Conrad to crown successor during pageant on Friday

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

Chelsea Community Fair Queen Sarah Conrad will crown her successor at the annual pageant program, set for 7 p.m. Friday in the multi-purpose arena.

It's been a hectic fair week for Conrad and the five new candidates, who enjoyed a tea party and sleepover at the Comfort Inn Aug. 21, hosted by Conrad and pageant superintendent Danielle Hale.

The teens were busy cutting the ribbon to open the fair on Tuesday and riding in the children's parade, as well as handing out ribbons to winners throughout the week.

They will take part in the Ladies Day program Friday, where they will showcase their talent skills and do a mother-daughter fashion show with clothes from Vogel's and Foster's. They will ride in the fair parade on Saturday.

Fair queen candidate

Kennedy Aldrich, 15, is going into 10th grade at Chelsea High School. An active member of Chelsea First United Methodist Church, she participates in the hand bell and voice choirs, is a member of the youth group, and a participant in many mission activities.

Aldrich is the daughter of Dan and Courtney Aldrich. Her siblings are Keaton, 13, and Reed, 11.

Last year, she played piano at a preschool musical held at her mother's preschool.

Aldrich is a member of three 4-H clubs: Roger's Corners Herdsmen, Veterinary Science Club, and the Double L Llama Club, where she is co-president.

She participates in CHS track, cross country, and winter running club. She is also a member of the Chelsea House Orchestra, and has participated in solo and ensemble for three years.

She will call on her CHO experience for the talent portion of the pageant, playing a fiddle medley that she arranged herself.

Aldrich plans on attending Michigan State University for pre-veterinary and veterinary medicine degrees. She plans on becoming a large animal veterinarian.

"I'm entering the pageant because it's a chance to represent my club and my community, and I think it will be a very fun experience and a great chance to make new friends with the other girls in the pageant," she said. "It's also a new thing for me to put myself out there like that, and I think it's an excellent chance for me to grow as a person and member of the community."

Aldrich enjoys showing her animals at local fairs. This year she will be exhibiting her goats and pigs at the Chelsea fair. She has shown goats, pigs, and llamas at the county 4-H fair, and llamas at the Saline Community Fair.

"I love the bonds you make with the other showmen, and despite the stressful elements, it all ends up being a lot of fun," she said. "I also enter still exhibits in the Chelsea and 4-H fairs, such as drawings and paintings, photography, sewing, baking, antiques, and agricultural exhibits."

The Saline and Chelsea fairs are the highlights of her summer, she said.

"I'm looking forward to participating even more in the Chelsea fair by being a part of this pageant," she said. "I'm sure it will be a lot of fun, and I hope to get as much as I can out of the experience."

Sarah Stamper, 17, will be a senior at CHS this year. She is the daughter of Jeff and Sandy Stamper. Her siblings are Ryan, 28, and Jake, 13.

At CHS, Stamper is involved in Link Crew, a yearlong program providing mentors to freshmen; and Students Leading Students - an organization formerly known as Students Against Destructive Decisions, founded as Students Against Driving Drunk.

She also is involved in SRSly, a community coalition established to prevent destructive behavior in Chelsea youth.

She plans on going to college to become a teacher.

"I'm entering the pageant because I was offered the opportunity and I thought it would be a good experience," she said. "For my talent I'm performing a monologue."

"What I love about the fair is seeing all of the animals, riding the rides and hanging out with my friends. I'll be entering a few baked goods in the fair and some photography."

Corinne Carpenter, 17, is the daughter of Rhonda and Dean Carpenter of Chelsea.

Her siblings are Evan, 20, and Kyle, 21.

A senior at CHS, she is involved in track and field and is captain of the cross country team.

"I'm a member of Interact, an organization run by students that provides community service opportunities. Through Interact I was able to do a sock drive for the homeless," she said.

Salon Rushelle opens in old Reimco Homes building in Chelsea

By Daniel Lai
Heritage Newspapers

A new full-service beauty salon officially opened its doors to the public in Chelsea on Aug. 17.

Salon Rushelle, located at 1170 S. Main St. in the old Reimco Homes building, features everything from full body waxing, coloring, and massage therapy to pedicures, manicures and basic style and cuts.

"We're excited to be here," owner Rushelle Spaulding said. "Spaulding, along with her six employees, decided to relocate to Chelsea after opening a salon in Grass Lake two years ago."

"We were already looking at places in Chelsea and Ann Arbor when we opened up our salon in Grass Lake," she said. "At first we were going to have a salon in Grass Lake and Chelsea, but it didn't seem right to be competing with ourselves."

Spaulding said ultimately she decided it was best to close the Grass Lake location and move to Chelsea in order to capitalize on clients in Ann Arbor and other parts of the county. "Chelsea is a good location for us," she said.

DDA to demolish Longworth

Preservation Chelsea vows to carry on fight to preserve buildings

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Newspapers

After a brief stint on life support, plans to preserve all three of the historic Longworth buildings on Jackson Street in Chelsea have fallen to the wayside in favor of demolition - at least for two of the structures.

CHELSEA

The Chelsea Downtown Development Authority voted in favor of a proposal to demolish the Daniels showroom and the livery building at their meeting on Aug. 19. The Mack building, which is the middle building of the three, will remain standing.

DDA President Mike Jackson said that the proposal passed last week is nothing new. "We're pretty much going with the plan that we suggested a year and a half to two years ago," he said.

He said that he hopes that the Preservation Chelsea/Chelsea Connection Team volunteers will not be discouraged by the loss of the two structures.

"We really hope the historical people will work with us in the future," Jackson said. "So far we've just had a conversation on how to continue working together."

"We're looking forward to see what kind of suggestions we get for the Mack building, so we'll see where all of that takes us."

Ignite Chelsea to showcase city's offerings

Global event will stream live online with other cities in the U.S.

By Sean Dalton

The City of Chelsea will join major municipalities across the country in a global event initiative called "Ignite!" on Sept. 9. The fast-paced multimedia conference is an opportunity for communities around the world to hear from entrepreneurs, technologists, creative professionals and hands-on experts in a network-oriented environment.

Each talk is no more than five minutes long. Each presenter will be allowed 20 presentation slides that auto-advance every 15 seconds.

The presentations will be made available online for those who cannot attend the event. Ignite Chelsea will stream live video to the Internet where it will be archived for future viewing.

CHELSEA

Chelsea's speakers will include SRSly Director Reiley Lewis, Mike Casey, owner of Aberdeen Bike & Outdoors, and Purple Rose Theatre Company office manager Heidi Bennett, to name a few. These speakers will be among more than 500 world-

Speakers

- Reiley Lewis, SRSly Coalition director and community health coordinator for Chelsea Community Hospital
- Paul Schissler, president-elect and public relations chairman for the Chelsea Rotary Club
- Heidi Bennett, office manager for the Purple Rose Theatre Company
- Bernadette Malinoski, president of the Chelsea Community Kitchen Board of Directors
- Mike Casey, owner of Aberdeen Bike & Outdoors
- Mike Stedac
- Christina Kim of Silver Maples
- Sharon Kegerreis

wide that will be participating in the simulcast event.

"Hopefully this will become a biannual event," Urvi Shah, Chelsea Wellness Center spokesman said.

Ignite Chelsea is being held at the clock tower courtyard beginning at 6 p.m. on Sept. 9. The Chelsea Area Wellness Foundation and the Chelsea District Library are the hosts for the event.

"What's unique about this event is that the format keeps the speakers on their toes, so it's good for a quick burst of useful insight," Shah said. "We're asking each presenter to talk about something that relates to wellness."

Ignite got its start in Seattle in December 2006, as a personal project of O'Reilly's Brady Forrest and Bre Pettis. They came up with an event where people could share their ideas over beer, and sent word out through their own network.

The program runs until 11 p.m., and include a cash bar, food, contests including a tongue twister challenge and jump rope contest and live music provided by the Chelsea Community Orchestra.

"It's a really cool stage for people to come out and talk about something that's close to their heart," Shah said. "It gives someone who has a passion about something a stage to present it on and it's also a really good way to disseminate information."

Organizers hope that at least 250 people will physically attend the event, not including those watching the video streams live.

SALON

Spaulding and her husband, Christopher, have been involved in the salon business for 13 years and 18 years respectively.

"Chris owned two high-end salons that we closed in 2005 after I gave birth to our middle child," she said.

Though she acknowledges salon clients have several choices to choose from in the area, Spaulding and her staff pride themselves on replacing quick in-and-out service with a more personal approach.

"For us, it's not just about the haircuts or the coloring. We stay in business because we don't just want to give a great haircut, we want our customers to know they are appreciated."

She said everything from the paint on the walls to the design of the facility was done with the customer in mind.

"If it weren't for our customers, we wouldn't be here," she said.

Spaulding said most of the building's architecture was already in place when her team moved in and her father, Russell Bashaw of Adrian, spent 40 hours a week over the last 90 days designing the building to fit their needs.

"We got rid of the green carpet and yellow walls," she said.

From the minute customers walk in, they are greeted by a friendly staff member, who provides a brief tour of the facility and offers complimentary beverages and scones while the customer waits for his or her appointment. From there, if the customer is visiting for a haircut, they are taken to a closed off wash room, where a stylist proceeds to wash and massage their scalp in dim light for 10 to 15 minutes as soothing music plays and a hot towel is placed over their head to relax the muscles.

"We're focusing on the experience, not just the end result," she said. "Our customers know that they aren't going to come here and get the same service they get for a $12 haircut."

"At the end of the day it's about how we made you feel. We want to make you feel the best that you ever felt."

And though the salon has only been open for a few days, word of mouth is already spreading.

"Our clientele is usually ages 25 and up, and we service both men and women," Spaulding said.

Right now the most requested service is coloring.

"Surprisingly, 80 percent of our clients are here for coloring," she said. "That's neat because coloring is where you can open up and do a lot of creative things."

"A lot of younger businesswomen are pushing the limits and taking their look to a different level of excitement. We are also looking for some younger clients because it would be neat to do something funky."

Spaulding said opening the new location hasn't detoured the number of former clients.

"Most of our clients don't mind the 10 minute drive," she said.

With the salon located near I-94, she expects more business as the months progress.

"It's a good location that offers better parking for our customers," she said. "We looked at some other locations in town, but we decided that this would work for us. We'll expand in the future if we need to."

Spaulding said the salon is competitively priced and offers discounts for returning customers.

"Our prices vary by stylist and their level of experience," she said.

Christopher Spaulding, a national salon color educator and platform artist for Paul Mitchell is the salon's most expensive stylist.

"He travels all over Michigan, Indiana, and Ohio teaching salons how to do coloring," Spaulding said.

Salon Rushelle is open Tuesdays through Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Fridays from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.; and closed Sundays and Mondays.

The staff includes Ryan Stamper, Stephanie Manns, Holly Braddock, Susan Frederick, Christopher and Rushelle Spaulding.

Grab a beach towel and head for the nearest... storm drain?

That's right! Your favorite swimming hole begins right on your street. The storm drain along the curb is a direct connection to the Huron River. When rainwater and melting snow wash into the drain, pollutants are carried along for the ride. Litter, pet waste, dirt, fertilizers, antifreeze and motor oil... these are just a few examples of contaminants that enter our waterways through storm drains. No filters, no treatment.

Here's how you can help:

- Clean sidewalks and drives with a broom instead of a hose.
- Keep debris away from your nearby storm drain grate.
- Pick up and dispose of pet waste in the trash.
- Direct sprinklers onto lawns and gardens and avoid watering pavement.
- Use zero phosphorus lawn fertilizers.

Be a water quality champion. Keep storm drains for rainwater only.

Venturing Crew, the co-ed scouting crew that sets up Sounds and Sights every Thursday and does community service work, such as building a garden at the Chelsea Retirement Community.

"My mother has always made sure I often put in community service work since I was young and she had me volunteer with the library for helping with the summer reading program," she said. "I'm hoping after cross country, when my schedule frees up a little, I can volunteer with the Humane Society of Huron Valley."

She plans to enter the Army ROTC program, and major in mechanical engineering, then design and build engines for a major car company.

Carpenter works part-time at Thompson's Pizzeria in Chelsea.

"My boss, Linda Collins convinced me to enter the pageant after telling me about the scholarship possibility and that it could be fun," she said. "It took a lot of convincing on her part, because it's not a normal thing for me to do. I'm a tomboy and the idea of wearing a dress is off-putting."

She plans to play piano for her talent portion of the show.

She is secretary of SLS and co-president of the Gay Straight Alliance.

Wood, whose hobbies include hanging out with friends, reading, meeting new people, and talking, volunteers at the Chelsea Retirement Community, is involved with SRSly, walked twice on a Relay for Life team, and helped at a Lions Club charity bowl.

Wood, whose goal is to become a special education teacher, will give a speech for her talent portion at the pageant.

"I thought the pageant would be a good experience and a chance to represent my community and get more involved," she said. "I also value my education and could really use the scholarship."

Her favorite fair activities are the rides, watching her brother Robert drive in the demolition derby, and the parade. She will enter several things including zucchini bread.

Samantha Blackledge, 17, is the daughter of Tonya Lawrence and Andrew Blackledge. She is the sibling of Brook Blackledge.

A senior at CHS, she is involved in SLS, Link Crew, plays softball, and is treasurer of Spanish Club.

In the community, she is involved in SRSly, in a youth group at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; does community service through her church; and goes to seminary every school day for early morning scripture study.

She plans to study marketing at Brigham Young University in Utah and her "dream job" is to be an international marketing executive.

"I'm entering the pageant because it's a good opportunity, and to get me more involved in the fair," she said. "My talent will be a short speech on being a leader, what it takes, what qualities a leader has, and what kind of clubs and activities will help leadership skills."

"I love the fair because of the rides, seeing friends, walking through the barns and looking at animals, and seeing what kind of things won at the Chelsea Fair. I'm entering photos in the fair, along with computer art and baked goods."

board member Mark Heydlauff said that the DDA didn't have the money to bankroll redevelopment of the entire suite of historic buildings.

"Economically it wasn't a proposal that the DDA could move forward with," Heydlauff said. "It was an economic decision - I don't think the DDA has the means to make this happen at the level that the Preservation Chelsea group wanted it done."

He added that with outside private investment, the DDA could have gone in another direction, but the only other proposal on the table was from Lansing-based Kincaid Henry Building Group, who quietly pulled their proposal from consideration earlier this summer.

Resident and Jackson Street Jam organizer Cathy Bean was one of many people in the community who voiced their dissatisfaction with the DDA's vote.

She said that she was confused by the DDA's stated goal and their decision to remove two historic buildings.

"Somewhere along the way the DDA has lost their great vision," she said in a letter to the Chelsea Standard.

She and other members of the community allege that the DDA has not listened to the public, but Jackson said it would take years of funding and would tie the DDA up into a single project if they were to finance what Preservation Chelsea wanted.

"We're trying everything we can within our financial constraints to have a compromise on this," Jackson said. "We think we can do something with the Mack building because it's in the best shape."

"That's a possibility that we could do and stick within our budget."

Jackson speculates that it would cost $3 million to save all three buildings.

The DDA currently has a schedule of projects including an accessibility program to address the lack of compliance at existing historic buildings with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

"We just can't tie all of our money up in one project," Jackson said, adding that the city is currently reviewing contracts and bid prices for the demolition work.

Bean said that saving the Longworth buildings in their entirety is worth more than "putting in parking lots" or other priority projects for the DDA right now.

"The DDA's own consultant on this project told me during their meeting that two parking studies have been done, and they showed that the parking problem during normal business days is from the business owners parking in the visitors spots," she said. "In my eyes it is not acceptable to tear down historic buildings that are nationally significant so that the business owners can park at their front door."

She said that she would not stop fighting for all three Longworth buildings.

Orchestra announces new season

In his inaugural season as music director of the Dexter Community Orchestra, Anthony Elliott creates programming that combines the classics, American works, contemporary music, and featured soloists from the community. The season

"Fantastic Voyages" promises excitement, energy, and a commitment to excellence as well as a continued dedication to highlighting community talent.

"The orchestra has been extremely welcoming. I have greatly enjoyed making music with them and look forward to growing together musically and in our role in the community," Elliott said. "I love sharing our music with the audience, and I look forward to taking a journey together throughout this upcoming season."

The DCO announced the appointment of Anthony Elliott as music director following a year-long search. Elliott succeeds Donald Parrish, who founded the orchestra five years ago. Parrish will retain his association with the orchestra as music director emeritus.

Oct. 24

Elliott begins his inaugural concert in the dual role as conductor and cellist, performing Franz Josef Haydn's "Concerto in C Major." Other works on this concert include Henri Rabaud's orchestration of Gabriel's Faure's "Dolly Suite" and Ferde Grofé's "Grand Canyon Suite."

Dec. 19

The holiday concert features Ralph Vaughn Williams' masterpiece "Hodie," a large-scale holiday work that combines inventiveness and vitality with otherworldly serenity. Members of the Washtenaw County Community Chorus under the direction of George Dentele will perform on this concert with the DCO.

March 6, 2011

The DCO opens with

Mozart's Symphony #29 and "The Watershed," composed by University of Michigan faculty member Evan Chambers. "The Watershed," depicting the Huron River around Chelsea, Dexter, and Ann Arbor, received its premiere in April 2009 under the direction of Arie Lipsky with the Ann Arbor Symphony Orchestra. The concert concludes with the ever-popular George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," arranged by Robert Russell Bennett.

May 22, 2011

The season finale opens with "Nuages" and "Fêtes" from the "Nocturnes" by Claude Debussy, and features the winner of its annual Youth Concerto Competition. The season concludes with a performance of Manuel de Falla's colorful "Three Corners Hat."

All performances are on Sunday afternoons at 4 p.m. at the Performing Arts Center in Dexter High School. All concerts are currently free and open to the public.

WEB VIEWS

This week's question

How do you think the Michigan Wolverine's football team will fare this year?

A. Winning record and bowl appearance C. Losing record
B. 500 D. It doesn't matter as long as they beat Ohio State

Local food should be celebrated every month, but September is a good start

The Ann Arbor City Council has proclaimed September as Local Food Month.

In my opinion, every month should be Local Food Month, and I back up that sentiment with my wallet every week during the growing season.

Currently, I have shares in not one, but two, community supported agriculture programs with local farmers.

What is a CSA, you ask?

It's a way to help a local farmer, buy local food and get to know the local farmers who are growing my food.

Yes, its seasonal food, but more and more, new groups are getting involved in the local food scene to bring people local food year-round, not just at farmers' markets, or through CSAs, but by erecting hoop houses so produce can be grown year-round and by forming co-ops with online purchasing such as through Lunasa, a new hybrid partnership with Michigan farmers who sell a variety of products.

With a CSA, farmers offer a certain number of "shares" to the public.

Some CSAs allow you to pick your own vegetables, flowers, fruits or eggs from what's available on pickup day. Others hand you a box of freshly picked vegetables and fruit each week or every other week, depending on how large a share you've bought.

Among the many advantages of this program is the farmer knows how much to plant and how much to bring to market. And there's a little cushion there because you've paid up front and take a chance on which vegetables, flowers and fruit will have bumper crops during the year.

Through my CSAs, I receive fresh produce, as well as ideas on how to cook it, and the opportunity to try new items that I probably would not have consumed otherwise.

Farmers receive payment early in the season, before they are working crazy hours in the fields, which helps with the farm's early season cash flow. During pickup, the farmers have the opportunity to interact with the people who consume the food they grow.

Tens of thousands of families have joined CSAs across the country, and in some areas there is more demand than there are CSA farms to fill it, according to one website.

So, as the Ann Arbor City Council proclamation states, we should celebrate our local farmers not just in September, but year-round, because:

• Local food systems comprise our local community-based farmers, gardeners, restaurants, chefs, farmers' markets, grocers, and consumers.

• Local food systems promote healthy food for all, which is especially important for those who are food insecure including low-income and minority populations.

• Local food systems promote energy efficiency, land preservation and decreased transportation costs.

• Local food systems improve food supply, which is essential to local emergency preparedness and local self-reliance.

• Improving our local, regional, and statewide food systems advance local economic opportunity, environmental stewardship, community, and social justice.

But most importantly, "Our local food system represents an important part of Ann Arbor (and the county's) community and regional economies."

"AND THIS IS MY ATTORNEY. HE SPECIALIZES IN THE LAW OF THE JUNGLE..."

GUEST COLUMN: By John Hochstetler

Food security is something many politicians don't want to talk about

Did you know that because of a very poor wheat harvest in Russia, the price of wheat in the United States has doubled in the past month? Do you know what wheat is used for?

No problem, get what we can from the Russians.

We operate in a world marketplace.

The problem is that the price is the price.

We pay what they pay. So that means that all wheat-based products will increase in price probably by the same amount as the cost that wheat went up.

While few of us have actually viewed government-owned grain, we have been told that the government has an adequate surplus available in case of emergency.

What we don't know is what does the federal government consider an emergency?

What we do know is that the present surplus of wheat on hand will carry us about 78 days, and the "day's supply on hand" as the government calls it, is not likely to grow in the near future.

The government, in the past, has dumped its wheat on the open market to stabilize wheat prices in the near term, but that strategy doesn't work for an extended period and then prices for flour, bread, breakfast cereal, pasta and a host of other products escalates. This happened two years ago to a lesser degree with resulting bread riots in Egypt and elsewhere.

At that time, the politicians and everyone else in your food chain claimed it was really just higher fuel prices and transportation costs, not a shortage of grain on the world market that caused the problem.

The next step, what our current demand for these products is greater than the supply of wheat, not only on the world market, but right here in the United States?

We could always ration, for example, a family of five might be eligible for 1.5 loaves of bread per week, etc.

Tell yourself this will never happen.

And there will never be a hurricane big enough to sink New Orleans.

And it would be impossible for an oil well in the Gulf to break and ruin the Gulf Coast for fishing and swimming for however long. But, even if it happens, the federal government would be in there pulling out all the stops to get it corrected in just a few days, right?

Just remember, residents of the nation's capitol stripped the grocery store shelves last winter when a three-day snowstorm hit that city in the middle of the winter when one would expect snowstorms.

If any city should be secure and able to feed and protect its people, wouldn't it be Washington, D.C? Could this scenario happen in Ann Arbor, now?

We have been lured into a false sense of security with promises that more and more government will protect us from anything bad that could ever happen.

Saddest of all is that most people actually believe it.

For those of us who refuse to drink the Kool Aid, the big question remains: How do we prepare? How do we protect ourselves from the real culprit — an out of control government?

Remember, a government big enough to give you everything you want is big enough to take everything you have. (And they will try). It's time for thoughtful people to begin connecting the dots.

Whether you are Democrat or Republican, rich or poor, liberal or conservative, there is one thing we all have in common.

We have the habit of eating two or three times a day, every day.

John Hochstetler is a Washtenaw County vegetable farmer and food producer, and a candidate for state Senate.

OUR TAKE: Editorial Consolidating school districts makes sense

The latest of numerous studies discussing school reform says Michigan taxpayers can save $612 million a year by reshaping or consolidating public schools along county lines.

Other states have been doing this for years and it seems to be working, while in Michigan not much of anything seems to be working.

So we believe this suggestion should be investigated thoroughly. The study, conducted by Michigan State University researchers, concludes that the annual savings after three years from trimming school management layers, recasting administration and erasing district boundaries would equal roughly 4 percent of total school budgets. What should be particularly appealing to parents is that the study says the switch could be made without closing a single school or shifting students.

Presumably, that would also mean teaching staff cuts would be a minimal, if at all, so we would hope the Michigan Education Association could back this plan.

There is a less-involved plan that would preserve local school district lines, but rely heavily on shared services such as transportation and food service at the county level that could save Michigan taxpayers $328 million, according to the study.

This is better than nothing, but we like the first idea. Amid the potential savings, there are other minor benefits worth noting. Currently, many districts overlap into surrounding communities.

But, more important, Lansing, predictably, is going to go down to the wire again in balancing its fiscal year budget for 2010-2011. School funding is again a focal point of the debates. We're already hearing the same old arguments, which are creating the same line divisions.

There are proponents fighting for more school financing or at least minimal cuts, while others are urging across the board cuts to spread the misery more equally.

A factor that many are trying to weave into the debate, but when looked at realistically, should be left out, is the recent announcement of federal aid.

Part of a $28 billion state aid bill passed by Congress would give Michigan about $318 million for schools and another $340 million to $380 million in extended Medicaid assistance for the state fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

But officials are saying this is probably the last "bailout" by the federal government. Certainly use the money, but don't count it as a regular budget item. It will just delay needed reforms and mean even more drastic cuts next year.

For once, it would be nice if legislators could look a little further down the road, instead of barely past their noses. So, it comes to something that most realistic experts have been saying for the past few years: Revamp, change and/or restructure our public school system. It's based on an economy that is dead or at least on its dying bed. It was OK 30 years, but not today.

That's why the Michigan State University plan is so appealing.

We're sure it's not perfect, but it certainly seems more practical than just delaying financial disaster for one year.

NEW IN TOWN: By Michael McVey

Stepping outside the comfort zone

I used to think golf was a ridiculous and elitist sport for well-off retirees in funny clothes, and I felt somewhat ostracized by the whole experience.

In the desert southwest, where I lived for many of the last two decades, I was even more convinced that golf was to be avoided since courses were so aggressively wasteful of water. In Tucson, patches of grass were rare in residential areas decorated with colored gravel or xeriscaped with native vegetation.

When I got to Michigan, I figured the natural abundance of rain made golf courses at least a reasonable extravagance and the costs of playing a simple course had plummeted over the years, making it more accessible. So, it was no great surprise for me to find myself with a friend on a driving range last week. After a few instructions and the use of her clubs, I took a mighty swing and, oh my goodness, the ball flew high and far and generally in the right direction.

I wondered aloud just how hard this golfing really was. I soon found out, as my next dozen balls sliced toward Ohio.

Adjustments to my stance and grip got the ball slicing toward golfers beside me and I soon realized what the netting was for. Somewhere toward the bottom of the bucket, I figured out how to hit.

A week later, we were on my first course, using her clubs again, and turning the recommended three strokes for par into a joke. I hit many trees and broke many branches. Squirrels trembled when I approached the tee. Or perhaps they were laughing.

We played "close enough" rules on the greens and made it through the complete nine holes, dignity intact.

Back in January, I wrote that I was going to spend time each day this year a little outside my comfort zone. At the time, I never expected golf to figure into those challenges. But now I'm thinking if I could golf, then what's next? Open microphone night at a comedy club? Karaoke? A hockey game? Curling? Scuba diving? Sky diving? Mechanical bulls? Dancing the Tango? Why not all of them?

For now, I will just stick with trying to master what Winston Churchill once called "a game whose aim is to hit a very small ball into an even smaller hole, with weapons singularly ill-designed for the purpose."

For!

Couple faces insurance fraud charges

Burglary claims come up short in investigation

By Art Aisher
Special Writer

A Freedom Township couple is headed to trial on charges that they embellished reports of household items stolen during a burglary in order to defraud their insurance company.

Court records show Douglas Allen Beaumont, 51, and his wife, Wendy Kay Beaumont, 44, recently waived their rights to preliminary hearings in Washtenaw County District Court. The two are charged with filing a false felony police report and insurance fraud, and face a pre-trial hearing on Sept. 14. They stood mute to the charges during a recent brief court appearance and not-guilty pleas were entered on their behalf, court records show.

Authorities charged them in July after the Michigan State Police concluded their investigation into an April burglary at their home on Waters Road. The Beaumonts claimed they returned home shortly after 4 p.m. on April 5 and discovered someone had tried breaking in through the front door. The intruder ultimately entered through a side door and a number of items were taken, according to the initial police report.

However, the couple provided a list of stolen materials that was later determined to be greatly exaggerated, said Sgt. Chris Pascoe of the Michigan State Police Ypsilanti Post. Investigators re-interviewed the couple and they confessed to inflating the number and types of items that were taken in order to get a more favorable insurance settlement, he said. They also reportedly said they felt badly about lying and wanted to do the right thing.

The couple's attorney could not be reached for comment.

Pascoe said that troopers were able to confirm there was damage consistent with an attempted break-in to the front door. But he said officers believe that the couple went to great lengths to try and deceive investigators and bilk their insurer.

"We know that someone tried to break in, but we believe the inside of the home was staged and set up to look like it was the real deal," Pascoe said.

He said troopers have taken a number of false reports from citizens since the state's economie downturn began, and that he hopes this case sends a message that similar acts won't be tolerated.

"It's a huge waste of our resources," said Pascoe, noting recent budget cuts have forced staff reductions at several posts, including Ypsilanti. "We get bombarded with these false reports, and to make us work hours on bogus investigations" is infuriating. They think they can trick us, but when we catch them doing it we are going to go after them to the fullest extent of the law."

If convicted, the Beaumonts could face up to eight years in prison each. They remain free on $10,000 personal recognizance bonds, records show.

The Central Station Alarm Association awarded Comtronics of Jackson the prestigious CSAA Five Diamond Certification.

This certification testifies that 100 percent of Comtronics' central station operators have achieved proficiency and certification by passing the CSAA Central Station Online Operator Training Course. These courses cover virtually all phases of central station communications with customers, law enforcement, fire and emergency services communications centers.

This critical area of communications is the life-saving link between the residential or business properties and the law enforcement, fire and emergency services in local areas.

In order to achieve the Five Diamond Certification, each operator must have passed the course, and demonstrated:

- Proficiency in alarm verification, which helps reduce false alarms.

- Proficiency in communications with the public service answering points, such as the emergency 911 centers.

- Knowledge of electronic communications equipment, including radio.

- An understanding of the codes and standards of such organizations as Underwriters Laboratories, Factory Mutual, the National Fire Protection Association, and others.

- Proficiency in the area of emergency preparedness under a wide scenario of possibilities.

In addition, these five diamond companies have demonstrated an exceptionally high degree of responsibility to their local community and their customers through the investment of time, money and commitment to 100 percent quality operator training.

There are approximately 2,700 central stations in the United States, which communicate and interact with the law enforcement, fire and emergency services agencies. Of this group, fewer than 100 central stations have achieved the five diamond status.

GOP's Snyder visits Chelsea

Candidate touts job creation at town hall speech

By Krystle Dunham
Special Writer

From the day Republican gubernatorial nominee Rick Snyder announced his candidacy, he has made one thing clear: He wants to reinvent Michigan and create more jobs.

"The comeback of Michigan is going to be based on Michiganders creating and growing small businesses," Snyder said, as he spoke at his first town hall meeting since he won the primary election earlier this month.

The hour-long meeting was held at the Chelsea Train Depot on Aug. 17, where a packed house gathered to hear Snyder speak. During the primary campaign, Snyder hosted more than 50 town hall meetings throughout the state. Snyder will face Democratic nominee and Lansing Mayor Virg Bernero in the Nov. 2 general election.

"I only want to be your next governor if you're going to demand more," he said. "This is a 'we' effort. This isn't just about electing the next governor; this is about reinventing Michigan."

"This is an effort that isn't just for a year, but an effort that goes on for the next few years."

Some of Snyder's plans he spoke about include creating more jobs, reforming Michigan's tax system so that it is competitive, and facilitating economic growth. He also said he wants to fix Michigan's broken government, create an environment that will keep young people in the state and reform Michigan's educational system.

Snyder is the former president of computer company Gateway, Inc. He was also the first chairman of the Michigan Economic Development Corporation and served as founding chairman of Ann Arbor SPARK, the economic development organization for the Ann Arbor region.

Norma Jean Wiley of Hillsdale said this was the second time she came to hear Snyder speak. She attended one of his town hall meetings earlier this year in Jackson.

"I came because I wanted to find out more from him and see what he has in mind," she said.

Wiley, who said she is a conservative Republican, will be voting for Snyder in the Nov. 2 general election.

Mary Hagglund of North Lake said this was the first time she had heard Snyder speak.

"I wanted to hear what he had to say. I didn't know too much about him," she admitted.

Hagglund said she was glad to learn that Snyder has a strong business background and agreed with him that in order to start improving Michigan's job market it starts with the small local businesses.

"I think if more local businesses started working together, it would help solve a lot of other issues we are facing right now," she said.

Snyder told reporters follow-

Michigan Republican candidate Rick Snyder's campaign bus pulls up to the Chelsea Train Depot on Aug. 17.

ing the meeting that he finds the town hall meetings are the best way to get citizen input and allow him to communicate better with people. He said he plans to continue the series of town hall meetings through the November election.

Flight in bomber plane reaches new heights

"Up, up the long delirious burning blue
I've topped the wind-swept heights with easy grace
Where never lark, or ever eagle flew ...
— RCAF Pilot Officer John Gillespie Magee Jr.
You just never know what unexpected gifts life will bring your way. I was reminded of that again a couple of weeks ago during an otherwise routine day at work.
A lunch, a prize drawing and my day went from the mundane to the sublime.
But I'm getting ahead of myself. There's background and a connection to family in this story.
Many of us whose relatives have flown in service to their countries are familiar with the renowned poem above that was written by a young pilot who died during World War II a few months after penning those words.
Most of us know best the line that says, "I have blessed the surly bonds of Earth."
The words touch our souls; they give us a glimpse into the core of those who take to the skies and fall in love with that vast freedom.
Like John Gillespie Magee, my father, John Brady Higgins, flew with the Royal Canadian Air Force during World War II.
The two men were born the same year — 1922 — but, sadly, like so many other young men and women, Magee died in service. My dad survived, however, and lived to be 81.
Dad flew many missions and earned the rank of RCAF flying officer, yet he never talked much about the war.
That wasn't the way of men in that generation; but, growing up, I saw many old photos of him and his crewmates on the tarmac with the massive, four-engine Lancaster and Halifax bombers behind them waiting for flight.
In those snapshots, the young men stand valiantly in their flight suits, dwarfed by the wingspans of their aircraft, expectant faces masking the anxiety they must have felt as they prepared for yet another raid over German airspace — into what then truly was a worldwide fight for the survival of freedom.
Through the years, looking at those faded photos and watching grainy old movies of World War II are about as close as I ever came to one of those legendary flying machines.
That all changed a couple of weeks ago when I won that drawing at work for a flight on a World War II B-17 bomber, the plane that is so huge it was dubbed the "Flying Fortress."
Jessica Spitulski, one of our IT whizzes, was the other winner. We were delighted to learn we would be going on the flight together, along with Heritage Newspapers President Jim Williams.
A little hitch for me, of course, was that I don't like to fly. I've been on my share of rough flights. I prefer terra firma.
Yet, this was special. I had a chance to fly in a nearly 70-year-old plane, to see a moment in the life of my father and so many thousands of others who fought for their countries all those years ago.
I had to do it.
With Jessica, Jim and a handful of other passengers, I flew out of Willow Run Airport in Van Buren Township at about 5 p.m. Aug. 6 on the B-17 bomber Yankee Lady.
It was a half-hour adventure of intimacy I hadn't known before with the sky and the Earth.
"And, while with silent, lifting mind I've trod
"The hush untrodden sanctity of space ...
My fear of flying fell away. I was exhilarated. I felt freedom and a newborn empathy for all who clambered resolutely into these thin-skinned metal machines to keep safe a way of life.
These planes are just as they were in the 1940s — huge and built for neither passengers nor comfort. They are all metal and wire, and functional, along with hold-on-tight and down-to-business. And narrow. Surprisingly, shockingly narrow and with very little headroom.
You do an immediate head down and move fast up the few steps to get inside near the tail. I sort of lurched in. I'll do better next time.
Then, it is carefully stand and edge along a narrow ramp around the turret gun in the floor, and then step into a section with an open, barred roof and three seats.
A sign there warns: "Caution. Dangerous slipstream." As if we hadn't grasped that concept. We also were cautioned that anyone wearing glasses or a toupee should hang on to them if anywhere near the slipstream. Got it.
The next section forward is the bomb bay. Yes, the bomb bay. The place where the doors used to open and bombs were dropped onto targets. The doors can open during these short flights. In fact, they did. Several times.
One of those times impressed me the most. It happened a few minutes later as I was being the bravest I've ever been on a plane (other than getting on one at all).
A catwalk with safety guidance ropes is the way through the center of the bomb bay and into the cabin area immediately behind the pilot and flight crew. The best time to move forward is when the bomb bay doors are closed. Tightly.
I had braved the catwalk and the ropes — sort of like Indiana Jones in one of his scarier movie moments — gripping and pulling myself along until I was just behind the pilot's cabin.
There are seats on each side, and a helpful Yankee Air Museum volunteer told me that if I wanted a truly wonderful view of southeastern Michigan, I could face the rear of the plane, grab two overhead bars and hop up onto the two seats, effectively straddling the aisle.
That's when I realized there was no top on the plane in that section either. None. There was just sky. There was wind — at about 250 mph. But no roof.
But I had come this far, so I grabbed the bars; up went the right foot onto one seat, and then the left onto the other. Suitably braced, then, I popped my head out the top of this historic relic of a bygone age.
My breath caught and my heart climbed into my throat as I blinked into a stunning panorama of blues and greens, shot with dark ribbons of highway and shimmering ponds and streams.
For an endless moment, I was my dad. I felt as if he knew I now was closer to him. I know he would have loved hearing about my adventure, as I have treasured his memories and about how for a dazzling moment I felt that I, too, had "danced the skies on laughter-silvered wings."

awe-struck at the symmetry of the landscape. I thought of an architect's rendition of a planned community, drawn in perfect miniature 10,000 feet below me.
With my hair swept straight back from my face and the wind tearing my voice from my throat, all of a sudden I shouted hello again — and goodbye — to

Family Expo to be held at Farm Council Grounds

Connecting local businesses with families

By Lisa Allmendinger
Heritage Newspapers

Ann Arbor-based Children's Orchard and March of Dimes have combined forces for a new event called the Family Expo at the Washtenaw Farm Council Grounds.

Slated from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sept. 25, it's the brainchild of Saline resident Taylor Bond, CEO of Children's Orchard, a national children's resale franchise.

Admission is $2 and the money will go to the March of Dimes.

The Family Expo provides local businesses with an opportunity for "grass-roots marketing," Bond said.

The businesses are afforded the chance to connect with local consumers face-to-face, rather than by phone, e-mail or website.

Currently, more than 15 companies have signed up for the expo.

Bond says he is doing his part for small community businesses, which are having a hard time in this economy, adding that he believes that people want to buy local but "don't know who local is."

In addition, he says, "It seems that grassroots marketing has become a lost art in today's digital age, but the fact is that it still works."

The main objective for the Family Expo is to provide "an entertaining environment where local companies and organizations can connect with area families and give consumers the opportunity to see and sample their products and services first-hand."

Included will be a stage with live music and entertainment, as well as children's activities, including a bounce house, face painting and fashion show.

Among the participants will be Children's Orchard, Newcomers Welcome Service, Ann Arbor State Bank, and Bearclaw Coffee.

March of Dimes staff and volunteers will be accepting donations at the door, and will be the recipients of proceeds from a silent auction.

Organizations or businesses in the Ann Arbor area interested in exhibiting at the Family Expo should contact Jennifer Fields at 994-9199 or e-mail jfields@childorch.com.

Police to target drunken drivers

If you're over the limit, you'll be under arrest. That's what the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department is saying as part of a new campaign to reduce drunken driving.

The Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department, University of Michigan Public Safety, Pittsfield Public Safety, Milan Police, Saline Police and Chelsea Police began stepping up enforcement Aug. 19 while on the lookout for impaired drivers in Washtenaw County.

The special traffic enforcement period takes place through Sept. 6, covering the Labor Day holiday.

Law enforcement officers will work more than 200 hours just in Washtenaw County designated for drunken driving enforcement. The special traffic enforcement is paid by the federal traffic safety funds administrated by the Office of Highway Safety Planning.

According to a news release from the sheriff's department, alcohol-involved crashes tend to be more serious than non-drinking crashes and injuries are more serious for drivers and passengers who have been drinking.

Last year, there were 18 alcohol-related traffic crashes during the targeted time frame in Washtenaw County. Of those 18, eight resulted in serious injury, and one resulted in a fatality.

In Michigan, a motorist can be arrested for drunken driving with a 0.08 blood-alcohol content or higher.

A drunken-driving conviction carries with it an assortment of penalties, including court costs and fines, increased car insurance rates, legal fees and $2,000 in driver responsibilities fees.

Walk for farm animals to be held

Bob Harper, star of the NBC show "The Biggest Loser," is the national spokesman for the 2010 Walk for Farm Animals, which will be held Sept. 12 in Dexter.

"When I think about the billions of sensitive, intelligent beings who are confined and mistreated on factory farms to produce foods linked with obesity, heart disease, cancer, and stroke — that is all the motivation I need to make healthier, more conscientious choices," Harper said in a news release.

"I am honored to be the national spokesperson for Farm Sanctuary's 2010 Walk for Farm Animals."

The Ann Arbor walk is just one of more than 70 taking place in cities throughout the United States and Canada this fall, when thousands of animal lovers will lace up their walking shoes and hit the streets to promote compassion for farm animals and raise money to support the lifesaving rescue, education and advocacy work of Farm Sanctuary.

This will be the 21st annual Ann Arbor Walk for Farm Animals. Area residents are invited to sign up for the walk, which will start at noon Sept. 12 at Hudson Mills Metropark, 8801 North Territorial Road, in Dexter.

All participants are also invited to a vegan potluck afterwards. Each should bring a vegan dish to share a drink.

The pre-registration fee is $15 per walker, which entitles each registrant to a Walk for Farm Animals T-shirt distributed on the day of the walk.

The registration fee on the day of the walk is $20. The availability of T-shirts cannot be guaranteed for those registering on the day of the walk.

To register, visit www.firstgiving.com/farmsanctuary or e-mail local walk coordinator Cody Winchester at annarbor@walkforfarmanimals.org.

New 2011 Ford Explorer retains adventuresome spirit, but loses some of the stigma associated with SUVs.

Knock 'gas hog' off list of attributes that will no longer describe the Explorer

By Bryan Laviolette
Automotive Correspondent
Journal Register Company

DEARBORN, Mich. — A generation ago, the Ford Explorer largely created the SUV craze, driving environmentalists to classify them as big, lumbering gas hogs. But the new version of the Explorer changes just about everything about the sport utility, and in a way, redefines the market again, the way it did 20 years ago.

Consider this: the Explorer's pair of new engines represent a 20-30 percent increase in fuel economy compared to the current model's 4-liter V6. No wonder Ford marketing chief Jim Farley says his job during the next six months until the Explorer goes on sale will be about busting myths.

"(Fuel economy) is the primary reason people are saying no to SUVs," said Mark Fields, Ford's president of the Americas.

Knock "gas hog" off list of attributes that will no longer describe the Explorer. Next up will be big and lumbering. The new Explorer changes from body-on-frame truck chassis to the same unibody floorplan as the Ford Taurus and Flex.

So, is it a truck, or a car masquerading as a truck like so many crossover utility vehicles, its sister vehicle the Flex included?

While writers outside of Ford have not yet been invited to drive the 2011 Explorer, officials promise that it will walk the fine line between both.

They describe car-like handling, but it will still retain its off-road capability.

But let's face it, few people take their off-road capable vehicles any further from pavement than the occasional dirt road.

They like the look that promises adventure, even if those adventures are to Costco, not the deep woods.

The Explorer will maintain 8 inches of ground clearance, just .3 inches less than current versions, and its overhangs are shorter, which will make it more maneuverable when climbing over logs and climbing hills.

Ford scrapped the 4WD High and Low settings because they found few people knew when to use each setting. Amy Marentic, group marketing manager for Ford, said that during a customer clinic, she asked one woman, who'd owned her Explorer for six years, if she'd ever used 4WD Low and she said no. "I don't know what it would do," the woman told her.

"Sometimes when things are complicated, they're intimidating," Marentic said.

So Ford developed a system with a center-console mounted knob featuring four choices: Normal, mud, sand and snow plus a button for hill descent control.

The system automatically tunes the system to provide optimum settings for the Explorer's engine, transmission and differentials depending on the selection.

For example, the sand setting has a more aggressive throttle and holds gears longer to power through, but the snow setting has less aggressive throttle and chooses the highest gear possible to avoid wheel spin.

Ford's made a big deal about engine technology lately and the Explorer will be a class leader in that respect. The standard engine will be a 3.5-liter, 290-hp V6 boasting 20 percent better fuel economy. That engine is just two horsepower shy of the 4.6-liter V8 that's optional in the current Explorer.

Interestingly, the optional engine will be the 4-cylinder, a new 2.0-liter, turbocharged and with direct injection, for 237 horsepower. No hybrid version is planned.

Ford's not yet released fuel economy numbers for the Explorer, but is promising 20 percent better numbers for the V6 and 30 percent better for the 4-cylinder.

The current Explorer V6 is rated at 14 mpg in the city and 20 on the highway and puts out just 210 horsepower. Comparing any new engine technology to the antiquated 4-liter V6 in the current Explorer is a bit misleading because that engine is simply the worst powerplant available in any car for sale in this country right now.

With roots that go back to the 1960s, the 4.0 is well past days when it was considered competitive.

One of the most interesting gambles Ford is taking is whether Explorer buyers will accept 6- and 4-cylinder options in place of V6 and V8 powertrains in the current vehicle. Engineers say they've worked tirelessly to eliminate noise, vibration and harshness.

The new SUV's technology goes beyond the drivetrain, though. It also has two new safety features, both industry exclusives.

First, the Explorer will have a new safety system called Curve Control, which will help the driver maintain the intended path in an instance where the vehicle is carrying more speed than it can handle.

Say, for example, you enter a freeway exit ramp at too high a speed. Instead of sliding, the system can cut the throttle and use individual brakes to bring the vehicle back to the path the driver intended.

Second, the Explorer will be the first vehicle equipped with inflatable shoulder belts for the second-row passengers.

The bags, located on the outer seating positions, inflate out of the buckle area.

The Explorer interior has other advances as well. There's more room in all three rows, a result of not having to make room for a separate frame under the vehicle.

In fact, one 6-foot-5 writer folded himself into the third-row seat and found suitable headroom, although room to wiggle toes wasn't very good.

That third row seat, which is standard, folds into a well in back, just like the Flex. Folding the second-row seat is also easier than many other vehicles.

There's also far more passenger space in the second row.

Ford has steadily improved its voice-activated Sync infotainment system, but upgrades to the system for 2011 will make it even more useful. Ford's introducing MyFord Touch, a new graphical interface for Sync.

The system comes with customizable screens on the instrument panel and a touch screen on the center console to control everything from phone, to iPods to Ford Sync services such as navigation. Ford used something they call "flattened grammar" to give buyers more ways to use voice commands to perform the same task, and it's a big improvement. For example, you could say, "play song" or "play track" to get the song you want.

Ford and its speech recognition partner, Nuance, have also improved the system's ability to learn voices.

The one area where the 2011 model will fall short of the old one is towing.

The current Explorer can be equipped to tow up to 7,115 pounds, but the new model will tow just 5,000 pounds. Anyone who needs more will need to move up to Ford's Expedition, which can tow 9,200 pounds, or perhaps one of the company's pickup trucks.

The difference is the frame, which can handle the stresses of the added weight more easily than a unibody.

Prices have not been announced, but there will likely be a small increase over the current Explorer's base price of $30,095 (including destination).

For years, SUV buyers endured criticisms of their vehicles by their friends because they liked the high seating position, towing capacity and go-anywhere look.

The new Explorer retains the adventuresome spirit, but loses much of the stigma associated with SUVs.

Will buyers come back to the Explorer now that a boatload of crossovers now compete for their attention? Ford thinks many buyers are ready to rekindle their adventurous spirit.

"We're going to reengage people who lost the dream," Farley said.

GULLETT, JOY, Ann Arbor, MI, Joy passed away peacefully on August 18, 2010, at Arbor Hospice. She was born March 27, 1934 in Salyersville, Kentucky the daughter of Beecher and Maude Patrick. On July 2, 1951, Joy married the love of her life, Ray Gullett. The couple moved to the Ann Arbor area in 1957. Joy's greatest treasure was her family. She dedicated her life to her children and later, grandchildren and even great grandchildren. For her, there was no better way to spend the day than surrounded by family and friends. She never missed a chance to celebrate life's achievements, both large and small. Children would delight in the special "treats" she made for birthdays, each had a favorite, and Joy was always eager to honor their requests. A mom to everyone she came in contact with, she was quick to offer a meal, a heartfelt hug, or an ear for listening. Always the center of attention, she loved telling and re-telling stories of her childhood growing up in Southeastern Kentucky as the eighth of ten children. Never one to take life too seriously, she had an outrageous sense of humor, and was not one to be censored no matter what the company. Thanks to Mamma, laughter was the soundtrack for Gullett family gatherings. The consummate caretaker, Joy was employed by Whitehall Convalescent Home in Ypsilanti for many years. She took great pride in her work, and showed up everyday with a smile on her face, a sparkling personality and quick wit. When Joy was on the floor, there was no doubt her patients were being looked after by the very best. Her kind spirit will long be remembered. Joy is survived by her husband, Ray Gullett; children, Phillip "Duke" (Mary) Gullett, Rhonda (Kevin) O'Connor, Michelle (Steve) Pennington, Shawn (Dirk) Naylor; grandchildren, Stacie, Stephanie, Thorne, Mackenzie, Alec, Graham, Davis, Troy and Cole; great grandchildren Ashley, Tyler, Dyllan, Desmyn, Myah and Brooklyn; her sister Janet Sue; and brother Haskell. She was preceded in death by her siblings, Maggie, Mildred, Nannie, Chester, Maxie, Lester, Charles; great grandson Bronson; and beloved chihuahua, Tiny. Joy's family will receive friends at the Nie Family Funeral Home, Liberty Rd. Chapel, 3767 W. Liberty Rd., Ann Arbor, MI on Friday, August 20, 2010 from 2 to 4 p.m. and 6 to 8 p.m. A Funeral Service will be held on Saturday, August 21, 2010 at the funeral home at 11 a.m. with visitation from 10 a.m. until the time of the service. Burial will follow at Union-Idell Cemetery in Ypsilanti. Please visit Joy's personal webpage at www.niefuneralhomes.com to leave a memory.

She was stationed in Denver, CO where she worked as an Occupational Therapist from 1950 to 1953 and obtained the rank of 2nd Lieutenant. Upon leaving the Army, she moved to Ann Arbor to work as an Occupational Therapist at the University of Michigan Hospital in the Adolescent Psych Department. It was in Ann Arbor that she met the love of her life, Lee Mackie Woodruff Jr., and they married in 1956. After 47 years of living in Ann Arbor, Lois moved to a retirement community in Chelsea. 2010 Honda Civic Si: a driving enthusiast's car

By Russ Heaps

Automotive Correspondent
Journal Register News Service

A tsunami of decisions confront Honda Civic buyers, and whittling down the grocery list of choices comprised of trim levels, engines, transmissions and body styles is a daunting endeavor indeed.

Honda lists 12 sedan trim levels and 10 for the coupe before tossing transmission choices and alternative fueling setups into the mix.

Nine grand separate the entry-level $16,165 DX Coupe with manual transmission from the $25,165 Sedan Si with navigation and performance tires. If you opt for either the natural gas GX or the Hybrid, you'll pay even more.

The $22,765 Coupe Si, the version Honda recently supplied for this evaluation, is up at the upper level of the price spread.

Honda lists three additional Si trims as more expensive. One includes high-performance tires, one has a navigation system and XM satellite radio, and the third features a combination of all three with a bottom-line $2,200 more than the plain-Jane Si.

If you prefer ordering a la carte and picking features from an options menu, you're out of luck.

Factory installed content is strictly determined by the trim level. The good news is that once you land on a trim level and transmission, there are really no other decisions to be made.

There are no factory options. If you want cruise control, you have to buy at least an LX; if you want leather seating, you need to buy at least the EX-L, and so forth.

While most Civic versions rely on a 140-hp, 1.8-liter 4-cylinder for their motivation, the Si gets a notably more potent 197-hp, 2-liter 4-cylinder engine. Civics with the 1.8-liter can be fitted with either a 5-speed manual or a 5-speed automatic transmission.

Only a 6-speed manual is available for ushering output from the 2-liter engine to the front wheels. Si acceleration is brisk and invigorating.

The six speed shifts smoothly. Dashing to 60 miles per hour from a standstill eats up about seven seconds.

What's gained by the Si's fun-to-drive quotient, however, must be paid for at the gas pump.

The EPA-estimated 26 city mpg and 34 highway mpg for Civics with the 1.8-liter and manual transmission drops to 21 mpg in the city and 29 mpg on the highway for the Si.

A small price to pay, I say, for a car that's considerably more fun to pilot.

Beyond the more powerful engine and more sophisticated tranny, choosing the Si gets you 17-inch alloy wheels and better tires in place of 15- or 16-inch wheels.

Moreover, the Si's 4-wheel independent suspension with its MacPherson struts in front and multi-link setup in the rear receives additional tuning for sportier performance.

This includes beefier stabilizer bars both fore and aft.

Four-wheel disc brakes monitored by an antilock system reel in Civic's forward motion.

Unavailable on DX, LX and EX versions, stability control, traction control and brake assist are standard on the EX-L and Si.

All Civics offer electronic brake force distribution. Other safety features such as six airbags, driver and passenger active head restraints, and daytime running lights are standard across the board.

For this segment, interior and trunk space is about average, though the Civic coupes only have about 30 inches of rear-seat legroom. That's pretty tight. In comparison, the Volkswagen Golf has 35.5 inches. The bottom line is that you can shoehorn some folks into the backseat for short outings, but full-size adults exiled there aren't going to fare well on extended overland cruises.

Despite Civic's place low on the pecking order of Honda's lineup, its instrument panel and dashboard are a pleasant conglomeration of curves and sweeping lines.

As might be expected at this price point, a lot of plastic goes into the finished product, but the pieces integrate well and are carefully assembled. Civic newbies may find the location of the digital speedometer requires some getting used to. Although the large, round analog tachometer is stationed directly above the steering wheel column, the speedometer, and gauges for the water temperature and fuel are situated in their own little pod in front of the driver at the top of the dashboard.

In theory, this reduces the time a driver's eyes dart from the road to check the vehicle's speed.

Otherwise, the controls and gauges are logically placed.

The seats are comfortable with adequate side support. Adding to passenger enjoyment is the Si coupe's 7-speaker audio unit that includes a subwoofer, CD player and iPod integration. Creature comforts are generous, but fairly standard for this price point.

Full power accessories, air conditioning, cruise control, tilt-telescoping steering wheel with redundant audio controls, and a split-folding rear-seat back are the standard equipment highlights.

Ponying up nearly $23,000 for the Si may seem like a lot for a subcompact, but remember while relatively small in size, the Civic's no longer the anchor for Honda's lineup—that role has fallen to the Fit. Think of Civic as an affordable next step up from the Fit that's priced and equipped to appeal to practically any small-car buyer. From stripped down (DX) to souped-up (Si), Civic has it covered.

Metabolic Weightloss Clinic promotes healthy living

Saline- Helping area residents maintain their health without hunger is the goal of the staff at Metabolic Weightloss Clinic, 1020 East Michigan Avenue, Suite H. Saline, Michigan 48176. Dr. John Ross, a board-certified obstetrician/gynecologist from Michigan, and Mary Clemons, a certified registered nurse anesthetist, have operated the weight-loss clinic since October 2008.

The Weight-Loss Clinic uses a small dose of what has been long known as a fertility drug, Pregnyl, which is human chorionic gonadotropin, or HCG. It has been on the market since the 1950s. It is used in higher doses - between 5,000 and 10,000 units - to treat infertility, but it was discovered that in much smaller doses, 125 units, it resets the hypothalamus. It is a naturally occurring hormone in women which maintains a pregnancy and provides nutrients to the fetus by releasing the mother's stored fat. It stimulates the release of 2,000 to 4,000 of your own fat calories into your system. So you are using your own fat stores. You need a lower caloric intake, because you are not hungry. Clients are instructed to eat a regimen of recommended fresh fruits, fresh vegetables and lean cuts of meat. Individuals lose between a half a pound to a pound a day. It's good for diabetes, it lowers blood pressure.

The use of HCG - popular in states such as California, Florida, Texas and Arizona - for weight loss is just catching on in this region, with this clinic, the first full service clinic in the area. The big thing with HCG is that you are not hungry. You can maintain a low-calorie diet and you don't have to exercise. Clients actually are recommended to not exercise until they have reached their desired weight and stabilized. Then they are encouraged to begin exercising. Since opening the clinic, individuals have sought to lose anywhere from 20 to 200 pounds.

They may have a wedding or a class reunion coming up, or they been on diets that aren't working anymore. All of the additives in our foods, including diet foods, add fat stores to internal organs, the abdomen, buttocks and thighs. A return to organic foods is recommended whenever possible.

Green tea is suggested to help increase metabolism, and clients are instructed in portion controls to help them maintain their desired weight.

Most people opt for the six-week program. In addition to the HCG and instructions on administering it, physician monitoring, and diet/nutrition counseling are included.

The clinic's goal is to get the community healthy, and weaned off many of the medications they may need for other ailments that may be weight related. The response so far has been phenomenal, with patients hailing from Cleveland, Cincinnati, New York, Philadelphia & Washington D.C.

When a client has phenomenal results, the word of mouth has snowballed the response we've received. New clients must complete the initial physical and lab work before being accepted into the program.

From Monday through Friday, they take the HCG. They don't have to come to the clinic; we teach them how to administer the injections, and injections are done with an insulin needle. They keep in contact with us every Sunday with their weight, and they keep food journals to evaluate if there are any problems.

Each program is tailored to each patient. Many of their patients have undergone gastric bypass surgery, so there is a specific program for them because they must eat in smaller quantities. Surgery is not always the answer to losing weight. It goes back to food portions and control, and resetting the hypothalamus.

St. Louis Center to celebrate 50 years

In 1958, Edward Cardinal Mooney of the Archdiocese of Detroit and John Cardinal O'Hara of the Archdiocese of Philadelphia dreamed of building two schools for boys with special needs in their respective communities.

Two years later in 1960, the Don Guanella School began operations in Springfield, Pa. and a groundbreaking ceremony for St. Louis School occurred on Aug. 28, 1960 in Chelsea.

To run their schools, these Catholic leaders sought out a religious order of priests who were experts in their field, and reached out to Italy to recruit the Servants of Charity Congregation to come to America.

Fifty years later, the mission of caring for persons with intellectual developmental disabilities remains the same, however the programs in these two dioceses now focus their attention on residential care and the teaching of life skills. That's why the Servants of Charity are planning to celebrate their 50 years of service and education in the United States on Sept. 19.

The event will be hosted by St. Mary Catholic Church in Chelsea, located at 14200 Old US-12, and begins with a noon mass concelebrated by Bishop Emeritus Most Rev. Carl Mengeling of the Diocese of Lansing, and Most Rev. Alphonso Crippa, superior general of the Servants of Charity from Rome.

Following the service, a reception will follow in the parish hall, and dinner will be served at 2 p.m. Several elected officials and religious dignitaries have been invited to attend the event, and tickets are $75 each with tables of eight available.

The groundbreaking ceremony takes place at St. Louis School on Aug. 28, 1960.

The dinner is being prepared by Gina Pantely and the staff of the Chelsea Grill.

St. Louis Center has seen many transformations over the years, and continued to adapt to the changing needs of society in teaching and caring for its residents with developmental disorders. These transformations have included St. Louis changing from an institutional structure to providing individual rooms and "person centered planning", from an independent Catholic school, to residents attending public schools; and from independence to state licensing and national accreditation through the Commission for Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities.

Most importantly, as a non-profit organization aligned with the Catholic church, the Servants of Charity embrace the spirit of their founder, Blessed Luigi Guanella, who is expected to be declared a saint by Pope Benedict XVI in 2011.

This spirit, or charism, is expressed in Fr. Guanella's educational system that sees each resident as "being made in the image and likeness of God, a unique, unrepeatable individual, gifted with intelligence and will, capable of love and of relating to others."

Each resident is treated with a great deal of love and respect for his or her uniqueness, and residents are exposed to a variety of programs both internally and externally that promote each individual's growth and well being. There are currently 53 residents from throughout Michigan who reside at St. Louis Center.

Tickets can be purchased online by visiting the St. Louis Center website at www.stlouiscenter.org, or by contacting Cindy Lesser at 1-734-475-8430. Tickets will be sold on a first come, first served basis, and will be limited to the first 300 people.

We'll be discussing the evolution of music through time, opportunities in the field of music and music education and exploring the backgrounds of classical composers. The Chelsea District Library has partnered with the Chelsea Center for the Arts to present a series of programs on these varied topics.

This talk will cover how to prepare for a wide array of music-related careers—from education to performance, from management to music and technology. What should you look for in a university, college, or conservatory? Learn how to develop a career notebook, outlining the possibilities in a practical manner.

With a focus on usual and unusual choices available for careers in music, this discussion is ideal for older teens or adults who are considering their options. Join us on Oct. 20 from 6:30 to 8 p.m. in the McKune Room. Lisa Hinz-Johnson, CCA director of music, will present this program.

The life and music of Franz Schubert

For the entirety of his brief, 31-year life, Franz Schubert worked in the shadow of Ludwig van Beethoven, writing vast quantities of beautiful music that remained largely unknown until his death. Although they lived in the same city, their paths rarely crossed.

Nonetheless, Beethoven knew of the young Schubert and reportedly declared "this one has the divine spark." Experience this master of melody firsthand in this performance with discussion led by Lester Castellana, CCA piano instructor, from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Nov. 17. Exchange program seeks families

The Rotary Club of Chelsea will welcome Rotary International Exchange student Manon Genre-Jazelet to Chelsea on Aug. 26. Genre-Jazelet will be enrolled as a senior at Chelsea High School for the 2010-2011 school year.

A native of Bedarrides, France, she is very excited to be coming to the United States, and the club is looking forward to her arrival. Jerry Wilczynski, youth exchange officer for the Chelsea club said.

Genre-Jazelet has two host families in place covering the first and second trimesters. They are both very excited to have her joining their homes. And Genre-Jazelet, like most young folks, has begun communicating with the host families using e-mail, Facebook, etc.

Wilczynski said that the club is still in need of a host family for the third school trimester. If interested, contact Wilczynski at jwilczynski@silvermaples.org, or call 1-734-475-4111. Host families must reside within the boundaries of the Chelsea School District and complete Rotary's intake process for host families. Information about the requirements is available in print or electronically.

"This opportunity allows for an exchange of cultures and is of benefit to both the student and the host family," Wilczynski said. "Most host families say they have felt they have gotten more out of the experience than the student."

Rotary runs a very well organized youth exchange program, he said.

"Host families are never left to muddle through. There is an individual counselor assigned for every student who acts as a resource for both the host family and the student," Wilczynski said.

He added that the student's family and the receiving Rotary host club picks up most expenses, so potential host families don't need to worry about that aspect of hosting a student.

"It's a wonderful opportunity," he said. "You'll forge a life-long relationship while gaining insight to another culture."

Chelsea Area Players to hold auditions

Chelsea Area Players will hold auditions for its upcoming production of "The Rocky Horror Show" on Sept. 7 in Chelsea at Beach Middle School and Sept. 8 in Ann Arbor at Bach Elementary School, from 6:30 to 9 p.m.

Callbacks are set for Sept. 10 in Chelsea. The age range for the cast is high school and above. A parent or guardian must accompany all minors during the audition.

Rehearsals will be held in Chelsea, with tech week and performances Nov. 11, 12, 13 in Ann Arbor at the Lydia Mendelssohn Theatre on the University of Michigan campus.

Richard O'Brien's "The Rocky Horror Show" is a long-running British stage musical that has become an international sensation since its 1973 debut. A visual and musical camp satire of the B-movie horror and science-fiction genres, it is a rock musical, where fans dress up as the characters, shout "call-backs" at the stage, and use props at appropriate moments.

It tells the story of two clean-cut kids, Brad and Janet, who run into car trouble and end up at the castle of Dr. Frank-N-Furter and his bizarre entourage, who are having a party.

But this is no ordinary party, and no ordinary night, it is the unveiling of the doctor's latest creation, Rocky, a man-made Adonis.

Tools for Schools.

Spelling without pencils. Math without calculators. Gym class with no shoes. Countless children in our area will go to school this fall without basic school supplies and clothing items. Unless we help.

In collaboration with the Lenawee, Washtenaw, and Monroe County homeless youth education programs, United Bank & Trust and Meijer are pleased to co-sponsor its fifth annual "Tools for Schools" campaign — a communitywide collection drive of school supplies for homeless and disadvantaged youth in grades K-12. This campaign helped over 800 youth during the 2009-2010 school year, and will ensure that none of our area children go without these basic needs during the upcoming school year.

To make a donation, bring NEW school supplies to any United Bank & Trust office from now through Friday, September 3.

Some suggested items include:

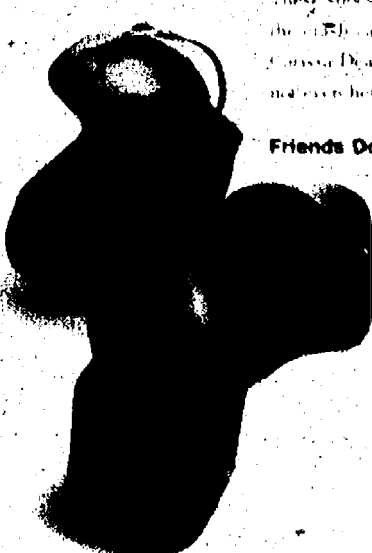

- Backpacks for all ages
- Highlighters, colored pencils, markers
- Calculators — regular, solar-powered, scientific
- Binders and folders
- Protractors, rulers, compasses
- Glue and scissors
- Three-subject and five-subject notebooks, loose-leaf paper

U of M Wolverines host Fan Day

Fans meet with players and coaches to kick off team's upcoming season

By Lisa Allmendinger
Heritage Newspapers

Tim Keys arrived at Michigan Stadium 9:15 a.m. with his father, Mark, on Sunday. "I wanted to be the first one in line to get (University of Michigan head football coach) Rich Rod's (Rodriguez) autograph," he said, adding that he was a little scared and very excited for the opportunity.

The 14-year-old from Canton had a long wait before Rodriguez appeared shortly after 1 p.m.

Rodriguez was forced to make an interesting entrance when U of M Stadium staff couldn't get the gate unlocked. Not to be deterred, the coach hopped a wall to get inside the area where he was scheduled to sign autographs.

"I won't be able to do that in another 10 years," he said, following his nimble climb over the cement block wall.

Edna Joy Girma of Ypsilanti, a member of the security staff, said fans were so excited to get inside of the stadium gates that they ran to get in line for player autographs when the gates opened.

"You should have seen them running to stand in line for an hour," she said.

While some fans stood in line, many took the rare opportunity to go down onto the football field for a game of catch or a few photos.

Thousands of U of M football fans were on hand to meet their favorite players and get their autographs. It was also a chance to see the newly renovated Big House.

"We came to see the inside of the new stadium," said Deb Frank of Chelsea, who was accompanied by her son, Tyler, a Chelsea High School football player.

Tyler Frank, quarterback/defensive back for the Chelsea Bulldogs, predicted his team would go undefeated. Not so with his prediction for the Wolverines.

"I think they'll go 8-3," he said.

And those willing to venture a guess remained optimistic about the upcoming season and were on the same page with Frank.

Another thing many U of M fans had in common was a belief that this year's starting quarterback will be Denard Robinson, a sophomore from Deerfield Beach, Fla.

He was non-stop smiles during the autograph session, and his was the longest line of the day.

Fan after fan asked to have a photo taken with him and wished him luck this year.

True to form on the football field, his shoes were not tied while he penned his name to footballs, photos, posters, helmets and a plethora of other items for two hours.

Nearby, freshman tight end John Haarer of Ann Arbor was probably asked to autograph one of the oddest things during Fan Day. His girlfriend, Monica Korzon of Ann Arbor, asked him to sign her forehead.

"I hope this is washable ink," she said after the fact.

Korzon was at Fan Day with three friends, Michael O'Connor, Jordan Chuck and Andrew Criste, recent graduates of Huron High School in Ann Arbor.

Another young fan, Adalyn Winegardner, 4, of Newark, Ohio, said she wants to be a University of Michigan cheerleader when she gets older.

Sandra Clark of Flint proudly wore a T-shirt that read: "In Rich Rod we trust."

Estevan Rincón, 8, of Monroe had his ball cap signed by lots of University of Michigan football players during Fan Day at The Big House Aug. 22.

"I think he's a great coach and he'll be successful," she said.

Her brother, Daniel Clark, also of Flint, agreed.

"I am 100 percent behind him," Clark said.

At another table, last year's starting quarterback, Tate Forcier, was deep in thought as he signed autographs.

Another member of the stadium event staff, Doug Harris of Saline, said there was a steady flow of people into the stadium throughout the day.

"We're well organized," he said, while assisting visitors.

Julia Webb of Pontiac was able to go behind the table and give her son, Martell, a senior tight end, a big hug during a break in the autographing action.

"We're so glad he stayed in Michigan, so we can go to all of the games," she said.

Making Strides

Mary Helen Darah discussed the "Power of the Purse" when it comes to making strides against breast cancer at a kick-off breakfast for 10th annual walk, set Oct. 23.

Organizers planning walk

By Lisa Allmendinger

Barb Marshall of Chelsea has set a goal of raising $25,000 for this year's American Cancer Society's Making Strides Against Breast Cancer walk.

She was among several passionate supporters of the walk who spoke to about 100 people at the Kensington Court Hotel during a recent kick-off breakfast for the Oct. 23 event set at Gallup Park.

Mary Helen Darah, a cancer survivor, talked about the "power of the purse" when it comes to making strides against breast cancer.

Dr. Lisa Newman of the University of Michigan Comprehensive Cancer Center, talked about the advances in breast cancer research.

"The American Cancer Society is the official sponsor of birthdays," she said, telling people "to live every day like it's your birthday."

And instead of ending her speech with "Go Blue," she said, "Go Pink," the official color of the Making Strides walk.

Ava Herrmann, a sixth-grade student at Mill Creek Middle School in Dexter, is a member of the Pace Setter's Club for those who have raised more than $2,000 at the event.

She, too, plans to participate in this year's walk and spoke with Marshall about her experience.

Herrmann and Marshall fired up the crowd with their "call to action" speech, rallying people to go out and raise money for the cause.

Last year, Marshall raised $24,400 and she was ranked the No. 13 individual fundraiser in the nation for the 2009 Making Strides walk, she said.

Making Strides is a 5-K non-competitive walk — one that Marshall said she's attended for the last four years.

The recently retired math teacher plans to tap her former students for help, as well.

"They have been absolutely phenomenal in helping me the past few years, and they are so pumped up about the possibility of raising $25,000 this year," she said.

Custer new musical director

The Seaway Chorale & Orchestra has a new musical director, Gerald Custer, to lead the group during its 35th season.

The board of governors selected its new music director for the 2010-11 concert season after a search that involved more than 20 qualified applicants and several interviews.

Member Don Van Every said Custer has impressive credentials that make him an ideal leader for the Seaway ensembles.

Custer holds a bachelor's degree in choral music education from Westminster Choir College, a master's degree in choral and orchestra conducting from George Washington University and currently is completing studies for a doctorate in musical arts degree at Michigan State University.

He teaches music theory and composition at Wayne State University and is the music director at the First Presbyterian Church in Farmington Hills.

Custer also is a nationally known music composer, nominated for a Grammy Award, with more than 50 works in print for chorus, solo voice, organ and instruments.

Custer has conducted choirs and orchestras across the country and currently has two CDs of his compositions available from GIA Publications.

"Seaway is very excited to have a new music director with the excellent qualifications that Jerry Custer possesses," President Sharon York said in a news release.

The group's new season kicks off with the Christmas program "A Child at Heart" Dec. 3 and 4, followed by the spring program "A 35th Anniversary Celebration" May 13 and 14, 2011.

The chorale will hold auditions for new singers at 6 p.m. Aug. 31 and Sept. 7 at Faith United Methodist Church, 2530 Charlton in Trenton.

Those who try out must be at least 18 years of age and have some singing experience. Sopranos, alto, tenors and basses are needed.

Those interested in trying out may call York at 783-5202 or Don Van Every at 1676-9504 for an audition appointment.

For more information about the group, visit www.seawaychorale.org.

Westgate Festival set

The Westgate Festival in Ann Arbor's Westgate Shopping Center will return for its second year from noon to 7 p.m. Saturday.

Two stages will provide alternating entertainment. There will be a clown act for the kids, live musicians, a scavenger hunt with participating businesses, a cupcake walk and the first ever "Doggie Days of Summer" Pooch Contest, beginning at 1:30 p.m. on the Chase Bank Stage.

The event is the work of local merchants in and around the Westgate Shopping Center who want to highlight Ann Arbor's west side community and all of its businesses.

"All of us doing business on the west side are very proud of the people we work with here in our community," said Rick Stites, Ann Arbor resident and President of West Washtenaw Business Association, in a news release.

"Also pleasing are the streetscapes, shops, stores and services offered, making us a one-stop place to live and do business. It's very exciting that we have this festival taking off. I can only hope it continues to grow, and all the businesses along Stadium Boulevard, Maple Road and Jackson Road come on board as the annual event develops."

Tim Patino, festival chairman and general manager of The Quarter Bistro & Tavern, located in front of Westgate, said that it's the merchants at Westgate who made the festival possible.

"They want to be noticed and are all very passionate about their business," Patino said.

"They are willing and want to organize to work together on events and whatever else it takes to help promote. Downtown is obviously a winning focus for Ann Arbor with visitors and locals, but the west side offers quite a bit as well, and parking is rarely a challenge here."

"We have great restaurants, clothing stores, unique specialty shops like Sun & Snow Sports, Learning Express and Nicola's Books. Travel around and you will be impressed with Big George's state of the art facility of appliances and entertainment equipment. Amish Tables and Two Wheel Tango, just to name a few."

This year's event is focused around food and school supplies benefiting SOS Community Center. Although the event is free, the organizers ask visitors to consider helping with the drive by bringing donation items with them.

Music will be offered throughout the day, along with family-friendly activities put on by Just Baked, Learning Express and Leslie Science and Nature Center.

Vendors and nonprofits will be on board to promote their businesses and causes in the area.

Hospital to offer specialized senior emergency dept.

In response to the aging of the baby boom generation, St. Joseph Mercy Health System has launched Senior Emergency Departments at all eight of its emergency department locations across southeast Michigan.

By Jan. 1, 2011, emergency departments at Chelsea Community Hospital, St. Joseph Mercy Ann Arbor, St. Joseph Mercy Brighton, St. Joseph Mercy Livingston, St. Joseph Mercy Oakland, St. Joseph Mercy Port Huron and St. Joseph Mercy Saline will each have a Senior Emergency Department staffed by caregivers who are specially skilled in geriatric emergency care.

St. Mary Mercy Livonia opened the doors to the health system's first Senior Emergency Department on July 14.

"This is Michigan's first implementation of a dedicated program addressing the emergency care needs and physical comforts of adults ages 65 and up," said Garry Faja, president and CEO of St. Joseph Mercy Health System, in a news release.

"Since its opening, St. Mary Mercy Livonia has had extremely favorable responses from patients and caregivers, families, physicians and staff."

Collectively, the eight emergency departments will serve residents in five counties where seniors represent 21 to 25 percent of the total population. St. Joseph Mercy Health System conducted market research that indicated 85 percent of seniors and 91 percent of caregivers desire a specialized emergency care experience. "Our vision is to create a remarkable patient experience supporting the specific needs of seniors, their families and caregivers," said Faja. "Each emergency department will take extra steps to create that experience, which will offer additional comfort, safety, communication and security."

St. Joseph Mercy officials say that no other emergency department in the state offers this kind of specialized care.

Medical staffs at each facility are taking additional geriatric emergency medicine training, and nursing staffs will complete Geriatric Emergency Nursing Education through the Emergency Nurses Association.

The courses allow physicians and nurses to sensitively and appropriately identify and treat patients with pre-existing conditions, multiple medications, dementia, living condition concerns, nutrition and depression.

"The patient-centered care model adapts the typical emergency department system to meet the special medical needs, preferences and physical comforts of seniors," said Dr. George Williams, co-chair of the SJMHS Senior ED initiative and chief of staff for St. Joseph Mercy Saline.

During a patient's stay at the Senior ED, a multidisciplinary team will assess physical function, cognitive status and level of risk.

The approach will also include pharmacy and social work consultations, which will help seniors and their caregivers develop a care plan upon discharge from the ED.

"This discharge process assures a seamless transition back to the home or other care setting, and substantially lessens the probability of a return visit for the same health issue," said Williams.

Comfort Amenities

Amenities in each Senior Emergency Department will vary by site and may include pressure-reducing mattresses to minimize soreness during longer stays, soft lighting, noise buffers, reclining chairs, large-print charts and discharge papers, oversized clocks, large print way-finding signage, and non-slip, non-glare floors.

Additionally, items frequently forgotten when a patient is rushed to the ED are provided, such as reading glasses and hearing enhancement technology.

"Regardless of the physical amenities, every senior who comes to Saint Joseph Mercy Health System's emergency departments will receive the same Senior ED experience from skilled geriatric emergency care staff," Faja said.

St. Joseph Mercy Health System is a healthcare organization spanning six counties, including Livingston, Macomb, Oakland, St. Clair, Washtenaw and Wayne. A member of Trinity Health, it's the nation's fourth largest Catholic health care organization, according to a news release from the hospital. For more information on health services offered at St. Joseph Mercy Health System, visit www.sjmercyhealth.org.

Some annuities offer way to pay long-term care

As older Americans are still struggling to reassemble their retirement plans from the worst economic downturn in 70 years, relatively few are considering the spiraling cost of long-term care, the potentially most devastating threat to their plans.

Current estimates from AARP put the annual cost of a private nursing home room at a national average of $78,000.

On Jan. 1, some important provisions of the Pension Protection Act of 2006 went into effect to help pay for those costs. Individuals no longer have to pay federal income tax on the proceeds from an annuity if those proceeds are used to pay for long-term care coverage.

That means that chronically ill or disabled people will no longer have to rely on their own private long-term care policies or Medicaid to pay for costs related to long-term care.

The change is spurring the creation of hybrid deferred annuity policies that also carry long-term care coverage.

These products allow policyholders to use the proceeds for LTC coverage, for income or for both. The proceeds that went to pay for long-term care costs for the policyholder would not be subject to federal tax.

These long-term care annuities can generate tax-deferred gains, which works particularly well for those in high tax brackets who believe they will be in a lower bracket by the time they would need to draw on that coverage.

This option isn't for everyone, and it's important to consult a financial expert and, more important, a tax expert to decide if this alternative is for you.

It's also important to compare the offerings of standard long-term care policies and these annuity/LTC hybrids since the hybrids are generally regarded to offer less LTC coverage in duration of benefits.

Unless you have a significant amount to invest, these hybrid policies may not last beyond a year or two of benefits.

It's important to talk to both financial and tax experts before wading into this arena and to see how much coverage you can buy based on the size of the annuity you can afford.

Before studying these products more closely, it's important to look at the big picture of your finances and your expectations for care if you become temporarily or permanently disabled.

What resources do you have? This question goes beyond monetary issues. While care giving puts a strain on family, it's important to consider whether family and friends are truly willing and able to help with your care, which can provide a considerable financial and emotional benefit.

What's your health history? People in good health purchasing long-term care insurance at the age of 55 usually get the most affordable deal in LTC insurance.

But an individual's family health history and current health status are the real determinants of what your LTC insurance policy will cost—or if you'll qualify for coverage at all.

Also, it's important to note that 40 percent of long-term care is provided to individuals between the ages of 19 and 65, so the need for care can strike at any time.

What if I never want to go to a nursing home? The idea is to cover every eventuality. The best-designed LTC policies will pay the same amount of benefit whether care is received in a long-term care facility, an assisted living facility, an adult day care center or in the home.

Some policies do offer reduced percentages for home health care versus nursing home care, but it's a better idea to keep full percentages on home health care benefits since most people would rather stay in their homes.

Timing of horse vaccines critical

Vaccinating horses at the proper time of the year for Eastern Equine Encephalitis is critical to ensuring animal health and protection from the mosquito-carried disease, says to Michigan State University equine veterinarian Judy Marteniuk.

Horses vaccinated after late March should be protected, but those vaccinated prior to March should receive an Eastern Equine Encephalitis booster, she said.

Eastern Equine Encephalitis is a vector disease, which means it cannot be transmitted from horse to horse. In Eastern Equine Encephalitis, mosquitoes are the vectors, or carriers, that transmit the disease to horses, which can result in death.

Early foaling broodmares that were vaccinated early on should get a booster in order to provide protection to their foals.

Additionally, owners who thought a yearly vaccination could be done anytime of the year should give their horses a booster, Marteniuk said.

The vaccine should be effective for six to eight months.

"There have been cases of horse fatalities in Michigan because the owner was vaccinating for Eastern Equine Encephalitis in the fall, and the horses were not protected during the entire mosquito season," Marteniuk said.

"It's important that owners consult with their veterinarians to ensure proper timing of vaccines and other health protocols."

Most horses that have developed the disease in Michigan were not vaccinated. For those horses not vaccinated, owners can vaccinate now to ensure horses are protected for the remainder of the season, according to Marteniuk.

Karen Waite, MSU Extension equine specialist, frequently works with horse owners around the state.

"If you have a horse and are unsure of its vaccination history, you should revaccinate them to be sure they are protected," she said.

Marteniuk said the first seven to 10 days post-vaccination are the most critical period, since the horse could still become infected.

She also advised that any horse not vaccinated in the past one to two years should receive a booster two weeks after the initial vaccination, rather than waiting the usual three to four weeks according to routine vaccination protocol.

Eastern Equine Encephalitis is also transmittable from mosquitoes to humans, and because of the high mortality rate among horses and people, is regarded as one of the most serious mosquito-vector-borne diseases in the United States.

cases in the United States.

The Michigan departments of Community Health and Agriculture are encouraging residents to take precautions when Eastern Equine Encephalitis has been identified in horses or people in their area.

Recommended measures include applying mosquito repellent, repairing or replacing broken window screens and draining standing water sources.

"A simple vaccination will protect your animal from these often fatal illnesses, and routine measures to reduce mosquito exposure and eliminate mosquito habitats around the home and farm will help protect people, horses and other livestock," state veterinarian Dr. Steven Halstead said in a news release issued jointly by MDA and MDCH.

Summer program ends with barbecue party

By Anna Cangialosi
Guest Writer

The Chelsea District Library's "do it yourself" summer reading game ended Aug. 14 with grand prize winner announcements and a barbecue picnic lunch provided by Zingerman's Roadhouse. The goal of the summer reading game is to give adults a chance to be rewarded for using their library and staying sharp through the summer.

The theme led to well-attended programs on food preserving methods, like canning and pickling as well as raising chickens and brewing beer at home. The summer reading game card encouraged reading, but urged players to expand their horizons by trying an audiobook or reading a book from the teen section.

The goal of the summer reading game is to give adults a chance to be rewarded.

Players also earned points by using the library's online resources and contributing comments to the adult and senior blogs on the library website.

Players earned prizes like Mission Marketplace fair-trade chocolate bars and paperbacks as well as entries into the grand prize drawing. The grand prizes included a Kodak Easy Share digital camera, two tickets donated by the Purple Rose Theatre, and gift certificates to Cleary's Pub, Common Grill, Garden Mill, Gigi's Flowers, Just Imagine, Mission Marketplace, New Chelsea Market, Potting Shed and Vogel's & Foster's. The Friends of the Chelsea District Library generously underwrote funding for summer reading prizes.

The grand prizes were announced at the Aug. 14 final summer reading event, but another major draw was the Zingerman's build your own barbecue bar featuring Zingerman's signature BBQ pork, rolls and a selection of barbecue sauces to customize the sandwich. Side dishes included cole slaw and baked beans.

But it's not just any barbecue. Chef Alex Young purchases hogs from the Chelsea Community Fair and continues raising them on his farm in Dexter. From these handpicked hogs comes the pork used in the Roadhouse's signature barbecue pork dishes. It's pit-smoked for 14 hours in the traditional whole hog barbecue style. The meat is then hand-pulled, chopped and ready for a choice of barbecue sauces.

Chef Young spent years perfecting his special Eastern North Carolina vinegar barbecue sauce, which has a peppery kick. The South Carolina mustard barbecue sauce provides plenty of flavor without as much spicy bite.

Over 80 people joined us on the Katie's Korner lawn to celebrate the end of summer reading and enjoy good food and good weather.

Writer workshop begins

Writers of novels, short stories, flash fiction, poetry, creative non-fiction, and drama are invited to join the Chelsea Writers' Workshop, now in its fifth year.

Workshop members meet on alternate Saturdays, 10 a.m. to noon, at the Washington Street Education Center, 500 Washington St. in Chelsea. The fall session begins Sept. 11 and ends on Dec. 18, with a special appearance on Oct. 23 by South Lyon author Rachael Perry.

Perry's 2004 collection of short stories, "How to Fly," was honored with the Best Book Award for Fiction by the Center for Great Lakes Culture at Michigan State University. Perry will lead a question and answer session on writing, and then critique the works of fiction submitted by two workshop participants who have pre-registered for the entire series.

During the weeks of the workshop, writers submit excerpts of their work, give and receive feedback from each other, and share information on writing contests, classes, and conferences. Those who participate must be 18 years or older, have access to a computer, attend at least six of the eight sessions, and be willing to share their work.

The cost for the entire eight sessions is $55 for those who register by Sept. 3; after that the price is $60. Writers who wish to enter a drawing to have their work critiqued by Rachael Perry must register for the full workshop by Sept. 3. Admission to the Perry session only is open to the public for a $10 fee.

Call 1-734-433-2208, Ext. 6042 to register and note your genre when registering.

Superintendent's Corner

David K. Killips
Superintendent of Schools

Ready, set, go! The 2010-11 school year is just around the corner. The district staff has been working hard to prepare facilities and programming for all students. Listed below are some of the changes residents will notice as we continue to "achieve educational goals one student at a time."

- Students in grades K-2 will attend North Creek; grades 3-5 will attend South Meadows; grades 6-8 will attend Beach Middle School; while grades 9-12 will remain at CHS.

- Transportation within the City of Chelsea has been reduced. For the most part, students within the city limits will walk to the nearest school and then be transported to their school of attendance. There are a few exceptions so please pay attention to any and all communications from the transportation department. The number of stops in the outlying areas will also be reduced, however, safety will always be a priority.
- The bond proceeds, which were approved by the community, have provided a number of improvements throughout the District. North Creek and South Meadows have been provided with improved playgrounds, inclusive of handicap accessible surfaces. An addition to South Meadows includes a gym, music rooms, relocated media center, new cabinetry and new technology. No longer will South Meadow students be bused to Beach to receive physical education and music programming. Beach Middle School has received new technology. All 6th, 7th and 8th grade students will be part of the laptop programming. Chelsea High School had two rooms refurbished. One for the Independent Living Program and the other for the Health Alliance Program. A small set of bleachers has been constructed at the soccer field.

The Chelsea School District will continue to build upon its accomplishments. In the 2009-10 school year academic success continued to climb. The District continues to see increased academic achievement by our youngest students. The advent of full-time kindergarten is paying dividends with improved literacy scores. On the other end of the educational spectrum the District maintains one of the highest graduation rates in the state. Our high school students excel in Advanced Placement test scores, National Merit Scholarships, vocational education competitions and throughout extra-curricular activities. These successes are certainly attributable to the solid foundation put in place by teachers, supportive families and an involved community.

As we work our way through these treacherous financial waters, we remain focused on providing each and every student the best education possible. Our staff remains dedicated to the children of the Chelsea School District. The community maintains high expectations for our District and we will continue to work towards meeting the expectations.

We all look forward to another exciting year filled with fun and learning. Please do not hesitate to contact us with any questions you may have. Otherwise, we will see everyone on September 7!

DISTRICT GOALS 2010-2011

- Increase Individual Student Achievement
- Maintain a Positive and Safe School Climate
- Maintain Fiscal Responsibility
- Promote Interaction Between School District and Our Communities

FOOD SERVICE DEPARTMENT

The Chelsea School District Food & Nutrition Service Department offers popular breakfast and lunch choices to students at all of our schools.

Our meals meet or exceed the USDA recommended guidelines. Healthy choices are important to us, and we encourage each student to select a balanced, nutritious meal. A fresh fruit and vegetable bar, including seasonal selections from our regional farms, is offered daily at each school. Our successful farm-to-school program grows every year, and we are excited to be a member of the Food System Economic Partnership.

For parent and student convenience, each student's ID card may also be used as a meal debit card. Parents are encouraged to send checks or make on line deposits using Visa or MasterCard. School menus and prices, along with our Food & Nutrition Program Guide, are on the school district web site. We encourage parents to complete a Free or Reduced Meal Benefit Application which is also available on the school district web site, or may be obtained at any school office or lunchroom.

We welcome your questions, comments and suggestions! Please contact Sara Simmerman, Food Service Director at 433-2200 ext. 1026 or Sue Gregg, at ext. 1023.

CHELSEA SCHOOLS VALUE COMMUNITY SUPPORT

Parent and community members are vital to the success of students in the Chelsea School District.

At the building level, parents and community members are valued as classroom volunteers, office volunteers, PTO officers and board members, PTO event volunteers, parent support group participants, field trip chaperones, music booster, and athletic boosters. In addition to building-level opportunities, the Chelsea School District has several District-wide committees on which parent and community members play a vital role.

- These committees include the following:
- The District School Improvement Team reviews District and building goals and works to coordinate professional development and other school improvement strategies across the District. This team reviews the District annual report and provides input on strategies for District goals.
- The District Curriculum Council coordinates the review and alignment of District curriculum with state and national standards.
- The Reproductive Health Advisory Committee oversees District curriculum and instruction in the area of reproductive health.
- Task Forces: the District, to address specific needs, may establish task forces. When established, such committees have a defined focus and timeline for reporting.

"New members are needed each year for various committees," according to Andrew Ingall, Executive Director of Instruction for the Chelsea School District. Ingall maintains a file of parents and community members interested in serving as volunteers for these District-level opportunities, with the goal of having volunteers identified to fill positions as openings develop. Persons interested in learning more about these opportunities may contact Ingall at 433-2208, ext. 6084.

MONITORING PROGRAM LAUNCHES AT BEACH MIDDLE SCHOOL

Where Everybody Belongs (WEB) is a new program where by 8th grade students mentor 6th grade students. The 8th graders receive special training over the summer to help them assume this leadership role. WEB orientation for all 6th grade students is August 31 from 8:00 am until 12:00. A special thank you to the Chelsea Wellness Foundation for giving BMS a grant to get this program started!

There is no doubt that Chelsea football coach Brad Bush is most comfortable with a senior quarterback. It's a complex position that requires not only great athletic ability, but poise, intelligence and leadership. Handing the ball off to a "youngster" isn't exactly Bush's first option. But last year Brian Paulsen changed all that. The junior was the starting quarterback on opening day against Ann Arbor Huron in the Big Day Prep Showdown at Eastern Michigan University. It was the first time in 12 years that a senior wasn't under center for the season-opening game.

Paulsen remembers that day. "I was nervous," he says. "The first half didn't go very well." In fact, the Bulldogs found themselves down by a couple of touchdowns to Huron. Not exactly where a young quarterback in his first game wanted to find himself at halftime. But the key was, that he did find himself.

"The jitters and nerves were gone in the second half," Paulsen said. "I needed to play better and the team needed to play better. I think from that point I came into my own."

Paulsen and the Bulldogs did exactly that and during that comeback the young junior quarterback graduated to just being the Chelsea quarterback.

"Yeah, I think I earned their respect in that second half," he says. "Last year was a great experience. It was great to play with Nick Hill and the other seniors on the team."

Hill and the other seniors let "the kid" lead the way.

"The guys on the team, both this year and last year, respect Brian because he works hard," Bush said. "He leads more by example but he's not afraid to speak up."

With Hill moving on to Michigan State, the Bulldogs should be returning to a more balanced attack - something they were known for before the arrival of one of last year's best running backs in the state. While the running game will be a part of that attack, so will throwing the ball. And Paulsen has the arm to deliver.

"He has a very good arm," Bush says. "He throws the ball well. He also has a passion for the game and worked very hard in the off-season. We really like his ability to be able to throw the ball down field and that's something we hope to do more of this season."

REGIONAL FOOTBALL

Inside the huddle

The always-changing game of coaching

By Don Richter
Heritage Newspapers

Football coaches come in all shapes and sizes. Some are tall, some are short, but all at times, can seem larger than life to the players on their respective teams.

From youth football, to high school, to college and on to the professional football ranks, coaches carry a level of influence over players rarely seen in other sports.

Coaches at all levels and in all sports have a difficult job, but football coaches arguably have the toughest task. And high school gridiron coaches in towns and cities where football brings out thousands of fans each Friday night, and thousands of different opinions, have challenges few outside the profession would ever know or understand. Changes in the game of football occur each season and duties on and off the gridiron for coaches are different today than they were 10 years ago, let alone

Saline coach Mike Glennie, who has been coaching football for 22 years, the last nine on the Hornets' sideline, said one of the biggest changes in coaching since he started has been in the area of science and technology.

"The way fields are cared for and maintained with modern equipment (has changed)," he said. "Modern developments in football field equipment such as bags and Jugs Machines, plus the way we film. The ability to watch film without having to have it sent in and developed. We have hard drives, digital cameras and projection machines. All of this comes down to the way we teach football and the safety provided to our athletes today."

Glennie said the players wearing the shoulder pads and helmets haven't changed over the years.

"Absolutely not," he said. "They are what's consistent in the sport."

Glennie said parents haven't changed much either throughout his career, except in one main area.

"As advances in training have come about, they are there to provide what we Chelsea coach Brad Bush says technology has been one of the biggest changes in the game.

2010 OUTLOOK: THE SOUTHEASTERN CONFERENCE

Chelsea

Head coach: Brad Bush (14th season, 106-33)

Assistant coaches: Grant Fanning, Pat Dignan, Jari Brown, Dan Brown, Adam Taylor, Mark Scheese, Jason Lindauer and Chad McKale

Top returning players: Brian Paulsen QB (right), Conor Tait OT, Mason Borders WR, Chris Ballow RB, Logan Kelly DT, Cal Bauer LB, Andrew Koch LB, Truman Hadley LB

Top newcomers: Logan Yordanich OLB, Max Giller CB

Game plan with the ball: Must be balanced on offense. We have to throw the ball with better efficiency.

Game plan without the ball: Our defense is more veteran than our offense. They will have to do a good job vs. the run early in the season.

Overall outlook: Our expectations are the same as they have always been. We expect to compete for the playoffs and an SEC championship. We have been in the playoffs 11 consecutive years.

Our take: Chelsea is the team others take aim at and aspire to be. Nothing has changed. The cliché about reloading and not rebuilding certainly applies to the Chelsea varsity football team. Replacing Nick Hill (Michigan State) won't be easy but this program was first rate before Hill arrived and will be in the future, and the future is now.

Dexter

Head coach: Tom Barbieri (34th year of coaching, 24th as a head coach)

Game plan with the ball: Balance attack with a spread option.

Game plan without the ball: Dexter's defensive line and defensive backs should be strengths.

Outlook: We should have a good year barring many injuries.

Our take: The Dreads haven't had a lot to talk about on the football field in recent years, but this team is talking like champions. There is the saying about talking the talk and walking the walk. Dexter has the experience, talent and most of all the determination to walk into something special. Look for the Dreads to back up their talk with a winning record and a run at the state playoffs.

Lincoln

Record last year: 2-7 (2-3 SEC)

linebacker Jonathon Stewart; senior corner/defensive back Charles Howell; junior tallback George Miller; and junior wide receiver Kendall Thompson.

Top newcomers: Junior quarterback T.J. O'Bryan, sophomore defensive back Deionte Bruton and junior TE Dejuan Hampton.

Game plan with the ball: Offensively they will have to depend less on the quarterback as a running threat and more on the pass. George Miller will be better and expect to see the quarterback staying under center more.

Defensive game plan: The team will play full transition and a 3-4 defense. Look for the Splitters to be a little more aggressive and blitz more than they have in the past.

Coaches' outlook: "We have been getting better each year and making strides," Westfall said. "Our attitude is different and we have higher expectations. The team is making strides and I expect us to have a winning record and maybe make the playoffs."

Our take: They will definitely win more games than last season when they only won twice. But can Lincoln take that big step to being a playoff team? They still may be a few seasons away from that. Look for four or five wins this season from the Splitters.

Saline

Head coach: Mike Glennie, 9 years at Saline, 22 years overall, 81-58 career record

Assistant coaches: Marty Walsh, Al Leslie, Jack Crabtree, Randy Dunny, Brett Parachek, Jason Wawrzyniak, Jared Falkowski, Nick Sheridan, Scott Powers, Cord Trott, Brian Buchanan, Jeff Waltz, Jon Curtis, Joey Everett, Marcellus Wade

Record last year: 3-6

Top returning players: Garrett Gordon, Mitch Osadchuk, David Schuler, Austin McBee, Trey Heren

Game plan with the ball: Wing-T

Game plan without the ball: Odd stack defense

Overall outlook: "Very optimistic," said Glennie. "This year's team has great chemistry and a great work ethic. Our goal is to play to our potential and as a team."

Our take: After suffering through an uncharacteristic 3-6 overall record, look for the Hornets to rebound this season. With a balanced offense and a hard-hitting defense, Saline should once again be near the top of the Southeastern Conference Red Division standings.

Top newcomers: Senior defensive back and running back Ryan Griffin; junior running back Austin Sanders; junior safety and wide receiver Davon Thompson; senior free safety and wide receiver Andrew Hunt; sophomore defensive end and outside linebacker Zaid Abdellatif; junior quarterback Darryl Tipton; junior quarterback Kevin Clark; and junior quarterback Mike Anderson.

Game plan with the ball: Malloy said his team has a lot of speed and they plan to use it to spread out the field. The Phoenix want to run effectively and their top priority will be to run the ball and control the tempo of the game.

Game plan without the ball: He wants his team to be fast and physical and be physically and fundamentally sound. Malloy said the kids have the speed, they just need to be smart and he wants his team to be a first-class program on and off the field.

Our take: Malloy's Phoenix will be better this season than one win, but how much better is the question. They may be a surprise this season and get to four or five wins. It all depends on who stays healthy and how academically sound the team can be.

Ypsilanti

Head Coach: Jason Malloy second season 1-3 record last year

Assistant coaches: Marcus Hatch, James Lamar, Deon Powell, William Stewart, Ron Armstrong, Billy Fern and Steven Spencer.

Conference: Southeastern Conference White Division

Record last year: 1-8

Top returning players: Senior wide receiver/linebacker Marquez Gollman; senior linebacker/center

Trey Sweeney; junior defensive back/wide receiver Marc Miles; and

Pioneer

Head coach: Jeremy Gold (3rd year)

Conference: Southeastern Conference Red Division

Game plan with the ball: The Pioneers will stick with the spread offense in 2010, but according to coach Jeremy Gold, it will look a little different than last season. "We are going to use a lot more tight end sets," he said. "We are going to get our best 11 on the field."

Game plan without the ball: Traditionally, Pioneer has employed a four-down front mixed with a three-down front. However, this season, with some depth at the linebacker position, Gold said the team would probably rely more on the three-down front.

Season outlook: Last season, the Pioneers had a huge amount of talent and experience. However, after graduating 26 seniors from last year's squad, 2010 might be a bit of a rebuilding season for Gold and his staff. But that doesn't mean the Pioneers won't be competitive in every game, it just means that some of the new players will have to step up in a big way. Look for Drake Johnson and Terrell Moran to both carry much of the load for the Pioneers, and junior quarterback Andy Creal will also be a major factor for the team.

Can't miss game: Bedford at Pioneer, Sept. 24, 7 p.m. at Hollway Field in Ann Arbor. Pioneer's only SEC loss came at the hands of the Kicking Mules last season in Bedford. The Pioneers will be looking to exact a little revenge this year when they host the grudge match.

Skyline

Head coach: Randy Hutchinson (1st year)

Assistant coaches: Steve Stark, Allen Kennedy, DeAnthony White, Rob Banes, Paul Test, Jeff Westfall, Matt Kevans, Vince Wortman, Ryan Holmes, Mike Damrod, Jarad Harrison

Top newcomers: Andrew Cop, Jordan Woods, Sam Rose, Theron Wilson, Roman Hofmiester, Jarius Mann

Game plan with the ball: In their first year of varsity competition, the Eagles will be running a multi-formation spread offense. The team will run almost exclusively out of the shotgun, and will throw the ball 60-70 percent of the time.

Game plan without the ball: The Eagles will run the 4-3 defense and use multiple zone coverages. "I know we lack in size compared to the other teams we will be playing, but I am confident in our guys," Hutchinson said. "They are a hard-working team and we are looking to play very tough on defense."

Season outlook: Hutchinson has high expectations for this first-year varsity team. "We're hoping to make the playoffs," he said. "That may sound crazy to some people, but we think we've got the talent." The coach said that the team will have to work hard to overcome the fact that they will almost certainly be smaller than most of the teams they take on, however, he said his team's work ethic is fantastic.

Can't miss game: Ypsilanti at Skyline, Sept. 2, 7 p.m. at Skyline Stadium.

Huron

Coach: Corey Gildersleeve (2nd year)

Offense: The River Rats are looking to run the same spread offense they ran last season, but Huron coach Corey Gildersleeve believes there will be more options from the offense in his second year at the helm. "In the first year, you are just trying to get things together, but in the second year, you can do a whole lot more with this kind of offense."

Defense: Huron will run an odd front defense with multiple bases. "We are just looking to keep teams honest," the coach said. "But every once in awhile we will surprise you."

Outlook: After bringing Huron its first winning season since 2002 in his first year as coach, Gildersleeve is looking to help the program improve even more. "We just want to create a winning attitude here at Huron," he said. "And I think we are doing that."

commonly call "off season" training opportunities for the kids," he said. "As these opportunities have increased, so has the pressure to improve, especially at a younger age. These pressures have come through in the athletes as well as the parents."

Glennie said the game has changed, but not as much as one might think.

"Yes, things like the spread offense present some new dimensions to modern football, but for the most part the things we consider new have been around, disappeared and now resurfaced with many times a new name," he said.

Chelsea coach Brad Bush has made a name for himself since taking over the Bulldogs 14 seasons ago. Chelsea is an impressive 106-33 under Bush, who agrees that technology has been among the big changes in coaching.

"It's the same thing that has been going on over the years in the classroom," Bush says. "Technology has changed the way teachers teach and it's the same for coaching. We have been using video tape for years, but now instead of VHS, everything goes right into a computer and we can break things down very easily and much more efficiently."

Bush says the Bulldogs video tape every practice and go over things with the players, often times the very next day. And Powerpoint has replaced the chalkboard.

Another change has been the financial aspect.

"Every team at every school is now out there fund-raising year round when that wasn't the case when I started coaching," Bush says. "You see all the teams out there trying to raise money for their programs."

Bush said his first year he had 21 juniors and seniors on his roster. This year's team has 68 players and Bush starts 22, 11 on offense and 11 on defense.

"Everyone plays in every game at the lower levels," he says. "We want kids to not only learn the game but enjoy it so they come back. The number of kids playing football over the years has certainly grown in Chelsea."

Dexter coach Tom Barbieri, who has been coaching football for 34 years, the last 10 with the Dreadnaughts, said one of the changes he's noticed throughout his career is with his players' overall training during and after the season.

"Kids are more committed now to the full 12-month a year program," he said. "They understand they need to lift weights, speed train and stay in condition. The kids today are better prepared now as football players than they were 30 years ago."

Barbieri said off-field activities, duties and functions are handled more by parents now days.

"Back in the olden days, the schools did everything," he said. "Now parents do it. They help maintain the practice, field, paint the locker room and work the concession stands. Booster clubs are so much bigger and more involved now."

Belleville longtime assistant coach Matt Davenport, who is taking over the Tiger program this season from Bob LaPointe, who retired after 18 years at the helm, said the biggest change for him as head coach is handling practice.

"My responsibilities are different now in practice because I have all of the administrative responsibilities," he said. "But during practice I am able to evaluate players better. It helps because all of the coaches are friends and we help each other through things."

Davenport said having a close staff is beneficial to the improvement of the Belleville program.

"We all kind of have the same ideas and thoughts and we know the kinds of kids we have here," he said. "There are no big surprises because we all know each other."

Milan coach Steve Robb said changes in technology are the biggest difference in the game since he first started coaching back in 1977 at Albion High School.

"The way technology has improved is amazing," he said. "The technology today is overwhelming. Now, most teams have a tech coach on their staff."

Robb, who has been Big Red head coach since 1986 and was an assistant at Dearborn Divine Child in 1985 when the Falcons captured a state championship, said another change in high school football over the years has been the level of play on the field.

"The caliber of play in Michigan has improved dramatically," he said. "Play in the last 10 years has improved by leaps and bounds. There aren't many bad teams out there right now. There are no cupcakes anymore."

Glennie said expectations haven't changed too much over the years.

"The expectation to win has always been there and always will," he said. "It is a competitive game and at the varsity level you should have a goal of competing to win."

Glennie said the focus on earning a college football scholarship has changed somewhat from when he first began.

"As for college scholarships, I would say yes, many times parents who have athletes looking to play at the college level are hoping for their son to earn a scholarship," he said. "In my opinion, there is nothing wrong with that being a goal. However, when the focus shifts to getting a scholarship rather than playing your role to help your high school team win, that is where things get off track."

The goal of playing college football for those who are able is great. I believe they should be looking for a school that is a fit academically first and if they can play there that is great and lastly the scholarship. There are many more opportunities to play in college than there are scholarships. They (players) need to play for the love of the game, not because they want to graduate without college debt. Division II and III football is very good football played at many tremendous colleges and universities. These are options we have seen many of our athletes take and have responded very positively to the education and playing experience."

Though certain areas of the game have changed over the years, Barbieri said there is still no other place he'd rather be than on a football field.

"It's still a lot of fun being at practice with the kids," he said. "It's still great fun to come to work every day."

A look at the four remaining SEC teams:

Adrian

The Maples were 10-2 least season and reached the Division 3 state regional final before losing to Dewitt 31-14. Adrian was 5-0 in the SEC White Division last season. Phil Jacobs is the Maples' head coach.

In the regular season a year ago, the only loss Adrian suffered was against Saline 25-22 in Week 2.

Temperance Bedford

The Kicking Mules are coached by Jeff Wood, who begins his third year on the sideline. Last year, Bedford finished 6-0 in the SEC Red Division losing in the Division 1 state playoffs to Ann Arbor Pioneer.

"We have 21 returning seniors on the team and 16 letter winners," Wood said. "We also have two juniors who earned letters from last season, as well."

At quarterback, the Mules return All-SEC performer Jared Kujawa, while at fullback Bedford has Lee Hurlbarger. Erik Jones returns at slot back and safety for the Mules.

Junior Bryan Smith will play middle linebacker, while junior Tom Ferry will play safety and slot back and Hunter Hunt will play right guard and defensive lineman.

Senior Dan Ostas will play center. "Our junior kicker, Brandon Renius is really good," Wood said. "As a junior he is ranked the No. 2 kicker in high school in Michigan. This kicker is a weapon. He can make it from inside the 35 almost every time."

The Mules will play Carleton Airport to start the season Friday.

Monroe

After a disappointing 3-6 season last year, the Trojans brought in former alumni and longtime Carleton Airport coach Eric Redmond to get the program back on track.

"We have 54 players on varsity this season," Redmond said. "Some new guys and the other players have to learn the new system."

Redmond said the Trojans have some talented skill players. Leading the charge offensively for Monroe will be running backs Travon Hamilton, Sam Quinn, Reggie Allen and A.J. Arnett.

"We are going to mix it up," Redmond said. "We are going to do whatever we have to do to be successful."

Redmond said after 13 seasons at Airport he came back to where he went to school (Monroe High).

He really wants the chance to get the program back on the winning side of things. Monroe will open the season hosting Adrian.

Tecumseh

"The Indians are coming off a 2-7 season, which saw them go 2-3 in the Southeastern Conference's White Division. Jason Mensing is in his fourth year as head coach of the Indians."

Some of the key-players on the team include senior tight end/defensive end Zach Bernschoter (6-7, 255), senior left tackle Jeremy Heistand, senior center Caleb Hughes (6-7, 280), junior quarterback Brad Vannatter and senior offensive tackle/defensive end Travis Hyder (6-6, 235).

Other key returnees are Caleb Armstrong at middle linebacker, sophomore John Terry at free safety, senior Spencer DeLand at cornerback and Gavin Bursteall at tackle.

"We like to run the ball," Mensing said. "There have been some minor changes, but we run a double tight wing."

Mensing said his defense is usually the key to the Indians' success.

"Our goal is to have a great third down and goal line defense," he said. "We want to bend, but don't break defensively."

Tecumseh opens at Monroe Jefferson Friday

Learning about GLSC an eye-opening experience

Russell Strach is the director of the Great Lakes Science Center located in Ann Arbor. The center is a division of the United States Geological Survey (USGS) that we're more familiar with. Their building is somewhat unassuming at first glance, but every now and then I'd see a Boston Whaler boat with the USGS insignia going down the road.

I couldn't stop wondering what they were doing with those boats. It was obviously research, but what were they researching specifically and how many boats do they have? I had never heard of the GLSC and that really made me scratch my head. So much so that I finally made the decision to stop by their facility on Green Road and talk to someone. It was this decision that opened my eyes to the dedicated scientists and researchers who work at this facility. And hence, this is where the story begins - my first meeting with Russell and the adventure that soon followed.

I signed in at the front lobby and was soon introduced to Russell Strach, the center's director.

It didn't take long for Russ to explain to me what they did. The GLSC studies the Great Lakes ecosystem in virtually every aspect. They study fish habitat, water quality, the health of our beaches, and environmental impacts on fish eggs, larvae and adult fish of virtually every species. They study the impact of invasive (fish) and their impact on the native fish populations. They also work to improve the survivability of threatened species of fish throughout the entire Great Lakes.

Earlier I said the USGS building was unassuming but their work is not. These field researchers, fish biologists and dedicated staff professionals are on the front lines of improving, if not saving, the Great Lakes ecosystems due to our neglect and ignorance.

These are strong words you might say, but how many people know that smelt, sea lampreys, salmon and the round goby are not native to the Great Lakes? The list goes on and on, but you get the point.

We've seen the impact that zebra mussels have had on our lakes, but what about the newest and most feared fish - the silver carp, otherwise known as the Asian or "flying" carp. That's a story for another day.

Russ was generous to give me a tour of the facility while explaining their mission statement. It was all very interesting, but nothing prepared me for what came next. Russ explained that his researchers have been laying down artificial reefs in the Detroit River and next year in the St. Clair River in the hopes of attracting lake sturgeon, walleye, lake whitefish, and other native fishes. They came back to one of many experimental reefs and found sturgeon eggs and brought them back to their facility in the hopes of incubating and hatching them. It worked. Russ proudly opened up the lid on a large tank and I saw 16 of the coolest baby sturgeon swimming in a glorified swimming pool. They were a year old and about a foot in length. It was an amazing sight to behold because creating natural spawning habitat for lake sturgeon had never been done before.

The only thing that could make this day better was to get on one of those research boats one day if Russ would allow it. And he said yes to that, as well.

Russ had introduced me to Ed Roseman, a PhD in Fisheries Science and one of the most respected biologists with the USGS. Ed was nice enough to allow me on his vessel the following week. I'd be joined by Greg Kennedy, a fellow fisheries biologist and 25-year veteran employee of the USGS. I then learned that we'd have another scientist from the National Wildlife Federation by the name of Mike Murray on board.

We would be meeting up at the Green Road facility and driving to Detroit to launch the 25-foot Boston Whaler with two 175-horsepower four-strokes ensuring one heck of a fine ride.

This international collaboration included the GLSC, Canada's DFO, US Fish and Wildlife and National Wildlife Federation and Heritage outdoors writer Rick Taylor.

Waiting for us at the dock would be one of the coolest guys I've met in a long time. His name is Jim Boase and he's a scientist with U.S. Fish and Wildlife. Jim has a passionate attitude toward his work and is eager to share his love for the ecosystem he studies. His passionate attitude caught the eye of National Geographic. Jim was filmed by Nat Geo regarding the lake sturgeon and silver carp that aired just three weeks ago.

If that weren't enough, we'd be meeting up with the Department of Fisheries and Oceans (DFO), which is Canada's version of the USGS.

It was wonderful to see four independent organizations working together for a common good, to study and improve the Great Lakes ecosystem.

Our ride to Detroit was barely underway when we heard a significant bang while entering I-94. We had a blow out on the driver's side rear axle and Greg safely and efficiently made his way to the shoulder. We all moved quickly and replaced the blown tire. We moved so quickly that a Nascar pit crew would have been proud. We were soon back on the road and made it to the boat ramp in an hour.

We loaded up the boat and we were throttling up the engines on this former war ship which served in the Iraq War. Let's just say it was a cool boat.

We met up with the Canadians in a matter of minutes and exchanged pleasantries.

I was proud to be a part of this experience and had fun meeting the Canadians who were already trawling the waterways of the upper Detroit River.

Greg, Ed and Jim were very interested in how the Canadians were utilizing their trawling net. More importantly, they wanted to see if the Canadians trawling style may work in their research endeavors. Greg, Ed and Jim each took turns trawling with the Canadians so they could gain first hand experience. It was a success in more ways than one.

Jason Barnucz, a research biologist with the DFO explained to us how they utilized their new Side Scan Sonar while trawling. Nick Mandrak, research scientist with the DFO also elaborated on their trawling successes and failures.

It became very apparent to me that I was surrounded by some of the most knowledgeable scientists in North America. Just Google their names and you'll see what I mean. I felt like the dumbest guy on the boat, because I was the dumbest guy in the boat.

Half the time I didn't know what they were talking about, but I don't need to know. What I do know is that their work is essential to the survival of the Great Lakes ecosystem.

The Canadians were in search of the elusive northern madtom. This fish has only been documented 30 times in recorded history in Canada. In other words, the vast majority of people on this globe has never seen a northern madtom and probably never will. The northern madtom is in the catfish family and is very small in size. I recall asking Nick Mandrak how big they get and I'll never forget his answer. He said they don't know because so few have been seen.

Well, the Canadians had some things going their way because they have caught more than a dozen over the last year or so using their new trawling technique. More importantly, their next trawl had a northern madtom in the net.

I was stunned to be in the presence of such a find. This find is like finding a mummy in Egypt. Yes, it's just a fish, but it might as well be a mummy to one of these scientists. I stood over top the scientists while they took measurements and documented their find. I've included a photo of this fish to capture this historical moment.

Additional trawls were performed and many invasive fish were caught like the round goby. However, we didn't see any more northern madtom that day.

We made it a point to gather together and take a picture of four different agencies working together before the day ended.

We soon called it a day and headed back to the boat launch.

I've been invited to join the USGS on one of their deepwater research vessels in one of the Great Lakes. I, of course, accepted and look forward to part two of this story.

I'd like to thank everyone from the USGS, U.S. Fish and Wildlife, National Wildlife Federation and the Department of Fisheries and Oceans for their tireless work in the Great Lakes. They are truly the unsung heroes in protecting the Great Lakes.

Chelsea Varsity Soccer

Improvement plan

Bulldogs have plenty of talent to help reach the next level in tough SEC

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Newspapers

Chelsea soccer coach Shawn Hayes begins his second season with the Bulldogs and is looking for last year's improvement to continue.

"Right now our goal is to be better than we were the day before," says Hayes, whose Bulldogs went 7-15-2 a year ago in the tough Southeastern Conference. "If we keep heading down that path, who knows where that will take us."

Youth and skill is on their side as they prepare to face rival and always-tough Dexter today.

"We have a very young squad this year that has a lot of potential," Hayes says. "A lot of our young guys are very hungry and are excited about the season and opportunity to play at the varsity level. I believe we have the ability to surprise an opponent here and there this season."

Playing as a team will be a big step toward accomplishing their goals.

"The key to the season will be to continue working hard together and continue developing as individuals and collectively," he said. "We have a lot of potential and a lot of room to grow. If we can keep our focus and continue working in a positive direction then I believe we will have a good season."

The three Ann Arbor schools along with Saline and Dexter are expected to be strong in the SEC this season.

Chelsea's roster of 18 players includes top returnees Charlie McCalla, Patrick Roberts, Bobby Beneteau, Kyle Hoefflinger, Cole Mauti, Vince Kause, Kevin Fournier and Bourke Lodewyk. Top newcomers include Elijah Arons, Noah Crowder, Sam Glaubitz and David Gonzalez.

Hayes says the Bulldogs are strong at each end of the field.

"We have a lot of attacking potential this year with personnel that can really cause problems for our opponent's defense," he said. "Our goal-keeping is also very strong."

The Bulldogs did lose three senior captains off the defense last season.

"We will need to continue to improve our defensive unit throughout the season," Hayes said.

Chelsea soccer captains Bobby Beneteau, Charlie McCalla and Patrick Roberts.

Bulldogs open 2-1

The Chelsea boys' soccer team defeated Garden City 2-1 on Saturday in the first game of the Carlson Invitational. Patrick Roberts and Elijah Arons scored for the Bulldogs. Bourke Lodewyk and Cole Mauti had assists.

Chelsea defeated Grosse Ile 1-0 in the second game as Arons scored the game's only goal off a cross from Charlie McCalla.

The Bulldogs lost the final game of the tournament to Carlson 3-2. Luke Heumann scored off a penalty kick and Arons had his third goal of the tournament with another assist from McCalla.

The Grosse Ile Red Devils won the tournament based on goal differential.

Bulldogs tee off talent

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Newspapers

On the first tee, the Chelsea girls' varsity golf team.

The Bulldogs opened the season last Thursday by hosting the Chelsea Invitational at Reddeman Golf Course and despite some impressive competition, took fifth place with a team score of 380. Lansing Catholic Central won the event with an amazing 339 team score.

The Chelsea 'A' team featured Sarah Schultz (88), Gabby Trivelini (83), Taylor Hansen (99), Judy Kim (100) and Emily Shrobbree (102). The 'B' team fired a 459 and featured Nicole Brown, Elizabeth Stofflet, Anna Myers, Allie Smith and EJ Lin.

Chelsea coach Trisha McKim begins her first year with the Bulldogs with high expectations. She may be new, but she can spot talent and the Chelsea roster appears to be filled with skill, poise and youth.

"Our team goal is to make to the state finals," said McKim, who was a standout golfer at DeWitt High School and a three-time NCAA qualifier at Olivet College. "I am very excited to see where the season takes us."

We are a young team with room for growth, but we have lots of potential to do very well."

McKim has been most impressed with her team's work ethic.

"From what I have seen so far our girls have gone above my expectations and have played extra holes after practice and have played on weekends all without being directed," she said. "They push each other to do more outside of practice, which has been really impressive and will pay off in the long run."

And that hard work is one of the keys to this season.

"Our key to the season is to work hard and put all of our effort and focus into our practices and matches," she said. "We are focusing on making the shot count that's right in front of us and worrying about our score later."

The rookie coach has already been focusing on some areas that need improvement.

"As a team we all need to work on our short game," she said. "We struggle with our long distance putts, but we have been putting extra time on the putting green to get our putting score down."

The roster of 14 includes Trivelini, who was All-State, All-Region and All-Conference a year ago as a freshman. Juniors Hansen and MacKenzie Cole were both All-County selections last year and return this season.

Hockey

Whalers coming to Chelsea

There are certain aspects of every Plymouth Whalers training camp and preseason that stay the same.

The Whalers will report to training camp at Compuware Arena on Sept. 1. After holding scrimmages from 9 to 11 a.m. and 2 to 4 p.m. on Sept. 2-3, Plymouth starts the preseason schedule with their traditional home-and-home series with the Windsor Spitfires.

One change in the home-and-home series with Windsor this season is a change in venue. The Whalers will host Windsor at 7 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 4 at the Arctic Coliseum in Chelsea. Billed as "The Clash at the Coliseum," proceeds of the game will go towards helping the Chelsea Hockey Association.

The game from Chelsea will be broadcast live on 88.1FM WSDP in Plymouth. The game can also be heard on www.plymouthwhalers.com.

Plymouth returns to Windsor's Family Credit Union Centre to take on the Spitfires on Labor Day at 2 p.m.

More often than not, Ontario Hockey League teams use the preseason to help bring their game to new areas, or to assist surrounding communities. The Whalers enjoyed a 25 percent increase in attendance last season and saw a rise in attendance from areas west of Plymouth, including Ann Arbor and the surrounding area.

So a game in Chelsea makes sense.

To their credit, everyone associated with the Arctic Coliseum and the Chelsea Hockey Association have been a pleasure to work with in getting this event off the ground, said Whalers officials.

Plymouth and Windsor fans used to going to an arena and getting a good pre-game or post-game meal won't be disappointed at the Arctic Coliseum. The arena features the Breakaway Restaurant upstairs.

After the game, the Whalers will be participating in an autograph session.

The Whalers open the regular season on Thursday, Sept. 23 in Windsor with the home opener against Barrie on Saturday, Sept. 25 at 7:05 p.m. at Compuware Arena.

Tickets for all events are on sale now by calling 734-453-8400 or visiting the Compuware Arena Box Office.

For information on Whalers ticket packages or to plan a group event for the 2010-11 season, visit plymouthwhalers.com or call 734-453-8400.

Chelsea set to defend SEC title

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Newspapers

The Chelsea tennis program is impressive when you look at the numbers.

The Bulldogs have around 35 players on the roster. They return eight seniors, all with varsity experience. They have won six of the last eight league titles. And they only have one goal: To be as good as they usually are and that means win the league title and compete in the state finals.

All these numbers add up to another optimistic season for the Chelsea boys' tennis team.

"We return eight seniors who all played last year on varsity and all will start out there this year," says coach Rahn Rosentreter. "This will be our strength."

The Bulldogs are the defending Southeastern Conference champions.

"Dexter is usually our only competition and every year the goals are the same, win the league, win regionals and get to state," Rosentreter said.

The seniors are Dylan Schepers at one or two singles; Henry Rutherford at three singles; Zach Schepers and TJ DeRosia at one doubles; Aaron Zynda and Henry Mountain at two doubles; and

CHS Cross Country

Chelsea young but extremely talented in stronger SEC

Pat Clarke returns for his 40th year of coaching cross country in Chelsea by greeting a very young, but talented group of 11 runners.

"We return seven of our top nine girls from last year's team," said Clarke when describing this year's prospects. "We are more mature and experienced this year. Last year's team was sixth in the regional and second in the SEC. We will be better than last year, but how much better is the question."

Girls CC

Leading the group of returnees are senior captains Samantha Newbound and Corinne Carpenter. Both girls were all league honorable mention last year and they are running much better this fall.

Another senior to be heard from is Emily Cottrell, who was the regional champion in the hurdles last spring. She will provide the team an added boost of winning experience.

"In the junior class we have a very talented group of runners who are all competing very well at this time," Clarke said. "All are hard workers who have a great deal of potential. All of them were all-league runners last fall."

In the sophomore class the Bulldogs have a fine group of runners including Kennedy Aldrich, Ella Fritzemeier and Gwen Hubbard. The freshman class includes talented and hard working Madison Nelson and Lauren O'Toole.

Clarke said this year in the SEC White Division (which includes Adrian, Dexter, Lincoln, Ypsilanti and Tecumseh), state-ranked state qualifier Dexter (eighth in the state last year) will be favored to win.

"They return seven of their top eight runners and they have an outstanding group of middle school runners coming up this year," Clarke said. "They are led by all-league

Boys CC

It doesn't take Chelsea boys' cross country coach Eric Swager long to list his goals for the upcoming season. They start and end with just doing what the team did the year before and the year before that and ... you get the picture.

Swager has coached the Bulldogs for the past 15 years and in each year the team has finished with a winning record.

Goal No. 1 will be to make it 16 in a row. The Bulldogs also have qualified for the state meet the past eight seasons in a row, one of the longest runs in the state.

Goal No. 2 will be to make that nine straight.

While it's easy to state the goals, accomplishing them is another matter. But the Bulldogs already know that and have been working hard to continue the team's incredible run over the past decade.

Chelsea will be led by two very solid seniors.

August Pappas enters his senior year as one of the state's best runners. He was an All-State performer his first three years, finishing fourth overall as a junior. His 15:38 time is 1 second off the school record, which he hopes to break early in the season.

"His summer training has been awesome," Swager says. "He will have run over 1,000 miles in the months June-August - a school record."

Bryce Bradley enters his junior year after being All-State last season. Bradley has been the best runner in his class - Division II - for the past two seasons, and hopes to crack the top 10 individually in the state meet this fall.

"He is well over 500 miles thus far, and should have a great season," Swager said. After the top two, Swager is searching to fill out the varsity from the remaining 20 runners on the team, including 13 first-year performers.

"Avery Osentoski is the lone letter-winner from this group from last year, but Sean Owsley, Charlie Miller, Dylan Raye-Leonard, Austin Horn, Austin Gray, Bram positions.

"We are looking forward to competing for an SEC championship. We have a very strong conference and Bedford, Saline, Dexter and Tecumseh will be strong contenders."

The Bulldogs need to improve their serve reception.

"It's something we have been working on and will continue to work on," Cleveland said.

performer Cassi Dishman. Lincoln should be much stronger this year with a strong group of younger runners. Tecumseh should field a strong team as they return five of seven off last year's team. Adrian has a solid team that should give us all some good competition. And newcomer Ypsilanti will field a very solid team that has a strong tradition in cross country.

In other words, this league is tough.

"This year we will go to yet another new regional at Jackson Sharpe Park," Clarke said. "We have gone to five different regionals in the past six years. This regional will include three of the top 20 ranked teams in the state. Since only three teams qualify, the prospects for state meet will be tough. We will need to beat one of those teams to have a chance of getting to states, but we also seem to rise to the challenge. Hopefully, this will be one of those years."

The Chelsea girls are young, but more experienced than they were last year. The girls are working hard and coming together as a team. If they continue to improve and get mentally tougher they should make their presence felt in any meet they run in.

"We are working hard and I really like this team's attitude," Clarke said. "I'm excited by the possibilities this season promises. We must remain focused on our goals and keep the end of the season in mind. Improvement has to be foremost in our thoughts. We have more talent than we did last year and we must work on the team concept of running."

in at least 10 years," Swager said. "It is also a fun group who should improve drastically as they learn how to run. As of now, the state meet qualifying goal looks like a long shot, but we will continue to work toward that outcome."

Swager says Dexter should be the SEC White favorite, with Tecumseh, Adrian, and Chelsea all in contention for the second spot.

"Last year we were second in the SEC, third at regionals and 16th at state," Swager says. "With the losses we suffered from non-returning runners, to duplicate these performances would be amazing."

That's fine with Paulsen. "Yeah, I'm excited about using our passing game more," said Paulsen, a three-sport athlete who also plays basketball and baseball. "We are looking for more balance this year and I think we have the guys to pull it off."

Paulsen has liked what he has seen so far from his teammates.

"The team has been looking really good," he said. "We have a lot of good athletes. We have some good size and speed on the offensive line and I think that will help us this year. We also have experience on defense which is important."

While winning the game in the final seconds with a long pass would be great, Paulsen has a different kind of personal goal in mind. He's not necessarily concerned about winning the game, but more about not losing the game — which a quarterback can do quite easily.

"I don't want to make the big mistake that costs us a game," he says. "We don't want to turn the ball over and that includes throwing interceptions."

In other words, Chelsea football wins as a team. The quarterback is part of that so play your game, limit mistakes and the hard work, coaching and skill will dictate the winner.

"We do need to be more efficient with our completion percentage than we were last year," Bush says. "That's one area we can improve on that will make a big difference."

Bush not only has a senior back at quarterback this season but he has two seniors capable of running the offense.

"With Brian and Tyler Frank we have two good senior quarterbacks who know the system and have played a lot," Bush says. "We are a two-platoon team so Tyler will start on defense. But for depth we have some guys learn positions on both sides of the ball. I have great confidence in both Brian and Tyler at quarterback."

Of course he does...they're both seniors.

Restaurants' baking skills to be put to the test

A wide variety of Ann Arbor-area food establishments will present an original dessert creation, prepared with Girl Scout cookies, and will vie for honors at the Baker's Dozen Cookie Dessert Bake-Off Sept. 14 at Washtenaw Community College.

Participants will include Angel Food Catering, Carson's American Bistro, Ironwood Grille, Northpoint Seafood and Steakhouse, Palio, Rocky Mountain Chocolate Factory and University Catering.

Local celebrity judges will bestow two awards, the Judges' Choice and Most Creative Presentation awards. Attendees also will sample and judge each dessert, voting for the People's Choice Award. Celebrity judges that have been recruited so far are Faye Askew-King, SOS Community Services; Beth Fitzsimmons, president of the Ann Arbor Downtown Rotary Club; Ingrid Sheldon, former mayor of Ann Arbor; Ann Matteson, retired 15th District Court judge and president of Ann Arbor Kiwanis Club; and Peg Talburt, James A. and Faith Knight Foundation.

Linda Yohn of WEMU Radio will emcee the evening's event. Attendees will also have a chance to bid on a silent auction, filled with fine jewelry, restaurant gift certificates, family fun outings and more.

In addition to the silent auction, themed gift baskets will be raffled, and each of the centerpiece desserts will be auctioned off.

All proceeds from the event will support Girl Scouts Heart of Michigan outreach programs to low-income and at-risk girls in Washtenaw and Livingston Counties.

Girl Scouts Heart of Michigan works to bring the benefits of Girl Scouting to these girls by establishing troops at homeless shelters, schools with high levels of students receiving free and reduced-rate lunches, community centers in low-income neighborhoods and juvenile hall.

"We are very excited about this opportunity to raise much-needed funds for Girl Scouts in our outreach programs," said Daphne Adams, volunteer chair of the Baker's Dozen Girl Scout Cookie Bakeoff, in a news release.

"We appreciate all of the sponsors, chefs and judges who are partnering with us in this important event."

The event will be held in the Morris Lawrence Building on the campus of Washtenaw Community College, 4800 E. Huron River Drive, in Ypsilanti.

girlscoutbakeoff.com or stop in at the Ann Arbor Regional Center of Girl Scouts Heart of Michigan at 1900 Manchester Road, Ann Arbor.

Barefoot Productions puts on inaugural show

Barefoot Productions recently announced the inaugural show for its After Hours Theatre. "Dog Sees God: Confessions of a Teenage Blockhead" by Bert V. Royal, at 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Co-directed by Nathan Corliss and Barefoot's Artistic Director, Craig A. Hane, this "unauthorized parody" imagines the beloved Peanuts gang 10 years later as dysfunctional high school seniors, dealing with such topics as drugs, acceptance, sex, alcohol, pyromania and violence.

The philosopher has become a drug addict, the sporty girl sexually popular, the filthy child a germaphobe (but no less filthy), the musician an outcast, and man's best friend has passed away.

Barefoot's After Hours Theatre will feature a selection of shorter plays that lend themselves to slightly more risqué subject matter than the main stage productions.

Shows will vary throughout the season but may include such plays as "Midnight Catechism," "Miss Margarita's Way" and "My First Time," among others.

"The concept behind our 'After Hours' theater is that there are some fantastic plays out there, but they may not be entirely suitable for all audiences," said Hane in a news release.

"Being true to our mission - bringing unique, quality productions to the stage - it was important that we crafted a venue that would allow flexibility to perform some out-of-the-box shows. 'Dog Sees God: Confessions of a Teenage Blockhead' is a great opener because, while it contains adult humor and language, it's a well-constructed play that's a lot of fun."

"Dog Sees God: Confessions of a Teenage Blockhead" opens with a once familiar "CB," mourning the death of his adored dog. Spurred by the tragedy, CB questions if life after death exists and tries to seek answers as well as consolation from his childhood friends.

However, each friend is battling his or her own demons and struggling to find their way in what has become a very real and cruel world.

Patrons are cautioned that the production contains offensive language and adult themes that may not be appropriate for those under 18.

Viewer discretion is advised. "I remember sitting on my Pop's knees and watching the Peanuts' broadcasts; I grew up with them," Hane said.

"It's funny how the Peanuts gang has remained 8 years old after all these decades while I'm the one with the gray hair."

"Our cast in this production ranges in age from 18 to 21, and we cast this age-appropriately to accurately represent the script. It also illustrates how Barefoot approaches its casting - with realism.

Working with a younger cast and teaming with Nathan also reinforces Barefoot's commitment to theatre education."

In directing "Dog Sees God," Hane concentrated on ensuring the show's characters were portrayed true to the traits and nuances recognizable to original fans, while Corliss focused on the script's current storyline and how today's characters grapple with daily teenage angst.

Corliss also portrays one of the characters in the production in addition to co-directing with Hane in his directorial debut. Corliss was most recently seen onstage at Barefoot in its winter production, "Rope."

"I have a real affinity for Dog Sees God," said Corliss.

"From the moment I read the script, I understood as both an actor and as a co-director, how words on paper can truly create a vision that inspires a director throughout the process."

"The intertwining aspects of the intelligent script as well as the skilled and committed cast have given me continuous inspiration and motivation. I've learned so much throughout this experience, and I'm proud to help Barefoot pursue this new theater genre."

The cast includes Nathan Corliss, Matthew DeLisle, Christine Doulet, Stephanie Lee, Ethan McIntyre, Pamela Satchwell, Elizabeth Whitcomb and Matthew Williams. The cast heralds from Livonia with the exception of Lee, who resides in Westland.

The 75-minute "Dog Sees God" is performed without an intermission.

All performances are held in the Walker-Buzenberg Building, 240 N. Main St., in Plymouth.

Tickets are $10. For tickets or more information, visit www.justgobarefoot.com or call 560-1493.

Hope's Garden benefit to celebrate local food, drinks

The sixth annual Hope's Harvest Benefit Dinner will take place from 3 to 6 p.m. Sept. 19 at the Growing Hope Center, 922 W. Michigan Ave., in Ypsilanti.

Guests are invited to spend an afternoon in the gardens as Growing Hope celebrates local food sources by serving dishes prepared by area chefs, with locally produced foods, as well as microbrews and wines from Black Star Farms, L. Mawby and Arbor Brewing Co.

The entertainment will include acoustic live music and a large silent auction. This year, an open bar will be available on site for beer and wine.

Ticket are $75 per guest or $65 for the first 100 tickets sold. All proceeds generated through Hope's Harvest benefit the core programming of Growing Hope, including youth and family-based garden programs, the Downtown Ypsilanti Farmers Market and Growing Hope's Community and School Garden Development Institute.

Sponsorship information and tickets are available by calling 786-8401 or online at www.growinghope.net.

HomeGrown Festival promotes food security

The HomeGrown Festival will celebrate local food, farms and businesses as members of the local food movement gather under one roof from 6 to 11 p.m. Sept. 11.

Organizers say the goal of the event is movement toward community food security. The HomeGrown Festival is a grassroots event, completely organized and staffed by volunteers.

Admission to the festival is free. Food and drink will be available for purchase.

Held under the historic Ann Arbor Farmers Market pavilion, the HomeGrown Festival is designed to showcase the food, beer and wine of Michigan.

A dozen local chefs will be preparing affordable "small plate" portions of food from the season's harvest, priced at $1 to $6, to go with tastings of more than two dozen libations from Michigan beer, wine, mead and hard-cider makers.

Project Grow Community Gardens will bring more than 50 varieties of heirloom tomatoes to taste - from Snow White to Aunt Ruby's German Green to Black Zebra - grown by community gardeners.

The event also will include a line-up of local bands, chef demos, artisan vendors, a silent auction, dancing, and educational and kids' activities.

The HomeGrown Festival highlights local food artisans and businesses, especially those with a commitment to sustainability.

By choosing sustainable materials, and by composting, and re-using as much of the festival infrastructure as possible, festival organizers say they intend to make this event as close to zero waste as possible.

The Washtenaw Biking and Walking Coalition will be offering their "bike valet" parking and security service to make it easy to arrive by non-motorized transport.

HomeGrown Festival sponsorship is open only to those businesses and nonprofit organizations meeting strict criteria for commitment to the local economy.

Last year's festival drew more than 5,000 people to the Ann Arbor Farmers Market. The crowd at the first HomeGrown Festival in September of 2008 was estimated at 1,000 people - in the pouring rain. The Ann Arbor Farmers Market is located at 315 Detroit St. in Ann Arbor. For more information, visit <http://homegrownfestival.org>.

OTHER VOICES

'Doing Dexter' a noble effort, falls flat

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Newspapers

If there's one thing I've learned over the course of my tenure as a reporter for Dexter and Chelsea, it's the importance of shopping local.

That's why I'm always supportive of local initiatives like Think Dexter First, which will be getting some ink in the coming months, and the Dexter Area Chamber of Commerce's "Doing Dexter" initiative.

The latter is being headed up by Mary Ann Bell Falzon and can be monitored by followers on Twitter, which might have been a good or bad thing in this case.

I've heard from several people that the Twitter feed leaves a lot to be desired, and I unfortunately have to agree.

The Doing Dexter project began on Aug. 1 and will end after 60 days, at the end of which I'm assuming there will be a report summarizing all of Falzon's purchases in her attempt to "do Dexter."

Some of the complaints that I initially received regarded the general tone of the tweets, as well as mentions of shoe shopping in Ann Arbor and a link to a Detroit News article about "How to be a good quitter" and other tweets about the Red Wings' stadium and Mike Ilitch potentially purchasing the Detroit Pistons and moving them to D-town - basically stuff that has nothing to do with Dexter.

Once the project began, Falzon started off with a morning cup of coffee at Corner Cup Café and mentioned Terry B's - and the fact that they provide the café's sandwich meat, as an example of two local businesses cooperating.

From there it's nearly a month into the project and there's been mention of renting a movie in Dexter, drinking at the Dexter Pub (several times) and Terry B's and ... that seems to be it.

Assuming there's a report due at the end of this noble experiment, I'm having flashbacks of late night cramming sessions before major exams are scheduled.

This is a great idea and I applaud Falzon for taking it on, but so far the execution is lacking.

It's also disappointing to see so many mentions of Ann Arbor, expressions of sentiment for Novi and Troy, and even a tweet about being homesick for Florida.

This is a wonderful idea that could easily be turned around quickly with a very valuable result.

I'd like to hear more from Mrs. Falzon about relationships between local businesses like Corner Cup and Terry B's, more about the wine shop, shoe and clothing store and toy store companies that she tweeted about meeting with on Aug. 9, and more about the new members that she has signed on as chamber members.

I would like to hear less about other places and time spent at the pool and sunbaths and random news items.

Falzon lives in Dexter. I'd like to hear about where she set up her mortgage, where she's buying school supplies, where she fills up her gas tank, and things of that nature.

Local shopping supports local businesses, which in turn support local taxes and pay for road projects, schools, parks and other things that make Dexter great.

Hopefully rather than getting angry about this column and the complaints within the community, this "Doing Dexter" effort kicks into high gear.

I also hope that I read the critics correctly - everyone who has contacted me thinks this is a great idea, too. Everyone is excited by the concept of an individual making a dedicated effort to chronicle shopping and living in Dexter.

Consider this an open invitation to Mrs. Falzon to talk to me after day 60 for an in-depth story or series of stories on her experiences - a noble experiment that still has a shot at being something special.

Former Scio resident wins contest

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Newspapers

Former Scio Township native Mike Dagher was the recipient of the Solo Cup Company 2010 photo contest this summer.

Dagher, a resident of Lansing, entered an example of his photography work for the contest earlier in the summer. "I am so grateful to Solo Cup Company for choosing me as the 2010 photo contest grand prize winner," he said.

Dagher is an incoming senior at Michigan State University.

"My family was already a fan of Solo products, but now we are the world's biggest fans," he said. "I plan on using the prize winnings for this year's school tuition, and I can't thank Solo enough for having this great competition."

The photo that Dagher submitted is of his niece and nephew at a family function hamming it up in a mock demonstration of "the original cell phone" using plastic cups.

"My older sister told me about this contest, and happened to have some Solo cups she had planned on using for her son's upcoming birthday party," he said.

Dagher's grand prize winnings amount to $5,000. He was one of nearly 900 entrants in the nationwide contest.

Two other individuals received $1,000 prizes each as runners-up, and throughout the eight-week contest winners received daily or weekly prizes.

Organizers call 'Stuff the Bus' a success

Five-day collection gathered many supplies for students

By Art Aisner
Special Writer

Organizers of this year's "Stuff the Bus" campaign to benefit local students in need of new school supplies said that despite a down Michigan economy, Washtenaw County residents made last week the most successful in the program's short history.

Started three years ago by a partnership between Washtenaw County government and the United Way, the five-day community collection tries to meet the growing demand for new school supplies for families that couldn't otherwise afford them as the fall approaches.

The organizations issued the challenge to stuff a school bus with as many supplies and the community responded.

Volunteers collected more materials between Aug. 16 and 20 than in prior years, and filled every seat on the standard-sized school bus parked at the Staples parking lot just south of the Packard and Carpenter roads intersection in Pittsfield Township. An official tally of donated materials was not available at press time.

"It's amazing to see that so much more was donated than last year given everything that's happening with the economy," said Joanna Bidlack, a management analyst with Washtenaw County administration, as she looked over donation logs under a tent pitched next to the bus.

"But it shows that Washtenaw County residents and citizens understand the need is great, perhaps greater than ever, and they want to help out."

The bus, provided by the Ypsilanti Public Schools, was stacked with crayon packages, markers, back-packs, glue sticks, calculators and many other items that will come in handy for students throughout the year, organizers said. The materials will specifically benefit students from kindergarten through the fifth grade in the Lincoln Consolidated, Manchester, Milan and Ypsilanti public school districts.

The donated items will be divided among the participating districts based on the level of need indicated by individual schools.

county had the option to participate, organizers said.

Boxes of crayons, markers, erasers and other schoolroom essentials filled the seating area within the administrative wing of the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department hours before the collection ended last Friday. The materials were donated by community groups or department personnel who also volunteered their time.

"We really put a lot of effort into this program because we think it's a pretty big deal for these children," said Kathy Wyatt, an administrative specialist with the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department. Visit www.washtenaw.org for more information about the program.

Chelsea Livery should be preserved

Historic Chelsea must now deal with a damaging blow, as the Downtown Development Authority voted Aug. 19 to reject the revised request for proposal from Preservation Chelsea/Chelsea Connection.

Another vote was carried to demolish the 1906 Chelsea livery, feed and 10 cent barn and the 1948 art moderne Daniel's car showroom.

Going along with an April 2009 visioning session where just 40 to 50 people attended in the train depot, the "Mack building" may be preserved for rehabilitation.

The two rejected buildings are known to be a key part of transportation and industrial history within the Jackson Street Corridor. They are a vital piece to our heritage and the story that shape Chelsea's personality, not parking lots.

Chelsea's reputation as a unique town to appreciate, visit and shop could survive if the original historic downtown area is actively preserved. This year downtown Chelsea has a good chance to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places. With Thursday's DDA vote, two of the submitted historic assets are now scheduled to be demolished to make room for parking spaces and minimal landscaping.

To have these historical buildings brushed aside and destroyed is a big mistake in my opinion. I would not like to be the decent who conducts a walking tour who must say, "there used to be a horse livery where you see parked cars; an art moderne car showroom was once attached to the front of this 1900 industrial building."

I believe downtown Chelsea has a chance of competing in part with "south town" business and attracting business and shoppers from east and west of Chelsea by showcasing our downtown history. Downtown is "eye candy." It has architectural beauty, walkability and some consumer business being conducted in historic structures.

"South town" relies on a sea of easy parking, and cookie cutter modern stores with no outside or inside visual appeal. A similar shopping experience can be found in any mall in Ann Arbor or Jackson. With the new Chelsea shuttle system in place, the best of both worlds could make the whole city a viable shopping or entertainment destination, as long as we keep the historical edge downtown.

Sure we have the Purple Rose Theater, Common Grill, a beautiful library and some visual arts developing like the sculpture walk; and Chelsea's garden clubs are filling the sidewalks with flowering planters creating neatness, color and life. But this is not enough.

The ambience and attraction may soon erode beyond return when the old buildings one by one disappear, or are completely remodeled beyond recognition of their original use. This has happened in countless villages across America and it could happen to us.

Chelsea DDA out of control

I love my beautiful historic town of Chelsea, but the out of control Downtown Development Authority I can do without. I have been told that when the DDA was first formed, one of its main "visions" was to remove the old non-historic fascia from the fronts of buildings on Main Street to reveal the beautiful historic buildings underneath. By doing this they hoped to transform Main Street into a charming historic downtown ... and it worked. People love to stroll downtown after going to the Purple Rose, Common Grill or other establishments. But somewhere along the way the DDA has lost that great vision. I am speaking of their narrow-minded decision last week to tear down the very historic livery and Daniels Showroom buildings. At their public "visioning session" more than a year ago, they presented several possible scenarios for the area where these buildings now stand. Unfortunately, during this meeting they did not listen to the "public" who clearly wanted to save all the buildings.

They never gave us a scenario to vote on that included saving all the buildings, so now they say "this is what the public voted on ... to only save the Mack building." What a scam!

Before the meeting ever started they had decided what they wanted to do and then presented only that for us to vote on. How is that true public input? Since then over 700 signatures have been collected from the "public" saying that they want all the buildings saved. And what is the DDA (now known by some as the Downtown Demolition Authority) doing instead? They are putting in parking lots. Do you think that people come to Chelsea to visit parking lots? They come to visit a beautiful historic town.

The DDA's own consultant on this project told me during their meeting that two parking studies have been done and they showed that the parking problem during normal business days is from the "business owners" parking in the visitors spots. In my eyes it is not acceptable to tear down historic buildings that are nationally significant so that the business owners can park at their front door.

I will not stop fighting until the DDA listens to what the public truly wants. The DDA is using city tax dollars to tear down historic buildings in Chelsea and I for one will not stand still and watch it happen. I will be holding the DDA accountable for their shortsighted decisions that leave the public's desires out of their decision making.

Chelsea does not need more parking lots

I usually try to stay out of politics, but feel I need to make an exception due to the disappointment I feel for our city government. I've been part of a group working for the last year to try to save the buildings commonly known as the Longworth Complex.

I have been fortunate to have met and work with many Chelsea residents in researching adaptive reuse solutions for this site. Before it was the "Longworth Complex," it served the Chelsea community in many ways over the last 100 years.

I won't go into the details of the history — it is available on a blog at <http://thechelseaconnection.blogspot.com> for anyone to review.

The short version is this is that these buildings are part of the fabric of this city and the point from which our city grew. Part of what I learned over the last year is that these buildings and their location near the depot and Chelsea's first hotel make them unique — in the state and perhaps in the country. We have a jewel right under our noses that could do much to further our image as a great city with historic tourism as a source of pride and income for the city.

I have sat around a table with architects, environmental experts, engineers, businessmen, concerned citizens and historians who have volunteered their time and money to work toward a partnership with the DDA that would result in saving the buildings, adaptively reusing the structures, capitalizing on their historical value, obtaining tax credits and seeking grant funding to help finance the restoration.

It sounds good, right? On Aug. 19, the DDA voted to reject the group's proposal and immediately voted to demolish the livery and showroom portion of the complex. They do not have any concrete plan for the site yet. Their plan is to demolish the 100-year-old livery and leave a gravel lot with a fence around it while they "further study it" and "see what's behind it."

I'm a fourth generation resident of Chelsea. My great-grandparents, grandparents and parents are all woven into the history of this place. The buildings that have survived 100 years should not be demolished so casually in order to decide what to do with the property.

Once the buildings are gone, there is no going back. If nothing further is done to save them, these buildings will probably be gone within six weeks.

People have argued that the buildings are ugly and an eyesore. These buildings have been neglected and need to be repaired and restored to realize their beauty. I heard that there were those that thought the clock tower complex could never be anything but an old factory. I'm forever grateful to Ambassador Weiser for having another vision.

Another comment at the meeting on Aug. 19 was that the DDA is not a "bottomless checkbook." I completely agree. After all, it's our (taxpayers) money. Why then, did the DDA decline to partner with interested citizens who wouldn't need them to write a check?

Why are we relentlessly moving forward to pay to demolish a building that is a historic structure in a unique historical area? In addition, why are we spending money to market our city as a destination and at the same time removing yet another historic structure that defines the origins of our city and has been deemed worth saving and reusable?

Remember that this is also considered a contaminated site. The contamination consists of heavy metals that can be best dealt with by sealing the building and reusing it. Removal of the building will require more extensive remedial actions that, I am sure, will cost more money.

The plan to demolish and leave a gravel lot with a fence will only exacerbate the contamination and provide an opportunity for it to be released into the ground, water, and air. Wouldn't that money be better spent to repair the roof of all three structures and allow the search for funding to go forward?

I appeal to all people out there who have an interest in preserving the Chelsea that we love. Times have changed and we're doing our best to adapt, but we should never lose sight of our history. Destruction of these buildings is unnecessary and not the most economical solution.

Please help show your support to protect the jewels we currently have before they disappear and adaptively reuse these buildings. Let your elected officials and the representatives of the DDA know you would like to see these buildings stay. Remember, the vote has been cast to demolish — we don't have much time — the bulldozers are ready to roll. This demolition will be a huge loss to the town and its history.

Chelsea DDA vote a bad call

In my opinion, the Downtown Development Authority made two decisions on Aug. 19 that are not in the best interest of the long-term development of downtown Chelsea. Both decisions relate to the Longworth Complex on the corner of Main and Jackson streets. First, the proposal put forward by the Chelsea Connection group was rejected. Second, the decision was made to demolish the Daniels' showroom and the livery.

I think the demolition decision was unconscionable on many levels and an example of short-term thinking. In the last year, much information of the historic importance of the livery both statewide and nationally has been provided to the DDA. Also, further analysis offered by Chelsea citizens with expertise in the field of treating the contamination on the property was dismissed. According to our citizen experts, Larry Bean and Rob MacLeod, demolition is more costly and disturbing the ground below is unwise.

The DDA cites the Daniels addition to be a traffic hazard and must be demolished. This is an opinion, not a fact. No traffic studies have been done yet, and if true, there is more than one way to solve a traffic problem. The Daniels addition is on Main Street and in line with the front of the Sylvan Building and the clock tower across the tracks.

The railroad tracks are already a psychological barrier for shoppers, and the demolition of the Daniels addition will exacerbate that barrier and further impair foot traffic and commerce. Business owners in the Sylvan Building and clock tower on Main Street should be concerned about the loss of putting a potential draw into the Daniels addition.

To deny the future development of these downtown buildings flies in the face of the mission of the DDA. On the surface, the argument for demolition is one of fiscal responsibility. However, the approximately 17 parking spaces and benches that are put in place after the demolition of these two structures will be very expensive indeed. Increasing parking spaces is not only unnecessary, they do not create tax revenue. As one businessman observed, "We block off a major parking lot during the festival, and people still come. They park on the streets and walk."

But, the deeper question to me is: Why was the DDA unwilling to collaborate with Chelsea citizens to eventually develop the entire property?

Hundreds of citizens' hours were devoted willingly to advance the notion of creative solutions to assist with producing a more vibrant downtown by fully developing the Longworth Complex. Apparently, human capital was not factored into the financial equation.

I find it ironic that on the eve of Chelsea's nomination for the National Register of Historic Places, the DDA decided to demolish two buildings that are considered historically significant. In my view, the demolitions will be a significant loss to Chelsea's future, unfortunate, and certainly irreversible.

Schauer better choice for voters

What can Tim Walberg be thinking? He invited U.S. House Republican leader John Boehner, an advocate of privatizing Social Security and raising the Social Security retirement age to 70 for those who will not retire for another 20 years, to anchor his fundraiser in Jackson. The old saying, "you know them by the company they keep," applies here.

Walberg would like most of the voters in the 7th district to think he supports the Social Security system, which six out of 10 seniors rely on for more than half their income and which benefits over 6 million children. But, his plan would cut benefits for middle class seniors and divert trillions of dollars from the Social Security Trust Fund into private accounts on Wall Street — four out of every $10 contributed.

Walberg is brought to you by the "please don't tax the rich" Club for Growth and supported by the artificial turf group, Americans for Prosperity, whose main contributor has won awards for outsourcing jobs.

Our current 7th district representative, Congressman Mark Schauer, understands how important Social Security is and how it operates. Right now the trust fund has significant reserves and can pay full benefits until 2037. It pays its own way through workers contributions to the trust fund. Schauer will fight to preserve and strengthen Social Security.

SRSly cinema extended

SRSly Cinema is making an encore appearance. Due to an earlier rain out in July, SRSly Cinema will extend beyond the Sounds and Sights season, and show the film "Field of Dreams" on Sept. 2.

The outdoor film will start at dusk and will be shown at the clock tower complex in downtown Chelsea. Lawn seating will be available and refreshments including fresh made popcorn will be for sale from the SRSly Youth Steering Committee.

"We were really disappointed that we didn't get to show this great movie," said project manager Janice Ortring.

Ortring and her husband, Todd, have again volunteered their time and services to keep the project going.

"We also wanted to honor our commitment to our sponsors and decided since school has not started, why not add one more night?" SRSly Cinema is also in the process of scheduling a local band to perform in the gazebo before the movie, starting at 8 p.m.

SRSly Cinema has experienced a successful second season this summer and is now working on offering movie parties at the Washington Street Education Center starting this fall. Chelsea Lanes is also planning to continue their movies series on Saturday nights sometime in the fall.

"We have had great crowds all summer," Ortring said. "This has become the popular meeting spot for kids during the summer and our sponsors have been so supportive once again. We've also had great support from the SRSly Youth Steering committee and their parents, along with the Chelsea High School Equestrian team — they have run the concessions this year."

SRSly (text language for SERIOUSLY) is a community coalition of youth, parents, neighbors, coaches, teachers, librarians, doctors, nurses, police officers, pastors, business owners, and anyone else who wants to prevent destructive behavior in Chelsea youth. SRSly operates with support from Chelsea Community Hospital and the Coghlan Family Foundation. The mission of SRSly is to promote the health and well being of Chelsea youth.

Teen to stand trial for police standoff in Sylvan Twp.

Boy threatens sister, takes self, mom hostage

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Newspapers

The Michigan State Police recently released more details regarding a standoff that occurred between troopers and a teenage boy in Sylvan Township on Aug. 12.

The incident occurred at approximately 1 a.m.

and began escalating just before law enforcement officials were dispatched to the scene at a Garvey Street family residence.

Three state troopers, a Washtenaw County Sheriff's sergeant, a Chelsea Police officer and a hostage negotiator with the Michigan State Police Emergency Services division arrived on the scene.

The 15-year-old boy responsible for initiating the incident is currently being held in the Washtenaw County juvenile detention facility pending a court appointment next week.

The boy allegedly got into a fight with his 18-year-old sister and threatened her with a 12-gauge shotgun, after which he armed himself with a .22 caliber handgun and hid inside a closet, according to Trooper Joshua Reeber.

"After he hid inside the closet we tried communicating with him using a PA system, but that didn't work," Reeber said.

The boy didn't respond to the PA system. At one point he was asked to signal whether he and his mother were okay. His mother was inside the house with him during much of the standoff due to her physical state, according to Reeber.

The suspect's mother had recently undergone brain surgery and was on medication, Reeber said.

The boy's mother initially tried to calm him down and convince him to turn the weapon over to her, but her plea was unsuccessful, he said. Throughout the incident the boy threatened suicide, but he never threatened the officers or his mother.

"When we asked him to signal with the lights that everything was okay he just ended up shutting off all of the lights in the house," Reeber said.

Before deploying tear gas into the house to bring the siege to an end, officers tossed in a flash bang grenade and ended up inadvertently rousing the suspect's mother from her bed.

"She came to the door and said she was too weak to leave, so we placed her onto a gurney and transported her to the University of Michigan Hospital for simple observation because she was supposed to be taking medication on a regular schedule," Reeber said.

No one was injured over the course of the 13 hour standoff.

First Steps Washtenaw/Parents As Teachers

Parents as Teachers is an international early childhood parent education and family support program serving families throughout pregnancy until their child enters kindergarten, usually age 5.

The program is designed to enhance child development and school achievement through parent education accessible to all families.

It is a universal access model.

Recognizing that all families can benefit from support, Parents as Teachers families come in all configurations, from all socio-economic levels, and from rural, urban and suburban communities.

The program is adaptable to fit community needs.

It is a national model, but a local program. Family participation is voluntary.

The Parents as Teachers National Center, Inc. develops curricula, trains early childhood professionals, and certifies parent educators to work with parents to provide them with parenting support and information on their developing child.

Program Goals

- Empower parents to give their children the best possible start in life.
- Provide children a solid foundation for school and life success.
- Increase parent knowledge of child development and appropriate ways to stimulate their children's intellectual, language, social, and physical development.

• Increase parent feelings of competence and confidence.

• Enhance parent-child interaction and strengthen family relationships.

- Prevent child abuse and neglect.
- Provide for early detection of developmental problems.

• Develop strong partnerships between parents and schools.

Join First Steps Washtenaw/Parents as Teachers and learn about neuroscience and how your baby's mind develops. Come and see the 300 square feet of indoor play space.

The cost is $75 for an eight-week quarter with scholarships available.

Prenatal Kindergarten Personal 1:1 visits as needed.

Free milestone assessments yearly.

Playgroups available three times a week facilitated by a parent educator, 10 to 11 a.m. Tuesday through Thursday.

Welcome to Dexter Community Schools

By Mary Marshall

I am honored to welcome you to Dexter Community Schools, where our vision is to champion learning -- develop, educate, and inspire all students.

We are a district that is physically and culturally intertwined within the Village of Dexter and, together with our community, are proud to provide a wide array of educational and extra-curricular offerings to support a well-rounded educational opportunity for all children.

Our staff, with the support of parents and countless volunteers, work to provide a personalized learning experience that meets each child's needs.

From the challenging and fun instructional experiences in our elementary schools, to a high school experience designed to meet and exceed the needs of our students as they pursue a broad range of post-secondary experiences, you will quickly recognize the Dexter difference - a family friendly, student-centered experience focused on success

Mary Marshall

Our students and staff have been widely recognized for their achievements, both academic and personal, and our graduates attend universities, community colleges, trade schools, the military or workplace with a strong sense of community and an understanding of the benefits of hard work and attention to their education.

The pride of being a Dreadnaught lingers long after graduation with many of our graduates returning to the community to raise their own children.

As a result of the successful passage of a bond in 2007, you will find our buildings "under construction" this summer with project completion dates expected just before the start of the school year as we upgrade technology, improve our energy efficiency, and make other improvements.

However, behind the scenes we are busily preparing for another successful school year.

We hope that whether you are a member of the community whose children are grown, considering Dexter as a place to live, or a visiting our amazing community, you will join us for a play, a concert, an athletic event, or any number of demonstrations of student success that occur throughout the year.

Please contact any of our building principals or I to learn more about how you can be part of the Dexter difference!

It would be our privilege to share more about our mission, vision, strategic plan, and how they all center on student success.

Go Dreadnaughts!

Introduction

Educational excellence in a caring community

The Manchester Schools have a proud history of academic excellence and community support.

In the classroom, in the auditorium and on the athletic field, our students excel both individually and collectively.

Improving student learning is our number one priority.

From a full-time, all-day every-day kindergarten program to advanced placement courses which provide high school students the opportunity to earn college credit, we are committed to meeting the needs of all students.

At the elementary level, our emphasis continues to be on strengthening early literacy development.

explore areas of emerging interests.

And, at the high school, all students receive instruction that insures that they successfully meet the standards of the Michigan Merit Curriculum and are graduate college or career ready.

The Manchester community has supported its schools with a series of bond issues, the most recent of which was passed in February 2009.

As a result, renovations including the relocation of the Klager School office and technology wiring upgrades across the district were completed last summer.

Four new buses have also been purchased over the past sixteen months. This summer improvements to our technology networks will be completed and new hardware purchased.

The Manchester community is justifiably proud of our school facilities. Our schools are one of the largest employers in the area and they serve as the focal point for many major community functions.

Between the teaching staff, administrators, paraprofessionals, secretaries, technology facilitators, food service workers, custodians, building and grounds staff, community education, pre-school, early-childhood services and transportation department, nearly 200 individuals work directly or indirectly for the schools.

Is this in the best interest of students?

Will this decision lead to improved student learning? They are the questions that guide us as we continue to improve our service to students and the community.

The Manchester community has a lot of reasons to be proud of its students, its schools, and all those who work within them. Our goal each day is to create ever more reasons for such pride.

Services available include: personal visits, parent/child playgroups, periodic parent group meetings, developmental screenings to assess your child's overall development and a resource network that can link your family to other community services. Tuition for this program is based on a sliding scale fee. For further information visit www.parentsasteachers.org or contact Beckie Brewis, 428-9711 x1343.

Welcome to the Milan Area School District. Consolidated in 1954, Milan offers a wide variety of educational and extracurricular experiences for its students.

The district provides students with a solid foundation in math, science, social studies, and English languages arts. In addition, students can choose courses in art, band, choir, foreign language, physical education, health education, computers, and technology.

The school district also provides opportunities for students through course offerings from the South and West Washtenaw Consortium, Washtenaw Community College, Eastern Michigan University, and the Early College Alliance.

We continue to expand our programs in each grade level and make every effort to provide our students with a well-rounded educational experience.

The AdvanEd Association of High Schools and Colleges accredits all four of the Milan schools, and we are extremely proud that we meet their high standards.

We are excited about the 2010-2011 school year. Every year, our educational programs get stronger and stronger thanks to the hard work of our staff. Many of our teachers spend time during the summer taking graduate level courses, attending conferences, participating in workshops, and preparing for the year to come. They are dedicated employees who strive to make sure that they have the skills necessary to provide excellent instruction in the classroom.

The curriculum in the district has been completely reviewed and aligned with the Michigan Grade Level Content Expectations and national benchmarks and standards. We have a continuous process of curriculum review that ensures that our students receive the best education possible. This includes preparing them for not only state assessments, but life after graduation from Milan Area Schools.

The technology that we have for the staff and students to use during the course of the day is second to few in the state. The integration of this technology helps make our educational program one of the best around.

The strengths of the district are truly the people who work here, the people who live in the community, and the students who attend our schools. Every employee puts forth his or her best effort to help make certain that our students receive the best education possible. We have a highly qualified teaching staff that goes above and beyond the basic requirements of their job for the benefit of our students. We are proud of them and the work that they do for the students in the district.

The Milan Area School District is an outstanding place to live, learn, and work.

Introduction

The Saline School District has eight schools with an enrollment of approximately 5,450 students.

The District covers nearly 100 miles, including sections of Bridgewater, Freedom, Lodi, Pittsfield, and York townships.

The Saline School District believes in equipping all students with the knowledge, technological proficiency and personal skills necessary to succeed in an increasingly complex society with the ultimate goal of instilling a desire for life-long learning.

Among the great programs offered at Saline Area Schools are an outstanding band, orchestra, and vocal music program; comprehensive athletic program, including state-of-the-art facilities; dual-enrollment with the University of Michigan, Eastern Michigan University, Washtenaw Community College; and Michigan Virtual High School learning opportunities.

Each school offers a common core curriculum based upon the Michigan Curriculum Framework and the new Grade Level Content Expectations.

Each grade level and department has a set of learner outcomes and expectations for student achievement.

The Saline Board of Education welcomes district residents to attend its meetings.

The Board meets at 6:30 p.m. on the second and fourth Tuesdays of the month, except for July, August, and December.

Alumni Association Reuniting Hornets

The Saline High School Alumni Association was established in 1891 to reunite former graduates of Saline High School.

The group hosts an annual banquet on the fourth Saturday in June offering alumni a chance to get together.

Representatives of the five-year anniversary classes are honored, and a special effort is made to reunite the members of the 40th and 50th anniversary classes.

Residual funds received from the event go toward the organization's scholarship fund.

Every year, the group awards a scholarship to a graduating senior, preferably to the son or daughter of Saline High School alumni.

For more information about Hornet Alumni events, call Taylor Jacobsen at 429-7823 or visit www.salineschools.com/index.php/community/alumni.

Curriculum

A comprehensive curriculum of more than 230 courses is offered, including traditional classes in English, mathematics, science, social studies, and physical education. Elective courses are offered in art, business, life management, music, technology, industrial arts and world language.

Honors, or accelerated courses, are offered throughout the curriculum. The Advanced Placement curriculum is taught in art, biology, calculus AB and BC, chemistry, English language and literature, physics, psychology, Spanish, statistics, US government, and US history. Qualified students may take Advanced Placement classes for free, but there is a fee charged for the examinations.

Professional and vocational courses are available for freshmen and sophomores, while the South and West Washtenaw Consortium provides 14 career technical programs for juniors and seniors. Most of the programs are offered at Saline High School; others are offered at participating high schools and the Huron Valley Beauty Academy. A variety of programs, including cooperative education, placement services, and educational/employment experiences are also available. All vocational programs are offered at no cost to students and transportation is provided to most programs. Students who excel in the vocational programs may earn transferable credit to Washtenaw Community College.

Graduation Requirements

Twenty-seven credits are required to graduate, including four in English, four in mathematics, two in science, three in social studies, one in physical education, and a half credit in career preparation and exploration.

These are minimum requirements, and those intending to apply for college need to pursue a more rigorous course of study. While each university has different requirements, Michigan public universities have agreed that four years of English, four years of mathematics, two years of science, and three years of social studies are required for admission to degree programs. They also recommend courses in foreign language, computer literacy and the arts. Students are encouraged to diversify their educational programs by taking a broad range of courses in career technical, fine and performing arts, business, and college preparatory classes.

Grade Point System

Grade point average and rank are based on all classes taken for credit, using the standard four-point scale. Grades are weighted for AP classes beginning with the 2010-2011 school year.
