

Pros and cons of shopping with plastic

Meetings with friends and family are staples of the holiday season.

But those aren't the only reunions during the holiday season. Creditors and credit card holders typically get together during the holiday season as well. And while some of those reunions are happy ones, others can turn disastrous.

Shoppers who aren't careful can quickly find themselves with finance charges that equal or exceed what they spent in the first place.

While many shoppers feel as if they won't make it through the holiday season without piling up debt, it's important shoppers remember they need to make it through the months of January, February, March, April, etc., as well.

Before swiping your credit or debit card at the nearest cash register, it's best to understand the differences between these two forms of plastic:

Credit cards

Credit cards are issued by banks or a business and allow you to make purchases on a line of credit. You'll be offered a pre-set spending limit based on your financial standing.

In essence, credit cards offer you a short-term loan that must be paid back in full the next month or else a high interest rate is imposed.

Charge cards do not allow cardholders to carry a balance, and must be paid back in full immediately.

Debit cards

Debit cards are issued strictly by the bank, and offer a direct link to an individual's checking account.

When a purchase is made, it is deducted from that account. Using a debit card is the same as paying with a check, just without the hassle of paperwork or waiting on lines while people write out checks.

While every family or group of friends likely has one person with Both credit and debit cards often carry hidden fees with them. These fees charge or deduct money from an account simply for making a purchase.

Knowing these fees and limiting how much they are charged is essential to keeping bills low come January. Credit cards also impose hefty interest rates if purchases are not paid back in a timely manner. Look for cards with lower rates, or pay as much toward your credit card balance as possible come bill time.

a horror story or two pertaining to holiday credit debt, there are pros and cons to using both credit cards and debit cards during the holidays. Some of the benefits include:

- Available funds — Credit cards provide easy money, allowing shoppers to make it to holiday gatherings or to purchase last-minute gifts.

- Setting aside larger purchases solely for a credit card can help you better keep track of how much you have spent and can make the stress of planning your travel schedule easier.

Meijer brings together new local specialties with product line

With such diverse delicacies as handcrafted sparkling lemonade from an original family recipe in France, to cocoa sourced from a Pacific Northwest family known for producing luscious chocolate recipes, Meijer's new premium private label brand features singular products that all have a unique story to tell.

The new Meijer Gold products offer unexpected and indulgent discoveries at affordable prices. But what makes the brand unique is its collection of original recipe items that are either made by a local company within the Meijer footprint, or by a family-owned business. The line also features interesting foods Meijer. "But we also want to offer them products that they won't find anywhere else, and that's exactly what Meijer Gold offers. We've traveled the globe and looked in small towns to source premium products that have a distinctive history, heritage story."

Each one of the products in the Meijer Gold line has a tale to tell. For instance, the brand's mustard is prepared from munities, businesses and families.

A sampling of some of the unique products that fall under the Meijer Gold brand include Champagne Dill Mustard, Sugar-Free Maple-Praline Syrup, Grilled Pineapple Chipotle Salsa, Smokey Mozzarella Cheese Spread, Porcini Truffle Tortellini, Crab Puff Pastries, Biscotti Munch Chocolate Caramel Cookies and Michigan Apple Cheesecake.

The high-quality line is supported by premium packaging, which highlights both the flavor and 'golden' aspect of the brand. Along with a recognizable gold seal and appetizing imagery, each package tells the compelling story of the product's origin, allowing consumers to feel as if they are sharing in someone's family traditions.

Originally launched in 2005, Meijer Gold served to provide a premium version of everyday items. This new approach to the Meijer Gold brand is a result of Meijer's desire to deepen its commitment and connection to regionally sourced foods, family-run businesses and authentic and distinctive recipes.

"Meijer Gold allows consumers to add a touch of flair to their everyday cuisine," said Fischer. "The brand's distinctive products and flavor cues will turn an ordinary meal into a premium experience that will blow customers away without blowing their grocery budgets."

"Meijer customers have great taste, and it's our job to keep providing them with great-tasting food items but we also want to offer them products that they won't find anywhere else, and that's exactly what Meijer Gold offers."

Debit cards will provide a quick link to your checking account, and can make purchases faster than using a paper check.

• Sense of security — Credit cards offer far more security for your purchases than simply paying with cash.

Also, items purchased with credit or debit cards can make returning or exchanging gifts a far smoother process.

Typically, purchases made with credit cards are completely protected, meaning a lost or stolen purchase, while unfortunate, can be replaced at no cost to the consumer.

• Hidden benefits — Many times credit card companies offer incentive programs such as airline miles and other discounts with each purchase, giving consumers more for their money and mitigating future interest payments.

But just like there are two sides to every coin, there is also a dark side to relying solely on credit or debit cards when holiday shopping. Some of those disadvantages include:

• Fees — Both credit and debit cards often carry hidden fees with them.

These fees charge or deduct money from an account simply for making a purchase. Knowing these fees and limiting how much they are charged is essential to keeping bills low come January. Credit cards also impose hefty interest rates if purchases are not paid back in a timely manner.

Look for cards with lower rates, or pay as much toward your credit card balance as possible come bill time.

• Going over budget — Credit cards can offer consumers a false sense of security, making most believe they have more money readily available to them than they actually do.

At a time as emotional as the holidays and in a year when many people learned the hard way about financing more than they could afford, overspending can prove especially dangerous.

• Non-fixed interest rates — Credit card companies can change interest rates on a whim, and without an account holder's approval. Just because an interest rate is affordable today does not mean it will be tomorrow.

• Identity theft

— Identity theft protection has made leaps and bounds since the salad days of Internet shopping, but shopping extensively with a credit or debit card, particularly online, is still risky.

Hackers can steal personal information from shoppers who use plastic to make purchases online. Keep track of purchases and cross-check statements to monitor unauthorized purchases.

And, if cards are stolen, notify the relevant bank and credit card companies at once.

Typically, purchases made with credit cards are completely protected, meaning a lost or stolen purchase, while unfortunate, can be replaced at no cost to the consumer.

Creativity at the core of holiday gift giving

With the holidays upon us once again, the endless and often exhausting search for the perfect gift has no doubt returned as well. And just like shoppers can rely on long lines at the mall and crowded parking lots, they can also count on that one friend or family member on their holiday shopping list who seemingly has it all, making them nearly impossible to shop for.

Though there's little shoppers can do when it comes to long lines at the mall or crowded parking lots, fortunately there are steps shoppers can take to make even the most difficult person on their list a cinch to shop for.

Avoid the mall

Someone who already has everything likely has seen or purchased all that the mall has to offer, so shoppers can avoid the stress of the nearby mall by looking elsewhere for gifts.

Get creative

Creativity is often at the core of the perfect and thoughtful gift. Such was the case when Jera Deal, a mother of three and a school mother for her daughter Julianna's preschool class, found herself hunting for the ideal gift to give Julianna's teacher for her wedding.

Hoping to go beyond the gifts listed in the registry, Deal decided to turn a playful game she and her family enjoyed while walking in the park into a creative gift idea.

To aid in their children's alphabet lessons, Deal, her husband, Brad, and their three girls began "letter hunting" on walks in the park, looking for different "letters" in nature (sticks) and architecture (stones). For each letter they found, they would take a photograph, soon collecting the entire alphabet.

While the game initially started as a playful and creative way to help her daughters learn the alphabet, Deal turned that game into an ideal gift for her daughter's teacher, custom framing the letters from her now extensive library to spell out the teacher's new last name.

"It was a gift from the class, so I knew it had to be really special and really unique, and something that she would never forget where it came from," said Deal.

The gift proved to be just that, and the Deals soon discovered their idea that started as a game with their kids was also a perfect means to giving a thoughtful, unique and creative gift. In less than three years, Sticks and Stones grew from a thoughtful idea for a teacher's wedding gift into a successful business with some rather renowned clientele.

Featured on "The Rachael Ray Show," "The Martha Stewart Show," and in "People" magazine among others, Sticks and Stones offers an extensive gallery of letters in both nature and architecture. Shoppers can choose which letters to use, ensuring no two creations will ever be the same.

Simple gadgets make for stress-free holiday fun

Gathering with friends, neighbors and family is one of the great joys of the holiday season. But for many of us who are time-strapped, on a tight budget and racing against the clock to decorate, gift shop and cook, hosting a holiday party can seem daunting.

To keep spirits and energy levels high, consider inviting guests to a more relaxed and less-traditional holiday gathering that lets you have as much fun as everyone else.

Holiday Brunch

A morning gathering is a great setting for showcasing your favorite home-made recipes while keeping the occasion casual and stress-free. Many breakfast foods are easy to make, economical and perfect for entertaining, since most dishes can be prepped or prepared completely in advance.

Hearty egg dishes are the cornerstone of a filling breakfast, and Paula Deen's 9-inch Stoneware Quiche Pan is perfect for oven-baked vegetable, ham and cheese quiches, egg-rich casseroles and stratas.

Designed for oven, microwave, refrigerator and freezer use, this versatile pan allows you to prep dishes the night before and take them straight from the fridge to the oven and table.

Homemade waffles, pancakes and crepes are favorite treats for morning gatherings, and guests — especially kids — can join in the fun of mixing the batter.

Add a seasonal touch to recipes by adding pureed pumpkin and a hint of cinnamon and nutmeg. To make prep work attractive and mess-free, the Paula Deen Stoneware Batter Bowl, featuring a hand-thrown pottery look that warms up any kitchen, is generously proportioned and has a drip-free pouring spout. Incorporate ingredients in the batter bowl easily with the new and cleverly designed Rachael Ray Balloon Whisk, which features an easy-grip orange handle that stands upright on counters.

Using fresh, seasonal ingredients, quick breads like cranberry orange or sweet potato and cheddar cheese make welcomed additions to a holiday breakfast. Bake these fragrant, sweet and savory breads as guests arrive using durable loaf pans, such as the Anolon Advanced Bronze Loaf Pan. The pan's bronze-colored nonstick coating ensures every loaf browns evenly and slides out easily for perfect presentation.

For a holiday brunch that's more savory and heartier in flavors, lasagna is a classic crowd-pleaser that can be prepped days in advance, then baked on the day of your gathering. The Rachael Ray Lasagna Lover — a deep stoneware baker, especially designed for this classic pasta dish — is dishwasher, microwave, freezer and oven safe to 500 degrees Fahrenheit. Extra wide handles allow you to get a good grip when removing the amply sized baker from the oven. Top off your delicious main course with a simple dessert of homemade pear cobbler, or fragrant apple crisp prepared in individually proportioned Rachael Ray Bubble & Brown Ramekins.

These miniature stoneware bakers come in multiple colors — orange, yellow, blue, green and chocolate — to give you plenty of options adding vibrant color and style to your table.

Dessert Buffet

Not a morning person? Then consider a post-dinner get-together that skips the entree and makes dessert the main attraction. Invite friends over for a delectable spread of homemade holiday treats, complimented with a tray of freshly brewed coffee, soothing tea, mulled wine and assorted liqueurs. You can present this sweet feast, buffet-style in the kitchen or dining room, and encourage guests to get cozy and comfortable with their plates and drinks in the family room or den.

Classic seasonal desserts like rustic apple, pecan and sweet potato pie, and butter-rich, jam-filled cookies always get raves from holiday revelers. Before starting your oven, be sure your kitchen is well equipped with a few practical baking tools.

When baking, accurate measurements are crucial to a recipe's success. Anolon, a gourmet kitchenware brand offers a durable, dishwasher-safe and attractive measuring spoon set and measuring cup set to ensure that dry and liquid ingredient quantities are always exact for the best results.

Rolling out dough for pies and cookies can be intimidating, especially to novice bakers. Paula Deen makes you a confident baker instantly with her eponymous Paula Deen Pie Board. This richly grained, Acacia wood pie board features engraved 6-inch, 8-inch, 9-inch and 10-inch pie diameter rolling guides, along with an engraved 14-inch ruler on the side of the board for easy size reference.

To make sure your pie glistens, apply a simple egg-white glaze to the top piecrust before baking. The Anolon Advanced Bronze Pastry Brush has easy-clean, silicone bristles and a stylish, translucent bronze handle that's comfortable to grasp.

No holiday celebration would be complete without batches of home-baked cookies. Start with an investment in durable cookie pans, such as the conveniently packaged Circulon Bakeware Set. Each of the three 10-inch by 15-inch, light-colored nonstick cookie pans is designed to fit into all ovens, including smaller wall models. The high-quality, durable nonstick surface -- which due to its light color, will not over-brown cookies -- provides years of stick-free baking and makes for fast and easy cleanup.

If you're cookie decorating skills are less than stellar, you can still wow adults and children alike making sweet treats like gingerbread with the Paula Deen Snowman Mold. This holiday baking mold, which makes 8 picture-perfect edible "snowmen," is crafted from heavy-duty pre-seasoned cast iron for excellent heat retention and browning.

Encourage your guests to sample widely from your dessert buffet by offering smaller portion treats. This can be easily achieved using mini muffin pans, such as the Rachael Ray Oven Lovin' Mini Cups Pan. Bake as many as 24 mini pumpkin cupcakes with delectable orange cream cheese frosting, or use the mini muffin pan to make mini apple and walnut tarts. A portion of the proceeds is donated to Rachael Ray's charity, Yum-ol, which empowers kids and their families to develop healthy food and cooking habits.

When multiple pans of cookies and pies are in the oven simultaneously, it's important not to lose track of time as every minute counts in the art of baking. An easy way to monitor baking times is with the colorful, twist-dial BonJour clip-on timer. This 60-minute timer clips on to your apron so you can move about your house without having to worry about hearing the alarm. For complete versatility, the translucent, retro-style timer can also be propped on a counter or affixed to a magnetic kitchen appliance.

Fondue It

Another low-stress, affordable party theme for the season is gathering friends and family at the table for retro-fun, yet chic, fondue. You can make it a complete meal by starting with a rich cheese and white wine fondue, paired with slices of fresh apples and pears, crusty bread, boiled small potatoes and fresh vegetables, such as carrot and celery sticks. For dessert, return to the table for a decadent dark or milk chocolate fondue spiked with brandy or cognac, and simply accompanied with cubes of store-bought or homemade pound cake.

Look for healthy holiday favorites

Holiday gatherings often revolve around food. Big dinners with the family might get all the attention, but even office parties or casual get-togethers can focus on food. Unfortunately, many of these treats are loaded with fat, sugar and calories. Try these tips to still indulge in the holiday spirit without packing on extra pounds:

- Instead of a cracker with cheese, try a plain reduced fat cracker.
- Instead of Eggnog, try white wine.

- Instead of cocktail meatballs, try boiled shrimp.
- Instead of fruitcake, try dried apricots.
- Instead of a slice of ham, try a slice of turkey without the skin.
- Instead of pumpkin or apple pie, try a slice of angel food cake.
- Instead of a side of stuffing, try a scoop of white or brown rice or mashed potatoes.
- Instead of a piece of fried chicken, try a piece of fish or baked chicken.

MAKES A GREAT STOCKING STUFFER!

Avoid the post-holiday shopping lines

As the holiday season gets set to hit full swing, shopping for gifts is again foremost on the minds of many. However, many of the gifts purchased will face an inevitable fate many gifts before and after them have faced and will face: the return bin.

As much a part of the holiday shopping tradition as long lines and limited parking, returns often require waiting in lines that are even longer than those before the holiday and parking lots that are somehow even more crowded this time around. But there are steps both shoppers and those making gift returns can take to make the process go more smoothly.

Know the return policy

The more generous the return policy, the better the store, particularly when shopping for friends or family you don't see often. Be sure the store allows ample time to return a gift or make a hassle-free exchange. When purchasing online, know what steps must be taken for a return. Some online retailers make buyers liable for the cost of return postage. Others include a pre-posted package for anticipatory returns.

Don't tempt fate

Fraudulent returns cost retailers billions of dollars per year, and many retailers have begun fighting back by targeting those areas that cost them the most, such as electronics. As a result, rules are far more strict for those returns.

Bigger chains might charge a restocking fee for returned big-ticket items, such as opened computers, televisions, etc. Some may also limit the time consumers can make returns, or may only offer returns on purchases made during a specific window of time.

Get a gift receipt

Gift receipts allow a gift recipient to easily return a gift with a receipt featuring a special bar code -- the cost of the items is not included on the gift receipt to maintain confidentiality. Without a receipt, some retailers may only offer an exchange at the current markdown rate, not the original purchase price, greatly diminishing the value of the return.

Don't open anything and keep it tagged

If a return is even remotely a possibility, keep the condition of the item and packaging as close as possible to what they were upon purchase. All foam, bags, tags and packing material should be in place. Anything packaged in hard plastic should not be cut open.

For clothing or fabric items, leave the tags on and try on items without wearing fragrance or makeup. If an item looks worn or ragged, a store may refuse the return.

Don't rest on your laurels

The chance of finding something you like to replace the gift you're returning is greater the sooner you make the return. Returning gifts is now a holiday tradition, so others will also be out there looking for something good.

Go easy on the retail staff

Few professions have it tougher than retail staff during the holiday season. Long, exhausting and stress-filled hours make their jobs quite difficult, and come the end of the season they deserve a break. Be courteous and patient when making returns and keep in mind it's not the staff's fault everyone decided to make returns on the same day.

Let the gift giver know about the return

Gifts were purchased with you in mind, just as you select gifts thinking they'll be perfect for the recipient. Those planning on making a swap or a return should tell the person who bought the gift. But be courteous and wait a day or two. Don't simply open the gift and immediately deem it return-worthy.

Know the ABCs of choosing gifts for teachers

The tradition of giving gifts to teachers during the holiday season is still going strong.

But many parents -- particularly those with children who are new to school -- can be unsure of what kinds of gifts are appropriate and will be most welcomed by their children's teachers.

In some schools, the tradition includes presenting a joint gift from all of the families in a class while, in others, teachers tend to receive gifts from individual families.

While there is no right or wrong to teacher gift-giving, it is always a good idea to check with veteran parents or the principal about the school's policy or preferences.

The key to selecting teachers' gifts that will truly be appreciated is to stay both general and practical.

While many veteran teachers report having received enough apple-themed keepsakes and whimsical desk ornaments to fill a museum, many classrooms from coast to coast lack anything beyond the most basic supplies. As a result, many teachers spend hundreds of their own dollars each year to outfit their classrooms and their students with supplies and instructional aids.

Whether your gift is from one family or many, consider giving something that will enable your child's teacher to choose items for classroom use.

Gift cards from popular general merchandise stores, book sellers, art-supply stores and office-supply retailers are always appreciated and give the teacher a wide array of merchandise to choose from.

Gift cards also offer a great deal of flexibility:

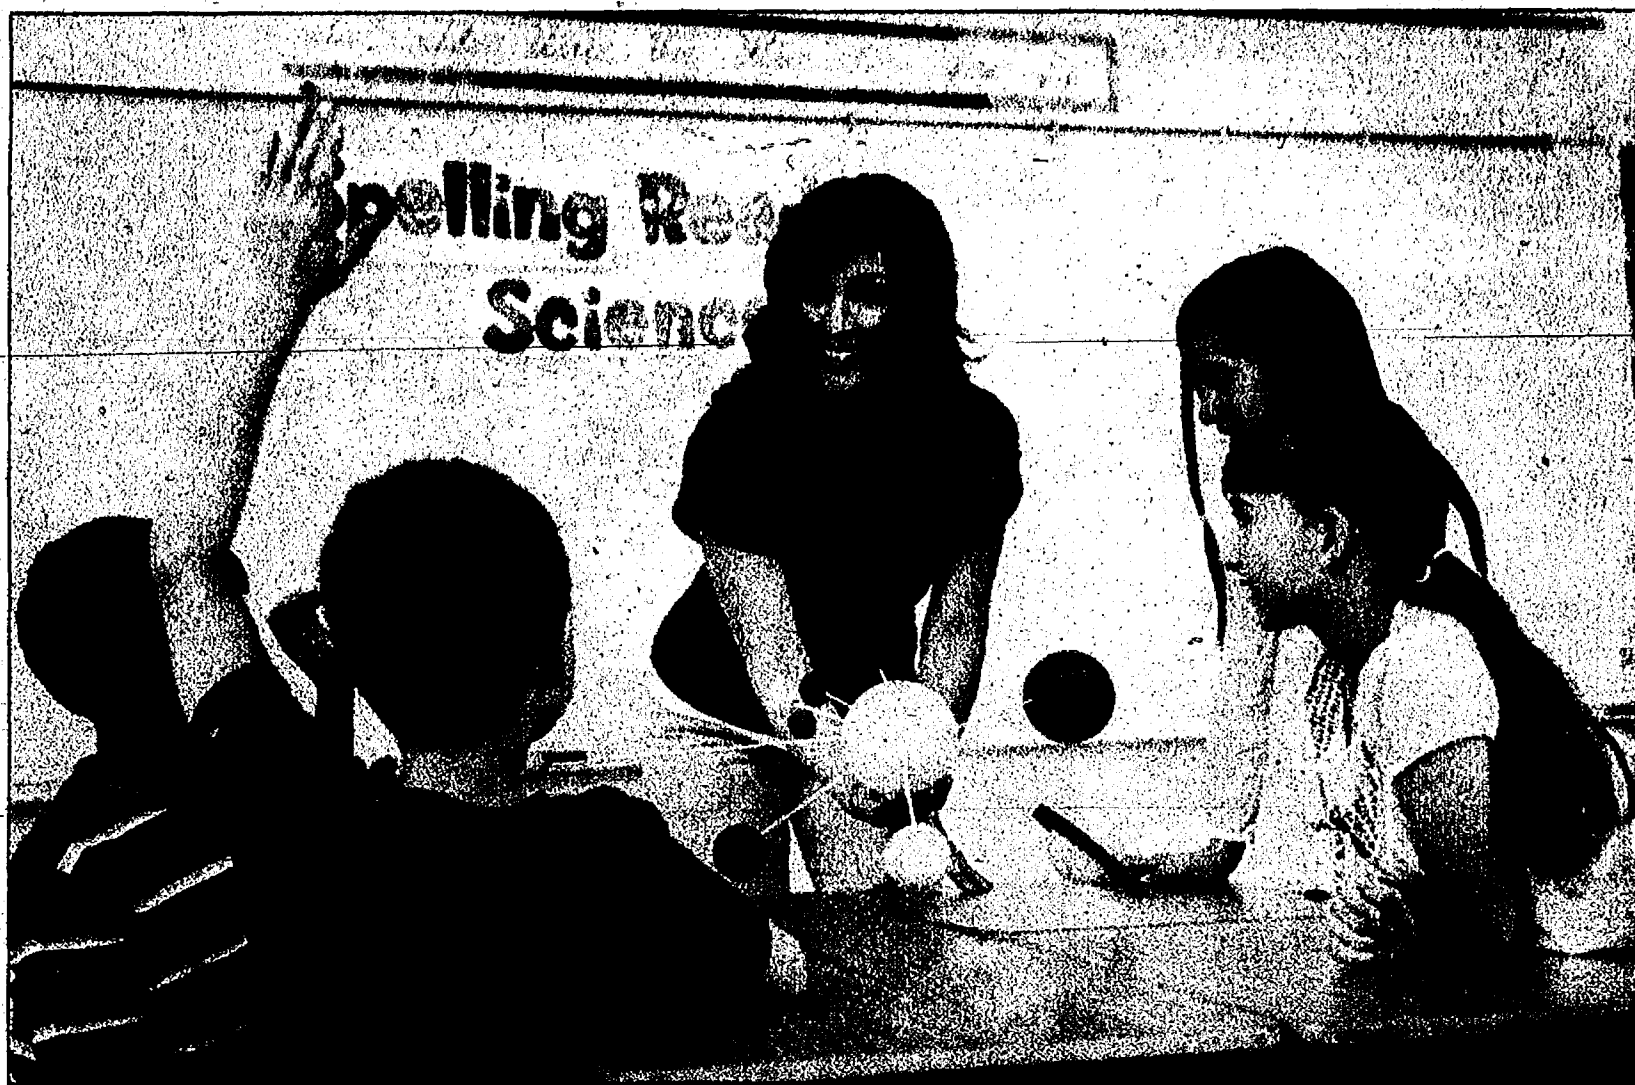

Teachers can spend a portion of the money to buy supplies for the classroom and use the rest for something personal. If your child's school has a SCRIP program, consider giving scrip. Not only will the teacher be thrilled with your gift, it will help earn money for the school as well.

Teachers also love to receive gifts with a homemade touch -- especially when they include something created by their students.

Themed gift baskets are popular choices because a child can add a handmade card or item. For example, a book-themed basket can include a recent bestseller or a gift card for a local bookstore, a book light and a bookmark created by your child.

A baking basket might include a card containing a favorite family recipe (written and decorated by your child), a mason jar tied with a ribbon containing the dry ingredients needed for the recipe, and a wooden spoon, whisk or spatula.

For a movie basket, purchase two movie passes, add in some popcorn or other treats and top it off with a hand-
