Police station to be scaled down

City Council votes to reduce scope of new municipal complex

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Newspapers

City officials are scaling back the proposed new police station project in Chelsea after a 5-2 vote last week.

The city council debated canceling the project outright, proceeding as planned before the project was suspended for public input earlier this year, or removing the proposed council chamber space and two holding cells in the lower level of the new facility.

Former mayor and current trustee Ann Feeney motioned to scale back the project with specific language removed so there would be more time to think about the project reduction.

Despite the public complaints against the Chelsea State Bank property location, City Manager John Hanifan said there are no

"Everyone is up to speed on the 20 year history of the site selection process," he said.

Hanifan said the project reduction wouldn't address all of the concerns brought up during two town hall meetings.

"The primary residential concerns that would impact the redesign would be the elimination of the council chamber and the elimination of two holding cells," he said.

He estimated that those rescissions or similar alternatives to the plan would amount to a 20 percent reduction in square footage and a 15 to 20 percent reduction of the $2.5 million project cost.

Hanifan urged the council to move forward with the project in any fashion.

"I think we're at a juncture where we need to move forward," he said.

He admitted that there was a lot of storage and "future use" space in the basement that could also be reduced.

The building blueprints currently include a nearly 9,000 square foot ground floor. The building in its entirety would be just under 14,000 square feet as it is currently designed.

Hanifan said there is no planned construction start date for the project.

"There's no planned construction date because there are obviously a couple of steps in the process that we've got to take," he said.

The next step for the project will involve addressing a rezoning request and a request to combine parcels that did not pass an earlier planning commission vote. After that,

Hundreds flock to annual fair

Board reports record turnout, profit despite slow economy

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Newspapers

Everyone was in high spirits at this year's Chelsea Community Fair due to record attendance, board members reported Monday.

Chris Donajkowski attended the event to support his nephew, who won $400 and a pair of University of Michigan football tickets during the Crazy Eights demolition derby.

"I also came to pick up some food and for the tractor pulls,"

he said.

Fair Board President Rick Boham said that people like Donajkowski came out in record numbers and made this year the best year for the fair in recent memory.

"This is the best year we've ever had as far as the numbers and record attendance," he said. "The fair was packed every night. The bleachers were packed every night. Riding in the parade Saturday, the streets were lined on both sides from the beginning to the ending of the parade."

CHELSEA

Crowds piled into the fair grounds and bolstered record earnings for the carnival company, Chelsea Kiwanis Club and every vendor and organization involved, according to Boham.

One thing that changed this year that he thought may have been a factor was the board taking direct control of the demolition derby and securing local resident Gary Wonders as the announcer.

"We had a lot of compliments from (derby crowds) and people in the stands. Gary Wonders had a good interaction with the crowds Tuesday and Thursday night," he said.

The weather also worked to the fair's advantage, Boham said.

"When it's in the 90s and the humidity comes up, it's hard for people to come out in an environment like that," he said.

Boham said another contributing factor this year to the fair's success was the number of people who took the week off as their summer vacation.

"Even with a slight increase in ticket price over the past several years, the fair is more of a bargain than traveling long distances for recreation or relaxation," Boham said.

Although he wouldn't mention exactly how much money the fair raised, Boham said that 2010 was a "record year for" profits, all of which will be reinvested into the event next year.

"Everything will go back into capital improvements ... we

Aldrich named 2010 fair queen

Chelsea sophomore selected to represent city throughout year

By Krystle Dunham
Special Writer

For Chelsea resident Kennedy Aldrich, competing in a fair pageant was something she never thought she would do.

"I always told myself there is no way I'm going to do this," Aldrich said. "I never saw myself as the pageant type."

But, somewhere along the line she changed her mind and decided to compete in this year's Chelsea Community Fair Queen pageant.

"I was more open-minded this year," she said.

Aldrich, 15, a sophomore at Chelsea High School, was crowned the new fair queen on Friday.

She was awarded a $1,000 scholarship that can be used toward any college or university of her choice.

"I'm not really comprehending what's going on right now," Aldrich said after being crowned. "I'm just trying to take it all in."

She competed against four other local contestants for the title, Samantha Blackledge, Corinne Carpenter, Sarah Stamper and Sarah Wood.

As first runner up, Blackledge received a $500 scholarship, and Stamper was picked as Miss Congeniality.

the project must be vetted during the same site plan review process that all proposed developments must undergo, Hanifan said.

Council trustee Rod Anderson said he would like to see the current site plan set aside entirely, in favor of a new all-inclusive site analysis.

"Now is not the time to build a police station," Anderson said, alluding to a lawsuit with a private developer that is currently being reviewed by the Michigan Supreme Court, after the city lost the case at the trial and appellate court levels.

The suit could cost the city over $3 million, for which it would have to sell judgment bonds to settle any outstanding payments to the court.

On top of declining property values, Anderson said he wasn't feeling confident about the city's chances in court.

"I don't want to predict, but so far we're zero and two," he said. "We are in a position where our future revenues that the city has available are subject to declining taxable value."

He pointed to real estate market statistics that showed sharp declines in home sales for July.

"I don't think we can hope to rebound in property values any time soon," he said.

Anderson also addressed the fact that the city may have to increase funding for its retirees.

"Considering all of these uncertainties it seems to be eminently reasonable to put this thing on hold," Anderson said.

He said that he understands the department's need for a new facility and said he'd like to see it happen in the near future, but felt that after 20 years of inaction and the department's high performance in its current home, moving forward immediately was unnecessary.

After calling for a new review of the 12 potential locations for a police station, Anderson referred to the site selection process as "murky."

Trustee Cheri Albertson, who was involved in the process before Anderson was elected to the council, disagreed.

"The building committee, which was established as a sub-committee of this body, was not 'murky' in any way," Albertson said. "That decision was made at a council session and it was televised at the same time."

"What I would like to see happen is some ethics brought to this discussion instead of members of this body accusing other members of unethical and illegal practices."

Trustee Kent Martinez-Kratz said that he thought that the building footprint was too large from day one.

"It was a little bit heart-warming to see that the second story was only 9,000 square feet," he said. "I think if we trim it down, the footprint could be brought down and that could help the situation."

Martinez-Kratz said he was fine with foregoing the council chambers, but that a new station was needed and should be thought of going forward as a 50-year purchase and not a 20-year purchase.

Council Trustee Frank Hammer disagreed saying he wanted the council chambers to be a part of the building.

"I think we can tweak it down a little but I want the council chambers there," he said.

Mayor Jason Lindauer alluded to the idea that Chelsea's police force has had a significant impact on the high quality of life in the city and has kept crime inherent from its proximity to I-94 to a minimum.

"We face types and levels of crime that I suspect not many cities so close to I-94 experience," he said. "And the department is to be commended for keeping it under control."

He also expressed his feeling that current interest rates would not remain low indefinitely.

"I don't care whose economic forecast you listen to, at some point interest rates are going to go up," Lindauer said. "Interest rates will go up and the cost of capital will go up and the cost of building materials will go up whether it's put off six months, a year or another 20 years."

Council trustee Bill Holmberg said that he would like to postpone the decision outright based on "compelling remarks" that he heard during the meeting.

"I feel extremely uncomfortable in making a vote in this condition," he said.

Holmberg and Anderson voted against Feeney's motion to approve a non-descript reduction in the project.

Lindauer said that he would still like to see the council space remain, because he always thought of it more as community space.

"I think it could be put to great use. We could fill it seven days a week without any trouble," he said.

Roger's Corners Herdsmen, Veterinary Science Club and the Double L llama Club, where she is co-president.

She said her favorite part of being involved with the fair pageant was forming friendships with the other four contestants.

"I really enjoyed talking to the other girls and creating a bond with them," she said.

Aldrich said the most difficult part of the pageant for her was the public interview portion. She said she is usually fine talking in front of a crowd, but when she isn't prepared it's a different story.

"I'm perfectly fine when I know what's coming and when I know what I'm supposed to do," she said.

And that rang true, with the large amount of praise her talent performance received.

Besides being crowned fair queen, she received the talent award for her fiddle medley performance that she arranged herself. Aldrich had a number of fairgoers clapping in unison with her as she performed her upbeat music.

"I've been playing since I was in kindergarten," said Aldrich, who is a member of the Chelsea House Orchestra.

Aldrich's grandmother Susann Aldrich couldn't wipe the smile off her face when she heard her granddaughter's name announced as fair queen.

"I was completely overjoyed and filled with pride when she was crowned," she said. "We're very proud of her."

Aldrich's future plans include attending Michigan State University for pre-veterinary and veterinary medicine degrees. She plans on becoming a large animal veterinarian.

Aldrich is the daughter of Dan and Courtney Aldrich and her siblings are Keaton, 13, and Reed, 11.

should have a list of things the first of the year," Boham said. "Since we haven't had a year like this for so long, we have a lot of things that we need to improve on that went on the backburner until now."

Individually each night of the fair with the exception of the first night was a record breaker. The last year that the fair was this successful was 2003.

Boham said he hopes that the momentum continues because state funding for community fairs dried up earlier than expected and would likely not be available in 2011.

"The state provided matching funds, but the money ended in 2008," he said. "There were supposed to be funds available in 2009 but that didn't happen, and we were told that there definitely wasn't going to be any in 2010."

Organizers like to keep the fair entertaining for everyone, especially those with a family history in Chelsea.

"It's fun to come back for the fair," Brenda Canfesi said. "We like to see the livestock."

Neo-natal care unit helps babies survive, thrive

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

Anna, "the Banana," and Eva, "the Diva" Cronin, are happy 2-year-old twins who love life and live it to the fullest.

But their start in life was a rocky one, says their mom, Aine Cronin of Ann Arbor.

"Maybe this is what spurs them on to grab life every chance they can," she said.

It also spurs Aine and her husband, Paul, both employees at the University of Michigan Radiology Department, to do all they can to help the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, where the twins received care in those critical early weeks.

Eva was a "bonus child," discovered a couple of months into the pregnancy on an ultrasound scan.

"She was a tiny blip, so small that everyone didn't believe she was real," Cronin said.

Eva's supply of food and oxygen went low and stopped completely at 7 months into the pregnancy, so the decision was made to deliver her.

"Premature babies with placental insufficiency in the womb usually do much better in the outside world," Cronin said. "That meant Anna had to come out, too, even though she was growing at a normal pace in the womb."

"This meant Anna might not do as well in the outside world. This was Anna's first big favor to do for Eva."

Anna was delivered first by emergency caesarian section, weighing in at 3 pounds and 11 ounces, letting out a loud scream to announce her arrival. Her sister was quiet, which worried her parents initially. But Eva, unlike Anna, didn't need a ventilator. Like many preemies, Anna was jaundiced — "the same color as a banana, hence the nickname," Cronin said. "She got to bask under the ultraviolet lamps wearing some cool shades. She made the most of it, stretching out, in a very relaxed pose."

Eva was the boss from the beginning, her mother said. "On her third day of life, this little 2.5-pound peanut defeated a grown man, the neonatologist who tried to examine her. She was having none of it, and he emerged defeated. He said he would retreat and try again later. Eva the diva reigned supreme."

Anna spent 43 days in the NICU. She had apnea of prematurity and was put on caffeine — the equivalent to about eight espressos a day.

"Our little coffee junkie had a patent ductus arteriosus which closed up with medical treatment and otherwise spent time in the NICU to feed and grow," Cronin said. "She was just under 5 pounds when she left the NICU."

Eva spent 49 days in NICU, with a tougher battle, first developing a blood-borne infection and then battling necrotizing enterocolitis for 10 days, which set her back a little. She left hospital six days after Anna, weighing 4 pounds.

Anna is no longer a "banana," but is a redhead with a big belly laugh. Eva remained true to her name, and is a super diva, extremely bright and a charmer, their mother says.

Gerry and Claire Harrison of Saline are pictured with their children, Jamie and Owen. The Saline residents are grateful to the NICU at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, and give back by serving on the Family Advisory Board.

"Anna always wants to be involved if there is any eating taking place or any cleaning to be done, Eva, on the other hand, is more interested in creating the mess, through her curiosity about the world in general and exploring how everything works," Cronin said.

None of this would be possible without the care of the doctors and nurses at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital NICU, she said.

"Children staying in the St. Joe's NICU are not just patients and you're not just a relative, you become a member of the St. Joe NICU family," she said. "This is because of the St. Joe's NICU philosophy of patient and family care."

"The care is truly patient-centered and considers patients' cultural traditions, their personal preferences and values, their family situations, and their lifestyles. It makes the patient and their loved ones an integral part of the care team who collaborate with healthcare professionals in making clinical decisions. Patient-centered care puts responsibility for important aspects of care in the hands of the patients' and their families."

The Cronins became involved with the NICU Family Advisory Board, made up of volunteer parents who have had children in the NICU, and who are committed to making it a better place for all families. The board focuses on improving patient/family and staff relations, fund-raising and other issues important to families during and after NICU hospitalization.

Board members speak to nursing students at Washtenaw Community College and U of M Nursing School, and NICU staff, and the Family Advisory Board participate as "Team St. Joe's" in the March of Dimes March for Babies.

A Fashion Show, raising about $15,000 annually, is held at the Washtenaw Community College Morris Lawrence Building, Townsley Auditorium in November. The event includes dinner, a silent auction, a fashion show with models from former NICU families, and dessert.

Money raised from sponsorships, silent auction, ticket sales, Story Boards that tell the NICU graduate and their family's story, and donations, is used to fund several programs, including monthly Pizza Nights, Educate and Create, and Parent-to-Parent training. Funds also support holiday gifts for NICU families, and the annual NICU reunion.

Two other fundraisers are Beauty for Babies, held each spring at Mod Squad Salon in Saline, where owner Renee Fonseca opens her salon on a Monday and 80 percent of the profits are donated to the NICU, and the Macy's Shop For A Cause in the fall, raising about $1,200 annually from the sale of $5 gift coupons.

FAB programs include a parent-to-parent group, where parents with a child or children in the NICU can be matched up with parents who went through the same experience, who can give support at this difficult time. "We had a wonderful couple support us through our children's NICU stay," Cronin said. "We feel honored to be a part of the St. Joe's NICU family and feel strongly about giving back."

"When mommy and daddy look at these two girls, they can not believe how far they have come and cannot imagine life without them. Anna is always smiling and laughing out loud, and Eva is smiling sweetly and frequently chuckles to herself."

"We find it hard to remember how fragile and small the girls were, and it is only with the help and support of the NICU family that we are all here now, to enjoy the surprises, challenges and laughs that the girls bring us every day."

Saline residents Claire and Gerry Harrison are another couple grateful to the NICU, and who give back by serving on the Family Advisory Board.

"Their first son, Jamie, was born seven weeks early and spent 21 days in the NICU, battling respiratory and feeding issues. He came home on oxygen and a heart monitor, which he needed until he was 5 months old. Today, aside from having asthma, he is a happy and healthy 6-year-old, who will soon start first grade in Saline. He loves "Star Wars" and the Detroit Tigers, plays baseball and soccer, and he loves to run and ride his bike."

The Harrisons went through a similar experience with their second son, Owen, who entered the world 8 weeks early weighing 4 pounds, 12 ounces, and measuring 17 inches long. He was rushed to the NICU, where he spent 23 days, primarily dealing with feeding issues. He had fewer breathing issues than Jamie, and didn't need oxygen on discharge.

Like his older brother, Owen is asthmatic, but other than that, he is happy and healthy, and ready to start kindergarten. Like Jamie, Owen loves "Star Wars," as well as playing video games, digging in the dirt, and sports.

"The family lives in Saline, where Gerry-Harrison teaches fourth grade. Claire is an attorney with Dykema Gossett in Ann Arbor."

Claire said she and her husband couldn't have been happier with the care their sons received in the NICU at St. Joe's.

"Everyone there — from the doctors to the nurse practitioners to the nurses to the social workers — was wonderful to us. I'm forever grateful to the NICU staff at St. Joe's," she said.

"I've been on the Family Advisory Board for several years now, and although my children are getting older and the NICU memories are getting more distant, those memories will never fade," she says.

"I hope that, by continuing to give back, I can help make the difficult NICU journey a little bit easier for even one family."

Washtenaw Literacy improves workers' basic skills

By Sarah Rigg
Special Writer

Officials at Ypsilanti-based Washtenaw Literacy are hoping they can impact unemployment in Michigan by increasing the basic skills of those who are out of work.

According to a report called "Transforming Michigan's Adult Learning" conducted by the Michigan Council for Labor and Economic Growth, 33 percent of working-age Michigan adults are so low-literate they can't hold a family-sustaining job or contribute to the state's economy.

Washtenaw Literacy Executive Director Amy Goodman said there are some misconceptions about just what literacy means. She said when most people think of the word literacy, they think of teaching a child to read, but that's just one aspect.

"The current definition of literacy is much broader than that," she said. The concept includes numeracy — or understanding math — as well as financial literacy, health literacy and family and intergenerational literacy concerns.

"Children are not going to become literate adults if their parents are not literate," Goodman said.

"It has to do with attitudes around reading materials, books and school, as well as their ability to read to their children and help them develop early childhood skills. If you're reading at less than an eighth-grade level, that's called being functionally illiterate."

Goodman said that Washtenaw Literacy isn't the only organization focusing on increasing workers' basic skills. It's being highlighted at the state level, as well.

"It's a major initiative by the state of Michigan to increase basic skills of those in the workforce," Goodman said. "We're one of the top five states for unemployment, and many of the unemployed lack basic skills. The (unskilled) jobs they lost don't exist anymore. They've gone away and are not coming back."

Goodman said that this fall, the state of Michigan is launching "a major transformation in the way adult education is delivered in the entire state."

She said Washtenaw Literacy already has been collaborating with Washtenaw Community College, but, as a part of that transformation, the nonprofit would be working even more closely with WCC going forward. Washtenaw Literacy also partners with public school adult education and Washtenaw County's Michigan Works! office.

"We have been working with WCC for the last 18 months on one of 10 demonstration grants to develop best practices for coordinating services and getting adults who need skills on the fast track to get their credentials beyond their GED," Goodman said.

The nonprofit recently launched a new website that is designed to be accessible to people with low literacy skills, Goodman said. Additionally, the nonprofit is in the middle of a campaign to raise funds and recruit volunteers to help with the goal of improving workers' basic skills.

The public can help in four areas, Goodman said: volunteering, donating, starting a literacy program at their workplace, and spreading the word about what Washtenaw Literacy has to offer.

About 300 people attended the 2009 World in a Basket event and bid on gift baskets. This year's event, which aids Washtenaw Literacy, is set for Oct. 1.

Area residents can also help Washtenaw Literacy by participating in its annual "World in a Basket" fundraiser. Goodman said that the annual event typically provides about 20 percent of Washtenaw Literacy's annual budget.

This year is the 12th year for the fundraiser, and it's set for 5:30 p.m. Oct. 1 at the campus of Washtenaw Community College. Tickets are $85, or $75 if purchased before Sept. 17.

The evening includes drinks, dinner and the auctioning of 130 gift baskets. Devon Scillian, broadcaster with Detroit's Channel 4, will be the emcee for the live auction.

For ticket information, call 879-1320 or e-mail info@washtenawliteracy.org.

Walk to shine light on suicide prevention

Out of the Darkness Walk set Sept. 19

By Steven Howard
Heritage Newspapers

The annual Out of the Darkness Community Walk, to benefit the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention, will take place Sept. 19 at Gallup Park in Ann Arbor. The walk begins with registration at 11 a.m.

The organization funds research, outreach and support related to the cause, said Lisa Johnson, treasurer of the Detroit-Ann Arbor chapter of the AFSP.

She said the Ann Arbor walk is one of three local Out of the Darkness events the chapter organizes.

"We do the Ann Arbor, Brownstown and Kensington walks," she said.

There are several other individually organized walks across Michigan each year, in addition to those taking place in states across the country.

Registration will be followed by several speakers, including one with U.S. military affiliation, and the event is expected to begin at noon.

Johnson said the walk will be approximately three miles long, and stretch through the park grounds.

She said attendance has been good in recent years.

"Last year was the greatest," she said. "There were about 350 people. This year, we're hoping to top that."

Though participants will have the chance to register themselves, or a team, the day of the walk, Johnson advises early registration on the event's Web site.

"Online registration is highly encouraged," she said, noting the efficiency.

"There is no fee to register," Johnson said. "There is no fee to walk. Obviously, this is a fundraiser, so every individual who raises $150 will get a T-shirt."

Much like at the Susan G. Komen breast cancer walks, Johnson said the teams of walkers often get quite elaborate with their clothing and signs they make to honor their loved ones.

"Some people make their own T-shirts and have balloons or signs," she said.

Johnson said participating in the Out of the Darkness Community Walk is often a good way for family members and friends of victims of suicide to cope with such an egregious loss. It also helps them to feel as though they are doing something positive to prevent future similar tragedies.

To Johnson, the effort is extremely personal.

"I lost my 16-year-old son to suicide in 2006," she said. "He would have been 21 this year. It's certainly very close."

At the conclusion of this year's walk, Johnson a microphone on the main stage will be open for participants to share memories and stories about those who inspired them to walk. Johnson said those participating in the Ann Arbor walk can be assured that the money they help to raise will benefit the community around them.

"Half of the funds raised locally will stay local," she said.

The other half will help fund national AFSP efforts.

Johnson said they provide several services, including handing out prevention pamphlets and providing immediate an example of the service they provide is being able to hand out pamphlets and immediately provide information to schools where a student has taken his or her own life.

"To wait two or three weeks is not acceptable in that situation," she said.

Online registration is simple, Johnson said, and once a team has been created, other prospective team members can join at their leisure.

Donors can also contribute directly to an individual or team safely and securely on the Web site.

A special memory from U of M Fan Day

Fan Day is the annual precursor to the kick-off of one of my favorite times of the year — the start of the University of Michigan football season.

I have fond memories of attending the event with my dad, who one year decided he wanted Lloyd Carr's autograph on a ball cap.

We waited in line forever, but it became one of his most treasured possessions.

This year, I added another special memory from Fan Day when I met Dave Pickelhaupt of Marysville.

Ispied him from the back as he got players' autographs, but it was when he turned around that he really grabbed my attention.

Pickelhaupt looked a lot like my dad, who died more than a year ago.

So, I stopped him and asked if I could take his photo holding the football he was having autographed.

Pickelhaupt asked why I'd want to do that, and I admitted that he had a double in my dad.

Wearing a World War II veteran's cap and a yellow shirt much like my dad would wear, we began chatting.

He was 87 years old and a huge U of M football fan, among other things.

When I asked where he was heading to next, he said he wanted head football coach Rich Rodriguez' autograph.

I knew how far away the coach's line was because I'd started my day there and it was a hike from where we were standing.

And, having navigated Fan Day with my dad, I knew how tiring it can be. So, I decided to make it a little easier.

I asked Edna Joy Girma, one of the many event staff at the event, if she could get this fine veteran a ride to Rich Rod's line.

She radioed in and, with a little persuasion, was able to get both Pickelhaupt and his grandson a golf cart ride to the other side of the stadium.

But while walking to the golf cart, several people stopped Pickelhaupt and thanked him for his service to the country.

And, as he was driven away, those simple acts of respect and recognition really tugged at my heart strings.

I was proud of my fellow Wolverine fans for acknowledging the sacrifice that Pickelhaupt — and my dad — had made for the country.

The next day, I got an e-mail from his daughter, Cathy, who wrote, in part, that she was trying to track me down.

"I would really like to find this special person, a very nice lady who asked to take my dad's picture as he reminded her of her dad, as she made the day wonderful for my dad and son with a special act of kindness."

So, I e-mailed her back and she responded that her dad and her son "were delivered right to (the coach's) table on the golf carts ahead of everyone else."

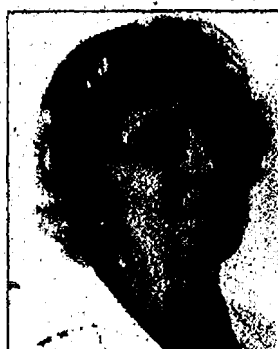

"They still don't know how all of that happened. You were their angel for the day," she wrote in her e-mail.

"God puts people where they are supposed to be at just the right time," she wrote.

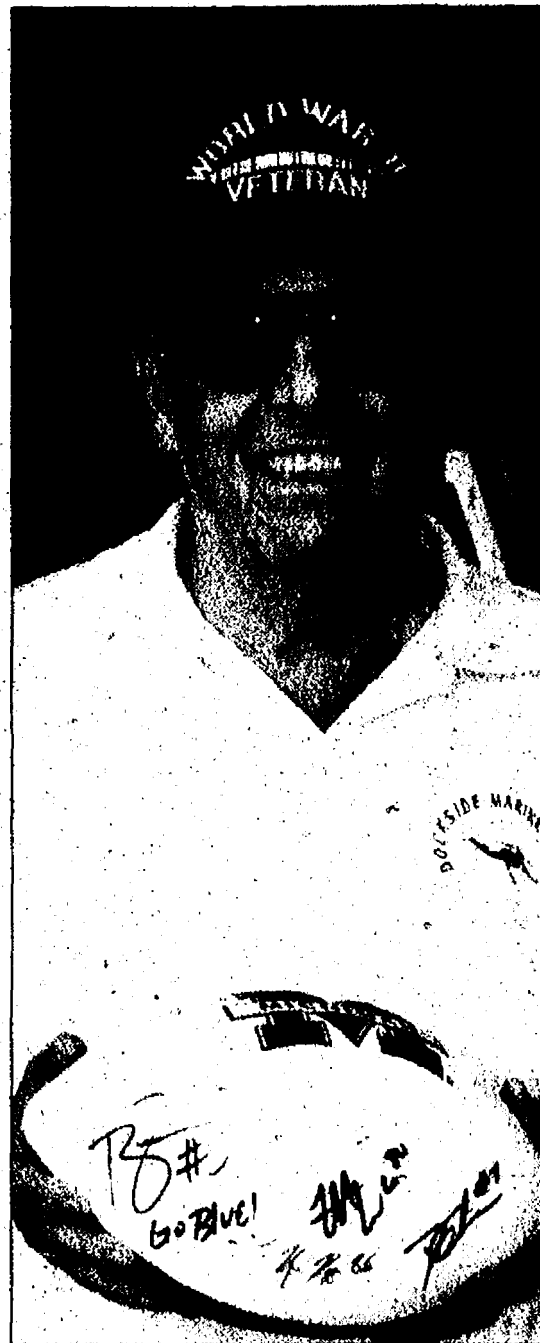

I think my dad had a hand in it, too.

OUR TAKE: Editorial

Don't let the economy hurt Michigan's kids

The views of many people frequently change drastically when it comes to their kids. Most parents know that they must put their children first and most don't find it difficult to do so.

A common example is how people change their views when they go from being adult and single to married with kids. Those who are single and property owners typically aren't too crazy about raising their taxes to support schools. But when they become parents, they're more than willing to fork over a few dollars if it helps educate their young. Admittedly, it's a very selfish stance but, nevertheless, it's an example of the effect children can have on Mom and Dad.

Maybe another, better example is just the parental instinct to protect their children. While some parents may go to an extreme, most parents will be cautious about what they let their children do to make sure the youngsters aren't harmed.

That's why the results of a recent survey should be an eye-opener to parents and anyone who cares about children.

The state's poor economy is being blamed for taking its toll on children, particularly when compared with elsewhere in the nation. Michigan has slipped to 30th in a state-by-state overall ranking of children's well-being in the annual Kids Count report from the Annie E. Casey Foundation.

Michigan had ranked 27th in the previous report.

Michigan has had the nation's highest unemployment rate for much of the past four years and that's reflected in the rankings, which are based primarily on data from 2007 and 2008.

Michigan ranked 44th among the states with 31 percent of children living in families where no parent had full-time, year-round employment in 2008. The national average was 27 percent.

The Kids Count report says 19 percent of Michigan children younger than 18 lived in poverty in 2008, up from 14 percent in 2000. Poverty was defined in 2008 as income below $21,834 for a family of four.

Michigan ranked 32nd among states in child poverty in 2008. The state's poverty rankings likely have worsened since 2008. Michigan ranked 40th in infant mortality with 7.9 deaths per 1,000 live births in 2007. The national average was 6.7 deaths.

The figures should make you stop, wonder and maybe get angry. We've just had a primary election that was pretty much "politics as usual." The campaigns from the governor's race on down often saw mud slinging accusations and counter charges. It wasn't very encouraging if you were looking for a candidate who could rise above the crowd and show signs that he or she could actually be instrumental in trying to get Michigan's economy rolling again.

There's the general election coming up and it would be refreshing — but we won't hold our breath — to see some real ideas about improving Michigan expressed and not just rhetoric or condemnation of an opponent.

Oakland County Sheriff Michael Bouchard, in some of his campaign advertisements for governor, said Michigan's greatest export shouldn't be its young. It was reference to how the lack of jobs was forcing our graduates to seek employment outside of Michigan. It may have been a political slogan, but every elected official and political candidate should make that their motto.

EMU union staff members want unreasonable wage, benefit increases

It's 9:30 on Wednesday morning.

I'm drinking a cup of coffee trying to remove a sliver from the little finger of my right hand.

It's a difficult task because I'm right handed, the lighting isn't optimal, and my eyesight is even less so.

I'm listening to National Public Radio on the University of Michigan station.

There's a lot going on in the world, not much of it good except for the oil eating microbes doing their job without being on any payroll, power trip, ego trip, cover up or religious crusade.

I'm still digging at that sliver, dipping the needle in alcohol to stave off infection, squeezing and pinching to loosen its grip; it hurts as I swab the blood away with an alcohol soaked tissue.

The last time I did this, an infection ensued, and as I sat explaining what I had done to the doctor holding my hand while cleaning the wound, he asked slyly, "Where did you get your medical license?"

Back seat driver, armchair quarterbacks and a little bit of knowledge is dangerous. These are all accurate sayings resulting from proceeding without all the information, tools or expertise for the task.

I'm still digging at that sliver. Why? Because I'm committed now, I have momentum, failure is not an option, I can deal with the pain, and I'm taking the necessary and practical precautions to prevent another infection.

The tedious but tenacious digging, pinching, scraping and swabbing leads me into another memory.

This one puts me in a senior year government/political science class I needed to complete my degree requirements. It was taught by a former lieutenant governor of New Mexico, or maybe Arizona. I can't remember for sure.

Maybe there are some infectious slivers in the Eastern Michigan University union staff members who want unreasonable wage and benefit increases when they should be setting an educational example in budget management.

The first day of class, he handed out a syllabus that had eight heavy-duty books on the reading list.

The semester was divided up into four sections covering two books each, with an essay test consisting of three questions, counting for 25 percent of your final grade.

No final exam would be given, and on each test there would be a "bonus" question that would provide extra credit if answered correctly but not count against you if answered incorrectly.

It sounded fair to me, but there was stunned silence in the class of about 23 students, and then a wave of complaints regarding the time-consuming workload and even the essay test requirement.

The professor cut the complaints short by saying, "This is the way it is. If you don't like it, there's the door."

Eight students got up and left, dropping the class. That left 65 percent of the class population ready to dig in and start learning.

By now, you're wondering what my point is.

I'm pretty sure those eight students who dropped that government class in back in 1982 are a representative sample of the lazy government leadership we've had for the past 10 years.

But then, "a little bit of knowledge is dangerous," and because lazy is infectious, the wounds of the past need draining, and there's a legislative barn full of slivers that should be removed, no matter how painful the task.

I'm still digging at that sliver, and, in doing, I have to destroy some perfectly healthy flesh.

But, in the end, the wound will heal and I'll be free from the infectious and painful sliver, resulting in an overall improvement in my general health.

Maybe there are some infectious slivers in the Eastern Michigan University union staff members who want unreasonable wage and benefit increases when they should be setting an educational example in budget management.

Maybe EMU management should take the same position as my government professor whom I learned much from: "This is the way it is. If you don't like it, there's the door."

Reagan did it for air traffic controllers back in the 1980s. It worked then, and it'll work now.

EMU management is acting responsibly by trying to keep costs in check; the union appears to be only interested in receiving a check.

Web game show films pilot at Encore

"Happily Ever After?" host Lori Goulet of Livonia (right) talks with Penny Gibbs of Keego Harbor.

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Newspapers

One of the companies involved in the exploding Internet television industry filmed a pilot show in Dexter in early August. On Aug. 8 and 15 Dark Elf Entertainment, a company created in May 2009 and housed in the Ann Arbor SPARK facility on Eastern Michigan University's campus in Ypsilanti, filmed "WordSmith" and "Happily Ever After" for the Internet TV station, A2YPTV.

The company handles content creation, production and channel distribution.

"The company was created in part to provide a professional first steps experience to young and career changing on-camera talent, production and support team members who wish to learn the TV industry in this technologically exploding environment," said Dark Elf Entertainment managing partner Tony Dixon.

Dixon said his goal is to create "sustaining employment" in Washtenaw County through his company.

With the likes of Youtube, Hulu, Veoh and A2YPTV, Dixon's goal is to see the old regime of cable television replaced with more affordable content.

"Internet TV is evolving at an ever-increasing rate," he said. "Five years ago YouTube was the end goal. Today it is just a rung on the ladder to a generation of innovators that realized if YouTube can make hundreds of millions of dollars from the creative energy and vision of other people, then why not seek to capture some of that revenue from their own creative energy, vision and hard work."

Dixon said cable television has "priced itself out of the market" through cost and limitations.

"More and more producers and broadcasters are hedging their bets by using the Internet to distribute their content more directly," Dixon said.

Hulu is one example of a new content-based video website.

Dixon said his business is looking to change television like Netflix changed the video rental industry.

Dexter was chosen as a shooting location when Dark Elf's marketing manager discovered the Encore last spring.

"We went to the facility to get an up close and personal tour," Dixon said. "Dan Cooney is a fantastic person, theatrical talent and businessman. Dexter has a great future with people like Dan as a part of its community."

On Aug. 9 crews shot the pilot episode for "WordSmith," a fast-paced knowledge game show.

Dark Elf also shot the pilot for a talk show called "Happily Ever After?" a show that features couples or one member of a couple, who are or have been married. Couples will discuss the highlights, disappointments and lessons learned from their marriage.

"I have to admit that 'Happily' was brought about by speaking with young couples who talked about the things they don't teach you in school," Dixon said.

Both projects were "closed set" shoots--no audience, just local casting and the hostess for "WordSmith," who was pressed into double duty for "Happily Ever After?" as well.

The participants came from Ann Arbor, Bloomfield Hills, Dexter, Livonia and Ypsilanti. Both "WordSmith" and

"Happily Ever After?" will be distributed initially on Washtenaw County's own Internet TV station A2YPTV, then syndicated through traditional TV markets after the proper number of shows has been achieved.

Darr honored for work

Jennifer Darr of Chelsea was awarded Silpada Designs' "Legacy Award," a prestigious lifetime achievement award.

Darr received the award at the Silpada Designs' 2010 National Conference on July 22 in Kansas City, Mo.

Darr, a silver manager with Silpada Designs, was selected to receive the Legacy Award after reporting career jewelry sales of more than $500,000 and recruiting more than 100 new Silpada Designs representatives. Darr is one of only 14 women to receive this award among 32,000 Silpada Designs representatives throughout the United States, Canada and the United Kingdom.

"It is with great pleasure that we recognize Jennifer for her shining achievement," said Bonnie Kelly, co-founder of Silpada Designs. "Her passion has helped drive her profession and led to her sterling success."

Parent disciplines kids with baseball bat enters plea

A Korean immigrant seeking a graduate degree at the University of Michigan has pleaded guilty to child abuse charges after he disciplined his children with a baseball bat.

Court records show Gibeum Kim, 38, waived his right to a preliminary hearing and pleaded guilty to reduced charges of fourth-degree child abuse recently in Washtenaw County District Court.

Prosecutors agreed to drop two counts of third-degree child abuse at sentencing Sept. 14.

Kim was arrested by University of Michigan police officers who responded to his residence in the Northwood Community Apartments, located in the 1300 block of McIntyre Street, on North Campus Aug. 9.

The children's mother called authorities at about 4:30 p.m. and said both were struck below the waist with the small bat as punishment for misbehaving. The incidents happened in their residence. Both children, who are under the age of 12, were treated for substantial bruising and released at the U of M Medical Center, police reports said.

Kim, who is seeking a master's degree in business administration, is free on a personal bond pending sentencing, records show.

Shropshire back to prison after raping Eastern student

An Ypsilanti man is returning to prison for sexually assaulting an Eastern Michigan University student in her off-campus residence.

Jermaine Shropshire, 30, was sentenced to serve between 10 and 20 years in prison on multiple charges stemming from the June 14 attack last week, court records show.

In lieu of his scheduled preliminary examination in July, he pleaded guilty to first-degree home invasion and third-degree criminal sexual conduct. In return, prosecutors agreed to dismiss counts of first-degree criminal sexual conduct and felonious assault with a dangerous weapon. Court records indicate they also will not pursue charges for additional home invasions that occurred in the vicinity of the sexual assault.

Police said Shropshire crawled through the window of the victim's residence in the 600 block of West Cross Street in the late morning hours to take valuables. However, he found the 22-year-old resident was home sleeping at the time and sexually assaulted her at knifepoint.

Officers who were regularly patrolling the area because of a rash of property crimes quickly responded to the victim's home after she called, and they caught Shropshire nearby without incident.

He has been convicted of larceny, stealing a financial transaction device and probation violations, prison records show. He was last released from a probation sentence in February and had been staying in the Ypsilanti area since, officials said.

From the start of the investigation, police said they believed Shropshire, who had made a career of stealing personal property, was intent on burglarizing the residence until he saw the victim sleeping.

Former piano teacher sentenced for trading child pornography

An Ann Arbor man will serve the next five years in federal prison on charges that he shared child pornography over the Internet.

Michael Robertson, 43, was sentenced last week in Detroit federal court on charges that he possessed more than 100 images of child pornography and more than a dozen pornographic movies depicting children in sex acts, a government news release stated. U.S. District Court Judge David Lawson also ordered Robertson to serve a five-year term of supervised release once his prison time is up. Robertson, who worked as a bouncer at city bars, and also taught piano lessons for children in Ann Arbor and Whitmore Lake, must register with the state as a sex offender, records show.

He pleaded guilty to receiving multiple images of child pornography March 30, according to the news release from the U.S. Department of Justice.

Robertson was arrested as part of an international probe into child-pornography trading, that began in 2008, federal court documents show.

Two years earlier, the U.S. Department of Justice initiated a nationwide initiative to combat what is being considered a growing epidemic of child pornography trading in 2006 called "Project Safe Childhood."

U.S. attorneys, along with federal, state and local resources, have worked together to apprehend, prosecute, and identify victims who are exploited over the Internet.

Last August, federal agents raided Robertson's home and found computer hard drives and external hard drives that contained the images and movies, said Brian Moskowitz, special agent in charge of the Immigration and Customs Enforcement department.

WASHTENAW COUNTY COURT BRIEFS

"ICE is dedicated to protecting our children and neighbors from sexual predators," Moskowitz said in a written statement.

"We will continue to aggressively pursue and hold accountable individuals involved in this vile behavior."

Anyone with information about suspected child predators is encouraged to call a toll-free hotline at 1-866-347-2423. Suspected child sexual exploitation or missing children should be reported to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children at 1-800-843-5678, or visit www.cybertipline.com.

Charges resolved in alcohol-fueled injury crash in Ypsi Twp.

An Ypsilanti man has entered into a plea agreement with prosecutors on charges that he struck a pedestrian while driving drunk.

Donald Oates, 62, pleaded no contest to one count of operating a vehicle while intoxicated, causing injury, court records show.

A no contest plea is not an admission of guilty but is treated that way for sentencing in Michigan. Charges of operating while intoxicated and operating a vehicle with an open alcohol container present will be dismissed at sentencing Oct. 5.

A sentencing agreement with Washtenaw County Circuit Judge Donald Shelton is in place, but further details were available in court records.

Oates was arrested shortly after the May 15 crash along Michigan Avenue near Wiar Road in Ypsilanti Township at about 3:15 a.m. Police reports said he hit a man with his 1980 Chrysler two-door vehicle as the man tried to cross Michigan Avenue just west of the intersection.

The victim, a 31-year-old Belleville resident, was transported to St. Joseph Mercy Hospital with serious injuries and remained in critical condition for several days.

Oates remains free on bond after posting $750 June 3, court records show.

Jail sentence, conviction in separate animal abuse cases

A Pittsfield Township man has been ordered to jail for intentionally starving and abandoning a puppy.

Brian Adams, 27, was sentenced to 11 months in the Washtenaw County Jail and fined $8,500 on one count of felony animal cruelty, court records show. He pleaded no contest to the charge in July and prosecutors dismissed two counts of animal killing, torture.

Adams was arrested in February after animal cruelty investigators with the Humane Society of Huron Valley found a pit-bull puppy at his residence that was just barely alive, officials said. Investigators found the animal extremely emaciated and lying in pool of its own blood inside a crate, said Humane Society of Huron Valley Executive Director Tanya Hilgendorf.

Washtenaw County Circuit Judge Archie Brown credited Adams with six months of time already served since his arrest. He must also complete community service upon his release.

"The Humane Society of Huron Valley saw a huge victory for animal cruelty prosecutions that makes us very hopeful for future cases," said Matt Schaefer, an animal cruelty investigator with the Humane Society. Also last week, Ypsilanti Township resident Eddie Kennedy was convicted of misdemeanor animal cruelty, investigators said.

Kennedy owned a young brindle pitbull that had a chain deeply embedded in its neck and leg, Hilgendorf said. The Humane Society took the dog in August 2009 and helped him recover.

Kennedy faces up to 90 days in jail, $1,000 in fines and up to 200 hours of community service at sentencing in October.

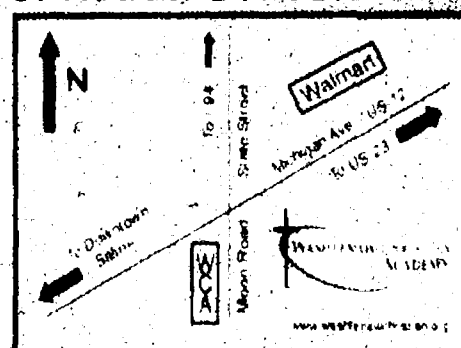

Hilgendorf commended the judges, prosecutors and investigators for taking a strong stand against animal cruelty in both cases.

"Despite strong public outcry against animal cruelty, this is the first time we have seen an offender get jail time strictly for a crime against an animal," she said. "We are extremely grateful. This is a big step forward for animals in our community."

Costco to break ground in Pittsfield Township

Public hearing on plans slated for Sept. 16

By Art Aigner
Staff Writer

One of the country's largest retailers is officially looking to break ground in Pittsfield Township.

Costco Wholesale Inc. ended months of speculation last week by officially submitting a preliminary site plan with the Pittsfield Township Planning Commission. Supervisor Mandy Grewal said.

The general public will get its first glimpse of the plan and will have an opportunity to give planning commissioners feedback at a public hearing at 6:30 p.m. Sept. 16. The commission's regular meeting will follow at the Township Hall, located at 6201 W. Michigan Ave.

The company's initial goal will be to get the prospective site — located off of Ellsworth Road just west of South State Road — rezoned. The property is currently zoned as a business park and would have to become a planned unit development to accommodate the mega-store.

Costco is a member-only warehouse club based in Washington that has become one of the top three retailers in the nation.

The company has sought Ann Arbor area locations in the past. The most recent proposal for Scio Township, but plans never got further than the planning commission.

The proposed plan for Pittsfield Township reportedly includes a warehouse store approaching 140,000 square feet. It also would have a tire center and a gas station with access from Airport Boulevard, officials said.

The proposal also calls for a detention pond on the far edge of the parcel that borders

A Costco mega-store could be built at this location just off of Airport Drive and Ellsworth Road in Pittsfield Township. Residents will get their first glimpse of the plans and give feedback during a public hearing Sept. 16.

the existing Tyner Furniture property.

Grewal has said she also would like to see traffic studies that analyze how construction would impact the ongoing Textile Road Greenway project.

"We want to make sure they're very deliberative and upfront with all the stakeholders in the process," Grewal said. "There have been many ongoing discussions and based on those discussions we're ready for a formal submission."

Washtenaw County Commissioner Kristin Judge said she's enthused by the prospect of having a convenient location for a store that's proven to be a good corporate citizen in other communities around the country.

Judge, D-7th District, helped organize citizens that raised concerns about the initial site plans for developing the Walmart store along Michigan Avenue.

That proposal did not adequately account for the newly built Saline High School and a potentially dangerous intersection at State Road and Campus Parkway, neither of which are factors with the proposed Costco site.

"I have not heard any negative comments from citizens about it, and you think that I would have," Judge said.

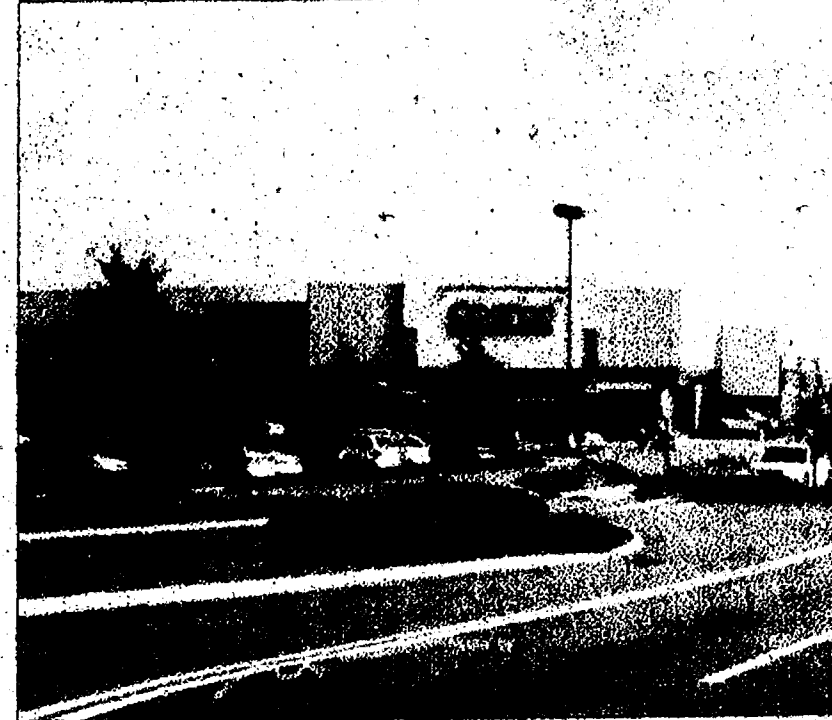

"I think people are excited to have them here and I'm looking forward to seeing the plans."

Judge acknowledged she is like many Washtenaw County residents who travel to the Costco store in Green Oak Township to take advantage of bulk value purchases. The other closest Costco store to Washtenaw County residents is in Livonia.

Officials at the company's headquarters did not return messages seeking comment.

Single-story offices currently on the 17-acre parcel would have to be demolished. Plan with the current landlord, Airport Boulevard Associates, are under way to help the existing businesses there with relocation.

Costco Wholesale Inc. is seeking approval to build a 139,000-square-foot store in Pittsfield Township. This similar store in Livonia and another in Green Oak Township are currently the closest locations to Washtenaw County residents.

Women's exchange offers up mentoring

The Women's Exchange of Washtenaw will offer an event called "Mentors, the Business Makers" from 8 to 9:30 a.m. Sept. 16.

The event is geared toward mentors and mentees and takes place at The Eagle Crest Conference Center, attached to Ann Arbor Marriott-Ypsilanti Eagle Crest Resort, 1275 S. Huron St. in Ypsilanti.

Women business leaders are mentored or provide mentoring at different points during their career journey. When they feel lost, they look for others to guide them through, and when they are empowered, they reach back, lending a hand to help lead others.

Attendees will learn the places to turn to in Washtenaw County for mentoring assistance to help build a career or help turn a career around.

Speaking during the event will be representatives from the Center for Empowerment and Economic Development, Michigan Small Business Development Technology Center, Service Corp of Retired Executives and Women Business Owners.

Panelists include Shannon Beeman, MI-SBDTC; Sally Schmall, WBO; Tanya Garrett and Bonnie Reyes, SCORE; and Pamela Smith, CEED. Michele Suboski of Suboski and Co. will moderate.

Also included in the day's events will be exchange sessions with the themes "Mentoring: Starting Out," "Mentoring: Through Life Changes" and "How To Mentor."

The cost for the event is $25, which includes programming and a continental breakfast. Registration is available at www.wxbusiness.com.

Michigan Conservation Stewards program in second year

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Newspapers

Without the Michigan Conservation Stewards program, Mary Duff-Silverman might not be the woman she is today — a force for good in the conservation world.

The program is part of the Washtenaw County Michigan State University Extension office, and is designed to educate the public on conservation and protection topics such as the outdoors, natural resources, natural history and environmental issues specific to the Washtenaw County area.

Duff-Silverman says that she got a whole lot more out of her time there.

"You learn in a classroom, but you also meet people and the program takes great effort to introduce you to professionals with the Department of Natural Resources and the Wildlife & Fisheries Service."

Now she has the Dicken Woods Butterfly Garden under her belt, which was her "Capstone Project" for the program and she says she is no longer an "armchair naturalist."

"Once I began working (there), the — what we call the butterfly garden — became my main goal there," she said. "It's a way to get people going into the preserve interested in the educational kick. I am especially happy that school groups from neighboring Dicken Elementary have shown interest, as well."

Another round of classes begins Sept. 11 and will run through Nov. 3 with the current run of classes ending Sept. 10.

The 40-hour course begins Sept. 11 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. with a look at conservation heritage.

It continues with evening sessions every Wednesday from 6 to 9 p.m., beginning Sept. 15 and ending Nov. 3. Saturday sessions are also set from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Oct. 9 and 23.

"Our sessions offer hands-on education focusing on ecological foundations, making decisions for natural resources, forests, grasslands, stream ecosystems, wetlands and land use," said program spokesman Bob Bricault. "This certificate program also has a volunteer component, where participants are required to volunteer 40 hours of conservation related service."

Bricault says that the program is fortunate to be located in the area that it is, where there are ample park systems and wildlife access to provide a wide range of opportunities for program participants to learn and get involved.

"The whole point of this program is for people to get involved and take what they've learned and put it into practice," Bricault said. "We've had members intimately involved in planning trail systems by identifying local vegetation and natural features, and planning where the trail could go without disturbing anything."

He added that many of the program's volunteers are "strong," like Duff-Silverman, who said that she might still be reading about her passion right now had she not gotten involved.

Commission says Duff needs property owners' OK to pick, take elderberries

Frank Duff, an Ann Arbor resident, was told to get property owners' permission to pick wild elderberries from several rights-of-way in Washtenaw County.

In a letter from the Washtenaw County Road Commission, Duff was told "The Road Commission does not have an objection to the harvesting of wild elderberries provided a miscellaneous blanket permit for working within the right-of-way is secured."

Duff said previously he had found the berries growing on property in Freedom, Scio and Lima townships.

Elderberries, like strawberries and raspberries, grow naturally in several areas of the county.

Duff said the Food Co-op of Ann Arbor has expressed interest in selling his elderberry syrup.

"I never could have done this on my own without the experiences I've had in the program," she said. "The speakers are wonderful, and the experiences are unique."

'The Darling Dahlias and the Cucumber Tree' has write stuff

If you are looking for optimism, there's lots to be found in Darling, Ala., where until recently, most people hadn't bothered to lock their doors.

Why should they when the only people who usually arrived in Darling were friends and relatives of folks who lived there or hopped off the freight trains?

Welcome to the first of a new series of cozy mysteries featuring the ladies of the Darling Dahlias garden club.

Written by national best-selling author Susan Wittig Albert, "The Darling Dahlias and the Cucumber Tree" is quite frankly not just darling but also delightful.

If you've ever belonged to a garden club, or have any interest in flowers, you'll love this book. Perhaps you're familiar with the cucumber tree with flowers that produce fruits that look like baby red cucumbers?

But this isn't its scientific name, as Dorothy Rogers, the town librarian, will tell you.

She's a stickler when it comes to proper scientific names for flowers and fruits and trees.

And the tree plays a prominent part in the story.

But even if you've never paid the whopping sum of 15 cents a month to belong to a garden club, you'll enjoy living vicariously in a small town, where a pleasant day involves baking, gardening or sewing.

"The Darling Dahlias and the Cucumber Tree," takes place during the Great Depression in the 1930s.

"Times are hard now, but things will get better soon. And in the meantime, we've got each other, and that's what counts. Friendship goes a long way," the book states.

And remember, "You couldn't be poor if you had a toasted cheese sandwich and cocoa every night."

This book is set in a time when Pepsodent had just introduced a new radio show called "Amos 'N' Andy."

Darling is a place where — at the soda fountain counter — teen-aged couples share milkshakes with two straws.

The book will make you smile, sigh, and perhaps wish for slower-paced times when playing cards or going to the picture show was something special.

The Darling ladies always try to look on the bright side, even if their new clubhouse roof needs fixing at a cost of $20, while the members are charging a nickel each for a garden tour to raise funds — half the price of a movie ticket.

Darling is a place where "kids could ride bikes and play wherever they wanted to, and where people cared about their houses and wanted them to look nice."

And, there's a resident ghost. Don't all small towns have one? You won't want this book to end because of the voice, the writing, the place and the characters.

It's the aw-shucks tone and cute situations, like the one in which Verna Tidwell, treasurer of the garden club, admits she always thought her husband loved his camellias "a great deal more than he loved her."

So when her husband, Walter, crossed Route 12 without looking up and the Greyhound bus ran him over, she kept his clothes for gardening.

"Verna mourned for the requisite period of time, then invited all her camellia-loving friends to come and take starts from Walter's bushes — then had every one of them cut down and the roots dug out."

The flashy, floppy camellias were replaced with vegetables, flowering annuals and roses.

The Darling Dahlias is a book everyone needs to read in these trying times. It will remind you of what's important and sweet and virtuous and fun.

I wanted to move to Darling while reading this book, even if the best the Red Cross could do was offer 10 cents a day for food.

Despite those hard times during the 1930s, readers in any small town, USA, can relate to the terrific characters in this book.

You probably sit next to one of them in church.

"Times might be just a little difficult, but that didn't stop the spring flowers from blooming or the dahlias from gathering big bouquets to share with their friends."

Wittig Albert is the author of more than 30 books and another dozen written with her husband, Bill Albert.

Do you have a movie script churning over in your mind?

As the Ann Arbor area becomes more and more a magnet for Hollywood movies, aspiring writers should check out a screenwriting workshop.

"How to Complete Your First Movie Script in Six Months," led by Harvey Ovshinsky, president of HKO Media, an Ann Arbor-based production and story consulting company.

The workshop will be held 7 to 10 p.m. on the first Monday of every month, Sept. 7 through Feb. 6, 2011, at the Jewish Community Center, 2935 Birch Hollow Drive, in Ann Arbor. The cost for the six-month course is $325.

"I've been astonished by the number and variety of people who have decided that now is the time to tell their stories in the form of a screenplay," said Ovshinsky, a former producer for ABC and Post-Newsweek stations in Detroit and former director of production at Detroit Public Television.

"Their goal isn't to make a million dollars. It's to get their truth off their chest, or to write a new ending to their own story."

"With so many people feeling like they can't control things that are going on in their world right now, telling their story in the form of a screenplay provides them with an element of mastery over one portion of their lives."

Ovshinsky will teach a simplified approach to completing a first script, including how to get started and not stop; screenplay as story and structure; creating characters, not caricatures; the screenwriter as rewriter; and the back door approach to selling a script.

Handouts will include a sample script, bibliography of screenwriting books, publications, contests and Ovshinsky's handout, "The 10 Most Important First Rules of Storytelling."

Ovshinsky's documentaries have been awarded broadcasting honors, including an Emmy, a Peabody, a DuPont-Columbia University Award, and the American Film Institute's Robert M. Bennett Award for Excellence. His movie-of-the-week script, "PJ and the Dragon" was represented by Creative Artists Agency and optioned by Longbow Productions. The New York International Independent Film and Video Festival honored his latest screenplay, "The Keyman."

Chelsea resident Kim Fairley, who earlier published a book, "Boreal Ties," about her great-grandfather's trip to the Arctic, began one of Ovshinsky's workshops planning to write a screenplay and then discovered she'd rather write a play.

"With a screenplay, there's so much less control in the end," she said. "With a play, you have much more control."

Fairley benefited from the diverse experiences of the people in the class, she said, and served as a dramaturg for Simone Yehuda, a playwright in the class, whose play was performed in Ann Arbor Aug. 5.

"Writing comes from a deep place within us," Fairley said. "In a way, the class was a bit of a therapy session. It forced students to look inside themselves to find their driving motivations — what do you fear, what do you value, what are you curious about?"

Ann Arbor resident Bob Davidow, is another aspiring writer who enjoyed a workshop. A retired attorney and law professor, he used his family as the foundation for his screenplay. He got the idea for a play in 2006, as the 70th anniversary of Flint's "Great Sit-down Strike" approached.

Davidow initially thought of writing about his father's involvement in the strike, which led to the unionization of the U.S. automobile industry.

"He had been hired by Homer Martin, head of the International United Auto Workers, as general counsel for the UAW, and did some of the legal work in connection with the strike," he said.

"In 1939, he left the labor movement and eventually moved across the political spectrum, from Socialist to Democrat to Republican to right-wing Republican."

Davidow didn't get very far into the screenplay before switching to a biography, autobiography, then to a novella, then back to a screenplay, then to a stage play and finally back to a screenplay, which he has further refined, although it still constitutes only a first draft, he said.

In his work, Davidow confronts his own issues with his father, and his father's denial of his Jewish roots.

"I'm now debating whether and how to revise it to make it more appealing to an audience to get beyond a personal, cathartic exercise," he says.

"Whether or not the story ever makes it to the screen, I say, I've accomplished what I set out to do."

Davidow has long enjoyed the creative pleasure of writing, and enjoys writing fiction because unlike the fiction he did as an attorney — he doesn't have to worry about footnotes and documenting each statement.

"My challenge is to get outside of myself to a greater extent than I've been able to in the past," he said. "I realize, of course, that I can never totally free myself from my past. I'm not the sort of writer who can write about subjects that are completely unrelated to my own experience."

He said he learned three important lessons: the first draft is what the writer wants to say, getting it off his chest, but not advancing the story; every scene must advance the story; and plays typically have too much dialog for a screenplay. On the other hand, a screenplay can use flashbacks more effectively.

"What we learn in these groups is that writing doesn't change anything, it changes everything," Ovshinsky said.

"There are a lot of screenwriting books and weekend classes out there, and those are fine to get a person excited about wanting to write a screenplay. But where do you go for the learning, support and motivation required for the six months it takes to actually do it."

"Starting is easy; it's finishing your first movie script that's the challenge — and that's where we come in."

Davidow

EMU negotiates for an agreement

Eastern Michigan University is negotiating a new three-year agreement with its faculty union, the American Association of University Professors.

Officials from the university released a statement saying they are seeking to achieve a fair, competitive and economically sustainable contract that addresses the challenging economic environment brought about primarily by dramatically increasing health-care costs.

The administration said that, at the same time, it wants to recognize the quality of faculty members and their partnership in the university's success.

"The excellent faculty of Eastern Michigan University have demonstrated their commitment to providing students a high quality education," said Provost and Executive Vice President Jack Kay in a news release.

Enhancing quality is the principle we have taken in formulating our proposal for compensation and non-compensation issues. Our proposal rewards faculty and enables them to share in EMU's success in increasing enrollment.

The EMU AAUP has requested a more than 12 percent salary increase over the life of the next three-year contract. The salary increase request comes at a time when the university is facing increasing economic challenges due to dramatically higher health care costs and continued cuts in state aid.

EMU officials said the AAUP is resisting efforts to increase its share of the healthcare burden, so far refusing to increase the current premium share contribution level of zero in one of the primary health insurance options offered to employees. Under the current plan, the maximum premium share for an employee is $95 per month for a participant in the family plan.

The administration's bargaining team first presented its salary proposal to the union on Aug. 16, a date agreed upon by both parties earlier in the negotiations. The union presented its more than 12-percent increase proposal thereafter.

The administration's most recent proposal calls for an increase of 1 percent effective Jan. 1, 2011, another 1 percent in July 2011, and a 1 percent increase in July of 2012.

In an effort to have the AAUP share in the university's success, an additional 1 percent increase is being offered in each year of the agreement based on an incentive package tied to a formula that combines future enrollment growth with state funding. The formula has already been met for the first year of the contract.

An additional 1-percent increase on top of the base increase for 2011 and 2012 is possible under the formula, conceivably leading to a salary package with total increases of 1 in the first year, 2 percent in the second year and 2 percent in the third year of the contract.

Additionally, the administration has proposed a $5,000 salary increase for its most experienced faculty — full professors who have held that status for 10 or more years.

Upon meeting certain evaluation criteria, which are being discussed at the bargaining table, the faculty member would receive a salary increase of $5,000 at the beginning of the next academic year.

This salary increase would significantly enhance the salary position of qualifying Eastern faculty members relative to their counterparts at comparable institutions.

"Challenging times require innovative ideas," said Walter Kraft, vice president for communications.

Partnership is more important than ever. Our salary offers are based on the current economic environment and address the dramatic increases in health care costs that must be considered in any agreement moving forward.

Kraft said the union's salary proposal calling for a more than 12 percent increase over three years is "simply unrealistic in today's economic environment."

"We are working together in good faith to address the difficult challenges of our increasing health care costs, which rose more than 15 percent last year, from $15.7 million to $18.1 million," Kraft said.

Those costs are projected considerably higher this year due to significant medical cost inflation as well as federal health reform, which mandates coverage of adult children up to 26 years old.

"In this economy, it is imperative that we do all that we can to remain accessible and affordable for Michigan students and their families," Kraft said.

A 12 percent salary increase would result in an equally unrealistic, unpopular and unnecessary tuition increase to cover those costs. We need to continue to be responsive to the needs of our students at these challenging times."

Negotiations with the AAUP began in May. The unit represents 699 current faculty members, with an average total salary of more than $91,618.

The faculty members received a 3.75 percent increase this year. According to the AAUP's annual report on salary surveys, the average pay increase nationwide for faculty in 2009-2010 was 1.2 percent.

Eastern continues to add to the number of its faculty — the new academic year will begin with 14 additional full-time faculty over last year, a result of 43 faculty searches authorized for Fall 2010 hires.

"We remain hopeful and committed to resolving outstanding issues so that our students will get the high quality education they desire," Kraft said. "We will remain at the table until we get it done."

The administration conducted an open campus budget and health care forum on Aug. 26 to provide additional background on the economic challenges brought on by increasing health care costs and health care reform.

More information on the negotiations can be found at www.emich.edu/negotiations.

'Boeing-Boeing' continues run at Purple Rose Theatre

By Daniel Lai
Heritage Newspapers

When "Boeing-Boeing" opened at the Purple Rose Theatre in Chelsea June 17, the cast and crew didn't know how audiences would react.

More than two months later, the show is going strong and continues to cater to sold out audiences several nights a week.

"It's one of our most successful shows ever," said Alan Ribant, Purple Rose managing director.

The show is so successful that the theater's management decided to extend its run through Sept. 11, instead of closing Aug. 28, Ribant said.

"Boeing-Boeing" is a French farce that follows Bernard, played by Jeff Thomakos, who juggles relationships with three airline hostesses who have frequent layovers in Paris. All goes well until all three end up at his apartment at the same time and Bernard's well-orchestrated life unravels.

Charlyn Swarthout, who plays the German airline hostess Gretchen, said she has enjoyed her time at the Purple Rose.

"This is my third play I'm in at the Purple Rose and I understudied for five others," she said.

No stranger to the stage or to Chelsea, Swarthout first stepped on the stage at the Purple Rose in 2004 as a college student and intern at the theater.

"I didn't know where to go when I was first starting out, so I submitted my application to the Purple Rose and I was hired as an intern," she said. "I started out by mopping floors."

Swarthout, who last starred as Stella in the theater's 2009 production of Tennessee Williams' "A Streetcar Named Desire," said comparing her work in "Boeing-Boeing" to "Streetcar" is like comparing apples to oranges.

"They are polar opposite stories, but very fun to do," she said. "In 'Boeing-Boeing' there is a lot of fast-paced physical comedy, while 'Streetcar' is a very emotional drama," she said.

Swarthout shares the stage opposite of Matthew David of Flint, who plays Robert, Bernard's longtime friend. Another veteran of the Purple Rose, David was also featured in "A Streetcar Named Desire."

"The most noticeable differences for me between 'Streetcar' and 'Boeing-Boeing' is the speed and physicality. In 'Boeing-Boeing,' you are running around and doing so much, it's hard to take a breath."

Swarthout said working with director Nathan Mitchell has been a delight.

"Nate has been really good to work with," she said. "He comes from a physical acting background and he's really got a talent for those types of shows."

Nate worked to bring the cast together as one unit. No one here is trying to stand out. We're all here to do our best."

David said he has known Mitchell for several years.

"Nate is a friend, and I think since this was his directing debut, everyone wanted to do well for him. Nate didn't impose too much on the actors, if anything. He gave us free reign to play."

Both Swarthout and David said they were pleasantly surprised to learn they would be working with each other again at the Purple Rose.

"Working with someone you've worked with before gives you a sense of comfort," Swarthout said. "That whole getting to know you period is over. Trust is a huge factor in theater, and if you know someone, you can explore that camaraderie when you are working together."

David agreed.

"You have to be able to work well with the other cast members in order to maintain the show that you rehearsed," he said.

Swarthout and David said the non-stop action on stage makes for fun and interesting shows.

"In a drama, you go home tired and wake up with a stuffy head hangover because your body doesn't know you are just pretending to cry right after night," Swarthout said. "In a comedy, you go home tired and sweaty, but it's a different type of mental fatigue.

"Boeing-Boeing" has been so successful that the Purple Rose Theatre management has extended its run through Sept. 11.

"Streetcar" was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity and I am grateful to be part of something so powerful, but it's something entirely different to make people laugh, especially in this economy.

With about 20 shows left, Swarthout and David said they would definitely miss working with the theater's cast members and crew.

"You definitely miss things when a show ends, even if it's draining," David said. "I don't think there's anyone who can tell you they don't miss something a few days after the show closes."

"You get close to your co-workers and then suddenly the show ends. You also have to be able to look for work while you are working. It's always better to go into another show once one show ends because it gives you something to look forward to."

David said performing at the Purple Rose is one of his favorite venues.

There is something different at the Purple Rose. As an actor, the management, staff, and interns give you every opportunity to try and do your best," David said. "The Purple Rose takes care of its actors, and that's very uncommon. Not all theaters have the same means, and the overall goal is not always the same."

The Purple Rose has such a top notch staff here that really work hard to treat people right."

Swarthout said she also likes performing for audiences at the Purple Rose.

"Chelsea has a very generous audience," she said. "The Purple Rose does a lot of plays that other theaters might not want to do, and Chelsea audiences take a leap of faith with us."

"Boeing-Boeing" will continue through Sept. 11 at the Purple Rose. For more information, visit www.purplerosetheatre.org.

Showtimes are at 3 and 8 p.m. Wednesdays; 8 p.m. Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays; 3 p.m. Saturdays; and 2 p.m. Sundays.

MADtv's Debra Wilson to speak at Ann Arbor Library

The Ann Arbor District Library will host an appearance by actress and comedienne Debra Wilson, who is best known for her eight seasons on the Fox late night sketch comedy series, MADtv.

Wilson will provide a unique insider's view into the world of sketch comedy and will also discuss her life and multi-faceted career in both television and films.

Her talk will cover her involvement as the prototype model for Neytiri, a character in the blockbuster film "Avatar," and her most recent film, "Naked Angel," which will hold its premiere at the Michigan Theater Sept. 24.

The program will take place at the Pittsfield Branch of the library from 2 to 3:30 p.m. Sept. 26.

Wilson is MADtv's longest running cast member and appeared on that late night sketch comedy show for eight seasons, including the first.

Other TV credits include "That's So Raven," "Without A Trace," "Reno 911," "Family Guy," "American Dad," "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation," "90210," "I'm With Her," "Second Time Around" and "The Parkers."

Her film credits include "Scary Movie 4," "American History X," "B.A.P.S.," "Gridlock'd," and "Avatar."

In "Avatar," she not only did motion capture, but was the prototype model for Neytiri, played by Zoe Saldana.

Wilson's independent film credits include "Naked Angel," "Soul Mates," "9 Lives," "Lord Help Us," "Cordially Invited," "Skin Deep" and the new Andy Dick football comedy, "Division 3."

Wilson began her career studying drama at the high school of Performing Arts in New York City before attending Syracuse University, where she studied television and radio broadcasting.

Wilson began doing sketch and improv comedy with troupes as a hobby, eventually leading to a professional acting debut on the television pilot of "The Apollo Comedy Hour."

Wilson's gained experience as a series regular on "The Uptown Comedy Club" and then as national spokesperson for Burger King. She later served as sidekick, announcer and warm-up for Joan Rivers on Rivers' show "Can We Shop."

When not working, Wilson has and continues to volunteer with various nonprofits and animal rescues such as the Four Legged Friends Foundation, Linda Blair World Heart Foundation, Animal Avengers, In Defense Of Animals, Mercy For Animals, Last Chance For Animals, Farm Sanctuary, Animal Acres, The Humane Society of the United States, New Leash on Life Animal Rescue, Create Now, the Girls and Gangs Organization, Young Storytellers Program, the Jonathan Jacques Cancer Foundation and the Sickle Cell Disease Foundation of California.

Wilson is single and lives in Los Angeles with her two cats, Nala and Tabatha, and her Colombian tegu lizard, Rico Suave.

For more information on this event, contact the Library at 327-4200. The Pittsfield Branch is located at 2359 Oak Valley Drive in Ann Arbor.

'Woman Before A Glass' at Performance Network a delight

By Angie M. Lai
Special Writer

Peggy Guggenheim, the subject of Performance Network of Ann Arbor's one-woman show "Woman Before A Glass," hailed from the same family that produced the famous New York museum, though it was actually her uncle who was its founder.

Guggenheim herself became renowned for amassing a personal collection of modern art that was considered one of the most impressive in recent history.

Noted Broadway actress Naz Edwards performs the title role with direction by Malcolm Tulip.

Written by playwright Lanie Robertson.

"Woman Before A Glass" illustrates numerous colorful moments from Guggenheim's life in the form of an extended dramatic monologue. Light comedy is mixed with drama — and occasionally a few expletives — throughout four different, short scenes.

The subject matter ranges from collecting art, to sleeping with the artists themselves; Peggy's father's death on the RMS Titanic; facing discrimination against Jews; and brushes with the Nazis.

Part biography and part history lesson, the end result is an entertaining 90 minutes at the theater.

Performance Network is noteworthy for consistently presenting new and interesting material to its audiences. One-person shows are not as common in Michigan as they might be in New York or Chicago. Moreover, to present such a production is a challenge; the play has only one actress to rely on to engage audiences for the entire length of its running time.

Edwards, who played a memorable Audrey II in Performance Network's "Little Shop of Horrors," is more than capable of handling the task. Showcasing a terrific emotional range, Edwards slides easily between glib socialite and a woman haunted by the memories of lost loved ones.

Indeed, she is by far most compelling when lapsing into some of Guggenheim's darker, moments. The theater company is very fortunate to have an actress of such quality.

Monika Essen's cleverly designed set, which evokes the surrealism and abstract expressionism of the works Guggenheim so passionately collected, is also worthy of mention. It should be noted, too, that Essen herself recreated the paintings on display.

With so many quality productions this past season, theatergoers should eagerly anticipate the next.

County celebrates Women's Equality Day

By Jana Miller
Heritage Newspapers

What do Liz Brater, Verna McDaniel and Mary Sue Coleman all have in common?

They are all female leaders in Washtenaw County who paved the way for women in their positions.

Brater, the first woman mayor of Ann Arbor, and McDaniel, the first woman to serve as Washtenaw County administrator, were both present at the celebration of Women's Equality Day in Ann Arbor Aug. 23. They were joined by dozens to honor the commitment to equality.

The event was held at the Washtenaw Community College Health and Fitness Center and celebrated the 90th anniversary of the ratification of the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Guests were invited to refreshments and a fun, historical quiz about women in elected offices. Those in attendance were also given a brief history lesson on how the 19th Amendment came to pass.

But Brater and McDaniel weren't the only newsworthy women in the audience. The likes of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Sojourner Truth, Lucretia Mott, Carrie Chapman Catt and Susan B. Anthony all attended in spirit as individuals from various sponsors dressed the part.

Eunice Burns, who helped to organize the special event, came as Susan B. Anthony and shared the podium with her colleagues for some very special speeches. Each of the five women, who dressed in period garb, paid tribute to their chosen historical woman by reading a speech or biography of that person.

Regina Mason, who represented Sojourner Truth, had the audience on its feet in a standing ovation after her moving rendition of Truth's "Ain't I A Woman?" Truth recited that speech, which was adapted into a poem, at the Women's Rights Convention in Akron, Ohio, in 1852.

"That little man in black there say a woman can't have as much rights as a man 'cause Christ wasn't a woman,"

Mason recited as Truth. "Where did your Christ come from? From God and a woman. Man had nothing to do with him."

The presentation also included a reading of Ann Arbor Mayor John Hieftje's proclamation of the importance of Women's Equality Day, read by Judy Mich.

"Anyone here who hasn't already should take a look at the proclamation before they leave because it's really something," Mich said. "We did it."

The event was sponsored by about a dozen different women's organizations, which took turns sharing with the crowd their goals and progress over the years. Included in the group was the American Association of University Women's Ann Arbor branch, Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Arab American Organization, Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Girl Scouts Heart of Michigan, International Neighbors, League of Women Voters of Ann Arbor, Michigan Chinese Women Association, Women Progressive Activists, Women's Diversity Network of the Ann Arbor Area and Zeta Phi Beta Sorority.

At the presentation's end, Burns returned to the podium and invited guests to help plan another event for next year's Women's Equality Day.

Mich reminded the audience that women must continue to work toward equality.

"We all can and should vote," Mich said. "This Nov. 3 is your next opportunity to pay it forward."

Local website attracts attention

A website that connects people to local food producers and locally-sourced foods, founded by a resident of Ann Arbor, has been growing and gaining national attention.

Since the soft launch of Real Time Farms in late April, it has been steadily gaining nationwide attention, according to the founders.

Former Google employee and Ann Arbor resident Karl Rosaen started the site determined to bring a new level of accessibility and transparency to the food web with the creation of Real Time Farms.

Real Time Farms allows users to follow food from farm to fork. Users can both discover and contribute to their local food web, browse local farms and farmers' markets and, now, find locally sourced restaurants.

Real Time Farms is powered by its users. Everyone can add or edit information on their local farms and markets, and discover locally sourced restaurants in their area.

"The mission of Real Time Farms is to excite and educate people about where they can find fresh, local sources of food, bringing transparency to the food web," Rosaen said in a news release.

"We believe that when people know where their food comes from, it leads naturally to choices that are healthiest for themselves and the environment."

Rosaen said Real Time Farms uses the power of real-time images to excite and engage people in their local food web.

The Ann Arbor area food web is quickly expanding, Rosaen said. Zingerman's Roadhouse, Logan, Jolly Pumpkin Cafe & Brewery, Grange Kitchen & Bar, and SELMA Cafe showed their support for Rosaen's idea by joining on as the premiere restaurants on the Web site.

This is the first website to show users seasonal menus with each locally sourced menu item linked back to the farm that sourced it.

Recent press attention has taken the site from a locally known startup to a nationally recognized up-and-coming site. Recently, articles have appeared on the tech-

Rosaen, founder of Real Time Farms, was born and raised in Ann Arbor. He received both his bachelor's degree and his master's in computer engineering from the University of Michigan, before moving to Silicon Valley to work with Google as a senior engineer.

He returned to Ann Arbor with dreams of starting his own business. He now lives and works with his wife, sharing their house during working hours with the rest of the Real Time Farms team.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Don't forget sacrifices local merchants make

I want to express my appreciation to the generations of Flintofts and all they have given to this community. Jeff was a victim in a way of loving too much. He loved his family, he loved his friends, he loved his job, and he loved Chelsea.

Jeff loved so much that it took its toll on his life. From another business owner's perspective, he died from dedication. How do you take a 24-hour day and divide it into spending time with your wife and kids, making a living and caring for your community?

It is, as we all know and go through, life. However there tends to be a different variable in the small business owner's life. A good business owner, especially one who has carried the torch from past generations and loves their community has a very difficult time separating "the store" from "the family." The store becomes a part of our family. The community becomes part of our family.

As we would our own family, we care about you as people, as neighbors, as other children of God, not just whether you spend money or not, though that is what keeps us viable. Jeff worked lots of overtime from what I saw, based on his truck being there. He was there early mornings and a lot of times he was there very late.

The thing about working late is the deep human sacrifice that is made. For all of us that have to do it, it comes down to time away from what we hold dear outside of the job. It ultimately is the pressure of feeling like your not being a good father and husband or wife and mother because you are at work most the time trying to make other people happy and trying to survive financially. Trying to succeed at our own family relationships successfully and trying to make our customers happy at the same time is an incredible challenge, an even bigger challenge with the economy the way it is. It is the call to follow our father's footsteps. It is the challenge to do it better than our fathers.

It is raising your children in a retail store instead of at home because you are rarely at home. It is the sacrifice of the heart, calling your wife and telling her you won't be home to tuck your girls in because you have a big order due in the morning. It is the heartbreak of your child saying, "why won't you be home tonight Daddy?" knowing they wouldn't understand anyway. It is the wife doing homework at the store with the kids because she is doing her best to be supportive and helpful as well as working almost as much as you.

It involves the disappointment and pain we feel staying late, but stay at work anyway to complete the task that provides for the customers so they will come again and help you provide for your family. It is the 70 hours a week working late at night or early in the morning and, of course, every weekend. It is a way of life for most of us. We love it and we hate it.

It is not however just about our families, it is about all the families that live here or may live here in the future. It is about bringing more business to the community so the community has a great retail system.

A great retail system provides the community with a great real estate market and a great school system, a vibrant place to live, and so many more things.

It provides our children with a great place to live and grow up. The dedication and the sacrifice that most of our Chelsea retailers bring to us are done with love and dedication, beyond and deeper than most know. For your information, most of our retailers are trying hard behind the scenes, being involved in business-related activities outside of work to help keep Chelsea viable for all of us. Not to be repetitive, but just another time constraint away from our families.

Perhaps it should be considered that with the amount of money you may save leaving our community to shop elsewhere, you have for the most part sacrificed the quality of our hometown and small town service. If you want to be a number, go shop at a big box store. If you want value in all of its definition, shop locally.

We all know that a big box store can sell it cheaper due to the enormous volume that they purchase, which is not possible for the small retailer. Most retailers try to keep the prices affordable for you yet they all have to make enough of a profit to keep their doors open and make a living just like the rest of us.

Consider this: If your retailers fail, so do your property values. If you want to show your appreciation to Chelsea business owners, shop with them if you can. At least walk in and find out if they have something for you or can get it, instead of just figuring it's too expensive.

I am not so naive however to realize that we can't get everything we need here in town, just try a little harder if you can, it makes a big difference.

People's attitudes have changed in the fact that it is becoming a selfish consumer environment. I know that not all people are being that way, but the fact is that more and more people have an entitlement attitude. Don't get me wrong, I'm not judging. I am just going by the example I see at my store daily. Realize that when you walk into a retail store at the end of the day and need it for tomorrow that is fine, however also realize that the retailer is now under the gun to get it accomplished for you at the sacrifice of, maybe having to change his plans for the evening with family or sacrificing some other way in his life for you.

I also understand that to a certain point that is what retailers do, but if it is something that could still be accomplished with some forethought on the customer's part, it would be helpful in many ways.

Jeff Flintoft did all he could do for his family and for the community with class. He gave and received love and joy, but also endured the stress that goes with being a small businessman. Jeff received the love of the community and gave his heart back to the community he loved.

Consider all these things the next time you go into your local retailer. You need them as much as they need you. Shop local.

Reward offered for hit-and-run tips

I just learned about the hit-and-run incident involving local cyclist Jason Lummis. My thoughts and prayers are with him, his family and friends.

I am sickened by the news that the motorist left the scene with Lummis fighting for his life on the side of the road. And I am troubled by the fact that Lummis is just one of many cyclists who have been hit this year in the United States and the motorists have fled. This is simply deplorable and must stop.

We have to let motorists know that it is unacceptable to hit a cyclist and leave him or her in the road to suffer. There appears to be a growing number of motorists around the world who are choosing to run from their incidents only making matters worse for themselves and most certainly their victims.

One way to stop motorists from choosing to run is to make running less attractive. Judges need to enforce the maximum penalties available to them by law. In addition we can offer rewards leading to the arrest and conviction of violators.

Motorists need to understand that if they run, an all-out effort will be made to bring them to justice. For this purpose, I would like to offer a reward of $500 for information leading to the arrest of the motorist who hit Jason and left him on the side of the road bleeding.

I will only need confirmation from your police department that the information provided lead to the arrest of the person(s) involved.

These roads are "our" roads and we must learn to share our roads in ways that allow all users to travel safely. This kind of motorist behavior is terribly wrong and should concern all members of our communities and move us to act. If we don't act, I fear the worse.

DDA ignores residents

I am a tax paying member to the Chelsea Downtown Development Authority. They have not acknowledged my concern. This infuriates me. I have read the 1975 state law regarding DDAs. Our DDA is not functioning legally. What I am finding out is that we have a non-democratic quasi-private agency that is deciding the future of Chelsea using public funding or "socializing the costs" with no taxpayer accountability.

They don't seem to think having bylaws are important. The way the DDA structure is, it doesn't really matter if a majority of the Chelsea residents disagreed with their future plans, and they disagree. All it takes are six votes amongst themselves and they get what they want. They get a lifetime term to do this, even though the state law dictates only three-year terms.

Then there is the uncertainty of the cost overruns for this contaminated site (Longworth properties). No problem. The city will take care of that through a mill increase to the DDA taxpayers.

Theoretically, most of downtown could be converted into a giant parking lot (i.e. like the southern corridor) if they do not start to follow their own mission statement and the state law that demands preservation.

This group is behaving illegally and I have inquired with the state Attorney General's Office as to how can this organization can continue to function in such a rogue manner. Furthermore, how can old Chelsea families like Hydlauff, Winans, Flintoft and Lindauer not realize that key to our future is its beautiful old buildings. These multi-generational families are destroying their own community. I have spent my own money, time and commitment to help preserve this city's history, and all I keep seeing is a disdain for our town's history by those that are a part of its history. What a disgrace and a shame.

Finally, the last article in the Chelsea Standard regarding the Longworth buildings was full of lies by the DDA. Where did they come up with $3 million to fix those buildings? Builders have told us that it will take up to $800,000 to stabilize the buildings. Since when has the DDA worked with Preservation Chelsea? All they have shared with us is their zeal for demolition.

Why should the historical people in town work with the DDA when they never worked with us? How can there be private investment when the private investor was asked to leave the public DDA meeting? Why hasn't the DDA told the public of the serious dangers to the local residents about disturbing the contamination? Why am I paying taxes to this DDA?

An open invitation to local businesses

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Newspapers

It wasn't my intention to see Mary Ann Falzon or Andy Kudwa removed from their positions at the Dexter Area Chamber of Commerce as a result of my column published last week ("Doing Dexter" - social project a noble effort but falls flat").

Although I'm guessing that the DACC has even higher standards for their initiatives and programs than even a critic like myself, or the people who initially brought the Twitter feed to my attention.

Regardless of the outcome, my offer still stands to help publicize and participate in making the "Doing Dexter" project a success.

While we have the attention of the Dexter area business community, I feel like I would be remiss in not inviting each and every participant to work with Heritage Newspapers in providing even better business coverage in our papers.

There is a lot of cynicism towards local papers like ours writing business articles. There's a feeling that it more often than not ends up being a puffed up free advertisement devoid of any sort of value to the reader.

I believe that I can meet the businesses halfway if they'll do the same to create some truly meaningful business-oriented articles.

What I usually try to do with a business story, such as the one in this week's edition about the Red Brick Kitchen & Bar, is introduce those business owners to the community and really try to get at the core of who they are, why they're opening their business and why they're doing so in Dexter or whatever community they've chosen to open their doors in.

On top of having five years of community journalism experience under my belt, I was once an employee of Crain Communications working as an intern for Automotive News.

I believe that if given the opportunity I can grasp the mechanical and market issues that local businesses face, and I also believe that our readers as well as fellow business owners would like to read about such things.

Before my column was published last week I had a very interesting conversation with Mike Jackson, owner of Vogel's & Foster's in Chelsea.

I called to talk to him about the Longworth buildings and why the Chelsea Downtown Development Authority was proceeding to demolish two of those structures.

After my questions on that matter were exhausted, we began meandering a bit on the topic of where he was talking to me from - a footwear expo in Nov.

He began telling me about his initial thoughts on carrying footwear at his store and some of the challenges inherent in doing so.

Being an independent store owner, Jackson would have to reach an agreement with distributors that involved a low volume of inventory provided at a competitive price that distributor's typically only offer to companies that own multiple stores.

I think there's gigantic potential for all businesses in both Chelsea and Dexter to learn from Jackson's experiences, provided he shares them for an article.

Of course it's a great opportunity for him to advertise these new products that are in his store, but it's also a chance to explore product supply, distribution deals and the place of small localized businesses that make up these beloved downtowns in the greater marketplace.

It's time to not just draw attention to local businesses but for those businesses to begin sharing ideas. Each of you small business owners is in it together, and you're going to sink or swim as such.

If these newspapers can be a platform for information sharing, I would be honored to help out.

MINISTERIAL MESSAGE

My name on a gravestone?

As I went jogging through a cemetery a few months ago, I took note of some of the names and dates on the gravestones. And I thought, "I wonder if those people ever contemplated the idea that someday they would be buried here, with their names on the stones." And then the thought occurred to me, "Someday my name will be on one of those stones."

I have to admit, that's a scary thought. We conduct our lives on this earth as if we expect to be around forever. Even as a Christian pastor, the fact that my life is going to come to an end isn't something that I dwell on, or care to dwell on.

I read about eternal life in the Bible, and I preach about it all the time. And much of the time, to my shame, I have to admit that it's just nice-sounding words, words that I take for granted because I've heard and spoken them all my life. I strongly suspect the same is true for many churchgoers - even if they are sincere Christians.

I have to believe it's quite different for a dying person. I have to believe the words and promise of "eternal life" are something any dying person in their right mind would grab onto and long for. After all, what else is there?

Thank God, in numerous statements God's Son Jesus promised eternal life: "My sheep hear my voice; I know them, and they follow me. I give them eternal life" (John 10:27-28). "I am the resurrection and the life. He who believes in me will live, even though he dies; and whoever lives and believes in me will never die" (John

If there is no eternal life, then nothing else will matter once our name is on that gravestone. Memories of us, as well as our achievements, will all be meaningless and eventually be forgotten by others. Woody Allen is quoted as saying, "I don't want to become immortal through my work, I want to become immortal through not dying." That's a very sensible statement. Thank God, there is a way to make this wish come true: By believing in Jesus Christ as your savior. Blessed are those who ponder this and value God's message of eternal life before they are actually dying.

Sooner than I care to think, I know that my name will be on a gravestone, and that's the end. No, it's not! That's only the beginning, the beginning of a new and better life that lasts forever. Really, this is why I'm a Christian: I want to live forever, and I'm convinced that no one but Jesus can make that happen.

The Rev. Mark Porinsky is pastor at Faith Lutheran Church in Dexter.

DARR

Co-founder Teresa Walsh agreed.

"Jennifer exemplifies what Silpada is all about - the best of the best," she said. "We couldn't be more proud to share in this milestone of achievement with her."

Before discovering Silpada, Darr only wore gold jewelry and had no interest in changing to sterling silver. So, in 2004 when Darr received an invitation to a Silpada Party, she only agreed to attend to support her friend who was hosting the party.

However, the sparkling silver conquered Darr's gold loyalty and she decided to book a party. Upon learning about Silpada's business opportunity, she decided it would be a good fit for her and her family's busy schedule.

Darr officially joined the Silpada team in August 2004, and since then has accomplished many Silpada goals. Darr holds the title in Silpada's Hall of Fame for earning the "Career Recruiter" award in the shortest amount of time - 685 days. She has received several year-end awards and also served as a national conference trainer in 2006.

LIBRARY LINKS

Students can learn better with library tools

By Karen Persello
Guest Writer

Are you ready to go back to school? School can be great fun, but it also can be a challenge. With the Chelsea District Library on your side, students and teachers can get a head start on schoolwork, and participate in great programs that bring fun to your week.

Drozd

Chelsea youth and teens have incredible diverse resources at the Chelsea District Library. Students have access to the best of books and electronic databases, and teachers have access to resources that expand the classroom.

Kids' resources go beyond the many wonderful books, CDs, and DVDs that the library carries. Chelsea youth can get access to electronic databases on a variety of subjects provided by the library and the Michigan Electronic Library.

You can find articles from current magazines and newspapers, science and technology databases, country reports, opposing viewpoints, and even receive online foreign language instruction, called Mango, all from our computers. Most of these resources can also be accessed from your home computer.

Students can have access to over 30 computers at the library, with five strictly for children, and five for teens. Each computer has Internet capability and a package of Microsoft Office programs, including Word, Excel and PowerPoint.

Our new service, Overdrive, contains downloadable audio-books, e-books, and music. The library also offers study space and a place to meet for group projects.

Teachers and parents can also find great resources at the library. Teachers are eligible for Chelsea District Library cards with extended borrowing privileges. In addition to our print resources, our website features websites and databases that augment sources teachers have in the classroom. Visit services, teacher resources on our website to find out more information.

The library is offering two very special programs for kids and families this fall. The first is Introduction to Comics Storytelling, held from 2 to 3:30 p.m. Nov. 7 for ages 8 to 14, with the Chelsea District Library's artist-in-residence, Jerzy Drozd. Drozd is a comics illustrator and cartoonist, who loves to tell stories using comics. His workshop will explore visual storytelling and will help you bring your characters to life. Materials will be provided, but participants can bring their own pencils and sketchbooks. Registration is required.

The second special program is the Harry Potter Party held after library hours from 6 to 9 p.m. Nov. 5. We are celebrating the opening of the next to last "Harry Potter" movie with a huge party. There will be wizard rock music, a challenging trivia contest, food, crafts, prizes, a costume/look-a-like contest and "Name the Bertie Boits Every Flavor Bean" contest.

The highlight of the evening will be a stupendous magic show by a very special wizard. Before there was Dumbledore, there was a wizard by the name of Merlin, and he'll be here. Registration is required.

Fall holidays are being celebrated at the library with several events marking Halloween and Thanksgiving. Our fifth annual Chills in Chelsea Halloween Party for ages 7 to 12 will be 6 to 8 p.m. Oct. 27, and will include scary stories, doing creepy crafts and walking through "Haunted KidSpot." Registration is required. Don't forget our two drop-in evening storytimes, the Not-Too-Scary Halloween Storytime (come in costume) at 6:30 p.m. Oct. 28 and the Thanksgiving Storytime (with a live turkey) at 6:15 p.m. Nov. 23.

This fall is also full of great library activities for teens, especially teens looking for more opportunities to volunteer. MADLAB, the teen library advisory and leadership group, will meet once a month to talk about opportunities to help with events or special projects around the library. Pizza will be served, and ideas will be thrown around regarding everything from the seating in Teenspace to the teen lock-in held in October.

The Rockin' Lock-in, from 7 to 10 p.m. Oct. 22, will celebrate the end of Teen Read Week, a national event promoting fun reads for teens. Teens must register in advance for this SRSly sanctioned event. No walk-ins will be allowed. Local bands that wish to perform at the lock-in can contact youth/teen librarian Edith Burney. There will be a DJ, dancing and a gaming room.

Another aspect of Teen Read Week is a national teen reading contest. Teens who pledge to read five books between October and April will be eligible to compete for a chance to attend Wrestlemania XXVII. There will also be a special creative competition that could earn a teen a trip for two to Wrestlemania XXVII, and earn the Chelsea District Library $2,000, which would go towards teen collections and programming. See the Teen Blog on the library website, www.chelsea.lib.mi.us for more details.

For more information or to register for programs, call 475-8732 or go to www.chelsea.lib.mi.us and click on the calendar tab.

Modafferi to perform

Gregory resident Frank Modafferi will entertain audiences in grand 1960s fashion with his one-man show at the Inverness Inn restaurant and pub in Chelsea at 5:30 p.m. Sept. 8.

Modafferi will perform a musical tribute to Frank Sinatra, Louis Armstrong, Dean Martin and Elvis Presley.

The show is free and open to the public. The Inverness Inn is located at 1396 North Territorial Road in Chelsea. For more information, call 1-734-475-1516.

why we put dog poop in plastic baggies

- Our neighbors like us to.
- It makes our dogs feel important.
- It keeps the poop from being washed into the storm drains.

Select them all, and it's "two paws up" for you!

Truth is, most of us pick up after our dogs as a courtesy to our neighbors. Plus it makes that backyard barbecue all the more enjoyable.

But there's another important reason to pick up after your pet. When pet waste is left behind, it washes into storm drains and ditches. From there, it heads straight to your local river. No filters, no cleansing. Swimming, anyone?

Help protect water quality. Stoop, scoop, and drop those little baggies in the trash. Then give yourself a nice pat. You deserve it.

FOGGY WINDOW OR CATARACT?

One early symptom of a cataract is a blurring of the vision that makes everything appear as if you're looking through a foggy window or cloudy piece of glass. Left untreated, the outlook is dim. But if detected early, we can help you manage cataracts and explore treatment options such as new eyeglasses, magnification aids or Intraocular Lens (IOL) implants. The first step to early detection is a comprehensive eye examination in our office. Call and schedule an appointment today.

The 73rd annual Chelsea avenue to reconnect with old friends, visit with family and, for some, enjoy the last week of free time before school starts in September.

"I've been coming to the fair for years," Missy Humphries of Kalamazoo said. "I grew up in Chelsea, and now I bring my kids back every year."

Humphries said she plans a visit to her mother, who still lives in Chelsea, to coincide with fair week.

"The kids look forward to it every year," she said. "It's small enough that the kids can wander around and I don't have to worry about them."

"It's small enough that the kids can wander around and I don't have to worry about them."

"We've been coming for about 10 years," Beth Boyer said. "It's a nice small town fair."

Andrew Milkey and Kayla Reardon, students at Dexter High School, said they enjoyed the fair.

"I've been coming since I was a little kid," Milkey said.

He said his favorite event is the tractor pulls.

"Last year I exhibited my lambs for judging," he said.

Reardon said this was her first year at the fair.

"I thought it would be different. I like it," she said.

Milkey said he likes the animal exhibits and the fair games.

Ally Neelis of Jackson also attended the fair for the first time.

"The rides are awesome," she said. "Everyone is nice and welcoming, too."

Dede Scudder of Grass Lake said she tries to attend the fair every year.

"My kids go to Chelsea schools, so it's nice to be able to get them out here to support the community," she said.

Scudder said her favorite aspect of the fair is seeing her children's faces light up with excitement on the rides.

"They have a permanent grin when they get on the rides," she said.

Scudder said she is impressed with the fair this year and the variety of different activities.

Barb Cole of Stockbridge brought her granddaughter to the fair for the first time.

"She wanted to come and ride on the rides," Cole said. "I just like to sit and watch all the excitement. It's fun to be around a lot of young people."

Kids' parade fun for all ages

Youth usher in annual community fair in downtown Chelsea

By Krystle Dunham
Special Writer

For Lauren Franklin and her family, coming to the Chelsea Community Fair has become a new tradition.

Franklin of Stockbridge and her husband Brian first brought their 4-year-old daughter Kiara and 2-year-old daughter Kylie to the fair last year, and plan on now coming yearly.

"We were so impressed with the sense of community and the atmosphere at the fair last year. We skipped the Ingham fair to come here," she said.

Franklin and her family decided to start off fair week by participating in the annual kids' parade on Aug. 24.

Kiara and Kylie dressed up as fairies for the parade and had a wagon designed with colorful paper flowers and a sign that said "Kiara and Kylie's Fairy Wonderland."

"Kiara loves parades. She came up with the idea for the float," Franklin said.

Kiara and Kylie received second place for their float.

The kids' parade features young children between the ages of 3 and 14 with decorated bikes, wagons, etc. who process through downtown to the fairgrounds.

The parade began at the Common Grill and traveled down Middle Street to Grant Street, to Pierce Street and onto Taylor Street across Old US-12 and down Chelsea-Manchester Road to the fairgrounds.

Local resident Jennifer Parisho said the kids' parade is a great way to kick-off the fair. Parisho brought her 4-year-old daughter Tori and a couple other children that attend the Rainbow Child Development Center in Chelsea to the event.

"The parade is something fun for them to do," Parisho said.

Parisho said she thought Tori was most excited about the fair rides especially the Ferris wheel and the demolition derby.

"The fair is a yearly ritual for us. You can always look forward to running into friends and old classmates," she said.

Susan Thoms of Chelsea said she looks forward to the fair tradition each year.

"We enjoy the kids' parade. We enjoy seeing what all the kids come up with for their costumes and floats," she said.

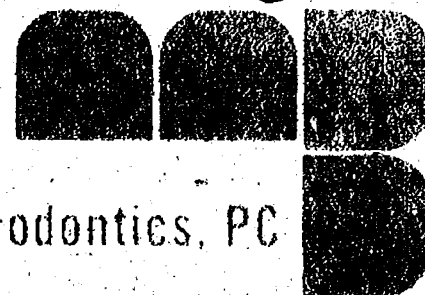

Thoms and her husband Steven brought their sons Ben and David and their daughter Katherine along with her friend Katie Leissner to the parade.

Thoms said her son Ben is in the middle school band, which also brings her and her family downtown for the parade.

GREAT START READINESS PROGRAM

The Great Start Readiness Program is a free state-funded preschool program offered by the Chelsea School District. Children in this program must be 4 years old by December 1 of the current school year. The child/family must meet two of the eligibility factors and reside in the Chelsea School District. GSRP is taught by a certified teacher and a credentialed associate teacher. The program meets four days per week and includes parental support, resources, and home visits. Parents are encouraged and welcomed to participate in classroom activities.

Chelsea's School and Nutrition Staff

Chelsea's Food and Nutrition staff knows that good nutrition plays a key role in raising high-achieving, healthy kids. We're dedicated to providing excellent quality, low fat, low sugar meals that include plenty of whole grains and fresh fruits and veggies for all of our student guests. Check out our menus on the school district web site. Make on-line deposits and monitor what your kids are eating too. We always appreciate your questions, feedback and suggestions. Please call or email Food and Nutrition Services, Sue Gregg at 433-2246 or sgregg@chelsea.k12.mi.us anytime.

Welcome to the 2010-2011 School Year

There are changes in all bus routes and times for 2010-2011. Specific bus route information and forms can be obtained on the Chelsea School District website, <http://www.chelsea.k12.mi.us> under transportation.

There will no longer be individual bus stops in the city of Chelsea; however, areas around Old US 12 will continue to have group stops. City students can walk to the nearest school location and take a transfer bus to their school building. All students must be in their bus line at the school transfer sites by 7:35am.

You can find your specific bus route number by first accessing the Chelsea roads folder to determine the specific bus route number. When a time is entered next to a road traveled in the route description, the bus is scheduled to pick up students on that particular road. If no time is printed next to a road, that road is a travel road only. TA indicates a bus turn around. All students are required to be at their bus stop five (5) minutes in advance of bus arrival times. All rural stops are picked up and delivered in the same order, i.e., first on in the morning, then first off in the afternoon. In fairness to all students this policy is enforced to help keep the routes as short as possible. Crossovers are prohibited on many roads in the district and students must board the bus on their side of the road.

Parents are reminded that due to safety requirements for stops or route directions, not all youngsters are picked up at their driveway. Rural routes may now have hub stops. Parents are expected to transport their students to and from these locations.

A parent or designated adult (or 6th grade or older sibling or babysitter) must meet all kindergartners and first graders at the bus stop. Parents or designated adults are expected to provide for the safety, supervision, and shelter for students at all bus stop locations.

All students will be picked up at their assigned stop and delivered back to that same stop unless a parent or guardian indicates need for a second permitted riding location. Any student requiring transportation to or from a daycare location or any alternate transportation site must complete the alternate transportation form. The form and approvals from both the sending parent/guardian as well as the receiving adult must be on file in the Transportation Office prior to the student riding to or from the requested location.

AM transfers will be dropping off at all schools and doing direct transfers to the other school buildings. Students should be in position to board a bus at any school at 7:35am to go to another building. Remember only buses are allowed in the bus area around Chelsea High School, Beach Middle School, and North Creek Elementary during drop-off and pick-up times.

PM transfers will continue to take place at Beach Middle School. Homebound buses are scheduled to leave Beach at 3:20pm. Following the PM transfer, students may ride a bus to another school. Please note afternoon home buses tend to run later the first couple weeks of school as students learn which buses to board. Please be patient during this learning period and please be on time to meet the bus so as not to delay the other students. To assist your child with their transfer, be sure they know their home address and bus number. All young students and new students should have their address, parent contact information, and bus information available on their back packs or in their planners.

Questions may be directed to our office at 433-2274. All transportation forms can be obtained at the bus office or on the Chelsea School District website. Forms can be returned directly to the bus garage between 6:00am and 4:00pm, by e-mail, or fax (433-2217).

We wish each and every one of our Chelsea students a happy 2010-2011 school year!

Sincerely,

Mrs. Chris Frayer & Mrs. Gina Paulsen

Chelsea 26, Huron 7

Bulldogs drop Ann Arbor Huron in opener at EMU

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Newspapers

Ann Arbor Huron kicked off the season on Saturday. Unfortunately for the River Rats, Chelsea's Matt Gillespie returned it for a touchdown.

Gillespie took the opening kickoff 86 yards for a score and the Bulldogs never looked back in a convincing 26-7 victory over Huron in the first of two games Saturday in the Big Day Prep Showdown at Eastern Michigan University.

Despite not being at their best - the Bulldogs had nine penalties for 76 yards - Chelsea dominated on both sides of the ball throughout the game. Chelsea came into the season looking to replace the brilliance of running back Nick Hill and didn't appear to miss a step for a program that has made the playoffs 11 straight years.

"We have a chance to be really good on defense and I think that's probably going to be our identity," said Chelsea coach Brad Bush whose defense held the River Rats to nine first downs, 217 yards of total offense and just 1 of 14 on third-down opportunities. "Obviously, we had too many penalties, but we'll take the win."

While the Bulldogs did make some uncharacteristic mental mistakes, including several unsportsmanlike conduct penalties, many of the miscues and missteps can be chalked up to opening-game jitters. There were plenty of things to like from the Chelsea side of the field.

"It's early in the season and we wanted to play a lot of guys," Bush said. "It was good that we were able to get a lot of guys in there in the second half. And I was really pleased with our defense. We need to do a better job on offense of not shooting ourselves in the foot. We had too many turnovers and too many penalties. Those 15-yard penalties are killers."

After leading Huron to its first winning season since 2002, Huron coach Corey Gildersleeve's spread offense never got on track and at times looked both confused and over-matched.

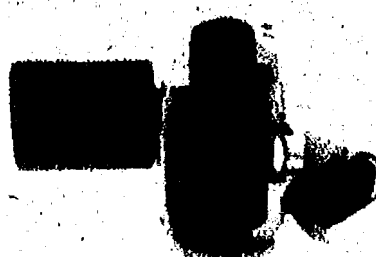

"I was very proud of our defense and the way they

GAME DAY: Monroe (0-1) at Chelsea (1-0)

When: 7 p.m., Friday at Chelsea High School
Chelsea: The Bulldogs are coming off a 26-7 win over AA Huron in the Big Day Prep Showdown. Chelsea looked solid on defense but turnovers and penalties kept the Bulldogs offense from running up the score.

Monroe: The Trojans lost their opener 21-12 to Adrian but this game was close until the final minutes. Leading 14-12, Adrian scored with 5:35 to play to put it away. Penalties and turnovers proved costly for Monroe. The Trojans, who are coming off a 3-6 season, are coached by longtime Carleton Airport coach Eric Redmond.

Monroe player to watch: Sam Quinn rushed for 123 yards for Monroe in the loss to Adrian.

Chelsea player to watch: Berkley Edwards. He scored his first of what should be many varsity touchdowns on Saturday.

Outlook: Playing at EMU to open the season is special, but it also has its distractions. Expect the Bulldogs to cut down on the mental mistakes and put on a much more Chelsea-like performance before the home folks.

New coach has Bulldogs swinging for big year

Chelsea girls' golf coach Trisha McKim jumps in a golf cart. But before heading over to the practice green at Reddeman Farms she fires off a few parting comments to her freshmen girls swinging away at the driving range on this warm, sunny afternoon.

"Keeping working on those shots. I can already see improvement," she says before putting her foot down on the peddle and speeding away.

Life for the 23-year-old McKim is all of a sudden in the fast lane and she's loving every second of it.

"I'm having a blast," she says. "I just got hired as a part-time kindergarten teacher in the Chelsea school district. What a great district to get a job in. And what a great group of girls to be coaching."

They call this a win-win.
"We looked a long time for a coach," says Don Triveline, who has been involved in Chelsea and junior golf for years and helped track down

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Wolverines

Michigan football always seems to come down to things we know, things we don't know and things we are afraid to know. So let's strap on a helmet and look at Saturday's game with Connecticut and the upcoming season for Coach Rich Rodriguez and the Michigan Wolverines.

Let's start in the backfield. We know that the Wolverines have three very talented quarterbacks in Denard Robinson, Tate Forcier and Devin Gardner. What we don't know is which one will start and which one will finish Saturday's game. All three may even play.

What we are afraid to know is how this uncertainty will effect the offense and how many mistakes Rodriguez will give a player before he pulls him. Having the starter worried that if he throws one incomplete pass he will be on the bench is not a good thing.

Depth is not the problem in the backfield on the other side of the ball. We know that the secondary wasn't exactly filled with talent and experience when practice first started. What we don't know is how are they going to replace Troy Woolfolk, who will miss the entire season. What we are afraid to know is how many yards a good passing team can rack up against Big Blue.

The "Rich Rod" era hasn't exactly gone very well. This program seems to get just as many bad headlines off the field than it does on the field - and that's saying something. But let's start the season with a little optimism. A little hope.

U-M needs to get off to a strong start and for the time being at least erase all the negativity and doubt that surrounds this program. This starts on Saturday against a Connecticut team that won't be a push-over.

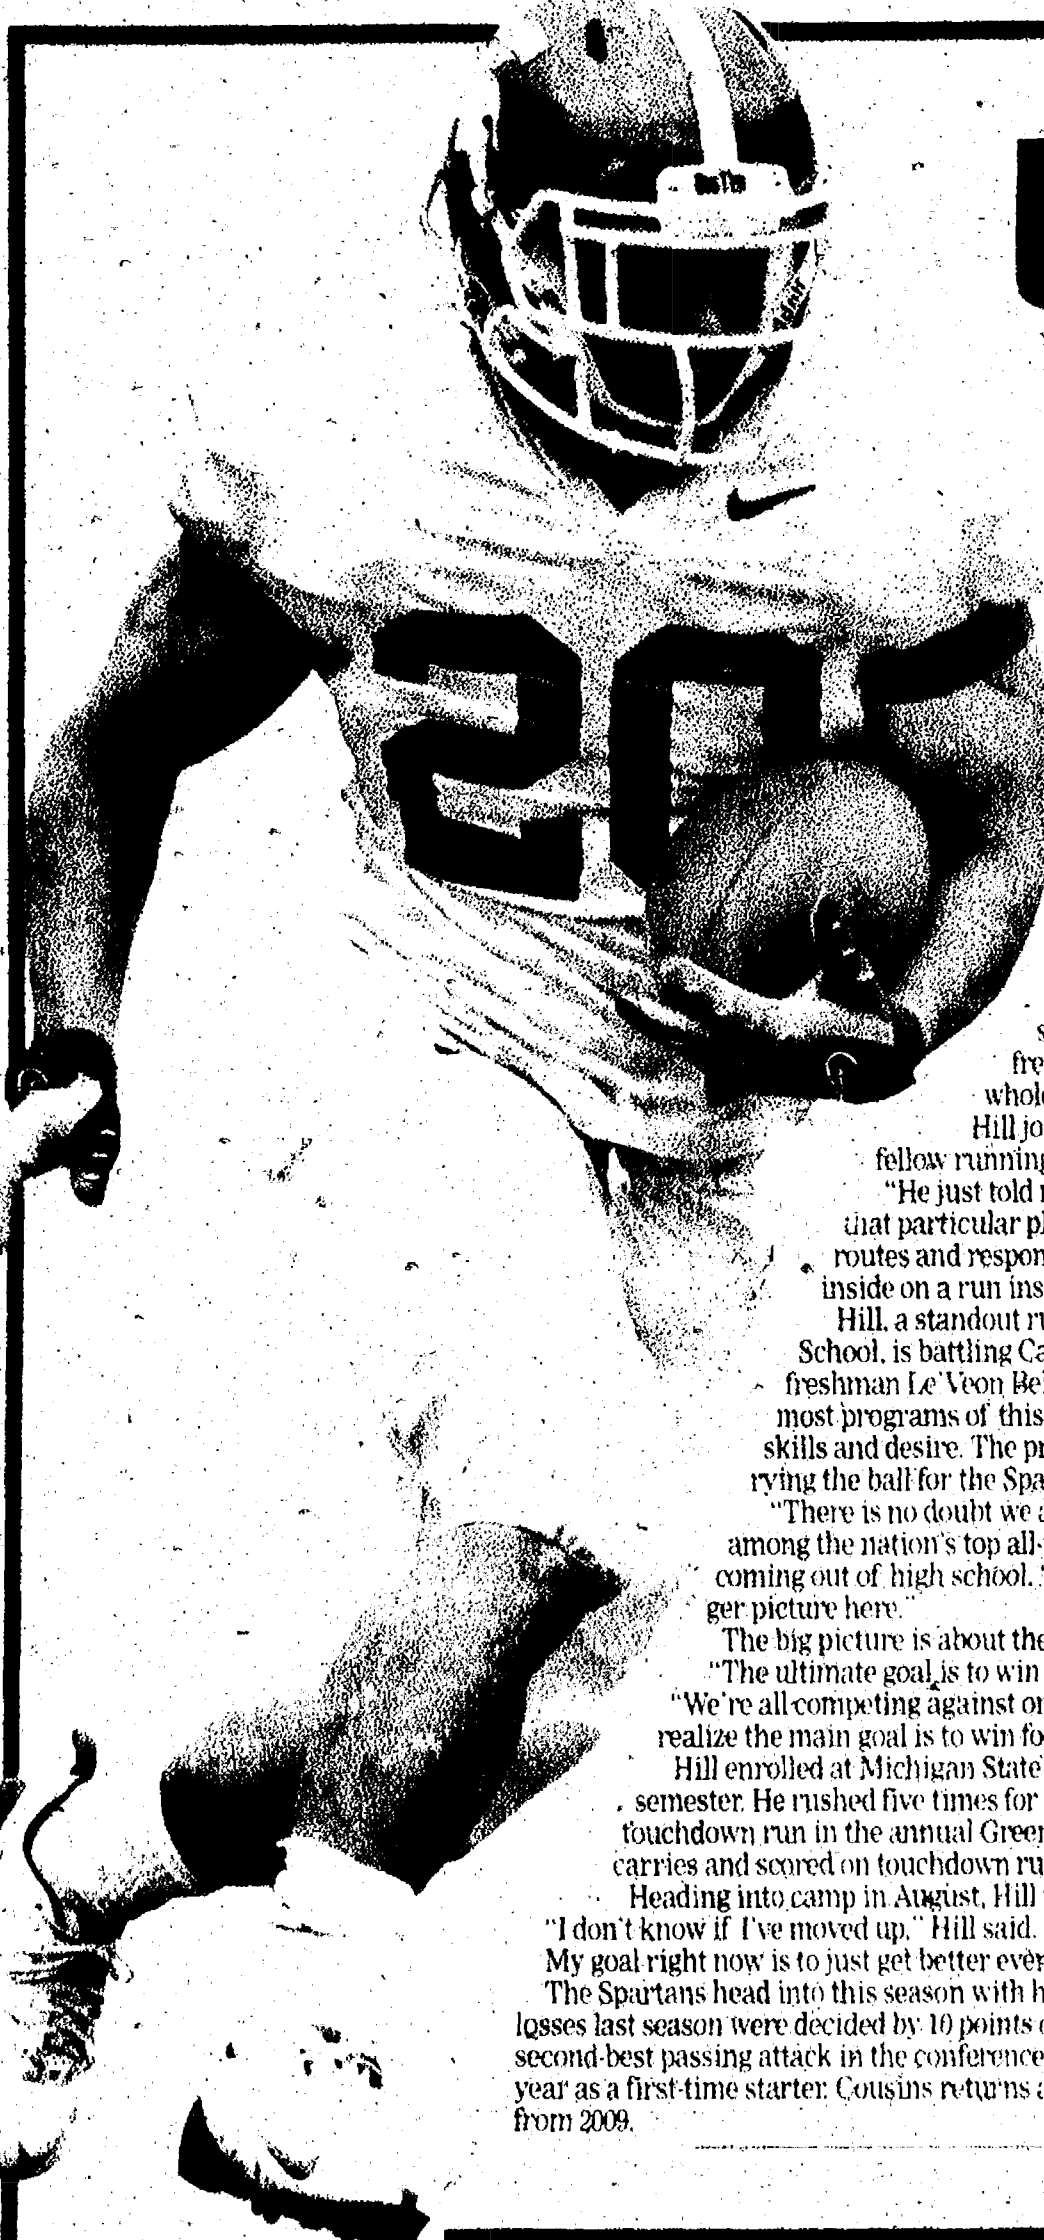

But running the table in September is a must for this football team and certainly is possible with only Notre Dame a formidable challenge on the road. But October is where this team really needs to excel in order to return to Big Ten relevance.

We will know if Michigan is relevant and headed to a bowl by the end of October. Many would sign up for 6-2 right now.

And what about Rodriguez? We do know the coach hasn't exactly earned a spot on the Mt. Rushmore of Michigan football. What we don't know is what he has built for this year. What we are afraid to know is what he has built for this year.

Yes, U-M football is at the crossroads. Like Tom Hanks at the end of "Cast Away" the Wolverines could go down a number of roads. If they pick the wrong one, expect to see Rodriguez sent off to a deserted island where even a Russian freighter won't bother to stop and pick him up.

Freshman from Chelsea facing tough competition in Michigan State backfield

Heritage Newspapers

Michigan State freshman running back Nick Hill remembers a time during a recent practice in which he messed up. Mistakes happen to even seasoned veterans late in the year, let alone a young freshman early in training camp trying to learn a whole new system - and a whole new way of life.

Hill jogged off the field and was immediately greeted by fellow running back Larry Caper.

"He just told me which route I was supposed to adjust to on that particular play," Hill says. "We talk all the time about different routes and responsibilities on certain plays and about maybe cutting inside on a run instead of outside."

Hill, a standout running back for four seasons at Chelsea High School, is battling Caper as well as sophomore Edwin Baker and fellow freshman Le'Veon Bell for playing time in the Spartans' backfield. Like most programs of this caliber, it's crowded back there with incredible skills and desire. The prize is playing time...they all want their shot at carrying the ball for the Spartans.

"There is no doubt we are competing with one another," says Hill, ranked among the nation's top all-purpose backs by multiple scouting publications coming out of high school. "We all want the chance to play. But there is a bigger picture here."

The big picture is about the Big Ten.

"The ultimate goal is to win the Big Ten and go to the Rose Bowl," Hill says.

"We're all competing against one another but we also help each other because we realize the main goal is to win football games."

Hill enrolled at Michigan State on Jan. 11, 2010 for the beginning of the spring semester. He rushed five times for 51 yards, including a 31-yard gain and a 3-yard touchdown run in the annual Green-White spring game. He also gained 79 yards on 17 carries and scored on touchdown runs of 1 and 4 yards in the April 17 scrimmage.

Heading into camp in August, Hill was penciled in at No. 4 on the MSU depth chart.

"I don't know if I've moved up," Hill said. "It's not something we have talked about. My goal right now is to just get better every day and practice hard."

The Spartans head into this season with high expectations. Six of Michigan State's seven losses last season were decided by 10 points or fewer and quarterback Kirk Cousins led the second-best passing attack in the conference, throwing for 2,680 yards and 19 touchdowns last year as a first-time starter. Cousins returns as does five of MSU's top six pass-catching threats from 2009.

Eagles looking to reach new heights

By Jonathan Knight
Special Writer

The Eastern Michigan University football team is looking forward to Saturday. After having high expectations going into the 2009 campaign, with then-first year coach Ron English at the helm, the Eagles were unable to cash in on English's experience as a coach in the Big Ten (University of Michigan) and with the Big East (University of Louisville). A season full of close calls and missed opportunities ended with the Eagles as one of only two winless teams in the country in the FBS division at 0-12. English and the Eagles will look to get the team's first win under his direction when it takes on the Army Black Knights at Rynearson Stadium on Saturday. EMU lost 27-14 to Army last year.

The EMU offense will be driven by a two-quarterback system as true sophomore Alex Gillett and redshirt freshman Devontae Payne will alternate.

Gillett is a dual-threat QB who was thrown into the mix last season after then-starter Andy Schmitt was sidelined for the year with a torn ACL. Payne, who stands 6-6 and weighs 231 pounds, threw for almost 4,300 yards in three seasons as the starting quarterback at his high school in Cleveland. The duo should be able to keep the Eagles competitive.

In the backfield, senior running back Dwayne Priest will likely handle the bulk of the duties. Last season he was EMU's leading rusher, and has improved his totals each of his first three years.

While the receiving core isn't as strong as those in the past, Nick Olds and Kinsman Thomas, both sophomores, will probably receive the bulk of the catches from the Gillett-Payne duo.

On the opposite side of the ball, the defense has done a lot to improve the woeful run-stopping of last season.

Defensive back Latarrius Thomas adds an anchor for the Green and White. He comes to Eastern after a highly successful career at Louisville as a starter for most of his time there.

Another highly touted defensive player is redshirt freshman transfer Marlon Pollard, who came to EMU from UCLA.

There are still some holes to fill in the front seven, but veteran linebackers like Herb Waits and Marcus English should mesh well with the skilled defensive backs and seasoned defensive linemen.

If the Eagle's get off the schlide early, with a win against Army, it could set the tone for the season.

Spartans

With six starters returning on both offense and defense this season, Michigan State football looks to improve upon last year's 6-7 overall record and 4-4 mark in the Big Ten. In Spartan coach Mark Dantonio's fourth season, MSU is focusing on closing out games and moving up in the conference standings this year.

Last season, the Spartans, 22-17 under Dantonio, lost five games in which they had four quarter leads, including dropping three contests by three points or less. Michigan State has played in three straight bowl games since Dantonio took over the reins of the program and the Spartans are hoping a string of nationally recognized recruiting classes will be a springboard to future success.

Returning to lead MSU offensively will be junior quarterback Kirk Cousins (6-foot-3, 202 pounds). Last season, Cousins finished 198-of-328 passing for 2,680 yards and 19 touchdowns. In the backfield with Cousins will be sophomore standouts running backs Larry Caper (5-11, 220) and Edwin Baker (5-9, 208). The duo combined for just under 1,000 yards rushing last year. Michigan State returns the bulk of its receiving corps which some Big Ten pundits call the best in the conference. A potential concern heading into the 2010 season will be the development of the offensive line, particularly the right side where two new starters will emerge.

On the other side of the ball, the Spartans return senior line-backer Greg Jones (6-1, 240) last year's Big Ten Defensive Player of the Year. Jones, a first team Associated Press All-American, spearheads a strong linebacker group which also includes three-year starter senior Eric Gordon (6-0, 232). Up front, MSU returns a solid unit led by defensive tackles sophomore Jerel Worthy (6-3, 305), a freshman All-American last season, along with sophomore Blake Treadwell (6-3, 277) and junior Kevin Pickelman (6-4, 285) and ends sophomore Tyler Hoover (6-7, 260) and true freshman William Gholston (6-7, 250). The biggest question mark defensively will be the secondary led by senior Chris L. Rucker (6-2, 200). The group should be bolstered by the return of sophomore cornerback Johnny Adams (5-11, 170), who missed last season with an injury.

On special teams, the Spartans must replace all-time leading scorer kicker Brett Swenson. Top candidates for the kicking position this year will be sophomore Dan Conroy (5-10, 185), redshirt freshman Kevin Muma (6-0, 186) and true freshman Mike Sadler (6-1, 185).

MSU kicks off the season Saturday hosting Western Michigan University at noon.

Swimmers top 50K for Red Cross

By Marne Little
Staff Writer
The 33rd annual Swim-A-Cross Plus season ended with a splash Aug. 15. This year's Swim-A-Cross had over 730 participants raising more than $53,000 for disaster relief. Participants were invited to celebrate the success at Independence Lake County Park.

The end-of-season party started off with an open water swim clinic with four-time Olympian Sheila Taormina, where participants learned techniques for open water swimming and then participated in a mile, half-mile or 50-yard swim. Taormina said she enjoyed seeing the kids participate and thought it was a great opportunity for everyone who was present.

Washtenaw County American Red Cross CEO Donna Duvin was also present and enjoyed the festivities.

"Our end-of-season celebration was all about thanking the many swimmers, pledgers, volunteers, and sponsors who made this year's Swim-A-Cross event a record-breaking success," Duvin said. "The day was a perfect way to close out a season of fun, laughter, friendly competition, and generous support."

A drawing was held for participants in the American Red Cross Swim-A-Cross Plus at the End of Season Party at Independence Lake. Items awarded to participants included autographed Detroit Red Wings merchandise, a pair of tickets to a Detroit Red Wings game, birthday packages from Jungle Java and Planet Rock, Mainstreet Ventures, Noodles & Company, Dexter Bike & Sport gift certificates, along with Zap Zone passes and a Big George's gift card. The drawing also included Jungle Java and Planet Rock birthday party packages, Mainstreet Ventures, Noodles & Company, Dexter Bike and Sport gift certificates, along with Zap Zone passes and a Big George's gift card.

The celebration included Little Caesar's pizza, Barry Bagels, hot dogs and Fabulous Frozen Drinks slushies. Gordon Food Service, Whole Foods and Powerade also donated refreshments.

"We are so grateful to all who helped make the 33rd annual Swim-A-Cross the best ever," said Swim-A-Cross Plus and Development Coordinator Mary Kumbier. "The generosity of our sponsors and community in time, talent and dollars was truly amazing especially in a challenging economy. The success of this fund-raiser helps to ensure that we are able to continue our mission and serve victims of local disaster relief."

While the Spartans will certainly feature a potent air attack, they also will need to establish a ground game in what should be a fairly balanced offense.

Caper, from Battle Creek, played in 12 games last season as a true freshman, including five starts at running back. He led the Spartans in carries (120), rushing yards (468) and rushing touchdowns (six).

Caper and Baker will most likely see plenty of action. How Hill and Bell fit into the mix has yet to be determined.

Hill has gotten to know all three quite well, especially Bell, a 6-foot-2, 230-pound running back from Reynoldsburg, Ohio. Bell rushed 200 times for 1,333 yards and 21 touchdowns as a senior in high school.

"He's my roommate," said the 5-6, 182-pound Hill. "So we hang out quite a bit, both on and off the field. All four of us have a great chemistry and get along really well."

Hill has spent the first few months of college life getting stronger.

"I've gotten bigger since I left Chelsea," he says. "I've bulked up quite a bit. I was benching around 320 (while a senior in high school) and now I'm at 380."

Hill was a four-year starter for coach Brad Bush at Chelsea, helping the Bulldogs to a combined 38-9 (.809) record. The two-time all-state selection, was named 2009 Associated Press Division 3-4 Player of the Year after rushing for 1,989 yards and 33 touchdowns as a senior. In four years, Hill rushed for 6,910 yards and racked up 98 rushing touchdowns.

At this point, Hill isn't thinking about the possibility of red-shirting. In fact, no one has mentioned that to him yet.

"I'm having a pretty good camp," he says. "I'm doing well and the team looks really good. I'm just excited to get going. I will let playing time and all that just play itself out. But no one has said anything about the red-shirting this year."

"The coaches do a good job of being positive and also teaching and making us better players. So I hear both sides of it every day."

The son of Thomas and Kelly Hill and stepson of Dorvina Thomas-Hill, Nick is going to study business when he isn't studying the playbook.

"We start school Sept. 1 and I'm looking forward to going to class for the first time," he says.

He's also looking forward to carrying that pigskin in green and white for the first time. And as Chelsea fans saw over the last four years, those are exciting times.

GOLF

McKim through his college connections. "We got lucky with Trisha."

Again, a win-win. And win is something this golf team is going to do plenty of before all is said and done. McKim had her young team - there is only one senior and five freshmen on the roster - out on the range and around the green on Wednesday working on their short game.

"We seem to do well off the tee, but it's the shots from within 100 yards and especially around the greens and our putting that have cost us a lot of strokes," says McKim, a stand-out golfer at DeWitt High School and a three-time NCAA qualifier at Olivet College before graduating in 2009. "We lost a lot of strokes around the greens the last few days."

The Bulldogs are working in separate groups. Triveline has a few girls practicing their chipping from just in front of one of the greens. He identifies different swing flaws in each player and lets them know what they need to focus on to get better. One by one, the shots get closer and closer to the pin.

On another green, McKim is talking about the importance of eliminating three putts from the scorecard. The best way to do that is getting that first putt real close.

"We are leaving too many putts 10 feet and more from the hole," she says. "We have to get closer than that. We are working right now on our weaknesses that I've seen after our first few meets and I think if we can fix these we are going to do really well." Long-distance putting is a staple of McKim's practices. "It's something we work on every day," she says. Some people might not call it work because McKim has created a fun atmosphere and the girls respond with laughter, smiles and plenty of good golf shots.

"We do a lot of games on the putting green because we want to make it fun," she says. "You can have fun and also improve at the same time."

The improvement is almost immediate. With each putt, the ball inches closer and closer.

Later in the practice, McKim puts some golf tees in a circle around the flag and has a few of her golfers chipping from off the green with an 8-iron instead of a pitching wedge. Sometimes, she says, it's easier to bump and run, especially on the flat greens.

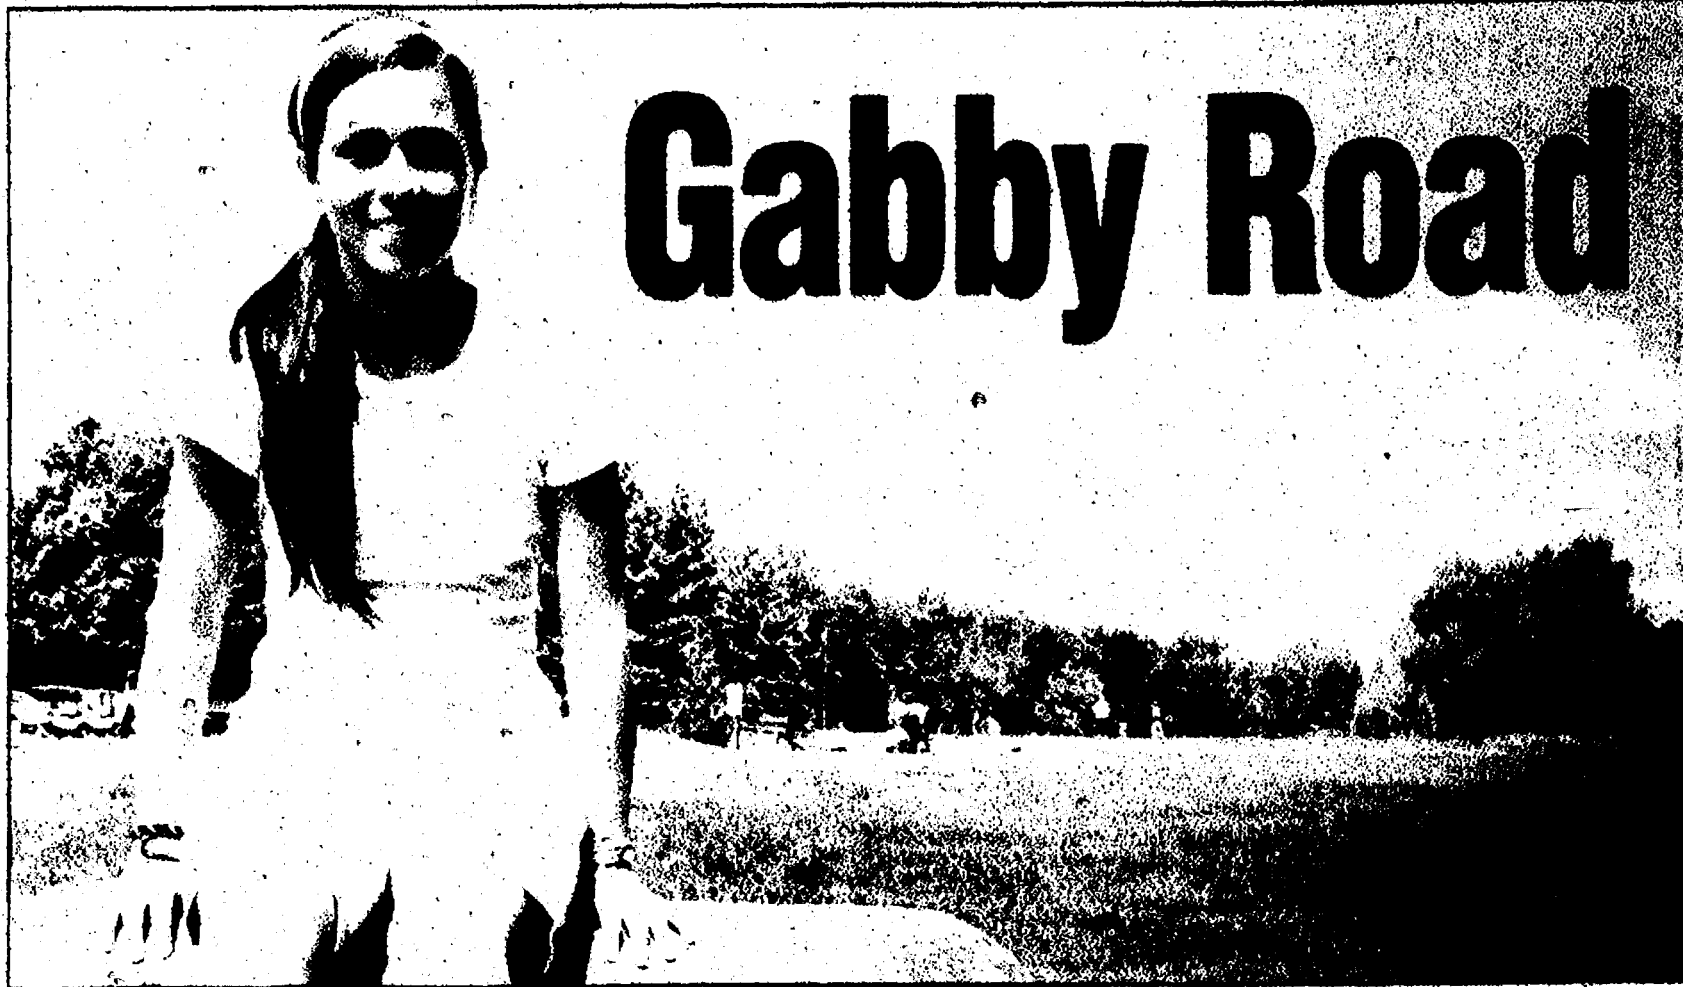

The balls begin to fly and fill the circle. A few however never make it to the hole.

"Look how many we left short," McKim points out. "There is no chance of these going in if you don't at least get it to the hole."

After practice McKim passes out beads to players who got pars and birdies in the previous matches. She even gives them out to players who won the putting games and to those who played extra holes during the weekend.

The Chelsea girls remind their new coach that to experience Chelsea she must go to the Chelsea Fair. Her initiation will include a ride on the "Ring of Fire" and a visit to the demolition derby.

Triveline is on a path to big things

Heritage Newspapers

Chelsea's Gabby Triveline made headlines last year when she made the All-State golf team as only a freshman. But the bigger headline for Gabby had to do with just being accepted as part of the team. Golf is an individual sport and can be brutally tough when egos get involved - even at the high school level.

So here came this young and talented kid with the awesome game trying to find her spot on a team.

"Last year was really exciting, but what made it special was how nice the other girls were to me and how well we all got along," Gabby said. "That made the whole freshman experience for me."

There wasn't much doubt that Gabby, now 15, was going to be one of the team's top players despite being one of the youngest. Stepping into a situation like this can be intimidating and sometimes the older girls aren't exactly holding the door for the young upstart.

But the Chelsea girls allowed Gabby to walk on through and join the fun.

"I was already nervous just starting high school," she says looking back. "And playing with girls older than me certainly frightened me especially since I've always played with people who were my age. But everyone was very nice to me."

That helped Gabby find her comfort zone - which is pretty much anywhere on a golf course.

Still, Gabby wasn't thrilled with how she played last year - despite being All-State.

"My year wasn't really that good," she said. "My nine-hole averages weren't good. My best round last year was probably against the Milan girl who was really good. She would par almost every hole and I stayed with her for most of the round until I messed up a little at the end. But that was one of my better rounds last year."

one - was a year of change for Gabby. She doesn't necessarily feel that making the All-State team was one of the highlights. She certainly doesn't mention it when she is asked about her most memorable moments as a ninth-grader.

"I got to meet a lot of really nice people," she said. "And I met a lot of players who have been playing at the high school level and they helped me improve. It's so much different playing on a high school team than it was when I was little."

Golf is still an individual sport, but Gabby really enjoyed being part of a bigger picture. Being surrounded by teammates out on the golf course and on the practice green was a new - and thrilling - experience.

"It's different because here everyone helps you," Gabby says. "A lot of the girls I played with last year had been playing and taking lessons longer than me so if I ever had a question they would gladly help me out. It was competitive, but competitive in a friendly and nice way. We were kind of like a big family."

Gabby certainly has game. She has played the last seven years at the U.S. Kids World Golf Championships at Pinehurst, N.C., playing along side the likes of Alexis Thompson, now on the LPGA Tour. Gabby's best finish against some of the top young players in the country was 23rd.

She took to the game at an early age. "I remember my wife and I were hitting wedge shots in the backyard and Gabby came up to us and asked if she could try," said Gabby's father Don. "She was only 3-years old."

And she's had a golf club in her hand ever since.

"When she was 5 or 6 years old there was an event at the Jackson Country Club where it was all boys and she ended up finishing first," Don said.

With Gabby leading the way and part of a talented group of players, Chelsea finished third at regionals last year with a team score of 406. The Bulldogs shot 406 during the first day of the state tournament and then fired a team score 397 on the second day.

Gabby took fifth overall in the regional and 14th at the state meet.

The sophomore, who spends year-round working on her game and takes lessons from PGA teaching professional Paul Haase at the Kendall Golf Academy in Ann Arbor, says the best part of her game right now is her driving. She can hit the ball about 240 yards and more importantly keep it on the fairway.

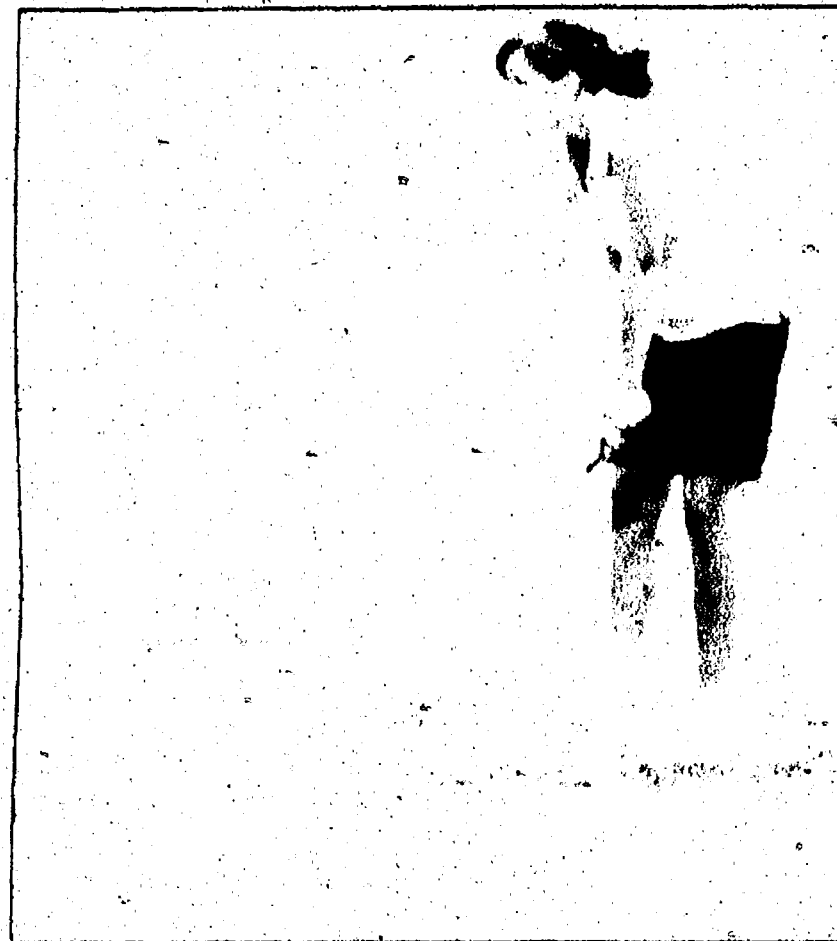

And the weakest part of her game? "My putting," she says without giving it a second thought.

She also doesn't have to give much thought to what her goals are for this upcoming season.

"I want to be All-State again and finish in the top five," she says.

And that wasn't an afterthought, either. Gabby, who also ran track last year for the Bulldogs, really enjoys being part of a team.

Chelsea golf coach Trisha McKim talks chipping during a recent practice. McKim is in her first year with the Bulldogs.

Field Hockey

Whippets fit to be tied

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Newspapers

The Washtenaw Whippets varsity field hockey opened the season with a 1-1 tie Wednesday against Ann Arbor Skyline. The Whippets, who consist of players from Chelsea and Manchester high schools, came out strong scoring in the first 9 minutes of play.

Casey Fry, a senior at Chelsea, carried the ball 50 yards threw Skyline defenders and fired a shot from the top of the circle. Meghan Cole, also from Chelsea, rebounded the ball from the goalie's pads and tipped it in for the Whippets' first goal of the season.

Ambur Flores, a senior from Chelsea, led the back field by stepping into the role of goal-keeper for the first time last week. The Whippet ball movement was controlled by captains Fry, who had five 50-plus yard runs and supported by Maddie Inglis, a sophomore from Manchester.

Skyline tied the game in the last 2 minutes of the game.

The Whippets are led by captains Fry and Inglis, the only two returning varsity players. Five former JV players have stepped up and are helping mentor the new players into the sport. This is the first year players from Dexter are not on the Whippets' roster. Dexter is fielding its own team for the first time this season.

"I am very impressed with the speed, game sense and off-ball movement of our incoming players," said coach Leslie Fry. "We were able to hold our domination for the first half of the game. During the second half, our two experienced players were not able to hold their speed consistently both offensively and defensively. I was still very impressed with entire team's ability to stay focused and to continue working on the plans we laid out before the game."

Fry said the team's goals for this year are to continue to grow the depth of skilled field hockey in western Washtenaw County.

"One of our specific goals is to improve on our number of goals that are scored during open play and to expand on our number of players who are goal scorers," Fry said.

Down on the farm: JV/Frosh football

The Chelsea JV football team scored on its first three possessions and cruised to a 41-14 victory over Ann Arbor Huron last Thursday. The Bulldogs scored on drives of 55, 46, and 27 yards to open the game.

After forcing a Huron punt, Chelsea capitalized quickly. Alex Bielecki opened the scoring with a 6-yard TD run that capped off an eight-play drive. After another River Rat punt, Chelsea used four plays to raise the lead to 13-0. Bielecki caught an 11-yard TD pass from Logan Brown. The Chelsea defense knocked Huron's starting QB out of the game on the next series.

After a great punt return by Alex Rabbitt, Chelsea was poised to score again. A 22-yard completion from Brown to Kyle Koseck put Chelsea on the 3-yard line and Colton Platt punched it in from there on the first play of the second quarter. Chelsea scored one more time in the second quarter on a 16-yard Platt run.

The Chelsea defense dominated Huron all night, forcing two turnovers and pressuring Huron QB's mercilessly. Sean Lungo led the way with an interception and a fumble recovery. Michael Hovator led the team in tackles and Jay Szepdronski and Ricky Kolitan were relentless on the defensive line.

"This was a great effort for Week 1," coach Chris Orlandi said. "We had few penalties. We turned the ball over only once. We blocked well on offense and our defense was excellent for the first three quarters. We'll win a lot of games if we play like this every week."

JV Stats:

Logan Brown - 7 for 9 passing for 111 yds & 1 TD
Colton Platt - 13 carries for 89 yds & 2 TD's
Alex Bielecki - 4 carries for 40 yds & 1 TD & 1 catch for 11 yds & 1 TD
Luke Hollandsworth - 3 catches, 46 yds
Kyle Koseck - 2 catches for 39 yds
Tommy Olsen - 7 carries for 40 yds & 1 TD
Craig Centofanti - 2 carries for 18 yds

Christian Vosters - 4 carries for 12 yds & 1 TD
Travis Nichols - 4 carries for 9 yds & 1 catch for 15 yds
Alex Rabbitt was 4 for 5 & Alex Bielecki was 1 for 1 on PAT's.

Freshman football

The Chelsea freshman football team lost to Ann Arbor Huron 23-0 on Thursday. Chelsea turned it over five times and committed numerous costly penalties.

Defensively, Chelsea was led by Hunter Phillips, Mike Mesko, and Trevor Branham all played strong games defensively.

"I feel like I did a poor job getting the kids ready to play, and we did not play with much emotion or excitement," said coach Dennis Strzyzewski. "We will focus on simplifying what we do and playing with energy this week."

Dexter blanks Chelsea in soccer

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Newspapers

Four goals. Two injured goalies. Aggressive play. A few yellow cards. And some back-and-forth comments with the referee. Welcome to Chelsea-Dexter boys' varsity soccer.

Dexter was clearly the better team on this day, dominating most of the game, creating many more scoring chances and scoring four times while blanking the visiting Bulldogs 4-0 on a sunshine-filled Thursday evening. It certainly was an entertaining game, especially for the Dreadnaughts, who led 2-0 at halftime and added two more goals in the second half.

The match was a lead-in pool game for the East vs. West Boys' Soccer Shootout, hosted by Chelsea on Saturday with games throughout the day.

"We played some Division I teams to start the season and they're just bigger schools than we are," Dexter coach Scott Forrester said, referring to Walled Lake Northern, Plymouth and Canton. "Chelsea has some things they are working through right now and the key for us was to shut down Pat (Roberts)."

Another key was the play of Sam Justice, who dominated the middle of the field for the Dreads.

"We moved him into the middle and it made a big difference for us," Forrester said. "I had him at center defender in the first few games. We lost a lot of players from last year and have two guys who played midfield now being asked to play forward."

And they were both exciting and effective on Thursday.

And Forrester is right when he says the Bulldogs are "working through" some issues.

"We don't have a lot of experience in the back and we're still timid back there," Chelsea coach Shawn Hayes said. "We weren't quick enough applying pressure and that was the difference on a couple of their goals."

Hayes did see plenty of things he liked. "I liked our effort," he said. "We didn't quit, even when it was 4-0 and that's good to see. I liked Roberts' effort all night and I thought Cole Mauti and Kevin Fournier played hard."

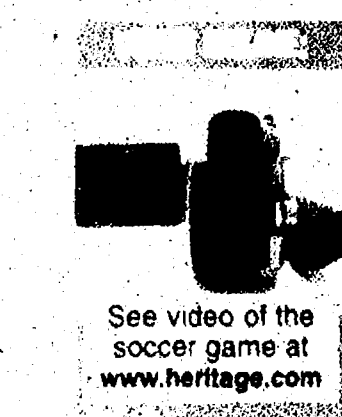

And goalie Bobby Beneteau also played well for the Bulldogs. There was little he could do on any of Dexter's goals.

"He made all the saves you would expect but he was left unguarded back there a few times," Hayes said.

The speedy Ian St. Pierre got the Dreads on the board at the 32:41 mark of the first half. The play started near the center midfield circle on the Chelsea side of the field when Dexter's Sam Justice turned and placed a long through ball back to his left and on the foot of a wide open St. Pierre. The junior took a few steps and rifled a low shot from near the 18-yard line past a diving Beneteau, who really had no chance on the low and hard shot.

After falling behind, the Chelsea offense came to life for the next few minutes. They came right down the field after the goal but were turned away when goalie Kyle Kargitz charged out of the net to snatch the cross out of the air.

A few minutes later, Chelsea's Patrick Roberts let a hard shot fly that sailed just right of the goalpost.

The Dreads responded with some offense of their own. The difference was that they were able to put it in the net.

The second goal was as pretty a goal as you will see in high school soccer - or anywhere for that matter. On a direct kick, Justice passed to the charging Dylan Polley in the center of the field on what appeared to be a set play. The junior midfielder took the ball just outside the 18-yard box, and in one motion, took the pass with his right foot, pivoted and pushed the ball through to Kyle Rickelmann breaking in from the wing.

Rickelmann, a senior, placed a low shot off his right foot underneath an outstretched Beneteau and into the far corner to make it 2-0 at 26:50. The pass was amazing, the shot perfect.

At 25:15 of the second half, the Bulldogs charged through the Dexter 18-yard box and the end result was a shaken up Kargitz, who took one of his teammate's cleats to the head. He had to come out of the game and was replaced by Mike McGonigle, who preserved the shutout.

Kargitz, one of the area's top keepers, appeared fine after the game and is expected to play Saturday.

During the injury time out there was some discussion between the Dexter coaching staff and the officials on whether the Chelsea coaching staff should be talking with their players. Forrester said the rules state that no coaching can take place during an injury time out. While entertaining, it didn't amount to much.

With 16:24 to play in the game, Justice served up another direct kick that Austen Bates caught up to and flicked it over the head of Beneteau to make it 3-0. With 12:53 left in the game, Dexter made it 4-0 off a corner kick.

Justice headed the cross past the Chelsea goalie but the Bulldogs' Kyle Hoeflinger was on the end line and deflected the shot. But Dexter's Patrick Anderson was there to knock in the rebound.

Beneteau injured his leg on the play and came out for the rest of the game.

CHS showing steady improvement

Kevin Fournier, Patrick Roberts and Robert Hughes scored goals in Chelsea's 3-3 tie with Dearborn Heights Crestwood on Saturday in the East-West soccer showdown at Chelsea. Assists were from Eli Arons, Charlie McCalla and Bourke Lodewyk.

Roberts scored the Bulldogs' only goal in a 4-1 loss to Riverview. The senior scored on a penalty kick.

Chelsea's only win of the tournament came in the finals against Eaton Rapids. Roberts, Fournier and Arons all had goals in a 3-0 win.

Assists were from Kyle Hoeflinger and Bobby Beneteau.

"The boys played well last weekend," Chelsea coach Shawn Hayes said. "We played some tough opponents and were able to get better throughout the day and continue to learn from some of the mistakes we have made. Overall, we had a solid effort out of all our boys on this day with a lot of credit going to not only the guys listed in the stat line, but all our players that worked hard and contributed to the successes we shared on the field last weekend."

Last Tuesday, the Chelsea varsity soccer team scored in the first minute of its season-opening game against East Lansing before falling 3-1 to the talented Trojans.

East Lansing scored the equalizer in the 31st minute. The Trojans then took the lead at the 50th minute and added an insurance goal at the 65th minute.

"Defensive lapses cost us the three goals in (Tuesday's) contest," Shawn Hayes said. "A young and inexperienced defensive unit for the Bulldogs was able to learn from their mistakes but East Lansing capitalized on those mistakes."

The Bulldogs host Parma Western on Tuesday and play at Milan on Thursday.

Chelsea competes with state's top programs

By Terry Jacoby

The Chelsea volleyball team spent last Tuesday working on their game. The Bulldogs traveled to Novi to take on some first-rate competition in preparation for the start of the Southeastern Conference schedule.

"The competition at the Novi quad was very good," said Chelsea coach Laura Cleveland. "We played three Class A schools and Marian is the defending Class A state champs. The team is improving and learning what it takes to play at a higher level. We are looking forward to starting our league season."

Chelsea lost to Marian 3-25, 14-25; to Novi 17-25, 16-25; and to Brighton 25-27, 13-25.

Individual highlights for Chelsea included Breanna Wooster (seven kills), Lisa Keene (seven kills), Michelle Wellman (seven kills) and Briana Carden (26 assists).

The Bulldogs play at Gabriel Richard on Tuesday. They open SEC action Sept. 14 at home against Tecumseh.

JV volleyball

girls' volleyball team opened the season last Saturday at the Pioneer Invitational.

The Bulldogs played hard, reaching the finals of the silver bracket. They finished third in their pool by beating Pioneer 25-7, 25-16, losing to Mercy 13-25, 19-25 and splitting with South Lyon 27-29, 25-23.

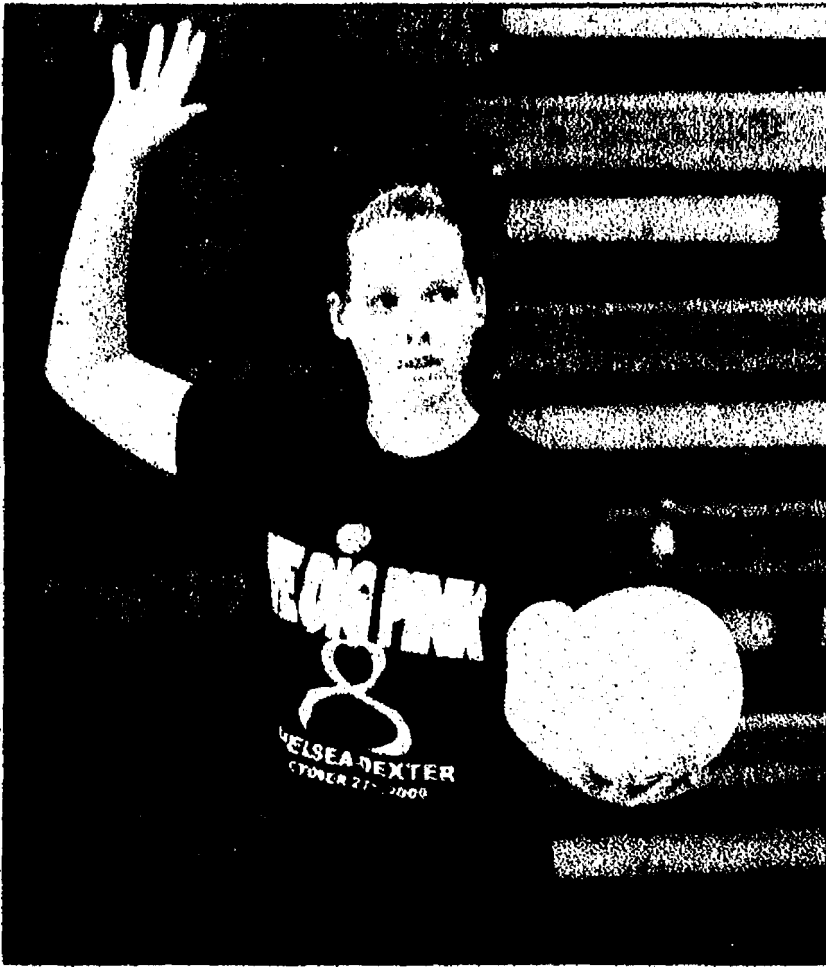

In the silver bracket, Chelsea beat Skyline 25-11, 17-25, 15-11. They beat Westland John Glenn 25-23, 25-14 before losing in the finals to Salem 30-28, 20-25, 14-16.

Leading the way for Chelsea was Taylor Cooley (16 kills), Olivia Steele (15) and Katlyn Brosnan (13).

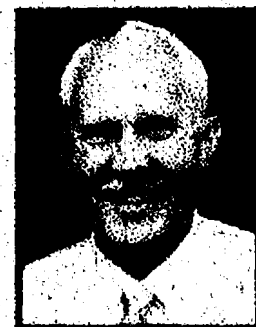

"As the scores show, the girls played hard all day and I was very proud of them," said coach Sue Jacobs.

On Thursday, the girls traveled to the Novi Quad and played hard against three really good teams. Chelsea lost to Marion 26-24, 16-25, 12-15; Brighton 24-26, 23-25 and Novi 18-25, 15-25.

The Bulldogs had great serving by Katlyn Brosnan, Jessie Fox and Grace Sauers. Katie Sullivan and Sarah Oberholtzer played outstanding defense for the Bulldogs.

Gillespie's return a great way to start the season

Matt Gillespie certainly got Chelsea off on the right foot on Saturday. Well, he used both his feet to get things going in the Bulldogs' season opener. The senior returned the opening kickoff 86 yards to set the tone in Chelsea's 26-7 victory over Ann Arbor Huron.

Gillespie, one of the smallest players on the field, grabbed the opening kickoff at the 14-yard line. The senior headed up the middle for a few steps and then cut hard to the right at around the 21-yard line, racing past a group of River Rats. He picked up a nice block from Spencer Mykala while Logan Yordanich and Tyler Geiger gave the speedy Gillespie a path to the outside by making key blocks inside. From there it was all Gillespie, who made a little fake to the inside to get past Huron's Mitch Ward and sprinted down the side line in front of the Chelsea bench.

"For the past several days I have been visualizing that opening kickoff," Gillespie said. "I woke up the last few mornings thinking about that first kickoff and me returning it all the way to the crib. And that's what happened."

Visualizing it is one thing. But actually doing it is something totally different.

"When I first got the ball I was first looking for my blockers and a lane," said Gillespie, who also made a nice catch and run for a big first down later in the game. "When I found one, I just hit it."

The senior, who also has played lacrosse for three seasons, likes what he sees from the Bulldogs.

"We've bonded more than other teams I've been on and we worked harder in the off-season than other teams too," Gillespie said. "We are going to come to compete and win every game."

Despite putting up 26 points, Gillespie feels the offense can do much better than it showed on Saturday. "We had too many penalties and too many dumb mistakes," he said. "We are going to go back to practice and clean that up."

battled," Gildersleeve said. "But I was shocked with the offensive performance we had and we have to shore some things up and get more aggressive or we are going to be in trouble."

It didn't take long for the River Rats to get into trouble in the opener. Gillespie's kickoff return gave the Bulldogs a 6-0 lead just 13 seconds into the game.

After Chelsea forced a three-and-out from Huron, the Bulldogs quickly found themselves right back in the end zone. On a third-and-11 play from the 48-yard line, quarterback Brian Paulsen (9-of-18 passing for 112 yards) handed the ball to Nate Udell coming behind him from the slot.

The Huron corner came up to stop the run, but Udell pulled up and threw the ball to a wide open Mason Borders who caught the ball at the 20-yard line and walked on in for a touchdown.

SEE VIDEO OF THE TD AT WWW.HERITAGE.COM

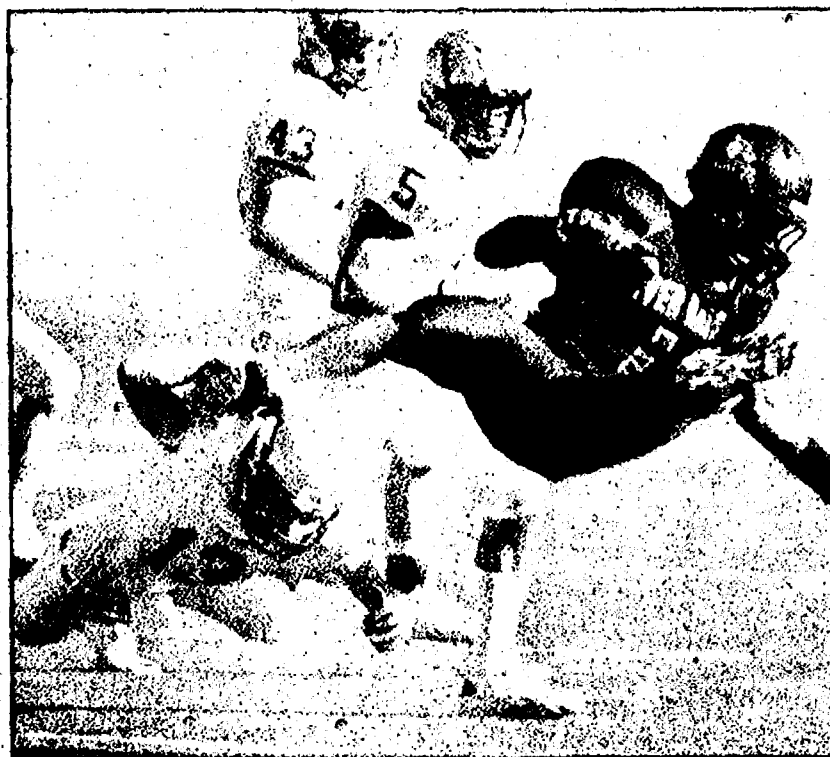

Borders finished with five catches for 109 yards.

Less than 6 minutes into the game, Chelsea led 13-0. It was a deficit Huron never would recover from.

Standout defensive plays by Yordanich and a knocked down pass by defensive back Max Giller on third down forced another three-and-out from Huron. After a nice punt return from Chris Ballow, the Bulldogs had the ball at the Huron 20-yard line looking for more points.

Four plays later, Berkley Edwards provided those points on a 3-yard run up the middle and Chelsea led 19-0 with 5:51 to play.

The defenses took over at that point until midway through the second quarter. A 38-yard pass from Huron quarterback Alex Hassan (6-of-20 passing, 140 yards) to Anthony Hagan helped set up the River Rats' first and only touchdown of the game. On fourth-and-one from the 2-yard line, Luke Denson blasted up the middle to make it 19-7 with play in the third quarter on a 6-yard run by Paulsen

Edwards led the Chelsea ground game with 71 yards on 13 carries. Right behind him was Joey Newland with 68 yards on 13 carries.

Yordanich led Chelsea with six tackles. Kevin White led Huron with seven tackles.

The Bulldogs host Monroe on Friday while Huron plays Tecumseh on Friday.

"They did everything we practiced against," Gildersleeve said. "We were very undisciplined and didn't do what we needed to do. We need to shore some of those things up on offense or we are in for a long year."

ONE ON ONE WITH: QB BRIAN PAULSEN

On the defense: "Our defense was outstanding by holding them to only seven points and they gave the offense a lot of opportunities to do great things."

On the offense: "I thought we did well when we weren't committing penalties. The penalties really killed us. It's really hard to play when you have first and 20 or first and 30 or second and long."

On the overall performance: "I thought we played well. We could have scored more points if it weren't for the penalties. When we didn't have the penalties we moved the ball. And when we are running the ball and throwing the ball without the mistakes, it's really hard to defend us."

On his overall performance: "I missed a couple runs, but I think that's fixable. I just have to watch film and see what I did wrong and that will take care of that. There were a couple of drops and a few bad throws on my part. But overall I was pleased with how I played."

and a record
Chelsea race

Run for the ROLLS

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Newspapers

It was a wonderful day for the Run for the Rolls - a record day, in fact.

The overall male and female winners set course records at the fourth annual Run for the Rolls on Saturday. Bryce Boyer of the Chelsea boys cross country team set a new course record in the Male Division with the time of 4:37. The previous record was set in 2007.

Kali Nowizke of Ann Arbor set a record for the Women's Division with a time of 5:46, beating the 2009 record. "It is exciting seeing the times drop, especially for the Women's Division every year," said Cindy Triveline, one of the race organizers. "The success of Run for the Rolls grows every year in so many ways. Not only did we have about the same number of participants, but the 1-9 and 10-14 male/female divisions were the largest ever."

The first Bulldog Challenge was a success with the Chelsea Soccer Club sweeping the awards and taking the Traveling Trophy (painted by Chelsea art student Emma Arigoff) as well as bragging rights. They earned $100 for their team program, all sponsored by Moore Pediatrics and Associates. The CSC also had a tremendous turnout with 12 athletes to win Common Grill Rolls with the largest team.

"It was so exciting to have the Chelsea Bulldog run in the race," Triveline said. "I started off running by the Bulldog and all I could hear were people yelling for the Chelsea Bulldog. Thank you to Graham for bringing the Bulldog to the Run for the Rolls race."

The theme this year was 3-D and logo was done in 3-D by www.babstar-rclothing.com. Each participant got a 3-D race day shirt and a pair of 3-D glasses.

"Saturday's run was so much fun," said Jennifer Alford, president of the RFTR board. "As I ran down Main Street with my two kids and husband I couldn't help but smile at all the spectators - you couldn't ask for better crowd support."

"Every year I am always so thrilled to watch the young kids running in the event. This year we had more participants in the youngest age group than we have ever had in the past. It is great to see more and more kids participating."

Four-year-old Connell Alford, son of J.D. and Jennifer Alford, was determined to make to whole distance this year. And despite the heat he made it! "He was very serious," his proud mother said.

This was Run for the Roll's first year as a non profit organization and was pleased to provide proceeds from this year's run to the Chelsea High School Boys and Girls Cross Country teams. Run for the Rolls was made possible in part from a Chelsea Area Wellness Foundation grant as well as many generous community sponsors.

Triveline wanted to thank Gary Olsen for running the Web site, the Chelsea Rotary W.A.V.E. and all the volunteers for their support.

Ginger Sissom, board member and volunteer coordinator for the race, was grateful for volunteer support.

"Chelsea Rotary members have owned the registration table since year one and it's helpful to start planning each year knowing that day of registration is in good hands," Sissom said. "With the race happening just prior to the Fair Parade it was a busy morning for volunteers. I appreciated their extra effort. Chelsea volunteers always go above and beyond. This is a very giving community."

SRSLY launches button campaign

Youth coalition seeks to reinforce positive actions

By Crystal Hayduk
Special Writer

SRSLY is launching a new program to encourage adults to provide recognition to Chelsea youth for positive behaviors.

Results from the 2010 Michigan Profile for Healthy Youth administered to nearly all of the seventh, ninth, and

CHELSEA

11th grade students in the Chelsea School District, revealed that most students feel that adults do not notice them in a positive way.

According to Reiley Lewis, SRSLY coalition director, 80 percent of high school students and 69 percent of middle school students feel that they do not have neighbors who notice when they do a good job and let them know. Lewis also reported

who encourage them to do their best, and 50 percent do not know people in their neighborhood who are proud of them when they do something well.

"Providing encouragement and acknowledging the young people in our lives - praising them - is definitely something we can do," Lewis said. "This is something that our community can improve on."

SRSLY's marketing and evaluation subcommittee, made up of both youth and adults, developed an action plan to address the problem, Lewis said. Small button-style pins will be available beginning Sept. 7 from teachers and at the public library for adults to obtain at no charge. Adults are encouraged to give the buttons to youth, especially in the target age group of 10 to 15 years of age, to provide recognition for positive behavior.

"Perhaps a kid has done a good thing for his or her family, community, school, church, or scouts," Lewis said. "It could be for any kind of volunteer work or help provided."

Lewis explained that students may choose to collect the buttons, or they may exchange

10 buttons for a SRSLY T-shirt at any coalition meeting.

The buttons come in green, white, or black backgrounds, with a variety of statements, descriptive words and text lingo that were chosen by student coalition members.

"The words that adults think of as being complimentary, such as 'cool,' are considered kind of lame by kids these days," Lewis said. "So we let them choose the words."

Lewis emphasized that teens and pre-teens want and value relationships with the adults in their lives. Increasing communication between adults and youth is a positive step in improving the overall health and well-being of the community.

"Do you know what the kids in your life want to be when they grow up? Who are their heroes? What was the last thing that made them laugh so hard they cried? These kinds of little things are so important," she said.

Dexter school board approves teacher contracts

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Newspapers

Dexter Community Schools approved a tentative agreement with the collective bargaining unit of the Dexter Education Association at the end of August.

The DCS negotiating team and DEA reached the agreement on June 11, which includes measures to involve teachers as responsible partners in maintaining the financial health of the district, according to Interim Superintendent Mary Marshall.

"I think that this contract provides us a win-win-win for the district, the DEA and the community," Dexter Board of Education trustee Julie Schumacher said.

Over the course of the three-year agreement, DEA members will receive no raise during year one, at which time the pay schedule for new employees would increase, slowing the rate of pay graduation. There will also be no raise in the second year, although there is addendum in the contract that could change that if financial conditions improve.

Resident Shawn Letwin spoke during the public comment period asking why the board was voting on a contract without a final draft, according to DEA President Joe Romeo.

Letwin also asked why the district had approved earlier in the summer a plan to cover a gap between $2.1 million in savings and $3.1 million in necessary savings in the future to keep the district's finances balanced, which is something that former Superintendent Robert Glass had been working towards prior to his departure for Bloomfield Hills.

"Savings from different provisions of the new contract are not yet available," Marshall said in an e-mail, adding that insurance costs won't be solidified until the budget revision period next November.

The gap between $2.1 million in existing savings and the $3.1 million that the district projects includes savings from the wage freeze, as well as differences in pay scale between retirees and new employees.

Another provision in the contract calls for the district to cover health insurance cost increases up to 5 percent more than the previous fiscal year, meaning that DEA members would either have to pay the difference beyond 5 percent out of pocket or switch to a different insurance plan that's cheaper.

"Capping the district's liability at 5 percent of the previous year I think is a very responsible thing to do, and the DEA membership will have to either adjust their benefits or decide that they're willing to pay for benefits beyond 5 percent," Schumacher said.

DEA President Joe Romeo said that having a union presence on the district's finance committee has given bargaining unit participants "insight" into the district's financial challenges and allows them to help "keep the costs low," he said.

"I'm perfectly satisfied with the pay that teachers get," Romeo said.

The board ratified the agreement with only four out of seven members present due to planned and unplanned absences.

"This contract allows the teachers to participate in their health care and manage their own use of health care in a responsible way," board vice president Michael Wendorf said. "I believe that each individual will become more aware of the cost of health care and the cost of not taking care of themselves."

Wendorf added that he believes that employees who can afford to "be healthy and in charge of their lives" make better employees.

Aldrich takes home first prize in contest

Chelsea student named fair queen, junior homemaker

By Sheila Pursglove

Not only was Kennedy, 15, named fair queen, she also took the title Champion Junior Homemaker.

She entered 40 items in the fair in cooking, agriculture, needlework, hobbies, antiques and floriculture.

"My favorites to put together are definitely the hobbies," she said. "I love art and drawing, and I spent a lot of time making the projects that I entered this year. I usually enter at least a few projects in the fair, but I went all out this year, partially because of the fair queen competition."

Erin Koch was junior homemaker runner-up. In the adult contest, Andrea Webb was named Champion Homemaker, with Cynthia Peller as runner-up.

Kennedy's favorite part of the fair was showing her goats and pigs, where she snagged even more ribbons.

"I did very well in both of these departments as well this year, winning senior showmanship in both. This meant that I got to go to sweepstakes and compete there. I ended up placing third in sweepstakes, which is awesome."

Being a fair queen candidate made fair week very busy for Kennedy, but she is used to it because of attending animal shows as a member of three different 4-H clubs: Roger's Corners Herdsmen, Veterinary Science Club, and the Double L Llama club, where she is co-president.

"I had to wear my sash all the time, which was a different thing that I'm not used to," she said.

Being a candidate meant spending time in the dunk tank on Saturday and working the auction on Thursday night.

"Since I sold my pigs in the auction, I went down to help after I was done with that," she said. "We spent all day Friday doing fair queen things, such as getting our hair done, having private interviews with the judges, and the final talent competition and announcement on Friday night."

"I was stunned when I won on Friday night. I won the talent award as well, and I was very excited to get that. Then, when they announced that I had won, I didn't know what to do. It took me a while to absorb the fact that yes, I am the fair queen, and all the things that stem from that, like a $1,000 scholarship."

On Saturday, Kennedy rode in the parade on her float, which placed third.

"On my float I had my sister Keaton, my junior princess Kara O'Day, and 1,800 Twizzlers. It was very fun and went very fast, it didn't feel like two hours at all."

"Unfortunately, Kennedy will not be able to ride in the Saline Community Fair Parade, because of a cross country meet."

"However, I'm looking forward to meeting people and representing my community in other things that I do as fair queen, such as lighting the tree at Christmas," she said. "I'm also really looking forward to next year's pageant and making new friends with the girls next year too."

Parents concerned over bus stops

By Crystal Hayduk

As Chelsea school officials attempt to finalize plans for the upcoming school year before the students' first day, parents of children who reside in the Inverness Woods subdivision off of North Territorial Road attended Monday evening's school board meeting to express concerns about the changes in bus stop locations for their subdivision.

Jackie Reisher spoke on behalf of families residing in the subdivision who have safety concerns regarding bus stop locations and traffic congestion created by parents driving their children to the bus stop.

Resident Sean Hilbert clarified that parents are not requesting an increase in the number of stops, but rather changing the stop location.

"We will be working through the issues, and making our best effort to resolve them," Superintendent David Killips said.

Killips expressed confidence in the transportation department and its priority on safety. Parents and school officials met informally after the meeting-to begin work towards resolution of the concerns.

In other action:

The board approved the hiring of Heather Myers and Trisha McKim as kindergarten teachers. Due to unexpected enrollment at the upper elementary levels, staffing shifts created a need for one full-time and one part-time kindergarten teachers.

Construction projects at several schools are continuing, and should be completed by Sept. 7.

Killips announced that President Obama signed the "Edujobs" bill, which is expected to give $318 million to Michigan.

"We don't know how the money will be dispersed or what strings may be attached yet," Killips said.

Community colleges and state universities will be allocated $200 million from the School Aid Fund, a precedent that concerns public school educators who are completely dependent on public funds rather than charging tuition.

"This has never been done before," Killips said. "The School Aid Fund has always been for K-12."

The board voted to accept a donation of 100 pairs of football shoes from Detroit Lions player and former Chelsea High School football player Tony Scheffler.

Upcoming events:

Open Houses, Sept. 2.

Musical 'Bye, Bye Birdie' set Sept. 16-19

Patrick Ballnik and Thalia Schramm appear in "Bye, Bye Birdie," directed by Rachel Francisco, Sept. 16 through 19 at the Lydia Mendelssohn Theatre.

Ann Arbor Civic Theatre will present the musical comedy "Bye, Bye Birdie," directed by Rachel Francisco, Sept. 16 through 19 at the Lydia Mendelssohn Theatre.

"Bye, Bye Birdie" finds a small town in Ohio in the mid-20th century turned upside down by the arrival of a famous rock star, Conrad Birdie.

Birdie's agent, Albert, has arranged for Birdie to kiss a local girl before his induction into the army — a publicity stunt that goes awry when the less-than-wholesome star hurls into town.

"I really wanted to direct something light, happy and fun," Francisco said in a news release.

"Birdie fits the bill, and it has great roles for people of all ages. We have lots of new faces in this production, including a kid's chorus of adorable youngsters as young as 5 years old. We're striving to preserve the look and feel of the era, and the result is a classic musical for the entire family."

Musical direction for "Bye, Bye, Birdie" is by Michael Williams, with choreography by Deedee Ulintz.

The cast also includes Nick Yocum, Mark Bernstein, Lisa Mills Walters, Will Brinkerhoff, Rennie Cotner, Aubrey Donnell, Brent Lofgren, Hank Naasko, Tawna Dabney, Jen Leija, David Beaulieu, David Putman, Nicole Coven, Katie Ebbitt, Michelle

Thalia Schramm, Patrick Ballnik and Rennie Cotner are in "Bye, Bye, Birdie," directed by Rachel Francisco, Sept. 16 through 19 at the Lydia Mendelssohn Theatre.

Sandford, Felicity Stevenson, Maya Flores, Catherine Cypert, Hannah Lecker, Sarah Kilroy, Breana Underhill, El Berg, Rob Goren, Sam Blackburn, Audrey Waugh, Maya Cristian, Annika Anderson and Mathew Underhill.

Performances are at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, with a 2 p.m. matinee on Sunday.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday tickets are $22, with tickets at $20 for seniors and $12 for students.

On Thursday only, all seats are $17. Tickets and information are available online at www.a2ct.org, through the theater's box office at 971-2228, or at the door of the theater before each performance.

Book signing set for Sept. 11

The author of an inspirational business book and a member of the National Speakers Association will sign books at the Ann Arbor Barnes & Noble store Sept. 11.

The National Speakers Association, an organization for professional speakers, recently inducted Kristin J. Arnold of Scottsdale, Ariz., as its 2010-11 president during the 2010 NSA Convention in Orlando, Fla.

Arnold is a high-stakes meeting facilitator, trainer and keynote speaker who works with organizations ranging from Fortune 500 companies to universities, military groups, government and nonprofits.

She is the author of several books in the "Extraordinary Team" series and released her latest book, "From Boring to Bravo: Proven Presentation Techniques to Engage, Involve, and Inspire Your Audience to Action," in August.

"It's an exciting time to be part of the National Speakers Association," Arnold said in a news release.

"We have a bright future ahead of us as we work to make NSA the leading source for community education and entrepreneurial business knowledge for the professional speaker. We are dedicated to helping working speakers become successful in this business and feel welcomed, included and engaged in our communities, our education and our commitment to the profession."

Arnold has earned the designation of Certified Speaking Professional, the highest earned designation within NSA.

A book signing and question-and-answer session are scheduled for 4 p.m. Sept. 11 at Barnes & Noble, 3235 Washtenaw Ave., in Ann Arbor.

To learn more about the National Speakers Association, visit www.naspeaker.org.

Climate change is topic of new book

A book about climate change with contributions from several Michigan authors was released Sept. 1.

It's not enough to simply know the environmental impacts of climate change, said co-editor Michael Nelson. We must do something, and getting from knowing to acting is the great challenge, Nelson asserts.

That's the main message of a book co-edited by Nelson, an associate professor with a joint appointment in the Lyman Briggs College at Michigan State University and the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife.

"Moral Ground: Ethical Action for a Planet in Peril" is a collection of essays edited by Nelson and Kathleen Moore, distinguished professor of philosophy and writer laureate at Oregon State University. The book was released Sept. 1.

Contributors to the book include politicians such as President Barack Obama, former vice president Al Gore and Iran's first female vice president, Massoumeh Ebtekar. Also contributing are writers such as Terry Tempest Williams, Wendell Berry and Daniel Quinn and religious leaders including Pope John Paul II and the Dalai Lama.

Michigan authors include

John Vucetich, Rolf Peterson, Stephanie Mills and MSU's Paul Thompson, who is the W.K. Kellogg Chair in Agricultural, Food and Community Ethics.

Nelson authored the essay "To a Future Without Hope" for the book. His piece argues that virtue and integrity, rather than hope for solving climate change, should be our motivation for climate action.

"We, each of us, right now, at this exact moment in time, have the power to choose to live the moral life, to live a life that is indeed worth living," Nelson wrote.

"The book is a call to people to honor their moral responsibility to the future to strive to avert the worst consequences of environmental emergencies and leave a world as rich in life and possibility as the world we live in," Nelson and Moore write in the book's introduction.

This topic is ripe for discussion, Nelson said, but it also requires some serious thought.

"We're having the whole environmental conversation in a different way now," he said.

"We have the facts we need to act. What we need, however, is a reason to act. We contend, as do many of the essayists, that our moral obligation to the future, and the planet is a reason to act."

The editors of "Moral Ground" said that compiling essays from writers with different cultural backgrounds, religions and political affiliations

"There is moral wisdom in people of different ages, professions, locations and world views," they write in the introduction.

"We wanted to hear from them — dozens of the world's moral and intellectual leaders."

In all, the book contains essays by more than 80 of the world's moral visionaries.

Nelson said he and Moore were pleasantly surprised that most of the people they asked to write essays did so.

"It really showed us that this is precisely the right time for a book like this," he says.

Published by Trinity University Press, all the proceeds from "Moral Ground" will go to support climate action or other organizations that do work relevant to the project.

Nelson said Trinity has more than 20 editor and author tour events planned for the book's promotion, including town hall meetings in locations around the country, including two in Michigan.

Nelson will host a reading and book signing at 7 p.m. Sept. 7 at Schuler Books in Eastwood Towne Center in Lansing. He will read his essay and several MSU faculty members will read other essays from the book.

In October, Nelson and Moore will host a town hall meeting at Grand Rapids Community College.

Those auditioning need attend only one of the two audition sessions. All auditions take place at Ann Arbor Civic Theatre's rehearsal studio at 322 W. Ann St. in Ann Arbor.

Playwright James DeVita keeps the themes of the story intact while injecting a huge dose of silliness and a few new characters: a baseball team, a peanut salesman and contestants from the Miss America Pageant, to name a few.

There are roles for up to 25 young actors in fourth through 12th grades. Auditions consist of cold readings from the script and theater games.

Rehearsals for "Looking Glass Land" will be held from 4 to 6 p.m. on Monday and Wednesday afternoons and from 2 to 5 p.m. Sundays.

Production dates are Nov. 4 through Nov. 7 at Washtenaw Community College's College Theater.

For more information, call the office at 971-2228 or visit www.a2ct.org.

ON THE GO

Lambs of Our Savior Christian Preschool decorated a float for the Chelsea Community Fair Parade on Aug. 28. The truck was driven by Steve Searl. Parents and teachers handed out geoboards to preschool children along the parade route. Children riding on the float included: Holly Kranz, Dominic Searl, Devon O'Clair, Ethan O'Clair, Avery O'Clair, Kristina Skiotys, Adria Skiotys, and Justin Grissom. Director Shelley Grissom coordinated the project as many assisted in preparation for the Chelsea Community Fair.

CCA to hold open house week

Chelsea Center for the Arts will host an Open House Week at 400 Congdon St., Sept. 7 through 11, to feature its expanded music programming for young children, teens and adults.

Private music studios will be open to the public from 3:30 to 6 p.m. so families can get a glimpse of private music lessons in progress and sample each instructor's teaching style. Visitors can pick up information on any of the CCA private music studios or group music programs.

Also during the week is "Jazz Alive!" with CCA saxophone instructor Ben Jansson and his quartet, who will kick off the new CCA jazz workshop series.

This concert and workshop will be held from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Sept. 10. Musicians of all ages and levels can bring their instruments for a jazz workshop with Jansson and his quartet, following the concert.

Lisa Hinz-Johnson, CCA's director of music, is pleased to announce the new jazz studies program at CCA.

"We have an eclectic mix of music styles taught at CCA, and Ben Jansson joins guitar instructors Alex Anest and Pete Bullard, along with Dave McWilliams, CCA's new percussion instructor, to round out our jazz studies program. It's a wonderful addition to our programming, and Ben's jazz workshop series is going to be phenomenal," she said.

Finally, rounding out the week is CCA's "Try-It Saturday" from 10 a.m. to noon on Sept. 11. Music programs for children ages zero to 13 will be highlighted in this morning sampler event.

CCA is adding some exciting new early childhood and youth music programs for the fall. One of the biggest additions is the launching of the Chelsea Children's Choir, under the direction of new choral instruc-

Hinz-Johnson is excited to see this new program come to CCA.

"It's been many years since we've included a children's choir in our programming here at CCA, and I've been waiting for just the right director to come along," she said. "Sarah is certainly that person. She's young and enthusiastic, and has amazing plans to make this a positive experience for all of the singers. Kids will absolutely love her, and her ideas and plans essentially make this a completely new program to CCA."

Weekly rehearsals will take place at the CCA on Tuesdays, from 3:30 to 4:45 p.m., September through May. Vocal placement auditions will take place on "Try-It Saturday" from 10 a.m. to noon.

"This is really just a chance for Sarah to hear the singers and get a feel for what the choir will be. Kids should not feel intimidated by the idea of an audition," Hinz-Johnson said. "Sarah is warm and encouraging, and all singers ages 7 to 13 are welcome to come and sing."

If families cannot attend the

"Try-It Saturday" event, there will also be auditions at CCA from 3:30 to 4:45 p.m. on Sept. 7 and Sept. 14.

CCA is also expanding its Suzuki string program, with the arrival of Jessica Nataupsky. Formerly from Philadelphia, Pa., Nataupsky joins CCA's string faculty this fall. She and other members of the CCA string faculty will be on hand to meet with young string students during "Try-It Saturday." String instruments will be available, and young children will be able to give them a try.

There will be a "Music Together" sample class with instructor Para Vesprini, at 10 a.m. This class is a popular one at CCA and is designed for kids ages zero to 4 and the adults who love them. Rounding out the "Try-It Saturday" activities is 88 Fingers Beginning Piano, with Lester Castellana, and information on Arts Go-Round, a multiple arts experience for preschoolers, ages 4 and 5. All events are free of charge. For more information, contact CCA at 1-734-433-2787 or online at www.chelseacenterforthearts.org.
