CHS alum killed in combat

Teachers remember Grass Lake resident for academic prowess

By Daniel Lai
 Heritage Newspapers

When it came to helping others, Judy Gentz said her son had a big heart.

Joel Gentz, 25, a 2002 graduate of Chelsea High School, was one of four U.S. Air Force members killed June 9 in a helicopter crash during a rescue mission in Afghanistan.

"Joel was one of those kids who threw his whole spirit into whatever he did," Judy said. "Whether it was academics, sports or playing with his dog, he had a great attitude with life."

Gentz deployed to Afghanistan on April 24 with the 58th Rescue Squadron from Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada. Although it was a surprise to hear her son's interest in the military, Judy said it came as no surprise that he wanted to serve as a rescue operator.

"He was only in Afghanistan for six weeks and he had already flown hundreds of missions," she said. "They were busy rescuing soldiers or taking Afghan children and families for medical care."

"Joel was the type of guy that could smile and tell someone to hang on, and they would."

Judy said her son was always looking for new challenges, which led him down the path to a career in the military.

"When he was very young, he wanted to be an astronaut," she said. "He did his research and he learned that most astronauts were retired military pilots."

"After speaking with several pilots, Joel enrolled in the Air Force ROTC program at Purdue University, where he studied aerospace and aeronautical engineering. While enrolled in the program, he was awarded the Warrior Spirit Award all four years. He was a member of the Arnold Air Society and wing commander of his detachment. Joel was a member of the Iron Key and Phi Delta Theta fraternity."

Judy Gentz said although her son received a pilot slot, he

City holds forum on police station

Residents address mounting concerns over new facility

By Sean Dalton
 Heritage Newspapers

Chelsea city officials held an open forum June 10 after giving a public tour of the Chelsea Police Station on Middle Street in downtown Chelsea.

The discussion centered on the city's plans to build a new station and municipal office. City Manager John Hanifan laid out the city's options for paying for the $2.5 million project - by either paying the full cost up front, paying in installments over seven years or bonding for the money, which involves paying the cost over 20 years.

Several residents voiced concerns over whether the project would increase the city's debt, which Hanifan confirmed.

They also asked if residents would get to vote on whether or not the city goes through with the project, to which Hanifan replied that the city council would make the final decision.

A resident petition submitted to the city on March 22 in order to force a referendum vote was not a "legal document" Hanifan said. The petition included 394 signatures, representing the required 10 percent of registered voters. Earlier this year,

Chelsea Grill reopens location

Restaurant survives fire, remodels interior to welcome customers

By Sean Dalton
 Heritage Newspapers

Since reopening on May 10 it has been a slow process rebuilding the Chelsea Grill clientele, managing partner Gina Pantely said.

"Every day it gets better ... everybody that comes in the door says that they just found out we're opened," she said.

The Chelsea Grill suffered significant water and smoke damage when the Chelsea Shopping Center caught fire in 2008.

"We really only had water and smoke damage ... but we had to replace everything," Pantely said.

The new Chelsea Grill represents making the best of a bad situation: the new restaurant is located where the banquet space in the old restaurant was. It's only 6,000 square feet, whereas the original Chelsea Grill was 11,000 square feet.

"I wanted to (downsize) ... it was too big," she said.

Some customers said that they miss the banquet area, which was frequently used for parties, banquets, meetings and rehearsal dinners, but it's a sacrifice Pantely was willing to make.

She had not been active with the restaurant since 2002, but decided to dive back in during 2008 at the outset of the cleanup.

Although she thinks the redesign is "absolutely beautiful" - from the newly installed granite bar to the murals of the Jiffy Mix plant on the walls - it's been a tough experience.

Pantely started with Gina's Café and built that business up from scratch before opening the Chelsea Grill.

She was at another restaurant she owns, the Broken Egg in Ann Arbor, when her nephew Nick Panos called to give her the news about the fire at the shopping center.

"When he called to tell me, I drove right out. When I arrived, the fire chief took me in with the health inspector," Pantely said. "I was devastated. It's like somebody telling you somebody

Ugly Dog opens doors to public

Vodka distillery enjoys early success with new customer sales

By Daniel Lai
 Heritage Newspapers

After months of public anticipation, Ugly Dog vodka distillery in Chelsea opened its doors in May, and reception from the community has greatly exceeded owner Jon Dyer's expectations.

"We just opened and sales are brisk and going well," he said. "We've progressively sold out of every batch (of vodka)."

"It's exciting. It can't make you happier to see some early success. I've been so busy I haven't had time to stop and smell the roses."

He said he attributes the early success to the store's location on North Territorial Road and a strategically placed sign in the storefront's window over the last six months that simply read, "coming soon."

"That sign created a lot of buzz around town," he said. "People were stopping by just to see what was going on here."

The business itself was a longtime in the making. "I never thought I would be opening a vodka distillery in Chelsea," he said.

The inspiration came several turned it down because of his desire to become a combat rescue officer.

"He told us he saw himself on the ground and not in the sky. Rescuing people was in his blood," she said.

Joel successfully completed the two-year training that included underwater training, medical training, land navigation, and other tasks.

Eric Swager, who coached Joel on the cross country team at Chelsea High School, said Joel was an exceptional student and athlete.

"The common thread was that he readily accepted challenges and charged headlong into them," Swager said. "He didn't let anything deter him. Anything that could challenge him he would say, 'bring it on.'"

Swager said Joel's "go get it" attitude was a defining characteristic and one that other students should look up to.

"He was a good kid. Anyone who is willing to put their life on the line for their country you have to admire," he said. "He was the first one to volunteer and put himself in harm's way for others."

Swager said one of his favorite memories is participating in the Boston Marathon with Joel and two other CHS alumni.

"It was neat to have three former Chelsea athletes next to me," he said. "One good thing about distance runners is that you stay close to each other even after high school."

Lonnie Mitchell, who taught Joel honors math his freshman and sophomore year, said Joel was a hard worker.

"He was one of the top students in his class," Mitchell said. "He was very dedicated and proud of his accomplishments. He was quite impressive."

Mitchell formed a friendship with Joel, and every year after high school, he would visit Mitchell's class and talk about college life with Mitchell's students.

"He gave me a Purdue banner that is still hanging up in my classroom," Mitchell said. "It was very hard to come in (to school) the day after I heard he had died and look at that banner."

Mitchell said Joel always made it a point to visit with him when he was in town.

"He always had a lot of stories about his training. I knew to pay for the project over the next 10 years between bond payments and maintenance costs, to which he responded, "yes."

Hanifan promised to be honest and forthcoming with the community, in response to some forum attendees who felt that the city had "blindsided" them with regard to some of the details, such as the changes in project cost and other details.

he was in for a difficult career.

"He could have easily designed those helicopters he flew in, but instead he wanted to serve on them and become a medic. He always wanted to help others."

Joel also participated in swimming, tennis, band, and National Honor Society during his time at CHS.

"Joel was a student who was on top of his class," CHS Principal Julie Deppner said. "He was an amazing athlete and excelled in academics. He was also a leader in both Student Council and National Honor Society. Joel was an amazing

'all-around kid. He was very focused and very goal-oriented."

"Joel could have done anything he wanted to do with his life and he chose to serve others."

Joel graduated from Purdue University with honors in 2007. He met his wife Kathryn while attending Purdue. They were married June 7, 2008.

"We're just terribly saddened," Judy said. "This is not how life is supposed to go."

Parents are not supposed to bury their children."

She said she and her husband Steve, along with the couple's other children, Rachel, 23, and Jared, 18, are proud of Joel's sacrifice.

"The responsibility is huge for these young people who join the military, but they do it willingly and enthusiastically. And they all do such a fantastic job."

Hanifan and City Attorney Peter Flintoft deemed the petition invalid due to a number of technicalities.

Several residents stated that the city council meeting chambers included in the project's design plan should be trimmed in order to lower the project cost, in light of the fact that the city pays $26 in rent to meet at the Washington Street Education Center.

Resident Fred Hoffman asked Hanifan if the city could afford

Chillin', grillin', fulfillin' for the community

Auction raises money for Food Gatherers

By Gerald LaVaute

When it comes to celebrations that help worthy causes, longtime supporters of Grillin' for Food Gatherers will tell you this one is near or at the top.

Ann Feeney of Chelsea described the June 13 fundraiser as "a feel-good event," and that she kept returning to bid on one of the many auction items, an opportunity to take a baking class at Zingerman's Bakehouse.

"It's just a great event," she said, adding there must have been 200 or more volunteers.

Mark Ouimet of Scio Township called it a true community event where people come together to help their neighbors.

"It's a wonderful time," he said, adding that the "best part is raising money for food for people who really need it."

This year was the 21st annual fundraiser for Food Gatherers held at the Washtenaw Farm Council Grounds near Saline.

"In this economy, it's good to see the restaurants and the people of Washtenaw County trying to help out," said Paul Cousins of Dexter, another repeat attendee of the event and former restaurant owner.

Cousins said there seemed to be more auction items than in the past and there were lots of names on the lists bidding for the items.

Food Gatherers will distribute on average the equivalent of almost 13,000 meals each day this year, said Eileen Spring, the president and CEO of the organization.

"We provide surplus food to about 150 different non-profits throughout the year, who are fighting hunger on the front lines, and this is our annual fundraiser," Spring said.

Food Gatherers collects food from more than 300 sources, including local grocery stores, restaurants and corporate sponsors such as Kraft, ConAgra and Kellogg, as well as local organizations that grow produce specifically for the group.

The lines of people at the entrance and for the food began forming as early as 4 p.m., just an hour after the gates opened.

In fact, Ouimet said he thought it seemed even busier than last year's event.

"The food, once again, was marvelous," Cousins said. "It was just marvelous, especially the blueberry buckle and the gelato - a great ending to the meal."

More than 150 community programs like the Ozone House and Dawn Farm count on the help of Food Gatherers.

A recent survey released by Food Gatherers and its national partner, Feeding America, found that 138 percent more people sought assistance from the Food Gatherers than in 2006.

According to its literature, Food Gatherers is able to deliver a pound of food for less than the price of a postage stamp.

Autism walk draws crowd to Saline

Supporters form teams to raise money, awareness and lobby for coverage

By Steven Howard

Heritage Newspapers

The nationally observed event Walk Now for Autism Speaks was held for the first time locally at Saline's Liberty School Sunday, drawing legions of people interested in raising money for autism research, and helping to support families currently touched by the disease.

Susan Woolner, the walk co-chairwoman for Michigan Autism Speaks, said the event serves multiple purposes.

"It's really three-fold," she said, indicating the organization raises money for future autism research, promotes awareness of the disease, as well as aggressively lobbies for autism to be covered universally under health insurance policies.

Woolner said events such as Sunday's walk help to promote a strong sense of community among participants.

"It's a day where families can be around others who are similarly affected," she said.

With some 550 people pre-registered, and most expected to bring teams along, Woolner said the organization anticipated a large crowd.

"We're expecting anywhere from 1,000 to 2,500 people," she said as the race got under way.

Local radio personality Lucy Ann Lance was the honorary chairwoman for the event, and said autism is a topic close to her heart.

"I have two nephews that are autistic," she said. "I would do anything for them."

Lance said she knew the Saline walk would have a great turnout because she has heard resounding support from area residents both on her show and in her personal life.

"The story really is all about these children," she said. "We are very happy that so many families came out. How wonderful."

Jennifer Earhart of Saline brought along four teammates to the walk, including her son, Donovan, 3, who is autistic.

Earhart said Donovan's teacher told her about the inaugural Saline walk, and it prompted her to bring family to the event in support of her son.

"We're walking for him," she said.

Katie Sample of Westland came to the Saline event as a veteran of another Michigan-based Walk Now gathering.

"Me and a friend of mine put a team together for the Auburn Hills walk," she said, indicating it's because of her friend's child with autism that they walk each year.

The gathering also featured an enclosed tent where vendors displayed products and services designed to help those with autism, as well as their families.

Representatives from the Michigan Abilities Center had a display booth at the walk, and were talking with visitors about the equine-based rehabilitation services they offer at their 60-acre Ann Arbor farm.

Executive Director Kathy Hinderer said the nonprofit organization was officially formed in 2006 to help those with many different special-needs improve things such as motor skills and sensory integration.

"We service clients from infants on through adults," she said.

In addition, participants joined in other carnival-like activities at the event, such as bouncing on inflatable gymnasiums and having their faces painted.

Lance summed up the feelings of many in attendance by saying that though autism has not been paid proper attention in recent years, with events such as Sunday's walk, attitudes have begun to shift.

"Michigan's starting to change," she said.

Man headed to trial for animal abuse

An Ypsilanti man will be tried on animal cruelty charges for striking his dog with a hammer.

Shawn Terrell Moore, 27, was ordered to stand trial on animal cruelty/torture and animal abandonment charges following a preliminary hearing in Washtenaw County District Court, records show. Ypsilanti police were called to his apartment in the 800 block of Green Road for reports of a man beating and kicking a white dog on April 1, according to reports.

They confronted Moore after seeing his Jack Russell Terrier mix, named "Shadow," with visible cuts all over his body. The 18-month-old dog was taken and turned over to the Humane Society of Huron Valley, where he received treatment and recovered, officials said.

Moore was arrested without incident and told police he was disciplining the animal while trying to housebreak him.

A hammer and broomstick believed to be used in the incident were found near the scene.

He stood mute to the charges following the preliminary hearing and is scheduled to appear in Washtenaw County Circuit Court July 13.

Moore remains free after posting $350 bond May 21, court records show.

"Works bomb" lands teen jail time

A Pittsfield Township teenager who set off a homemade pop-bottle bomb that injured a gas station clerk is heading to jail.

Duane Che Cochran, 17, was sentenced to one year in the Washtenaw County Jail on one count of using an irritant to cause personal injury in the March 9 incident at the Sunoco gas station, 4000 Washtenaw Ave.

He pleaded guilty to the felony charge last month and county prosecutors agreed to drop counts of unlawful possession or use of a harmful device that caused personal injury, and placing an explosive with intent to injure, court records show. He could have faced up to 25 years in prison on each count upon conviction.

Washtenaw County Circuit Judge Archie Brown credited Cochran for the two months and 18 days he served in jail since his arrest.

He also allowed Cochran to serve the first six months of his sentence in a prison boot camp. Upon his successful completion of boot camp, Brown said the remainder of Cochran's jail sentence could be suspended. Records show Brown also ordered Cochran to pay more than $2,400 in fines and serve three years probation once he is freed.

WASHTENAW COUNTY COURT BRIEFS

Police said Cochran and another man entered the station shortly after 7 p.m. and placed a plastic pop bottle with fluid inside near the cashier's counter.

They then left before the bottle exploded and splattered the clerk with harmful irritants. He suffered minor injuries to his eyes and throat, and was evaluated and released from a local hospital, according to police reports.

Pittsfield Township police officers received tips that helped identify Cochran as one of the suspects and he was arrested a short time later without incident.

They also arrested his alleged accomplice, but prosecutors declined to file charges against the 18-year-old man.

The devices, also commonly known as "works bombs," can appear like harmless trash, but can be hazardous, police officials warned.

The explosive is typically made with common household items mixed with water or a soft drink to create a volatile chemical reaction.

They have been known to cause second- and third-degree burns, sever fingers, and cause blindness and irritation to the skin and throat.

Multiple law enforcement agencies in Washtenaw County issued public alerts about the devices after two were found outside homes along Bemis Road in York Township April 18. No one was injured in either incident, and no suspects have been identified.

The incidents remain under investigation and anyone with information is encouraged to call the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Office at 971-8400, or the department's confidential tip-line at 973-7711.

Hearing delayed for Dexter Township woman charged in home invasions

The preliminary hearing for a Dexter Township woman charged in multiple recent home invasions was postponed, court records show.

Tera Bowman, 26, will now face four counts of second-degree home invasion and four counts of conspiracy to commit home invasion June 22.

Bowman was arrested late last month after investigators linked her to a series of crimes during weeklong crime spree in May.

She allegedly burglarized a Scio Township business and a Webster Township home May 12, authorities said.

She also is involved with burglaries reported at two Scio Township homes May 17.

A male accomplice has been identified, but has not yet been charged with any crimes.

The duo is also suspected in several burglaries in Superior Township, Webster Township and Ann Arbor, as well as recent incidents in Livingston and Wayne counties, according to police reports. Charges are pending in those cases.

Court records indicate Bowman posted bond on May 24 and remains free pending the outcome of her preliminary hearing.

Administrator to be tried for soliciting minors for sex

The director of the University of Michigan's debate team was recently ordered to stand trial on felony charges for allegedly trying to solicit a minor for sex.

Joshua Blake Hoe, 42, formally waived his right to a preliminary hearing in Washtenaw County District Court and stood mute to seven charges that resulted from an investigation by the Michigan Attorney General's Office.

He was arraigned last month on three counts of using the Internet to accost a child for immoral purposes; three counts of using the Internet to disseminate sexually explicit materials to a minor; and one count of enticing or soliciting a child for immoral purposes.

Authorities said he allegedly made sexual propositions toward someone that he thought was a 14-year-old girl over the Internet.

Hoe, of Ypsilanti, reportedly met the online persona in a chat room and then allegedly exchanged links to pornographic websites during private instant messaging sessions.

He faces a preliminary hearing on July 21. If convicted, each felony charge is punishable by between four or 10 years in prison.

Hoe remains at the Washtenaw County Jail on $15,000 bond, court records show.

Smoke-free football games to be a good thing at U of M

When the University of Michigan Wolverines take to the field against the University of Connecticut Huskies Sept. 4, The Big House will be a smoke-free zone. "We have allowed individuals to smoke on the concourse in the past, but with the new renovations and the university's commitment to become a smoke-free campus in 2011, we decided it was in the best interest of everyone to institute the change now," said U of M Director of Athletics Dave Brandon in a recent press release.

It will be interesting to see how this flies with the fans, however, because I see lots of them smoking.

Sure, non-smokers will be elated, but smokers will have to step outside the stadium gates to have a cigarette, which will add to the chaos of stadium entry and exit.

HOME FRONT

LISA ALLMENDINGER

I think some details will need to be better explained closer to the beginning of the season.

What wasn't explained was the consequence of not abiding by the new "no smoking" regulations, and who will serve as the smoking police?

"The move will ensure a healthier environment for all fans attending Wolverine football games," Brandon said in his announcement.

Absolutely. So much has changed since I first started attending U of M football games.

Prices were less than half of what they are now.

Fans were allowed to smoke in their seats inside the stadium. Many of us brought our own hot chocolate laced with Peppermint Schnapps when the weather got cold.

Back then, I walked by the people tailgating outside the stadium and considered them old folks.

Now, I'm one of those tailgating "old people," watching the teens and college students walking by and thinking how young they look.

Ah change. And the smoking ban inside the stadium gates is part of U of M's commitment to become a campus-wide, smoke-free environment in July 2011.

The purpose is to improve the health of the entire U of M community, and now its fans.

Since the campus smoke-free announcement, subcommittees of smokers, former smokers and nonsmokers are considering the implications for student life, faculty and staff, grounds and facilities, and visitors to the university.

I'm all for it.

Go Blue in the new smoke-free Big House.

OUR TAKE: Editorial

No boot camp for Kilpatrick

Former Detroit Mayor and convicted felon Kwame Kilpatrick reportedly qualifies for a 90-day boot camp program. But the requirements for the camp have nothing to do with moral character, which is a shame.

Among his many shortcomings, probably Kilpatrick's most serious flaw is a lack of integrity in office. He tried to run Detroit as his private fiefdom and he got caught breaking numerous laws. His biggest crime was letting down the people of Detroit at a time when they needed someone courageous and forthright.

That's why allowing Kilpatrick to attend boot camp would be a miscarriage of justice.

Wayne County Circuit Judge David Groner sentenced Kilpatrick to up to five years in prison for violating probation stemming from his conviction for lying under oath about an affair with his chief of staff. At a minimum, Kilpatrick was expected to serve 14 months for violating probation in the 2008 criminal case that forced him out of office.

This is one glaring reason why boot camp would not be appropriate for Kilpatrick. If successfully completed, the boot camp program brings automatic parole and so the former mayor would end up serving nowhere near the amount of time set forth in the original sentence. And while Groner exceeded guidelines issuing the sentence, in some respects it's not enough.

Kilpatrick's conduct in court shows that boot camp is not appropriate in this case.

The former mayor showed himself in the poorest, most shameless fashion as a mayor and then flaunted his arrogance in court proceeding after court proceeding.

Groner, at the sentencing, scolded Kilpatrick for his continued lack of candor about his finances.

The judge was more than accurate when he said at the time, "Your continued attempt to cast yourself as the victim, your lack of forthrightness, your lack of contriteness and lack of humility... clearly rehabilitation has failed."

The comment came after the former mayor gave a half-hearted, 15-minute presentation explaining why he should be allowed to return to his family in Dallas.

Kilpatrick, 40, arrived this week at the Oaks Correctional Facility in Manistee, near Lake Michigan between Ludington and Traverse City. He had been at a Jackson prison for processing since his sentencing. While there, he went through the standard screening practice and reportedly was found eligible for the voluntary boot camp program and chose to sign up. Well, of course, he would. Kilpatrick is no one to emulate, but he's not stupid. Why wouldn't he choose three months in a camp instead of 14 months behind bars?

The camp, officially called the Special Alternative Incarceration program, is at a Corrections Department facility in Chelsea that holds 440 prisoners. It involves a highly disciplined regimen that includes military-style exercise and work assignments. Visits and phone calls are more limited and inmates who break rules may be removed from the program.

Obviously, it wouldn't hurt Kilpatrick to attend the camp, but he certainly doesn't deserve parole afterward.

Groner will decide if Kilpatrick is to be sent to the camp. We hope he chooses not to do so. Kilpatrick doesn't deserve the benefits of attending the boot camp. However, he does deserve a boot.

Kindness of Saline students appreciated

On May 4, the Special Olympics track and field meet was held at the high school field. I have a son who goes to Saline schools and he was at the event.

I am always impressed with the student body we have at Saline schools. The connecting students from Mr. Musson's class did a great job of getting the athletes to their events and making sure they had some fun. The natural camaraderie is something that is taken for granted in these schools, but I know that it's a rare and unusual occurrence in some districts. Thanks, in part, to the hard work of all the great teachers and paraprofessionals we have here, the kids in Saline just do not know any different. I am so happy to have had my children go to school here.

After helping the athletes all day and cleaning up the event, the high school students had a little time to play. They didn't seem to mind that my son, Bill, wanted to be included in their kickball game. They let him play, they made allowances for him and cheered him on. They were nice to him and nice to each other, and well-mannered. It was just a bunch of kids having some fun on a nice afternoon.

I love the kids here. I know they are not perfect, but I think Saline kids are pretty darn nice. I hope that with economic cutbacks we won't lose sight of how important it is to raise nice, open-minded and fun-loving kids. Thanks never seems to be enough to say for the opportunity of true inclusion that has been given to my son, but I have to say it anyway. Thanks to the Saline High School connecting students, teacher Kevin Musson and all of the school teachers and staff for all you do. I am one parent who appreciates the quality of life my son, Bill, experiences here in Saline. It's something all parents of special-needs kids want but cannot give to their kids. You will never know how much it means to these kids and their parents. Pat Rabe Saline

Why did the MMA give Legislator of the Year award to Richardville?

I'm writing regarding the article "Richardville Named Legislator of the Year" on the MMA's Web site (<http://www.mma-net.org/newsinfo/news.asp?NEWSID=2764>).

A perfect analogy for giving Senator Richardville, R-Monroe, this award is like giving Bernie Madoff "Financier of the Year."

On May 11, MMA President and CEO Chuck Hadden presented Richardville with the "Legislator of the Year" award.

I can see why this association would give him this award; this only serves and succeeds in satisfying certain segments of the business community's sweet tooth.

Senator Richardville's amendment is nothing short of a clear example of corporate welfare. Specifically, this doesn't pertain to all businesses; it is specific to the manufacturers that have lobbied extensively.

These are the same manufacturers who were able to game the Michigan business tax, lowering their tax liability, and who are receiving checks in the mail, shifting the tax burden to the rest of the business population all the while shedding jobs.

Now they refuse to be fair. They speak for immunity from lowering their rebate checks and let all others endure the cuts.

This is all about picking business winners and losers.

GUEST COLUMN: By Peter Pitts

Medicare payment board needs fixing

Those who opposed the health care bill are currently debating whether "repeal and replace" should be the clarion call in the coming election.

Regardless of how this debate turns out, those in favor of doing better should focus their immediate attention on identifying and fixing the most harmful parts of the legislation. The new Independent Payment Advisory Board should be a top target.

The bill that passed restructures the existing federal agency responsible for bringing down Medicare costs — the Medicare Payment Advisory Commission — and turns it into the IPAB.

MPAC was a group of medical experts appointed by Congress that provided non-binding recommendations on ways to cut expenses and increase revenues in the Medicare program.

The changes embodied in the IPAB are meant to make the agency more independent and to skirt the political hurdles that have stalled cost-control efforts in the past. The president will now appoint board members, and the IPAB's policy recommendation will automatically be instituted unless congress overrides them.

The goal of reigning in Medicare expenses is a worthy one. As it is, the program's costs are spiraling out of control: Medicare is projected to accumulate a $38 trillion budget shortfall over the next 75 years.

But this version of the IPAB will likely prove ineffectual. For one, it doesn't have any authority over the biggest cost-drivers in Medicare. Medicare Part A, for instance, is so expensive its reserves will be empty by 2017, according to the Medicare trustees.

Part A covers in-patient hospital stays, and by 2035, the program's revenues will only finance about half of promised benefits.

Medicare Part B, which covers outpatient services, has similar cost problems. Administrators just raised Part B premiums on nearly a quarter of beneficiaries because expenses have gotten so high.

And an analysis from the Congressional Research Service found that without substantial hikes in Part B premiums, the program's finances are "at risk of exhaustion."

Yet the IPAB has no power over Part A or Part B. They're both left to keep hemorrhaging money, soaking up taxpayer dollars and compromising the economy.

Lawmakers need to push to expand the agency's purview so it can address the real causes of Medicare's ballooning costs.

There's also a risk that IPAB will be insensitive to the needs of Medicare patients. After all, board members are un-elected appointees with an incredible amount of power.

The IPAB is liable to enact cost-cutting measures that might sound good in the boardroom but which will actually lead to worse health outcomes for Medicare patients and strap them with unbearable costs.

Indeed, the IPAB can make drastic changes to Medicare plans, including raising premiums, cutting benefits and restricting eligibility requirements.

Technically, Congress can cancel any such changes by passing a joint resolution within a month of their proposal. But Congress is so fractured that it's very unlikely there will be the political will for such a move.

There need to be more substantive checks against the IPAB decisions. And seniors need to be guaranteed representation during the policy-making process.

If left unaltered, Medicare could literally bankrupt this country. This IPAB is a step in the right direction, but it needs improvement.

By pushing for some simple, commonsense modifications to the IPAB, those in favor of doing better could substantially bring down healthcare costs and improve coverage for millions without compromising their principles.

years ago while Dyer attended a hunting trip with some friends.

"A buddy of mine made the suggestion that I brew some whisky," Dyer said. "I tried it and it seemed to taste okay."

From there, he spent the next seven years experimenting with different recipes.

"I never made anything to sell. It was mostly just me playing around in my garage," he said.

However, as luck would have it, in 2008, the State of Michigan relaxed its liquor regulations and passed into law Public Act 218, which legally approved small distilleries to market and sell their distilled grain-based spirits onsite.

"I followed that legislation with enthusiasm and as soon as it passed, I decided to start working on the Ugly Dog," Dyer said.

Unlike most new businesses, which require the owner to take on a lot of loan debt, Dyer said he decided to build as much of his own equipment as possible and fund initial operations with his own money.

"Instead of buying a big simple system from Europe that costs a ton of money and gives you a lot of overhead with a new company, I didn't spend a lot of money and designed my business to grow as sales grow.

"I drove to Nebraska and spent the night in a cow pasture for some equipment and I drove to Pennsylvania to buy my mash cooler. The fermenters were manufactured in Spokane, Wash. to my specifications."

The building, located at 14495 North Territorial Road, was also renovated by Dyer.

"I redid all of the interior myself," he said.

The amount of work has kept him busy, often working 12 hour days and not taking more than three days off in the past year, but the end result was worth it, he said.

"My business plan is a lot more labor intensive than just pushing a button, but I did my research," he said. "I learned what I could from other distilleries and I modeled my business after the ones I thought were successful. Most of the success stories came from guys who started in their garages. Customers don't flock to the distilleries that don't have a story behind them as much as the ones that do."

For the Ugly Dog, the story begins with its name. "Ugly dog" is the nickname for the German Wirehaired Pointer, which Dyer owns and breeds. The image on the vodka bottles was designed by Dyer and features his dog "Ruger" in a forrest setting.

The beverage itself is 40 percent alcohol by volume and is handcooked by Dyer and one other assistant in the distillery daily.

In addition, all of the Ugly Dog's products are manufactured in the United States.

"All of the grain is from Michigan," Dyer said. "Our labels are printed in Michigan, and our shirts are printed in Ann Arbor."

"The shot glasses are manufactured in Florida and our bottles come from Indiana. If I could have had everything made in Michigan, I would have."

In the coming months, Dyer said he would also like to begin offering Ugly Dog gin and rum.

"It's a natural progression," he said. "In August we will be able to sell the vodka in retail stores and I expect our sales to begin growing daily. I expect to have to build larger capacity equipment to keep up with demand."

Dyer said he hopes to keep the Ugly Dog at its current location as long as possible.

"Our location is key. People traveling on North Territorial Road are usually commuting longer distances and it's near campgrounds and lakes, so I am getting customers I would probably never see if I were somewhere downtown," he said.

For more information on the Ugly Dog call 1-734-433-0433.

Rather than close the restaurant completely, Pantely decided to make an even better Chelsea Grill out of the ashes of the old one.

The menu is new with a few old favorites that the staff recommended, and the bar is more segregated from the restaurant

She added that she's looking forward to adding a mural of Chelsea State Bank President John Mann, since he's one of her favorite customers from Gina's Cafe.

Pantely also said that she plans to market the new Chelsea Grill, but for now would like her old customers to spread the word within the community that Chelsea Grill

'I live with Grandma' sheds light on special relationship

By Joyce C. Ervin
Special Writer

In her book, "I live with Grandma," Shalle Petrovich-Clark demonstrates just how special a relationship between a grandmother and grandchild can be for many people.

Petrovich-Clark said she wrote the book from her grandson Traivon Clark's point of view.

The book covers Traivon's experiences from ages 2 to 4 years old. It's lighthearted and quick to read.

Petrovich-Clark creatively interprets photographs she took of Traivon's humorous antics that fill most of the pages. The book captures tender and loving moments and lessons many grandmothers teach, as well. The message is sure to spark a memory or two for all grandmothers.

Children will enjoy the book as they will relate to naughty escapades and fun times they have had with their grandmothers.

Petrovich-Clark loves being a grandmother, though she didn't always feel that way.

"I thought I was too young to be a grandmother, so I made a name up for myself," she said. She dubbed herself "Ge-Ge."

Shalle Petrovich-Clark has written a book about her relationship with her grandson, Traivon Clark. Petrovich-Clark said she wrote the book from her grandson's point of view.

which stands for "Gorgeous Grandma," she said.

Once Petrovich-Clark became a grandmother, she found the time it took to care for Traivon enjoyable.

"He has severe learning disabilities and is now on a waiting list to be diagnosed by specialists at the University of Michigan Hospital for possible autism," she said.

The boy attends the Early Childhood Special Education pre-school program at Paddock Elementary School in Milan.

Pam Schelkun, First Steps parent educator for Milan Area Schools, was impressed with the book.

"What an awesome representation of his life with you. The pictures and words are very powerful. He is truly blessed to have you," she said.

An excerpt from her book reads: "Grandma painted Pooh on my bedroom wall, just for me!"

Beside the narrative, a photo of the mural painted free-hand depicts the character Winnie the Pooh found hunting for honey bees beneath a tree. The mural covers two walls from floor to ceiling filling a corner of her grandson's room.

Petrovich-Clark plans to inquire about volunteering at the newly formed Milan Art Center.

Next to being a grandmother, she says she loves art.

"It's the greatest," she said.

Event to kick off Signature Chefs Auction

By Sheila Pursglove
Staff Writer

The most urgent infant health problem in the United States is premature birth, which affects more than a million babies each year.

The March of Dimes is there to help, funding research and providing comfort and information to families.

A major fundraiser is the Signature Chefs Auction, where 400 attendees, including corporate and civic leaders, sample dishes from 16 local chefs, and bid on auction items.

This year's event is set Oct. 25 at the Four Points Sheraton in Ann Arbor.

The auction — one of more than 200 held in cities across the country, raising more than $114 million since 1989 — requires a lot of planning and help from volunteers and sponsors.

To get things rolling, local residents who would like to help are invited to a Signature Chefs Auction Kick Off Party 6 to 8 p.m. June 22 at the Vinology Wine Bar & Restaurant, 110 S. Main St., in Ann Arbor.

There will a cash bar and appetizers. For dinner reservations, call 222-9841.

"Please share an evening with us to learn more about the event and join our committed group of volunteers who make the event a success," said March of Dimes organizer Hilary Simmet.

Reservations are required by Friday. Call 761-6331 or e-mail hsimmet@marchofdimes.com.

The auction in October will feature lead chef Cheryl Hanewich of LaDolce Vita. Event chairs are Bruce and Linda Thomson, and honorary chairs are Mike O'Donnell and Jan Garfinkle.

This year's honoree is Ann Arbor resident John Barfield, founder and chairman emeritus of The Bartech Group, one of the largest independent human capital staffing and services firms in the country. Barfield is active in business and community organizations, supports many humanitarian causes and received The George Romney Award for his achievement in voluntarism.

Parts of Boy Scout Service Center to reopen

Community helps organization after flash flood damage

By Art Aisner
Special Writer

Organizers with the Boy Scouts of America Great Sauk Trail Council said they hope to reopen parts of the Service and Program Center in Ann Arbor this week after a major clean-up effort due to a severe flash flood.

The offices, located at 1979 Huron Parkway on Ann Arbor's east side, were devastated by water damage that occurred during heavy storms that caused tornadoes and millions of dollars worth of damage to communities throughout southeast Michigan earlier this month.

Officials estimate more than 8 inches of water accumulated in the single-story building nestled in a wooded area just off of a stream that runs directly from the river June 6. Carpets, computers, furniture, work cubicles and vital paper records throughout the building were all damaged.

"Anything below the knee was destroyed. We were all pretty blown away," said Brad Bowersox, Scout executive director for the Great Sauk Trail Council.

He said that a group of volunteers were scheduled to meet for a program at the offices that morning, and instead had to begin the clean-up process immediately. Luckily, one of the first volunteers on the scene is a professional in water abatement and advised what needed to be done first.

Within five days, the most affected carpets, floor boards, wall paneling and insulation were removed, and large, industrial electric fans have been blowing around the clock to quicken the drying process, Bowersox said. He and a handful of staff have taken refuge along a wall in one of the building's program rooms amid a hodgepodge of wires, plastic tubing and office items laid out to dry.

He said that roughly 200 volunteers have helped along the way, including dozens who doggedly spent a day trying to remove the water, clean the damage and salvage what items they could on the first day.

Still, damage was very heavy. Aside from the structure, more than a dozen of the organization's computers and all their server and network components were inundated with water. The organization's data was backed up, Bowersox said, but the loss of hardware will be very costly to replace. Many paper files and historical records paper files were also destroyed or damaged heavily, including a Scout photo book that dates back to 1937.

The Great Sauk Trail Council serves more than 9,000 children and 4,000 adults across seven counties in Southeastern Michigan. The building was built in 1979 and has never been damaged by floods before, officials said.

The Jackson Scout Service Center at Camp Teetonekah extended hours to help compensate for the center's closure and the council's three Scout camps were open for service in the interim.

Bowersox said the Scout shop in the building will reopen first, and then other sections will gradually open as repairs are made over the next two to three weeks. Scout volunteers and field professionals will continue to serve the community and assist with the ongoing clean-up effort, Bowersox said. He asked for patience and said he doesn't expect any significant interruptions in service or programming, even through office functions will be somewhat limited.

The outpouring of support has been humbling and reinforced age-old Boy Scout missions, such as preparedness and community teamwork.

"I've learned a lot from this and we'll develop a much more detailed disaster relief program," Bowersox said. "Being prepared is what we do."

The drying effort is now headed by Washovia Water Restoration and is costing several thousands of dollars a day.

Contributions to the local Scout clean-up effort can be made online by visiting GSTCFlood.Kintera.org or e-mailing jmccl@bsaemail.org.

They also can be made by calling 971-7100, ext. 215 to donate supplies.

They are also accepting checks made to the Great Sauk Trail Council and mailed to 1979 Huron Parkway, Ann Arbor, MI, 48104.

Red Cross fundraiser set for local disaster relief

By Marne Little
Guest Writer

As she swims past her goal of 100 lengths, 12-year-old Adela Baker thinks of all of the people she will be helping and the Jimmy John's sandwich she will receive by participating in the American Red Cross Swim-A-Cross.

Baker participated in the Swim-A-Cross for the first time last summer at Orchard Hills Athletic Club in Ann Arbor, but has been in the water for most of her life.

"My parents put me in the water before I was 2, but I've been swimming competitively at OHAC since I was 9," Baker said. "I had never heard of the Swim-A-Cross before, but I like to swim. I like a challenge, and I think the Red Cross is a great organization."

Baker said she likes that the Red Cross helps so many people and that the money she donates is being used locally.

At the Swim-A-Cross, each participant collects pledges to donate to the Red Cross. Donations can be given either at a fixed amount or at an amount per length. Baker pledged herself a dollar per length and was the only person to contribute money to her cause. All the money she donated would come out of her own bank account.

Most participants set a goal for how many lengths they would like to complete. Baker's goal was to swim 100 lengths, but she exceeded her goal by swimming a total of 218 lengths.

"My goal was 100, but I swam 218," she said. "I was competing with a couple other people, and I wanted to swim more than this one other guy. I'm very competitive. Once I got to 180, I decided to go to 200. Then I got really tired, and I wanted eat Jimmy John's and to go home, so I stopped at 218."

Baker may have been just another swimmer participating at her local athletic club's Swim-A-Cross, but out of the 614 participants in last year's event, Baker's story stood out the most to Red Cross staff.

Swim-A-Cross coordinator Mary Kumbler said Baker's story impressed everyone in the office because of her determination to follow through on her commitment, despite far exceeding her original goal.

"Her mother was shocked at how much she swam and didn't expect Adela to pay what she pledged, since it would clean out her bank account," Kumbler said.

"But Adela declared, 'It's my money.' She was determined to pay because she had made the pledge and knew how much it would help others. It was very impressive."

Kumbler said the Swim-A-Cross program needs participants like Baker to motivate others and who are willing to help the community.

"We need the kids that are harnessing their competitive energy, enjoy being there, and want to help others. Adela has taken the essence of our program to heart — using her time and talent to give back to the community," she said.

Baker enjoyed swimming with friends and receiving food for participating. She, along with other participants, received prizes for getting a certain number of pledges.

"I had fun swimming with my friends, and I never had Jimmy John's before, so I liked that, too. For my pledge, I got a T-shirt, which I love, a towel and movie tickets for being one of the top swimmers at the pool," Baker said.

The teen said the Swim-A-Cross was a great experience and recommends it to anyone who has the opportunity this summer.

"It was really fun and I'll definitely do it again," she Baker's goal was to swim 100 lengths, but she exceeded her goal by swimming a total of 218 lengths.

Screening of film to aid shelter

The Michigan Theater will offer a screening of a punk rock documentary July 23 that also will serve as a fundraiser for the Shelter Association of Washtenaw County.

The centerpiece of the evening is a screening of "Blank Generation," a film documenting the ascendancy of punk rock in New York in the late 1970s.

The film includes ultra-rare footage of the Ramones, Talking Heads, Blondie, Patti Smith, Richard Hell & the Voidoids, Television and others performing at legendary nightclub CBGB. Show time is 7 p.m.

Filmmaker Ivan Kral, who played guitar, bass and keyboards with the Patti Smith Group for its first four albums and co-wrote many of the group's early songs, will introduce the film and answer questions from the audience afterward.

Kral, a native of Prague, Czechoslovakia, went on to write, record and tour with Iggy Pop, John Cale, John Waite and many others and continues to produce and perform in his home country.

Prior to the film screening, the Shelter Association will host a fundraising reception in the Michigan Theater's grand foyer from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Attendees will have the opportunity to meet the filmmaker and sample complimentary appetizers and beverages.

All reception attendees will receive a complimentary poster commemorating the 35th anniversary of the Second Chance nightclub and featuring the name of all the major artists that appeared at the club during its history, several of whom appear in the "Blank Generation" film.

The reception requires separate tickets, which will be sold directly through the Shelter Association's Development Office.

Tickets for the "Blank Generation" screening only are $10 or $7 for Michigan Theater members, available in advance at ticketweb.com and at the door. The first 100 people through the door will receive a complimentary Second Chance 35th anniversary commemorative poster.

Tickets for the pre-show reception are $50. A limited

Preschool showcases youth talent

Showcase spotlights theatre, culinary skills of students

By Alana West
Special Writer

It was a day for eating hot dogs in the sunshine, dressing up in costumes and showing parents their clay animals.

Sunshine Special Children's Studio held their annual Children's Project Show on May 19 and May 20.

"The Children's Project Show is a celebration of the children's work throughout the year," said Suzanne Price, director of the preschool.

The show featured self-portraits that the students created, clay projects, a luncheon put on by the preschoolers, a puppet show and a production of Maurice Sendak's "Where the Wild Things Are."

"We've been inviting friends to show what they're doing. We expected about 150 people," Price said.

Fifty-four children are currently enrolled in the preschool.

Andrea Ballard said she liked the creative approach to education that the preschool mandated.

"It's very child-centered. They do a lot of their education based on the interest of the children," she said.

Ballard liked the Sunshine Café that was set up for the event. Children helped make the food, drew up menus, and served the meals.

"They have been studying food and serving one another," Ballard said. "So the educators decided to go one step further and have the children serve a meal to those who attended the show. They made all the meals, and added the toppings (to the hot dogs), and made homemade popsicles (out of organic fruit)."

Shelly Verbal, an assistant teacher at the school, said that the students designed all of the menus for the café, with the pre-kindergarten students writing the descriptions on the menus, while the preschool children drew the illustrations.

In the artwork part of the show, teacher Tracy Gallup said the children were able to choose what to create. For the self-portraits, the students looked at their own faces in mirrors.

"They really look like their portrait," Gallup laughed. "It is an interesting age. The children are fresh, with no biases. They're happy and creative and I'm trying to learn from them. I want to reinforce it so they can hold on to their creativity."

Other students took part in the play, "Where the Wild Things Are." Luke Carreon, who played the part of Max, said he liked to be in the play.

"It's good," he said. Kierra Tuttle's favorite part of the play was when Luke, as Max, banged on the wall.

Elise Kutcher's favorite part of the play was when the forest grew.

Kierra Tuttle said she liked the preschool because it was close to her house, and because it was very "nice and intimate."

"My daughter's gained a lot of confidence in being in the preschool program," she said.

Abby O'Haver said the preschool was a "wonderful nurturing environment, and the teachers are very caring."

"They've really fostered the strengths of my child," she said.

Lori Ericson said that her family loves the preschool.

"The teachers are very willing to listen to suggestions. They dug up worms and took them inside and measured them. They found out they actually grew," she said.

During the course of their studies, the children at Sunshine Special Children's Studio are also introduced to music and Spanish through special teachers who focus on the subjects.

"Children can play, but there's structure," Verbal said.

Alana West is a freelance writer for Heritage Newspapers. She can be reached at mmagwest@sbcglobal.net.

Marsh featured artist at A2 Summer Art Fair

By Gerald LaVaute
Heritage Newspapers

A successful career in painting wild animals in a celebration of vibrant colors in tropical settings that began innocently enough — catching frogs and snakes at home and presenting them to Mom as gifts — recently achieved a significant milestone as Belleville artist Marsh was named the featured artist for the Ann Arbor Summer Art Fair in July.

Marsh, 48, has lived in the Belleville area for most of his life. He attended Quirk Elementary School, North Middle School and graduated from Belleville High School in 1979.

It was at Quirk Elementary School that Marsh met art teacher Marcia Mandel, formerly Marcia Kalb, who encouraged him to develop his talent, helping to set the stage for the odyssey that followed. Marsh described her as kind-hearted and inspirational.

As Marsh moved on to Belleville High School, Mandel was transferred there, and a relationship between Mandel, Marsh and six other art students continued to develop, so much so that Mandel told them, looking toward the day when the seven students would graduate, "When you leave, I leave."

And she did, but not before she left a lasting impression on Marsh, giving him the confidence in his ability required to survive and to prosper in an admittedly challenging career.

His other major supporter has been and continues to be his mother Josephine, who has been a single parent to Marsh, since he was about 2 years old.

Marsh continued to educate himself, attending Eastern Michigan University for 2 1/2 years, but when he learned he had already taken all of the art classes available at EMU, and that all that remained were non-art courses required for graduation, he decided to leave.

Ironically, he never took a class in oil painting, which has been his focus since 2002.

In the past, when people learned about what he did, they often would say to him, "You're an artist."

And his reply was tentative, still unsure about his talent or how far it could take him: "Well, I draw," he said.

"It took a few years to believe in myself," Marsh said.

In 1982, he first exhibited his art in the Belleville Strawberry Festival.

During this time, he had two other jobs — at Metro Airport as part of the staff that preps airplanes for the next flight, and at a pet store in Canton.

Both jobs ended at the same time, and Marsh decided to return to his long-ago roots in Pennsylvania, where his mother's family is from.

ABOVE: The painting "God of the Upper World" carries special meaning for artist Tim Marsh. RIGHT: Tim Marsh, a Belleville resident, is the featured artist at the Ann Arbor Summer Art Fair in July.

He got a job as a designer for the storefront windows of Kaufman's Department store in Pittsburgh, a big break that allowed him to develop as an artist in his first art-related job.

"My leaving was the best thing that ever happened to me," he said, as he developed confidence and skills that serve him to this day.

But love beckoned, and he returned to Belleville to marry his high school sweetheart. Marsh and his wife, Karen, have been married for 17 years. They have three daughters, Megan, Kate and Emily.

Marsh said that someone once described his art as "eco-expressionism," and he said that it was an apt summary of his work.

He has visited warm, tropical areas such as Hawaii, Jamaica and Florida several times to gather inspiration for his work. In one instance, he camped in the Everglades in Florida for two weeks.

Regarding the creative process, he said, "I have more images in my head than I have time to create, and that's a good thing."

Marsh begins on a sketchbook, but he said that much of the real creative process occurs inside his head.

One of the paintings in his studio, titled "God of the Upper World," depicts a jaguar sitting on a log in a dense jungle.

There is a Mayan temple in the background, reflecting Marsh's interest in archaeology and in the ruins left by previous civilizations.

The painting reminds one that the ancient civilization was snuffed out, Marsh said, and the Earth is slowly reclaiming itself as the jungle covers what's left of the temple.

The jaguar, on the other hand, is thriving, suggesting that humans perhaps value their lives too highly relative to other creatures like animals.

When a representative of the Ann Arbor Summer Art Fair called in January to ask Marsh to be the featured artist at the year's fair, Marsh was excited. After being rejected by the Ann Arbor Art Fairs in 2003, he began to use the fairs as a key measure of success. So when they called, he was thrilled. But as he looked around his studio, he realized that he also had a big problem.

At the time, he had only a few available paintings because as his career had continued to develop and word spread about his talent, he had begun to sell more of his work.

So Marsh got to work painting, going so far as to gently discourage potential sales of his work until after July.

He said he would have about 30 paintings ready for the fair, and limited edition reproductions of some of his work.

Prices for his paintings vary by size, and range from $200 to $4,800.

Marsh's advice for fledgling artists includes if there is something you're passionate about, just do it technical skills alone don't make an artist; if you want to make a career out of it, don't listen to negativity; believe in yourself as that's No. 1.

The Ann Arbor Summer Art Fair will be held on Main Street from William to Huron, and Liberty Street from Ashley to Fifth Avenue, July 21 through 24. Marsh and his paintings will be in booth D375.

the organizers for the event, and said the topic became personal to her after losing a beloved family member to the disease.

"Personally, I lost my grandmother over six years ago," she said, indicating since then fighting breast cancer has "kind of been our family mission."

Kate Mittenthal is also on the organizational board, and said the event will take place between 11 a.m. and midnight.

Mittenthal said the athletes will rotate on an autograph schedule, with each player signing for approximately an hour.

Mittenthal said the famous guests will not be leaving at that point, however.

"They could be pouring your beer or pouring your wine," she said, noting there will be tents set up outside of the Brecon Grille to accommodate all of the visitors.

The tin can auction will be going on from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m., said Mittenthal, while Braun and Helffer Auction Services will conduct the live auction at 8 p.m.

Up for bid is an abundance of merchandise from a Trek bicycle to a Mona Lisa Salon and Spa package from the Dexter-based business.

Perhaps most coveted, however, will be what Mittenthal called an "Experience Package" in which the winner will be able to take batting practice at Comerica Park and watch a Tigers game in a luxury suite.

Mittenthal said the proceedings for the live auction will be informal.

"People are just going to be raising their hands," she said.

The Detroit Tigers Foundation has contributed the team mascot, "Paws," to be in attendance from 3 to 5 p.m., said Shani Inge, and The Verve Pipe will play a "family-friendly" show at 3 p.m.

Many area Little League teams have signed on to be there, and Brecon Grille proprietor Paul Geragosian said he knows the event will attract legions more.

Geragosian said he looks forward to helping to raise money for breast cancer while welcoming the Tigers players to Saline.

He said the Experience Package might even prompt him to get in on the auction.

Geragosian added he also plans to donate a portion of food service proceeds to the breast cancer cause.

The cost of the event for those 21 and older is $5. Other family members of all ages are welcome.

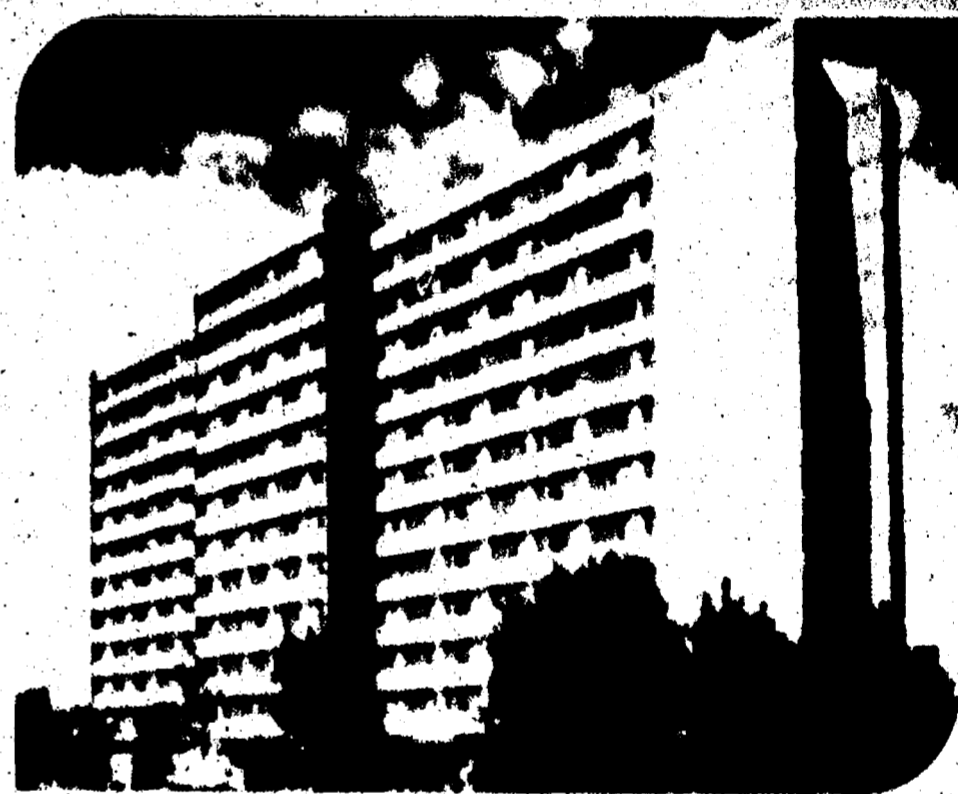

Tickets will be available to purchase for food, beverages and autograph cards.

The Brecon Grille is located at 101 W. Michigan Ave. in Saline.

Dance school teaches students discipline

Young girls learn art of Scottish military dances for competition

By Alana West
Guest Writer

Watching Highland dancing is a little like watching Scottish ballet, according to Heather Allen of Chelsea.

Highland dance uses ballet-like positions, and was first used by the military of Scotland. The Scottish bagpipes often accompany it.

"I started when I was 7 years old," said Allen, who now teaches the dance steps through her Scottish dance club, the Daichie Thistle (gentle thistle) in Chelsea. She studied throughout her school years, becoming a premier dancer through competition. She competed in Canada, where most of the competitions were held early on, before raising her family.

"I didn't get back into it until I had a daughter and a son," said Allen. "Nowadays you have to be certified and take a bunch of exams to be qualified (to teach)."

Each dance position and movement has to be done a certain way.

"That's where the competition is," Allen said.

The dance is judged before a panel at competitions including the famous Alma Highland Festival. Chelsea hosts its own dance competition every September at the Washington Street Education Center.

Winning competition is the only way to advance in the field of highland dance.

"You have to win to go on to the next level," said Allen, who said that three of her students are premier dancers, which is the highest level one can achieve.

Many of her students also take ballet.

"For a lot of kids it is really a nice fit. It is real physical dancing, and the kids usually like the music a lot," she said. "I always loved it as a kid."

It can take as short as six months to as long as a year and a half before the dancer is ready for competition, Allen said.

"It depends on the child," she said. "You can't advance to the next level until you have competed in six different competitions and placed first, second or third in any of the dances."

Allen has four students currently, but has had as many as 20 students in her classes. She charges $5 for lessons, which can go anywhere from an hour for beginning students to three or four hours for advanced students.

Military news

Emily Meloche graduated Magna Cum Laude from Kalamazoo College with a Bachelor of Arts degree in English. She will begin graduate school in the fall at the University of Michigan.

Meloche is a 2006 graduate of Chelsea High School and the daughter of Chris and Linda Meloche of Chelsea.

Joseph Cartwright from Dexter graduated with a Associate's Degree in science from Pace University.

dents.

"I want kids to do this. I don't want them to give up other stuff that they like to do for this," Allen said. "If it's part of their heritage, they should learn how to do it."

Allen's maiden name is Turnvill, a Scottish surname, and she said Highland dance is in her blood.

She is planning to travel with her students this year to Grandfather Mountain, N.C., for an event that will be both an exhibition and competition. It is a family event, with families traveling together to camp out while taking their kids to the competition.

"It's very social. They all get to know each other," Allen said. "They develop long-term friendships. It's neat that way."

Allen said Highland dance is considered a competitive sport. One of her students has received a dance scholarship to Alma College.

"There is a future in it," she said.

Dancers wear a kilt, with a white blouse and hose, with a jacket or vest. Most of the competitors are female, Allen said, but the males wear a hat called a sporran (Scottish purse) when they compete.

"When you get to your premier level you wear tartan, or plaid hose," Allen said.

The Highland dances are those that the students learn first, and are the military dances of the Scottish. Traditionally, only men dance them, but now girls learn them for competition.

"They also learn national dances, which are storytelling dances. They depict different things and might have different costumes," Allen said.

Among the songs for the dance include the "Fling," and the "Seann Triubhas," or "Old Trousers," which was developed when the kilt was no longer banned and the Scottish people no longer wore trousers.

They also dance the "Sailor's Hornpipe" and an Irish jig for the national dances, usually wearing different costumes, Allen said.

"They all tell a story," said Allen, who has two children who are beginner students at the dance school.

Dexter chamber hires new executive director

The Dexter Area Chamber of Commerce is looking to increase membership and their impact on the community. In order to do so, the chamber recently hired Mary Ann (Bell) Falzon as its executive director. Falzon has personal experience with small business in the community along with experience in training and development working for the Walt Disney Company.

Falzon has lifelong experience with owning a small business in Dexter. Her father, Roger Bell, started his masonry business before she born.

"My dad loved what he did, he loved this area, there were great economic times, and very rough times, but he never gave up, not on the community or his business," she said.

In October 2009, Bell suffered a stroke and died. His son, Scott Bell, continues to run the family business.

"During tough economic times, these small businesses suffer the most. I understand that for many of them it's what puts food on the table. I want to grow the chamber of commerce to a point where we have an economic impact on these businesses, and the families that rely on their success for survival," she said.

Falzon has plans to start educational programs as well as innovative business networking opportunities. She is working on a development plan for the chamber that has the bottom line goal of business advocacy.

"Dexter is my home. My grandfather opened the A&W restaurant, my dad was Roger Bell Masonry, and the success of the local area business is personal to me."

Falzon has most recently worked for her consulting company in the health care industry, coaching interdisciplinary health care workers on guest service, leadership, professional development, and business strategy.

She spent five years with Target as a corporate training manager. She is a certified Disney trainer, and was the coordinator of training and casting agent at Walt Disney World in Lake Buena Vista, Fla.

Aprons appear to be making a comeback

By Lisa Allmendinger
Heritage Newspapers

Aprons aren't just for grandmothers; they're making comeback ala vintage clothing.

In fact, Susan Moran of Ann Arbor made her first apron for her daughter, Zaida, who is a baker.

The textile artist embellished it with pieces of her printed and dyed fabric.

Moran sews aprons with friends and family members in mind, and will teach the art to a small number of participants at the River Gallery in Chelsea June 26 Redcovery Day.

"Making aprons is less stressful than making clothing," she says.

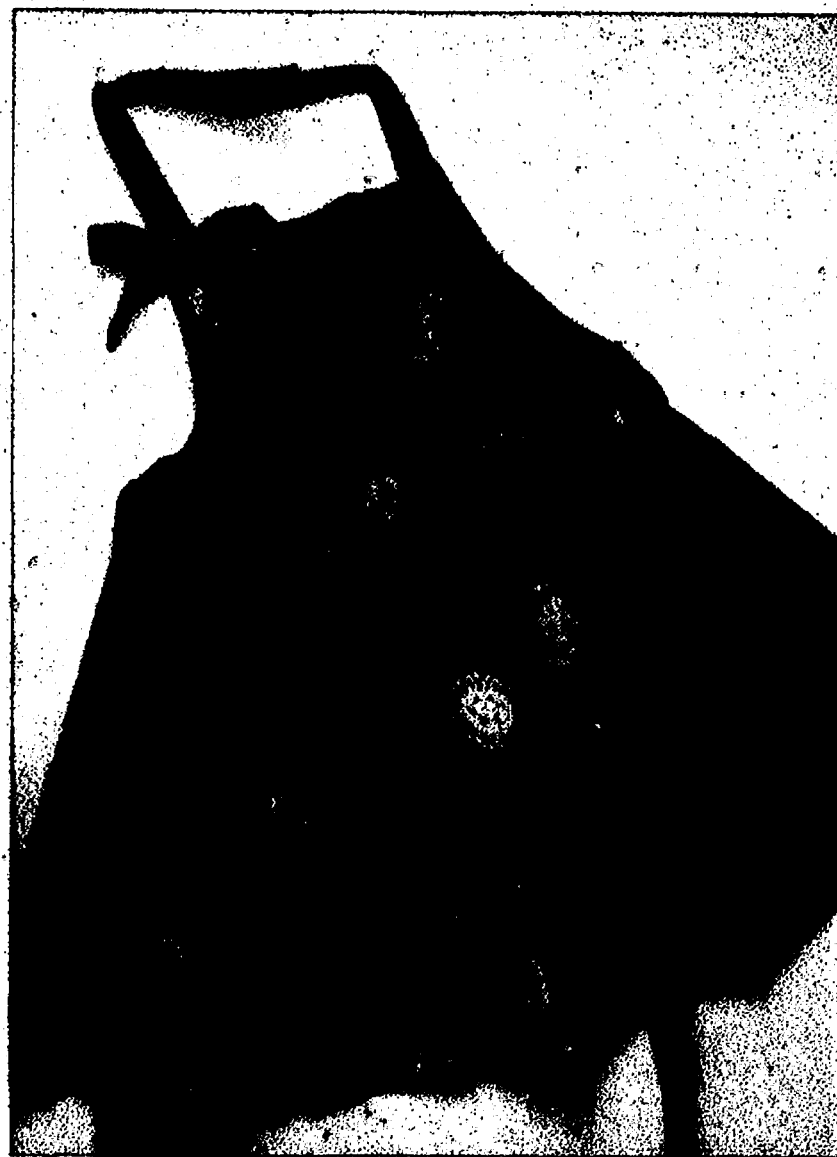

"I can take a more relaxed approach and it can still be an extension of my art," she says.

Moran holds a master's degree in fine arts in textiles from the University of Michigan and teaches at the College for Creative Studies in Detroit.

Her textiles have been shown previously at the River Gallery. In fact, there are several of her aprons currently on display.

"This is a great project to incorporate vintage, antique or handmade fabrics as accents," she says.

For fabric, Moran recommends a resale shop like Treasure Mart in Ann Arbor for table cloths and curtains

There are half-aprons that tie at the top at the waist and full-length ones that hang from the neck and can be tied in the back or at the waist.

"The chef style is more forgiving," she says, adding that she thinks it's important that people make things with their hands.

"I think people are disconnected with their hands and handmade processes," she says.

But just as knitting is gaining in popularity, so is sewing and aprons are easier to sew than form-fitting clothing.

Plus, the fabric for making aprons can be found inside everyone's home.

Moran admits she's not a professional seamstress, but the workshop will be for people with a familiarity with sewing, who want to have a good time.

Rain keeps farmers from planting, tending, bailing fields

By Daniel Lai
Heritage Newspapers

A soggy few weeks have made it difficult for farmers across Michigan who are trying to tend to their fields to plant and harvest crops.

"Right now, it's hurry up and wait," said Charles Hieber of Hieber Farm in Manchester. "The rain just keeps coming, so when it's not raining, we're out working as long as we possibly can some days."

As much as 4 inches of rain during a one-week period drenched a few locations in Washtenaw County, and that has left standing water in some fields.

"That amount of rain will stop you," he said.

Like other farmers, the Hiebers are waiting for the moisture in their fields to evaporate, to finish planting soy beans.

"We got the corn in the ground at the end of May, and now we're only getting out to the fields when we can," Hieber said.

Hieber said the family already should be well into cutting and bailing hay.

"You need three good days of sunshine to dry the hay," he said. "It's ripe and ready now, but there's not a whole lot we can do."

Hieber said in normal weather conditions, he could have the family's 50 to 60 acres bailed in a week to 10 days.

"Normally, we'd be done," he said. "But it has to be dry in order to keep the bailer from molding."

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's website, hay is very sensitive to weather conditions, particularly when it is harvested. In drought conditions, both seed and leaf production are stunted, making hay that has a high ratio of dry coarse stems that have very low nutritional values.

If the weather is too wet, the cut hay may spoil in the field before it can be baled. The hay may also develop rot and mold after being baled, creating the potential for toxins to form in the feed, which could make animals sick. It also has to be stored in a manner to prevent it from getting wet. Mold and spoilage reduce nutritional value and may cause illness in animals.

The successful harvest of maximum yields of high-quality hay is entirely dependent on the coincident occurrence of optimum crop, field and weather conditions.

"It is frustrating," Hieber said. "You get a little more time with your family, but you're also sitting here thinking about what you could be doing."

To pass the time, Hieber said he is catching up on some minor jobs, such as repairing tools used on the farm.

"I'll have the tools ready, so when the rain quits, we can go at it full force," he said.

The rain has also affected the farm's corn crop.

"The rain washed the fields. We had a couple of acres of corn and soybeans that are just lost. You can't do anything about it," he said.

"Corn crops are either drowned or just not in the ground yet, and farmers stand to lose a lot of money if the clouds don't clear out."

Hieber said the amount of rain this time of year is not typical for Michigan.

"We usually get a lot of rain in early March or April, but for June, this is a lot," he said.

Hieber said he doesn't expect the late start to affect his profits much.

"Everyone in Michigan is in the same boat right now," he said. "If the West has a good crop, the price for Michigan's crop will go down. If there is a hailstorm out there, it's to our benefit. Someone has to suffer in order for someone else to benefit."

According to the National Weather Service, no rain is expected in the Washtenaw County area through the week end.

"Most of the rain was beneficial for all crops, except the most recently planted dry beans. First rains were welcomed, but now it is getting a little excessive," the Michigan Ag Connection reported.

Preserve Chelsea calls for action

Grassroots group seeks support for Longworth buildings

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Newspapers

Local grassroots group Preserve Chelsea is calling for public support for their plan to preserve the Longworth buildings in downtown Chelsea.

The outreach is part of a continued movement spurred by a public forum in 2009 where residents expressed interest in preserving the vacant buildings rather than demolishing them.

The city has owned the Longworth property since 2008. "Many comments expressing desire to save more than just one of the buildings were made by citizens at the town hall meeting," said team member Michelle McClellan.

The group is still concerned that one or more of the historical buildings is in danger of being demolished. However, in recent months, two companies have submitted requests for proposals to the Downtown Development Authority.

"We believe that revitalizing the Longworth site as The Chelsea Connection would bring many benefits to our community," McClellan said. "It would retain these tangible reminders of our economic and social history, contributing to a sense of place and unique identity that is important for residents and visitors alike."

"The location of the site makes it a critical link between the Main Street business district south of the railroad tracks and the clock tower redevelopment to the north," McClellan said the buildings are also an important piece of the city's history.

"These three structures exemplify the industrial, commercial, and transportation history of our community, our state, and indeed our nation," McClellan said. "According to Janet Greenstein Potter, nationally-known scholar of railroad stations, Chelsea is extraordinary in that the livery, the first hotel, and the depot all remain in existence."

The Longworth buildings are three interconnected structures adjacent to the intersection of the Michigan Central Railroad tracks and Main Street in Chelsea.

They include the home of the Chelsea Manufacturing Company, known as the "Mack Building," the Chelsea House Livery and the Daniels Motor Sales showroom that dates from the 1940s.

The first hotel in Chelsea, now a farmers' supply store, is next to the complex, and the Victorian railroad depot adjoins the complex as well.

The Longworth complex boasts a range of architectural styles — from rustic, site-cast concrete blocks to Victorian brick industrial.

The Longworth family purchased the Mack Building with the attached car showroom and the Livery in 1952, and the complex served as the home of the family's chrome plating business for 50 years.

The historical significance of the property has been recognized by a grant from the MotorCities National Heritage Area.

For more information on Preserve Chelsea or the Longworth buildings, call 1-734-475-3632 or 1-734-475-7565.

FINANCIAL FOCUS

Answering five questions can help achieve goals

As you strive to achieve your long-term goals, such as a comfortable retirement, you may, at times, feel frustrated over events you can't influence, such as the up-and-down movements of the financial markets. Yet there is much you can control — once you determine the answers to just five key questions.

Now it's time to put a strategy into action. Specifically, you need to choose those investments that can help you pursue the goals you've selected. Your ideal portfolio will depend on your risk tolerance and time horizon, but in general, you'll want a diversified mix of quality investments.

"It's easier to reach your financial goals if you put time on your side."

Where am I today?

Take stock of all your assets — your IRA, 401(k) and other savings and investment accounts. Then, do the same for your debts, such as your mortgage and any other financial obligations. On your financial journey through life, it's essential that you know your starting point.

Where would I like to be?

Once you've established where you are today, you'll need to identify where you'd like to be tomorrow. How much will you need to pay for the retirement lifestyle you've envisioned? Will you be able to help pay for your children's or grandchildren's college education? Will you need to support any other family members? At this stage, you'll want to write down all your goals and put a price tag on each one.

Can I get there?

After you've identified your goals, determine if they are, in fact, achievable. By considering a variety of factors — including your likely future income stream and your family situation — you should be able to determine if you can attain your goals or if you need to modify them in some way.

How do I get there?

While diversification, by itself, cannot guarantee a profit or protect against loss, it can help reduce the effects of volatility. As you put together your holdings, make sure you understand what you can expect from your investments.

For example, growth stocks may offer the highest potential returns, but they also carry the greatest risk. On the other hand, investment-grade bonds can offer a steady income stream and, barring the default of the issuer, will repay your principal when they mature.

How can I stay on track?

Once you've built your investment portfolio, you'll need to review it regularly — at least once a year — to help ensure it's still meeting your needs. After all, many things can and will change in your life, such as your family situation, your goals, your employment and your risk tolerance. To address these changes, you'll need to adjust your portfolio over time.

As you can see, answering all these questions will take both work and expertise. That's why you may want to work with a professional financial advisor to help you identify your goals and create a strategy for pursuing them.

It's easier to reach your financial goals if you put time on your side.

Scio firefighter pleads guilty in A2 embezzlement case

By Art Aisner

Guest Writer

A Scio Township firefighter has been suspended indefinitely after receiving a jail sentence for an embezzlement conviction unrelated to his job, officials said.

Christopher Steeb, 35, was suspended in May until further review by township authorities, Scio Township Fire Chief Carl Ferch said. The decision was made after Steeb was sentenced to serve one year in the Washtenaw County Jail in late May for taking money from the Ann Arbor Moose Lodge.

"He is on suspension and that will remain that way until pending township action," Ferch said.

He declined further comment on the situation or Steeb's sentence. He said Steeb was among 15 paid on-call firefighters in the department and that his absence will not have an immediate impact on day-to-day operations.

Steeb pleaded no contest to embezzlement of more than $50,000 but less than $100,000. A second count of embezzlement of more than $100,000 was dismissed as part of the plea deal. A no contest plea is not an admission of guilt, but is treated as such for sentencing under Michigan law.

Subway to open in Chelsea

A new Subway restaurant will open its doors in Chelsea on June 25.

The restaurant is located inside the BP gas station at 5 S. Fletcher Road, exit 162 near Stiver's restaurant and bar. It features Tuscan décor and seating for eight.

"The east side of Chelsea is a strategic placement with easy on and off at the exit for people in a hurry, both residents and commuters alike. Serving terrific pizza near an anchor adult beverage serving establishment like Stiver's, doesn't hurt, either," owner Steve Tauriainen said. "I am excited to be able to bring Subway restaurants' delicious, fresh made products to the people of Chelsea."

The restaurant will serve all of the nationwide Subway menu items, including the new breakfast menu. Hours have been expanded for additional customer convenience from 6 a.m. until 11 p.m. on Friday.

"We plan to eventually be open 24 hours - seven days a week, as soon as the demographics allow this," Tauriainen said, adding that delivery in inclement seasons is also being considered.

"My wife, MiMi came from an extensive customer service background making her keenly aware of superior customer service and my engineering background has been tremendous in all aspects of food safety cleanliness, environmental awareness and all areas of compliance."

"We have been diligent to only hire and use local people for our staffing needs and for all building contracting related needs for the past year since we purchased this location."

"My wife and I look forward to meeting all of the nearby residents and invite everyone to stop by and try our world-famous submarine sandwiches and outstanding breakfast sandwiches."

Subway restaurants are famous for the made-to-order foot-long and 6-inch submarine sandwiches, available on a variety of bread baked fresh daily in each store or on the new flatbread. Subway also serves pizza. Any sandwich can also be served as a salad. The Subway restaurant also serves fresh made cookies, and a kid's menu.

Youth take to high seas in new production

By Lisa McClure
Guest Writer

This summer the youth of Chelsea will have the opportunity to join the Chelsea District Library's dramatic production of the swashbuckling play "Sarah at Sea," in which a spunky English girl flees to an uncertain future in America by impersonating a boy.

Full of melodrama and pirate battles, this play is open to youth ages 7 to 15 (you must have finished first grade).

There are parts for everyone, including minor parts for younger children and more challenging roles for older children.

The play provides a wide variety of roles through its simple plot: When Sarah's mother dies, her uncle wishes her to wed an older man. Sarah runs away by disguising herself as a boy on a ship to America.

Roles include friends, other passengers, the ship's captain and crew and a bunch of dastardly pirates.

Children can learn about the stage and dramatic techniques as they practice and perform the one act play. All participants will have three weeks to memorize their lines before they go into the one week rehearsal. Rehearsal will be July 12 through 17. The final performance will be at 1 p.m. July 17 at the Washington Street Education Center auditorium.

"Sarah at Sea" will debut at the Chelsea District Library in July.

"Young actors will discover the entire dramatic experience, from rehearsal to theater games, from costumes to makeup, and from set building to stage blocking. They will even learn stage combat from a professional," youth and teen librarian Lisa McClure said. "I try to give the kids a complete understanding of what goes on in a production, to give them a glimpse of what professionals do and why they find it so fulfilling."

McClure has directed several youth productions and has served as set designer for local theater groups. She studied drama while obtaining her Master of Arts degree in English Literature at the University of Michigan.

The Chelsea District Library makes theater a fun experience. Taking part in a dramatic production is good educationally, socially, and developmentally for youth of all ages. Many educators claim that the importance of the arts is right up there with vocabulary and literacy.

Theater education provides a safe place for children to practice creativity and take personal risks in a venue that celebrates success with every performance, and builds self-confidence by allowing children to express themselves to others — whether that is on stage or in everyday relationships. And there is perhaps no more powerful tool than theater to reach children. It taps into the instinct with which they are born, the instinct to explore by pre-tending.

The Dare to Dream Theatre

Company states that by becoming someone else, children discover a little more of themselves. Theater helps a child grow by giving them an opportunity to express themselves, improve communication, develop the ability to think critically, improve problem-solving, improve listening and reading skills, improve memorization, encourage co-operation with others in achieving a joint goal, improve leadership skills, develop control of the body through choreography and movement, help develop values, and foster self-confidence.

Log Cabin Week festivities set

The Waterloo Area Historical Society presents its annual Blacksmiths, Soldiers, and Log Cabin Weekend from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. June 26 and noon to 5 p.m. June 27. The grounds of the farm museum will be abuzz with the sights, sounds and aromas of 19th century life.

The Blacksmith Festival features representatives of the Michigan Artist Blacksmith Association. Men and women alike demonstrate their craft using fixed and portable forges. Their wares range from practical items like hooks for keys and plants to decorative and imaginative sculptures. Many of the artists offer their creations for sale.

A Civil War Living History Encampment brings this evocative era to life. The Michigan Soldiers' Aid Society is a group of men and women who share a common interest in the Civil War.

Members will offer displays and demonstrations in the historic 10-room farmhouse and on the grounds of the farm museum.

This year's event will also feature a book signing with author Julie Wyckoff, a freelance writer and photographer. Julie will sign copies of "My Dear Wife..." a compilation of letters and diary entries written by her great-grandfather, John Quigley.

Quigley's writings vividly describe life in camp and on the battlefield. "Well, our men lay down and the pickets are sent to the front in a dense corn field. The sharp crack of the rifle and the ring of the bullet as it passes make things pretty hot. I have just dismounted and a minnie ball has struck the saddle. That was a pretty narrow escape."

On June 27, the Historical Society will join the statewide celebration of Michigan's log cabins. The holiday dates back to December 9, 1866, when, in preparation for the state's 150th anniversary, the Michigan Legislature proclaimed June 28, 1867 "Log Cabin Day." On that day there was a tour of seven Berrien County log cabins along with four other Log Cabin Day events in the state.

Popular response to the occasion prompted the legislature to pass a bill establishing Log Cabin Day as an annual holiday on the last Sunday of June. Michigan is the only state that has an annual statewide log cabin festival.

While the log house at the Waterloo Farm Museum is not original to the site, it is an authentic, period structure that was moved to the grounds from a site north of Stockbridge. The furnished home provides a glimpse of life in the 1840s, when a wave of settlers came to Michigan.

Admission to the event is $4 for adults, $3 for seniors, and $2 for children. Members and children under age 5 are free.

Dexter local participates in relay

Doug Marrin of Dexter is preparing to ride in the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Michigan's annual Wish-A-Mile 300 bicycle tour from July 22 to July 25.

With more than 800 cyclists and 200 volunteers, WAM is the foundation's single largest fundraiser, and since its inception has granted thousands of wishes to Michigan children with life-threatening illnesses.

The event is the largest bicycle tour benefiting the Make-A-Wish Foundation in the country. Riders and volunteers will ride from Traverse City to Chelsea with stops in Big Rapids and Dewitt on the three-day, 300-mile tour.

The ride culminates with the Heroes Hurrah ending celebration on July 25 when the riders and volunteers cross the finish line greeted by many children, dubbed "wish heroes," along with their family and friends.

Marrin joined WAM in 2004 and is the captain of Team Living Water. For Marrin, WAM is about more than just facing his own personal obstacles.

"When my legs start to burn, I give quite a bit of thought to the kids we're riding for and imagine what they must go through with a life-threatening medical condition - the pain, the needles," he said. "If they can do that, then the least I can do is this."

The annual WAM Bicycle Tour is a great way to get involved this summer and make a difference, he said.

"This event will change you for the rest of your life. You will never be the same and you will be so glad that for a few brief and shining days, you were part of something bigger than your self," Marrin said.

For more information on the Wish-A-Mile Bicycle Tour, visit www.wishamile.org for event information, including volunteer and sponsorship opportunities. The tour is filling up and the foundation is seeking volunteers, sponsors and riders, foundation spokeswoman Meghan Mair said.

Since its inception in 1984, the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Michigan has brought joy into the lives of thousands of people in Michigan.

"When my legs start to burn, I give quite a bit of thought to the kids we're riding for and imagine what they must go through with a life-threatening medical condition."

VILLAGE NOTEBOOK

Village Council approves additional improvements for Inverness Street

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Newspapers

Additional road improvements along Inverness Street from Forest to Ann Arbor streets and the alley extending northwest off of Inverness Street between Grand and Forest streets will be added to the 2010 Drinking Water Revolving Fund Water System Improvements project.

The removal and repaving of Inverness Street was added due to the timing of the work, which started in late May.

"(That) means that the majority of the work will be paid for from the 2009-2010 budget year," Courtney Nicholls, assistant village manager said.

The current fiscal year's budget was amended to account for the up to $120,000 for the project's extension, which will be paid for from reserves in the 2009-2010 budget and replenished in the 2010-2011 budget.

In 2008, the portion of Inverness Street was rated a "3" on the Pavement Surface and Evaluation Rating system scale.

PASER is a windshield road rating system that uses a number scale, with "10" representing a new road and "1" representing a failed road.

Due to the condition of the roadway two years ago, this roadway would be a good candidate for road replacement," project engineer Christine Phillips of Orchard, Hiltz & McCliment, Inc. said.

The proposed work would also reduce the radius of the intersection at Inverness and Forest streets, similarly to the way it was reduced at intersections on Third Street.

"This will create a more walkable intersection due to pedestrians having less distance to cross the street," Phillips said. "This is especially beneficial knowing that it is likely that students will walk along Inverness Street on their way to school, as Inverness Street leads to Wylie Elementary School."

The adjustment to that intersection is also planned as a traffic "calming" measure for commuters.

The engineering firm also recommended paving the alley from the post-construction edge of Inverness Street to just beyond the second driveway for the home located at 3055 Inverness.

There are only two homes in the vicinity of the 140 foot alley with alley access to their garages, making improving the alley past that point unnecessary, Phillips said.

The project will cost the village $100,000 with $20,000 to Orchard, Hiltz & McCliment for design, inspection and testing services.

In other council business:

The village was ordered by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources to reduce the amount of copper in its drinking water. All municipal water suppliers within the DNR's jurisdiction are being asked to take extra steps.

The council voted to enact a corrosion control treatment measure at the current and new well houses in conjunction with unrelated ongoing water system work.

An existing feed system at the fifth well house will be modified to contain copper in addition to iron in the water by using orthophosphate in addition to polyphosphate.

The village's Wastewater Treatment Plant is currently receiving "major upgrades, including upgrades to chemical feed facilities. This is also part of the village's effort to fluoridate village water.

Department of Public Works staff have also asked the village to approve the purchase of an Elgin Pelican sweeper for up to $148,000 with $7,700 set aside for metering equipment purchases.

The sweeper will be delivered in July, making it a 2010-2011 budget purchase.

According to Director Ed Lobdell the DPW operation in the village is currently under budget.

The village is purchasing the sweeper from Bell Equipment of Lake Orion.

As for the meter reading equipment, Lobdell explained that it was 10 years old and obsolete.

Purple Rose Theatre Company launches summer comedy

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Newspapers

Summer is the season for comedy, and Marc Camoletti's French farce "Boeing-Boeing" is scheduled to take flight for audiences June 17 at the Purple Rose Theatre Company in Chelsea.

The English adaptation of this French version, done by Beverly Cross in the '60s features Bernard, a self-styled Parisian lothario juggling three fiancées, each beautiful airline hostesses with frequent layovers in Paris.

Bernard's carefully constructed timetable runs like clockwork until unexpected schedule changes bring all three to his apartment at the same time, and his "ideal life" unravels all in one nonstop night in hilarious fashion.

"Boeing-Boeing" originally premiered in Paris in 1960. The English language adaptation was first staged in London in 1962. The play was first produced on Broadway in 1965. In 1991, the play was listed in the Guinness Book of Records as the most performed French play throughout the world.

"Boeing-Boeing" was revived in London in 2007. It again proved to be a hit with critics and audiences alike and received two Olivier Award nominations. The 2008 Broadway revival won both the Tony and the Drama Desk Award for Outstanding Revival of a Play.

Purple Rose associate artist Nathan Mitchell of Novi makes his professional directing debut with "Boeing-Boeing." The cast will include Jeff Thomakos as Bernard, John Seibert as his friend Robert, Stacie Hadzikosti, Rhiannon Ragland, and Charlyn Swarthout as the fiancées, and Chelsea's own Michelle Mountain as Berthe, Bernard's long-suffering maid.

Design for this production includes set by Bartley Bauer, properties by Danna Segrest, costumes by Christianne Myers, lighting by Reid Johnson and sound by Quintessa Gallinat. Stephanie Buck stage manages with Jessica Garrett as assistant stage manager.

Purple Rose Associate, Nathan Mitchell is making his professional director debut with "Boeing-Boeing." He started work with the Purple Rose behind the scenes as fight choreographer for "A Streetcar Named Desire" and "Bleeding Red," and directing intern for "Bleeding Red and Wake."

He has also appeared on the Purple Rose stage in "Gravity" and "Our Town." In the past, he has performed in the United States and the United Kingdom in plays such as "Hawk," "I'm Your Brother," "Ill Seen Ill Said," "A Flea in Her Ear," "Attempts on Her Life," "Our Town," "Six Degrees of Separation" and "A Zoo Story."

Mitchell earned his bachelor's degree in theater from Western Michigan University and his master's degree in physical training for the actor from The University of Exeter, United Kingdom, and has trained with Moscow Art Theatre.

The show will go on for an 11n-week engagement from June 17 through Aug. 28 with seven previews of the show performed June 17 through 24.

Regular performances for the duration of the engagement are Wednesdays through Saturdays at 8 p.m., with Saturday matinees at 3 p.m. and Sunday matinees at 2 p.m.

All performances will be held at The Purple Rose Theatre Company, 137 Park St. in Chelsea.

Tickets for "Boeing-Boeing" are on sale now. Reservations can be made by calling the box office at 433-7673. Single tickets are also for sale at www.purple-rosetheatre.org.

Thalia Schramm has found a home at Dexter's Encore Theatre

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Newspapers

Ann Arbor's Thalia Schramm says she feels at home in Dexter's Encore Musical Theatre, where she has spread her wings as a performer.

Schramm, who lives in the Kerrytown area, is on track to graduate from the University of Michigan School of Music, Theatre and Dance with a bachelor's degree in theater and a minor in English.

Although her minor focus is scriptwriting, she says that she sees herself more as a performer, at least initially.

She dreams of one day filling the shoes of her instructors and peers as a teacher helping young actors like her realize their own dreams.

"My goal is to act for a good long time," Schramm said. "Whether it be regional or Broadway — obviously Broadway would be my goal, but I would eventually like to teach acting, and/or run a theater... be in charge of a large arts organization."

Since getting her start on the community theater circuit with the Ann Arbor Civic Theatre, Dexter Community Players and the Chelsea Community Players, she has bolstered her credits as the mistress in "Evita," Johanna in "Sweeney Todd," Sarah Brown in "Guys and Dolls," and Olive Ostrovsky in "The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee."

It's worth noting that she stepped down from the Dexter Community Players Board of Directors to jump at her shot to go to the next level.

The Encore, which is quickly reaching for the heights inhabited by the Purple Rose Theatre Company, is a completely different world for Schramm and has given her many unique experiences and opportunities.

"It's a collaborative effort at the Encore... Dan (Cooney) and Barb (Cullen) are really open to trying new things and different things just to see how it flows," Schramm says.

Her last role in "Spelling Bee" was a good example, since the show was the theater's most adventurous endeavor, at the time.

Schramm said she felt at home playing Olive, a critically shy girl with a troubled home life, and admits to being a bit of an introvert who finds joy in solitary activities.

"I was more into science (before acting)... and I played the clarinet, which is kind of gross," she joked.

Olive was a complex character, but Schramm says playing a 12-year-old was tough at first.

"You have to be able to throw yourself into the character you're playing, which in that case was a 12-year-old girl."

"It was interesting to develop that mental process when you're on stage," she said.

Schramm observed children at summer camp, where she spends time as a camp counselor over the summer, to get in touch with how a 12-year-old thinks.

"I observed their speech patterns and how they reacted when no one else was watching," she said.

"You have to think about how a kid would react to everything, reacting to her parents not being there, reacting to all of these kids being mean to her, and just trying to think a little more simply," Schramm said. "It was one of the most interesting acting experiences I've had."

None of her other parts have been nearly as demanding, although she admits relief to not having to dye her hair blond for Sweeney Todd, considering the fact that her character, Johanna, goes so far as to sing about her lovely golden locks.

Since being on stage for the Dexter Community Players production of "Urinetown" a couple of years ago, Schramm says that she doesn't worry about much on stage, and hasn't had a butterfly in her stomach since then.

Part of that is because of experience and the other part of it is how acting fits her.

"I get bored easily, but I can change what I'm doing often and it's always fun," Schramm says of acting.

She admits that she always has been attracted to the quaint village of Dexter and its downtown, which she hopes is getting a boost from local tourists coming to the community to see shows at the theater.

"We're really trying to feel out what people in the area want to see," she said.

But, at the same time, she and the rest of the Encore family don't want to stick to "Oklahoma" and "Annie."

"Those shows are great, but we don't want to do them all of the time," Schramm said, adding that there's so much more out there in the world of musical theater for audiences to explore.

Given her background with the younger set and having been in 30 shows at various levels since she was 14 years old, Schramm is one of the driving forces behind the Encore's summer acting workshops, which is broken up into elementary, middle school and high school classes focusing on varying levels of intensity.

The youngest program focuses on kids in first through fifth grades getting comfortable on stage, singing in a group and dancing in front of small gatherings of parents and peers.

The middle school program will teach the beginnings of technique and the high school program will introduce participants to more advanced technique and provide primers on the business.

"We're going to bring in Broadway talent, such as Michael Minigan, who is currently touring Broadway right now, and Dan will participate. He has extensive Broadway experience," Schramm said. "Those who come will get a lot out of the summer program. I know I've grown working with Dan and others."

Schramm says it's good being exposed to a theater like the Encore, where the pace is faster and the final product more polished.

"With community theater, you have a good couple months to rehearse and then you only run the show for two weekends. "With this, you get it done quickly and you get to run it for a really long time."

"I'm a product-over-process kind of person. I like to show what I've done for a long period of time."

Rehearsals at Schramm's level are crammed into four weeks with four-hour-a-day sessions six days per week leading up to a three- or four-week run, not including time spent in private memorizing lines.

Schramm was taking 16 credit hours and working part time on top of rehearsing 24 hours per week when she joined the Encore last year.

But she says that moments like being a swan lifted into the air during a dance number in "Spelling Bee" with equity actor Jeffrey James and other moments at the Encore make the hard work worthwhile.

Schramm recently participated in a workshop at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in London and is currently at camp. When she returns, she will prepare for the Encore's summer program and invites prospective actors to sign up.

For more information on the summer program or future shows, visit www.theencoretheatre.org.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Not citing source of speech isn't wrong

We have one of the best superintendents in Michigan. If not the United States. He was giving an inspiring speech to a large group of impressionable kids (Home Front: "Killips misrepresents himself in speech, June 10 edition). He did not hurt anyone, or take away from anyone. He was showing them that, yes, life is easy, but there is more out there. Go and get it!

Chelsea is in Washtenaw County, and is two counties away from Oakland County. All the article showed was that Chelsea School District might be one of the most misinformed school districts in the state, which is wrong. Everyone who is staffed at Chelsea School District is exemplary.

Slamming our city and schools is wrong. Not citing a source in a commencement speech isn't.

Walberg not the right man for the job

A letter in last week's Chelsea Standard praises defeated Congressman Tim Walberg's handling of "several obnoxious and out of order Democrat supporters" who "heckled Tim" at the former representative's April 25 town hall meeting in Chelsea.

According to the letter, most of the "Democrat supporters" attending the town hall "were not local." It is not only Democrats who have concerns about Mr. Walberg. The chairman of the Washtenaw County Republican Committee endorsed his opponent in the upcoming primary. If some attending the Walberg event were "not local," let's remember that Mr. Walberg himself is not locally funded.

His 2006 campaign against incumbent Joe Schwarz was bankrolled by Club for Growth, an organization representing wealthy out-of-state interests devoted to unrestricted corporate profit taking, whatever the cost to average citizens like us.

Handlers like these are still feeding Mr. Walberg his agenda and his talking points. No one likes heckling, but at least we can appreciate the irony. Last September Mr. Walberg held a fundraiser with Congressman Joe Wilson, whose "you lie" comment during a speech by President Obama to a joint session of Congress dramatized the lunacy that has taken over the Republican party. If elected, Mr. Walberg would advance an agenda like Wilson's, if a bit more politely.

Gears and Beers helps raise money for ALS

Organizers say about $50,000 was donated

By Randi Shaffer
Heritage Newspapers

Some people ride bikes for leisure. Zoe Hutchins of Cincinnati rides hers for a cause.

Hutchins was among about 20 riders of Team Hutchins in the third annual Gears and Beers ride to cure ALS event hosted by the Michigan chapter of the ALS Association Saturday.

The event, held at Ann Arbor's Olson Park, is an annual way for the ALS Association to raise money and awareness for amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, more commonly known as Lou Gehrig's disease.

"My father and my brother have it," Hutchins said. Hutchins' father, Jerry Hutchins, was diagnosed with ALS in 2001 and died in May 2004.

Since hearing of his diagnosis, Hutchins has participated in several fundraisers to raise money and attention for ALS, with Gears and Beers being one of them.

"Hopefully it leads to a cure," she said.

Stacey Orsted, executive director of the Michigan chapter of the ALS Association, helped to start the now annual Gears and Beers ride to cure.

"Most bike riders like to drink beer, so (it was an) easy partnership," she said. "It's a fun event for a serious cause."

Orsted said she expected 2010's ride to raise about $50,000, about $20,000 more than last year's event raised.

One of the biggest contributors to the amount raised was Team Hutchins.

"I think they raised about $15,000 of the $50,000," Orsted said.

The Gears and Beers event offered riders a choice of three routes — a 25-mile, a 74-mile or a 100-mile. The routes all began at Olson Park and ventured separate ways. All of the routes toured throughout northwest Ann Arbor, along the Huron River and some meandered through Dexter, Chelsea and the surrounding communities. All of the routes ended back at Olson Park for an after party for the riders.

Orsted said more than half of the riders chose the 100-mile route.

Arbor Brewing Co. in Ann Arbor provided two kegs for the ending celebration, and food was provided by Tio's Mexican Café and Zingerman's MSSC, Toyota, Two Wheel Tango and Ann Arbor's 107.1 FM also helped to sponsor the event.

"ALS is such an expensive disease that we try to alleviate some of the cost," said Kristen Munyan, a registered nurse employed with the ALS Association.

Munyan said that in addition to providing patient services, support groups and information to those affected by ALS, the Michigan chapter of the ALS Association helps to manage a loan closet of medical beds, electric wheelchairs and other equipment needed by those diagnosed with ALS.

ALS Association Development Coordinator Joe Kulwicki of Sterling Heights said a committee consisting of bike riders helped plot the routes for the Gears and Beers ride.

Kulwicki said though many event participants are from all across Michigan, Ann Arbor is a favorite location to hold Gears and Beers.

"(Ann Arbor is) such a huge bike riding community," he said.

Throughout the three years Gears and Beers has been in existence, the event has only grown.

In its first year, Gears and Beers had 33 registered riders. Last year drew in 110 riders and 2010 saw upward of 127 bikers.

Kulwicki is pleased with the growing support.

"Besides the fact that we're raising money (for ALS), we're raising awareness," he said.

Orsted said Michigan is currently facing the second highest rate of ALS diagnosis in the United States.

Hutchins said she was glad the opportunity to fundraise could mean further progress into finding a cure for ALS, a disease that affects her entire family.

"Research is really important to our family," she said.

"If you have the gene, at some point in your life, you might develop it," she said.

Hutchins' husband, Charlie Cowan, rode right alongside her in the 25-mile route to raise money and awareness.

"For a supposedly rare disease, it's really easy to find people in your life that are affected by it," he said.

Also affected by ALS are Lainie Smith of Livonia and her 9-year-old daughter, Isabel.

Lainie's mother was diagnosed with Bulbar ALS at the age of 64, and died two years later.

"It's a disease that not too many people know about," she said. "I wish that more people knew about this disease."

Lainie herself was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis and is almost blind. She was unable to participate in the bike ride, so she signed up as a volunteer along with Isabel.

The mother-daughter pair worked at the second rest stop for the 74-mile and 100-mile route.

ALS took a quick toll on Lainie Smith's mother's body. Quickly after being diagnosed, she lost her voice and the ability to eat.

"I would give anything to hear my mother's voice again," Lainie Smith said with tears in her eyes. "The only thing I have left is a saved message on a cell phone."

Poor execution plagues 'A-Team'

Hey, I'm Ryan Michaels, a 13-year-old writing movie reviews for Heritage Newspapers. I've been doing it for two years, and enjoy it a lot. Here's my review of "The A-Team."

"The A-Team" was a popular TV show in the 1980s, as at its peak it attracted some 40 million viewers, that revolved around four men who were constantly on the run from the government for a crime they didn't commit.

Enter its contemporary re-imagining, named (get this) "The A-Team." It stars Liam Neeson, Bradley Cooper, Sharlto Copley and Quinton Jackson as the four men, and the plot remains essentially the same, although obviously the time setting has been shifted to modern times, not the '80s in which the original show took place.

Regardless, the original TV show was about big, grand, cartoonish, over-the-top action, and that's pretty much also the primary focus of this 2010 remake. The four principal actors (Neeson, Copley, Cooper and Jackson) never once take their roles seriously, and subsequently are a total blast to watch.

Neeson and Copley, in particular, really ham it up, adding a layer of sheer craziness to the film. Also, it's really hard not to admire just how over-the-top the film often goes.

Most action films try to keep at least one foot dipped in the pond that is realism, but "The A-Team" absconds entirely from even the slight trace of reality.

The aspects about this particular film that bugged me are mostly technical. For one, the visual effects in this film are absolutely awful. One particular shot late in the film, where hundreds of crates collapse unto each other, would look more fitting in a Nintendo 64 game than a $120 million action film.

Another thing about the film that was absolutely wretched was the cinematography. In recent films like "Cloverfield" and the Bourne series, filmmakers have used a handheld camera to add an element of instability and shakiness (hence the term, "shaky-cam").

Director Joe Carnahan employs "shaky-cam" here, and the results are disastrous.

The action sequences are often impossible to follow, simply because the camera is constantly shaking and the editing is far too quick. This unfortunately ruins a pretty massive chunk of the film, considering how the film is action-centric.

Overall, "The A-Team" is grand, dumb action.

Canoeing and kayaking enthusiasts will take great interest in regional author Doc Fletcher's speaking engagement to be held Wednesday at the Saline District Library.

Fletcher, who is known professionally and personally as "Doc," is author of two books on the subject, "Weekend Canoeing in Michigan" and "Michigan Rivers Less Paddled." He spends much of his time traversing rivers in Michigan and Wisconsin researching for future titles.

Fletcher attended Eastern Michigan University from 1972 to 1976, and it was while he was there that friends introduced him to the joy of canoeing.

After navigating a northern river for the first time, Fletcher said he knew this type of boating would become a life-long pursuit.

"I organized a trip the very next month on the Pine River," he said.

It was not until retiring from a 30-year career at Duracell in September 2006 that Fletcher was able to concentrate on his hobby full time.

"This is now my work," he said. "I paddle about 30 rivers a year."

After writing his first book, Fletcher said libraries and nature centers began contacting him to talk about his experiences canoeing and kayaking, and the momentum has only continued to build from there.

"This year, I have 45 dates booked already," he said, indicating he is taking more bookings all of the time. "I'll be in Wisconsin Sept. 2 as part of a U.P. trip."

The southeast Michigan resident said he writes his books out of love for the natural beauty of his home state, and the chapters of each text follow a consistent and user-friendly format.

For each river, a detailed synopsis of what to expect while traversing the body of water is included, information on finding the local Detroit Tigers affiliate radio channel, as well as directions to a good local pub near the river where tales of the day's adventures can be shared over a beer.

"These are the three main ingredients that make a river fun," he said. "Not just in my own experience, but from my friends' also."

The official title of Fletcher's talk at the library is "Canoeing and Kayaking through Michigan and Wisconsin," and will culminate in one lucky guest winning a free canoe or kayak trip.

"We hold a free drawing for a day trip," he said, citing canoe liveries in Michigan and Wisconsin as the donors of gift certificates.

Fletcher also will have his books available for purchase. "I will sign and sell copies of my books," he said.

Fletcher said the events draw enthusiasts of all ages and skill levels, and guests often share as many of their own stories as he shares.

"There's always a lot of questions and comments," he said.

Fletcher's next book to be released is based upon Wisconsin rivers, but the author said traveling far and wide for his work with Duracell has relieved him of the urge to go too much farther than Michigan's neighboring state.

"That is one thing I was happy to get away from," he said of traveling long distances.

"Wisconsin is blessed with beautiful rivers, much like Michigan."

Fletcher is also planning another book to be released a few years from now about one of the first rivers to inspire him.

"I'm planning a book about the entire length of the Pere Marquette River," he said.

The event, "Canoeing and Kayaking through Michigan and Wisconsin" will take place in the Brecon Room of the Saline District Library at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

Reservations are requested and can be obtained by calling 429-5450 or by stopping by the adult reference desk.

Chambers want to bring in eco-tourists

Idea is to entice visitors heading to MIS, Waterloo

By Daniel Lai
Heritage Newspapers

Strength in numbers was the idea poised to representatives from Jackson and western Washtenaw counties at the Michigan International Speedway Friday. While thousands of NASCAR fans were in attendance for the ARKA Racing for Wildlife 200 event, a small group of representatives from MIS and The Conservation Fund met with officials from the city of Chelsea and Manchester Village to update them on the Gateway Communities initiative.

Bob Pierce, executive director of the Chelsea Area Chamber of Commerce, said the idea is to utilize places such as Manchester, Chelsea, Dexter, Grass Lake and Jackson in a new way that markets both open land, as well as attract tourists to local communities. It would be an effort to take advantage of the thousands of recreational visitors that visit the Waterloo area, located outside of Chelsea, each year.

"What we want is to get some regional support to develop the county and create a solid economic engine," Pierce said. "Ecotourism is a fast-growing market and there are a lot of campers coming into towns on their way to Waterloo. None of us can identify Waterloo as ours, and this was always going to be a multi-community project."

Pierce said Chelsea has taken the lead and will launch its first marketing effort by offering campers at Sugarloaf Lake the chance to participate in a "quest," that takes them to different sites around the city, ending at the chamber of commerce office.

"It will give us an idea to see if we can make this work to our benefit," he said.

Ray Berg, president of the Manchester Area Chamber of Commerce, said he was attracted to the proposal early on.

"The idea is to try and get chambers to work as a cross promotional tool and not as separate entities," he said. "If

Bob Pierce, executive director of the Chelsea Area Chamber of Commerce, said the idea is to utilize places such as Manchester, Chelsea, Dexter, Grass Lake and Jackson in a new way that markets both open land, as well as attract tourists to local communities.

Chelsea can make it work for them, we felt we could make it work for us."

Though Berg remains skeptical that visitors to Waterloo will drive to Manchester, he said the initiative can be implemented to attract visitors from the Irish Hills and Hayes State Park.

Berg has committed to send some members of the chamber to a training session in Chelsea later this year and has set a deadline of 2011 to have a plan in place to establish Manchester as a gateway community.

Ginny Trocchio, project director for the Conservation Fund, said the Waterloo Recreation Area attracts as many as 650,000 visitors each year. It's an asset that requires no further investments or development projects to be utilized by the surrounding communities.

Michigan's tourism industry is also the second-largest industry in the state. Tourism brings in billions of dollars for the state every year, especially recently after the incredibly successful Pure Michigan campaign began.

"We need to use these assets in a way we've never thought of them before," Pierce said.

"This whole western part of Washtenaw County has the potential to use these natural assets to our advantage, including our rivers like the Raisin and Huron rivers."

Berg said partnering with MIS also can be beneficial to local communities.

"We need to find a way to tap into the fans that come out to MIS," he said. "Maybe it's the wife who wants to go shopping while her husband is at the race, or the family that needs some last-minute groceries. Manchester can offer something for those people who come into town for a race."

Pierce said research shows 57 percent of NASCAR fans spend multiple days in the region.

Pierce said he is looking forward to Chelsea hosting a series of workshops titled "Balancing nature and commerce" in the coming months.

"If we all have the same tools and can talk the same language, we can all benefit greatly," he said.

Art patrons raise $80K

Art patrons from Plymouth, Northville and South Lyon helped raise $80,000 for local hospice services during the Arbor Hospice Art Dash.

Organizers said this year's event was the nonprofit's most successful Art Dash on record. "We are extremely grateful to our sponsors for their generosity along with those who participated and supported this year's event," said Gloria Danna Brooks, president and CEO of Arbor Hospice, in a news release.

"The money raised at Art Dash will help provide pediatric hospice care and grief support to patients and their families."

More than 200 people attended the May 20 event at The Inn at St. John's Golf and Conference Center in Plymouth. The day's activities included a raffle, live auction and the opportunity for each couple to "dash" for a piece of art of their choice.

"The Art Dash event has been an extremely successful fundraising effort," Brooks said. "We are in the process of developing a new event for 2011 to extend the long line of creative endeavors that have supported The Foundation."

Arbor Hospice has named Terri Denhof of Northville and Kristie Martin of Ann Arbor as chairs for next year's event.

Since its inception in 2002, Art Dash has raised more than $466,000 for The Arbor Hospice Foundation, while raising awareness for the local art community.

Proceeds support Arbor Hospice's pediatric end-of-life care and grief support services for children, adolescents and adults throughout Western Wayne, Oakland and Washtenaw counties.

Middle Bead, Just Imagine hold grand opening event

By Daniel Lai
Heritage Newspapers

Though two of Chelsea's newest businesses have been open for little over a month, the Chelsea Area Chamber of Commerce helped celebrate the grand opening of the Middle Bead and Just Imagine bookstore on Middle Street with an official ribbon cutting Tuesday.

"I am happy to be back in Chelsea," Marc Rafferty, owner of the Middle Bead said.

The Middle Bead has been in business for six years but closed its downtown location last year in favor of working out of Rafferty's home in Stockbridge.

"I am grateful for this opportunity," she said. "I really wanted to be back in the public."

Rafferty said she had closed her downtown location to help reduce overhead cost and work more with sales online.

"When the owners of the bookstore approached us, I was excited," she said.

Rafferty said she knows Jeremy Montague, manager of Just Imagine, and is comfortable sharing space with the business.

"You have to trust each other because my clients will be coming and going through the bookstore," she said. "It's worked out. We haven't had any bad moments. I am waiting with baited breath to see what the economy does."

Rafferty said the selling point was an elevator that provides access to the Middle Bead for handicapped and elderly customers.

The Middle Bead sells semi-precious, glass and vintage beads as well as buttons and other bead-related products and jewelry.

"I always loved beads and jewelry," she said. "I don't think this is what my parents had in mind when I went off to college."

Rafferty said she hopes the business is one she will continue through retirement.

Rafferty said she is looking forward to meeting new customers and will offer classes on beading in the store in the coming months.

"All you have to do is come in and sign up," she said. "I plan to get children involved. It's something they can do and not get discouraged at."

A former resident of California, Rafferty said she loves Michigan and plans to live out her days in Chelsea.

"I love the small town friendliness of the people," she said. "I also love the seasons changing in Michigan."

The Middle Bead is open from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. It is located at 108 E. Middle St.

Bill Harris, owner of Just Imagine, said business has slowly progressed since opening.

Harris said the store has added more inventory and now offers used CDs and CDs featuring local musicians.

"It takes awhile to get the word out, but we're happy to be here," Harris said.

Harris said in the coming months he hopes to acquire more music inventory.

"We have quite a few things now that I think people will enjoy," he said.

Just Imagine is open Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m., Thursdays from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m., Fridays and Saturdays from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m., and Sundays from noon to 3 p.m.

Artists sought for local project

RusticGroove Dance and Mocha Dance Project are inviting all artists to submit works for their upcoming site-specific performance. "Millstones" is a dance work that is inspired by wartime stories and depictions of humans surviving major world conflicts (the Holocaust, the conflicts in Northern Ireland, Sudan and Northern Uganda, the Civil Rights movement, and World War II).

The concert will take place at the Armory Arts Village in Jackson on Aug. 28. The Armory was a 19th century prison, the first in Michigan. The Armory was recently converted into an artist residence and gallery. "Millstones" will take place in the great hall and embodies the architecture, history, and essence of the historic space.

Artists interested in participating can contact Shauna at dancemocha@yahoo.com before July 9. Deadline for submissions will be Aug. 6. Art pieces will be available for pick-up on Aug. 29.

Works should reflect the theme of the evening, and speak to the humanity found within major conflicts. Pieces should address the question: How do humans cope and survive during times of extreme suffering?

For more information visit www.rusticgroovedance.org.

WIN FREE CONCERT TICKETS

Once we reach 200 people who "like us" on Facebook, we will give away two tickets for the Boyz II Men/Vogue concert, 7:30 p.m. July 15 at DTE Energy Music Theatre. The winner will be randomly selected from our fans on Facebook. So, tell your friends about us, help us reach our goal, and you could be the lucky one!

Thirty-four personnel to retire from Chelsea Schools

By Crystal Hayduk
Staff Writer

The Chelsea Schools Board of Education meeting opened Monday evening with a moment of silence to honor Air Force 1st Lt. Joel Gentz, a 2002 graduate of Chelsea High School who was killed last week in Afghanistan.

Superintendent David Killips announced that the district has received retirement announcements from 18 professional staff and 16 support staff. Five staff members remain on layoff - two from the current round of layoffs and three from last year.

In the continuing effort to meet the deficit reduction goals, the board approved the following non-union wage and benefit adjustments for the 2010-11 school year:

• A base package of benefits, with employee option to purchase a higher level

• No step increases in pay, however, employees will be given a 1 percent increase of the current wage

• A reduction from $5,000 to $2,000 for "cash instead of insurance."

In other board action:

• The board approved funds for several projects. Projects approved include $219,400 in 2009 bond proceeds for playground structures and surfacing at both North Creek and South Meadows Elementary Schools; $60,500 in sinking fund proceeds for the renovations of two classrooms at Chelsea High School; and $356,000 from 2009 bond proceeds for computers at South Meadows and Beach Middle School.

• Bond proceeds from 2009 will also cover the cost of musical instruments and equipment at South Meadows.

for a total of nearly $74,000. Killips said that these items were expected to cost $100,000, but that the music teachers worked with multiple suppliers to get the best prices and came under budget by $26,000.

• Several policies were added or revised regarding school sponsored publications, security, Internet usage, and communications.

• During public input, Connie Cook, a member of the transportation department, addressed the board regarding the tentative wage agreement with the district.

Cook said that the department had voted to allow a significant decrease in pay because they were concerned about losing their jobs to the Washtenaw Intermediate School District. She reported that she had attended the meetings with the WISD, and that 22 questions remain unanswered.

"We transport children, not Styrofoam peanuts," she said.

Board President Laurel McDevitt said that the board has not made any decision regarding whether or not to vote on joining with the WISD for transportation.

• Killips reported that at the state level, the School Aid Fund now has an unexpected $300 million excess, likely due to increases in receipts from sales tax since January. The state's general fund has a deficit of about the same amount. As a result, the state may allow public universities and community colleges, which receive money from the general fund, to use some of the School Aid fund that has historically been considered a K-12 fund.

"They say it's not a matter of when, but how much they'll dip," Killips said. "The board commended the girls' track team for taking third place in the state."

• The next board meeting will be at 6 p.m. June 26 at the Washington Street Education Center.

Gardening project benefits seniors

By Cathy Burris
Guest Writer

Its officially gardening time and Chelsea seniors are not retired from this seasonal hobby. A special program was launched in the Chelsea community that brings together seniors and children by participating in activities.

Two senior volunteers and 14 preschool children began gardening together in a new intergenerational project at Rainbow Child Care Center in Chelsea.

With support from the Chelsea Area Garden Club and Wackenhut Gardens, two raised beds were installed in the playground of the child care center.

On June 2, the children and seniors came together and filled the gardens with watermelon, peas, tomatoes, flowers and herbs.

"It was fun to see the children and seniors working together; the children especially are curious and excited about learning to garden."

Lindsay Bacon of the Chelsea Senior Center said.

Bacon said intergenerational programs are valuable to all involved.

"In the rush of everyday life, children are not exposed to senior citizens outside of their own families, and even then, sometimes they are separated by senior housing or living far away from each other," she said. "The interaction between the young and old teaches children how to respect their elders and also to learn from their wisdom and experience."

For seniors the interaction with children can give purpose, be therapeutic, and even laughter inducing.

"I'm grateful that the Chelsea Senior Center welcomed my proposal to start this program, from previous experience in a program designed for the generations. I'm so happy to bring something so wonderful to the Chelsea Area. It's touching to witness the friendships form, the inspiration from both generations, and the smiles on everyone's faces," program director Cathy Burris of Rainbow Child Care Center said.

One senior involved in the project is a retired reading specialist and an avid gardener. The project is providing an opportunity to her to be a teacher again and to share her passion for gardening with young minds.

The intergenerational gardening project at Rainbow Child Care Center will continue throughout the summer with weekly weeding and garden tending. Later this summer, the children and seniors will be able to enjoy the fruits and vegetables from the garden.

The children are especially excited to see what will develop from the seeds they have planted and to enjoy the opportunity of eating a home grown watermelon.

The children and staff of Rainbow Child Care Center look forward to other wonderful future activities shared together.

SOS seeks program volunteers

Local community members have the opportunity to open their hearts and support children in need. SOS Community Services is recruiting volunteers for Sunny Day, a seven-week summer activities program for at-risk and homeless youth ages 6 to 12 in Washtenaw County.

The program helps children develop social skills and engages youth in activities that promote positive self-esteem and academic achievement.

Volunteers do not need any prior experience. All training will be provided. Prospective volunteers should be dependable, willing to learn and interested in making a positive difference in the lives of children.

Sunny Days will be held at First Methodist Church in Ypsilanti from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. beginning June 28. Volunteers are asked to commit at least two days each week and to attend a weekly staff meeting every Wednesday. Also, all volunteers are required to attend a six-hour training before the start of the program.

Volunteers' duties include assisting staff with daily activities, field trips and transporting children to various places.

The Village of Dexter strives to provide the best quality drinking water possible. This report is intended to provide you with useful information about drinking water and satisfy USEPA and MDEQ notification requirements.

Dexter's water comes from 3 wells located behind the Dexter Chevrolet dealership off of Ryan Drive. These wells are 200 feet deep and access a confined aquifer. Water from each of these wells is pumped to the city's iron removal plant on Central Street. Air is introduced into the water to oxidize iron and arsenic to iron hydroxide. This process also strips out hydrogen sulfide, a naturally occurring contaminant that has a foul odor. After air stripping, the water is passed through a series of sand filters to remove any suspended solids and the oxidized iron from the water. The water is then disinfected to kill harmful bacteria. Finally, the water is pumped into the water tower in the industrial park and is ready to be used by the public. In 2003, the State of Michigan conducted triennial testing to determine the relative potential for contamination of our wells by surface pollutants. The Dexter aquifer was classified as: not vulnerable to casual contamination, and the Dexter Wellhead Protection Program was instituted to help protect against other threats to our water.

So what's new since last year? Water main improvements were made at Third St. and at the 4th well project on both sides of Main St. The 4th well project started construction at the Dexter High School. Water quality monitoring revealed copper corrosion in the new water lines of the most recently built subdivisions in the Dexter water system. The council passed adding fluoridation to the water treatment plant (OHM) was commissioned to design a treatment system for fluoridation and to control copper corrosion. The water treatment plant improvements will be completed by 2011.

The following is official USEPA language on contaminants that may be in untreated water:

The sources of drinking water (both tap water and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs, and wells. As water travels through the ground, it dissolves naturally occurring minerals and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or from human activity. These include: microbial contaminants, such as viruses and bacteria; inorganic contaminants, such as salts and metals; organic chemicals, such as pesticides and herbicides; and radioactive substances, which can be naturally occurring.

All drinking water including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants even after treatment. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that the water poses a health risk. More information about the contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the EPA's Safe Drinking Water Hotline at 1-800-426-4791.

In order to ensure that tap water is safe, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) prescribes regulations which limit the amount of certain contaminants in water provided by public water systems.

The following is official USEPA language on low resistance to infection:

Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS, or other immune system disorders, some elderly, and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA's guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by Cryptosporidium and other microbial contaminants are a disinfectant from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline: 1-800-426-4791.

The following is official USEPA language on Arsenic:

Some people who drink water containing arsenic in excess of the MCL over many years could experience skin damage or problems with their circulatory system, and may have an increased risk of getting cancer.

The following is official USEPA language on Copper. Copper is an essential nutrient, but some people who drink water containing copper in excess of the action level over a relatively short amount of time could experience gastrointestinal distress. Some people who drink water containing copper in excess of the action level over many years could suffer liver or kidney damage. People with Wilson's Disease should consult their personal doctor.

REGULATED CONTAMINANT	MCL	MCLD	DETERMINED ACTION LEVEL	DETERMINED ACTION LEVEL	DETERMINED ACTION LEVEL	DETERMINED ACTION LEVEL
Arsenic	10 ppb	0	4 ppb	1.5 ppb	No	Excess of natural deposits
Fluoride	4 ppm	4 ppm	0.4 ppm	0.4 ppm	No	Excess of natural deposits, water additive for dental health
Nitrate	10 ppm	10 ppm	0.8 ppm	0.8 ppm	No	Excess of natural deposits, leaching from septic tanks

REGULATED CONTAMINANT	MCL	MCLD	DETERMINED ACTION LEVEL	DETERMINED ACTION LEVEL	DETERMINED ACTION LEVEL	DETERMINED ACTION LEVEL
Chlorine	4 ppm	4 ppm	0.2 ppm	0.1 ppm	No	Water additive used to control microbes

THMs (total trihalomethanes)	80 ppb	80 ppb	0.2-0.9 ppm	0.2-0.9 ppm	No	By-product of drinking water disinfection

Although not required to, the Village of Dexter also tests for several other factors:

Other Chemicals	Health Level (MCL)	Dexter Water	Health Level (MCL)	Typical Source of Contaminant
Chloride	No	68 ppm	68	Present from salt runoff, natural deposits
Sodium	No	40 ppm	44-54 ppm	Present from salt runoff, natural deposits

Calcium	No	87 ppm	86-88 ppm	Naturally occurring mineral
Magnesium	No	27 ppm	27	Naturally occurring mineral

No nitrates or microbial contaminants have been detected in the Dexter water supply.

VILLAGE OF DEXTER WATER QUALITY REPORT 2009

The following is official USEPA language on Lead. If present, elevated levels of lead can cause serious health problems, especially for pregnant women and young children. Lead in drinking water is primarily from materials and components associated with service lines and home plumbing. The Village of Dexter is responsible for providing high quality drinking water but cannot control the variety of materials used in plumbing components. When your water has been sitting for several hours you can minimize the potential for lead exposure by flushing your tap for 30 seconds to 2 minutes before using water for drinking or cooking. If you are concerned about lead in your water, you may wish to have your water tested. Information on lead in drinking water testing methods and steps you can take to minimize exposure is available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline or at <http://www.epa.gov/safewater/lead>.

There are three main causes of discoloration in Dexter's drinking water. Some of Dexter's water flows through test mains. These mains can rust making the water yellow or orange. Normally, the water is used-up quickly, and the rust flushes out of the system. Rusty water is most often observed first thing in the morning after the water has experienced slow flow conditions overnight.

Tiny amounts of sediment remain suspended in the water as it leaves the treatment plant, normally in amounts too small to measure. However, with millions of gallons of water flowing through a water main, the sediment can accumulate to visible levels. The sediment sticks to the walls of the water main and stays there until a fire hydrant is opened. A valve is operated for construction or maintenance or a water main breaks. This problem can be solved by flushing the water gently, usually from a fire hydrant until the sediment is gone.

If the water is milky white, there is extra air in the water. Once water is drawn from the tap this color clears quickly from the bottom up. At that point, the water is no longer under pressure and the extra dissolved air is free to escape in the form of tiny bubbles. This is normal and in fact desirable, since non-aerated water tends to taste flat.

Although discolored water may be aesthetically displeasing, contact with discolored water is not normally a health risk. Persistently discolored water should still be reported to the Dexter Utilities Department, however. Recently, there has been more rusty water than usual because of construction issues and water theft by individuals illegally opening hydrants.

There are a number of things you can do to reduce water use and lower your monthly bill:

Inside the house you can:
• Check toilets and faucets for leaks and repair.
• Take shorter showers.
• Turn off water while shaving or brushing your teeth.
• Only run your dishwasher when it is full.
• Install water saving showerheads and low flush toilets.

Outside the house you can try these steps:
• Use a broom to sweep your sidewalk or driveway rather than hosing it off.
• Only water your lawn when it is needed. Use sprinklers rather than sprinklers.
• Water in early morning or late evening. This avoids evaporation and is actually better for your plants.
• Allow your grass to grow to a greater length.
• Plant native trees, shrubs, flowers and grasses which are more drought tolerant and need less watering.

Q: What can I do to help protect the watershed?

The Village of Dexter needs your help to protect our drinking water and its source. Here are tips on actions you can take to help protect the watershed:

Recycle, recycle, recycle! Properly dispose of household toxics such as cleaning products, paint, pesticides, solvents, and used motor oil. Recycle grass clippings or mulch them.

Remember that all storm drains lead to the Huron River. Don't dump into the street or drains.

Seal the poop. Pick up after your pets. Minimize water runoff from your property. Be sure your house gutters and downspouts lead to your lawn, not to paved surfaces.

Avoid erosion. Seed exposed dirt and restore any bare patches on your lawn.

Do not overuse fertilizer or pesticides. Test your soil first to see what it really needs. Don't fertilize before rainstorms. Rain washes both into the storm sewer and the Huron River.

Water your lawn as little as possible. Even numbered, addresses should water on even numbered days. Odd numbered, addresses on odd numbered days. Remember, reducing watering will also reduce your bill.

Eliminate abandoned wells. These should be properly plugged and removed from service. Every well is a direct connection to the groundwater source.

Report all spills or suspicious activities in the watershed to the police by dialing 911.

PHILIP PARTICIPATION IS WELCOME. The Wellhead protection committee is open to any person, citizen who is interested in the Dexter Planning Office at 734-426-8303 ext 102.

NATE UDELL AND THE CHELSEA BASEBALL TEAM PLAYED RECENTLY AT U-M, PAGE 4C

IN REVIEW: CHELSEA TRACK & FIELD

August Pappas (center) led the pack all year for the Bulldogs and was named the team's most valuable player.

Pappas named boys MVP

The Chelsea boys' track team hosted its annual banquet last week and handed out individual and team awards. August Pappas was named the team's most valuable player. Alex Cuper was named most improved and Paul Ullisse earned the Southeastern Conference Sportsmanship award.

"We were pleased to have a very large squad out this year," said coach Eric Swager. "Although two-thirds of them were first year athletes, we managed to scrape together another winning season (at least 13 straight)."

Swager's philosophy is to not neglect the junior varsity runners.

"We coach them with the same attention and intensity that we coach the 'stars' of the team," Swager said. "This includes morning practices, and weekend sessions when necessary. This approach paid dividends, as a lot of the JV types starting the season moved into quality roles at the end. Six freshmen earned varsity letters, and virtually all athletes ended the season performing much better than they began."

"We can never control the unexpected, but as coaches we can always do the best with what we have each year. I am proud of how this team grew and competed throughout the season. I would also like to thank all the parents, fans, and volunteers that helped make this season run smoothly."

The following is a summary of the 2010 boys' track season:

Girls have history of success

By Bill Bainton
Guest Writer

I am writing on behalf of the athletes on the Chelsea girls' track teams of 1992 and 1993, many of whom still live or have connections in the area. The article about the 2010 Chelsea girls' track team in the Chelsea Standard on June 3, 2010 included the quote, "this is the first Chelsea track team to go undefeated up to this point."

That statement is not true! Although it may be the first team to do this since Mr. Clarke became head coach, it has been accomplished twice before. The 1992 girls team was 10-0 in dual meets, undefeated in invitational, and won both the SEC and regional meets. The 1993 team was 8-0 in dual meets, and again undefeated in invitational, and winners of the SEC and regional meets.

The 1991 team was 9-0, but had a second-place finish to Class C state champion Frankenmuth in their only non-winning invitational.

Along with the 1990 and 1994 teams, this collection of young ladies compiled a winning streak of 36 consecutive dual meets over those five seasons, won 12 of 17 invitationals, won four consecutive SEC conference meets (90-93) and finished second in 1994, won three consecutive regionals (92-94), with a second (92) and a third (91) in the other two.

Perhaps deserving honorable mention is the 1986 team which was 6-0 and SEC champions but finished second in the regional by two points yet doubled the score of the third-place team. Unfortunately, this team lost in two invitationals, once to Ann Arbor Pioneer, and once to Ypsilanti, both class A powers at that time.

The 1995 team finished 10-0 in dual meets, but only managed a second in the regional, and a third in the SEC meet resulting in a three way tie for the conference championship.

This by no means is meant to diminish the tremendous accomplishments of the 2010 girls' track team. I am certain that I speak for all CHS girls' track alumni when I offer them our congratulations. We are proud to add their achievements to the tradition of excellence of the girls' track program.

Bill Bainton was the head coach of the Chelsea High School girls' track team from 1976-2005.

Chelsea Little League roundup Mantle U-16 team starts season with three wins

The Chelsea Mantle Under-16 little league baseball team improved to 3-0 on the season after a successful week.

The Chelsea Mantle baseball team started its summer season June 2 against Stockbridge. Logan Marable tossed a 2 hitter and went the distance pitching an excellent game striking out 6 and walking 2 batters. Tom Olsen went 3-3 for the Bulldogs as Lagan Marable, Jayden Sweeny and Eric Newman all collected two hits each while Gibson Stoffer, Mitchell Grande, and Brandon Sullivan all had hits in the game.

After a rescheduled game against Concord, Chelsea drove to Hanover and again Logan Marable took the mound and once more went the distance striking out 11 batters with 7 hits in a 12-4 win. Gibson Stoffer, Logan Marable and Jayden Sweeny had two hits as Logan Marable smashed 2 doubles. Mitchell Grande, Brett Argir, Blake Orbring Avery Osestoski and Craig Reiley all had hits.

The Friday game pitted a strong JV East Jackson squad against Chelsea and after a well defended game of both sides Chelsea came through with the victory. Calling upon Logan Marable to match up against The East Jackson pitching he once again went the distance, allowing only 2 hits and striking out 6 batters and giving up no walks. Logan also went 2-for-3 and Mitchell Grande's well hit double sparked the team. Logan and Eric Newman scored in the 6th inning giving the lead and final score to the Bulldogs 3-2.

The Chelsea Bulldogs plays in the Jackson League playing against Columbia, Concord, Lumen Christi, Vandercook lake, Jackson as well as Stockbridge, two Hanover teams and East Jackson.

Under 14 Lightning

The Chelsea Lightning (under-14) had a great week of practices that led up to their trip to Manchester last Thursday. The Lightning proved once again that the Chelsea teams and players are a force to be reckoned with this summer and many seasons to come with a 15-7 victory in a time shortened six inning game.

Frank Shanley started on the hill going 2 1/3 innings allowing 3 runs on 5 hits and 3 walks while striking out 2. Kolten Savery came in to relieve Frank in the third inning with the bases loaded and only one out in a close game with the Lightning only up by three runs. Kolten struck out the next batter and Frank followed that up with a spectacular catch at third base to end the Manchester rally. Kolten finished with 2 2/3 innings pitched allowing 3 runs, on 5 hits and 0 walks while striking out 6 more for a team leading total of 40 for the season.

Craig Reiley came in to pitch the final inning, shutting down Manchester and securing another great win for the Lightning.

The Lightning offense, which had 11 hits and 11 walks, was led by Michael Purdy, Kolten Savery and Craig Reiley who each had two hits. Travis Kaiser, Ryan Eisley, Paul Heck, Frank Shanley and Trevor Branham contributed with one hit each. Michael Purdy scored four times and Craig Reiley added two more RBI for his team leading 15 for the season. With the offensive balance up and down the lineup, the Lightning are displaying what team effort is all about.

Under 14 Thunder

The Chelsea Thunder got back to their winning ways after a hard played game against Saline as they took on Manchester. The combined pitching of Zach Leblanc, Mitchell Mills, Ryan Knight, and Jacob Leblanc held the Dutchmen to seven hits while striking out 12 batters in a 15-6 win. Ben Whitesall and Sam Almhiemid both had 2 hits and Mike Purdy, Ryan Knight, Zach Leblanc, Jack Kloviski and Ryan Schultz all had hits in the game.

The Thunder then returned home to face the Stockbridge Panthers on Saturday and behind the pitching of Ryan Knight, Zach Leblanc and Jacob Leblanc tossed a 2 hitter while striking out 11 Panther batters and allowing only three walks in an 8-1 win. Mike Purdy, Sam Almhiemid and Chris Hanselman pounded out 2 hits each while Zach Leblanc, Jacob Leblanc, Travis Kaiser, Will McEachern all collected solid base hits for the Thunder.

Both victories saw excellent defensive plays along with great timely hits and base running.

The Thunder is 5-2-1 this season.

Soccer seniors

The Chelsea soccer team had an outstanding season, one of the best in the school's history, despite a district final loss to Ann Arbor Skyline. Helping lead the way was a talented group of seniors, who were honored before the last home regular-season game. The Chelsea seniors were Cara Johnson (front, left to right), Kelly Fournier, Sarah Bingel and Chelsea Vincent.

Reddeman Farms hosts B-A-R golf outing July 10

By Don Richter

Heritage Newspapers

The fourth annual B-A-R Memorial Golf Outing benefiting ovarian cancer research at the University of Michigan is set for July 10 at Reddeman Farms Golf Course in Chelsea. The event is in honor of Barbara Ann Robson who passed away from ovarian cancer in 2006. Her husband, Mike Robson, PGA golf pro at Reddeman Farms, is the founder and organizer of the fund-raiser.

"Last year's outing raised over $10,300 bringing our grand total to $34,300 which was donated to the University of Michigan obstetrics and gynecology (departments)," said Robson, who last year welcomed 150 participants to the charity event. "Proceeds from last year's golf outing allowed us to start the Barbara Ann Robson Ovarian Cancer Research Award for medical students."

It is important that young physicians and scientists become aware of and are engaged early in their career to fight this disease. The award, in Barb's name, will inspire future doctors and researchers in their battle against ovarian cancer. Last year, the first recipient of the award was Heather Wahl, a medical student at U-M.

Robson said one of his main goals is to raise awareness of ovarian cancer.

"Cancer is never easy to deal with," he said. "There are multiple tests for breast cancer, which allows for early detection, but for ovarian cancer there never has been a test. This is part of my goal, what I'm working toward. It's (ovarian cancer) kind of the quiet cancer. It's the most deadly form of cancer because it's often times found late."

Rebecca Liu, M.D., associate professor, Division of Gynecologic Oncology, Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the University of Michigan Comprehensive Cancer Center, was Barbara's doctor. Liu has been a major participant and supporter of the B-A-R Memorial event from its inception.

"Barb was relatively young when she succumbed to ovarian cancer," Liu said. "She has two children, a multitude of nieces and nephews and several sisters. As I have young children myself, I could picture myself in her shoes and could not imagine how she managed to keep her family afloat emotionally and spiritually. Ovarian cancer is not the most common cancer among women, and the symptoms of advanced disease, including bloating, vague abdominal discomfort and pelvic pressure, are often misdiagnosed as gastritis or other more benign conditions. By holding the B-A-R event every year, Mike is able to reach parts of the community that would have never even heard about this disease."

Liu said she would never forget the first B-A-R Memorial outing.

"I remember asking her (Barbara's) daughter (Danielle) how things were going. I think she was around 10- or 11-years-old, and she said, 'Well, I think I am going to learn how to cook because my dad...' and then she shook her head. We laughed together, but at the same time, I had tears in my eyes."

Liu said she has kept in close contact with the Robsons over the years. Besides Mike and Danielle, the Robsons also include son Matt.

"Last fall, her (Barbara's) husband Mike and her daughter came to visit our laboratory," Liu said. "The proceeds of the B-A-R fund-raising event support some of the research we do in finding innovative ways to treat chemo-resistant ovarian cancer. We had the opportunity to talk about how their support has impacted the work that we do. Support from the B-A-R fund-raiser has served to fund medical students interested in pursuing a career in this area and to help us obtain preliminary results that resulted in funding from the Department of Defense."

Robson said he is looking for hole sponsors or donations for this year's event that could be used as gifts for the outing. Cost for hole sponsorship is $75.

This year's B-A-R Memorial event begins with registration at 7 a.m., followed by coffee and rolls at 7:30 a.m., and a shotgun start at 8 a.m.

Cost to participate in the outing is $100 per player. The fee includes the use of a golf cart, golf, lunch at the turn, drinks, dinner and prizes. The field is officially limited to 40 teams, but Robson said everyone is welcomed to play nonetheless.

"We just want to get the message out (about ovarian cancer)," he said. "It doesn't matter if a single player or two players or four players want to participate. I want to get them in the outing. If they want to play, just call me, and I'll get them on a team."

Robson said a highlight of last year's event was a hole-in-one which included a very extravagant prize.

"We gave away a new car," Robson said. "Ted Hanss, a Manchester resident, hit his first ever hole-in-one on our 175-yard Hole No. 7. For that, he won a car from Pinckney Chrysler. We've always had the car (for the event), but never had the opportunity to give it away. It doesn't happen very often."

Liu said the golf outing and resultant funds that have been raised since its beginning, is a fitting tribute to Barbara.

"Barb came from a family and a community who supported her every step of the way," she said. "At least one of her sisters always accompanied her to every appointment. Multiple friends, colleagues and acquaintances of Barb's who were connected to U-M in any way always asked me about how she was doing throughout her disease course. Although I was not able to share her specific medical condition with them, I knew that she was loved by many."

For additional information on the B-A-R Memorial Golf Outing, contact Robson at 734-475-3020 or 734-216-0506.

Family affair

Ryan Buege and his father, Paul, have been enjoying the benefits of training together at Saline ATA Martial Arts under the instruction of Mr. Paul Tobos. Recently, they walked with a group from the ATA school in the Saline Memorial Day Parade. Ryan, a purple belt, is 6 years-old and attends Lawton Elementary in Ann Arbor. "Saline ATA provides our family with a fun activity and develops skill sets that will last a lifetime," says Paul Buege, currently a camouflage belt. Buege works in the Health Care industry and is employed by Baxter.

Busy spring

It's going to be a busy next couple of weeks in Saline and Milan. While most athletic teams are packing up the equipment and preparing for summer vacation, the Hornets and Big Reds are still going strong. In Saline, both the baseball and softball teams are still alive in the state playoffs, while over in Milan, the softball squad is still battling in regional play.

Big Red Michael Craig and Hornet Al Zeiher each were selected to play in the Michigan High School Baseball Coaches Association All-Star Game last Monday at Comerica Park. And on Saturday (June 19), Milan offensive lineman Tom Box will play in the Michigan High School Football Coaches Association East-West All-Star Game at Michigan State University's Spartan Stadium.

Star on and off field

Ypsilanti senior Liz Herring admits it wasn't an easier year playing soccer in the tough SEC. But she says she wouldn't trade the experience for anything. For an athlete who has been playing soccer since she was in fifth grade, Herring says this season has been different in a lot of ways.

"It is a tougher season this year," Herring said. "We are not used to competing with teams that are so quick. I think we are doing better now than when the season first started." Herring has played varsity soccer for the Phoenix for four years and has also been on the varsity volleyball team.

She is in the ECA (Early College Alliance) program through Eastern Michigan University and will be graduating from that in a few weeks. When she does she will have completed 60 credits in college. As a scholar she will continue to get her bachelor's degree with a double major in biology and chemistry. After that she plans to attend Michigan State University and get a Master's degree in forensic science.

Ypsilanti coach Ed Huebner is proud of his star player.

"Liz clearly leads by example," Huebner said. "She is a dangerous player when attacking. But like all the other girls on the team, plays where the team needs her the most. I have played Liz as a backup goalie, on defense, mid-field and as a forward."

He said she is a great team player and always helps the younger kids.

"She is always trying to motivate teammates around her," he said. "She carries a special role on this team and we will really miss her next year."

Herring said that her coach is special as well.

"Coach Ed is so much fun," she said. "I have a deep respect for him. A lot of coaches would have given up on us but he keeps pushing us and telling we will shock someone."

Herring has advice to offer future athletes. "It takes a lot of practice and dedication to play sports," she said. "You have to put your heart into it and a lot of work but it is worth it when you are able to win."

Good luck, Stevie Y

Why Stevie Y? That's what I thought when I heard that Steve Yzerman is leaving Detroit and heading down south - way down south - to Tampa to be the general manager of the Tampa Bay Lightning. Huh? Why?

To me, Stevie is a northern type of guy. If memory serves me, I believe he was raised in Ottawa and, of course, spent many glorious years in Detroit with the Red Wings. I have a feeling Yzerman is going to melt down there in the hot Florida sun.

But, frankly, more than anything, it'll be somewhat sad to see such a local legend leave the area. And if anyone can turn sun-drenched Floridians into hockey fans, it's Stevie Y. A proven winner and leader, Yzerman will definitely make Tampa Bay a contender in the NHL year after year. It may take him a few seasons to get "his guys," but I bet sooner than later, Yzerman will have Tampa Bay fans standing and cheering for the Lightning and saying, "Buccaneers who?" and "Devil Rays who?"

Harwell Field

Ernie Harwell Field at Comerica Park? How does that sound? There's a movement going around for the late Hall of Fame Detroit Tigers broadcaster to have his name affixed to the Comerica Park field. I'd love for that to happen. How about just renaming Comerica Park, Harwell Field?

I bet some people would actually get behind that idea. Stay tuned. This movement could soon be gaining momentum.

Becoming a lighthouse keeper at Tawas Point

Imagine looking out your window and getting a bird's-eye view of sandy beaches, wetlands, shorebirds, an occasional fox and fresh blue water in almost every direction. From that same window, you can watch the sunrise and the sunset, all for just $225 per week. Sound too good to be true? Here's the catch - you live like a lighthouse keeper. That beautiful scenery is partially paid for with your own elbow grease.

Through the Tawas Point Keeper Program, regular folks apply to be a keeper for a week, usually Friday to Friday. Peggy Allen, a Department of Natural Resource and Environment (DNRE) historian at Tawas Point, coordinates the program. Allen welcomes and trains the keepers in everything from the history of the lighthouse to where to find the lawnmower. The keeper's primary responsibilities are to greet guests and tell the history of the light, but it often goes much further. Keepers quickly adapt to wearing many hats, from tour guide to gardener to window washer.

"Some of our keepers are teachers on break for the summer," Allen said. "Others are retirees. We create the week's chore list to match their skills and interests."

The current light is the second lighthouse at Tawas Point. The first was built in 1852, but because of prevailing north-east wind off Lake Huron, the point gradually stretched in a southwesterly direction. By 1876, shifting sands had deposited nearly a mile of land between the light and the end of the hook, and a new lighthouse was built farther out onto the point.

During that time period, keepers had to refuel the light every four to six hours and perform nearly all their own maintenance on the light, tower, dwellings and the property. Keepers made sure that everything was clean and tidy; they kept journals indicating what chores were completed that day, notes about the weather, and ships that had passed by.

Among the keepers' journals from Tawas, Samuel C. Palmer wrote on May 23, 1896: "washed kitchen and painted some - took me 'til half past six to do the job. Wife helped all day."

The last official lighthouse keeper closed the doors in 1953 when the light was automated. In 2001, the DNRE took ownership of the buildings and began restoring the 70-foot tower and dwelling. Two years later, the tower, with its 85 steps to the top, was opened to the public. In 2008, the 2,100 square-foot keepers dwelling was renovated. The first floor of the keepers' dwellings was furnished to show visitors what it would have looked like when official lighthouse keepers called it home. The second floor has modern conveniences for today's keepers, complete with a microwave and modern refrigerator.

Though keepers today don't maintain the actual light - that job is shouldered by the U.S. Coast Guard - keepers are typically busy all day. They, too, keep a journal of their day's activities, making it easy to draw parallels between keepers of the 1800s and keepers of the 2000s. One keeper in 2008 wrote: "washed the insides of the windows and swept away spider-webs - a never ending job I'm sure!" Other pages clearly show the duties have changed; an entry in 2009 reads: "We had approximately 140 visitors tour the lighthouse today, with the farthest guest coming from Germany."

It's certainly not all work and no play though. The lighthouse closes to tours at 6 p.m. and the keepers often head to town to treat themselves to a nice dinner, go for a walk along the trails, or just sit in the top of the tower and watch wildlife.

"One couple made sandwiches, brought them to the top of the tower and ate dinner while they watched a deer," Allen said.

Allen points out that there are two shipwrecks visible from the tower - the May Queen, wrecked in a snowstorm in 1859, and Table Rock, which ran aground or struck a sandbar during another storm in 1872. Visitors can wade into the water to get a closer look, but are not to touch or remove anything.

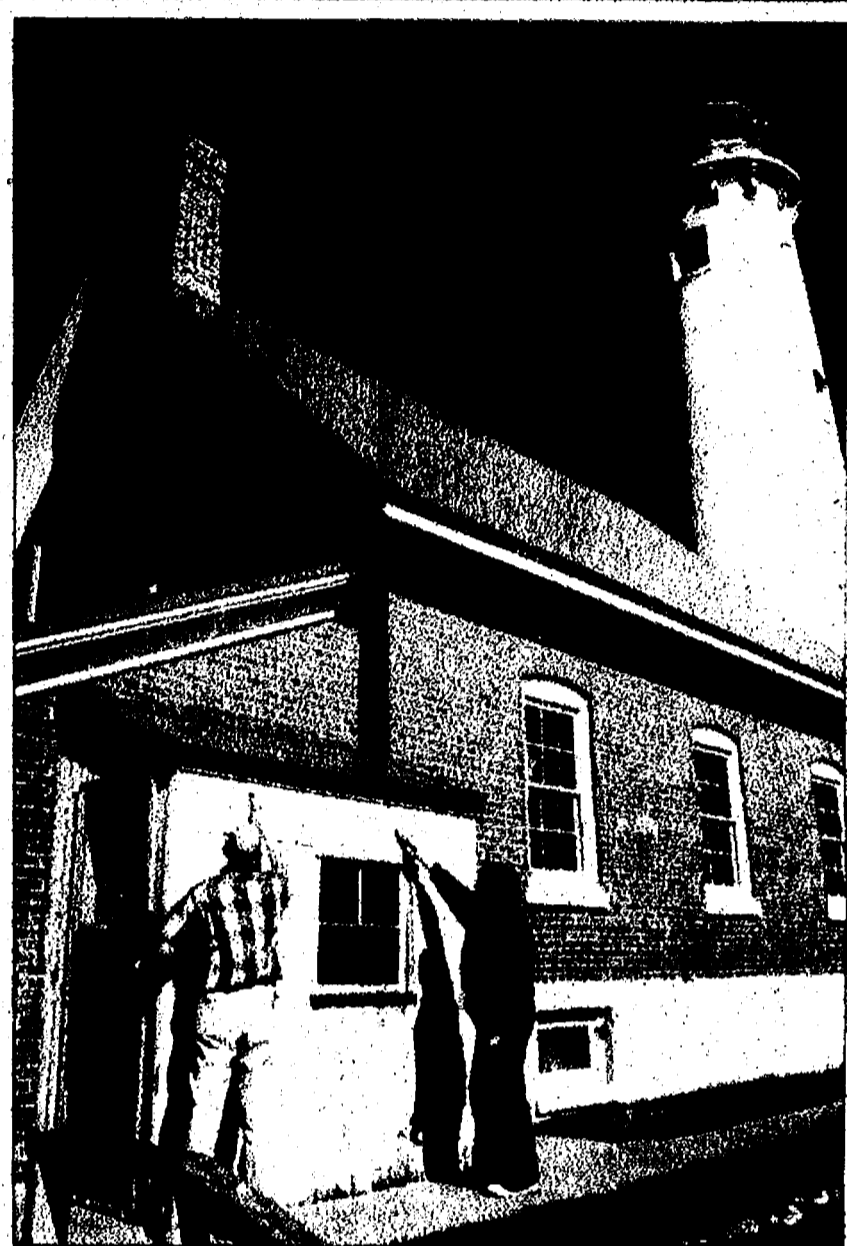

"It's one of the few places where you can see a shipwreck and all you really need are water shoes and a mask," Allen said.

Christopher Stanley, age 7, and his little brother Matthew, age 4, get an up-close view of the Fresnel lens as light keeper Bob Livingston from Beriday explains how the light assists ships navigating Lake Huron. Christopher and Matthew were staying in the campground with their grandparents while visiting them from Pinefork, Kentucky.

Mary Sue Turner Livingston, a retired music teacher and her husband Bob, a retired Ford employee, are soon to celebrate their wedding anniversary.

Mary Sue Turner Livingston and her husband Bob scrape the paint off the porch to the living quarters of the lighthouse.
