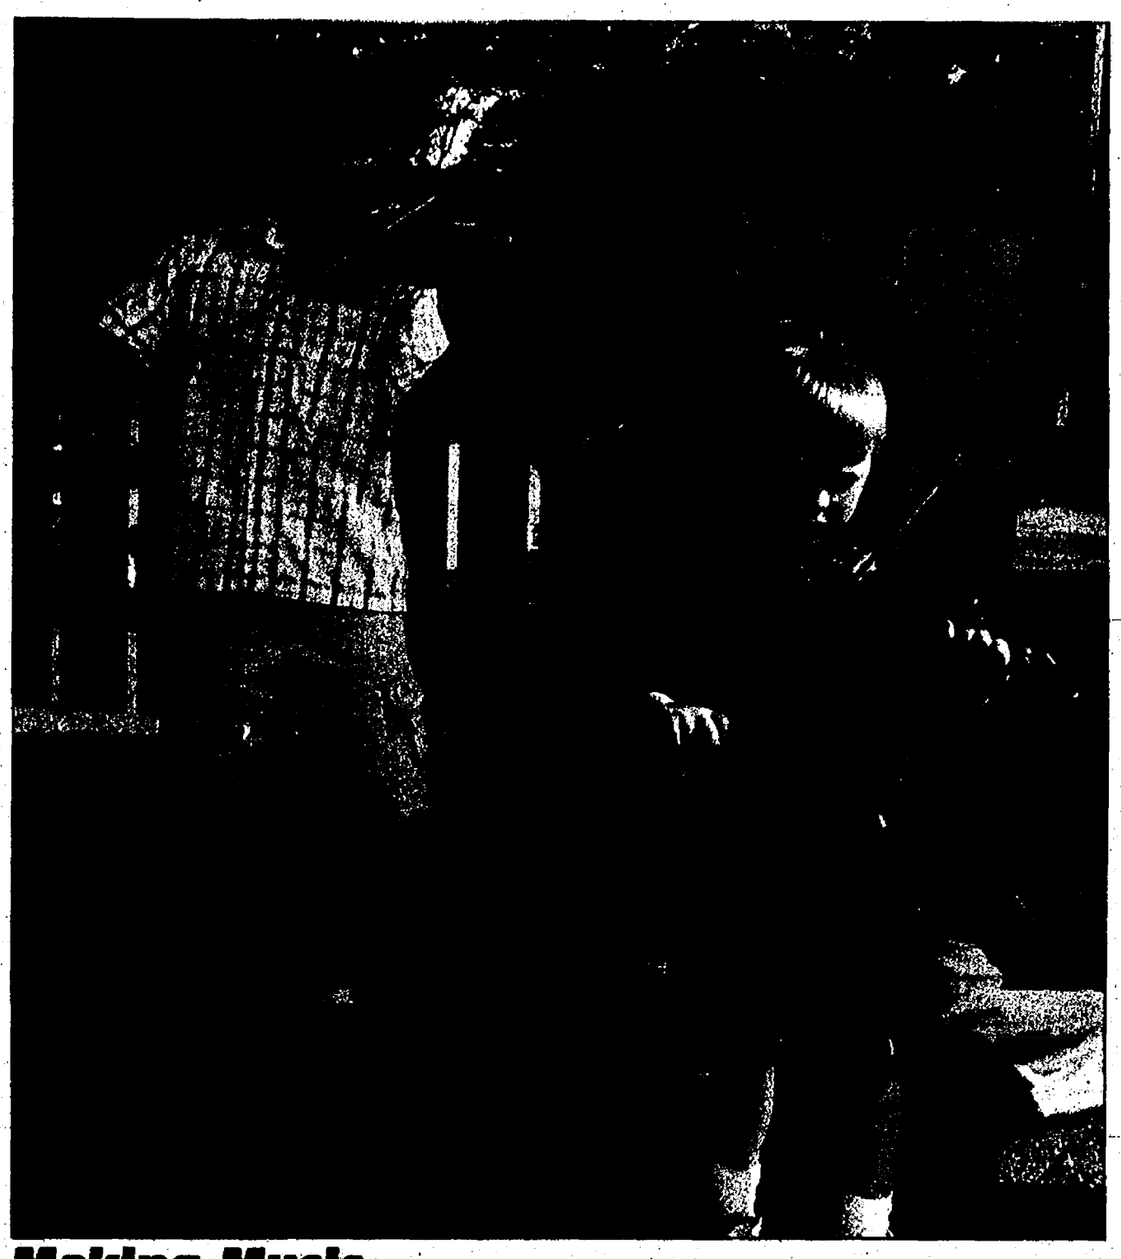

It's easy for many to sit and judge our young men and women in the military, but they should be given every benefit of the doubt having to fight a war on this type of battlefield. Take a good look, we are fighting against an enemy that doesn't care how many innocent people they kill.

We have to be more aggressive and we need to understand that against this enemy the use of harsh measures is needed.

For those who are going to respond, "We shouldn't have been there in the first place and none of this would be happening," news flash: The World Trade Center bombing Feb. 26, 1993, killed six and injured more than a thousand. The bombing of the USS Cole Oct. 12, 2000, killed 17 sailors and wounded 39 others, and the second attack on the World Trade Center, and the attack on the Pentagon Sept. 11, 2001, killed more than 3,000 people and injured more than a thousand, not including side effects from clearing the debris.

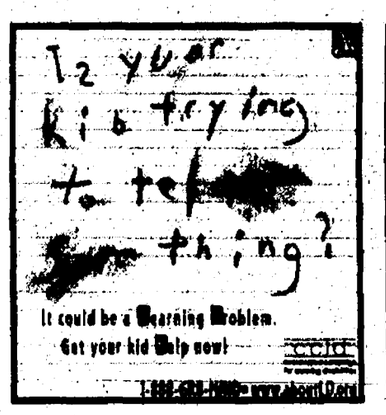

It already happened.

Making Music

Brothers Ross Argir, 13, Bret, 11, and Lee, 7, have only been in Chelsea for a little more than a year, but they have already won the hearts of Chelsea residents. The three boys are members of the Chelsea Hometown Musicians, and can be heard playing their violins on Saturday mornings at the Chelsea Farmers' Market on Park Street. With their mother's encouragement, each boy started playing the violin at the age of 3.

Make sure those fireworks aren't illegal

There are stiff fines for transporting illegal fireworks

By Brian Gougherty
Heritage Newspapers

Sometimes it's all too tough to ignore that chain of billboards along Interstate 94 directing drivers just over the state line for great "buy-one-get-10-free" deals on fireworks.

But before you roll off and spend a week's paycheck on Double Mammoth Parachutes, Jumbo Ninja Artillery Shells and Extra Large Twitter Glitter Texas Happy Rockets, keep in mind that most of those fireworks aren't available in Michigan for a reason: they're illegal.

Tony Sanfilippo, deputy director of the State Fire Marshall's Office, says Michigan law is clear with the fireworks it prohibits.

"Basically, anything that makes a report — a boom that is — sends flaming balls into the air, spins or moves across the ground is illegal," Sanfilippo said.

And when he says illegal, that doesn't only mean you can't set these bad boys off. Sanfilippo says the penalty for transporting fireworks is actually more severe than the penalty for shooting them.

The fine for transporting illegal fireworks ranges up to $500, plus up to 90 days in jail. If you're only caught setting them off the maximum fine is $100, with jail time still a possibility.

If you absolutely can't help but take a jaunt over the border for a small explosive shopping spree, there are permits available to have and use the big guns in Michigan. Separate transport and display permits are available from local government, but should be obtained before you start shopping.

Most of the fireworks that may be purchased in the state don't require permits to have or set off. They include:

- Flat paper caps
- Toy trick noisemakers (party poppers, etc.)
- Sparklers
- Filter sparklers (such as paper wrapped)
- Fountains
- Toy snakes
- Toy smoke devices
- Signal flares and blank cartridges

If you have any of the following fireworks (not an all-inclusive list), it's best to seek a permit if you want to use them in Michigan:

- Cherry bombs
- Re-loadable mortars
- Firecrackers
- M-80s to M-1000s (a "quarter stick")
- Roman candles
- Bottle rockets
- Torches
- Wheels, spinning devices

Sanfilippo says that Michigan's fireworks law, perhaps a bit more conservative than some surrounding states, has been getting some special attention recently.

"Many people have said the law has needed to be updated for a while now," he said.

Sanfilippo says that the impending transformation of the State Fire Marshall's Office to the new State Bureau of Fire Services has provided an opportunity for some more liberal legislation to be introduced to the legislature soon.

For now, Michigan's firework law is nothing to take lightly. Sanfilippo says that throughout July, police officers are constantly chasing violators. Since the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, even the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has been known to get involved with more serious violators, usually larger fireworks that report up into the air.

Big or small, there's no question that fireworks fly frequently in Michigan. While people usually have a lot of illegal fireworks, Sanfilippo reminds that every year there are injuries and fires that result from all kinds of fireworks.

"They're just one of those things that are inherently dangerous," he said. "The biggest thing we ask is that you just have a competent adult supervising."

From there just follow this simple rule of thumb: If it leave the ground or makes a loud bang, it may be fun, but it's illegal.

Fireworks slated

Manchester Men's Club to host display at dusk Monday

By Brian Gougherty
Heritage Newspapers

The Manchester Men's Club Independence Day fireworks display will be among just two local fireworks displays marking the Fourth of July holiday. The show starts at dusk Monday.

Most people gather at Carr Park in Manchester for the evening to enjoy a frosty beverage and the music of Brad Frey, along with the fireworks. The club will accept donations, with proceeds benefiting next year's event.

A special tribute to honor America's heroes, including fallen Ann Arbor firefighter Amy Schnearle-Pennywitt, a native of Manchester, will begin the fireworks. A large shell, a 21-gun salute and an American flag display will mark the debut of the display. Participants at the park are asked to stand during the salute.

Hudson Mills in Dexter Township also hosts a fireworks display.

Keep your pet safe during summertime

Summer can provide sunshine and fun for both pet owners and their animals. Unfortunately, it also can present circumstances that may place domestic pets in danger.

The Michigan Veterinary Medical Association suggests all pet owners follow safety measures to ensure a safe summer for their pets.

- Owners who travel with pets in their car on extremely hot days put their animals at risk. Dogs and cats cannot perspire. They can only dispel heat through the pads on their feet and by panting. Pets left alone in hot cars for even a short period of time can suffer from heat exhaustion, brain damage, and even death. Even if the car is parked in the shade, the temperature inside can reach up to 120 degrees in only a few minutes.

"It is best to keep your pet safe, hydrated and cool at home whenever you are on the road," Karlene Belyea, executive director of the MVMA, said in a prepared statement. "If a pet must be left outside during the day, it should be in an enclosed, shady area to help it stay cool.

- Never tie a pet to a fence or tree. If a dog twists its leash around it will often bind itself and end up stuck in direct sunlight.
- Provide plenty of water for pets.

"Hydration is the most important factor for keeping pets safe and healthy during summer months," Belyea said. "It's crucial that your pet always has water and is constantly drinking to regulate its body temperature and prevent heat stress."

- Know the indications of heat stress. They may include heavy panting, glazed eyes, rapid pulse, unsteadiness, staggering, vomiting, or a deep red or purple tongue.
- If the animal appears overheated, move it to the shade as soon as possible and apply cool (not cold) water on its body to gradually lower its body temperature. Sporadically dab its head, neck and chest only with cold towels or ice packs. Allow it to drink some water or lick ice cubes. After this is done, immediately take it to a veterinarian.

When exercising a pet take special care with older dogs, short-nosed dogs and dogs not accustomed to running. Start slowly and take frequent breaks for water. Limit exercise to early mornings or evenings. Remember that asphalt can get very hot midday and injure an animal's feet.

- Always supervise a pet around a pool or lake.

Hospital offers new program

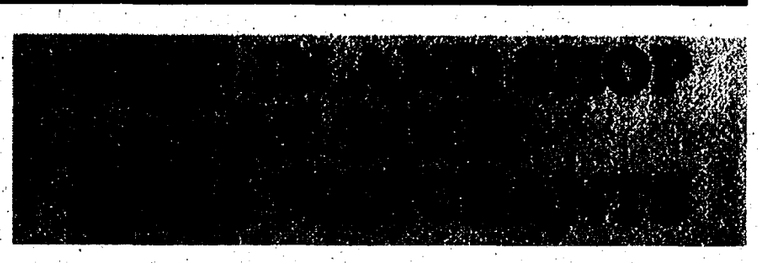

Chelsea Community Hospital will begin providing a nationwide program for cancer patients called "Look Good, Feel Better."

The program was founded in 1989 by the Cosmetic, Toiletry and Fragrance Association Foundation in partnership with the American Cancer Society and the National Cosmetology Association.

Certified cosmetologists volunteer their time and talents to help female cancer patients improve their appearance and self-image by teaching them make-up and skin-care techniques. Patients learn how to properly care for skin and nails made fragile by cancer treatment and disguise hair loss using wigs, turbans and scarves.

The sessions and materials are provided free of charge to patients. Chelsea Community Hospital will have two cosmetologists available.

Senior Retreat

Before graduating from Dexter High School earlier this month, seniors attended a retreat presented by Youth Frontiers. The daylong, high-energy retreat was held at Dexter United Methodist Church. The event included games and activities that focused on values and character. It allowed the seniors time to play together and reflect on their experiences in high school and consider choices for the future. Pictured during one of the activities are seniors Katie Lyons (left), Jacob Lavalli, Jessica Zalucha, Amy Roberts and Sebastian Gerstner. The seniors raised funds to pay for the retreat by hosting several activities, including dances.

Plans attack bird flu

Government officials discuss how to prepare for possible outbreak

By Emily Burton
Heritage Newspapers

Prevention is the key in fighting the spread of avian influenza, according to health experts.

To demonstrate how important preparation is, officials from various levels of government met recently in Detroit for a pandemic influenza conference.

Alex Azar, deputy secretary of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, said society is "overdue and underprepared for a pandemic."

A pandemic is an outbreak of any illness that affects multiple countries. Typically, such outbreaks are caused by viruses that are new to humans.

Avian flu, called H5N1, fits two of the three criteria for a pandemic: It is a new disease and it has made the jump from animals to humans. The third component would be if the disease could spread easily from human to human.

If that happens, no human would have any immunity to the virus, officials said.

Bird flu is transmitted through saliva, feces and oil, such as the oil in feathers.

No reported cases of the disease in humans have occurred anywhere in North America, officials said. Cases have been reported in the Middle East, the Far East and Europe.

It has not yet been able to transmit easily from person to person, but Azar said scientists are concerned that H5N1 could cause a pandemic.

Preparing for such a scenario would help society to function normally, Azar said.

A pandemic could seriously disrupt banking, food distribution, education and healthcare services, among other normal functions, if people and governments fail to prepare, he added.

Azar said the federal government is prepared to spend billions of dollars to help fight the spread of avian influenza in people. He said U.S. Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., had been helping to ensure that Michigan receives its share of that money.

T.J. Bucholz, spokesman for the Michigan Department of Community Health, said the state already has received $2.95 million from the federal government to craft preparedness plans. About 90 percent of that money has gone to health departments statewide, he said.

During the conference, Azar and Janet Olszweski, director of the state Department of Community Health, signed a resolution that would detail response plans by the state and federal agencies.

The HHS would be responsible for providing guidance as well as technical and financial assistance to Michigan. It also would take part in public education plans and help the state make its own pandemic preparation plans.

The federal agency also would review the state's plans to use, store and distribute antiviral vaccines and notify state officials of its share in the federal stockpile of pandemic flu drugs.

Olszewski said she was unsure how many units of antiviral medication Michigan would receive.

Azar said the United States is building a stockpile of H5N1 vaccines right now, but also noted that the country's anti-viral development technology is imperfect.

He added that most antiviral vaccines are developed in bird eggs, something that is not feasible for creating avian flu vaccine stockpiles.

The United States is developing other methods to create the vaccine, he added.

Although creating a vaccine is a problem, distribution would be the bigger issue. Azar said the vaccine must be administered within 24 to 36 hours of infection.

FLU

Having vaccines available at the state level could help offset that problem and should be part of pandemic preparedness plans, he said.

In fact, as part of the resolution, Michigan must hold a summit on state and local preparedness. It also must update its own pandemic preparation plans, written in 2002, to be consistent with those written by the federal government in 2005.

That plan must make Michigan able to function with local and federal agencies and must comply with federal laws if a pandemic were to occur.

The state also must set up a preparedness committee that would include a broad base of "stakeholders," such as representatives of government, education, community and faith-based organizations.

The state is under the gun to provide the federal government by July 1 with the amount of additional antiviral influenza drugs it would purchase depending on funding availability.

Also, Michigan and HHS must participate in a nationwide pandemic exercise within 12 months of the resolution's signing, which means by April 2007.

Michigan also must notify the national Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta of its preparedness plans.

So, will H5N1 one day be capable of creating a pandemic? Will the virus be capable of human-to-human transmission?

Perhaps, said Mitch Irwin, director of the Michigan Department of Agriculture, and state veterinarians Stephen Schmitt and Steve Halstead.

Even so, no one knows if it ever will spread person to person. There can be no time line placed on its mutation patterns, Halstead said.

Because southeast Michigan lies within a major migratory bird flight path, and migratory birds are known to carry the virus, should those who live in the flight path or those who hunt migratory birds be concerned?

Schmitt said the answer is "no."

People simply should use proper precautions when dealing with birds. For example, they should never touch or pluck feathers from a dead bird, he said.

Hunters should not smoke, eat or drink when dressing their birds, and wearing latex gloves when handling them would be wise, Schmitt said.

YOUR DECORATING DOLLARS

PAT ALLEGRA

Make your dorm feel like home

Congratulations to all parents of 2006 high school graduates. After all the parties and festivities, you will have approximately 10 weeks to get your little darlings ready for college. If you are a first-timer, this can be a daunting task.

For most college freshmen, this is the first time that they will eat, sleep, study, entertain and relax in one shared room. Their little corner of the world needs to be functional, efficient and easy to clean.

Decorating the dorm room is more about performance than high style. Yet, your student is going to emotionally need to show some of their personality. If your child knows his or her roommates, then you can possibly coordinate colors. Either way, the easiest way to start is with the bedding.

Choose a darker colored patterned comforter and two sets of sheets. They will do a lot of reading, eating and studying on that bed, so a comfortable bolster pillow is a good idea.

Take your color cue from the bedding and do matching towels, laundry bag, bath caddy, storage containers and some kitchenware.

Favorite pictures, posters and personal items are a must. So is double sided tape. Although window dressings are rarely needed, a matching window scarf or material can go a long way to achieve a homey look.

Dorm decorating is an important factor. A little slice of home, comfort and personality will go a long way when your freshman experiences those first pangs of homesickness.

Pat Allegra is the owner of Stylish Solutions, an interior decorating business specializing in decorating assistance. She can be reached at 1-734-449-4679.

Dorie Mickelson goes from the corporate world to artistic

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

Dorie Mickelson spent almost two decades climbing the corporate ladder in the field of information management and technology.

Then came the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001.

"Like most people, I was absolutely stunned and devastated by the tragedy," she said. "But the event also made me do some serious soul searching.

"Reminded of how incredibly short and fragile life was, I began seriously contemplating my life choices and priorities, re-evaluating my career, and trying to figure out what it was that I most wanted out of my life, what I had the greatest passion for and what most nurtured my spirit."

She found the answer as a potter, and her own creative business, Free Spirit Creations.

Mickelson, whose work is featured at Chelsea's West of the Moon gallery, had always loved working with her hands. Although her bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Michigan are in English literature, and information and library studies, the Detroit native took several U of M art classes and frequented art fairs, galleries and museums.

Once she discovered clay,

Hobby turns into career

Dexter's Debbie Haas co-authors book on scrapbooking

By Sandi Kasha
Staff Writer

What started as a hobby has ended up being a full-time career with plenty of perks.

Dexter Village resident Debbie Haas, 40, who has been scrapbooking for more than 14 years, has co-authored "Chicken Soup for the Scrapbooker's Soul," which will be in stores July 25 by Health Communications Inc. It will sell for $14.95.

"It all started with me wanting to capture every moment of my life," she said. "I wanted to capture every moment of my time with my family."

Sean Geary, the director of sales for Health Communication Inc., who wanted to publish a "Chicken Soup" book, approached her.

"Debbie has all the qualities we look for in the 'Chicken Soup' books," Geary said. "She's completely dedicated, absolutely tenacious and has an unbridled passion for preserving memories of her family."

Geary and Haas met when they worked at Dexter's Colorbök.

"I proposed it two years ago to the company," Geary said. "Scrapbooking was the newest and hottest thing, and when they gave me the green light, I approached Debbie to co-author it."

The 288-page book, which was co-authored with friend Allison Connors, took more than a year to complete.

Geary said the book contains inspirational story about scrapbooking.

"'Chicken Soup' books is a billion dollar brand," he said. "They're subjects thta are appealing to the public. Debbie is a spirited woman and she did a wonderful job with the book."

Haas' enthusiasm with photographs, cropping, cutting and pasting has opened a door and taken her outside her home.

She devotes much of her time as a freelance scrapbooking instructor. Many times, her workshops take her away from home.

Haas said she expects to travel to a dozen different places this year.

She had led a cruise from New York to South Hampton, England, May 2. The Scrapbooking cruise was a combination of scrapbooking, mingling and sightseeing.

The trip was covered in The New York Times.

"It was exciting when The New York Times covered our trip," she said. "I was like this must be something."

Haas enjoys lecturing and traveling. Her busy schedule hasn't affected her family. Steve, her husband of 20 years, and her two

MONEY SENSE

Keep beneficiary info up to date

TONY LAJEUNESSE

According to the Investment Company Institute, in 2004, 40 percent of American households owned Individual Retirement Accounts and 401(k) plan assets nearing $2 trillion.

For many of these Americans, retirement plans represent a significant portion of their assets. One way to help protect these funds is to avoid the mistake of allowing your beneficiary designations to fall out-of-date.

You may not realize it, but the assets in your retirement accounts are not distributed based on the instructions in your will. Rather, they are directed to the beneficiaries you designated for each account.

If no beneficiary is named, the default beneficiary may be your estate, making the assets subject to both income and estate taxes.

Distributions from most tax-deferred retirement plans are taxed as ordinary income, and if taken prior to reaching age 59 1/2 may be subject to an additional 10 percent federal income tax penalty.

If there have been changes in your family, such as a birth, death or divorce, it may be time to re-visit your beneficiary designations to determine whether changes are needed.

Updating the beneficiary designation forms for your accounts may help you prevent confusion and discord among your heirs.

You may also want to consider the stretch IRA rules regarding your beneficiaries, which is an area that many forget to consider.

The tax difference between a lump sum withdrawal and a stretch IRA could be quite dramatic and could save your heirs a lot on unnecessary taxes.

I'm not saying that you have financially irresponsible children, but if you want to help them make a wise decision on how to receive your IRA, an inherited IRA trust could be a very good thing.

Most retirement plans allow you to designate a primary and a contingent (secondary) beneficiary. If your primary beneficiary passes away before you do, your accounts will be distributed to the contingent beneficiary.

You can also request that your funds be divided equally between two or more children, or you can specify a specific percentage to be distributed among multiple heirs. However, this will not keep an individual from taking a lump sum distribution.

By keeping your account beneficiary designations current, you can help ensure that your assets are distributed as you wish.

Did I mention how you can make a charity an heir? In most cases that distribution would be tax-free.

Making the right decisions regarding what could be your largest asset might be the difference of learning from your mistakes or from the mistakes of others. A small mistake on a small amount of money is a small amount of money. That same small mistake on a large sum of money is a lot of money.

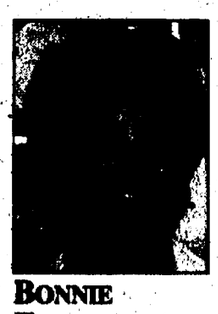

I prefer to learn from the mistakes of others — it's a lot cheaper.

The first step in avoiding mistakes is to find someone who is knowledgeable on how to help you make wise decisions when it comes to your beneficiaries. It's your money, make sure it works for you.

ORGANIZE THIS

It's time to get your photograhs in order

BONNIE EVERDEEN

I get many questions on how to organize photos. It really isn't as overwhelming as it seems. The first thing you ask yourself is how you want to view your pictures. Do you want to view them in a digital format or hard copy? Once you answer that, you're on your way.

If you want to view them as digital, you need to be diligent about loading them to your computer. Make sure you load them into different folders every time you download or you will copy over previous photos. Photos are named with the same file names.

You always want to think to yourself that organization is about retrieval, not storage. Once you understand that concept, you can better decide on how to "retrieve" things.

Do you think chronologically or by event or by person? Make sure to name the folders accordingly. Then you can build your slideshow either by event or chronologically.

You can also store photos by how the person is related to you: kids, parents, friends and cousins, and create a slideshow by that category.

If you want to look at photos in hard copy, you then start sorting photos in the same categories as digital: chronologically, by event, by person. This sorting process may take a while if you're sorting photos from the past 30 years. But be patient with yourself. Break the sorting process down into two-hour increments. Then decide your format for hard copy.

It could be any kind of photo album or you could start scrapbooking your photos. There are many formats for storing hard copy photos.

Photos are such an important memory, it's crucial to get them stored properly. And your kids will thank you if they inherit organized photos.

SPIRIT

Micklelson pursued it with a passion.

"I absolutely love the tactile nature of clay and the seemingly endless possibilities of how it can be formed, decorated and fired," she said.

The meditative aspect of throwing pots on the wheel is another factor.

"Being totally focused on what you are doing and so completely engrossed in the act of creating something out of clay, everything else just fades away. The wheel spinning ... the clay gliding through your hands ... your body, mind, and spirit all focused on centering, opening, pulling, shaping, forming ... it is grounding, calming, and exhilarating all at the same time."

Working with clay gives Mickelson the same rush she had from martial arts, before a knee injury ended that passion.

"Part of what I loved about practicing martial arts was that it engaged me so completely, in body, mind and spirit," she said. "It was like a moving meditation. Having to give it up after 20 years was like losing a part of myself.

"So some years later, when I sat down at a potters wheel for the very first time and directed all of my attention and energy into trying to center a piece of clay as the wheel spun around, I suddenly felt that feeling again for the first time ever since I had stopped doing martial arts.

"I was hooked. I knew immediately that I wanted to work with clay every day and could not wait to buy my own potter's wheel. I felt like I had come home."

Mickelson took wheel throwing classes, Raku workshops and a glaze formulation class. She set up a ceramics studio in her home, and trained for two years in advanced wheel throwing, surface decoration and design techniques. She also worked as a monitor at the Ann Arbor Art Center Pottery Studio.

Mickelson took two terms of classes at the Ann Arbor Potters Guild, two special workshops with internationally known visiting clay artists and authors Robert Piepenburg and Lana Wilson, and a tilemaking class at the Ann Arbor Art Center.

She became a member of the Michigan Guild of Artists and the Michigan Ceramic Artists Association, participated in ClayArt online discussions, and began selling her pottery at art fairs and galleries in Michigan and Ohio.

Recently, she completed a year as a ceramics intern at the Greenfield Village Pottery Shop in Dearborn, an experience she says greatly expanded her clay knowledge, sharpened her technical skills, and introduced her to early American redware, salt-fired stoneware, Arts and Crafts style pottery, and wood fired pottery.

Mickleson made pottery for the Greenfield Village gift shop, which averages an output of 10,000 pieces of pottery each year, and demonstrated techniques to visitors.

Other jobs included mixing up slips and glazes, conducting glaze tests, loading and unloading kilns, mixing/pugging clay, ram pressing tiles, grinding kiln shelves, stoking the wood kiln, waxing and glazing pots.

"While my pottery has evolved over time and will continue to evolve as I continue to learn and grow as a clay artist, my current focus is on creating functional wheel-thrown porcelain and stoneware forms with highly textured surface designs," she said.

"There is something deeply and personally rewarding about making something with your hands that can then be used and enjoyed in one's daily life."

Mickelson forms her plates, bowls, cups, mugs, pitchers, platters, cookie jars, and vases – all with lead-free glazes – on her potter's wheel, carving patterns into the surfaces or applying liquid clay – also called "slip" — to create textures and designs. All in all, the entire process from the beginning forming stage to the final glaze firing stage takes about a month.

"Most people have no idea that making pottery is so involved," she said.

Mickelson also makes earring bowls, Goddess Pots and Judaica for celebrating Jewish traditions, rituals, culture and spirituality.

There are so many variables that play into the final appearance of a piece of pottery, she said. These include the composition of the clay body itself, the way it's formed, the surface treatment it receives, how those things are applied, the type of kiln environment used for the firing, and how those variables all come together and interact to produce the final result.

"Being totally focused on what you are doing and so completely engrossed in the act of creating something out of clay, everying else just fades away."

Dorie Mickelson
Chelsea Artist

"There is actually quite a lot of science and chemistry involved in making pottery, but how each potter creates their pieces and chooses, combines, and applies the numerous elements involved is truly an art," she said.

Her artwork, she said, is inspired by nature, by the places around the world she has traveled, including France, England, Switzerland, Israel Turkey, Iran, Afghanistan, Pakistan and India, and by friends, family members, teachers and artists who have helped, mentored and encouraged her.

"As a lifelong Michigander, it is a thrill to be an artist at local art shows and to see my work in local galleries," she said. "I just love knowing that my pottery is being used by people who live in the communities that helped shape my own appreciation of the arts.

"Since I create all of my pottery by hand from start to finish, each piece I make is a personal expression of my creative voice. What better way to share my creative energy than within the communities that have been a part of my life and journey as an artist?"

In February, Mickelson started teaching wheel throwing pottery classes at the Ann Arbor Art Center, and became a featured guest artist at West of Moon gallery in Chelsea.

When West of the Moon owner Marsi Darwin invited Mickelson to be a guest artist, she was delighted to do so.

"I had met Marsi at one of Chelsea's art fairs I had previously participated in. Marsi had a booth across from mine. After several months at West of the Moon as a guest artist, I joined as a working member."

Since the gallery is an artists' collective, it offers more than just an outlet for her artwork.

"It offers a diverse community of other artists to network with. And, ultimately, finding a balance to the wonderfully meditative aspect of working alone in my own studio with the creative energy exchange that takes place when artists get together is a beautiful thing," she said.

Mickelson also was invited to be part of the new Chelsea Art Market, but is unable to attend because of summer art show and teaching commitments.

"I love to teach," she said. "Sharing my skills and knowledge with others and seeing them learn and grow is incredibly gratifying. It's like looking into a mirror in some ways, seeing that spark of excitement in someone's eyes, seeing them experience that rush of joy and that sense of accomplishment.

"Teaching also benefits my own growth, as I have to really think carefully about something that has become automatic for me in order to explain it to someone else seeing it for the first time."

The switch from corporate to clay has clearly been successful for Mickelson.

"By immersing myself in the world of clay and challenging myself to continuously learn and grow as an artist, I have, of course, encountered some frustrations and obstacles along the way, but also experienced pure joy."

LOVING HOMES NEEDED
LEO is a 2 year old Beagle mix weighing 25 pounds. He needs a forever playmate and a fenced yard to exercise within. Leo has a kind nature and relishes his relationships with OTHER DOGS and CATS He would be an excellent addition to a family with children over the age of 5 years.
GEMINI has a rather intriguing story. She was found at Cedar Point! Being only about 12 weeks old, she wouldn't have survived on her own, so someone brought her back to the shelter. She is a sweet little thing.
REMY is a terrific 2 year old Shepherd mix weighing 34 pounds. Remy along with her guardian was evicted from their home. She walks well on a leash and responds to the command 'SIT'. Remy also socializes well with other dogs and would be a great addition to a family with children over the age of 5 years. She enjoys 'tummy rubs' and a ball to chew on. Remy possesses a calm and loyal nature and probably should have been a lap dog. She is house trained and waiting for her new family to come and take her home.

WHO'S WATCHING THE CHILDREN?
The Orange County Register thought its readers might like to know about the criminal histories of workers in the state's day-care facilities. After all, the paper's readers were placing their own trust and their children's well-being in the hands of those workers.
But the state of California turned down a series of newspaper Freedom of Information requests to look at those histories, citing the privacy rights of the workers. It also refused access to its data base of offenses and other day-care center violations unless the newspaper paid $45,000 for the information.
In the end, the Register won its fight for access to documents–which were used to track down the criminals and public court records that revealed their histories. The newspaper also built its own data base from nearly 50,000 pages of inspection and complaint reports in Orange County. These efforts allowed the Register to unveil for the state's parents the uncomfortable truth. Throughout California, thousands of day-care workers had long criminal histories. The results of the data base analysis also showed pervasive problems of mistreatment, neglect, overcrowding and unsafe conditions.
If you lived in Orange County, or any other county with day care, wouldn't you like to know whether the adults your children come in contact with have committed crimes?

Off the field, Samuels earned Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletics Conference All-Academic honors. The Lakers finished 10-36 overall this season.

Dexter's Jennie Ritter was named the University of Michigan's Female Athlete of the Year for the second straight season. She's the first Wolverine to accomplish that feat since 1989-90. She also was selected to play for the United States in the World University Games in Taiwan later this summer.

This past season, Ritter led U of M's softball squad (44-15) to a Big Ten and regional title. The Wolverines lost to Tennessee 1-0 in the NCAA Super Regional to end their year. Ritter was named first-team All-American for the second consecutive season. She ended the year with a 31-8 record, with a 0.77 earned run average, 451 strikeouts and 39 walks.

Ritter, a three-time All-Big Ten performer, concluded her stellar career as Michigan's all-time leader in strikeouts (1,205), starts (115), innings pitched (835), shutouts (43) and no-hitters (five).

At Central Michigan University, Chelsea's Stephanie Crews started 47 of 48 games at shortstop for the Chippewas. The senior finished second on the squad with a .258 batting average. In 132 at-bats, she had 34 hits, including one home run, 18 RBIs (second-best on team), seven doubles, one triple and 10 walks. CMU ended the year with an overall record of 22-27.

In golf, Chelsea's Brett Common led the Mississippi State University Professional Golf Management team to a second-place finish at the fifth annual Jones Cup Tournament in South Carolina last spring. The freshman shot a 73 to pace the squad.

At Ferris State University, Dexter's Meghan Hunter helped lead the Bulldogs to a runner-up finish at the NCAA Division II women's golf final in Grand Rapids this spring. The freshman finished 13th overall individually with a three-day total of 236 (77, 84, 75).

By Don Richter

It was a remarkable season for Chelsea baseball in 2006.

The Bulldogs captured Southeastern Conference White Division, district and regional championships, before falling in the Division II state semifinals to Escanaba 11-5.

The Eskymos ended up losing to Battle Creek Lakeview 9-2 in the Division II state title game.

Chelsea finished the season with a 28-11 overall record.

Though the Bulldogs excelled as a team, they also garnered numerous postseason honors.

Chelsea's Joe Welton was named to the Michigan High School Baseball Coaches Association's Dream Team. The squad includes players from all four divisions. The senior outfielder batted .400, with a team-high 21 doubles. His 52 hits this season from the No. 2 slot in the batting order were fourth all-time for a single season in school history.

Welton (5-10, 180), who'll play at Aquinas College next season, was also named first-team Division II All-State, All-Region, All-District and All-SEC.

Selected second-team Division II All-State were juniors pitcher Dan Augustine and shortstop Adam Connell. Both were also named first-team All-Region, All-District and All-SEC.

Augustine (6-foot-3, 215) finished the year with a 7-3 overall record and a 1.99 earned run average. At the plate, as Chelsea's clean-up hitter, he was equally effective, smacking five home runs and knocking in 35 RBIs.

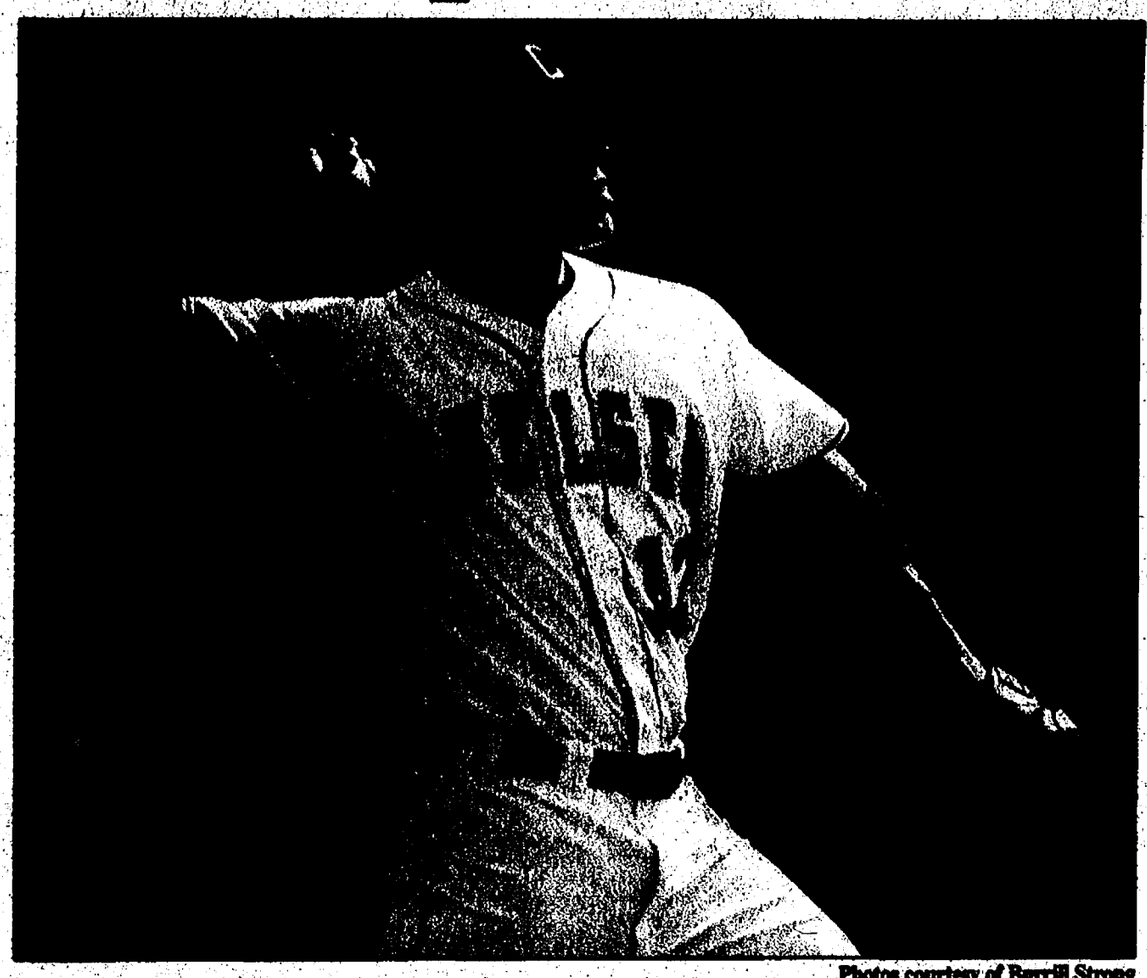

A speedy lead-off hitter, Connell (5-10, 155) hit .400, with 20 stolen bases. His 58 hits this year were third all-time for a single season in school history. Matt Moffett is the all-time single season hit leader for Chelsea with 65. Jake Rindle is second with 59 hits.

Senior third baseman Robbie Moffett was named first-team All-District and SEC this year. The Bowling Green State University signee cranked five home runs this season from the No. 3 spot in the line-up. On the mound, he paced the Bulldogs with four saves.

Earning All-SEC honorable mention for Chelsea were senior first baseman/pitcher C.J. Boyer, senior catcher Cam Hawkins and junior pitcher/infielder Dan Rhodes.

WHO'S WATCHING THE CHILDREN?

The Orange County Register thought its readers might like to know about the criminal histories of workers in the state's day-care facilities. After all, the paper's readers were placing their own trust and their children's well-being in the hands of those workers.

But the state of California turned down a series of newspaper Freedom of Information requests to look at those histories, citing the privacy rights of the workers. It also refused access to its data base of offenses and other day-care center violations unless the newspaper paid $45,000 for the information.

In the end, the Register won its fight for access to documents--which were used to track down the criminals and public court records that revealed their histories. The newspaper also built its own data base from nearly 50,000 pages of inspection and complaint reports in Orange County. These efforts allowed the Register to unveil for the state's parents the uncomfortable truth. Throughout California, thousands of day-care workers had long criminal histories. The results of the data base analysis also showed pervasive problems of mistreatment, neglect, overcrowding and unsafe conditions.

If you lived in Orange County, or any other county with day care, wouldn't you like to know whether the adults your children come in contact with have committed crimes?

manship Award for the Bulldogs was David Fishburn. The senior outfielder was also named Chelsea's Teammate of the Year.

"He's as outstanding a teammate as anyone could ask for," said Chelsea coach Wayne Welton. "He comes to the ballpark with a smile on his face every day. He's a special person."

Welton said Fishburn concluded his prep career in style.

"In his last at-bat in the state semis, he doubled into the right field corner," Welton said. "That was a fitting end for him."

Receiving Chelsea's Most Improved Player Award was Boyer. The three-year varsity performer finished 5-2 on the hill this year and hit .300 with a team-leading six home runs. At 6-3, 265 Boyer, who'll play football at Saginaw Valley State University this fall, is agile and fluid on the diamond.

"He's one of the best we've had defensively at first base," Welton said. "He's nimble and very athletic for a guy his size. He runs well and moves well. He was a force for us in the middle of the line-up."

Earning the Coaches Award was the threesome of Hawkins, Moffett and Welton. Each player has been on the varsity for three years. The award is given for leadership, dedication and commitment to the Chelsea program during an athlete's career.

"These guys have been playing on teams together since they were 6 years old," Welton said. "All three of them are passionate about baseball. Each one of those guys had a great career here. All three are special guys."

Hawkins, who hit .300, will attend the University of Michigan, as a student only.

"He had opportunities to play at other schools, but he always wanted to go to U of M," Welton said.

Hawkins, Boyer, Moffett and Welton have been a part of 73 wins over their three-year varsity careers. The foursome has been key cogs in Chelsea's three league championships during their time as Bulldogs.

Other top performers for Chelsea this season included junior pitcher/infielder Chad Nielsen (6-0, 170), who was 6-4 on the mound and batted .300.

Junior outfielder Travis Amburgey (6-0, 195) hit .350 from the No. 8 slot in the order, while junior pitchers Todd Elliott (6-4, 225) and Rhodes each finished with four wins from the rubber for the Bulldogs.

Welton, who concluded his 28th season on Chelsea's bench, said 2006 was a memorable season.

"Our line-up one through nine was as solid as we've had in a long time," he said. "We battled all year long. Our run to the final four was special."

North Lake store to add gas pumps

Plan for six new gas pumps has been in the works since 2000

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

Meeting the needs of customers is the goal at North Lake Country Store, says the store's owner, Martin Ehman.

Ehman and his wife, Sue, have been working toward that goal and, in the coming month, hope to finally open new gas pumps at the Lyndon Township business.

Located at the corner of Stofer and North Territorial roads, the party store and deli has been the site of construction this summer as gas tanks were installed behind the store. Improvements are also being made to the store, which will have a new back entrance once the six gas pumps are installed.

Plans to add a gas station to the store go back as far as November 2000, when a letter of intent to purchase neighboring property was sent to the former property owners. The long process of acquiring the property where the gas pumps will soon be located was followed by years of planning.

"It took a long time to get the property. It took a long time to get all the permits," Ehman said.

Ehman said before work began, he polled his customers and neighbors, receiving more than 1,000 signatures. Only two area residents, he said, voiced concerns about installing gas pumps at the store.

"It's part of the infrastructure that people have been really needing," he said, noting that the nearest gas station is about six miles away and many residents have to drive into Chelsea to get gas.

The site plan was designed with safety in mind, he said.

"We believe it's going to be one of the safest gas stations," Ehman said.

A large retention pond, as well as other improvements, will ensure that all water on the site is contained.

"We have taken every measure possible to keep everything on-site and contained," Ehman said.

In addition to regular fuel and diesel fuel, the gas station is also being prepped to handle E85 fuel and biodiesel.

Initial plans also included eventually removing the existing store and building a new convenience store farther away from the road, but Ehman said those plans are not finalized.

"We've had a lot of people say they want us to keep the old building," he said, adding that any decisions will be based on what the customers want. "We know our job is to provide what people want."

Superior service is what Ehman is hoping to offer his customers.

"Our view of how convenient we can make it is what we're after," he said. "We're going to try to do the full-service concept of yesterday."

He plans to accomplish that by keeping an attendant out at the gas pumps at all times to help customers. Potentially, a customer could go inside and do some shopping while the attendant pumps the gas, or staff could even do the shopping for customers, Ehman said.

Although he is hoping to have the gas pumps up and running sometime in July, Ehman said it could take until August before the store starts serving fuel.

Ehman's daughters, Kaitlin and Brooke, are part of the family-run business. The couple also has a son, David, who doesn't work at the store.

North Lake Country Store is located at 20941 North Territorial Road.

Staff Writer Jennifer McArdle can be reached at 475-1371 or jmcardle@heritage.com.

Conference held at B&B

The Chelsea House Victorian Inn was the location of Executive Education Inc.'s National Speakers Conference last weekend.

The Chelsea House, owned by Jim and Kim Myles, operates bed-and-breakfast-style accommodations at 118 E. Middle St. with facilities for meetings and retreats for small groups.

Executive Education is a Chelsea-based company owned by John and Nancy Daly of Sylvan Township. It develops continuing professional education seminars for corporate financial managers whose clients include about 40 state and provincial accounting associations in the United States and Canada. It has eight seminar leaders representing seven states.

Attendees began the Saturday conference with breakfast together and then took their meeting outside to the gazebo at the Chelsea House. Evening activities included dinner at the Common Grill and a performance of "Honus and Me" at the Purple Rose Theatre Company.

DEXTER VILLAGE

Local agent on TV show

Vicki Larmee, a buyer's agent for the Real Estate One Toth Team in Dexter, was recently showcased on the "House Hunters" TV show on the Home and Garden network.

The show, hosted by Suzanne Whang, allows viewers to accompany a Realtor and the buyers she represents as they search for their new home. The program focuses on the emotional experience of finding a home, as well as the process itself, from start to finish.

Larmee worked with her family about a year ago. She said it was fun having "Hollywood" in town, but that the program doesn't really mimic the whole home-buying experience. On the show, buyers are only given three homes from which to choose. According to the National Association of Realtor's annual survey, the average homebuyer actually looks at nine homes over an eight-week period before buying a home.

Web surfers traditionally require a little less time. Having the ability to search homes via the net allows them to preview homes and select only the most interesting homes to visit.

Larmee said the Web has greatly changed the way real estate is sold. She is not surprised that Web surfers were more likely to use a real estate agent.

The Toth Team has been recognized among the top performers in the state. Kathy Toth was one of the first agents to create a team. Based in Dexter, the team is part of the Real Estate One's Ann Arbor office.

The team also includes Linda Woodard, buyer's agent, and Jennifer Marshall, client care manager.

Toth earns recognition

Kathy Toth of Real Estate One in Dexter has been selected as among five sales associates in the country to be highlighted on iSucceed's Top 5 Listing Presentations.

Toth, of Dexter's Toth Team, is a top-producing sales associate and a member of the Hall of Fame, according to a press release from her office. She is also a member of Real Estate One's President's Circle and is ranked among the top 1 percent of producers nationally. She has been a Realtor since 1979.

Her listing presentation has been compiled and improved through the years. It contains information about the market, selling in general and the particular house that is being listed. It educates the seller as to the fair market price of their home, current market conditions, paperwork they will need to prepare, and expectations before, during and after the sale.

It also contains information about staging the home for showings, preparing for a move and other matters related to the transaction.

It will be used as a training tool for other Realtors, the press release stated. iSucceed will offer her CD individually or as part of a package of the top five presentations. It will contain a dialog between iSucceed's Bill Schue and Toth as they discuss the elements of her listing presentation and how to use them effectively.

When the music sped up, the skaters got a little crazy. Lindsey Hopkins (left), Chelsea Moore and Judy Kim join South Meadows Elementary School teacher Jeanne Caselli for an ice dance.

Joe Day, a student in teacher Jean Meconi's class, hits the puck during an intensive air hockey game while taking a break from ice skating.

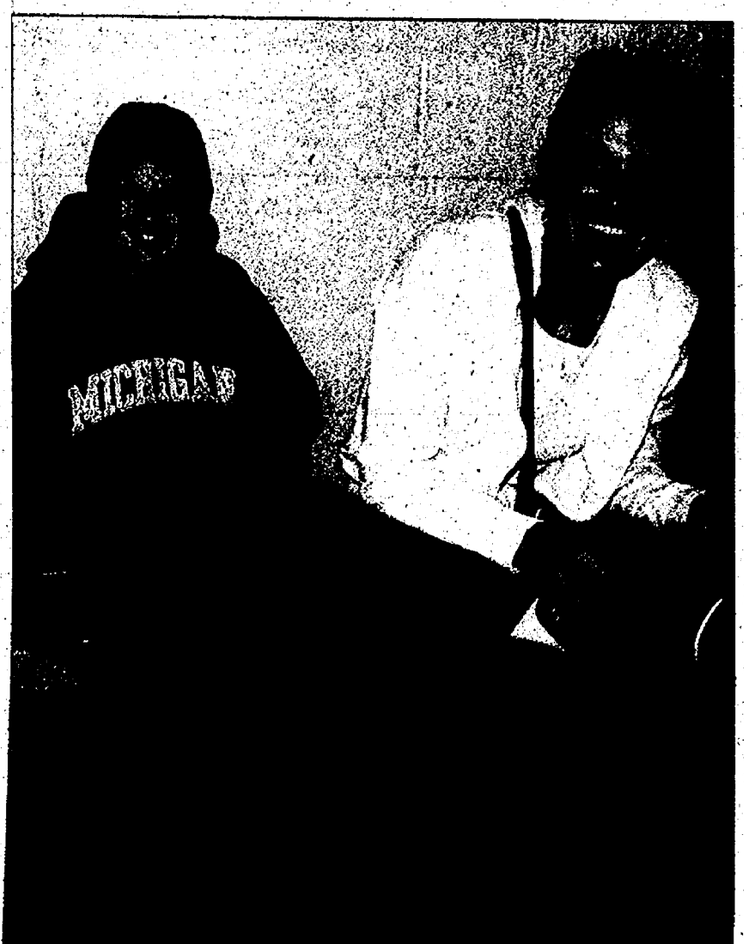

Logan Preston preferred the excitement of video games to ice skating. He is shown driving a racecar that moves from side to side as the vehicle is steered during play.

Fifth-graders at South Meadows Elementary School celebrated the end of the school year with a skating party at the Arctic Coliseum in Chelsea June 12. The event included ice skating, video games, air hockey and lots of fun.

Jane Barnes, a parent of another fifth-grader, helps Josh Tucker with his ice skates during the skating party June 12 at Arctic Coliseum.

The fifth-grade party also included pizza, breadsticks and homemade desserts brought by parents. Skating really worked up an appetite for Sara Allen, Erica Vanneste, Laurel Hall, Jordan Battaglia and Micayla Zynda.

Helping Hand

The Ortbring brothers, Blake, 11, and Grant, 10, wanted to do something to help the victims of last year's hurricanes. Together, they created original artwork that was turned into magnets and pins. They then sold them at their schools, South Meadows Elementary in Chelsea and da Vinci Institute in Jackson, as well as to family, friends and in front of the Common Grill last fall during a Hurricane Katrina benefit dinner. The boys raised $350, which was donated to the American Red Cross. Pictured are Red Cross intern Kim Templin, Director Pamela Horiszny, Financial Development Director Heidi Grix and intern Victoria Suber accepting a check from the boys.

Stratman named to post

Judy Stratman has been promoted to development director at Chelsea Community Hospital. She has worked as special events coordinator in the development department for three years, planning the hospital's major fund-raisers.

The events she organized have become increasingly successful during her tenure, often raising record-breaking amounts to help support the hospital's new initiatives to meet the health care needs of the community, according to a press release from the hospital.

Before Stratman began working at Chelsea Community Hospital, she was employed by Chelsea Community Education, and prior to taking some time off to raise her family, she was director of corporate services for Group 243 Inc., an Ann Arbor marketing and design firm.

"We are so pleased to have Judy as our new director of development," Kathleen Griffiths, president and CEO of Chelsea hospital, said in a prepared statement. "Her experience at Chelsea Community Hospital, as well as her expertise in fund-raising and strong ties with the community, are a valuable asset for our hospital."

Chelsea Community Hospital, established in 1970, is a private, nonprofit, acute care 113-bed facility that resides on 119 wooded acres. The hospital, which is fully accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations, is governed by a 15-member board of trustees. It employs 1,000 people on a full- or part-time basis, credentials over 300 physicians, and enjoys the benefits of 200 volunteers.

Tips to save on gas

Keeping your car tuned can save as much as 4 percent

By Gary Gosselin
Journal Register News Service

With gas prices skyrocketing past $3 a gallon and expected to go even higher by the peak driving season this summer, consumers are looking at ways to conserve as much as possible, and here are a number of easy ways to increase gas mileage and save money.

No, the answer is not to stop driving. That's not only impractical, but also not a lot of fun.

Instead, changes can be made in driving habits and vehicle maintenance for savings as high as 25 percent in some cases, according to the U.S. Department of Energy.

And forget about those "quick fix" additives and add-ons, said AAA National spokesman Geoff Sundstrom: "If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is."

"AAA and the Environmental (Protection) Agency and Department of Transportation have looked at various gas and oil additives, as well as some devices over many years, and have found that these typically fall far short of the improvements they advertise," said Sundstrom. "In our opinion, the most important way to reach better fuel economy with the vehicles you are currently driving is to make certain you are engaging in two important behaviors.

"One is to scrupulously maintain your vehicle according to manufacturer recommended specifications, and the other is to practice good driving skills, especially avoiding rapid acceleration and severe braking."

Here are some other tips:

• Be mellow, and stop aggressive driving. Speeding, rapid acceleration and braking waste gas. In fact, those can lower your gas mileage by 33 percent at highway speeds and by 5 percent around town.

• Driving the speed limit is not only the legal thing to do, but it can save gas — from 7 percent to 23 percent. Most vehicles decrease in gas mileage rapidly above 60 miles per hour.

As a rule of thumb, you can assume that each 5 mph you drive over 60 is like paying an additional 19 cents per gallon for gas, according to the Energy Department.

• That set of golf clubs or those leftover bags of salt could cost you, too. An extra 100 pounds in your vehicle could reduce your miles per gallon by up to 2 percent.

• Keeping your car tuned can save as much as 4 percent in gas costs, and fixing a serious problem, such as a faulty oxygen sensor, can improve your mileage by as much as 40 percent, the Energy Department said.

• Keep those Red Wings and Pistons flags inside the car, too. They create drag and can decrease your mileage — unless you really think it's worth the cost to cheer on your favorite team.

• Replacing a clogged air filter can improve your gas mileage by as much as 10 percent. Your car's air filter keeps impurities from damaging the inside of your

Football legend says take care of your heart

Bo Schembechler shares insight during talk at Oakwood hospital

By Joe Slezak
Heritage Newspapers

At age 40, University of Michigan football Coach Bo Schembechler suffered his first heart attack.

Another heart attack and two open-heart surgeries later, the retired coach is still his same feisty self — and he wouldn't have it any other way.

Schembechler, 77, was the keynote speaker recently at Oakwood Healthcare System's inaugural Men's Heart Health Program.

He said he's happy to still be around and still shooting his mouth off.

"I'm still alive," he said. "I'm doing all the things I want to do. I don't want to dwell on the problems I've had.

"It's only a problem if it keeps you from doing what you want to do."

Schembechler had a pacemaker installed about a year ago, and he takes 20 pills a day. He has arthritis, high blood pressure, neuropathy in his arms and legs, and takes four shots a day for diabetes.

"I do everything I want to do, period," he said. "It will not stop me.

"They can say I'm a miracle. When I retired, I traveled all over the world."

He joked that his younger wife, Cathy, helps to keep him young.

He then turned serious, telling the crowd of a couple hundred that there are four steps to keeping a heart healthy:

• Prevention. Eat the right foods, keep your weight down and exercise every day. He said he saw lots of gray hair in the ballroom, but everyone can exercise, regardless of age.

• Proper medical care. He said that if you find a good doctor, make him or her your friend.

• Be disciplined. "You cannot lay in bed and stay on the couch and not move and expect your heart to improve," he said.

• Attitude. "You take the attitude that I'm not going to let this thing beat me," Schembechler said.

He was on top of the college football coaching world in 1969. After six seasons as coach at his alma mater — Miami University in Oxford, Ohio — U of M Athletic Director Don Canham hired him to revive the once-proud Wolverines.

Schembechler did just that, putting U of M back on the national map by ending the 1969 regular season with a 24-12 upset of a vaunted Ohio State University team coached by Woody Hayes — who was one of Schembechler's coaches at Miami and hired him as a graduate assistant coach and full-time assistant coach at OSU.

The win put Michigan into the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 1, 1970, against the University of Southern California. Schembechler did not coach in that game, which the Wolverines lost 10-3.

Two days before, Schembechler had felt pain in his left side. He and his first wife, Millie, went to a hospital, but his electrocardiogram showed nothing abnormal.

"So I went back home and ordered a hamburger," he said.

The day before the game, Schembechler tried to give himself energy by running as hard as he could in practice. He still felt lethargic.

That evening, his team stayed in a monastery at the top of a hill so there would be no distractions. The priests at the house at the bottom of the hill were having a New Year's Eve party, and they invited him. Schembechler drank a soft drink to calm his stomach. It didn't work.

At the party, he got a call that U of M's president, Robben Fleming, was at the monastery to talk to the team, so Schembechler climbed the hill in the dark.

About halfway up, he stopped and hugged a tree because he was in so much pain. He finished the walk and did a short introduction of Fleming.

After he made sure his players were in their rooms for the night, he wanted to go straight to bed, not talking shop with his assistant coaches, who were alarmed.

"I promise you I could not get up for this game," Schembechler said. "I didn't care."

The team physicians took him to a hospital, where he was studying his play chart while waiting for the doctor.

Schembechler recalls the doctor saying, "Coach, you're out of the game" because of the heart attack.

"I cried," he said. "I had all my life prepared for this hour. I never got to coach it."

Schembechler said he never watched the film of that game. His players told him that they were in a mental fog.

"At first thought, I'm 40 years old and just getting started in my career," he said. "Would I be able to coach again?"

The answer was yes, as long as he took better care of himself, which he did.

In spring 1976, Schembechler was playing racquetball when he felt like he did in 1969. His doctor told him that he needed surgery; Schembechler balked, getting second and third opinions. A Texas doctor he saw sent a telegram saying that the coach needed surgery and he was available.

"Millie dropped the phone," said Schembechler, who opted to have his doctor perform the operation.

He said that given the choice, having an operation close to home is the best thing because your loved ones are nearby.

After the 1987 regular season, he went under the knife again.

He had gone to St. Joseph Mercy Hospital near Ann Arbor for a battery of tests; the next morning, he was about to leave the hospital when he told Millie: "Get the doctors. I'm having a heart attack."

That heart attack was caused by a blood clot that had lodged in his heart, the result of the testing. He underwent surgery; his mammary glands were used in his heart.

The surgery knocked him out of another bowl — the Hall of Fame Bowl Jan. 2, 1988. Under the guidance of his eventual successor, Gary Moeller, the Wolverines beat the University of Alabama, 28-24.

After the 1989 season, Schembechler retired from coaching. He had coached for 20 more seasons after his first heart attack. But at 60, he knew it was time to slow down. His father had died of a stroke at that age (his mother lived to age 97).

Schembechler said his first heart attack was caused by being "stupid."

"Going to Michigan and a new job, I didn't take care of myself," he said, adding that he would have done just as good a job if he were healthy.

In Schembechler's 21 seasons at U of M, he won a school-record 194 games against 48 losses and five ties. His Wolverines won or shared 13 Big Ten titles.

Schembechler served as Michigan's athletic director from 1988 to '90 and was the Detroit Tigers' president from 1990 to '92, the year Millie died of adrenal cancer. He said the Tigers' job was more stressful than coaching at Michigan.

Schembechler led a drive to fund the Millie Schembechler position of professor of adrenal cancer at U of M, and he eventually remarried.

He had a couple of heart-flutter episodes in the 1990s. His wife, Cathy, once had to rush him to a hospital because his heart rate had dropped too low.

A Smashing Success

Opening day at the Chelsea Farmers' Market in the spring was a success. Among the faces in the crowd was new vendor Landon Hawker of Eye of the Beholder in Glass. He has been hand-blowing glass for three years. He sold almost all of his vases in the first day. The Chelsea Farmers' Market is open every Saturday through October in the municipal lot off Park Street.

engine. Not only will replacing a dirty air filter save gas, but it will also protect your engine.

• Tire inflation — "There are huge numbers of us driving on underinflated tires, and it's costing us severely," said Sundstrom. You can improve your gas mileage by around 3.3 percent by keeping your tires inflated to the proper pressure.

Underinflated tires can lower gas mileage by 0.4 percent for every 1 pound-per-square-inch drop in pressure of all four tires. Plus, tires last longer when properly inflated.

• Open windows and air conditioning both can reduce mileage. Keep windows closed at highway speeds, if possible, and use air conditioning judiciously, especially in stop-and-go conditions, as it puts a drag on your engine.

• Save yourself some cash at the pump by using regular unleaded instead of premium, unless your specifications call for higher-grade fuel. While it's true you will get somewhat better mileage with higher-octane gas, it nowhere near makes up for the difference in cost, said Sundstrom.

• Combining errands into one trip saves time and money. Several short trips taken from a cold start can use twice as much fuel as a longer multipurpose trip covering the same distance when the engine is warm. Trip planning ensures that traveling is done when the engine is warmed-up and efficient.

Aronow joins practice

Dr. Stefanie Aronow has joined Moore Pediatrics & Associates, 13699 Old US-12 in Chelsea. She joins Dr. Scott Moore and registered nurse Andrea Duncan.

Aronow graduated magna cum laude from the University of Michigan, where she also earned her medical degree. She completed a pediatric residency at Rainbow Babies and Children's Hospital in Cleveland, Ohio, which is consistently ranked the best pediatric residency program in the Midwest. She is board certified in pediatric medicine and is a fellow of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

"We are so pleased to have Dr. Aronow join our practice," Moore, who started Moore Pediatrics & Associates in 2005, said in a prepared statement. "At the rate we have been growing, we would have faced a tough decision in the next 12 months whether to close the practice to new patients. Becoming a two-physician practice will allow us to add families to the practice without compromising the time and attention we like to give our patients.

"We feel fortunate to bring someone with Dr. Aronow's skill and knowledge into the practice."

Moore Pediatrics & Associates provides general pediatric care from birth to 18 years for families in western Washtenaw County and Jackson County.

Currently, Moore has privileges at St Joseph Mercy Hospital, C.S. Mott Children's Hospital at the University of Michigan and Chelsea Community Hospital.

4. Variable Fee.

Any expenses incurred by the Township not generally shared by all other applicants with respect to processing and administering a license shall be paid by the applicant and/or licensee. Failure to pay those sums within sixty (60) days of the date of invoice shall be grounds to deny the application or revoke the license.

6.02 Webster Township Planning Commission

1. Preliminary Review.

The Zoning Inspector shall review the application and submit a report to the Planning Commission: (i) Determine whether the application is complete, correct, dated and signed; (ii) Determine whether the proposed Based Occupation is intended to be conducted on property zoned Agriculture District (A-1) on a parcel two (2) acres or larger; (iii) Not more than 20% of the area of the principal residence is proposed to be used in the activity; and (iv) Not more than two (2) non-resident (family or non-family) employees are listed on the application.

2. Notice.

At least fourteen (14) days before the Planning Commission considers the application, the Township shall mail a copy of the application, together with a notice of hearing, to each property owner within a 300 foot radius from the property line. The Township may rely on the assessor's records for the name and address of the property owner. The notice shall state the date, time and place of the hearing and state that any persons may appear before the Planning Commission concerning this matter. A copy of the notice shall be mailed to the applicant.

3. Hearing.

A. The activity will not adversely affect the quiet, peaceful, attractive enjoyment of those who reside in the vicinity of the property.

B. The property is zoned Agriculture District (A-1) and is two (2) acres or larger.

C. The activity will not adversely affect the agricultural or rural residential character of the area.

D. The activity will not take up more than 20% of the total area of the principal residence on the property.

E. The activity will not adversely affect the health, safety and general welfare of the public.

In applying the standard the Planning Commission shall consider the appropriateness of the proposed activity to the particular location; the type and condition of roads; sight distances; type, size and quality of vehicles associated with the activity; setbacks and buffer distances; proximity to residential uses, and other uses, such as the keeping of horses and livestock; road easements, rights-of-way, lakes and ponds; and the square footage of accessory buildings intended to be used in conjunction with the Home Based Occupation.

The burden is on the applicant to provide information, data, and documentation to show that each standard is met. Failure to sustain the burden as to any standard is a basis for denial of the application.

5. Conditions.

The following conditions shall apply to a Licensed Home Based Occupation:

A. The use of the dwelling unit and/or accessory structure for a Licensed Home Based Occupation shall be clearly incidental and subordinate to its residential use. The total floor area used by the Licensed Home Based Occupation, excluding any proposed accessory buildings, shall not exceed 20 percent of the floor area of the dwelling unit.

B. The Licensed Home Based Occupation shall be conducted within the dwelling unit and/or accessory structure.

C. There shall be no change in the outside appearance of the structure or premises, or other visible evidence of the Licensed Home Based Occupation; and no external or internal alterations not customary to a residential structure or the agricultural area.

E. No equipment or process associated with the occupation shall create noise, vibration, glare, fumes, odor, or visual or audio electrical interference beyond the property.

G. Only one (1) non-illuminating sign, no larger than 3 feet by 3 feet affixed to a post placed outside the road right-of-way is permitted.

H. Parking spaces for no more than two (2) non-resident employees and two (2) customer vehicles shall be provided on the property. The spaces shall not be located in the area between the front of the dwelling unit and the street, and, where possible, located so as not to be visible from a neighboring dwelling.

I. In addition to the two (2) non-resident employee vehicles, no more than two customer/delivery vehicles may be present on the site at one time. In no event shall more than four (4) vehicles be placed outside at any one time. All vehicles and equipment used in the activity must be services and stored inside an approved accessory structure.

J. The location of the Licensed Home Based Occupation shall be the principal residence of the owner of the business.

K. The scope and character of manufacturing and warehousing activities customarily located in districts dedicated to those uses are prohibited.

L. No exterior storage, parking or standing of equipment. No exterior storage of materials or refuse associated with the business. Storage of equipment or materials must be within the primary residence or an approved accessory structure.

M. No more than two (2) vehicles or boats may be on the property for repair, restoration, or body work at any one time and than only in a completely enclosed structure.

N. Hours of operation shall be such as to not disturb persons residing in the vicinity of the occupation, or as set by the Planning Commission.

O. The license is non transferable.

P. Such other and further conditions to ensure that the standards are maintained.

6. Decision.

The decision of the Planning Commission shall be based on the record made before the Planning Commission. The Planning Commission may deny, grant or grant with conditions the license with or without variances. The conditions imposed and variances granted shall be specified in the minutes of the meeting.

7. Webster Township Zoning Inspector.

Upon direction of the Planning Commission, the Zoning Inspector shall issue licenses, assist in the administration of this Ordinance, inspect properties, annually renew licenses, and issue notices of violations and citations.

8. License Form.

Upon the direction of the Planning Commission, the Zoning Inspector shall issue a license. The license shall be signed and dated by the Zoning Inspector and a duplicate original sent to the applicant. The license shall state the address upon which the Home Based Occupation is authorized to be conducted, the nature of the occupation authorized, conditions imposed and variances granted.

The following shall be printed on the license:

The authorization herein granted is subject to the Township's right to inspect the Property and conditioned upon the applicant(s) strict adherence to the terms and provisions of the license, Webster Township Licensed Home Based Occupation Ordinance, and other applicable ordinances, rules and regulations.

9. Inspections.

The issuance of a license authorizes the Zoning Inspector or other duly authorized representative of the Township to enter upon the property at reasonable times to inspect the premises to ensure compliance with this Ordinance and conditions set forth in the license.

10. Term and Renewal.

A. Automatic Annual Renewal. The term of a license shall be one year and shall annually automatically renew, provided no complaints have been submitted during the preceding year and an exterior visual inspection of the property reveals no violation of this Ordinance or a condition of the license.

B. Contested Renewal. Licenses for which a complaint has been filed or a violation observed or suspected shall be referred to the Planning Commission. The Planning Commission may authorize the Zoning Inspector to renew the license; renew the license with additional conditions, including the posting of a bond or irrevocable letter of credit in an amount sufficient to cover the Township's actual costs and expenses related to the license; or provide notice to the applicant and conduct a hearing to decide whether to renew the license. The decision of the Planning Commission shall be in writing, state the facts of record relied upon, its analysis based on the standards and conditions imposed, and its conclusion.

11. Reapplication.

If an application or the renewal of a license is denied, a reapplication for the property shall not be filed for one year from the date the decision was rendered.

SECTION 7. VARIANCE

7.01 Authority.

The Planning Commission may grant a variance to any condition set forth under Subsection 6.02 (5) and Section 4.07 of this Ordinance which is not contrary to the spirit and intent of this Ordinance.

7.02 Procedure.

A. An application for a license shall specify what, if any, variance from a condition specified in Subsection 6.02 (5) and Section 4.07 is requested, state the reason for the variance, and the effect it would have on the standards in Subsection 6.02 (4).

B. The request for a variance shall be considered by the Planning Commission at the hearing on the application.

7.03 Standard.

A variance may be granted, provided it results in the quiet, attractive and peaceful enjoyment of one's property and does not disturb the quiet repose and enjoyment of neighbors, adversely affect the intended character of the area, or pose a threat to public health, safety and general welfare.

7.04 Conditions.

The Planning Commission may impose such conditions as it deems necessary to ensure that the standard is maintained, to include (but not limited to) the posting of financial guarantees.

7.05 Webster Township Zoning Ordinance.

Nothing contained in this Ordinance is intended to alleviate any requirement or standard in the Webster Township Zoning Ordinance, to include (but not limited to) the procedures and standards for granting a zoning variance.

7.06 Term.

Variances granted under this Ordinance shall not run with the land and, unless sooner terminated, terminate with the license.

SECTION 8. ADMINISTRATIVE STANDARD

Whenever, in the course of the administration and enforcement of this Ordinance, it is necessary or desirable to make any administrative decision, then, unless other standards are provided in this Ordinance, the decision shall be made so that the result will not be contrary to the spirit and purpose of this Ordinance, injurious to the surrounding neighborhood, or contrary to the intended character of the area.

SECTION 9. VIOLATION

9.01 Revocation Proceedings.

In the event a complaint is filed or a violation of this Ordinance or a condition of the license is alleged, the Township may issue a notice of violation to the licensee which sets forth the nature of the complaint or violation and the date and time upon which the licensee is requested to appear before the Planning Commission. The licensee shall be given an opportunity to respond to the allegations and present testimony and documents on their behalf. The Planning Commission shall render a written decision based on the record made at the hearing.

9.02 Municipal Civil Infraction.

Additionally, any person, firm, corporation, or any other organization which violates, disobeys, omits, neglects or refuses to comply with, or resists the enforcement of any provision of this Ordinance or a provision of a license issued pursuant to this Ordinance shall be responsible for a municipal civil infraction. The minimum fine for each violation shall be $100.00 up to a maximum fine of $500.00. Each day after a citation has been issued shall be deemed a separate civil infraction.

9.03 Nuisance Per Se.

A violation of a provision of this Ordinance or a condition of a license is a nuisance per se. The court shall order the nuisance abated and the owner and/or person in control of the property and/or Licensed Home Based Occupation liable for maintaining a nuisance per se.

SECTION 10. SEVERABILITY

This Ordinance and its various parts, sections, subsections, phrases and clauses are severable. If any part, sentence, paragraph, section, subsection, phrase or clause is adjudged unconstitutional or invalid, it is hereby provided that the remainder of this Ordinance, its parts, sections, subsections, phrases, sentences and clauses are intended to be valid, irrespective of the fact that any one or more parts, sections, subsections, phrases, sentences or clauses be declared invalid.

SECTION 11. RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER LAWS

The provisions of this Ordinance shall be held to be minimum requirements for the promotion of public health, moral, safety, comfort, convenience, or general welfare. This Ordinance is not intended to repeal, abrogate, annul or in any way impair or interfere with any existing provision of law or ordinance, or with any rules, regulations, or permits previously adopted, or issued, or which shall be adopted or issued pursuant to the law relating to the use of premises described herein; provided, however, that if this Ordinance imposes a greater restriction than is required by existing ordinances or rules, regulations, or permits, the provisions of this Ordinance shall control.

SECTION 12. REPEALER

The provisions of this Ordinance shall be held to be minimum requirements for the promotion of public health, moral, safety, comfort, convenience, or general welfare. This Ordinance is not intended to repeal, abrogate, annul or in any way effect the imposition of a higher standard imposed by other statutes, ordinances, rules or regulations.

SECTION 13. PUBLICATION AND EFFECTIVE DATE

Publication of this Ordinance shall be made within thirty (30) days after passage by publication of a true copy once in a newspaper having general circulation in the Township and shall take effect thirty (30) days after publication. Exercise lifts cancer patients physically and emotionally

By Jeannine Stein
Los Angeles Times

Among the growing list of people who can benefit from exercise, add another group: cancer patients in the midst of radiation treatment.

A new study has found that women and men undergoing radiation for breast and prostate cancer felt less fatigued, had improved quality of life and missed fewer treatment sessions when they engaged in a six-week routine of moderate exercise.

"To have their fatigue dissipate was really great," says Karen Mustian, assistant professor of radiation oncology at the University of Rochester School of Medicine, who presented the 2005 study this month at the annual meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology. Fatigue is not only a common side effect of radiation treatment, but can get worse as treatment continues, she says.

The study included 39 sedentary men and women who were undergoing radiation therapy for cancer. Half were encouraged to engage in a daily program that included moderate walking and conditioning workouts using elastic bands. The other half were assigned to a control group that did no exercise. At the start and end of the study, as well as three months later, participants filled out surveys rating their levels of energy and strength.

The control group reported higher levels of fatigue as the study progressed, and showed a decline in muscle strength. But the exercise group showed significant improvement. They were able to walk farther and faster as time went by and do routine daily activities without problems. Some of the participants even exceeded the 10,000 steps a day recommended for adults by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Mustian doesn't advocate that all cancer patients undergoing radiation follow this program, but she does encourage them to speak to their oncologists about what exercise, if any, they can do.

Overweight kids face bone and joint risks

Chalk up another risk for obese kids. Children and adolescents who are overweight are more likely than their normal weight counterparts to suffer bone fractures and have joint and muscle pains, according to a study conducted at the National Institutes of Health. The researchers also found that the overweight youth in the study were more likely than nonoverweight youth to develop changes in the knee joint that make movement more difficult. The study appeared in the journal Pediatrics. AWARENESS

Fireworks spark danger

More than 6,000 people spent their July Fourth holiday weekend in the hospital emergency room in 2004 due to accidents caused by fireworks, says the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission. Forty percent of all fireworks injuries are to those ages 15 and younger, with most injuries to the hands and fingers. The experts at Prevent Blindness America advise keeping your distance from fireworks. If someone's eye is injured in a fireworks accident and there are specks in the eye, do not rub the eye; instead, let tears wash out specks or particles. If the eye or eyelid is cut or punctured, bandage tightly and see a doctor or go to the emergency room immediately. For a free copy of the Safe Summer Celebrations brochure or more tips on fireworks safety, call (800) 331-2020 or log onto www.preventblindness.org.

WHAT THEY SAY ABOUT ...

Snacking

Stop feeling guilty about snacking, says the summer issue of the publication My Family Doctor. Snacks are actually a good thing, if you follow guidelines:

- Eat two to three snacks a day. It can help you combat your cravings, bone up on nutrients and keep your blood sugar steady.
- Eat healthy snacks that aren't calorie-rich. That means 100 to 200 calories. Choose something that contains carbohydrates, protein, fiber, good fats, vitamins and minerals.
- Plan snacks ahead of time. Bring snacks with you to work, and keep only healthy snacks in the house. You'll eat what's there, instead of visiting the vending machine or chowing down on sugary, sweet treats.
- Listen to your body. Learn what your body feels like when it's hungry, and don't deprive it, or you're more likely to binge during your next meal. Likewise, stop eating when you're full.

Featurettes

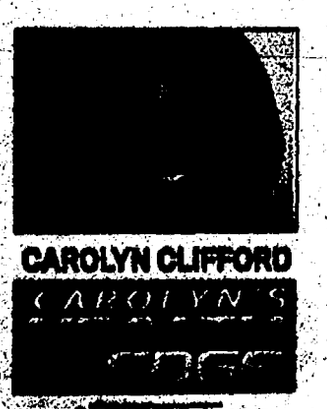

A combo dish such as a salad is a perfect snack for getting a variety of nutrients for a low number of calories.

WAYS TO TREAT INSECT BITES

Insects invade our picnics, gather around our gardens and then nibble on our bare skin. That can mean painful stings and itchy bites. The sooner you act, the more likely you are to minimize the discomfort.

It's always best to try to avoid bites and stings with repellents and protective clothing, because insects are not only annoying, they can also carry disease. But if you are bitten or stung, here are seven ways to treat it:

1. Gently scrape out the stinger if your attacker is a bee. Don't pull or squeeze the stinger. That will just release more venom. Yellow jackets, wasps and hornets don't lose their stingers.

CAROLYN CLIFFORD

2. Clean the area with soapy water. Do this before you apply anything to the bite.

3. Use a cold compress on the area. Apply it as soon as possible after the sting and hold it on the site for 15 to 20 minutes. Don't put ice directly on your skin.

4. Apply hydrocortisone cream to the infected area. This should help reduce pain and redness.

5. Take aspirin or acetaminophen for the pain.

6. Take an antihistamine such as Benedryl for itching and swelling.

7. If you are stung in the mouth or on the tongue, get medical help fast. Swelling can close your airway.

Don't let PMS bring you down

Fight symptoms with diet, exercise and medications

STORIES BY ALEXA STANARD
Special to The Detroit News

Lari Start used to get so emotional before her period that she would be overwhelmed by buying a greeting card, lay awake at night worrying about a stray cat and weep to country songs on her drive to work.

"Looking back, I'm shocked it took me so long to realize that everybody's not like this," says Start, 39, of Pinckney. "All the women in my family have always had very intense PMS. I didn't know that wasn't normal."

Though Start's symptoms were more severe than most women's, about 40 percent experience some form of premenstrual syndrome, according to the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

Experts say many women resign themselves to suffering through "that time of the month," believing PMS is an inevitable part of life. But a variety of dietary and lifestyle changes can bring real relief to women with mild to moderate symptoms, while medication often eases more severe forms.

What is PMS?

On top of physical symptoms such as bloating, headaches, fatigue, food cravings, acne, insomnia, weight gain and joint pain, many women suffer irritability, anxiety and mood swings in the days leading up to their period.

"If I could lie in bed that whole week, I would," says Joann Mackey, 32, of Macomb Township. "I get so tired, I feel down. All I want is to be by myself. Having PMS is basically like being on an emotional roller coaster."

While the symptoms of PMS are well-defined, their root cause is not.

"Usually when we don't understand what causes symptoms, we call it a syndrome," says Dr. William Keye, director of the division of reproductive endocrinology and infertility at Beaumont Hospital. "As we become more sophisticated, we usually can separate out from that syndrome unique and specific diseases. We're not quite there yet with PMS."

Keye began researching PMS in 1982. He discovered that hormone levels of women suffering from a severe form of PMS called premenstrual dysphoric disorder (PMDD) were indistinguishable from those who did not.

"It turns out the women had normal hormone levels, but their bodies reacted abnormally," Keye says.

PMS tends to peak in a woman's 30s and 40s, often worsening after she has children. Symptoms can occur from 10 to 14 days prior and three days into a woman's period, though one week prior is typical, says Dr. Sheila Marcus of the University of Michigan Depression Center.

A woman who experiences recurring episodes of physical or emotional symptoms so severe they impair her ability to function at work or in her relationships may be suffering from PMDD, and should seek a medical evaluation, Keye says.

Evaluation sometimes needs to be a coordinated effort between a woman's gynecologist, an internist and a psychiatrist, he says, in order to determine whether a woman's symptoms are truly caused by PMS and not by another disorder with similar symptoms.

Getting relief

For those with mild to moderate symptoms, there are simple, inexpensive ways to get relief.

The first step, experts say, is to keep a daily log of one's emotional and physical symptoms.

"Keeping a calendar helps women not only see if symptoms are due to their periods, but helps quantify their symptoms and let

Symptoms

PMS often includes physical and emotional symptoms, which vary from one woman to another. If you think you have PMS, track your symptoms on a calendar for several menstrual cycles to note which ones occur on certain days and their severity. If you seek medical care, this kind of record is helpful. According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, common symptoms are:

- Breast swelling and tenderness
- Fatigue
- Trouble sleeping
- Upset stomach, bloating, constipation or diarrhea
- Headache
- Appetite changes or food cravings
- Joint or muscle pain
- Tension, irritability, mood swings or crying spells
- Anxiety or depression
- Trouble concentrating or remembering
- Weight gain

A severe form of PMS is premenstrual dysphoric disorder (PMDD). According to the American Psychiatric Association, a woman must have at least five of the typical symptoms of PMS in order to be diagnosed with PMDD. The main symptoms of PMDD are mood-related, such as depression, anxiety, tension and persistent anger or irritability. If you're experiencing such symptoms and they are interfering with your relationships and/or normal activities, seek medical advice.

Dr. Sheila Marcus advises women with physical or emotional problems from PMS to be medically evaluated.

their doctor see if it's all month long. It's a very helpful tool," says Dr. Elizabeth Kobe, an obstetrician/gynecologist with St. Joseph Healthcare.

Tracking symptoms can also help women plan ahead for times when they know they won't feel in top form.

"If you know that that week before your period you may not feel up to some task, structure your life so you don't have some huge undertaking at that time," Keye says.

Charting also reminds women that their emotional symptoms are due to their period and that they'll feel better in a couple of days, Kobe says.

For Mackey, realizing that the intense anxiety she experiences every month is PMS-related has helped her control it.

"I'll lie down at night, and it feels like my heart is popping out of my chest," she says. After tracking her symptoms, she read a book on coping with anxiety. "Now instead of flipping out and thinking I'm having a heart attack, I understand where this is coming from. When the symptoms come on, I lie down and slow down my breathing. I listen to soothing tapes.

"If you can talk yourself out of those symptoms and learn to master that, it's the best thing in the world because once your mind gets going, it just snowballs," Mackey says.

Once a woman has tracked her symptoms, a combination of diet and lifestyle changes can help relieve them. Each woman is different, Keye says, and will likely need to experiment to find what works for her.

Getting adequate sleep and exercise usually helps, experts say.

"Exercise is clearly one of the antidotes to premenstrual symptoms," Marcus says. "And maintaining sleep — sleep deprivation is one of the worst things for irritability."

Start, who sought help for her symptoms from Marcus, says it was suggested she stand at the back door with her running shoes on when her husband comes home, just to get the feelings out of her system. "It's made a huge difference in my life," she says.

Reducing consumption of alcohol, caffeine and refined sugar, which affect mood and energy levels, in the days before one's period often helps. So does getting adequate calcium and folic acid. Reducing salt intake decreases bloating and headaches.

Over-the-counter medicines can relieve muscle aches, bloating and headaches, while relaxation techniques such as meditation, deep breathing, massage and yoga can help lower anxiety and stress.

For women whose symptoms are severe enough that diet and lifestyle changes aren't sufficient, low doses of antidepressants taken 10 to 14 days before their period begins can be highly effective. Though antidepressants typically require four to six weeks to take effect, for women with PMDD, the medication works the first cycle it's taken, Marcus says.

Lari Start began taking Zoloft for her PMDD, and as a result, she says, "I stayed myself, I didn't turn into this horrible person."

"If women have moderate to severe PMS, they begin over time to not trust themselves, they lose self-confidence and withdraw socially — it can have a negative impact on every aspect of their life," Keye says. "The women I've studied who got treatment say it was one of the most important things they did. The diagnosis validated their experience, and they felt better about themselves."

Start says her experience has made her vocal about encouraging other women to get help.

"Before, I'd look at the calendar, and it would be like preparing for an evil stepsister to show up in your life. And there was nothing I could do about it," she says. "I can't even explain what a huge difference getting treatment made, not just to me but to my family.

"This is such a simple thing to treat," she adds. "Even if it's just one week a month, over the course of a year, that's three months. Why would you want to be a stranger in your own body for three months of the year?"

Finding relief

Changes to your diet, exercise and schedule can help you get through the days before your period as smoothly as possible. No treatment has been found that works for everyone, and it may take time to find what works for you. Your doctor can help you find the right treatment.

Here are tips for easing symptoms of PMS. If you aren't up for doing them all month long, then try on the days when you experience symptoms.

- Cut back on refined sugar, which can cause irritability.
- Avoid salt to reduce bloating and headaches.
- Cut back on caffeine, including chocolate, to feel less irritable and to ease breast soreness.
- Cut out alcohol. Drinking before your period can make you feel more depressed.
- Get regular aerobic exercise. Aim for 30 minutes, four to six times a week.
- Get about eight hours of sleep a night.
- Avoid scheduling stressful events for the week before your period.
- Take a daily supplement that provides 1,000 mg of calcium each day with vitamin D, and a multivitamin that includes 400 micrograms of folic acid.
- Over-the-counter diuretics and pain relievers can help. Some brand names that target PMS symptoms specifically include Midol, Pamprin and Premsyn PMS.

Coffee is good? Why yes, I'll take it then

By Melissa Healy
Los Angeles Times

Caffeine has long been known to make the heart beat faster, the muscles work harder and the brain focus better. But a new study suggests that it also makes us more open to persuasion when confronted with a point of view that is logical and well-argued.

At the University of Queensland in Australia, researchers ascertained the positions of 148 people on the subject of voluntary euthanasia, then asked each participant to read a position paper that ran counter to his or her beliefs. Before reading the papers, however, half drank orange juice containing the equivalent jolt of two cups of coffee, and half drank plain orange juice.

The results: Compared with subjects who had downed the unfortified juice, the subjects who drank the juiced-up orange drink understood and remembered the counter-arguments better and were more in agreement with those arguments. What's more, their changed views were unlikely to revert to earlier beliefs later on, when they were asked to read position papers consistent with their original viewpoints.

Pearl Martin, the social psychologist who oversaw the experiments, said subjects hopped up on caffeine paid better attention to well-made arguments and thus appeared better disposed to their logic.

But the nation's taste for caffeinated drinks should not make us a nation of dupes. "Our research findings suggest that it increases peoples' ability to correctly evaluate the merits of a particular argument," said Martin, speaking of caffeine's effects.
